Gal 1 D g

AN Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory OF GREAT BRITAIN, CHIEFLY OF ENGLAND:

From the FIRST PLANTING of CHRISTIANITY, in this ISLAND,
With a Brief ACCOUNT of the AFFAIRS of RELIGION in IRELAND.

Collected from the beſt Ancient HISTORIANS, COUNCILS, and RECORDS.

Ro: VOL. II. Chapman

Beginning at the Reign of King HENRY VIII. and continued to the Death of King CHARLES II.

By JEREMY COLLIER, M. A.

Nec Studio, nec Odio.

LONDON:
Printed for SAMUEL KEBLE at the Turk's-head in Fleetſtreet, RICHARD SARE at Grays-inn-gate, Holbourn, JOHN NICHOLSON at the Queen's-arms in Little Britain, BENJAMIN TOOKE at the Middle-temple-gate in Fleetſtreet, DANIEL MIDWINTER at the Three Crowns in St. Paul's Church-yard, GEORGE STRAHAN at the Golden- ball in Cornhill, and MAURICE ATKINS at the Golden-ball in St. Paul's Church- yard. MDCCXIV.

11

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

THE PREFACE.

THIS Second Volume acquaints the Reader with no ſmall Revolution in the Belief, and Worſhip, in the Revenues, and Juriſdiction of the Church: This Matter, not carried at firſt without Oppoſition, and deſcending in the Conſequences upon after Ages, muſt of Courſe be differently receiv'd. I'm ſenſible a Subject of ſo nice and weighty an Importance, can't be undertaken without ſtanding ſome Hazard. When Mens Opinions are conteſted, when they are not entertain'd in their Humour, nor carreſs'd in their imagined Intereſt, they are apt to grow diſconcerted, and run out into Cenſure. But a Church Hiſtorian eſpecially, ought to be proof againſt Attacks of this kind. His Buſineſs is neither to take too much Freedom with the Dead, nor be Over-aw'd by the Living. Caution in Exceſs, Affectation of Popularity, and Mercenary Regards, are dangerous Qualities: He that ſeeks to pleaſe Men, upon theſe Motives, cannot be the Servant of Chriſt. †

On the other Hand, where Truth and publick Service will give Leave, gentle Uſage, and ſmooth Report, are clearly to be preferr'd. A proſecuting Manner, when unſeaſonably indulg'd, is an argument of Prejudice, and ill Nature; tends only to give Diſguſt, and provoke to Repriſals. A Writer, who without Neceſſity, bears hard on the Credit of others, takes the likelieſt Methods to raiſe a Party upon his own. I hope there will be no juſt occaſion for a Charge in this Article. But profeſſions of Candour are, it may be, to little purpoſe. The Criticks are ſometimes diſpos'd to over-look the Evidence, to preſs into the Dark, to conjecture beyond Appearance, and pronounce unkindly upon the Mind and Intention. I muſt confeſs an Authors Fate lies too much at

---

† Gal. 1. 10.

Mercy this way, were it not for the Relief of an Appeal to a Higher Court.

To qualify my ſelf for the following Undertaking, I have look'd out for the beſt Materials: And had the good Fortune to ſucceed in this preparatory Search. I receiv'd the Favor of free Acceſs to the publick Repoſitories of Records: Some worthy Gentlemen of my Acquaintance, have likewiſe oblig'd me with very valuable Remains in Manuſcript. The Places, and Perſons are inſerted in the Margin, which I mention here by way of Acknowledgment.

Some Prints I have made uſe of, are upon the Score of their ſcarceneſs, no leſs Curioſities than thoſe Unpubliſh'd. And of this the firſt Common-Prayer drawn up in the Reign of King Edward the Sixth, might have paſs'd for an Inſtance. But about half a Year after I had gone thro' a ſhort Defence of this Service, and tranſcrib'd the Communion Office, a Book intituled, The Dignity of the Epiſcopal Order, &c. appear'd in Print. † In this Treatiſe as I am inform'd, (for as yet I have not given my ſelf the Satisfaction of peruſing it,) ſome part of that Common-Prayer is publiſh'd. As to this, I muſt ſay, I knew nothing of the learned Authors Deſign: Neither was I acquainted with his having vindicated the Euchariſtick Sacrifice, 'till I had finiſh'd my Remarks upon that Subject.

† London An. 1711.

As the main Points in Difference, between the Churches of Rome and England came up, I have endeavor'd in both Parts of this Hiſtory, to juſtify the Reformation of the latter.

And here it may be obſerv'd the Council of Trent conven'd in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, has diſſerv'd the Union of Chriſtendom. For the purpoſe; This Synod has decreed diſputable Doctrines into Articles of Faith. And whereas before, either ſide of the Queſtion might have been held without Cenſure; Now, that Liberty is gone; and every one is oblig'd to come up to the Terms of the Council. Amongſt theſe Miſfortunes may be reckon'd, their ſetting Scripture and Tradition upon an equal Foot of Authority, and extending the Canon to the Apocrypha. † Pope Pius the Fourths Creed will furniſh ſomewhat farther. Thus inſtead of Relaxing, they have drawn the † Father Paul's Hiſt. of the Council of Trent. Du Pin's New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. 16. Vol. 2.

Knot cloſer, thrown in new difficulties, and made the conditions of Communion more ſhocking and impracticable.

In the Courſe of this Work I had occaſion to take notice that one Queſtion of no ſmall Importance, does not properly lie within the Cogniſance of the long Robe. But in this Remark I meant no abatement of regard to that Profeſſion. The Law is a very uſeful, and creditable Employment. It requires Induſtry and cloſe Thinking: And without natural Fund, Time, and Application, there's little Progreſs to be expected. I heartily wiſh the Clergy would imitate their Predeceſſors, and make it more of their Study. In my humble Opinion, Cokes Inſtitutes, would be better Furniture than Calvin's Inſtitutions: And the reading the Statute Book much more ſerviceable than ſome Syſtems of Dutch Divinity. The Jewiſh Prieſts underſtood Property, and Pleas of the Crown. † The Pontifical College of the old Romans were Famous for Attainments of this kind. † And ſo were the Engliſh Church-men in former Ages: Were this Cuſtom reviv'd in thoſe of that Function, they might meet with an encouraging Return: A moderate Improvement in this Knowledge, would guard their Intereſt, oblige their Pariſh, and ſtrengthen their Character. Neither would this be any Encroachment on a Foreign Employment; any interloping upon the Inns of Court: For the Conſtitution is no Incloſure: 'Tis deſign'd for common Benefit: And as King James I. juſtly obſerves, every Subject ought to underſtand the Laws under which he lives. †

† Deut. 17. Deut. 21.

† Gutherius, de jure Veter. Pontific.

† Wentworths Office of Executors. Pref.

When the firſt Part of this Hiſtory was finiſh'd, only Five Tomes of the Tower Records were publiſh'd by Mr. Rymer, which I then made uſe of: But now that number is encreas'd to Fourteen. And ſince moſt of theſe Collections fall ſhort of the Reign of King Henry VIII. a brief Account, I conceive, of what's moſt remarkable, may not be amiſs.

In the firſt Place, I ſhall tranſcribe King Edward III. Licence to the Biſhop of London for Impriſoning an Heretick; and keeping him in ſafe Cuſtody, 'till he ſhould recant his Miſperſwaſion, and return to the Belief of the Church.

Rex venerabili in Chriſto Patri S. eadem Gratia Epiſcopo Londoniæ Salutem. †

† An. 45. E. 3. Fœdera, Conventiones, Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 6. p. 651.

Quia accepimus per Inquiſitionem veſtram quod Nicholaus de Drayton veſtræ Diœceſis ſuper Erroribus contra Articulos Fidei Catholicæ, populo noſtro, in diverſis locis in Diœceſi veſtræ, per ipſum Publicatis, coram vobis congrue convictus, & pro Hæretico Adjudicatus exiſtit; quodque in ſuo Errore nephando, animo indurato, nequiter perſeverans, ad Fidei Catholicæ unitatem redire non curavit, nec curat in præſenti, licet ſæpius ad hoc excitatus, & inductus, ſententiam majoris Excommunicationis in hac parte incurrendo, in Animæ ſuæ grave periculum, & plurimorum pernicioſum exemplum.

Cum igitur Sancta Mater Eccleſia ita tales Hæreticos proſequitur ne ſuo veneno alios inficiant, ut in Carceribus cuſtodiri præcipiat.

Super quo nobis ſupplicaſtis, ut vobis dictum Nicholaum carcerali cuſtodiæ veſtræ mancipare, & ipſum in carcere veſtro cuſtodire, quouſque errorem ſuum hujuſmodi nephandum revocaverit, & ad Fidei Catholicæ Unitatem redire voluerit, Licentiam in hac parte ſpecialem concedere dignemur; nos Supplicationi veſtræ prædictæ gratanter concedentes, ad ipſum Nicholaum Hæreticum carcerali cuſtodiæ veſtræ mancipare, & ipſum in carcere veſtro cuſtodiri faciendum, quouſque dictum errorem ſuum revocaverit, & ad Fidei Catholicæ unitatem redire voluerit, quantum in nobis eſt, Licentiam concedimus ſpecialem. In cujus, &c.

Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium viceſimo die Martii.

From this Licence 'tis plain 'twas not the Cuſtom of the Church of England to go to Extremities with Hereticks, to move for capital Puniſhment, and deliver them over to Fire and Faggot. The common Method in the Spiritual Courts was to carry their Diſcipline no farther than Impriſonment. When any Perſon was convicted of Hereſy, the Biſhop petition'd the Crown for leave to confine the Criminal in the Priſon of the Dioceſe; which it ſeems the Ordinary could not have done without ſuch an Authority. This Impriſonment was to continue during Life, unleſs the Perſon renounc'd his Heterodoxy; in which caſe he was rectus in Curia, and reſtor'd to his Liberty; I grant the learned Fitz-

Herbert, affirms Burning was the Puniſhment for Hereſy by the Common Law. † But then, as far as it appears, this Rigor was never executed 'till after the Statute againſt the Lollards. †

To proceed: The Kings of England prior to the Reformation, were not unmindful to guard their Crown againſt Papal Encroachments. Upon this view James Dardain the Popes Collector was oblig'd to give King Richard II. the Security of an Oath at the Council Board. I ſhall Tranſlate the Subſtance of this Solemn Engagement. He Swears to be True and Faithful to our Sovereign Lord the King: Neither to do, or ſuffer, as far as in him lies, any thing to the prejudice of his Highneſs, any thing that might be detrimental to the Realm, or over-bear the Laws, and publick Cuſtoms. That he would keep the King's Secrets from all Perſons Living: That he would neither execute, nor ſuffer the Execution, of any of the Popes Mandates, to the diſadvantage of his Majeſty, of his Prerogative, his Laws, or his Realm.

That upon his receiving any Letters from his Holineſs or the Conclave, he will bring them to the Privy Council, before he had either publiſh'd or ſhew'd them to any Perſon Living. That he would export no Mony, or Plate, out of England, nor make any remittances by Bills of Exchange, without ſpecial Licence from the King, or his Council. That he would ſend no Letters to Foreign Parts, to the King's Diſſervice.

That he would begin no New Practice, either with Foreign Authority, or without it, unleſs impower'd by his Majeſty's ſpecial Licence for that purpoſe. And in caſe he receiv'd any ſuch Commiſſion, he would lay it in the firſt place before the King, or his Council. And laſtly, that he would not convey himſelf out of the Kingdom without his Majeſty's Licence under the Broad Seal. †

The Year following, the King in his Writs, directed to the Archbiſhops, and Biſhops, takes notice the Pope had attempted to Tax the Engliſh Clergy; and order'd the Biſhops to aſſiſt in levying the Mony. His Majeſty complains of this, as a New and Unwarrantable Impoſition, that the Parliament had addreſs'd

† See Vol. 1. of this Hiſt. p. 615.

† Ibid p. 618. 2 H. 4. c. 15.

† Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 7. p. 603.

addreſs'd him upon this Head, and made a Proviſion againſt ſuch Demands. He therefore requires the Lords Spiritual, under the higheſt Forfeitures, to deſiſt from executing the Popes Bull, and not contribute themſelves in the leaſt proportion for that purpoſe. †

† Id. p. 644. 13 R. 2.

The laſt thing I ſhall obſerve under this Prince, is his Majeſty's Writ iſſued to the High Sheriff of Devonſhire, “ and to “ the Mayor, and Bayliffs of Exeter, to ſupport the Chapter “ of that See in the free Choice of a Biſhop: And that thoſe who “ diſturb the Election; ſhould be Committed. This Order was ſent to prevent the Popes Proviſion from taking Place. †

† Id. p. 792. 18 R. 2.

Henry IV. in the firſt Year of his Adminiſtration; reſtores Thirty Two Priories belonging to French Monaſteries, which had (ſome of them at leaſt) been alienated by King Edward III. But Eight Years afterwards, with the Aſſent of the Privy Council, he Seiz'd the Revenues of the Priors Aliens, for the expence of his Houſhold. † † Conventiones Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 8. p. 101. and p. 510.

To go on in the order of Time, it may not be improper to acquaint the Reader that the Proceſs againſt Sir John Oldcaſtle, and the Tenents of this Gentleman, tranſlated from Walſingham in my firſt Volume, agrees with the Record of that matter enter'd upon the Regiſter at Lambeth. *

See 1 Part of this Hiſtory p. 650.
* Regiſt. Chichely p. 2.

King Henry V. Orders that all Biſhops Elect ſhould be confirm'd by their Metropolitans, during the vacancy of the See of Rome. The Inſtrument ſets forth, that conſidering the preſent Schiſm, their waiting for the Choice of another Pope, was a dangerous Expedient: That all the Biſhopricks in England might poſſibly be come void by ſuch delays. And that Metropolitans confirming their Suffragans, while the Apoſtolical Chair ſtood empty, was a cuſtomary Practiſe in other Countries. *

* Conventiones Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 9. p. 337.

The Council of Conſtance was held in this Reign: At this Synod, the King's Ambaſſadors, and the other Engliſh Repreſentatives, got the following Reformation paſs'd by the Fathers, and confirm'd by Pope Martin V. The Articles point only upon Diſcipline.

And firſt 'twas agreed that “ the honour of the Cardinalate “ ſhould not be laviſhly beſtow'd: That this diſtinction ſhould be

" conſin'd to a moderate number: That the Church might not be
" over-burthen'd, nor the Dignity grow cheap, by making the Col" lege too full. And that Cardinals ſhould be indifferently choſen
" out of all Chriſtendom by the Majority of that Order.

The reſt of the Articles relate wholly to the Churches of England, Wales, and Ireland.

The foremoſt ſets forth, " That Indulgences and Faculties be- " ing too plentifully granted by the Apoſtolick See, for Abſolving
" thoſe who offer'd, at particular Places for Devotion; ſeveral
" People took the Liberty to run Riot with leſs Reſtraint: To Slight
" their proper Paſtors; to ramble from their Pariſh in Pilgrimage,
" after theſe celebrated Indulgences, and refuſe paying the Du- " ties at Home in Tythes, and Oblations.

To remedy this Grievance; " The Dioceſans are impower'd
" to inſpect theſe Licences, with Authority to ſupercede ſuch as
" are ſcandalous, and ſolicite the Pope for a Revocation.

" 2*ly, That for the future, no Appropriations ſhall be made,*
" unleſs the Suggeſtions reported are approved by the Biſhop, who " is to enquire into the Truth, and ſufficiency of them. And Livings
" appropriated upon frivolous, and undue Motives, ſhould be re-
" ſtor'd to their former condition by the Ordinary.

" 3*ly, That all Unions, Appropriations, and Conſolidations of* " perpetual Vicarages, made ſince the Schiſm, ſhall be revok'd
" without exception, and perpetual Vicars competently endow'd for " Maintenance and Hoſpitality, ſettled by the Ordinary.

" 4*ly, That all Privileges of wearing* Miter and Sandals,
" and ſuch Epiſcopal Diſtinctions, granted the Inferior Prelates, †
" ſince the Death of Pope Gregory XI. ſhall be recall'd.

† Some Abbots.

" 5*ly, That tho' plurality of Benefices ſtand cenſur'd by the* Ca" nons, and Diſpenſations can't be fairly given, (excepting to Per-
" ſons diſtinguiſh'd by Birth, or Learning;) theſe Favors however,
" are not ſeldom improperly indulg'd: 'Tis provided therefore that
" this practice ſhall ceaſe; and the Regulations of the Council
" take Place: But as touching Retroſpections to be made by the " Ordinary, they were to be ſo manag'd, that nothing done, ſhould
" be unſettled, Inſtances of ſcandal excepted.

" 6*ly, That of late eſpecially, ſeveral* Incumbents have pro-
" cur'd Diſpenſations from the Pope, ſometimes for Seven Years,
" ſometimes during Life, to excuſe them from entering into ſuch
" Orders as are requiſite to qualify them for their Function: And " that the Church ſuffer'd very much by ſuch Relaxations.

" To prevent theſe occaſions of Scandal, all ſuch Diſpenſa-
" tions were to be cancell'd, the Beneficed Perſons put under the “ Direction of the Canons, and oblig'd to take proper Orders, provided they were furniſh'd for that purpoſe.

“ 7ly, That ſince upon the ſcore of Diſpenſations being ſometimes granted by the Apoſtolick See for Nonreſidency, and for enabling Archdeacons to make their Viſitations by Proxy; the Cure of Souls is neglected, and the Epiſcopal Authority fallen under Contempt.

“ 'Tis therefore Decreed, that no ſuch Diſpenſations ſhall be granted without expreſs mention of a warrantable conſideration: And that his Holineſs ſhall ſend the Ordinaries a Commiſſion to call in ſuch Diſpenſations as have been gain'd upon unreaſonable Suggeſtions.

“ 8ly, That all Faculties granted by the Court of Rome, to any of the Monaſtick Order for holding Benefices, either with Cure or without; that all ſuch Faculties not executed, and driven to Effect, ſhall be Revok'd: And that no ſuch Liberty ſhall be indulg'd for the future.

“ 9ly, and laſtly, That the Engliſh, in caſe they are qualified, ſhall be admitted to Preferments in the Court of Rome, and ſtand upon an equal Foot of Regard with other Nations.

This Reformation was entred upon the Regiſter in the Popes Chancery, exemplified by his Holineſſes Order, and atteſted by the Officers of that Court. †

† Ex Biblioth. Cotton Tiberius B. 6. Fol. 32. An. Dom. 1419.

To proceed, King Henry VI. at the requeſt of Two Ciſtertian Abbots, William de Claravelle, and John de Theoloc; gives them a Commiſſion to viſit all the Monks of their Order in England, Wales, and Ireland. They are impower'd to enquire into the management of the Religious, to exert the Diſcipline of the Rule upon Miſbehavior, and bring up practice to the Inſtitution. †

An. 10. H. 6. An. Dom. 1432.

† Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 10. p. 501.

This Authority ſeems an unuſual Inſtance of the Regale: For in the Reign of King Henry VIII. who ſeldom ſlept over his Prerogative, Cardinal Woolſey receiv'd a Bull from Clement VII. for this purpoſe, † 'Tis probable therefore theſe Abbots might be Commiſſionated by the Pope for their Viſitation. But to move with more Force and Expedition, they applied to the Crown for the Concurrence of the Civil Magiſtrate: For by the Inſtrument, all Sheriffs, Mayors, Bayliffs, &c. are commanded to aſſiſt them.

† Id. Tom. 14. p. 18.

The next thing I ſhall obſerve, is a Royal Licence granted to Robert, Gilbert Elect of London, either to go, or ſend to Rome for the Confirmation of his Election. Such Applications to the Pope were then the cuſtomary Practiſe: But the Licence looks more like Favor, than common Right. For by the Form we may conjecture, the King might have denyed it. †

† Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 10. p. 636.

In the Vacancy of the See of Lincoln, the Chapter Choſe William Biſhop of Norwich for that Dioceſe: Upon this, the King wrote to Eugenius IV. for leave, that the Biſhop of Norwich might quit his Biſhoprick, and remove to Lincoln. † From whence we may Collect that the Tranſlation of Biſhops was part of the Claim of the Court of Rome.

In the Nineteenth Year of this Government, the King conveys all Mannours and Eſtates of the Priories Alien then in the Crown, to Henry Archbiſhop of Canterbury, John Biſhop of Bath and Wells, John Biſhop of St. Aſaph, and William Biſhop of Sarum, To William Earl of Suffolk, To John Somerſeth, Thomas Beckington, Richard Andrewe, Adam Moleyns, Clerks, To John Hampton, James Fenys, and William Treſham Eſquires. The Lands, Rents, Reverſions, &c. belonging to theſe Priories are paſs'd to the Perſons abovemention'd their Heirs and Aſſigns: They were oblig'd to do Fealty for anſwering the King all Services and Demands which might legally be requir'd. †

From hence 'tis plain there were Reſervations in the Grant: To ſpeak clearly, the Conveyance was probably nothing more than making them Truſtees for transferring theſe Eſtates upon publick Benefactions, as the Reader may diſcover in the following Hiſtory.

Twenty Years forward, this Prince gives Franciſcus de Coppinis Pius II. Legate, a Licence to accept any Biſhoprick in England, to which this Pope, or his Succeſſors, ſhould provide him, excepting the Sees of Canterbury, York, Lincoln, Wincheſter, Durham, and Bath and Wells. †

From this Reſtraint it may be obſerv'd. Firſt, That the Popes had no arbitrary ſway in diſpoſing Spiritual Preferments. 2ly, By the Order in which the reſerv'd Sees are mention'd, we may Collect that Lincoln, and Bath and Wells tho' ſlenderly Endow'd at preſent, were then very Wealthy Biſhopricks.

In the Tenth Year of King Henry VII. Pope Alexander VI. iſſued Two Bulls for ſuppreſſing the Priories of Montisfont in the Dioceſe of Wincheſter, and Luffeild in the Dioceſe of Lincoln. The reaſon aſſign'd for diſſolving theſe Houſes, is the decay of the Revenues; the firſt being able to maintain but Four, and the other but Three Religious. The Diſſolution was granted at the King's Requeſt: And the Crown impower'd by the Bull, to erect Montisfont into a Collegiate Church, conſiſting of a Dean and Prebendaries, and ſettle the Revenues of Luffeild on the Chappel, Chantry, and Hoſpital, of St. Georges at Windſor. †

This Year Laurence Burelly a Frenchman, Provincial of the Carmelites, and deputed by the General to Viſit the Engliſh of that

† Id. p. 645.

† Id. p. 802.

† Conventiones Acta Publica, &c. Tom 11. p. 468.

† Conventiones, Acta publica, &c. Tom. 12. p. 562, 3.

that Order, procures a Licence from the King to Execute his Commiſſion. But 'twas upon condition that he attempts nothing to the King's Prejudice, nor Levies, or exports any Mony without his Majeſty's expreſs leave. †

† Id. p. 574.

An. 19. H. 7.

† Conventiones Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 13. p. 100.

† Conventiones Acta publica &c. paſſim.

† Conventiones Acta publica &c. Tom. 13. p. 158.

This Prince got a Bull from Pope Julius II. for exempting his Chappel at Weſtminſter, from the Juriſdiction of the Ordinary, and putting it under the immediate Protection of the See of Rome. †

Through the Reigns prior to King Henry VIII. the Cuſtody of the Temporalties of Biſhopricks were commonly granted to Biſhops, to Abbots, or Deans and Chapters. † This was done to prevent Waſt, and guard the Patrimony of the Church. And which deſerves to be remark'd; the King's ſometimes gave the Rents, and Profits, accruing in the Vacancy, to the ſucceeding Biſhop. †

They conſider'd, 'tis likely, the Eſtates of the Church were ſettled upon Religion, and veſted, as it were in God Almighty: And thus they might think that Seizure, and Secular Application, tho' but for a ſhort Interval, was breaking in upon the Conſecration, and foreign to the meaning of the Endowment.

I am now advanc'd to the Period of the former Volume, and ſhall Charge the Preface with no more Records.

Since the Writing this Preface, and when this Second Part was almoſt Printed off, Mr. Rymer Publiſh'd the Fifteenth Volume of the Tower Records: Having look'd over this Book, I ſhall Tranſcribe ſome things which I conceive more particularly Supplemental, and New to the Reader.

An. Dom. 1546 Pat. 37. H. 8. p. 9. M. 28. Fœdera Conventiones, Literæ, &c. Vol. 15. p. 85.

The firſt I ſhall mention is the Grant from the Crown of the Biſhoprick of the Iſle of Man, to Henry Man Doctor in Divinity. The moſt remarkable Part of the Inſtrument runs thus. Eundem Henricum Man in Epiſcopum dicti Epiſcopatûs præficimus & deputamus, cum omnibus & ſingulis præfati Epiſcopatûs Commoditatibus, Juribus, & Emolumentis quibuſcunque, tam Spiritualibus, quam Temporalibus.

Curamque Regimen & Gubernationem, & Adminiſtrationem ejuſdem Epiſcopatus, & in eodem degentium, eidem Henrico in Domino committentes, & per preſentes committimus, &c. The Biſhop is likewiſe diſcharg'd from the Payment of Firſt Fruits, and Tenths during Life.

An. Dom. 1546.

This Volume gives us a Copy of King Henry VIII's. Will Tranſcrib'd from the Original. It agrees with what I mention'd from Fuller. And the Sixteen Executors are the ſame.

An. Dom. 1549. An. 3 Edw. 6. Pat. 3. p. 6. M. 28. Id. p. 181.

In the next Reign there's a Commiſſion iſſued to ſeveral Biſhops, Divines, and Secular Gentlemen, for enquiry into Perſons ſuſpected of Hereſy: In this Proſecution the Cuſtomary Methods of Tryal are ſuperceded, the Forms of Law, diſpenc'd with, and if any Statutes happen to claſh with the Powers in the Commiſſion, they are over-rul'd with a non obſtante.

The Record ſhall be Tranſcrib'd at length.

Rex Reverendiſſimo in Chriſto Patri, Thomæ Cantuarienſi Archiepiſcopo, totius Angliæ Primati, & Metropolitano, ac Reverendis in Chriſto Patribus, Thomæ Elienſi, Nicholao Wigornienſi, Thomæ Weſtmonaſterienſi, Georgio Ciceſtrenſi, Henrico Lincolnienſi, & Nicholao Roffenſi, Epiſcopis.

Prædilectiſque & Fidelibus Conſiliariis noſtris Willielmo Petre, Thomæ Smith, Militibus, ſecretariis noſtris: Dilectis nobis Richardo Coxe Elimoſinario noſtro, Antonio Cooke Militi, Jacobo Hales Militi, ſervientibus ad Legem. Willielmo Mey Decano Sancti Pauli, Johanni Taylour Decano Lincolniæ, Willielmo Cooke Decano de Arcubus, Simoni Haynes Decano Exon. Johanni Redman, Hugoni Latimer, Egidio Eyre, & ---- Tonge Sacræ Theologiæ Profeſſoribus: ---- Crooke, Richardo Lyell, & Rolando Taillour, Legum Doctoribus: Johanni Goſnold Armigero, & Willielmo Cycill, Salutem.

Etſi Regibus quidem omnibus qui Chriſti nomen profitentur, nihil æquè incumbat ac Fidem Chriſtianam in ſuo populo, ac in Eccleſiis ſuæ Auctoritati Regiæ Subjectis, ſartam, tectam, atque Incolumem conſervare, nobis tamen qui Fidei Defenſor peculiari quodam, Titulo vocitamur, maximè præ cæteris curæ eſſe debet, ut non ſolum pro viribus annitamur ut Chriſti Religio quam puriſſimè atque integerrimè populo noſtro tradatur, verum etiam ut omni quâ poſſumus ratione caveamus ne Chriſti Adverſarius, ut eſt ſemper ad omnia corrumpenda paratus, noxium Hæreſios ſemen, & Labem malæ Doctrinæ clanculum in ſegetem Chriſtiani Populi, & hoc Arvum nobis Commiſſum ſeminet, ſed ſiquid fortè emerſerit tale, quod ſperamus Deum averſurum, ſaltem ut quam primum evellatur, ne latius ſerpens illud virus etiam ſanas & ſalubres partes corrumpat.

Et quoniam nos ipſi non poſſumus ad omnia ejuſmodi in noſtra perſona obeunda & curanda ſemper eſſe in otio & parati, & modò, ad chariſſimum Avunculum noſtrum Edvardum Ducem Somerſetiæ Gubernatorem perſonæ noſtræ Regiæ,& protectorem omnium Regnorum noſtrorum ac cæteros noſtros Conſiliarios perlatum eſt, exoriri in nonnullis Regni noſtri locis quoſdam qui reſuſcitant Sceleratos Anabaptiſtarum errores, & qui aliarum Hæreſium impia & impura Dogmata ſerunt & inſtillant in aures rudis vulgi & imperitæ plebis noſtræ, Mentes illis nefariis opinionibus infecerint, ut antequam illud venenum latius ſerpat, opportunum & neceſſarium Remedium pro facultate noſtra Regia adhibeamus.

De Conſilio & Adviſamento prædicto, vos ſelegimus, quibus hanc noſtram curam, & hoc tam neceſſarium munus extirpandæ, & reprimendæ Hæreſios committeremus.

Ad inquirendum igitur de omnibus Articulis Hæreſios cujuſcunque, & examinandum omnes Hæreſios, aut erroris in Chriſtiana Doctrina ſuſpectos, detectos, denuntiatos, inquiſitos, vel accuſatos.

Et quoſcunque Teſtes, aliaque probationum genera quæcunque, pro veritate præmiſſorum eruendâ, quomodolibet requiſita, recipiendum & admittendum Teſteſque hujuſmodi in forma jurandorum Teſtium jurandum & examinandum.

Ac omnibus aliis viis, modis & formis quibus melius & efficaciùs potetis, de veritate præmiſſorum etiam ſummariè & de plano, ac ſine ſtrepitu et figura Judicii, cognoſcendum inquirendum & inveſtigandum.

Et ſi per Examinationem & Inquiſitionem hujuſmodi, aliquem de alicujus Hæreſios, ſive impiæ opinionis crimine contractum & involutum eſſe deprehenderitis, ab erroribus ſuis revocandum eumque ſi errorum ſuorum pertæſum eſſe compereritis, ad errorum ſuorum hujuſmodi Abjurationem et Renunciationem inducendum. Et ſubſequenter in ſacro ſanctæ Eccleſiæ Gremium admittendum, aliàsve, pro ut Juris et Æquitatis ratio perſuaſerit, abſolvendum & dimittendum, Pœnitentiaſque ſalutares & condignas pro commiſſis infligendum et imponendum.

Pertinacem vero, et obſtinatum erroribus ſuis deſperatè immerſum, ſiquem deprehenderitis, ex cœtu Fidelium ejiciendum et exterminandum, ac ſæculari poteſtati, ſi ita Facti atrocitas expoſcat, committendum, tradendum et liberandum: Nec non omnes et ſingulos Rectores, Vicarios, Clericos, et Miniſtros Eccleſiaſticos quoſcunque, ac Laicos cujuſcumque conditionis exiſtant, Librum appellatum, &c. aut divina Officia in eodem expreſſa et inſerta, vel aliquam partem eorundem contemnentes, ſpernentes, adverſantes ſive obloquentes, ſiqui tales ſuſpecti, reperti, detecti, inquiſiti aut accuſati fuerint, juxta vim formam et effectum Statuti in ea parte editi et proviſi, puniendum et corrigendum: Cæteraque omnia et ſingula faciendum, exercendum & expediendum, quæ circa dictæ Inquiſitionis & Examinationis Negotia neceſſaria fuerint ſeu quomodo libet opportuna; vobis 25, 24, &c. aut tribus veſtrum (quorum Archiepiſcopum Cantuarienſem, Epiſcopum Elien. Epiſcopum Wigorn. Epiſcopum Weſtm. Epiſcopum Ciceſtren. Epiſcopum Lincoln Epiſcopum Roffen Willielmum Petre, Thomam Smythe, Richardum Coxe, aut Willielmum Mey, unum eſſe volumus, & in executione Præmiſſorum intereſſe) de quorum ſana Doctrina, Fidei Zelo, vitæ & Morum Integritate, exactaque in rebus gerendis Dexteritate, ſpecialem in Domino Fiduciam obtinemus, vices noſtras committimus, ac plenam Tenore præſentium concedimus Facultatem.

Cum Poteſtate pleniſſima Perſonas ſic detectas denunciatas inquiſitas vel ſuſpectas, evocandi coram vobis, & carceri & vinculis, ſi opus fuerit, mancipandi; ac Teſtes quoſcunque, pro veritate Præmiſſorum explicanda & eruenda, quomodolibet requiſitos, coram vobis quibuſcunque Diebus & Locis, veſtro arbitrio in hac parte limitandi, evocandi, & citandi, eoſdemque Teſtes ſeſe ſubtrahentes omnibus modis & Juris Remediis quibuſcunque compellendi.

Cumque omni aliâ Juriſdictionis & Auctoritatis noſtræ Legitima Cohertione in hac parte & poteſtate, voſque ad Effectus prædictos Cognitores, Inquiſitores, Judices & Commiſſarios noſtros nominamus, facimus, conſtituimus & deputamus per Præſentes.

Eo non obſtante quod Denunciatio, ſive Indictatio contra Perſonas prædictas ejuſmodi in hac parte non proceſſit, ſive aliquibus aliis Statutis aut Ordinationibus in Parliamento noſtro in contrarium editis ſeu proviſis, in quibus Major forſan Solempnitas & Circumſtantiæ ad hujuſmodi exequenda Negotia requiruntur, cæteriſque in contrarium facientibus, non obſtantibus quibuſcunque.

Mandantes omnibus & ſingulis Theologis & Juriſperitis, nec non Majoribus, Vicecomitibus, Ballivis, aliiſque Officiariis & Miniſtris noſtris quibuſcunque quatenus vobis in, & circa Præmiſſorum Executionem effectualiter, ſi per vos requiſiti & interpellati fuerint, aſſiſtant, & ſuffragentur.

In cujus rei, &c.

Teſte Rege apud Leighes duodecimo die Aprilis per ipſum Regem.

Id. p. 240. About Two Years forward there's another Commiſſion for the ſame purpoſe, and in the ſame Form. 'Tis Dated at Weſtminſter, January 18. 1551.

The next thing I ſhall preſent the Reader with, as ſomewhat of a Curioſity, is a Licence granted by King Edward VI. to Dudley Earl of Warwick, his Counteſs, and Family, for eating Fleſh in Lent, and all other Days of Abſtinence. 'Tis to continue during the Earls Life, and ſets aſide all Acts of Parliament, and Canons to the contrary. It ſtands thus.

An. 1550. Pat. 4. E. 6. p. 2. m. 32. Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Salutem. ſciatis quod nos, de Gratia noſtra ſpeciali, ac ex certa ſcientia, & mero Motu noſtris, nec non de aviſamento & conſenſu Conſiliariorum noſtrorum.

Id. p. 207. Licentiam dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per Præſentes damus & concedimus, prædilecto, & Fideli Conſiliario noſtro, Johanni Comiti Warwici, Magno Admirallo noſtro Angliæ, & Dominæ Johannæ Uxori ſuæ, ac toti ipſius Familiæ, ac omnibus (quoquot ſunt) ad eundem Comitem, vel dictam Uxorem ſuam accedentibus, quod ipſi, & totæ ejuſdem Comitis Familiæ ubicunque fuerint, ac omnes alii ad eundem Comitem, aut dictam Uxorem ſuam, forſan accedentes, deinceps, durante vita naturali ipſius Comitis, temporibus Quadrageſimalibus, & aliis Diebus Jejunalibus quibuſcunque, Carnibus & Lacticiniis veſci liberè & impune valeant et poſſint, aliquo Statuto Actu ſive Proclamatione, Conſtitutionibus aut Ordinationibus quibuſcunque in contrarium factis aut editis, ſeu impoſterum fiendis, vel edendis, in aliquo non obſtantibus.

Eo quod expreſſa mentio de certitudine præmiſſorum, Actuque ſive Statuto de Abſtinentia à Carnibus in Parliamento noſtro apud Weſtm. Anno Regni noſtri Secundo, tento, aliquove vel alio Actu ſive Statuto noſtro qualitercunque edito, vel edendo, aut aliquâ aliâ Re, Cauſâ, vel Materiâ quacumque, in aliquo modo non obſtantibus.

In cujus rei, &c.

Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium decimo Octavo Die Februarii.

Per ipſum Regem.

To conclude, I ſhall Tranſcribe but one Record more, and that is a Warrant and Writ, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign for the burning of Hereticks. The Tenor of the Warrant is as follows.

An. Dom. 1575. Pat. 17. Eliz. p. 5. m. 9. Id. p. 740.

Elizabeth by the Grace of God Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. to our right Truſty, and right Well-belov'd Counſellor, Sir Nicholas Bacon, Knight, Lord Keeper of our Great Seal of England Greeting.

Where the Reverend Father in God Edwin Buſhoppe of London, Edmunde Buſhoppe of Rocheſter, and our right Truſty, and Well-beloved, Sir William Cordell, Knight, Maiſter of the Rolls, Roger Manhood, and Robert Mounſon, Two of the Juſtices of our Common Pleas, with others our Commiſſioners ſufficiently Authoriz'd by our Commiſſion, under our Great Seal of England, have travaill'd upon the Examination, Hearing, and Determination of John Peeters, and Henry Turwert, being Flemings Born, and now Living in this our Realm, concerning their falſe Opynyons and Sects of Anabaptiſts, holden and averred by them, wherein they have before the ſaid Reverend Fathers, and others our ſaid Commiſſioners, maintain'd their ſaid moſt perillous and dangerous Opynyons, for the which they are by Definitive Sentence, declayred by the ſaid Reverend Father the Buſhoppe of London, with the Conſent of other our ſaid Commiſſioners, juſtlie adjudg'd and declared to be Hereticks, and therefore as corrupt Members to be cut off from the reſt of the Flock of Chriſt, leſt they ſhould infect others profeſſing the true Chriſtian Faith, and are by them left under the Sentence of the great Excommunication to be by our Secular Power and Aucthoritye as Hereticks puniſhed, as by the ſignificavit of the ſaid Reverand Father in God the Buſhoppe of London, with the aſſent of our ſaid Commiſſioners, remaining in our Court of Chancery, more at large appeareth; And altho' the ſaid Anabaptiſts have ſince the ſaid Sentence pronounced againſt them binne often and very Charitably traveled with, as well by the Miniſters of the Duche Church in the Citye of London, as by other Godly and Learned Men, to diſſwade revoke and remove them from their Anabaptiſtical and Heretical Opynyons, yet they arrogantlie and willfully perſiſt and continewe in the ſame.

Wee therefore according to our regal Function and Office, myndynge the Execution of Juſtice in this behalfe, and to give example to others leaſt they ſhould attempt the like hereafter, have determined by the aſſent of our Counſayll, to will and require you the ſaid Lord Keeper, immediately upon the receipte hereof, to award and make out our Writt of Execution; according to the Tenor in theſe Preſents enſuinge, and theſe our Letters Sign'd with our Hande ſhall be your ſufficient Warrant for the ſame.

Part of the Writ runs thus,

Elizabetha Dei Gratia, &c. Vicecommitibus London Salutem, &c.

Nos igitur ut Zelator Juſtitiæ, & Fidei Catholicæ Defenſor, volenteſque Eccleſiam ſanctam ac Jura et Libertates ejuſdem, et Fidem Catholicam manu tenere et defendere, ac hujuſmodi Hæreſes et Errores ubique (quantum in nobis eſt) eradicare et extirpare, ac Hæreticos ſic convictos Animadverſione condigna puniri, Attendenteſque hujuſmodi Hæreticos in forma prædicta convictos et damnatos, juxta Leges et Conſuetudines Regni noſtri Angliæ in hac parte conſuetas, ignis Incendio comburi debere.

Vobis præcipimus quod dictos Johannem Peters, et Henricum Turwert in Cuſtodia veſtra exiſtentes, apud Weſt-Smithfield in Loco publico et aperto, ex cauſa Præmiſſa, coram populo Igni committi, ac ipſos Johannem Peters, et Henricum Turwert in eodem igne realiter comburi faciatis, in hujusmodi criminis Deteſtationem, aliorumque Hominum Exemplum, nè in ſimile Crimen Labantur, et hoc ſub periculo incumbenti nullatenus omittatis.

Teſte Regina apud Gorambury Decimo Quinto Die Julii.
Per ipſam Reginam.

In this Second Part I have touch'd but lightly upon the State-Hiſtory; had the Management been otherwiſe, the Bulk would have Swell'd out of Proportion. Beſides; the Civil Tranſactions of theſe Times are pretty well known: To which I may add, that the Affairs of the Church are all along conſiderable enough to draw Enquiry, and furniſh Entertainment for the Reader.

ERRATA.

Preface, page 12. line 33. for Sixteen read Thirteen. Book, p. 15. col. 2. l. 38. after by dele the, Ibid l. 67. f. than Orders ought to be no more repeated that, r. that Orders ought to be no more repeated than, p. 34. c 2. l. 33. f. Supplementary r. Supplemental, p. 38. c. 2. l. 14. dele which, p. 40. c. 2. l. 46. f. of r. for, p. 50. c. 2. l. 51. f. the r. their, p. 98. c. 1. l. 26. f. Domions r. Dominions, p. 101. c. 1. l. 70. dele that, p. 102. c. 2. l. 12. f. James the Fourth r. James the Fifth, p. 106. c. 1. l. 66. f. porportion r. proportion, p. 107. c. 2. l. 57. f. Night r. Eight, p. 111. c. 1. l. 24. f. Eccrus r. Eccius, p. 125. c. 2. l. 25. dele that Ibid l. 28. f. to be r. are to be, p. 129. c. 1. l. 61. f. exceſs r. exceſſes, Ibid. c. 2. l. 69. f. motion r. motive, p. 133. c. 1. l. 57. f. on courſe r. of courſe, p. 134. c. 2. l. 61. dele Time, p. 136. c. 2. l. 25. f. Pilate r. Pilot, p. 144. c. 1. l. 19. f. Excchariſt r. Euchariſt, p. 146. c. 2. l. 18. f. out all r. out of all, Ibid l. 23. dele and, p. 148 c. 2. l. 50. f. no r. any, p. 152. c. 2. l. 69. f. the See the Year r. this See in the Year, p. 157 c. 2. l. 8. f. upon r. on, p. 159. c. 1. l. 48. f. like r. likely, p. 160. c. 2. l. 51. f. raizing r. razing, p. 168. c. 2. l. 23. f. Reſidants r. Reſiants, p. 203. c. 1. l. 59. f. with r. in, p. 208. c. 1. l. 18. f. Edowments r. Endowments, Ibid. l. 23. f. ſhe r. he, p. 218. c. 1. l. 72. f. attaining r. attainting, p. 219. c. 1. l. 50. f. declare Knowledge of their Kings r. declare their Knowledge of the Kings, p. 224. c. 1. l. 18. f. Archbiſhops r. Archbiſhop, p. 229. c. 2. l. 36. dele all, p. 231. c. 2. l. 50. f. a Liberty r. the Liberty, p. 232. c. 2. l. 18. f. prov'd r. prove, p. 236. c. 1. l. 40. f. that Day r. that a Day, p. 240. c. 2. l. 59. f. Saviour r. Saviour's. p. 241. c. 1. l. 44. f. then r. them, p. 54. c. 1. l. 9. f. was r. it was, p. 255. c. 1. l. 47. f. follows r. follow, p. 261. c. 2. l. 65. f. at Fife r. in Fife, p. 262. c. 1. l. 72. f. caurſly r. coarſly, p. 265. c. 1. l. 59. f. Apoſtle r. Apoſtles, p. 269. c. 1. l. 56. f. ſeem r. ſeems, p. 271. c. 1. l. 15. f. Doctrines r. Doctrine, p. 279. c. 1. l. 50. dele the, p. 280. c. 2. l. 43. f. we read r. was read, p. 281. c. 1. l. 63. dele that, Ibid c. 2. l. 40. f. Canoninal r. Canonical, p. 284. c. 1. l. 53. f. the Reforming r. Reforming, p. 290. c. 2. l. 70. f. admiral r. admirable, p. 297. c. 1. l. 57. f. Bubrick r. Rubrick, p. 303. c. 1. l. 39. f. Fryars r. Triers, p. 308. c. 2. l. 2. f. chaange r. change, p. 328. c. 2. l. 30. f. Friers r. Triers, Ibid l. 44. f. Friers r. Triers, p 352. c. 2. l. 52. f. Spirituality, and Temporality r. Spiritualty, and Temporalty, p. 352. c. 1. l. 23. f. proceeding r. proceedings, p. 367. c. 1. l. 2. f. Biſhopricks r. Biſhoprick, p. 380. c. 2. l. 1. dele upon, p. 386. c. 2. l. 11. f. where r. were, p. 390. c. 1. l. 20. f. prove r. proves, p. 410. c. 2. l. 60. f. and r. or, p. 413. c. 2. l. 55. f. Aderman r. Alderman. p. 457. c. 2. l. 55. f. of Congregation r. of the Congregation, p. 458. l. 25. f. quick r. quickly, p. 463. c. 2. l. 21. f. Euchariſts r. Euchariſt, p. 468. c. 2. l. 2. f. they r. the, p. 486. c. 1. l. 1. dele down, Ibid l. 56. f. The r. Theſe, Ibid l. 59. f. from others r. from the others, p. 488. c. 2. l. 61. f. in Bennet Colledge Manuſcripts r. in the Bennet College Manuſcript, p. 501. c. 2. l. 14. dele to, p. 507. c. 2. l. 57. f. Novelties r. Noveliſts, p. 514. c. 2. l. 5. f. reſtrain'd r. conſtrain'd, p. 529. c. 1. l. 18. dele where I ſhall give the Reader an Account, &c. p. 530. c. 2. l. 58. f. by r. of, p. 543. c. 2. l. 73. dele hear, p. 545. c. 1. l. 30. f. Canons r. Canon, p. 546. c. 1. l. 39. after Cenſure dele of, p. 556. c. 1. l. 60. f. Biſhop r. Biſhops, p. 558. c. 1. l. 45. f. Hand r. Word, p. 573. c. 1. l. 4. f. pronoмce r. pronounce, p. 587. c. 2. l. 8. f. their r. the, p. 603. c. 1. l. 16. f. Interrogatives r. Interrogatories, p. 604. c. 1. l. 22. f. Etections r. Erections, p. 614. c. 2. l. 47. f. Supernatual r. Supernatural, p. 629. c. 2. l. 24. after tender'd dele to, p. 643. c. 2. l. 71. f. Reaching r. Reach, p. 651. c. 1. l. 67. dele and, Ibid c. 2. f. like r. liked, p. 662. c. 1. l. 26. f. their r. by their, Ibid l. 28. f. Excommunications r. Excommunication, p. 663. c. 2. l. 63. after remorſe dele he, p. 668. c. 2. l. 68. f. pretence any r. any pretence, p. 674. c. 2. l. 11. f. affirming r. affirm'd, p. 689. c. 2. l. 18. f. as r. at, p. 702. c. 2. l. 12. f. for r. or, p. 705. c. 1. l. 59. f. Sacrament r. Sacraments, p. 723. c. 2. l. 65. after Canterbury add and, p. 741. c. 2. l. 75. f. Servies r. Services, p. 748. c. 1. l. 60. f. Forehand r. Forehead, p. 761. c. 2. l. 6. dele and, p. 774. c. 1. l. 76. f. upon r. on, p. 777. c. 1. l. 32. f. clear r. clearly, p. 781. c. 1. l. 24. f. where r. were, p. 798. c. 1. l. 14. dele the, p. 821. c. 1. l. 31. f. Aerinomaſtix r. Aeriomaſtix, p. 838. c. 2. l. 28. f. or r. at, p. 839. c. 2. l. 17. f. makes r. make, p. 843. c. 2. l. 24. f. Groheads r. Groſtheads, p. 845. c. 2. l. 1. f. Conſciences r. Conſcience, p. 846. c. 2. l. 38. f. diſpenc'd r. diſpens'd with, p. 847. c. 2. l. 21. f. Apoſtle r. Apoſtles p. 863. c. 1. l. 1. f. diſceded r. deſcended, p. 876. c. 1. l. 47. after degree add in, p. 881. c. 2. l. 57. after Deacon add a Comma, p. 882. c. 2. l. 24. after Thoſe add Rubricks, p. 884. c. 1. l. 38. f. worſe r. worſt, p. 887. c. 1. l. 25. f. procurational r. procuratorial.

A LIST OF THOSE SUBSCRIBERS Who have ſent in their NAMES.

A

THE Rt. Rev. William, Lord Biſhop of St. Aſaph.
The Rt. Hon. the Viſcount Arburthnott.
The Rev. Dr. Adams, Provoſt of Kings Col. Camb.
The Rev. Fitzherbert Adams, Rector of Lincoln College Oxon.
The Rev. Mr. Ainger, Rector of St. Mary Woolnoth.
The Rev. Mr. John Aiſley, of Walſingham, Biſhoprick of Durham.
The Rev. Dr. Alſton, Archdeacon of Eſſex.
The Rev. Dr. Altham, Rector of St. Buttolph's, Biſhopſgate.
The Rev. Mr. Geo. Anderſon, Rector of Lutterworth, Lincolnſhire.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Arrowſmith, Norfolk.
The Rev. Solomon Aſhburn, D. D. Fell. of Lincoln College, Oxon.
The Rev. Dr. Atterbury, Rector of Shipperton.
The Rev. Mr. Adams.
Abraham Aſhworth, Bookſeller in Durham.
John Anſtis, Eſq;

B

THE Rt. Rev. the Lord Biſhop of Bath and Wells.
The Rt. Hon. the Ld. Willoughby, of Brook, Dean of Windſ.
Lord Berkley, of Stratton.
Sir Robert Barnadiſton, of Ketton Hall, Suffolk
Mr. Baker.
John Bateman, M. D.
The Rev. Mr. Richard Banner.
Charles Battely, Gent.
——— Bateman, M. D.
George Bewe, Apothecary, in Grace-Church-Street.
Dr. Beauford, of St. Columbe.
The Rev. Mr. Bedford, London.
The Rev. Mr. George Bell.
Mr. Thomas Bell, London.
Dr. Richard Bettenſon, of Bath, Somerſetſhire.
The Rev. Dr. Bedfor, Rector of St. George's Buttolph-lane.
——— Betteſworth, LL. D. Dean of the Arches.
The Rev. Mr. John Beddingfield, Rector of Hedenham, Norf.
Mr. William Biſhop.
The Rev. Mr. Hope, Biſhoprick of Durham.
The Rev. Dr. Biſh, Preacher at the Rolls.
The Lady Bland, of Blackiſton, Durham.
Mr. George Bloodworth, of Spittle-fields, Weaver.
The Rev. Dr. Blake, Vicar of St. Sepulchres.
The Rev. Dr. Bloomer, Prebendary of Canterbury.
Charles Blunt, Gent.
Ralph Bolton, Eſq;
Thomas Bowdler, Gent. London.
Brereton Bourchier, Eſq; of Barneſly, Glouceſter.
Mr. Francis Brook, Vicar of Surlingham, Norfolk.
The Rev. Mr. Edward Brooks, Rector of Wood Church, Kent.
——— Brooky, M. D.
The Rev. John Brereton, B. D. Fellow of Linc. Col. Oxon.
The Rev. Mr. John Bradford, M. A. Fell. of Bal. Coll. Oxon.
The Rev. Mr. John Brompton.
The Rev. Dr. Brabant, Rector of St. Andrew Underſhaft.
The Rev. Dr. Brampſton, Rector of St. Chriſtophers.
Thomas Brampſton, Eſq.
The Rev. ——— Brett, LL. D. Rector of Bettiſhanger, Kent.
The Rev. Mr. Bryan, Maſter of Harrow School.
The Hon. ——— Bridges, D. D.
The Rev. Dr. Broderick, Prebendary of Weſtminſter.
The Rev. Mr. Broughton, Vicar of Kingſton.
The Rev. Dr. Brown, Canon of Windſor.
Captain Brown, of Greenford.
Richard Brown, of Iſlington, Eſq.
Gilbert Brown, of Lincolns Inn, Eſq.
Mr. Ralph Bunting, Alderman of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. John Burdett, of Stockton, Grocer, Durham.
The Rev. Mr. Rowland Burdon, Durham.
The Rev. Mr. Tho. Burton, M. A. Vicar of Hallifax, Yorkſh.
The Rev. Mr. Jo. Butterfield, Rect. of Stoke Dawbernon, Surry.
The Rev. Mr. Tho. Burrough, Rect. of Bradford St. George, Suff.
Mr. Bulſhy, Merchant.
The Rev. Mr. Burton. A. M.
The Rev. Mr. Button, M. A. Schoolmaſter, at Edmonton.
Mr. Richard Bynes, of Carſhalton, Surry.
Mr. Joſeph Button, Bookſeller, in Newcaſtle.
Thomas Bale B. D. Fellow of Jeſus College in Cambridge

C

THE Rt. Rev. the Biſhop of Carliſle.
The Rt. Rev. the Lord Biſhop of Cheſter.
The Rt. Rev. the Lord Biſhop of Chicheſter.
The Hon. Archibald Campbell, Eſq. London.
Cathedral of Ely.
The Rev. Mr. Philip Caſtle.
Mr. Henry Carrington, Attorney at Law, Barneſly, Yorkſhire.
Thomas Cartwright, of Aynho, Eſq;
Robert Carr, Eſq; of North Biddick, Biſhoprick of Durham.
The Rev. Mr. Calvert, Vicar of Stanwell.
The Rev. Mr. Alexander Chalmers.
The Rev. Mr. James Chalmers.
Charles Choldmondley, Eſq.
William Chaloner, Eſq. of Giſbrough, in the County of York.
Mr. Chamberlain, Merchant.
Sir John Cheſſyer, Serjeant at Law.
The Rev. Mr. Chiſſul, Rector of Walthamſtow.
Mr. Alexander Cleave, Deputy.
The Rev. Mr. Gregory Clark, Rector of Blunderſton, Suffolk.
Sir Samuel Clark.
John Clark, Eſq.
——— Clements, LL. D.
Dr. Nicholas Clagett, Archdeacon of Sudbury.
Sir John Colliton, Bar.
William Cockbourn, M. D.
William Collier, of Hatton Garden, Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Philip Collier, Rector of St. Columbe, Cornwall.
Thomas Cotton, Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Cooper, Norfolk.

Mr. John Cook, Merchant of Stockton, Durham.
George Cook, Eſq. firſt Prothonotary, of the Common Pleas.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Cook.
——— Cobb, LL. D. Warden of New College, Oxon.
Anthony Collins, Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Cooper, Rector of Harlington.
Mr. Cottle, of the Prerogative Office.
Sir Clement Cotterel.
Mr. Francis Croſs.
The Rev. Mr. William Cromer, Vicar of Tillingham.
John Crawly, of the Navy Office, Gent.
Mr. Samuel Clark, Clerk, Dorceſterſhire.
Mr. Robert Cruickſhank, *M*erchant
Mr. John Crooks, of Hartle Pool, Durham.
Thomas Chafin, Eſq. of Zeales, in the County of Wilts.
Mr. William Clayton, Bookſeller of Mancheſter.
Mr. Cromfield Printer in Cambridge.
Mr. Robert Caſtel Merchant
Mr. Clements Bookſeller in Oxon.
Walter Chetwind of Radgly Staffordſhire Eſq;
John Coats Member of Parliam. for the City of Litchfield Eſq;

D

THE Rt. Rev. Philip, Lord Biſhop of St. David's.
The Lord D'la War.
Sir Charles Dalſton, Bar.
Thomas Daviſon, of Blackiſton, Biſhoprick of Durham.
Mr. Benjamin Derby, A. M. Rector of Brianſton, Dorſet.
Mrs. Cecilia Deacon, Stepney.
Mr. David Denune, Student in Phyſick, London.
Mr. William Denton, Attorney at Law, Stockton, Durham.
Duncan Dee, Eſq. Common Serjeant.
The Rev. Mr. Dechair, M. A.
The Rev. Mr. Jeremy Dodſon, Rector of Hurſt Pierpoint, Suſſex.
The Rev. Mr. John Downing, Rector of Monks Eleigh, Suffolk.
William Doble Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Doughty, London.
The Rev. Mr. William Dugard.
Robert Duncan, A. M.
The Rev. Mr. William Dunne, M. A. Rector of Redmarſhall, in the Biſhoprick of Durham.
The Rev. Mr. Duboyſe, Schoolmaſter, Iſlington.
The Rev. Dr. Dwight, Vicar of Fulham.
Dr. D*avis* of Birmingham

E

THE Rt. Rev. John, Lord Biſhop of Ely.
The Rt. Rev. Offspring, Lord Biſhop of Exeter.
The Rev. Mr. Eaſtwick, Rector of St. Michael, Queenhith.
Mr. Deputy Edmunds, Cripplegate.
Mr. James Edwards, St. Burian.
John Egerton, Eſq.
Mr. Charles Elliſton, of Spittlefields.
John Elſtob, Gent. of Foxton, Durham.
The Rev. Dr. Elſtob, Prebendary of Canterbury.
The Rev. Mr. Elſtob, Rector of St. Swithin.
The Rev. Mr. Ellis, Schoolmaſter, Thiſleworth.
John Evans, Eſq.
Mr. Arthur Evans, Merchant.
The Rev. Mr. Evans.
The Rev. Mr. J*ames Ellis*, Thiſleworth
Mr. Everard Exton, of Doctors Commons.
Thomas Eyres, Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas England, of Wenbury, Devonſhire.
William Elſley, A. M. Rector of Ruſher, Yorkſhire.

F

THE Rev. Mr. Robert Falconer, Vicar of Dunmow, Eſſex.
The Rev. Mr. Fenton —— ,of St. Cuthberts Carliſle, Cumb.
The Rev. Mr. Mich. Fenwick, Rector of Longnewton, Durham.
Mr. Feaſt.
Mr. Feltham.
The Hon. Dr. Finch, Dean of York.
David Fotheringham, Merchant.
Sir Stephen Fox.
The Rev. Mr. Forſter, Rector of St. Clements, London.
The Rev. Pexal Forſter, Rector of Egleſcliff, Durham.
The Rev. Joſhua Forſter, of Norton, Durham.
The Rev. Dr. Fogg, Rector of All-hallows Stayning.
The Rev. Mr. Foley, A. M.
The Rev. Dr. Foulks, Canon Reſidentiary of Exon.
John Fowle, Eſq. of Brome-hall, Norfolk.
The Rev. Dr. Friend Maſter of Weſtminſter School.
Mr. John Fowler, Bookſeller, Northampton.
Mr. William Freeman, Bookſeller, Durham.

G

THE Rev. Dr. Gatford, Rector of Back Church.
The Rev. Mr. Henry Gandy, London.
The Rev. Mr. Gadderer, London.
The Rev. Dr. Gaſcoyn, Rector of Enfield.
The Rev. Dr. Gaſketh, Rector of Allhallows Berkin.
The Rev. Dr. Gaſtrell, Canon of Chriſt Church.
John Galpin, A. B. Clerk.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Gery, of Chattris.
The Rev. Dr. Gee, Prebendary of Weſtminſter.
The Rev. Dr. Gibſon, Archdeacon of Surry.
William Glover, Eſq. of Froſtenden, Suffolk.
The Rev. Dr. Glover, Rector of Jekenham.
William Gore, Eſq.
The Hon. Maſter of Gray.
The Rev. Dr. Godolphin, Dean of St. Paul's.
Sir Edward Gold.
Dr. Thomas Gooch.
The Rev. Mr. Goſling, Subdean of St. Paul's
The Rev. Dr. Grandorge, Prebendary of Canterbury.
Mr. Green.
The Rev. Dr. Green, Rector of the Old Jewry.
Thomas Girdler, A. M. Fell. of Wadſh. Coll. Oxon.
John Gurdon, Eſq. of St. Aſſington, Suffolk.
The Rt. Hon. the Lady Chriſtian Guyer.
The Lady Guyer, Stepney.
The Rev. Mr. Gray, Rector of Broughton, in the County of Southampton.
Mr. G*oddard* Bookſeller in Norwich
Mr. G*ray* Bookſeller in Yarmouth
The Rt. Hon. John Lord Gower Baron of Stettnam
The Rt. Hon. the Lady Dowager Gower
Jeffry Williams M. A. Chaplain to the Rt. Hon. the Lady Dowager Gower
Thomas Greſly of Nethenſell Liceſterſhire Eſq;

H

THE Rt. Honourable the Earl of Hume.
Captain Richard Haddock.
Francis Hayes, Eſq. of the Inner Temple.
The Rev. Mr. Hall, London.
The Rev. Mr. Hall, Vicar of Elyn.
Dr. Edmund Halley, Geometry Profeſſor at Oxon.
The Rev. Mr. William Handbury, M. A.
John Harriſon, Eſq. of Perivall.
The Rev. Mr. Harper, Rector of St. Catherine Coleman.
The Rev. Mr. Hawkins, Vicar of Wilſden.
The Rev. Mr. Stephen Heath, Rector of St. Mary Magdalen Bermondſy.
Mr. Heath.
The Rev. Mr. Henchman, Vicar of Harrow.
——— Henſhman, LL. D.
Richard Hewitt, Gent. of Stockton, Durham.
The Rev. Dr. George Hicks, London.
The Hon. Richard Hill, Eſq.
Mr. John Hill, Proctor of Doctors Commons.
The Rev. Dr. Higden, Prebendary of Canterbury.
Benjamin Hilton, Eſq.
The Rev. Mr. Henry Holbier.
Mr. Horton.
Edward Husbands, Eſq. of Little Horſely, Eſſex.
Mr. William Hurton.
The Rev. Dr. Hutchinſon, Fellow of Queen's College, Oxon.
Mr. Jer. Hutchinſon, of Darlington, Durham.
The Rev. Mr. William Hutton, Rector of Lucthigh.
The Rev. Mr. Humphry's, Rector of Weſtcomb, Kent.
John Hungerford, Eſq.
The Rev. Dr. Hutchinſon, Preacher at St. Edmonsbury.
Ambroſe Holbeech, Eſq;

Nathaniel Highmore, A. M. Rector of Horton.
John Heenwood M. A. Maſter of the Free School of Newport Shropſhire, and Prebendary of the Cath. Ch. of Litchfield
Sir Ch. Holt of Aſton Warwickſhire
Mr. Hide Bookſeller in Dublin
Mr. Hilliard Bookſeller in York
The Rev. Mr. Anthony Hall Fellow of Queens College Oxon.

J

THE Rev. Mr. Jackſon, Prebendary of St. Paul's.
The Rev. Mr. Jacques, Rector of Cowley.
Edward Jeffreys, Eſq.
Sir Joſeph Jekyle.
Henry Jennings, Eſq.
Mr. John Jeniſon, Gent. of Hurworth, Durham.
The Rev. Alexander Innes, D. D.
Sir William Ingoldſby.
The Rev. Mr. David Jones, Rector of Upper Hardreſs, Kent.
The Rev. Mr. Edward Jones, Canon of Windſor.
The Rev. Mr. Richard Johnſon, Schoolmaſter, at Nottingham.
John Iſham, Eſq.
Mr. Thomas Jukes.
The Rev. Mr. Benjamin Jenks
William Ing of Thorp in Staffordſhire Eſq;
Mr. Jeffreys Bookſeller in Cambridge
Mr. Michael Johnſon of the City of Litchfield Bookſeller

K

THE Rt. Hon. the Lord Viſcount Kilſyth.
Samuel Kemp, Eſq. of Canclow, Cornwall.
Thomas Kennerſly, Eſq.
The Rev. Dr. Kennet, Dean of Peterborough.
The Rev. Dr. King, Rector of Chelſey.
Sir Peter King.
The Rev. Mr. Richard King.
Mr. Robert Kitching, of Barnerds Inn.
James Knox, A. M.

L

THE Rt. Honourable the Earl of Lowdown.
The Honourable the Lady Lucy, London.
The Rev. Dr. Lamden.
George Lawſon, Eſq. of Harlſey, Yorkſhire.
The Rev. Langford, Vicar of Axminſter, Devonſhire, M. A.
The Rev. Mr. Lamie, Rector of Slain, Middleſex.
Sir Biby Lake, Bar.
The Rev. Dr. Lancaſter, Rector of St. Martin's in the Fields.
The Rev. Mr. Laſingby, Rector of St. Antholin's
Roger Lawrence, A. M.
Charlwood, Lawton, Eſq.
Sir Nicholas L'Eſtrange, Bar. of Hunſtanton, Norfolk.
Sir Francis Leigh.
The Rev. Thomas Ley, M. A. Vicar of Crediton, Devon.
The Rev. John Lehunt, M. A. Miniſter of Brentford.
William Lehunt, Gent.
Nicholas Letchmere, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. John Liſter, Rector of Rochford, Eſſex.
Lincoln College, Library.
The Rev. Lithgold, A. M.
George Lockhart, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Ralph Lounds, Cheſhire.
John Lowther, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Lord, Rector of Toddington.
John Loving, Eſq.
Mr. Henry Louth.
The Rev. William Lupton, D. D. Fellow of Lin. Coll. Oxon.
Thomas Lutwych, Eſq;
The Rev. Dr. Lynford, Prebendary of Weſtminſter.
Dennis Lyddall, Eſq; Commiſſioner of the Navy.
The Rev. Dr. Laney.
Lewis Legrand, Eſq;
Nath. Lane of Longs Eſq; Staffordſhire

M

G*Eorge Marſh*, A. M. Vicar of Milton Abbat, Dorſetſhire
Mr. Thomas Martin, Merchant, London.
Alexander Macgie, Eſq. of Poclyonan.
Reginald Marriot, Eſq; of Parſons Green.
Samuel Martyn, Vicar of St. Enoder Cornwall.
Mr. John Mander.
The Rev. Tim. Mawman, Rector of Eltow, Durham.
Mr. John Maddiſon, of Billingham, Durham.
Thomas Marriot, Eſq;
The Rev. Marſhall, LL. D. Vicar of St. Pancras.
The Rev. Mr. Martin, Rector of St. Mildred Poultrey.
John Martin, Eſq;
Mr. Mittford.
The Rev. Mr. Robert Middleton, Rector of St. Mary Colcheſter.
Mr. George Middleton, Goldſmith.
Mr. John Mills, of Newcaſtle upon Tine.
The Rev. Dr. Millington, Rector of Kenſington.
Walter Mills, M. D.
Richard Moſtyn, Gent. of Penbiow.
The Rev. John Morley, D. D. Fellow of Lin. Coll. Oxon.
The Rev. Dr. Moſs, Dean of Ely.
Mr. William Moubray, of Doctors Commons.
Thomas Maynard, Gent. of Yarme, Yorkſhire.
Mr. Daniel Midwinter.
Mr. Charles Mather.
Mr. John Montford Bookſeller in Worceſter

N

THE Rt. Rev. Charles, Lord Biſhop of Norwich.
The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Northesk.
Robert Nelſon, Eſq; London.
The Rev. Mr. Needham, Chancellor of St. David's
William Newland, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Newton, Rector of St. Auſtin's.
Sir Iſaac Newton.
Mr. Norris, of the Prerogative Office.
Sir Edward Northy, Attorney General.
The Rev. Mr. Newte.

O

THE Rt. Rev. John Lord Biſhop of Oſſery.
Mr. Alexander Omliterlong, Merchant.
The Rev. Mr. Oliver, Subalmoner.
Dr. Onely, Prebendary of Weſtminſter.
The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Orrery.
M—— Oakes M. A. Rector Hopsworth Staffordſhire

P

MR. Paſk.
M—— Paſk LL. D.
Samuel Percival, Gent. of the Navy Office.
Mr. John Pearſe, of Penryn.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Pearſon, Principal Edmund Hall, Oxon.
William Pearſon, Eſq. of Stockeſly, Yorkſhire.
Mr. Thomas Pearſon, of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. Pearſon, Proctor of Doctors Commons.
The Rev. Dr. Pelling, Rector of St. Ann's Weſtminſter.
Henry Penrice, LL. D.
Thomas Pitt, Eſq;
Charles Pinfold, LL. D.
The Rev. Mr. Pomeroy, of Cork, Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. Poſtlethwait, Norfolk
Mr. John Porrett of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. Carolus Pool, LL. B. Rector of Breoc, Cornwal.
Dr. Pooley, Vicar of St. Leonard, Shoreditch.
The Rev. Mr. Pocock, Rector of Thames, Ditton.
William Preſcott, Gent. of the Navy Office.
Louice Price, Eſq;
The Hon. Mrs. Prince.
Mr. John Proud.
Robert Pulloyne, Eſq; of St. Neots, Huntingdon.
Mr. Gertrude Pyncomb of Welshire, in Poughill, Devonſhire.
Richard Pyle, LL. B. Fellow of New College, Oxon.
Mr Baron Price.
The Rev. Mr. Pugh, Thiſleworth.
Mr. Pieſley Bookſeller in Oxon.

R

THE Rt. Rev Francis, Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter.
Chriſtopher Rawlinſon, Eſq; London.
Mr. Richard Rayne, of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. Ratcliff, Merchant.
Richard Rawlinſon, Eſq;
The Rev. Dr. Rawſon, Rector of St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Gregory.

Sir

17

Sir Jemmet Raymond.
Sir Robert Raymond, Solicitor General.
Mr. Thomas Redman, of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. William Redmayne, Printer, in Jewen-ſtreet, London.
The Rev. Mr. Reves, Rector of Craneford.
Thomas Rhodes, M. A. of Lincoln College Oxon.
The Rt. Hon the Lady Rich.
Robert Richardſon, Eſq;
Mr. Richardſon.
Nicholas Ridgeway, A. M. Rector of Okford Fitzpain, Dorſet.
Thomas Rogerſon, A. M.
Mr. Royſton.
Robert Roilton, M. A Fellow of Queen's College, Oxon.
Mr. Rouſe, Proctor of Doctors Commons.
The Rev. Mr. Roſſel, Rector of St. John Wapping.
John Rudd, Eſq; Councelor at Law, of the City of Durham.
The Rev. Mr. Richardſon, of Wiſt Dean, Suſſex.
Mr. Thomas Ryles, Bookſeller, Hull.
Mr. Richard Randall, Bookſeller, Newcaſtle.

S

THE Rt. Hon. the Earl of Southesk.
The Rt. Hon. the Viſcount Strathalan.
The Rt Hon. the Counteſs of Sandwich.
William Sandford, Eſq; of Aſkham, Weſtmoreland.
William Sancroft, Eſq;
Henry Scagrave, Eſq;
William Sanders, Rector of Acton.
Mr. Sear, Proctor at Doctors Commons.
The Rev Dr Scott, Dean of Glaſcow.
Mrs. Julia Shalcroſs, of Hatfeild Woodhall, Hertfordſhire.
The Rev. Mr. John Sheppard, Suffolk.
Hugh Shortrudge, D. D. Rector of Fetcham, Surry.
The Rev Mr. Sherlock, Maſter of the Temple.
John Short, Eſq;
Peter Short, Attorney at Law.
Mrs Sleorgin
The Rev. Mr. John Slater, of Chattris.
Dr. James Smith, of Cottenham.
The Rev. Joſ. Smith, D. D. London.
Mr. Joſeph Smith, of Yarome, Merchant, Yorkſhire.
Mr. Thomas Smelt, of Stockton, Durham.
The Rev. Dr. Smalridge, Dean of Chriſt Church, Oxon.
Mr. Richard Snow, in Six Clerks Office.
The Rev. Dr Snape, Rector of St Mary Hill.
The Rev. Dr. South, Prebendary of Weſtminſter.
The Rev. Mr. N. Sphinks.
The Rev. Mr Sparling, Rector of Wake Colonc. Eſſex.
The Rev. Mr. Spratt, Archdeacon of Rocheſter.
William Strahan, LL. D of Doctors Commons.
John Stukely, Eſq; of Plymouth,
The Rev. Mr. William Starkey, Rector of Pulham, Norfolk
The Rev. Mr. Stamp, Iſlington.
The Rev. Dr. Stanley, Dean of St. Aſaph.
The Hon. Mr. Edward Stawell.
Henry Stephens, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Pawlet St. John, Rector of Yeilding, Bedford.
The Rev. Mr. Steward, Fellow of St. John's College, Oxon.
Mr. John Stock, of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. Nicholas Swainſton, Attorney at Law, of Stockton, Durh.
Mr. Symonds.
Sir Philip Sydenham, Baronet.
——— Sharp, Eſq.
The Rev Mr. Sleeth.
The Rev. Mr. Charles Seward
Mr. Benjamin Smithurſt, Bookſeller in Plymouth.
The Rev. Mr. Sixeſmith, Rector of Wadingham, Lincolnſhire.
Mr. Thomas Smolwood Curate of More Staffordſhire
Ralph Snegd of Keile Eſq; and one of the Knights in the preſent Parliament for the County of Stafford
Mr. Iſaac Stonton of Birmingham
Mr. John Swall Bookſeller in Leeds
Mr. Nevil Simonds Bookſeller in Sheffeild

T

THomas Tanner, Gent. of the Navy Office.
The Rev. Mr. Taylor, Rector of Barnet.
Joſeph Thurſon, Eſq; of Little Wenham, Suffolk.
The Rev. Mr. Thorold, Rotterdam, Holland.
The Rev. Dr. Thompſon, Rector of St. Matthew Friday-ſtreet, and Peter Cheap.
Lieutenant General Tidcomb.
The Rev. Dr. Tipping, Vicar of Camberwell.
Mr. Thomas Tonkins, of Trevanance, Cornwall.
Mr. William Torkington, Rector of Wiſton, Huntingtonſhire.
The Rev. Mr. Tomkinſon, Fellow of St. John's College, Camb.
Samuel Trotman, Eſq;
Lawſon Trotter, Eſq; of Skelton Caſtle, Yorkſhire.
The Hon. Thomas Trever, of the Temple.
Mr. William Timms, Attorney at Law, Woodſtreet, London.
Mr. Trubee.
The Rev. Mr. Turton, Rector of St. Olave, Hartſtreet.
The Rev. Mr. Seth Turner, Suffolk.
The Rev. Dr. Trumbull.
John Temple, Eſq;
Mr. Toogood Rector of Burton, Dorſeſterſhire.
Mr. Jonathan Taylor, Bookſeller in Witchurch, Shropſhire.
Mr. Thurlebame Bookſeller in Cambridge.

U

THE Rev. William Veſey, B. D. Fellow of Lin. Coll. Oxon.
The Rev. Mr. Vicker.
The Rev. ——— Vudale, LL. D.
The Rev. Mr. Upton.
George Vernon of Sudbury Eſq; Derbyſhire, and one of the Kts in this preſent Parliament for the County of Stafford
Mr. George Unite Bookſeller in W*olverhampton.*

W

THE Rt. Rev. William Lord Biſhop of Worceſter.
The Rt. Rev. Thomas, Lord Biſhop of Waterford.
The Rt. Hon. Thomas Viſcount Weymouth.
The Rev. Dr. Waddington, Rector of Allhallow's Thamesſtreet.
John Walton, Eſq;
The Rev. Mr. Waſhbourn, Vicar of Edmonton.
The Rev. Dr. Waugh, Rector of St. Peter's Cornhill.
Mr. Hanbury Walthall.
The Rt. Hon. Heneage, Earl of Winchelſea.
John Ward, Eſq; Alderman of London.
Edmund Warnford, Eſq;
Mr. Watſon.
Mr. Thomas Watſon, Grocer, of Stockton, Durham.
Mr. William Weſtbrook.
The Rev. Mr. Wells, Rector of   London.
R. Welton, D. D. Rector of White Chappel.
The Rev. Mr. Richard Webſter, of St. Edmond's Bury.
Mr. John Wells, of Stockton, Durham.
Nicholas Weſtcomb, Eſq;
Mr. Nathaniel Whaley, A. M. Fellow of Wadham Coll. Oxon.
Sir George Wheeler, Bart. Prebendary of Durham.
Sir William Whitlock.
Sir John Whatton.
——— Willmot, M. D.
Mr. Willmot, Merchant.
Mr. Robert Wilſon, Merchant.
Thomas William, Eſq; of Stoke, in Suffolk.
The Rev. Mr. Philip Williams, Rector of Doddington.
John Worten, Gent. of the Navy Office.
John Worth, Eſq; of Penryn, Cornwall.
The Rev. Mr. Wood, Rector of St. Michael Royal.
——— Woodward, M. D.
The Rev. Mr. Wright, Rector of Stepney.
George Wright, Eſq; of the Inner Temple.
Mr. John Wakefield, Rector of Seaſtry, Yorkſhire.
Mr. Roger Warne, Bookſeller, in Chippenham, Wilts.
Mr. Ralph Watſon, Bookſeller, in Bury.
Mr. John Williamſon, Attorney, in Dublin.
Mr. W*ilmot* Bookſeller in Oxon.
Mr. Wilkin Bookſeller in St. Pauls Church-yard

Y

THE Rev. Mr. Yeates, Archdeacon of Wilts.
The Rev. Dr. Younger, Dean of Sarum.

Z

THE Rev. Mr. Zinzano, Rector of St. Martins, Outwich.

AN

Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory

OF

GREAT BRITAIN,

CHIEFLY OF ENGLAND.

PART II. BOOK I.

A.D. 1509.

UPON the Death of King Henry the Seventh, his Son of the ſame Name ſucceeded to his Dominions. This Henry was the only ſurviving Iſſue Male, and about Eighteen Years of Age, at his Acceſſion to the Throne. He was a very promiſing Prince, both as to Perſon, Capacity, and Improvement. He was tall, ſtrong built, and proportion'd, and had an Air of Authority and Empire. His Genius was lively, and his Education puſh'd, and well manag'd: For beſides the cuſtomary Exerciſes and Accompliſhments of a Prince, he had made conſiderable Advances in Learning. He was a good Latiniſt, a Philoſopher, and Divine: And as for Muſick, his Progreſs in that Science was ſo unuſual, that two entire Maſſes of his own compoſing, were ſung in his (a) Chapel. (b) His Inclination to Letters was early perceiv'd: And if his elder Brother had liv'd, 'tis ſaid his Father deſign'd him for the See of Canterbury.

King Henry the Eighth a learned and promiſing Prince.

But Arthur Prince of Wales dying, the late King contracted his Son Henry to Catherine of Spain. The Motives of engaging in ſo exceptionable a Relation, were to prevent the parting with the Princeſs's Dower: This amounting to a great Revenue, they were afraid might break the Ballance; eſpecially if this Lady happen'd to marry with the Houſe of France. Beſides, the preſerving the Alliance with Spain, was look'd on as a ſerviceable Expedient (c).

He is contracted to Catherine of Spain in his Father's Reign.

And here to ſilence the Cenſures for marrying the Brother's Wife, and ſecure the Iſſue from Blemiſh

(a) Lord Herbert.

(b) F. Paul Hiſt. Con. Trent.

(c) Lord Herbert, p. 8.

miſh and Inconvenience, it was thought neceſſary to apply to the Pope for a Diſpenſation. Pope Julius the Second comply'd with the Requeſt, and grants a Bull and a Brief for this purpoſe (d). They were both dated Dec. 26. 1503.

(d) See Records, Num. 1.

In theſe Inſtruments, the Impediments of Affinity, the Objections of Catherine's Cohabitation with Arthur, the Suppoſition of her being already marry'd to Prince Henry, are all overruled and diſpens'd with. For tho' there was no matter of Fact to reſt the laſt Caſe upon, yet the Court of Rome was reſolv'd to make all ſure. But here it muſt be ſaid, the Pope proceeded againſt the Opinion of many of his Cardinals (e).

Pope's Diſpenſation in favour of the Marriage.

(e) Lord Herbert p. 8.

How agreeable ſoever this Alliance might be at firſt to King Henry the Seventh, he afterwards, it ſeems, repented its being made. For as Sir * Richard Moriſin reports, he charg'd his Son to break the Contract. This Advice was given, as this Author continues, upon Principles of Conſcience; (f) and a full Perſuaſion of the Ingagement's being unlawful. And becauſe Affection takes its Riſe from Converſation, and ſometimes grows unmanageable in young People; for this Reaſon the King wou'd not ſuffer his Son to viſit the Princeſs, or hold any Correſpondence with her (g).

* This Sir R. Moriſin was employ'd in ſeveral Embaſſies in the Reigns of Hen. VIII. and Edw. VI.

(f) Moriſin's Apomaxis Calumniarum, &c. p. 13.

(g) Id. p. 14.

And therefore the Proteſtation made by Prince Henry about two Years after, was done without doubt by his Father's Direction (h). For this Proteſt in Form againſt the Lawfulneſs of the Contract, (i) could not be any Suggeſtion of Scruple in the young Prince. He wanted ſomething of fourteen Years, when he thus publickly declar'd his Diſlike †. Now this is an Age too young for Caſes of Conſcience and Debates about Marriage.

(h) Id. p. 13.

(i) See Records Num. 2. He proteſts againſt the Contract when Pr. of Wales.

† He was born Jun. 28. 1491. and the Proteſtation bears date, June 27. 1505.

And that he was ſway'd by his Father in this Affair, is pretty evident by the Change of his Mind not long after. For before he had reign'd two Months, he was ſolemnly marry'd to the Princeſs Catherine (k). When he came into his own Conduct, his Fancy govern'd the matter, and made him forget his Father's Inſtructions (l). Now, as Sir Richard Moriſin obſerves, he began to reaſon from his Inclination, and to conclude, that Pope Julius wou'd never have allow'd the Marriage, had it been repugnant to the Laws of God, or above his Holineſs's Diſpenſation. Thus when the Heart is once gain'd, the Objections commonly vaniſh (m).

But afterwards marries the Princeſs.

(k) June 3. 1509. Holningſhed.

(l) Moriſin p. 14.

(m) Id.

The next Year Pope Julius the Second made his Court to King Henry: He ſent him a golden Roſe dipt in Chriſm, and perfum'd with Muſk. It was directed to Archbiſhop Warham, who had Inſtructions to preſent it at High Maſs, with the Pope's Benediction (n).

A. D. 1510. The Pope ſends the King a Preſent.

(n) Spelman Concil. Vol. 2. p. 725.

This Julius, who was a warlike Prelate, having carry'd his Point in Italy the laſt Campaign, was willing to accept the Submiſſion of the Venetians. He made a Peace with this State February 24; and being uneaſy at the Progreſs of the French Arms in Italy, he endeavoured to oppoſe their Succeſs. To this purpoſe he brought Ferdinand of Spain into his Intereſt, by giving him the Inveſtiture of Naples. He likewiſe endeavour'd to draw the King of England into a War againſt France, by putting him in mind of the Victories of his Anceſtors, and the great patrimonial Dominions they had in that Countrey. And to ſollicite him more effectually, he offer'd King Henry the Honour of being Head of the League with the Italian Princes. The King cloſing with the Propoſal, diſpatch'd Bambridge, Archbiſhop of York, to Rome, with Inſtructions to treat this Affair. In the mean time, the Pope and the Venetians made an Attempt upon Ferrara and Genoa. But failing of Succeſs, the Pope applies to the Cenſures of the Church, and excommunicates the Duke of Ferrara, with all his Adherents. On the other ſide, to make this Expedient unſerviceable, Lewis the Twelfth conven'd a Synod of the Gallican Church at Tours. At this Aſſembly the Pope's late Management was cenſur'd, and his Excommunication declar'd void. It was likewiſe reſolv'd a Remonſtrance ſhould be drawn up, and an Admonition ſent to perſuade him to Peace, and gentler Meaſures. And if theſe Terms were refus'd, he ſhou'd be put in mind of the Decree of the Council of Baſil, and requeſted to call a General Council. Lewis the French King having made this Step, prevail'd with the Emperor Maximilian, and ſome of the Cardinals, to joyn him in the Motion. By this face of Authority, a Council was ſummon'd to Piſa, and the Pope requir'd to appear there. While this Buſineſs was tranſacting, the French Forces under Chaumont, ſat down before Bononia. The Pope being ſurpriz'd, and lying ſick in the Town, was forc'd upon harſh Conditions. This beſieging his Holyneſs ſounded ill, and was look'd on as a very hardy Enterprize; inſomuch that King Henry preſently enter'd into a League with Ferdinand in Julius's Defence.

And endeavours to make him break with France.

Dupleix.

Lord Herbert.

1 Sept. 1511. A Council ſummon'd at Piſa.

This Year ſeveral in the Dioceſe of Canterbury abjur'd for Hereſy, before Archbiſhop Warham, at his Mannor of Knoll. Chriſtopher Grebel, one of 'em, abjur'd the Articles following. The Form runs thus:

Several Perſons abjure for Hereſy.

In the Name of God, Amen. “Before yow the moſt Reverend Father in God, my Lord William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, I Chriſtopher Grebel, Layman, of the Dioceſe of Canterbury, of my pure Heart and free Will, confeſs and knowledge, That I in times paſt, have believ'd, ſaid, affirm'd, hold'n, and taught of the Sacraments of the Church, and other Articles of Faith, otherways than the Holy Church of Rome, and univerſal Church of God teacheth, &c. And ſpecially, amongſt others, theſe Errors and Hereſies following, that is to wit, That in the Sacrament of the Altar is not the Body of Chriſt, but material Bread: Alſo, that the Sacrament of Baptiſm and Confirmation, is not neceſſary nor profitable for Man's Saul. Alſo that Pilgrimages to holy and devout Places, be not profitable neither meritorious for Man's Saul. Alſo that Images of Saints be not to be worſhipp'd: And that a Man ſhould pray to no Saint, but only to God. Alſo that Holy Water and Holy Bread be not the better after the Benediction made by the Prieſt, than they were before.” William Oldburd, Agnes Ive, Agnes Chettingden, Thomas Manning, John Collins, Robert Hills, Thomas Harwood, Stephen Caſtiline, William Oldbeard, Robert Reynolds, Thomas Feild, John Oldbeard, Vincent Linch, and ſome others abjur'd the ſaid Articles, and ſome, only ſome of 'em. For their Penance, they were order'd to go bare-foot, and offer a Taper: Some of 'em were enjoyn'd to carry Faggots, and leave 'em at the Church Door, and to offer ſomething at the High Altar, when Maſs was ſaid (q). Stephen Caſtiline being a leading Perſon, and having brought over ſeveral to his Opinions, had ſomething particular in his Penance. He was confin'd to a ſort of perpetual Impriſonment in the Monaſtery of Leeds in Kent. And in caſe he took the liberty of going farther than a Mile from that Place, was to be treated as a Perſon relaps'd. The other part of his Penance was to carry a Faggot the next Lord's Day, into the Church of Tenderden, before the Proceſſion; and during this Confinement, he was to mortify in his Diet, and to be fed Pane doloris, & aqua anguſtia (r).

Grebel Orthodox in ſome Points, and Heterodox in others.

(q) Regiſt. Warham fol. 144. 173.

Sept. 11.

(r) Id p. 174.

About this time, Elizabeth Samſon in the Dioceſe of London, was delated for holding Heretical Opinions. She is charg'd with ſpeaking irreverently, and indeed impiouſly, of the Holy Euchariſt, declaring againſt Pilgrimages, and the Worſhip of Images: And here, tho' ſhe was right in the main, yet her Language was intemperate and indecent. The other two Articles objected againſt her, were plain Hereſies, being no leſs than the denying our Saviour's Aſcenſion, and the general Reſurrection. She confeſſes the Charge, and abjures (ſ).

(ſ) Regiſt. Fitz James, fol. 4.

Joan Baker was likewiſe convented for Hereſy. She deny'd the Pope's Power in granting Pardons; refuſ'd to pay Reverence to the Crucifix; declar'd againſt Pilgrimages, and ſaid the Lady Young, who was burnt for ſuch Opinions, dy'd a Martyr. She was diſmiſs'd upon abjuring (t). About this time one William Potear of Whitcallne, abjur'd.

(t) Id. fol. 25.

He held, That if the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, were Three Perſons, they were Three Gods; and that Holy, Holy, Holy, was ſung in the Church Service to ſignifie as much.

Item, That he did not underſtand what Benefit the World receiv'd by our Saviour's Paſſion; becauſe ſince his Incarnation, as well as before, Men are damn'd for mortal Sins. And laſtly, That he cou'd not tell to what purpoſe the Sacrament of Baptiſm was available. He confeſſed all theſe Articles in his Abjuration.

A Council at Lyons.

The Pope was unſucceſsful this Campaign in Italy, loſt Bononia to the French, and was defeated in the Field by Gaſton de Foix. This Diſgrace was follow'd by another: His Supremacy receiv'd a Check, and a Council was meeting at Piſa againſt his Will. To prevent this Misfortune from going farther, he excommunicates the Princes and Cardinals who ſummon'd the Council. But this Cenſure was not regarded by the other Party. However, the Prelates who came thither, being diſcountenanc'd by the Burghers of Piſa, tranſlate the Council to Milan; and finding no better Entertainment there, remov'd to Lyons. Hither Julius is ſummon'd, and his Authority ſuſpended, for not appearing. Upon this, the Pope thunders his Cenſures againſt France, nulls the Council of Lyons, and ſummons another to be held at the Lateran in Rome. In this Council the Engliſh had a Repreſentation; two Biſhops and two Abbots being ſent thither; viz. Silveſter, Biſhop of Worceſter, John, Biſhop of Rocheſter, Thomas Dockra, Lord Prior of St. John's, and Richard, Abbot of Winchelcomb (u). In this Lateran Synod, the Sentence of Excommunication againſt the Members and Abettors of the other Council was confirm'd, and the Acts of it voided. The Pope to fortify himſelf further, endeavoured to draw King Henry into the Quarrel againſt the French King. Archbiſhop Bambridge was the Pope's Agent in this matter, and for his Service was made a Cardinal (w).

Feb. 4. 1512.
(u) Lord Herbert.
Voided by the Council of Lateran.

(w) Id. p. 17.
Id.

King Henry being reſolv'd to comply with the Pope, and attack France, demanded the Provinces of Anjou, Guienne, &c. which had formerly been parcel of the Engliſh Crown. This Claim being not conſider'd by King Lewis, the War broke out. The Preparations for this Expedition were manag'd by Cardinal Wolſey, who was now a growing Favourite. This Wolſey, a Perſon of mean Birth, had begun to make his Fortune in the late Reign. Fox, Biſhop of Wincheſter, recommended him to King Henry the Seventh, who employ'd him in an Embaſſy to the Emperor Maximilian. Wolſey manag'd this Affair with ſo much Expedition and Addreſs, that the King rewarded him with the Deanry of Lincoln at his return, and ſoon after made him his Almoner (x).

(x) Cavendiſh Mem. of Card. Wolſey.

Fox recommends Wolſey.

About this time there was a Miſunderſtanding between Fox, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Thomas, Earl of Surrey. The Biſhop, who was Principal Secretary and Lord Privy Seal, charg'd the other, who was Lord Treaſurer, with being too laviſh of the King's Money, and exhauſting the Exchequer, which was left ſo plentifully furniſhed by King Henry the Seventh. The Earl juſtify'd himſelf, by alledging the King's ſpecial Order. (y) The Biſhop being ſomewhat worn out by Age and ill Health, diſengag'd from the Court, and retir'd to his See; (z) and that no ill Offices might be done him with the King, he made a Friend of Wolſey, who, by the Biſhop's Intereſt, was brought farther into the King's Eſteem, and ſworn of the Privy Council. To let the Reader into ſome part of his Character, he is ſaid to be a Perſon of great Induſtry and Diſpatch, was always puſhing his Fortune, and made the moſt of an Opportunity. He was reckon'd a very good Speaker, manag'd to commendation in the Star-Chamber; and upon the ſcore of his Elocution, was aſſign'd by that Court to report their Proceedings to the King. However, the Methods of his Riſe were not all defenſible, for he is charg'd to make his Intereſt with the King with too much Art, to apply to his Inclination, and gratify his Fancy, without regard to the Merit of the Caſe. (a) The King being young was govern'd by his Diverſions: Wolſey perceiving the bent of his Humour, undertook to eaſe him of the Fatigues of Buſineſs. Upon this the King put the Adminiſtration moſtly into Wolſey's Hands; and what Satisfaction he gave his Maſter, may be gueſs'd by his Promotion. For the King made him firſt Biſhop of Tournay, lately taken from the French, and afterwards upon the Death of Dr. Smith, he was prefer'd to the See of Lincoln: to which we may add the Archbiſhoprick of York, which was giv'n him at the Deceaſe of Cardinal Bambridge. And having mention'd the Death of theſe Biſhops, it may not be improper to ſay ſomething about them. To begin with William Smith, who was bred at Pembroke-hall in Cambridge, and from thence promoted to the Biſhoprick of Coventry and Lichfeld: here he founded an Hoſpital, with Maintenance for a Maſter, two Prieſts and ten poor People. He likewiſe founded a School there: and towards the Endowment procur'd a Grant of the Hoſpital of Don-hall in Cheſhire of King Henry the Seventh. To this we may add the Foundation of another School at Farmworth the Place of his Birth, where he ſettles 10 l. a year for the Maſter's Sallary; and to conclude with his Benefactions, he began to build the College of Brazennoſe in Oxford, but here Death prevented the finiſhing his Deſign. He was tranſlated to Lincoln in the Year 1495; and was Lord Preſident of Wales from the ſeventeenth of Henry the Seventh to the fifth of Henry the Eighth, in which he died (b). To proceed in a word to Cardinal Bambridge: This Prelate was extracted from a conſiderable Family near Appleby in Weſtmorland, bred in Queen's College at Oxford: and being Doctor of Law, was made Maſter of the Rolls, and Dean of York. In the Year 1507, he was conſecrated Biſhop of Durham, and tranſlated to York the Year after. He had a publick Character from the King at the Court of Rome, as has been obſerved already. In his Return from thence towards England, he died at Roan. It is thought, his Paſſion was the Occaſion of his Death; for Rivallus de Modena, his Steward, being can'd by the Cardinal, he poiſon'd him in Revenge. He died July 14. 1514.

(y) Lord Herbert.

(z) Antiquit. Brit. Eccleſ. p. 309.

Somewhat of Wolſey's Character.

(a) Cavend. p. 12.

Id.

Smith, Biſhop of Lincoln, his Benefactions.

Dec. 31. 1513.
(b) Godwin. de Præſul. Angl.

The Death of Card. Bambridge.
Id. & Cavend.

A. D. 1512.

I muſt now go back a little, and acquaint the Reader, that at a Parliament held in the fourth Year of this Reign, there was an Act made, That all Perſons hereafter committing Murder or Felony in any Church, Chapel, in the King's Highway, or thoſe that ſhou'd rob or murder any Perſon in his Houſe, &c. ſhou'd not be admitted to the Benefit of the Clergy (c).

(c) 4 H. 8. c. 2.

The Abbot of Winchelcomb's Sermon gives Occaſion to a debate concerning the Exemption of the Clergy.

This Act, tho' ſerviceable to the Quiet of the Kingdom, prov'd the Occaſion of a great Diſpute at the next Parliament held in the Year 1515: For it ſeems the Abbot of Winchelcomb had lately been ſo imprudent in his Sermon at Paul's-Croſs, as to declare that the Act abovemention'd was directly contrary to the Law of God, and ſubverſive of the Liberties of the Church; and that the Lords Spiritual and Temporal who had paſs'd the Bill had incurr'd the Cenſures. And to fortify his Aſſertion, he produc'd a Decree, upon the Authority of which Citation, he affirms that all Clerks, both in greater or leſſer Orders, were exempt from the Cogniſance of Temporal Courts in Criminal Cauſes. For, ſays he, all Orders, thoſe below a Subdeacon as well as thoſe above, are holy Orders (d). Upon this, the King, at the ſpecial Requeſt of the Temporal Lords, and ſeveral of the Houſe of Commons, order'd the Caſe to be ſolemnly argued at Black-fryers. And here we are to obſerve, that the Judges were preſent at the Debate. When the Buſineſs came on, Henry Standiſh, Doctor of Divinity, Warden of the Fryers Mendicants in London, and one of the King's Spiritual Council, argued thus. That the Act abovemention'd, and the proſecuting of Clerks before Temporal Judges in Criminal Cauſes, was by no means inconſiſtent with the Law of God, nor the Liberties of holy Church. That ſuch Proſecutions being cuſtomary Practice, and conformable to the Laws of the Kingdom, they ought not to be over-rul'd. His Reaſon was, that the publick Advantage was very much ſecur'd this way, and that all the Laws of the World ought to be conſtrued in Favour to the General Good.

(d) Keilwey's Reports fol. 181.

On the other ſide, the Council for the Spirituality reply'd, that there was a Decree or Canon directly contrary to Standiſh's Plea, and that all Chriſtians were bound to obey this Canon, under the Danger of ſinning mortally. And therefore the conventing Clerks before Temporal Judges in Criminal Cauſes was evidently indefenſible. To this Standiſh returns, God forbid; for there is a Decree, ſays he, that all Biſhops ſhou'd be reſident at their Cathedral upon every Feſtival; and yet we ſee the greateſt part of the Engliſh Biſhops practiſe the contrary. Beſides, this Decree for the Exemption of Clerks was never admitted in England: the contrary Uſage having all along been receiv'd here, as well ſince, as before the making of it: now ſince the Decree has never gain'd Reception in England, for this Reaſon it does not bind the Subject. The Council for the Clergy, it ſeems did not anſwer this part of the Argument, but endeavour'd to ſupport the Cauſe by ſaying, that Clerks were exempted by the expreſs Command of our Saviour Chriſt: he endeavour'd to prove his Affirmation by this Text, Touch not my Anointed. Now, ſays he, no Cuſtom, how general ſoever, can ſtand againſt this Authority: for all Laws and Uſages, which Claſh with the Commands of God, are downright damnable; from whence it follows, that the trying Clerks before Temporal Judges in Criminal Cauſes, is a direct Contradiction to the Law of God. To this Standiſh rejoins, that theſe Words Touch not my Anointed, were ſpoken by the Prophet David above 1000 Years before the Incarnation, and that he could never prove our bleſſed Saviour had ever ſpoken thoſe Words. And to make the matter better underſtood, he added, that the reaſon of King David's uſing this Expreſſion was becauſe the greateſt part of the World at that time were Infidels: that upon this Ground, he call'd thoſe, who believ'd the Law of Moſes, and the Revelation of the Old Teſtament, God's Anointed; and therefore commanded the unbelieving Gentiles not to touch or hurt theſe Anointed. By the way, this Expoſition is almoſt as untoward as the other; however as Keilway reports, the Clergy's Council made no Defence to that point: But as to the main, he held up the Argument, and pretended himſelf able to baffle any Perſon of a different Sentiment. But notwithſtanding this Flouriſh, he argued faintly, when put to the proof: inſomuch that certain Members of the Houſe of Commons made a Motion that the Biſhops wou'd order the Abbot of Winchelcomb to go to St. Paul's-Croſs, and there openly recant his firſt Sermon: But the Biſhops refus'd to comply with this Expedient, declaring (if this Reporter is not miſtaken) that they were oblig'd by the Laws of holy Church to maintain the Abbots Opinion in every Branch of it. And thus the matter reſted till Michaelmas-Term following. In the mean time one Dr. Horſy (as Keilwey continues) Chancellor to the Biſhop of London convented one John Hun of London, for Suſpicion of Hereſy, and afterwards, by virtue of his Authority, committed him to the Lollard's Tower, which was a Priſon of the Biſhop's at St. Paul's. There was a Miſunderſtanding between this Dr. Horſy and Hun, upon the ſcore of a Præmunire brought againſt the Doctor at Hun's Suit. The Occaſion of the Diſpute was this: this Hun a Merchant Taylor in London had a Mortuary demanded of him for a Child of his: the Clergyman claim'd the bearing Sheet, which Hun refuſing to give, he was ſued in the Spiritual Court. His Council advis'd him to bring a Præmunire againſt the Clerk for ſuing the King's Subjects in a foreign Court. That the Biſhop's Court was foreign, his Lawyer pretended to prove becauſe the Court ſat by Authority from the Legate. (e) But here ſeems to be a double Miſtake; for, 1*ſt*, The Biſhop of London, in whoſe Court Hun was ſued, had no Legantine Commiſſion, but acted upon his ordinary Juriſdiction; beſides here was no Bulls or Inſtruments procur'd from the Pope, or any thing made uſe of in the Name of the See of Rome; 2*dly*, If by a Stretch of Conſtruction, the Biſhop of London ſhou'd be ſaid to be an Abettor of a foreign Juriſdiction, becauſe he did not formally diſclaim Wolſey's Legantine Authority: To this I anſwer, that Cardinal Wolſey had the King's Licenſe under his Broad Seal to execute the Functions of a Legate. 3*dly*, It may be obſerv'd, that the Archbiſhops of Canterbury have been all along ſtiled the Pope's Legates from the Reign of Henry the Firſt, and yet their Juriſdiction was never queſtioned (f). While this Suit was depending, Hun was queſtion'd for Hereſy, and impriſon'd: He was afterwards found dead in his Chamber. Dr. Horſy and the Keeper affirm'd he had hang'd himſelf: But their Relation being queſtion'd, the Coroner's Inqueſt paſs'd upon the Body. This Jury acquitted Hun of being Felo de ſe, and laid the Murder on the Officers that had the Charge of the Priſon (g).

Hun proſecuted for Hereſy in the Biſhop of London's Court.

(e) Dr. Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. part 1. p. 14.

(f) See the 1*ſt Part of this Hiſt. p* 317.

He is found dead in the Biſhop's Priſon. A. D. 1514.

(g) Holing. p. 835. and Dr. Burnet.

While the Inqueſt proceeded in this Tryal, the Biſhop began a new Proceſs againſt Hun for other points of Hereſy. The Articles are ſaid to have been drawn out of Wickliff's Preface to the Bible. This Book being in Hun's Poſſeſſion paſs'd for Evidence: So that in ſhort he was pronounc'd a Heretick, and his Body, being deliver'd to the Sheriff, was burnt in Smithfield. Fox makes a Tragical Repreſentation of this matter, and if his Narrative will hold, the Proceedings were very extraordinary: But to give the Reader a more diſtinct View of the Caſe, I ſhall ſet down the firſt Articles objected againſt Hun, as they ſtand in Fox.

Holing. and Dr. Burnet Ibid.

The Articles with which Hun was charg'd before the Biſhop.

" 1*ſt*, He is charg'd to have taught, publiſh'd " and obſtinately defended that the Clergy had " no Right to demand Tithes, and that the Prieſts " had nothing but their own Covetouſneſs for " their Title.

" 2*dly*, That he maintain'd and publiſh'd, that " Biſhops and Prieſts are the Scribes and Phariſes that crucify'd Chriſt, and condemn'd him " to die.

" 3*dly*, That he taught and maintain'd, that " Biſhops and Preiſts preach'd one way, and liv'd " another: that they minded no part of their " Function: that Avarice and Rapine was their " Buſineſs; and that they took every thing, and " gave nothing.

" A fourth Article objected to him, was his " Defence of the Opinions of Joan Baker above-" mention'd, Hun in his Anſwer deny'd the Opinions charg'd upon him, as they are couch'd in the Articles. However he own'd his having ſpoken ſome words which might be drawn towards ſuch a Conſtruction. For this he profeſs'd himſelf ſorry, begg'd God's Pardon, and ſubmitted himſelf to the Biſhop's Correction (h). As to the Depoſitions concerning Hun's Murder, the Proceſs of the Biſhop upon the dead Body, the bringing the Cauſe into the Parliament Houſe, and the King's Precept for the Reſtitution of his Goods; for Proof of this, Fox vouches the Records of the Proceedings then in the Hands of Hun's Grandſon. I ſhall now lay before the Reader the Account which Sir Thomas More gives of this Matter; Sir Thomas More, I ſay, who was a Perſon of no ſlender Character, and liv'd in London, when the Caſe happen'd. This Gentleman, in Anſwer to a Pamphlet call'd the Supplication of Beggars, endeavours to take off the Imputation charg'd upon Dr. Horſy and the Biſhop of London, as to the Buſineſs abovementioned.

(h) Fox Vol. 2.

Fox ibid. p. 22.

Sir Thomas Moore's Defence of the Proceſs in this Matter.

And 1*ſt*, Whereas it was objected, that provided Hun had not commenc'd an Action of Præmunire againſt a Prieſt, he had neither loſt his Life, nor been counted a Heretick. To this Sir Thomas Moore anſwers, that it was well known that Hun was charg'd with Hereſy, before the Præmunire was either ſued or thought on; and that he began this Suit to diſintangle himſelf from the Spiritual Court; and for ſome time found his Account in the Expedient. For the Biſhop, to prevent Calumny and Miſconſtruction, order'd his Proſecution to be ſtopp'd: And why ſo? Becauſe Hun might be the better at leiſure to make the moſt of his Action at Common Law. Hun therefore going on with his Suit, the King's Judges declar'd the Action would not bear; the matter in queſtion being a Mortuary, which by the Law plainly belong'd to the Juriſdiction of the Spiritual Court. Hun being thus baffled at the Common Law, the Biſhop went on with his Proceſs, and prov'd the Charge of erroneous Doctrine againſt him under his own Hand.

2*dly*, Whereas it was ſaid, that Doctor Horſy and his Officers murder'd Hun in Priſon; the contrary, ſays Sir Thomas Moore, is well known, and that the Man hang'd himſelf out of Deſpair, Revenge, and want of Grace.

3*dly*, The Author of the Supplication of Beggars pretends, that Doctor Horſy purchas'd the King's Pardon for the murdering of Hun. This Sir Thomas Moore poſitively denies, and ſays, there was never any Attempt made to procure a Pardon; but that after a conſiderable time, when the Matter had been examin'd to the bottom, the King was ſatisfy'd that Doctor Horſy, and thoſe brought into trouble with him, were wrongfully charg'd with the Murder. Upon this, when they were arraign'd upon an Indictment, and pleaded not guilty, he order'd the Attorney General to allow their Plea, and diſcharge them *. Sir Thomas Moore replies to two other Objections againſt Doctor Horſy, which being not ſo material, I ſhall wave the recital.

* Moore's Works, 297. & deinc.

To return to Keilwey: The Biſhops (as this Reporter continues) perceiving the Jury intended to indite Doctor Horſy and the Keeper for the Murder of Hun, notwithſtanding their Advice to the contrary; and it may be concluding, Doctor Standiſh might have given ſome Occaſion to this Matter; order'd him to appear before the Convocation. And here the Doctor had certain Queſtions put to him by word of Mouth. 1ſt. Whether it is lawful for a Temporal Judge to bring any Clerks before him in a Court of Juſtice, &c. 2dly, Whether the firſt Orders are Holy Orders or not. 3dly, Whether a Conſtitution made by the Pope and Clergy is binding, in a Country where the contrary Practice has all along prevailed. 4thly, Whether a Temporal Prince can check the Proceedings of Biſhops who miſbehave themſelves in correcting thoſe under their Juriſdiction. What Anſwer Dr. Standiſh made to theſe Queſtions, Keilwey does not inform us: But another Day, as he goes on, Warham Archbiſhop of Canterbury deliver'd him a Bill, or Paper, in full Convocation; it contained the ſame Senſe with the Articles above-mention'd, and a Day was aſſign'd him to put in his Anſwer. Doctor Standiſh, perceiving the Convocation diſaffected to him, and apprehending the Conſequence, applyed to the King for Protection. Upon this, the Clergy made their Excuſe to the King, acquainted his Majeſty, that they had no Quarrel to the Doctor, upon the Score of his Pleading againſt the Abbot of Winchelcombe, and that this Pretence of his was mere Calumny. On the contrary, their Exceptions againſt Standiſh were, certain publick Diſcourſes he had made at St. Paul's and other Places, long after he had been entertain'd as the King's Council: In which Diſcourſes, he had poſitively maintain'd the Opinions mention'd in the Bill exhibited againſt him: That theſe Propoſitions were directly contrary to the Law, and Liberties of Holy Church: Adding withal, that they were bound to endeavour the Suppreſſion of ſuch Innovations, and begging the King's Aſſiſtance purſuant to the Oath at his Coronation.

An. 7. H. 8. Mich. Term. Dr. Standiſh cited before the Convocation.

He is charged with Tenents derogatory to the Privilege and Juriſdiction of the Church.

After this the Temporal Lords and Judges, at the inſtance of the Houſe of Commons, intreated the King to maintain his Royal Juriſdiction; for this, as they ſuggeſted, was likewiſe part of his Coronation Oath. To this they ſubjoyn'd their Requeſt, that His Majeſty would be pleas'd to ſhelter Doctor Standiſh from the Malice of the Clergy: For that the principal Matter of their Bill againſt him, and that which the Abbot declaim'd on in his Sermon, were in effect the ſame things; and tended both to maim the Juriſdiction of the Temporal Courts, and exempt the Clergy from Puniſhment. The King having weigh'd the Requeſt of either Party, call'd Doctor Veſey the Dean of his Chapel to him, and commanded him upon upon his Faith and Allegiance to declare the Truth, according to the beſt of his Knowledge, upon the following Queſtion. That is, whether the trying of Clerks in Criminal Cauſes before Temporal Judges, is directly contrary to the Law of God, and the Liberties of holy Church, as the Spiritualty pretend. To this, after mature Deliberation, Dr. Veſey told the King with all the Solemnity required, that the trying of Clerks before Temporal Judges, purſuant to the Cuſtom of England, was very conſiſtent with the Law of God, and the Liberties of holy Church: And here he alledg'd ſeveral Reaſons and Authorities in proof of his Opinion. Soon after, the Judges, the King's Council Spiritual and Temporal, and certain Members of the Parliament, were order'd by the King to meet at Black fryers upon this matter. And here the Convocation Bill againſt Dr. Standiſh was read: The Words are theſe,

He is abetted by the Temporalty.

A. D. 1515.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

He was firſt to anſwer, whether he had publickly or privately maintain'd the following Propoſitions; the firſt was, that the leſſer Orders were not holy. 2dly, That the Exemption of Clerks was not Jure Divino. The third was, That the Laity might lawfully puniſh the inferior Clergy, in caſe the Prelates proved negligent. 4thly, That poſitive Eccleſiaſtical Laws are binding to none but thoſe that receive them. 5thly, That the Study of the Canon Law ought to be laid aſide, becauſe being but Miniſterial to Divinity, it taught People to deſpiſe that nobler Science. 6thly and laſtly, That the Obligatory part of the Decretum might be held in a Man's Hand.

His anſwer.

“These Propoſitions being read, Dr. Standiſh began with his Anſwer to the 3d Propoſition, and denyed he had ever maintain'd it. He gave much the ſame Anſwer to the 5th and 6th, as to any deliberate aſſerting them: However, whether he might not have ſaid ſomething towards that Senſe in Converſation, he ſhou'd not be poſitive, neither did he believe his Caſe required it. As to the 1ſt Propoſition relating to the Leſſer Orders, he anſwer'd they were holy in one reſpect, and not ſo in another. And to the 2d Concluſion touching the Exemption of Clerks, he anſwer'd that the ſummoning of 'em before Temporal Judges, imply'd no Repugnancy to the poſitive Laws of God. And his Anſwer to the 4th Concluſion was, that Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions, where the Practice runs againſt them for 300 Years, bind no where but where they are receiv'd.

To this Anſwer the Managers for the Clergy reply'd, that the Temporal Judges cou'd no more juſtify the Calling their Spiritual, than their Natural Father before them; and that as the trying their Natural Father implies expreſs Diſobedience againſt the Fifth Commandment, ſo the Inference wou'd hold to their Spiritual Parent, whoſe Honour is ſecur'd by that Precept; adding withal, that no Cuſtom ought to be pleaded in Bar of the Ten Commandments. To this Dr. Standiſh reply'd, 1ſt, By allowing the Parallel; That the Temporal Judge might ſummon both one Father and t'other before him, without any Breach of the Fifth Commandment: He might do this, he ſaid, provided he manag'd with Diſcretion, and kept to a temper in the Proceſs: that is, in caſe they were both found guilty, if he deliver'd his Spiritual Father to the Ordinary, and defer'd to give Sentence upon his Natural: The keeping within this compaſs, he ſaid, was no Failure in regard to either Relation.

2dly, He reply'd there was a Diſparity in the Caſe: for ſuppoſing a Judge cou'd not juſtify the conventing of his Spiritual Father, yet it does not follow, but that he might order other Clerks to be brought before him; for every Clerk is not his Spiritual Father. He argued farther, that every Command was not to be reſtrain'd to a literal Senſe, a Latitude of Interpretation being ſometimes neceſſary. For inſtance, Thou ſhall not kill, Thou ſhall not ſteal, are parts of the Decalogue, and of a Moral Nature. This Bar notwithſtanding, the Iſraelites both kill'd and ſpoil'd the Egyptians, without violating the Law. It is true, they had a Warrant from God to juſtify this Liberty. And ſince a Branch of the Moral Law may be diſpens'd with, it would be ſtrange if the Conſtitutions of the Church, ſhou'd be wholly unalterable.

Hen. VIII. K.

He is ſeconded by Veſey.

Veſey ſeconded Standiſh, and repeated the Reaſons he had laid before the King upon this Argument. He ſaid, that in the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, all ſecular Prieſts had the Liberty of marrying: But that afterwards, when Auſtin the Monk came over, there was an Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution in reſtraint of this Liberty: that becauſe this Conſtitution was received with us, and in other parts of the Weſt; We, ſays he, that are Engliſh Prieſts live ſingle. But then we ought to take notice, that this Decree was not received in ſeveral parts of Chriſtendom, particularly not in the Eaſt: For this reaſon the Prieſts in the Greek Church marry no leſs than the Laity. Now if an Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution may be over-rul'd by Non-reception, and the Prevalence of a Counter-cuſtom; then, a fortiori, the trying of Clerks in Temporal Courts ought not to be conteſted. For here, beſides the Plea of Cuſtom, the Benefit of the Government is concern'd in the Practice. Now the Common Good, as had been urg'd already, ought to have a favourable Allowance, and be prefer'd to other Conſiderations.

The Judges Opinion upon the Caſe.

The Judges having heard the Caſe argued on both ſides, came to this Reſolution, that thoſe of the Convocation, who awarded a Citation againſt Dr. Standiſh, had fall'n under a Præmunire. They likewiſe affirm'd, that the King might hold a Parliament with his Temporal Lords and Commons, without the Lords Spiritual: Their Reaſon was, becauſe the Spiritual Lords don't ſit in Parliament by the Privilege of their Spiritualty, but only upon the ſcore of their Temporal Eſtates.

But here, if the Reporter has dealt clearly, the Reſolution of the Judges ſeems ſomewhat extraordinary: For, 1ſt, They pronounce the Clergy guilty of a Præmunire for citing Standiſh before the Convocation, and trying him for Heretical Opinions, of which the Biſhops were evidently Judges by Law (k).

2dly, They aſſert the King may hold a Parliament without the Biſhops, which is no leſs a Contradiction to the Engliſh Conſtitution; for nothing is more plain, than that the Prelates have been always reckon'd an Eſſential Part of the Legiſlature. In all Acts of Parliament, where the Subjects are mention'd, the Spiritual Lords are named in the firſt Place: And in Caſes of Blood, when the Biſhops were reſtrain'd by the Canons from being preſent, the Cuſtom was to make a Proteſtation to ſave their Privilege: Of this we have a famous Inſtance in the time of King Richard the Second. In this Reign Courtney, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, made a Proteſtation in the name of all the Biſhops: It ſets forth, that the Lords Spiritual by virtue of their Baronies, and as Peers of the Realm, had a right to ſit, debate, vote, and give Judgment with the reſt of the Peers in all Caſes and Matters tranſacted in Parliament, &c. This Inſtrument, at the Inſtance and Petition of the Archbiſhop and his Suffragans, was read in a full Houſe, and enter'd upon the Parliament Rolls by the

---

(k) Fitzherbert N. B. fol. 169. 2 H 4. cap 15. Coke Inſtitut. part 4. fol. 25.

the King's Command, with the Aſſent of the Temporal Lords and Commons (l): Farther, We are to obſerve, that there was no Creations by Patent till the Reign of King Henry the Third. Till this time all the Temporal Peers were noble in virtue of their Fiefs; 'twas the manner of holding their Land, which gave 'em their Quality. And of this we have ſtill an Inſtance in Arundel Caſtle; For whoever is Owner of this Caſtle has the Dignity of a Peer, and a Right to ſit in Parliament. From hence it appears, that the Reaſon the Juſtices give for their Opinion is inconcluſive. They ſay the Biſhops don't ſit in Parliament by virtue of their Character, but upon the account of their Temporal Poſſeſſions. That is true: But what follows? Why the contrary of the Judges Concluſion. For if the Biſhops ſit by virtue of their Temporal Poſſeſſions or Baronies, then, by the Judges Confeſſion, their Tenures give them a right to ſit: And by conſequence they cou'd not be denyed that Right, without open Breach upon the Conſtitution. But I need ſay no more in ſo plain a Caſe. And therefore upon the whole, as the Clergy were miſtaken one way, the Reverend Judges were no leſs another.

(l) Antiquit. Brit. p. 267. Regiſt. Courtney fol. 174. Rotul. Parl. 11. Ric. 2. N. 9.

After this Debate, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and a great many of the Houſe of Commons, together with the Juſtices and the King's Spiritual and Temporal Council, were order'd by his Majeſty to meet at Baynard's Caſtle. And here the Cardinal of York, kneeling to the King, declared, that he believed none of the Clergy had any intention to diſoblige the Prerogative Royal. That for his part he ow'd all his Promotion to his Highneſs's Favour: And therefore wou'd never aſſent to any thing that ſhou'd leſſen the Rights of the Crown. But then he ſubjoins, that this Buſineſs of conventing Clerks before Temporal Judges was, in the Opinion of the Clergy, directly contrary to the Laws of God, and the Liberties of Holy Church: That both himſelf and the reſt of the Prelates were bound by their Oath to maintain this Exemption: For this Reaſon he intreated the King in the name of the Clergy, that his Majeſty would pleaſe to refer the Deciſion of this point to the Pope and the Conclave. To this the King reply'd, that he thought Dr. Standiſh and others of his Spiritual Council had given the Clergy a ſufficient Anſwer. Upon this the Biſhop of Wincheſter ſaid, Sir, I warrant you Dr. Standiſh will not abide by his Opinion at his Peril. To this the Doctor anſwer'd, what ſhou'd one poor Fryer do alone againſt all the Biſhops and Clergy of England. After a little Pauſe, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury acquainted the King in the name of the Clergy, that in antient times ſeveral holy Fathers of the Church had oppoſed the Common Law in this matter: And ſome of 'em had carried the Conteſt ſo far as to ſuffer Martyrdom in the Quarrel. On the other hand Juſtice Fineux reply'd, that the trying Clerks in Temporal Courts had been maintain'd in the Reigns of ſeveral pious Princes and that many holy Prelates had acquieſc'd under this Law of the Country; which, 'tis preſum'd, they wou'd never have done, had it been ſo contrary to the Laws of God, as is now pretended. Beſides, the Prelates have no Authority to try any Clerk for Felony. The Archbiſhop anſwer'd, they had ſufficient Authority for that purpoſe; but brought neither Precedent nor Argument to ſupport his Aſſertion. Fineux on the other ſide rejoin'd, that in caſe a Clerk was apprehended for Felony, and afterwards deliver'd to the Ordinary by the Temporal Judge; you, ſays he, ſpeaking to the Biſhops, have no Authority to try the Fact. To what purpoſe therefore ſhou'd he be put into your Hands: In ſhort, therefore either a Clerk muſt be proſecuted in the Temporal Courts, or otherways there will be no way to make him ſuffer the Law for the higheſt Crimes.

To this, the Prelates making no Anſwer, the King ſpoke to this effect: “By the Providence and Permiſſion of God, we are King of England: In which Realm our Predeceſſors have never own'd any Superiour: And therefore I wou'd have you (meaning the Clergy) take notice, that we are reſolved to maintain the Rights of our Crown and Temporal Juriſdiction in as ample manner as any of our Progenitors, and that with reſpect to the Caſe in queſtion. And as to your Decrees, we are very well ſatisfy'd, that you depart from the literal Conſtruction in many Inſtances, as has been ſufficiently prov'd to you by our ſpiritual Council. And therefore you muſt not expect, that we ſhould gratify your Requeſt, any farther than has been formerly done by our Progenitors.” Upon this the Archbiſhop of Canterbury petition'd the King in the Name of the Clergy, that the Matter might reſt till they cou'd ſend to Rome for the Reſolution of that Court: And in caſe the Non-exemption of Clerks was conſiſtent with the Law of God, they were willing to conform to the Uſages of the Country.

The Clergy deſire this matter may be refer'd to the Court of Rome.

How the Court of Rome reſolv'd the Caſe is uncertain, but it does not appear that the Pope interpos'd in the matter.

To return, the King made no Anſwer to the Archbiſhop's Requeſt: However the motion prov'd ſerviceable to Dr. Horſy, inſomuch that his Proſecution ſlept for ſome time, and he was only confin'd in the Archbiſhop's Houſe, till the Noiſe about Hun's Murder went off; and then upon his appearing at the King's-Bench, he was diſcharg'd, as has been already related. And as for Dr. Standiſh, the Biſhops promis'd the King, he ſhou'd be diſmiſs'd from farther Trouble in the Convocation; which was done accordingly (m).

Dr. Horſy and Dr. Standiſh are diſcharg'd.

(m) Keilwey ibid.

Pope Julius was now dead, and ſucceeded by Leo the Tenth, of the Houſe of Medici. This Pope being over-munificent, endeavour'd to recover his Exchequer by a plenary Indulgence. Theſe Favours of the Court of Rome uſed to be publiſh'd by the Hermites; but the Dominicans being look'd on as the beſt Managers, the Matter was put into their hands (n). Theſe Men, it ſeems, flouriſh'd extravagantly upon the Virtue of Indulgences, and told the People they wou'd wipe out the Blemiſh of any Crime whatever: That they need not queſtion their being happy in another World; and that as ſoon as the Money was paid for the Dead, the Souls in Purgatory wou'd be immediately diſcharg'd, and mount to the Regions of Bliſs (o). “Martin Luther, a Hermite Fryer of Wittenburgh, was diſturb'd at theſe Abuſes. He thought the People doubly cheated, and that they not only loſt their Money, but were in danger of ſuffering much farther in their ſpiritual Intereſt. To ſtop the courſe of this Miſchief, he wrote to Albert of the Houſe of Brandenburgh Archbiſhop of Mentz. And here putting this Prelate in mind of his Office, he intreats him to ſuppreſs the Pamphlets put out for recommending the Indulgences: And to order the Publiſhers to be leſs mercenary and ſcandalous in their Harangues: For unleſs ſome Prevention of this kind was made uſe of, 'twas to be fear'd, there might be a Rupture in the Church. With this Letter he ſent his ninety five Concluſions, upon which he had diſputed at Wittenburg. In theſe Theſes, Purgatory, Penance, and Indulgences were handled, together (n) F. Paul. Hiſt. of the Coun. Trent.

A. D. 1517.

(o) Id. & Sleidan Comment. p 1.

Luther appears againſt Indulgences.

“ with ſome Strokes of Satyr upon the exceſſive Rhetorick of the Dominicans: But all this was only in a Problematical way, without coming to any poſitive Deciſion. And that the Difficulty of the Caſe might be the better diſintangled, he invited all Men of Learning to come and argue the Point. That thoſe who were not at leiſure ſhou'd ſend their Opinion in writing: proteſting at the ſame time, that he pretended to determine nothing, but ſubmitted the whole matter to the Judgment of the Church: However as to Thomas Aquinas and the other Schoolmen he had no implicit Belief for ſuch Authorities; neither cou'd he go into their Sentiment any farther than they agreed with the holy Scriptures and Fathers of the Church.

Tecel writes againſt Luther.

The Archbiſhop of Mentz return'd no Anſwer: But not long after John Tecel a Dominican of Frankfort upon the Oder, publiſh'd ſeveral Theſes in direct Oppoſition to Luther. In theſe Diſcourſes, he ſet forth the Pope's Authority and the Benefit of Indulgences with a great deal of Elocution: And was ſo hardy as to compare Leo the Tenth with the Apoſtle St. Peter. This Performance being much cry'd up, Luther reply'd in a Letter to his own Biſhop Jerom: And afterwards ſent a Copy to John Stupitz, deſiring him it might be convey'd to the Pope. Soon after he wrote to Leo himſelf. In this Letter, “ he gives his Holyneſs to underſtand, what dangerous Doctrine was advanc'd by his Collectors, and how much they abus'd his Authority to ſerve their Avarice; adding that he did not queſtion but great Complaints had been prefer'd againſt him, but he was altogether wrong'd. 'Tis true he had publiſh'd ſomething to check the Extravagancies delivered by the Collectors in their Sermons, but that was only by way of Information. He therefore deſires his Holyneſs not to give Credit to any Clamours againſt him. That provided the Reports of his Adverſaries had been true, the Elector of Saxony that prudent and pious Prince wou'd never have ſuffer'd him to live in his Dominions; neither ſhou'd he have receiv'd any better Countenance at the Univerſity of Wittenburgh. In fine, he lays his Writings and his Life at the Pope's Feet; telling him, that whatever Deciſion ſhall come from his Holyneſs, he ſhall look upon it as an Oracle from Heaven, and as if it had been pronounc'd by our Saviour himſelf: Neither would he refuſe to die if his Holyneſs ſhou'd think he deſerv'd it.

An. Dom. 1518, June.

He writes a ſubmiſſive Letter to the Pope.

Eccius & Prierias publiſh Books againſt Luther.

Beſides others, one John Eccius a Divine, publiſh'd an Anſwer to theſe laſt Diſcourſes of Luther. To this Luther, in his Reply, endeavour'd to prove that this Eccius had not fortify'd his Aſſertions with any Authorities from the Holy Scriptures and Fathers; but only advanc'd his own Fancy, countenanc'd with the Opinions of the Schoolmen. Sylveſter Prierias a Dominican, and Maſter of the Sacred Palace, ſeconded Eccius in the Diſpute. He dedicated his Book to the Pope, ſet forward with a great deal of Spirit, and ſeem'd confident of Succeſs. But to proceed with greater caution, he laid down as a kind of a Poſtulatum, that the Pope was Head of the whole Church, and that in Matters relating to Faith and Religion, the See of Rome was infallible; that a Council, where the Pope aſſiſted, had the ſame Privilege; that the Canon of Scripture was receiv'd upon the Authority of the Church, in conjunction with the Pope: That whoever refus'd to receive the Doctrine taught by the Church of Rome, or conteſted the Juriſdiction of that See, was undoubtedly an Heretick. After he had intrench'd himſelf under this Shelter, he ventur'd upon the Controverſie.

He replys.

To this Luther in his Anſwer, acquaints Sylveſter, “ That he admir'd his Manner more than he underſtood it. But then he thought fit to follow his Method ſo far as to lay down ſome Grounds for his Defence. And here he made the Holy Scriptures his Preliminary; from which he argu'd, that we are not to take every Body's Doctrine upon truſt, but to prove all things, and make the Word of God the Standard of our Belief; and that thoſe humane Writings, which keep cloſe to the Scriptures, were only to be admitted without Reſerve: As to the reſt, we were left at our Liberty. From hence he proceeds to Indulgences, and affirms, that the Collectors ought not to advance any new Doctrine or Methods, but be govern'd intirely by the Directions of the Canon Law. He proceeds to object againſt Prierias, that he does not bring any Text of Scripture in maintenance of his Poſition; that he reſts too much upon the Teſtimony of Tho. Aquinas; and that this Doctor us'd to follow his own Sentiment too far, without having recourſe to the inſpired Writings: That upon this account, he cou'd not admit the Reaſonings either of St. Thomas or Prierias: That he had both St. Paul and St. Auſtin for his warrant. He deſir'd him likewiſe to conſider, that it was cuſtomary among thoſe of the Long-Robe, to make good their pleading from the Text of the Law: And that in Matters of Religion, it was ſtill more neceſſary the Point ſhou'd be rul'd by the Holy Scriptures (p).

(p) Id. p. 2, & 3.

The Opinions concerning the Indulgences.

By the way, the Doctrine of Indulgences had not been thorowly examin'd in former Ages: Some look'd upon 'em only as Relaxations of Diſcipline, and Relief from Canonical Penance: And this was the moſt defenſible Opinion: Others went farther, and ſeem'd to believe, they diſcharged from Guilt, and were a Satisfaction to the Divine Juſtice. But how this cou'd be done without ſomething by way of Compenſation, was not ſo intelligible. To furniſh for this purpoſe, they had recourſe to the Treaſure of the Church: That is, the Merits of ſupererogating Saints, together with thoſe of our Saviour, they conceiv'd might ſupply the Defects, and atone for the Miſperformances of other People. Now the diſpoſing of this Treaſure is ſuppos'd to be lodg'd with the Head of the Church: And upon this Foot ſtands the Strength of the Pope's Indulgences (q).

(q) F. Paul Hiſt. Counc. of Trent.

Luther is cited to Rome.

His Cauſe referr'd to Cardinal Cajetan.

To proceed, The Controverſy grew warm upon motion; and Luther always advanc'd to ſome new Propoſition, as occaſion offer'd. The Difference being thus widen'd, Pope Leo cited him to Rome, and deſir'd the Duke of Saxony in a Brief not to protect him: But being afterwards ſollicited that the Cauſe might be try'd in Germany, he yielded to refer it to his Legate Cajetan. This Cardinal had Inſtructions, that in caſe he found Luther diſpos'd to a Submiſſion, he ſhou'd offer him a Pardon, and encourage him with Promiſes of Preferment: And here the Legate had a diſcretionary Commiſſion, and was left to his own Conduct.

This Latitude prov'd unfortunate to the Court of Rome. For Luther being a Man of no great Ceremony, and managing the Conference with unexpected Freedom, the Cardinal took check, menac'd him, and bid him be gone. Upon this Luther went from Ausburg, where the Conference was held, without farther Reply. But not long after, recollecting his Behaviour, he wrote to the Cardinal. And here he confeſs'd he had manag'd himſelf with too much Vehemence, and promiſ'd to be more reſerv'd for the future. He was willing, he ſaid, to ſatisfy the Pope, and diſpute no further about Indulgences, provided his Adverſaries might be held to the ſame Terms. But notwithſtanding this Offer, it ſeems both Parties continu'd to write, and inflame the Difference (r).

(r) Id. p. 8.

Cardinal Cajetan blam'd for his rough Treatment of Luther.

The Court of Rome was much diſpleas'd with the Cardinal's Management: They blam'd him for treating Luther ſo ruggedly. Whereas on the contrary, he ſhou'd have endeavour'd to have won him with gentle Uſage, with Promiſes of Wealth and Honour. He ought, they ſaid, to have brib'd him high to his Duty, and tempted him with a Mitre or a Cardinal's Hat.

Nov. 9. 1518. The Pope publiſhes a Bull in defence of his Authority and the Indulgences.

This falſe Step in Cajetan, put the Pope upon another unſerviceable Expedient. This Prelate being apprehenſive the Authority of his See might ſuffer in Germany by the preſent Controverſie, publiſh'd a Bull, by way of Prevention. In this Inſtrument he ſets forth the Vertue of Indulgences, and that himſelf, as Vicar of Chriſt, had Power to grant them both for the Living and Dead: That this was the Doctrine of the Church of Rome, of the Mother and Miſtreſs of all Chriſtians; and that her Reſolutions of Faith ought not to be diſputed. This Bull was ſent to Cardinal Cajetan, who publiſh'd it at Lynts in Auſtria (s).

(s) Id. p. 8.

Luther appeals from the Pope to a Council.

By this Bull, Luther perceiv'd himſelf loſt at the Court of Rome. This Proſpect made him ſally into further Freedoms, throw off all Ceremony and Reſerve, and treat the Pope in a manner upon the level. Thus much the Reader may underſtand from his Appeal. 'Tis true, he premiſes, that when the Pope taught the Truth, he wou'd not oppoſe his Authority: But then he takes the Liberty to add, that Sin and Error are Incidents to Mankind, and that his Holineſs was not exempt from thoſe common Infirmities: That St. Peter's Succeſſors cou'd not pretend a Privilege above St. Peter himſelf: That this great Apoſtle fail'd once in his Conduct, and was ſharply reprimanded by St. Paul: But for his part, he was no Match for the Pope: For 'twas eaſie for ſo wealthy and powerful a Prelate to cruſh any private Perſon who happen'd to differ from him. That in this Caſe, there was no other Remedy but to retreat to a Council. That here he reſolv'd to lodge his Cauſe, as being the laſt Reſort of Juſtice, and the higheſt Authority in the Church.

Id.

An. Dom. 1519.

He advances to new Articles.

Id.

This Appeal made a great Noiſe, and was not without its effect. Luther perceiving his Doctrine gain'd ground, and his Party increaſe, advanc'd to new Articles in his Oppoſition, argu'd for the Reſtitution of the Cup, decry'd Auricular Confeſſion, and touch'd upon the Abuſes in the Monaſtick Order.

The Pope condemns forty two of Luther's Tenets.

The Pope's Authority and the receiv'd Doctrine being thus directly ſtruck at, it was thought fit to apply to ſtronger Remedies. To this purpoſe Leo publiſhed a Bull, condemns Forty Two Articles in Luther's Doctrine, prohibits the Reading of his Books, and orders 'em to be burnt. The Points condemn'd, relate to Original Sin, Penance, and the holy Euchariſt; to Indulgences, the Power of the Pope, and the Authority of Councils; to good Works, the Freedom of the Will, Purgatory and Poverty. All which Tenets are call'd pernicious, ſcandalous, and offenſive to the Ears of good Chriſtians, &c.

1520.

This Bull amongſt other things, was blam'd for fixing ſo general a Cenſure, and condemning without diſtinction. For the Pope had not ſtated the quality of the Propoſitions condemn'd, nor told the World which of 'em were only falſe, and which of 'em heretical.

Luther burns both the Pope's Bull and the Canon Law.

On the other ſide, Luther kindled in his Reſentments, and was reſolv'd to make Repriſals upon his Holineſs. Thus when he underſtood his Books had been burnt by the Univerſities of Louvain and Cologn, he ventur'd upon a Revenge of the ſame kind: To this purpoſe he drew the Univerſity of Wittemberg together, had a Fire made in a publick Square, and threw the Pope's Bull and the Decretals into it. This was an unuſual Piece of Courage at that time of Day: And therefore he thought himſelf oblig'd to publiſh a Maniſeſto in defence of his Proceedings.

Id. p. 12, & 13.

I have been the longer in the Recital of this matter, becauſe theſe Advances of Luther gave a Shock to the papal Authority, made the former Submiſſions to the Court of Rome queſtionable, and was ſomewhat a leading Caſe to the Engliſh Reformation. For the weight of the Controverſie, the publick Management, and ſeveral great Princes in Germany, declaring on Luther's ſide, made his Writings ſpread throw the Weſtern Church, and many People inclin'd to look into them. That they were brought hither, is plain, by the Orders we meet with to ſeize and prohibit them.

And having laid this matter thus briefly together, I ſhall return to England, and go back a little.

The Pope deny'd a Contribution by the Engliſh Clergy.

The Pope being upon the proſpect of a War againſt the Turk, requires a Contribution from the Engliſh Clergy, deſiring the King at the ſame time to countenance the Affair. The Clergy in Convocation, drew up a Remonſtrance againſt this Demand: They acquainted his Holineſs, they were already exhauſted by contributing to the War with France, and that this Burden was laid upon them at the Inſtance of Julius the Second. They add further, that by a Decree of the Council of Conſtance, the Pope can levy no Tax upon the Church, but in caſe of Neceſſity, and under the Authority of a General Council (t).

An. Dom. 1519, Nov. 25.

(t) Herbert, p. 57.

By the Tenor of this Refuſal, it appears, the Engliſh Clergy were not altogether paſſive under the Exactions of the Court of Rome: That they had Reſolution enough to make a ſtand upon the Pope, and keep their Privilege and their Money, when occaſion requir'd.

1517. Sweating Sickneſs.

Two Years forward, the Sweating Sickneſs return'd upon the Engliſh. It was call'd Sudor Anglicus, becauſe very few, excepting the Engliſh Nation, were troubled with it. The Malignity of this Diſtemper was ſuch, that it kill'd within three Hours after the Invaſion. The Infection ſpread very wide, carried off ſeveral Perſons of Quality and Faſhion: As for the Common-People, they were ſwept away to that degree, that ſome Towns loſt half, and others two thirds of their Numbers.

Id.

Campegio ſent into England to demand a Tenth of the Clergy.

The next Year the Pope ſent his Legate Cardinal Campegio into England: His Buſineſs was to procure a general Alliance amongſt Chriſtian Princes for a War againſt the Turk. This Cardinal was likewiſe furniſh'd with Inſtructions to demand a Tenth of the Clergy: He had alſo Powers to viſit the Engliſh Monaſteries. In this Commiſſion, Wolſey now Cardinal and Lord Chancellor, was join'd with him. Campegio was obligingly treated by Wolſey, who promiſ'd him his Intereſt for the Biſhoprick of Saliſbury, when it happen'd to be void. Campegio not ſucceeding in his Demand of a Tenth, acquaints the Pope with the Incompliance of the Clergy, and prepares for a Viſitation of the Monaſteries. Wolſey, who thought a joint Commiſſion unneceſſary, and that himſelf was ſufficiently qualified for this Buſineſs, diſpatches Dr. Clerk a Civilian, to the Pope, to ſolicit for the ſole Management. Clerk being reinforc'd by the King's Inſtructions, ſucceeded in the

He is refus'd.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

Cardinal Wolſey made Legate à Latere.

Affair. Thus the Cardinal's Buſineſs was effectually done: And a Bull was procur'd to make him Legate à Latere. By this Character, he was qualify'd not only to viſit the Monaſteries, but the whole Clergy of England: He had likewiſe an Authority to diſpenſe with the Laws of the Church for a Year, which Term was to commence from the date of the Bull. The Exerciſe of this Authority was a Check upon the Biſhop's Juriſdiction, and prov'd very invidious to the Cardinal. Beſides, 'twas thought he was over-rigorous in the Management of this Function: And that in the Account of his Viſitation tranſmitted to the Pope, he had laid too heavy Imputations upon the Monks and Clergy. He is now complain'd of likewiſe, for over-ſtraining his Figure, and being too ſecular and magnificent in his Family: He is alſo cenſur'd for erecting a Legate's Court, and for making too narrow an Enquiry into Conduct and Manners; inſomuch that ſcarce any Miſcarriage cou'd eſcape without Diſcipline, unleſs the Parties gave a Bribe for Connivance: And thus as Conſcience extends further than Law in many Caſes, he was let into People's Minds, and made Maſter of their Secrets. To proceed, under this Pretence he had an Opportunity of giving Executors trouble about performing the Will of the Dead. By the Strength of his Legantine Commiſſion, he ſummon'd all ſort of religious Perſons before him. Theſe People are ſaid to have been brought to the loweſt Submiſſions, and menac'd with Expulſion, to force them to compound. Farther, as Polydore Virgil (who was none of his Friend) continues, all Church Preferment in a manner was beſtow'd on his Favourites. Warham Archbiſhop of Canterbury thinking Wolſey was too bold with his Commiſſion, and puſh'd his Character too far, acquaints the King with it. The King ſurpriz'd at the Information, ſends the Archbiſhop to Wolſey, with an Order to rectify whatever might be amiſs. The Archbiſhop is ſaid to admoniſh the Cardinal to act with more Caution and Reſerve, letting him know that he concern'd himſelf too far in teſtamentary Matters, and aſſum'd a Power not claim'd even by the Pope himſelf: And that in diſpoſing ſome Benefices in the Gift of the Nobility, and other lay Patrons, he preſs'd his Commiſſion too hard upon them. This friendly Advice, it ſeems, was not well receiv'd by the Cardinal: He thought the Archbiſhop had gone too far in his Suggeſtions, and ſhew'd himſelf too much a plain Dealer. About this time, ſome Abuſes in Sanctuaries were taken away by the King's Order. This Reformation was made by vertue of a Bull granted for that purpoſe in the late Reign.

He is blam'd by Polydore Virgil for overſtraining his Character.

1518.
Id.

Id.

This Year the Cardinal attended the Queen to Oxford. And here, upon his coming into the Convocation, he declar'd his Inclination to the Univerſity, and that He deſign'd to ſet up and endow ſome Lectures there. After this, he deſir'd he might have the Liberty of making a Reform in ſome of their Statutes: That he hop'd this Requeſt wou'd be no Surprize, ſince they had lately written to Fitz James Bp. of London, and other Prelates, to correct the Inconſiſtencies in thoſe Regulations. The Univerſity before they came to any Reſolution, conſulted their Chancellor, who at firſt refus'd, but afterwards gave way to their Requeſt. And thus the Convocation made a ſolemn Decree to put their Statutes into the Cardinal's Hands, and left the Form of 'em intirely to his Judgment. The next Year the Cardinal's Greek Lecture was open'd at Oxford. It was the firſt of its kind; for what had formerly been done by Grocin this way, had no Salary or publick Encouragement: However, it ſeems 'twas by no means reliſhed by the majority of the Scholars. One Reaſon of their Diſguſt was, the new Pronunciation and Method of Teaching introduc'd by this Grocin and Eraſmus; but Ignorance and Idleneſs ſeems to have made their main Exception: They foreſaw this Lecture wou'd bring new Fatigues, and incroach upon their Diverſion. They went ſo far as to form a ſort of Confederacy againſt the Greek part of the Univerſity. And to make their Animoſity againſt this Language the more remarkable, they call'd themſelves Trojans, and aſſum'd the Names of ſome of the moſt celebrated Heroes of that City: And under this Diſtinction, they rais'd a Body againſt the Grecians; inſomuch that no Perſon that was known to underſtand Greek, cou'd walk the Streets without being pointed at and abus'd. This Account Sir Thomas More gives of the Matter in one of his Letters. But it was not long before this Faction was brought off from their ignorant Sallies, by the interpoſing of Cardinal Wolſey, and Sir Thomas More. The flouriſhing of the Greek Language in Oxford, rais'd an Emulation in the Univerſity of Cambridge, who being ſollicited by their Chancellor and by their Orator Croke, both good Grecians, began to make ſome Progreſs this way (u).

The Statutes of the Univerſity of Oxford put into the Cardinal's Hands.

Hen. VIII. K.

1519.
He founds a Greek Lecture at Oxford.

A Faction in the Univerſity againſt this Language.

This Year as our learned Hiſtorian (w) relates, Six Men and a Woman were burnt at Coventry, for teaching their Children the Lord's-Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and the Creed, in the vulgar Tongue: For this, as he continues, was Crime enough to bring them to the Stake. This is a very ſevere Charge upon the then Church of England, and therefore I hope the Reverend Author was miſinform'd. For firſt, it looks ſtrangely improbable, that People ſhould fall under the Imputation and Puniſhment of Hereſy, for teaching their Children the Lord's-Prayer, the Creed, &c. in Engliſh: I ſay, this looks ſtrangely improbable, if we conſider the Conſtitutions of the Engliſh Church: For at a Provincial Synod held at Lambeth under Archbiſhop Peckham, there were ſeveral Regulations made for the Inſtruction of the People. For Inſtance, all Parochial Prieſts were oblig'd to explain the principal Articles and Duties of Religion four times a Year, and oftner if Occaſion ſhou'd require. The Heads they were to expound upon, were theſe; the Articles of Faith, the Ten Commandments, the Two evangelical Precepts of Love, &c. This Inſtruction was to be given in plain intelligible Language, without making uſe of the Niceties and Diſtinctions of the Schoolmen. And for fear ſome of the Curates might not be fully qualify'd for this Performance, they have both the Matter and Form chalk'd out by the Canon; where the Reader may meet with a ſhort and ſignificant Expoſition upon every Head and Article (x). From a View of theſe Conſtitutions the Reader may eaſily diſcover, that the Biſhops were not ſo forgetful of their Peoples Intereſt, as they are ſometimes repreſented. To which we may add, the Conſtitutions of John de Thoresby Archbiſhop of York, made about the Year 1360. Amongſt theſe, we meet with an Order to all the parochial Clergy to preach frequently to their Pariſhioners, and explain the Articles of Faith in the Engliſh Tongue. To which we may add a remarkable Exhortation to the Laity, To hear Goddy's Service every Sonday with Reverence and Devotioun, and ſay devoutly thy Pater Noſter, &c. and hear Goddy's Law taught in thy Modyr Tongue: For that is bettyr than to hear many Maſſys (y). And thus we ſee there was a Proviſion for the Inſtruction of the People, in both the Provinces of Canterbury and York.

A ſevere Charge upon the Clergy diſprov'd.

An. Dom. 1281.

(u) Wood's Hiſt. & Antiq. Univerſ. Oxon. Lib. 1. p. 245. & deinc.

(w) Bp. Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. Pt. 1. p. 31.

(x) Spelm. Conc. Vol. 2. Lyndwood lib. 1. tit. 7. & 11.

(y) Harmer p. 57.

Now that the Church ſhou'd take ſuch Care to teach the People, and yet make it Capital to learn what was taught, is extremely incomprehenſible. Were they to inſtruct their Cures in the Lord's-Prayer, the Creed, the Ten Commandments, &c. only to draw them into a Snare, bring them under the Cenſures of the Church, and lay them open to the Charge of Hereſy? Without doubt, what the Prieſts were bound to teach, the People were obliged to hear? And if ſo, what Fault cou'd it be to teach their Children what themſelves had learned from their Paſtors? Thus much as to the reaſoning part. Then as to matter of Fact, there ſeems to be a Miſtake. The learn'd Hiſtorian cites Fox for his Authority. But this looks like a lame Story: For Fox cites no other Authority than one Mother Hall. He likewiſe tells us, that the Biſhop and his Officers declar'd theſe Perſons did not ſuffer for having the Lord's-Prayer and the Ten Commandments in Engliſh, but upon other Articles. 'Tis true, ſeveral abjur'd before Biſhop Longland in the Dioceſs of Lincoln: And Six of 'em ſuffer'd after a Relapſe. But,

Fox Vol. 2. p. 22. 5, 6.

A. D. 1521.

1*ſt*, We are to obſerve, that theſe Men were delated for reading the New Teſtament in Engliſh; and why was this ſo great a Crime? becauſe 'twas of Wicklif's Tranſlation, and condemn'd by the Church. By the way, the Engliſh Clergy did not believe this Tranſlator had reach'd the Original, and rightly expreſs'd the Mind of the Holy Ghoſt. To this purpoſe at a Synod held under Archbiſhop Arundel, all unauthorized Perſons were forbidden to tranſlate any part of the Holy Scripture into Engliſh, or any other Language: And all Perſons were forbidden to read any ſuch Verſion made either in Wicklif's Time, or ſince, under the Penalty of the greater Excommunication: This Prohibition was to continue till ſuch Tranſlations ſhou'd be approv'd by a Provincial Council, or the Biſhop of the Dioceſs (z).

(z) Spelm. Concil. Vol. 2. p. 662.

2*dly*, Theſe Perſons that were abjur'd were charg'd with denying the Corporal Preſence in the Sacrament of the Altar, ſpeaking againſt Pilgrimages, and the Worſhip of Saints (a). Theſe, eſpecially the firſt, were trying Points in thoſe Times: Beſides, ſome of theſe Confeſſors in Fox held erroneous Opinions, and miſbehav'd themſelves very much in Language. One of 'em affirm'd, that God never made Prieſts, for in Chriſt's Time there were no Prieſts. Others of 'em are very intemperate, not to ſay prophane, in their Expreſſions. For inſtance, ſome of 'em call'd the Crucifix in the Rood-loſt Block Almighty. They call'd a Chapel an old fair Milk-houſe, and that a Church Bell was good to hang about a Cow's Neck. Another of 'em ſaid he threſh'd God Almighty out of the Straw. Theſe are ſtrange Sallies, and very different from the Modeſty and Diſcretion of the antient Chriſtians.

Some of thoſe proſecuted in Fox miſbehave 'em ſelves.

(a) Fox Vol. 2. p 33, 54. edit. 1641.

Id. p. 41.

Id. p. 53.

That the Engliſh Clergy were careful to prevent the ſpreading of Lollardiſm we need not wonder: For the Lollards ſtruck at the Fundamentals of the Church, and had very dangerous Opinions both with reſpect to Faith and Property. They had likewiſe been abetted by a conſiderable Faction, and the Government both in Church and State had been almoſt overturn'd by them (b). But then proſecuting People to Fire and Faggot for Matters of pure Belief, is going much too far in the other Extremity. But having declar'd my Reaſons againſt this Rigour already, I ſhall not repeat them (c).

(b) See 1ſt Part of my Ch. Hiſtory for the Reign of K. Hen. V.

(c) See my Ch. Hiſtory Part 1. p. 635. & alib

Dr. Collet*'s Death and Benefactions.*

This Year Dr. Collet, Dean of St. Paul's, departed this Life. To what I have mention'd of him already in my 1ſt Part, I ſhall add his founding Paul's School, upon which he beſtow'd 4500 l. 'Twas deſign'd for 153 poor Children to be taught gratis. The Management and Direction of this Matter was intruſted with the Mercers Company. Lilly, the famous Grammarian, was the firſt Maſter. This Dr. Collet was Son to Sir John Collet, who had been twice Lord Mayor of London. The Dean dy'd of the Sweating Sickneſs in the 53d Year of his Age. There are extant two Speeches of his made to the Convocation, ſome Eſſays upon Grammar, Prayers for daily Uſe, and an Exhortation to a Holy Life. Polydor Virgil gives him a great Character for his Learning, his Talent in preaching; for his Exemplary Life, and engaging Temper; and tells us that his Founding Paul's School not only improv'd the Londoners, but awaken'd an Inclination for Letters, and poliſh'd the whole Country (d). Collet was ſucceeded in the Deanry of St. Paul's by Richard Pace. To throw in a word or two concerning the manner of the Election: Before the Submiſſion of the Clergy to the Supremacy of King Henry the Eighth, the Election proceeded in this Form: The Choice of the Dean was made by the Chapter, confirm'd by the Biſhop's Vicar General: Then the Dean took an Oath of Canonical Obedience to the Biſhop, after which the Biſhop iſſu'd out his Mandate to the Chapter and his Vicar General for the Inſtallment (e). In all which Proceedings there's not the leaſt Mention of the King's Nomination or Authority. But after the Submiſſion of the Clergy, the Election is charg'd with a new Circumſtance. For when Dr. Carew was made Dean of St. Paul's, it is ſaid he was choſen by the unanimous Votes of the Preſident and Chapter. But then in the Inſtrument certifying the Election, we are told this was done Regia Majeſtatis licentia, conſenſu & aſſenſu. However in the Biſhop's Mandate to the Apparitor, ſomething of the old Privilege appears. For here 'tis ſaid the Preſident and Chapter apply'd to the Biſhop to confirm the Election. The Apparitor is likewiſe order'd to notify that if any Perſons have any thing to object, they may come in. And laſtly there's a day prefix'd, when the Biſhop or his Vicar General will proceed either to confirm, or null the Election as they ſhall ſee Cauſe (f).

(d) Whart. de Decan. Londinenſ. Fuller Ch. Hiſt. p. 167. Polyd. Virgil Hiſt. Angl. p. 600.

The ancient Form of electing a Dean.

(e) Regiſt. Fitz James fol. 148.

(f) Regiſt. King fol. 179. the Little Book.

About two Years forward the King enter'd the Liſts againſt Luther, and publiſh'd a Book in Defence of the ſeven Sacraments. Now becauſe a Royal Divine, a King in Controverſie, is very unuſual, I ſhall entertain the Reader with part of the Performance: It is dedicated to Pope Leo the Tenth.

The King writes againſt Luther.

A. D. 1521.

“In this Addreſs, your Holyneſs may be ſurpriz'd (ſays the King) to find a Perſon bred to War and Buſineſs of State, engage in a Controverſy of this Nature, eſpecially with a Man that has ſpent his whole time in the Improvements of Learning.” But notwithſtanding his Majeſty owns himſelf ſomewhat unequally match'd, yet the Danger the Church was in by the ſpreading of Hereſy and Schiſm, allarm'd his Zeal, and puſh'd him forward. That ſince the Enemy appear'd in the Field, and over-run the Country with ſo much Ravage and Deſolation, 'twas time to draw out againſt him. He was clearly of Opinion, that no ſincere Chriſtian ought barely to look on, and ſtand Neuter in the Quarrel: And therefore tho' his Abilities were but moderate, he cou'd not forbear ingaging upon ſuch Motives. Beſides, conſidering the Circumſtances of the Caſe, he was willing to give the World a Proof of his Zeal for the Chriſtian Religion, and his Regards to the holy See. And tho' his Learning was but ſmall, ſmall, he hop'd God wou'd govern his Pen and ſupply that Defect. However his Majeſty is pleas'd to ſay, he was not altogether unprepar'd for the Conteſt. For being fully perſuaded, that Religion is the greateſt Support to the Crown, and the beſt Guide in Civil Adminiſtration, he had ſpent ſome time in that Study. And that no part of Learning entertain'd him better: And tho' the Length of his Progreſs had not been great, yet he hop'd himſelf ſufficiently furniſh'd to inform the Generality, and expoſe the Fallacies in Luther's Reaſoning. 'Twas in confidence of this Iſſue that he had undertaken this Diſpute: That he had Dedicated to his Holyneſs to make the Performance more publick and ſerviceable. And that as his Holyneſs had exerted his Character, and diſabled the Hereſy by the Cenſures of the Church; ſo if either the Proſpect of Intereſt, or the Colours of Argument, had ſtill left an Impreſſion upon any Perſons, they might be convinc'd by Counter-proof, and reaſon'd out of their Miſtake. That he choſe to pitch upon this Method, conſidering the Nature of Men was ſuch that they had rather be led, than drag'd. As to his Succeſs in the Attempt, he ſhou'd determine nothing, but refers that matter to his Holyneſs; to whoſe Cenſure and Correction he likewiſe ſubmits what he had written.

His Dedication to the Pope.

To proceed to the Book: And here by the way, I don't pretend to give the Reader either a full Tranſlation, or ſo much as an Abſtract of all the Arguments. To go this Length wou'd be ſomewhat foreign to the Buſineſs in hand. I ſhall therefore only tranſlate ſome of the moſt remarkable Paſſages.

Luther's Aſſertion of no Sacrifice in the holy Euchariſt.

(g) Lib. Regis Henrici adverſus Luther p. 34.

This the King endeavours to diſprove.

The King begins with the holy Euchariſt, or Sacrament of the Altar: And here Luther pretends, that the affirming the Maſs to be a Sacrifice was a great Error. This Heterodoxy he offers to diſprove from the Hiſtory of the Inſtitution. Chriſt, ſays he, in his laſt Supper, when he inſtituted this Sacrament and made his Will, did not offer himſelf to God the Father, or intended an Action of Merit for the World; but ſitting at Table, he open'd his Will, as 'twere, to his Diſciples, and exhibited a Figure of it. This is Luther's Inſtance, ſays the King, and from hence he endeavours to evince, that there's nothing of Sacrifice or Oblation in the Maſs (g). To this the King replies, that the Figure does not deſtroy the Eſſence of a Sacrifice: That a great many Sacrifices under the Moſaick Law were Types of future Benefits, and included the force of a Promiſe. For they promis'd thoſe things for which they were perform'd. For beſides their Emblematical and Prefigurating Quality, they were Expiations and Pardons for the People that offer'd them: And for this Reaſon, they were ſolemnly repeated every Year. As to Luther's Inference, that ſince Chriſt did not offer himſelf to God the Father at his laſt Supper, therefore there can be no ſuch thing as a Sacrifice in the Maſs. To this the King anſwers by Parts; 1ſt, He tells Luther that if we muſt be brought to a ſtrict Imitation of our Saviour's Example, and ty'd down to every Circumſtance, from hence 'twill follow, that thoſe who Conſecrate muſt not Receive, for we don't read that our Saviour receiv'd the Sacrament himſelf. It is true the Fathers, and the preſent Church believe our Saviour did receive this Sacrament; but this Conceſſion will do Luther no Service: Becauſe the Teſtimony of the Antients and the Authority of the whole Church is of no weight with this modern Divine: He'll yield to nothing but an expreſs Text. Now it is no where declar'd in the holy Scriptures, that our Saviour receiv'd his own Body in the laſt Supper. If he endeavours to diſingage himſelf by affirming the Prieſts ought to Receive, becauſe the Apoſtles did, and were commanded ſo to do, and that all ſucceeding Prieſts are bound in the Apoſtles. From hence another Difficulty will follow, for by this way of arguing, the Prieſts will have no Authority to Conſecrate; for the laſt Supper was not conſecrated by the Apoſtles, but by our Saviour himſelf. It is plain therefore, that Chriſtian Prieſts do not only repreſent what our Saviour did at his laſt Supper, but likewiſe what was done upon the Croſs. There are alſo ſome Circumſtances uſed in this Sacrament, of which we have no Precedent in our Saviour; or at leaſt we don't read of any; and of this kind are ſome Geſtures and other Particularities practis'd in the Conſecration. Some of which the King believes were traditionally handed down from the Apoſtles. Beſides, there are ſome Words in the Canon of the Maſs ſuppos'd to be ſpoken by our bleſſed Saviour which we don't read in the holy Scriptures. For our Saviour both ſpoke and did a great many things unmention'd by the holy Evangeliſts; ſome of which have been preſerv'd by uninterrupted Tradition. Even Luther himſelf does not queſtion theſe following Words being ſpoken by our Saviour; Hæc quotieſcunque feceritis, in Mei memoriam facietis, As oft as you do this, do it in Remembrance of Me. Now Luther is ſo fully perſuaded of theſe being our Saviour's Words, that he forms an Argument upon them. For from hence he pretends, that the holy Euchariſt ſhou'd be left to every Perſon's Liberty: That no Body ſhould be forc'd to Communicate: The Obligation reaching no farther than that whenever they participate in this Solemnity, they ſhou'd do it in remembrance of our Saviour. Now where does he read this Command? Not in the Words of the Inſtitution: It is recorded in none of the Goſpels: For there we find no more than Do This in Remembrance of Me; I deſire therefore to know where he reads this Sentence, Whenſoever ye do this or theſe things. Is it not in the Maſs? There, without doubt, and no where elſe. Since therefore he allows the Divine Authority of theſe Words and Reaſons upon them, becauſe they occur in the Canon of the Maſs, why ſhou'd he not be govern'd by the ſame Canon in other Paſſages? Why ſhou'd he not ſubmit to the ſame Authority, where it calls the Maſs a Sacrifice and an Oblation? Since therefore by his own Confeſſion the Prieſts do their Duty in receiving what they conſecrate, notwithſtanding we have no Scripture Proof, that our Saviour began this Cuſtom: I mention Scripture Proof, becauſe Luther refuſes being concluded by any other Evidence. Since therefore our Saviour is not ſaid to have Received Himſelf in any part of the New Teſtament, why ſhou'd Luther be ſurpriz'd at the Prieſts Offering Chriſt to God the Father by way of Repreſentation, ſince this was actually done by our Saviour upon the Croſs: And for this we have full Evidence from ſeveral Places in holy Scripture. For even by Luther's way of arguing, what was done upon the Croſs, has a plain Reference to our Saviour's laſt Will and Teſtament in the holy Supper. For Luther makes no Difficulty to confeſs, that a Teſtament implies the Death of the Teſtator, and has its force only from that time. Beſides, the mixing Water with Wine in this Sacrament ſeems to have its Original from hence; that is, from the Blood and Water iſſuing from our Saviour's Side upon the Croſs: For of this we meet with no Reſemblance at the laſt Supper. Let Luther therefore forbear his trifling Objections: Let him not pretend that the Prieſt makes no Oblation in the Maſs, becauſe Chriſt did not offer himſelf at the laſt Supper: For in this Sacrament, the Prieſt not only repreſents what was done by our Saviour at the laſt Supper, but what was tranſacted upon the Croſs: I ſay upon the Croſs, where our Saviour compleated what was only begun in the former Solemnity.

Luther's laſt Argument againſt the Sacrifice in the Maſs ſtands thus: How can the Prieſts, ſays he, offer that to God, which he receives himſelf? For how can we offer that which we keep to our ſelves? This, replies the King, is a mere Sophiſm: To be ſhort, did not the Prieſts under the Moſaick Diſpenſation partake of the Sacrifices, and eat ſome Portions of what was offer'd? Beſides, if Chriſt was both Prieſt and Sacrifice, what Repugnancy is there, that the Prieſt who repreſents our Saviour's Sacrifice ſhou'd both Offer and Receive at the ſame time? Why might not theſe Circumſtances be enjoin'd in the Inſtitution?

From hence the King proceeds to produce the Teſtimonies of St. Auſtin, St. Ambroſe, and Gregory the Great, to prove the holy Euchariſt a Sacrifice, to which he might have added St. Cyprian, St. Chryſoſtom, and ſeveral others.

The King complains of Luther, becauſe he wou'd have the People at liberty to Receive when they pleaſe, and not be ty'd to any Solemnity of time, or Revolution of the Grand Feſtivals: Now what can be the Conſequence of this Latitude? ſays his Majeſty. Does not this plainly tend to withdraw the People from the Frequency of Communicating, and the Benefit of the Inſtitution? And here the King takes notice, that the Fervor of primitive Devotion was much abated: That at firſt, the People communicated every Day: This afterwards declin'd to once a Week, and from thence to longer Intervals, inſomuch that the Biſhops being afraid this Sacrament ſhou'd be wholly omitted, declar'd in their Canons, that thoſe who did not Communicate thrice a Year, ought not to be reckon'd for Chriſtians.

The King goes on to charge Luther with miſtaking the Notion of Faith, and laying too much weight upon that Virtue: He makes us ſo rich in Belief, ſays his Majeſty, that we are perfect Beggars in Manners. And yet St. James tells us, that Faith without Works is dead. But Luther argues, as if a Man that believed cou'd not poſſibly miſcarry, and that nothing but Incredulity can prove one's Ruin. Here the King makes a tragical Exclamation; Will nothing but Unbelief deſtroy a Man for ever? What won't Adultery and Murder, won't Perjury and Paricide damn him?

Jam. 2.

But Luther over-flouriſhes ſo much upon the Significancy of Faith, that he ſeems, in a manner, to hint as if this Virtue had no need of the Sacrament. For does he not aſſert, that the Sacrament affords no Benefit, and is neither Sign nor Conveyance of Grace; and that as to the Efficacy, the Sacraments of the Evangelical Covenant are much the ſame with thoſe under the Law? However in my Opinion, ſays the King, ſince Chriſtians have that in Reality, which the Jews had only in Figure, it ſeems to follow, that the Sacraments of the Church exceed thoſe of the Synagogue as much as the New Law exceeds the Old one; as much as the Subſtance is better than the Shadow.

Of PENANCE.

THE next Sacrament, as it is called, is that of Penance: And here Luther declaims againſt the Clergy for not inſtructing the People in the Doctrine of Faith: They don't ſufficiently inculcate, ſays he, a Relyance upon the divine Promiſe, or put their Charge in mind, that God has engaged to forgive a repenting Sinner (h). To this the King anſwers, does the Church then preſs Judas's Repentance, and drive People upon Sorrow and Deſperation? Did Luther ever hear any Curate exhort the People to addreſs for Pardon without giving them hopes of being the better for their Application? What Subject is more frequently preach'd on than the infinite Mercy of God; and that whenever a Sinner repents, he ſhall be receiv'd? Is the Inſtance of David's Pardon for Adultery and Murder known to no body but Luther? Was not Paradiſe ſet open to the Thief upon the Croſs, when he had no time to retrieve his ill Life, or ſhew his Sincerity in Reformation? And is this Hiſtory unpreach'd and kept as a Secret from the People? If the Clergy miſtake in this Matter, I'm afraid it is ſometimes by going too far in the other Extreme. I wiſh the Terror of God's Juſtice is not ſometimes forgotten, and his Mercy magnify'd too much.

The King argues againſt Luther's Notion of Contrition.

From hence the King proceeds to the Parts of Penance, and begins with Contrition. In the 1ſt Place, he ſets down Luther's Opinion. This Fryer affirms Contrition a Circumſtance of great Value and not eaſily attain'd. And here his Advice is, that every Body ſhou'd reſt entirely upon God's Promiſe, and firmly believe their Sins pardon'd, and that God has acquitted them in Heaven, when they are pronounc'd Looſ'd upon Earth. Now here he either falls in with the Sentiment he condemns, or elſe runs himſelf upon an open Abſurdity. For God has either promiſ'd to forgive Sin to thoſe who are contrite, in proportion to the Bulk of the Crime, or to thoſe who fall ſhort of that proportion, or, laſtly, to thoſe who have no Contrition at all. If God has promiſ'd Remiſſion to none but the firſt ſort, then Luther can never be ſure of his being diſcharg'd; And if ſo what makes him preſs this Confidence as a neceſſary Condition? That he can't be ſure of his Diſcharge upon his own Doctrine, I prove thus: He can't be aſſur'd of having a right to God's Promiſe, unleſs he cou'd ſtate the juſt proportion of Contrition, and define how much is ſufficient for every Sin. But no Body, I conceive, knows what degree of Compunction is requir'd for every Mortal Sin. 2dly, If God has promiſ'd Pardon to thoſe who are under-Contrite, and come ſhort of the degree of the Crime, then he has promiſ'd Forgiveneſs to thoſe who have nothing but Attrition. And if ſo, Luther muſt agree with thoſe he is willing to fall out with. Laſtly, If God has promiſ'd to extend his Pardon to thoſe who are not at all ſorry for what they have done, then à fortiori to thoſe who can plead Attrition, that is, to thoſe who have ſomething of Regret, tho' not the beſt for kind or degree. In ſhort, he muſt come to this Conceſſion at laſt, that Confeſſion and Abſolution ſupplies the Defects of the Sinner's Repentance; and thus Attrition may be ſaid to be advanc'd to the Benefit of Contrition.

From hence the King proceeds to Confeſſion.

Upon this Subject he finds fault with Luther's Management. His Majeſty thinks it unreaſonable, that Luther ſhou'd inſiſt upon a publick Acknowledgement of notorious Miſcarriages, and yet ſeem dubious about the Neceſſity of Auricular Confeſſion. And ſince Luther affirms private Confeſſion cannot be prov'd from Scripture, the King endeavours to make out the contrary. His firſt Text is out of Numbers; And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes

Numb. 5. v. 6.

(h) Lib. Regis Henrici adv. Luth p. 49.

He endeavours to prove auricular Confeſſion from Scripture.

Moſes ſaying, ſpeak unto the Children of Iſrael, when a Man or a Woman ſhall commit any Sin to do a Treſpaſs againſt the Lord, and that Perſon be guilty; then they ſhall confeſs their Sin which they have done. To this we may add the Command given to Lepers of ſhewing themſelves to the Prieſt (i). Now we have St. Paul's Warrant for reaſoning, from Figures and ceremonial Uſages in the Law, to practice in the Goſpel (k); and therefore why may not Leproſy under the Law, be interpreted Sin under the Goſpel? And ſince the outward Blemiſh was to be diſcover'd to the Prieſts in one caſe, why not the inward Defects in another? Farther, are we not exhorted by St. James to confeſs our Faults one to another (l)? To theſe Texts, the King adds ſome Authorities from the Fathers. St. Ambroſe affirms, that without Confeſon, there is no Remiſſion of Sin. St. Chryſoſtom ſpeaks to the ſame Senſe; That God's Favour is not to be recover'd without a previous Confeſſion. St. Auſtin is ſtill more clear; let your Repentance, ſays this Father, be directed by the Form practiſ'd in the Church: Let no Man pretend that he performs this Duty privately, and makes God Almighty his Confeſſor; for we may be aſſur'd, that the Keys are no chimerical Authority, and that this Sentence of our Saviour, Whatſoever ye ſhall looſe upon Earth, was never ſpoken to no purpoſe. To this the King ſubjoins, that if we had no Authority either from Scripture, or the Writings of the Fathers to ſupport this Practice, yet conſidering the Univerſality of the Cuſtom both for Place and Time, together with the great Benefit ariſing from thence; theſe Circumſtances alone, continues the King, are plain Evidences to me, that 'tis no humane Invention, but ſtands upon the foot of a divine Warrant. For what humane Authority cou'd ever perſuade People to diſcover their moſt ſecret Thoughts, bring their hidden Crimes into view, and throw open the Retirements of their Minds? Nothing leſs than a divine Command cou'd put People upon ſuch Penance and Confuſion, and make 'em lodge ſuch dangerous Secrets with a foreign Diſcretion. On the other ſide, ſince there are bad Prieſts as well as good ones, ſince in many caſes they have not the Gifts of Secreſie, is it not a Wonder they are ſo juſt to Confeſſions? And have we not Reaſon to conclude from hence, that God, who inſtituted the Sacrament, guards the Adminiſtration, and ſecures it from Scandal and Inconvenience?

(i) Levit. 14. v. 2.

(k) 1 Cor. 9. v. 9.

(l) Jam 5. v. 16.

And from the Uneaſineſs and Benefit of the Practice.

Luther allows Women to receive Confeſſions.

In handling this Argument, it ſeems Luther has been ſomewhat ſingular in his Aſſertions, and given Women an Authority to be Mens Confeſſors. Women, ſays the King, whom the Apoſtle does not give the Liberty of Teaching, or ſo much as ſpeaking in the Church (m). From hence his Majeſty proceeds to ſhew from the Antients, that Confeſſion (unleſs in caſe of Neceſſity) is only to be made to a Prieſt. Let him come, ſays St. Auſtin, to the Biſhops and Prieſts with whom the Power of the Keys is intruſted. And elſewhere, let the Penitent, ſays this Father, declare his Sorrow by his Tears; let him diſcover his Failings to the Prieſt, and prevent the terrible Sentence of the laſt Day, by voluntary Confeſſion. And thus much we may infer from our Saviour's commanding the Leper's to ſhew themſelves to the Prieſts (n). His next Teſtimony is that of Leo the Great, who tells us, that our Saviour gave the Paſtors of the Church an Authority to ſtate the Meaſures, and convey the Benefits of Repentance to thoſe who confeſs to them. Beſides, what ſignifies Confeſſion without the Advantage of Abſolution? But the Conveyance of this Bleſſing, is lodg'd only with the Prieſts: And therefore St. Auſtin affirms, that whoever enters upon a Courſe of Penance, without the Direction of the Prieſt, incroaches upon the Privilege of the Keys.

(m) 1 Cor. 14. v. 34, 35.

Giving Abſolution and receiving Confeſſions, the Privilege of the Prieſthood.

(n) Luke 17. v. 14.

Of SATISFACTION.

The Church miſrepreſented by Luther in the Doctrine of Satisfaction.

THE King comes now to the laſt Branch of Penance; that is, Satisfaction. And here his Majeſty charges Luther with Miſrepreſenting the Church: Luther for inſtance, had affirm'd, the People were not inſtructed in the Neceſſity of reforming their Manners. This, ſays the King, is a notorious Calumny: For what Prieſt was ever ſo ignorant as to injoin Penance for former Miſcarriage, and at the ſame time give an Indulgence for Repetition? What Prieſt, when he gives Abſolution, does not ſuggeſt thoſe Words of our bleſſed Saviour, Go and ſin no more? Who does not put his Penitent in Mind of St. Paul's Exhortation: As ye have yielded your Members Servants unto Uncleanneſs, and to Iniquity unto Iniquity, even ſo now yield your Members Servants unto Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. What Confeſſor is unacquainted with St. Gregory's Deſcription of Repentance? To repent, ſays this Father, is to lament our Faults, and not repeat 'em; for he that returns to the Commiſſion of what he is ſorry for, either knows nothing of Repentance, or elſe diſſembles in his Compunction. Upon this Head Luther makes a tragical Invective upon the Court of Rome, charges that See with depraving the Doctrine of Penance; that their Canons and Decrees were pernicious and fatal to Chriſtendom: For, ſays he, they have made the World believe, the Juſtice of God may be ſatisfy'd by good Works, whereas the Faith of a contrite Heart is ſufficient for this purpoſe. To this the King replys, that this Doctrine, theſe Regulations of Penance, are moſt of 'em the Reſolutions of the ancient Fathers: They are the Decrees of provincial and general Councils: And therefore in caſe they were any ways exceptionable, the Court of Rome was not altogether anſwerable for them. 2*dly*, Whereas he affirms, that good Works contribute nothing towards the reconciling God to a Sinner: If he means, that good Works, without Faith, are inſignificant to this purpoſe, he diſputes without an Adverſary: For who was ever ſo weak as to ſay, that good Works without Faith, are not imperfect Qualifications? Who does not know, that St. Paul has declar'd, that whatever is not of Faith is Sin. But on the other ſide, if he believes Works ſuperfluous, and that Faith alone is ſufficient for Juſtification, then I grant he diſagrees with the Church of Rome, and with the Apoſtle St. James too, who aſſures us, that Faith without Works is dead. The King proceeds and charges Luther directly with this Aſſertion: God, ſays this German Divine, neither wants our good Works *, nor regards them. To this the King anſwers, I believe God does both regard our Faith and our Works too, tho' he wants the firſt no more than he does the latter. But becauſe Luther's Diſcourſe ſeems only to drive at the neceſſity of Reformation; and that there's no neceſſity of practiſing by a Prieſt's Direction, and ſubmitting to Penance for what's paſt: This being the Scope of Luther's reaſoning, let us hear what St. Auſtin preſcribes. It is not enough, ſays this Father, to manage well for the future, and break off an ill Practice, unleſs we do ſomething with reſpect to what's paſt: And which way are we to wipe out an old Stain, and

Rom. 6.

Rom. 14.

Jam. 2.

---

* But then Luther adds, indiget autem ut verax in ſuis promiſſis à nobis habeatur.

and relieve the Conſcience againſt former Miſcarriage? This is to be done by hearty Sorrow, by deep Contrition, by Faſting and Alms. And elſewhere this Father informs us, that the Prieſts are ſaid to bind, when they injoin Penance, and to looſe when they relax in the Diſcipline. The King concludes this Article with a friendly Sentence to Luther, and wiſhes he may practiſe all the Parts of Repentance; that he may be contrite for his Malice and Misbehaviour, publickly confeſs his Errors, and ſubmit himſelf to what Penance the Church ſhall think proper to injoin him.

Of CONFIRMATION.

THE King proceeds to the Article of Confirmation. And here Luther maintains, that Confirmation conveys no ſpiritual Advantage: It has no Promiſe of our Saviour to raiſe it to the Dignity of a Sacrament: This, ſays the King, is all naked Affirmation without any manner of Proof. Luther founds his Argument upon the Silence of Scripture in this matter: As if, ſays the King, every thing that was promiſ'd, ſpoken, or done by our Saviour, was related by the Evangeliſts! By this Reaſoning, if only St. John's Goſpel was extant, he might deny the Inſtitution of the Holy Euchariſt; becauſe this Evangeliſt writes nothing concerning it: But then in the laſt Chapter of his Goſpel, we are told that Jeſus did many other things which were not written, and that had every thing been written, the Records wou'd have been voluminous. Some of theſe things, continues the King, were related to the Faithful by the Apoſtles, and deliver'd down from Age to Age; and why ſhou'd not Luther give Credit to the Church in theſe Points of Tradition, ſince St. Auſtin affirms, that without the Authority of the Church, we cou'd not have known the Writings of the Evangeliſts, nor diſtinguiſh'd the Canon from humane Compoſition. Farther, if Luther will reſign to nothing but a plain Text, how does he believe the perpetual Virginity of our Saviour's Mother? Thus Helvidius cou'd find nothing deciſive for this Article in the Scripture, and therefore was ſo hardy as to deny it: Now the way of ſilencing this Heretick, was by alledging the Faith of the Catholick Church againſt him. This is the Bottom upon which we ſtand in the preſent Argument. What if we read nothing in the New Teſtament concerning Confirmation? Might not our Saviour deliver this Inſtitution to the Apoſtles? Or might it not be one of thoſe ſupplemental Informations ſuggeſted afterwards by the Holy Ghoſt? concerning whoſe farther Inſtruction our Saviour declar'd, when the Comforter comes, who is the Spirit of Truth, he ſhall lead you into all Truth.

The Benefit of Confirmation prov'd from Scripture.

John 16.

But that we are not without the Authority of Scripture, the King endeavours to prove from the Teſtimony of St. Jerom (o): If you aſk, ſays this Father, why a Perſon baptiz'd is brought to the Biſhop for Confirmation, why the farther Aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt is principally receiv'd by this Conveyance? If this is your Queſtion, I anſwer, the Church has divine Authority for her Practice: For after our Lord's Aſcenſion, the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles, and 'twas from their Precedent the Cuſtom began. The King fortifies St. Jerom by a plain Inſtance in the Acts of the Apoſtles. Here we are told, the People that were baptiz'd in Samaria, had Peter and John ſent to them for farther Aſſiſtance; and theſe Converts, after the Apoſtles Hands laid on them, receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt.

(o Hierom. adv. Luciferanos.

And the Teſtimony of the Fathers.

Acts 8.

Of MATRIMONY.

THIS the King Endeavours to prove a Sacrament, from its Inſtitution in Paradiſe, and particularly from the Words of our Saviour, What therefore God hath join'd together, let not Man put aſunder. From hence the King argues, that God wou'd maintain his Inſtitution, and fortify it with ſupernatural Aſſiſtance. But I ſhall tranſlate his Majeſty no farther upon this Article.

Mat. 19.

Of HOLY ORDERS.

IN treating the Subject of Orders, the King takes notice, that Luther made it his Buſineſs to leſſen the Dignity of the Prieſthood, that by maiming the Character of thoſe who officiate, the Holy Myſteries might ſink in proportion. To what purpoſe elſe does he tell us, there's no difference between Laity and Clergy, and that all Chriſtians are Prieſts alike? and that Prieſts have no Authority to adminiſter the Sacraments, but by the Conſent and Deputation from the Laity. That the Sacrament of Orders is nothing but a certain Ceremony of chuſing a Preacher. That whoever does not preach, is no more a Prieſt than the Picture of a Man is a Man: That a Prieſt may become a Layman without Degradation; and that the pretended Character ſignifies nothing, and that Orders without preaching, are a mere Jeſt; a Whimſey of People that underſtand nothing of the Nature of Prieſthood, or the Adminiſtration of the Word and Sacraments.

Luther's unſound Opinions concerning Orders.

To prove Orders a Sacrament, the King argues firſt from the Old Teſtament, and then reinforces his Reaſoning by inferring the Preference of the Evangelical to the Moſaick Diſpenſation. 1*ſt*, He obſerves, that Grace was conferr'd with the Character of Prieſthood under the Old Law: The Text is this, And thou ſhall anoint Aaron and his Sons and conſecrate them, and ſanctify 'em, that they miniſter to me in the Prieſts Office. Now to what purpoſe was all this Ceremony, this outward Sanctification, unleſs God had infuſ'd his Spirit, and ſanctify'd 'em within? To proceed to the New Teſtament: In the Acts of the Apoſtles Paul and Barnabas, when order'd to be ſeparated for the Work aſſign'd by the Holy Ghoſt, were not diſmiſs'd till the Hands of the Apoſtles were laid upon 'em. Now I deſire to know, continues the King, to what purpoſe they received this Impoſition of Hands? Was it an idle Ceremony without Force or Signification? Was there no Conveyance of Grace, or Communication of divine Aſſiſtance? Farther, how can Luther affirm this Sacrament unknown to the Church of Chriſt, ſince there's no Diviſion of Chriſtendom, where it is not receiv'd? How can that be call'd new which was inſtituted by Chriſt, and practiſ'd by the Apoſtles? But Luther objects, that none of the Ancients, excepting Dionyſius, call Orders a Sacrament. The King anſwers, ſuppoſing this were true, Luther cou'd not find his Account in the Allegation. For ſince the Fathers allowed the Thing, the Omiſſion of the Term ſignifies nothing. The King endeavours to prove Orders a Sacrament, by the Church's condemning Re-ordination. Gregory the Great, ſpeaks firſt, As a Perſon baptiz'd, ſays he, ought not to be re-baptiz'd, ſo neither ought he that is conſecrated be re-ordain'd. Thus you ſee, continues the King, than Orders ought no more to be repeated that Baptiſm: From whence we may infer the ſacramental Nature of this firſt Diſtinction. His Majeſty's next Teſtimony is St.

The King argues from the Moſaick Diſpenſation.

Exod. 28.41.

Acts 13.

And from ſeveral places in the New Teſtament.

The Fathers alledg'd for this purpoſe.

Auſtin,

Farther Proof from the New Teſtament.
1 Tim. 5. v. 17.
Heb. 5.

Auſtin, whom he quotes in theſe Words: "Both "Baptiſm and Orders are Sacraments and conveyed "by holy Ceremonies; and therefore neither of "'em are to be given more than once. And therefore when Schiſmaticks were admitted to the Church's Communion, their Orders no leſs than their Baptiſm, was reckon'd valid. The King continues to diſprove Luther's Aſſertion from the New Teſtament. St. Paul in his Epiſtle to Timothy has theſe Words, Let the Elders that rule well be counted worthy of double Honour, eſpecially they who labour in the Word and Doctrine. From hence the King argues, that notwithſtanding thoſe Elders who labour in the Word and Doctrine deſerve a Preference of Regard, yet thoſe who don't do this, are allow'd by the Apoſtle, not only to be Prieſts, but likewiſe capable of ruling well, and have a juſt Claim to double Honour. For by ſaying, eſpecially thoſe who labour in the Word and Doctrine, he ſuppoſes, that others who fell ſhort in that Branch of their Function had ſtill a Title to Regard. And whence cou'd this be, but upon the ſcore of their Character? To Luther's Aſſertion, that preaching was of the Eſſence of Prieſthood, the King anſwers in a Text to the Hebrews, Every High Prieſt taken from among Men is ordain'd in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both Gifts and Sacrifices for Sin. Is not this, continues his Majeſty, an evident Declaration, that ſacrificing is a Branch of Prieſthood? Now ſince the Apoſtle wrote to the Converted Hebrews, whoſe Continuance in Judaiſm, he by no means allows: Is it not plain, I ſay, from this Remark, that the Apoſtle comprehends the Evangelical no leſs than the Moſaick Prieſthood? From hence we have a double Inference againſt Luther: 1ſt, That the Maſs, or holy Euchariſt, implies a Sacrifice for the People. And 2dly, That the Offering this Sacrifice, is a principal Branch of the Sacerdotal Office.

1 Tim. 4. 14.
2 Tim. 1. 6.
1 Tim. 5. 25.

The King argues farther from St. Paul's Exhortation to St. Timothy, Neglect not the Gift that is in thee, which was given thee by Prophecy, with the laying on of the Hands of the Presbytery. And in his ſecond Epiſtle to St. Timothy, the Words are theſe: Stir up the Gift of God which is in thee, by the putting on of my Hands. And elſewhere in the former Epiſtle, Lay hands ſuddenly on no Man, neither be Partaker of other Men's Sins. And the ſame Apoſtle in his Epiſtle to Titus, writes thus, For this Cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhou'd ſet in order the things that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every City, as I had appointed thee.

Theſe few Texts, ſays the King, are ſufficient to overthrow Luther's Aſſertions: For thoſe he pretends were made Prieſts by the People's Conſent, received their Character from a Biſhop left in Crete for that purpoſe. And leſt the Conveyance of ſupernatural Aſſiſtance might be made a Queſtion, we ſee this Bleſſing is confer'd by Impoſition of Hands: Stir up, ſays the Apoſtle, the Gift or Grace of God (τὸ χάρισμα τȣ͂ Θεȣ͂) which is in thee by the putting on of my Hands. I wonder therefore Luther has the Aſſurance to throw out the Sacrament of Orders, ſince St. Paul's Epiſtles are ſo expreſs for the point: For here we are plainly told, that Biſhops and Prieſts muſt be made by a Biſhop: Here likewiſe we meet with the Ceremony of Conſecration: Here we have both the outward Sign and the inward Spiritual Grace: And this latter in ſuch a meaſure too, that the conſecrated Perſon not only receives the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, but has likewiſe a Power of Communicating it to others.

Of EXTREME UNCTION.

St. James 5. v. 14, 15.
The King endeavours to prove Extreme Unction a Sacrament from a Text in St. James.
1 Cor. 11. 23.
Luther excepts againſt the Canonicalneſs of this Epiſtle, and pretends it unworthy the Apoſtolical Spirit.
Epiſtle to the* Hebrews.
The King proves the Epiſtle St. James's by the Teſtimony of St. Jerom.

LAſtly, the King proceeds to defend Extreme Unction. To prove this Application no Sacrament, Luther endeavours to ſhew the Text in St. James not ſufficient for this purpoſe: The Words are theſe, Is any ſick among you? Let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with Oil in the Name of the Lord. And the Prayer of Faith ſhall ſave the Sick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, and if he have committed Sins they ſhall be forgiven him. Theſe Words, have both external Ceremony and a Promiſe of Grace; and yet Luther is ſo hardy as to reject the Proof: He ſays there is nothing of Sacramental Force in them. But if Luther ever argued upon the Verge of Diſtraction, he does ſo with a witneſs in this place; however let's hear him. Firſt, ſays he, 'tis the Opinion of a great many Perſons that this Epiſtle is not St. James's, nor becoming an Apoſtolical Spirit: However, I confeſs, whoever wrote it, it has gain'd Authority by Cuſtom. But, as Luther continues, if it were written by the Apoſtle St. James, I ſhou'd make no Difficulty to affirm, that it is above the Commiſſion of an Apoſtle to inſtitute a Sacrament. To do this is the ſole Prerogative of our Bleſſed Saviour. Thus, with reference to the holy Euchariſt, St. Paul tells the Corinthians, I have received of the Lord that which I alſo deliver'd unto you. Theſe, are Luther's main Objections. To the firſt of 'em, That a great many Perſons thought this Epiſtle none of St. James's, and that it had not the Marks of an Apoſtolical Production: Here, ſays the King, he pretends the Countenance of a great many Writers, but alledges not ſo much as a ſingle Teſtimony. But I ſhall give him an Authority ſufficient to determine the Queſtion, and that is St. Jerom. This Father is well known to be a great Critick in this part of Learning: And none of the Ancients diſtinguiſh'd the Canon from the Apocrypha with better Judgment. And tho' he queſtion'd the Authority of one of St. Paul's Epiſtles * for ſome time, that is, when the Church had not every where received it: Notwithſtanding this Uncertainty for ſome time, he never queſtion'd the Epiſtle of St. James. This he ranges in the Canon without the leaſt Scruple. Now if Luther, when he deny'd St. James being the Author of this Epiſtle, had reckon'd it to ſome other Apoſtolical Perſon, his Objection had been more tolerable. But to reject it becauſe it is written below an Apoſtolical Spirit, is ſtrangely unaccountable. But Luther is by no means happy in being conſiſtent, and therefore for once I ſhall make him confute himſelf.

This farther prov'd by an Inference from Luther's Principles.

Now Luther in the Sacrament of Orders lays it down for a Truth that the Church has a diſcerning Faculty given from above, by virtue of which ſhe is enabl'd to diſtinguiſh the Word of God, from humane Writings. How then can he pretend this Epiſtle unbecoming an Apoſtolical Spirit, when the Church, whom he allows infallible in this matter, has determined the contrary: He has therefore plainly intangled himſelf in his own Principles; and muſt either confeſs the Epiſtle written by St. James, or elſe deny the Infallibility of the Church in ſetling the Canon.

His Majeſty goes on to Luther's ſecond Objection, and that is, ſuppoſing the Epiſtle was St. James's, yet it exceeds the Commiſſion of an Apoſtle to inſtitute a Sacrament. Here, ſays the King, Luther is ſo hardy as plainly to outrage the Apoſtle: He

The Inſtitution of the Sacrament above the Commiſſion of an Apoſtle.

The King's Reply to this Objection.

He does in effect charge him with Uſurpation upon his Maſter, as if he had an Ambition to incroach upon his Authority, and affect an Equality with him: As if he reſembled the Apoſtate Angel in his Preſumption, who ſaid, I will aſcend above the Heighths of the Clouds, I will be like the moſt High. What can be more contumelious upon the Apoſtle, than ſuch an Aſſertion as this? As to the matter in hand I ſhan't diſpute whether the Inſtitution of a Sacrament was within the Apoſtle's ordinary Commiſſion: It is enough for my purpoſe to prove that St. James has deliver'd it as ſuch. From hence we may ſafely conclude the Apoſtle was not ſo preſumptuous as to publiſh that to the Church for a Sacrament, which was really no ſuch thing: And therefore if the Inſtitution of a Sacrament exceeded his Authority, we may conclude he deliver'd no more than our Saviour's Inſtructions: Our Saviour, I ſay, who ſince he has been pleas'd to reveal ſome things to us by St. Matthew, others by St. Luke, and given us ſtill farther Diſcoveries by St. John and St. Paul. Since the caſe ſtands thus, why may we not reaſonably ſuppoſe, he has likewiſe inſtructed us in ſomething new, by the Apoſtle St. James?

Luther, continues the King, after this bold Attack upon the Apoſtle, proceeds to rally the Church. He pretends the Text of St. James is miſapply'd in Extreme Unction. His Reaſon is, becauſe 'tis only given to dying Perſons. The King replies by denying the matter of fact: He grants this Anointing is not uſed in a ſlight Diſtemper. But then he proves from the Office, the Patient is not ſuppos'd to be given over. For if they deſpair'd of Life, why ſhou'd they put up ſo many Prayers for the reſtoring of Health? And therefore, tho' it is call'd Extreme Unction, we are not to ſtrain upon the Letter. For it is plain the Church acts upon the Hope of the Patient's Recovery. But if Providence has otherwiſe diſpos'd of the ſick Perſon, the Force of the Sacrament is not diſprov'd by this Event: For the Efficacy of the Sacrament reaches farther, and has its principal Effect upon the Soul. And therefore Luther affirms too much by ſaying that unleſs Extreme Unction is an infallible Cure, the external Sign ſignifies nothing, and by conſequence 'tis no Sacrament. Now what is this but to aſſert, that it can be no Sacrament, unleſs it makes a Man Immortal? And yet this privilege as ſtrange as it is, Luther pretends may be gain'd by the Strength of Prayer, provided there's nothing of Doubt or Diſtruſt in the Application.

A Conjecture upon Luther's excepting againſt the Canonicalneſs of St James's Epiſtle.

St. James 1.

Now, ſays the King, I have ſometimes wonder'd, what made Luther diſreliſh St. James's Epiſtle: But upon reading this Portion of holy Scripture, I find the Reaſon of his Diſlike plain enough. For the Apoſtle ſeems to write with a Prophetick Spirit, as if he foreſaw the Character and Conditions of Luther. Luther is a great Contemner of Good Works in compariſon of Faith: Now St. James diſputes ſtrongly againſt this Heterodoxy: The Apoſtle proves both from Reaſon and Scripture, that Faith without Works is dead: He likewiſe checks the Intemperance of Luther's Language very remarkably in theſe Words, If any Man amongſt you ſeems to be religious and bridles not his Tongue, but deceives his own Heart, this Man's Religion is vain. And elſewhere, the Tongue is an unruly Evil, full of deadly Poiſon. The King cites other Texts in this Chapter againſt Turbulency of Temper, and a Spirit of Diviſion, which he conceives bear hard upon Luther.

And now we are at an end of the Argument, the Cloſe and Haranguing part of the Book I ſhall paſs over. As to the Performance, the King ſeems to have the better of the Controverſy: And generally ſpeaking, to be much the ſounder Divine. Generally ſpeaking, I ſay, his Principles are more Catholick, and his Proofs more cogent. He ſeems ſuperior to his Adverſary in the Vigor and Propriety of his Style, in the Force of his Reaſoning, and the Learning of his Citations. But then with due Regard to his Memory, it muſt be ſaid his Manner is not altogether unexceptionable: He leans too much upon his Character, argues in his Garter Robes, and writes as 'twere with his Scepter. He gives rough Language ſometimes, treats Luther with Contempt, and drives his Invective pretty ſtrong upon him. But Luther was too warm to take this Uſage from the greateſt Mortal. He thought the Cauſe wou'd bear him out in any Liberty. Inſtead therefore of returning a modeſt Defence, and paying a Regard to a Crown'd Head; inſtead of this, he flies out into the laſt Exceſſes of Railing, and is extravagantly coarſe and indecent. And that I may not ſeem to report him to diſadvantage, I ſhall tranſcribe ſome Paſſages of his Reply.

See Collect. N. 3.

The King's Book was preſented in full Conſiſtory to the Pope by Dr. John Clerk, Dean of Windſor, the King's Ambaſſador. It was received with all imaginable Ceremony and Reſpect. The Pope promis'd to ſatisfy the King's Deſire in recommending it to all Chriſtian Princes; and that it ſhou'd be publiſh'd with as honourable a Teſtimony from the Holy See, as ever was given to the Works of St. Auſtin and St. Jerom. His Holyneſs likewiſe aſſur'd the Ambaſſador, that at the next Conſiſtory he wou'd preſent the King with a publick Title. There were ſeveral Additions propos'd by the Cardinals, as thoſe of Protector, or Defenſor Romanæ Eccleſiæ, or Sedis Apoſtolicæ, Rex Apoſtolicus, or Orthodoxus: At laſt they agreed on Defenſor Fidei. This Title was drawn up in a Bull, in which there's a large Commendation of the King's Performance: I ſhall inſert it for the Reader among the Records.

Lord Herbert p. 104.
See Records N. 4.

The latter end of this Year this Pope dy'd, not without Suſpicion of being taken off by Poyſon.

Dr. Powell writes againſt Luther.

To proceed, one Dr. Powell of Oxford was a Second to the King in this Controverſy. His Performance was much applauded by the Univerſity. The Heads gave it a great Character in their Letter to the King. The Tract was divided into two Books: The firſt was entit'led, De Summo Pontifice & Euchariſtiæ Sacramento; The other, De Sex Sacramentis. The King was extremely pleas'd with Powel's Management, inſomuch that moſt People thought he wou'd quickly have been promoted to the higheſt Stations in the Church. But, to conclude with him, he loſt the King's Favour by appearing ſtrongly againſt the Divorce, and the New Supremacy. By thus croſſing the Court Meaſures, he drew a Storm upon himſelf, and was firſt impriſon'd, and afterwards executed in Smithfield (p).

But is afterwards executed for denying the King's Spiritual Supremacy.

(p) Wood. Hiſt. & Antiq. Univerſ. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 247.

A. D. 1522. May 2.

The next Year there was a Writ iſſu'd from the King to Archbiſhop Warham to call a Convocation. 'Twas ſummon'd to meet at St. Paul's the 20th of April (q): But the Cardinal prevail'd ſo far with the King, as to diſſolve that Convocation by his Legantine Authority. Upon this, he directed his Mandate to Tonſtal, Biſhop of London, to bring the Clergy of Canterbury to St. Peter's Weſtminſter. The Mandate ſets forth, They were to meet for Reforming ſome Abuſes in the Church. What was done upon this Head is not known, the Records being loſt: But Reformation was not their only Buſineſs; a Supply for the King was propos'd: And here the Proportion was ſome-

(q) Regiſt. Tonſtall, fol. 33, 34.

Cardinal Wolſey ſummons a Convocation.

what heavy: They were preſs'd to give half the full Value of their Livings for one Year. All the Relief was, they had five Years for the Payment. To diſpoſe them for ſo large a Subſidy, the Cardinal inlarg'd upon the King's Merit to the Church: How he had ſuppreſs'd the Schiſm, which had like to have prov'd troubleſome in Pope Julius's Time: How he had protected the See of Rome from the Incroachments of the French: But moſt of his Rhetorick was laid out in Commendation of the King's Book againſt Luther. He added, that ſince the French King was making War upon him; ſince he had ſent the Duke of Albany to Scotland to work a Diſturbance on that ſide, it was highly reaſonable the Clergy ſhou'd exert themſelves at ſuch a Juncture, and aſſiſt his Majeſty in proportion to his Occaſions. And that as the King had deſerv'd more from the Church than all his Predeceſſors, they ought to ſhew themſelves ſenſible of their Happineſs, to riſe in their Gratitude, and pay their Acknowledgments accordingly.

A large Subſidy granted by the Clergy.

This Motion of the Cardinal's, was oppos'd by the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Rocheſter. They objected, 'twas an uncuſtomary Tax, and ſo extremely oppreſſive, that the Clergy cou'd not live under it: And beſides, 'twou'd be drawn into Precedent for Aftertimes: And thus the Burden upon the Church wou'd be almoſt intolerable. But the Cardinal who deſign'd the Convocation ſhou'd be exemplary in their Subſidy, and lead the way to the Parliament, was indefatigable in the Buſineſs. And thus by getting ſome to be abſent, and bringing over others, he prevail'd at laſt. And to prevent ſo large a Demand for the future, a Clauſe was thrown in, That it ſhou'd be no Precedent. In ſhort, 'twas granted with a Preamble, particularly reſpectful and acknowledging to the King. By this Grant all Foreigners beneſic'd in England, were double charg'd: That is, they were to pay the full of their Annual Revenue in five Years time. The Biſhop of Worceſter and Landaff, Polydore Virgil, Peter the Carmelite, Eraſmus of Rotterdam, Silveſter Darius, and Peter Vannes had the Benefit of an Exception, and were oblig'd to pay no higher than the Natives (z).

Regiſt. Tonſtal, fol. 40.

(z) Bp. Burnet Hiſt. Refor. p. 21.

Cardinal Wolſey makes for the Papacy.

The Papal Chair being vacant, Cardinal Wolſey imploys his Intereſt to ſtep into it. To this purpoſe, he diſpatches Dr. Richard Pace Dean of St. Paul's to Rome. He likewiſe writes to the Emperor Charles to aſſiſt him in the Election.

And endeavours to engage the Emperor.

“ Firſt he gently reminds the Emperor of his Promiſe: In the next place, he ſuggeſts to his Imperial Majeſty, how ſingularly it wou'd appear for him to concern himſelf openly in the Choice of a Pope. This wou'd look like a Hardſhip upon the uſual Freedoms; and as if the Conclave was over-rul'd in their Choice: And thus the univerſal Church would ſuffer in the Blemiſh of the Election. He likewiſe acquainted the Emperor, that his Majeſty had more important Buſineſs to be carry'd in the Conclave. Beſides, if the Cardinal ſucceeded, the Emperor might depend upon his Intereſt, and find him as ſerviceable as formerly: For by giving the King his Maſter a greater Weight in the Balance of Chriſtendom, the Emperor wou'd have the Advantage of a more ſignificant Friendſhip. For the Cardinal, as he continues, wou'd always be ready to diſpoſe the King to a good Correſpondence with his Imperial Majeſty. Neither was there any ground to ſuſpect the Promotion to the Popedom wou'd alter his Thoughts or his Meaſures: His Intereſt no leſs than his Inclination, wou'd oblige him to Conſtancy in this Matter. For 'twas evident enough, that the preſerving the Authority of the Emperor in Italy, was the only Expedient to ſecure the Peace of that Country: The preſerving of which, the King of England deſir'd no leſs than himſelf.

Pace had Inſtructions to ſcatter ſome of theſe Suggeſtions amongſt the Cardinals at Rome: And to put them in Mind what Advantage the Lutherans wou'd make if a falſe Step were taken in the Election; and what heavy Imputations wou'd be laid on the Court of Rome: Beſides, if an improper Choice ſhou'd be made, the Diviſions of Chriſtendom wou'd be perpetuated: For inſtance, if any Subject or Favourite to Charles or Francis were elected, the Animoſities between theſe two Crowns wou'd run higher, and the Breach never be clos'd. He was farther to ſuggeſt, that if the Papacy fell to the Share of an Italian, or any other unſupported Perſon, he wou'd not have Force ſufficient to guard his Station, and maintain his Authority. That the only way to prevent theſe Inconveniences, was to pitch upon a Perſon who had a powerful and well-affected Prince to ſtand by him. And to make the moſt of every thing, the Cardinal took Care to apply under-hand to the French King, to whom he promiſ'd a Neutrality at leaſt, which was more, it ſeems, than this Prince cou'd expect from another Pope (s).

(s) Ld. Herb. p. 120.

Adrian Sixth choſen Pope.

But theſe Inſtructions came to nothing: For before Pace arriv'd at Rome, the Cardinal of Tortoſa, formerly Tutor to the Emperor Charles, was choſen Pope, by the Name of Adrian the Sixth.

May 26.

This Year the Emperor receiv'd the Order of St. George at Nuremberg, and ſoon after came into England: The Cardinal was ſent to Dover to wait on Him at his Arrival: Two Days after the King followed and brought Him to Greenwich, from hence He made a magnificent Entry into London, and was there receiv'd with the Solemnity of a Coronation. The Cardinal officiated at St. Paul's, where, it ſeems, ſome of the principal Nobility gave him the Baſon to waſh at High Maſs. Wolſey is charg'd with intolerable Pride, for ſuffering Perſons of the firſt Quality, to do this Office: And in all likelihood, to prevent Miſconſtruction, it had better been omitted. However, the Matter is capable of a fairer Conſtruction than is generally put upon't. For the holding the Baſon at High Maſs may rather be ſuppos'd a Miniſtration in Religion, and an Honour to God Almighty, than any Reſpect to the Cardinal: And if the Ceremony was thus pay'd, why might it not be receiv'd under the ſame Conſideration?

June 19.

From London, the Court convey'd the Emperor to Windſor, where a Treaty was concluded between the Two Princes. By one of the Articles, the Emperor was to marry the Princeſs Mary, the only ſurviving Iſſue by the Queen.

The War between England and France, gave Occaſion to the Grant of a Tax in Parliament. And here the Univerſity of Oxford being demanded their Proportion, they alledg'd an Exemption, and apply'd to the Cardinal to maintain their Privilege. The Cardinal acquainted the King with this Plea, and ſucceeded in the Repreſentation (t).

(t) Wood's Hiſt. & Antiq. univerſ. Oxon. p. 248. lib. 1.

The Death of Pope Adrian.

Adrian, who was a Prelate of great Vertue and Sincerity, and projected a Reformation, held the See but a little while, and dy'd about the middle of the next Year (u).

(u) F. Paul. Hiſt. Counc. of Trent.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

Cardinal Wolſey renews his Attempt to gain the Popedom, but miſcarries.

Cardinal Wolſey being advertis'd of the Vacancy of the See, acquainted the King with it, letting his Majeſty know, that his not being at Rome, was the only Obſtruction that cou'd diſappoint him in his Pretentions upon that Dignity. He therefore begg'd the King, that ſince he had formerly thought him not unworthy of the Papal Chair, he wou'd now aſſiſt him. Notwithſtanding the King's Concurrence, Julio de Medici was choſen Pope, by the Name of Clement VII. And now to make the beſt of the Caſe, 'twas thought adviſeable to ſend Inſtructions to the King's Ambaſſadors at Rome, to congratulate his Holineſs's Election. Thoſe who had a publick Character at that Court, were Clerk Biſhop of Bath and Wells, Secretary Pace, and Thomas Annibal Doctor of Law, and Maſter of the Rolls. Theſe Agents were order'd to requeſt the Pope, not only to continue his former Diſaffection to the French, but to exert himſelf proportionably to his Station, and give publick Proof of his former Sentiment. The Cardinal likewiſe by a particular Diſpatch, deſir'd an Inlargement of his Legantine Commiſſion. The Pope condeſcended to the Requeſt: And whereas before he was only Legate from Five Years to Five Years, this Juriſdiction was now given him for Term of Life. The Cardinal is charg'd (w) with Inſincerity in this Congratulation of Pope Clement. 'Tis true, the Compliment runs high: "He proteſt-
"ed his Election gave great Satisfaction both "to the King and himſelf; that they never
"had been pleas'd better with any ſort of Suc-
"ceſs, and that he was the very Perſon whom
"they wiſh'd to that Greatneſs. But notwithſtanding the Ceremony of the Expreſſions, there was not ſo much Diſſimulation in the Addreſs, as has been ſuppos'd: For it appears by the Inſtructions ſent by the Cardinal to the King's Ambaſſadors, That they were to ſollicit the Intereſt of the Cardinal de Medicis, and that both the King and the Cardinal of York deſir'd his Promotion to the Papacy above any others: I ſay, above all others, excepting Wolſey himſelf. Our Cardinal likewiſe in his Letter gives the Ambaſſadors to underſtand how much he lov'd, truſted, and eſteem'd this Cardinal de Medicis: They had Orders likewiſe to recommend that Cardinal to the whole College, and not to appear for Wolſey till the other had either declin'd, or was likely to fail in the Competition (x).

The Cardinal congratulates Clement the Seventh.

(w) Bp. Burnet. Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 4.

(x) Bp. Burnet's Records, Pt. 2d. Book 1. Numb. 48.

A. D. 1524. Sep.

The Emperor neglecting the Performance of the Article relating to his marrying the Princeſs Mary, ſome Overtures were made to Scotland upon this Head. But this coming to nothing, the King offer'd his Daughter to Francis the French King. This Propoſal was well receiv'd, and a Match treated. In ſhort, 'twas agreed the Lady Mary ſhou'd be given in Marriage, either to Francis himſelf, or to his Second Son the Duke of Orleans. The Alternative was to be determin'd by the Two Kings, who were ſhortly to have an Interview at Calais: There were alſo Forfeitures on both ſides, in caſe the Match did not go on: But of this more afterwards.

A. D. 1527. Apr. 30.

Id. pt. 1. p. 37. Ld. Herbert.

Wolſey diſſolves ſome leſſer Monaſteries, for the Endowment of the Colleges founded by him.

A. D. 1525.

Cardinal Wolſey, who thought the Revenues of the leſſer Monaſteries might be transfer'd to a more ſerviceable Uſe, procur'd the Pope's Bull to diſſolve Forty of 'em. The Reaſon of taking this large Step was this: He had projected the Founding a College at Ipſwich, and another at Oxford, and wanted an Indowment proportionable to the Greatneſs of the Deſign. The Pope granted him two Bulls for the Diſſolution. The firſt bears date, April 1524; and the ſecond in March the Year following. Theſe Inſtruments however were charg'd with a Proviſo, that the King, and other Founders of ſuch Monaſteries, wou'd give their Conſent. The King accordingly grants his Letters Patents for diſſolving the Houſes mention'd in the Pope's Bull. The Suppreſſion of theſe Monaſteries gives our learned Church Hiſtorian an Occaſion of running a great length of Satyr upon the Inſignificancy and Miſbehaviour of the Religious: "The Monks, ſays he, being "ſettl'd, gave themſelves up to Idleneſs and "Pleaſure, having in their Hands the chief
"Encouragements of Learning, and yet doing
"nothing towards it; but on the contrary,
"decrying It and diſparaging It all they cou'd. This, as a learned Remarker obſerves, is a very hard Cenſure upon a whole Order of Men, who were once honourable, and always ſerviceable in the Church (y).

Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 23, 32.

Id. pt. 1. p. 22.

(y) Harmer Specimen, &c. p. 12.

The Memory of the Monks defended againſt ſome Imputations laid upon 'em.

As to Matter of Fact: When the Monks were thus ſettl'd in the Reign of King Edgar, to which our Hiſtorian refers, they promoted a general Improvement: They were very induſtrious in reſtoring Learning, and retrieving the Country from the remarkable Ignorance of thoſe Times. Their Labours were anſwer'd with Succeſs: Inſomuch, that whereas before ſcarce any ſecular Prieſt cou'd write or read a Latin Epiſtle (z); the Face of things was ſo chang'd by the Endeavours of Dunſtan and his Maſter Ethelwald, that in a ſhort time Learning was generally reſtor'd, and began to flouriſh. From this Period, the Monaſteries were the Schools and Seminaries of almoſt the whole Clergy, both ſecular and regular. For the Univerſities (if we had more than one) were then very ſlender Societies, and the Muſes were confin'd as 'twere to the Cloiſter. As the Univerſities grew up, the Monaſteries declin'd: However, they did not ſink to any ſcandalous Degree of Ignorance, but ſtill continu'd to maintain a Character in Learning. 'Tis true, about the middle of the thirteenth Century, the mendicant Friars by their Induſtry and myſterious Management, gain'd the Aſcendant: Thus both the old religious Orders, and the ſecular Clergy, loſt ground. But within two hundred Years theſe Mendicants growing contemptible, the Monks and the Seculars began to recover their Credit. And thus riſing in their Figure, they made a conſiderable Progreſs in the Reſtoration of Learning: They bred their Novices to Letters: And to this purpoſe, every great Monaſtery had a peculiar College in each of the Univerſities. And even to the Time of their Diſſolution, they maintain'd great Numbers of Children at School for the Service of the Church. And a little before the Reformation, many of the great Monaſteries were Nurſeries of Learning: Their Superiors were Men of Diſtinction this way, and great Promoters of their own Sufficiency in others. Of this rank we may reckon Kederminſter Abbot of Winchelcomb, Goldwell Prior of Canterbury, Voche Abbot of St. Auſtins, Wells Prior of Ely, Holbeach Prior of Worceſter, Iſlip Abbot of Weſtminſter, Webbe Prior of Coventry, and many others. From hence it appears the Monks deſerved a fairer Character than is ſometimes given them. And that in the darkeſt and moſt exceptionable Ages, they were far from being Enemies to Learning.

(z) Elfrick præf. ad Grammat. Saxon.

Id. p. 13, 14.

The Cardinal complain'd of by the Religious.

To proceed, the Cardinal is ſaid to have ſtrained his Legantine Commiſſion in the Viſitation of religious Houſes, in the making of Abbots, the granting of Faculties, &c. Whether himſelf or his Officers, or both, were to blame, is ſomewhat uncertain: However, his Chaplain John Allen, Doctor of Law, is complain'd on, for travelling with a numerous Retinue from one Monaſtery to another, and obliging the Monks to unuſual Hardſhips and Expence. This Management at laſt grew up to a publick Grievance: And coming to the King's Ear, the Cardinal receiv'd a Reprimand: Who finding the King much diſpleas'd, made his Submiſſion, promis'd new Conduct, acquainting the King at the ſame time, that he had made his Will, and left the Bulk to his Highneſs. The King being ſatisfy'd with the Cardinal's Submiſſion, ſent him a Letter all written with his own Hand; which being ſomewhat of a Curioſity, I ſhall tranſcribe it for the Reader.

The King's Letter to the Cardinal.

“As touching the Matter of Wilton, ſeeing it is in no other Strain than you write of; and you being alſo ſo ſuddenly (with the falling ſick of your Servants) afraid and troubl'd, I marvel not that it overſlip'd you as it did. But 'tis no great Matter, ſtanding the Caſe as it doth; for 'tis yet in my Hand, as I perceive by your Letter, and your Default was not ſo great, ſeeing the Election * was but conditional. Wherefore, My Lord, ſeeing the Humbleneſs of your Submiſſion, and tho' the Caſe were much more heinous, I can be content for to remit it, being right glad, that according to mine Intent, my Monitions and Warnings have been benignly and lovingly accepted on your behalf; promiſing you that the very Affection I bear you, caus'd me thus to do. As touching the Help of Religious Houſes towards the building of your College, I wou'd 'twere more, ſo it be lawfully. For my Intent is none, but that it ſhou'd ſo appear to all the World, and the Occaſion of all their Mumbling might be ſecluded and put away: For ſurely, there's great Murmuring of it throughout all the Realm, both Good and Bad. They ſay not, that all that is ill-gotten is beſtow'd upon the College, but that the College is the Cloak for covering all Miſchiefs. This grieves me, I aſſure you, to hear it ſpoken of him whom I ſo entirely love. Wherefore, methought I cou'd do no leſs than thus friendly to admoniſh you. One thing more I perceive by your own Letter, which a little, methinketh, toucheth Conſcience, and that is, that you have receiv'd Money of the Exempts for having their old Viſitors. Surely, this can hardly be with good Conſcience. For, and they were good, why ſhou'd you take Money? And if they were ill, 'twere a ſinful Act. Howbeit, your Legacy herein might, peradventure, apud Homines, be a Cloak, but not apud Deum. Wherefore you, thus moniſh'd by him who ſo intirely loves you, I doubt not will deſiſt, not only from this, (if Conſcience will not bear it) but from all other things which ſhou'd Tangle the ſame; and in ſo doing, we will ſing Te laudant Angeli atque Archangeli, Te laudat omnis ſpiritus. And thus an End I make of this, tho' rude, yet loving Letter, deſiring you as benevolently to take it, as I do mean it; for I inſure you (and I pray you think it ſo) that there remains at this Hour no Spark of Diſpleaſure towards you in my Heart. And thus fare you well, and be no more perplex'd. Written with the Hand of your loving Sovereign and Friend (a).

HENRT R.

This Election is ſuppos'd to be the chuſing of an Abbot at Wilton.

And ſince the King's Letter takes notice the Cardinal was cenſur'd for diſſolving the Religious Houſes; and Stow * ſeems to charge him with Sacrilege, and that the founding a College was a ſlender Defence, I ſhall give the Reader a Line or two, to take off ſomewhat of this Imputation. Firſt, we are to conſider, that the Cardinal was govern'd by the Principles of the Age, and did nothing but what was juſtifiable by the received Doctrines. He own'd the Supremacy of the Papal See, and maintain'd the Privileges claim'd by the Court of Rome. Now under this Perſwaſion, he muſt believe the Pope had an Authority of transferring the Lands and Revenues of the Church, to what Uſes he thought fit; and eſpecially of turning religious Houſes into Societies for ſecular Prieſts, and for the Advancement of Learning. That the Popes had formerly given Inſtances of their Authority in this kind. Farther, ſince Popes have ſometimes given Monks leave to throw off their Habits, and return to the World, what ſhou'd hinder them from altering a Settlement, and making a ſmall Revolution in Lands and Tenements? Why ſhou'd the Conſecration of Eſtates go deeper, and be more irrevocable than that of Perſons?

* Stow's Annal. p. 522.

The Cardinal defended from the Charge of Sacrilege.

Beſides, if we conſider the new Application, there will be no reaſon to charge the Cardinal with Sacrilege. For he did not alienate the Revenues from religious Service, but only made a Change in the Diſpoſal; He only turn'd the Monaſteries into Colleges: Now every Body knows theſe Societies are expreſly dedicated to the Honour of God Almighty.

Farther, whereas 'tis objected, the Cardinal's Precedent led the way to After-Liberties, and prov'd Fatal to the reſt of the Monaſteries: To this it may be anſwer'd, by asking a Queſtion: Did ever any Body lay the Imputation of Sacrilege upon Wainfleet or Chichely? Not to mention other Founders of Colleges. Did ever any Body charge theſe Prelates with ſacrilegious Invaſion, for building their Colleges upon the Ruines of the Prior's Aliens, for receiving the Revenues of thoſe forfeited Eſtates, to endow their Foundations? Laſtly, were not the Templars ſuppreſs'd, and their Lands every where ſeiz'd in the fourteenth Century? And was not the Diſſolution of their Houſes countenanc'd by the Pope himſelf (b)?

A. D. 1525.

The Cardinal's noble Foundation of the College of Chriſt-Church in Oxford.

To proceed: The Cardinal having procur'd the King's Letters Patents, went vigorouſly on with the Building of his College in Oxford. The Patent gives great Commendation of the Cardinal's Adminiſtration, and that the Weight of the Government had reſted upon him for ſeveral Years. By this Patent the College was to be built upon the Site of St. Freideſwed's Priory (lately diſſolv'd for that purpoſe) and to be call'd CARDINAL-COLLEGE. This Inſtrument likewiſe gave an Authority of ſettling two thouſand Pounds a Year in clear Revenue upon the Foundation. The Cardinal's Plan in this Benefaction, was large and noble, as appears by a Draught of the Statutes ſent to the Society under his Hand and Seal: For the purpoſe, By this Scheme, there was to be a Dean and Sub-Dean, Threeſcore Canons of the firſt Rank, and Forty of the Second, Thirteen Chaplains, Twelve Clerks, and Sixteen Choriſters. To which we muſt add Lecturers, or Profeſſors in Divinity, Canon-Law, Civil-Law, Phyſick, Philoſophy, Logick, and Humanity. There were likewiſe Four Cenſors of Manners, and Examiners of the Proficiency of the Students. There was alſo Three Treaſurers, Four Stewards, and Twenty inferior Servants: In all, an Hundred and Eighty Six. And laſtly, there was a Revenue ſettl'd for

---

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 174.

(b) Wood's Hiſt. & Antiq. Univerſ. Oxon, Lib. 2. p. 247.

for the Entertainment of Strangers, the Relief of the Poor, and the keeping of Horſes for College-Buſineſs. As to the Building, 'twas magnificent in the Model, curious in the Workmanſhip, and rich in the Materials: And if the Cardinal had liv'd to execute the Deſign, few Princes Palaces wou'd have exceeded it. Neither wou'd the Library have been ſhort of the Nobleneſs of the Structure: For the Cardinal intended to have furniſh'd it with the Learning and Curioſities of the Vatican, and tranſcrib'd the Pope's Manuſcripts for that purpoſe. But this noble Id. p. 249. Foundation had but four Years Continuance; for in the Year 1529, when the Cardinal was caſt in a Præmunire, the Deſign dropt, the Buildings were left unfiniſh'd, and all the Eſtate of the Foundation both Real and Perſonal was forfeited to the King. And thus it continu'd in his Majeſty's Hands, till the Year 1532: In which time ſeveral Mannors and other Branches of the Revenue were ſnatch'd by the Courtiers. In the Year laſt mention'd, the King founded the College anew, with a Settlement of Two Thouſand Pounds per Annum. In this Foundation, there was a Dean and twelve Secular Canons. But this Settlement laſted not much longer than the firſt; for in the May 10. Year 1545, this Corporation was diſſolv'd by Commiſſion, and reſign'd by the Dean and Canons into the King's Hands. About two Months after, it was reviv'd by his Majeſty's Letters Patents. And the next Year, by an Inſtrument of the ſame kind, the King tranſlated the Epiſcopal See from Oſney to this College. Thus the Church of this Society was made the Cathedral, and the College call'd Chriſt-Church. In this laſt Foundation, there's a Proviſion for a Dean, eight Canons, three publick Profeſſors of Divinity, of Hebrew and Greek, ſixty Students, eight Chaplains, eight Singing-Men, an Organiſt, a School-Maſter, an Id. p. 251, 252. Fuller's Ch. Hiſt. Uſher, fourty Boys, and twenty four Alms-Men.

Luther had now recollected himſelf, and was Londini ex Ædibus Pynſonianis A.D. 1526. cum Privilegio Regis. grown ſenſible of his Miſbehaviour towards the King of England: And therefore this Year he ſends the King a Letter, and acknowledges his Fault. In this Letter he acquaints the King, that in his late Anſwer to his Majeſty, he was provok'd to the Manner of his Writing by Perſons that were none of the King's Friends: And that by giving way to Reſentment, he was puſh'd beyond his Temper, and carry'd out into ſuch offenſive Expreſſions. He owns this was done with great Precipitancy and want of Diſcretion. He begs the King's Pardon, makes a low Submiſſion, and promiſes to write a publick Recantation, if the King ſhall pleaſe to appoint him that Satisfaction. He proceeds to tell the King, he heard his Majeſty had taken ſome ſteps towards a Reformation, and wiſhes him a farther Progreſs. From hence he goes on to offer ſomething in Defenſe of his Doctrine, and complains of his being condemn'd before Hearing. But he does not ſhew himſelf a Perſon of Addreſs, nor keep his Temper through the whole Application. For he falls foul upon the Cardinal of York; calls this Favourite and prime Miniſter, a Monſter, a Perſon publickly hated by God and Man, and the Plague of the Kingdom. Beſides, he touches the King in a very ſenſible Part, tells him he was credibly inform'd, that the Book, de Septem Sacramentis was none of the King's; but that ſome People, who had more Cunning than Conſcience, had borrow'd his Majeſty's Name; never conſidering the danger they run themſelves upon, by throwing ſuch a Scandal upon their Sovereign. He's very coarſe in this Letter upon the Court of Rome: And as for the Emperor and thoſe other Princes of Germany, who diſcountenanc'd his Doctrine, he tells the King there was no Reaſon to be ſurpris'd at this: That 'twas rather a Wonder there was one ſingle Prince in the Intereſt of the Goſpel. To make good this Complement upon Kings, he quotes part of the ſecond Pſalm, The Kings of the Earth ſet themſelves, and the Rulers take Counſel together againſt the Lord, and againſt his Anointed. At the cloſe, he begs a favourable Anſwer of the King, and ſubſcribes with Decency enough. He dates from Wittenberg, Sept. 1. 1525. See Records N. 5.

It ſeems this Letter ſtuck in the Conveyance, and did not come to the King's Hands till a great while after the Date. The King gratify'd Luther ſo far as to return him an Anſwer, which being moſtly ſpent upon the former Controverſy, I ſhall only take notice of ſome few Paſſages. Firſt, the King ſolemnly declares the Book, De Septem Sacramentis to be his own. As to Cardinal Wolſey, of whom Luther had given ſo hard a Character, the King commends him very highly, and attributes the Succeſſes of his Reign to that Prelate's Adminiſtration. Amongſt other Exceptions to Luther's Doctrine, the King cites him for this Aſſertion, that 'twas downright Sacrilege and Wickedneſs to endeavour to pleaſe God by good Works, and not by Faith alone. Sacrilegium eſt & Impietas velle placere Deo per Opera, & non per ſolam Fidem. In libro adverſus Regem. His Majeſty likewiſe cites a reſembling Sentence out of Luther's Book, de Captivitate Babylonica. Ita vides quam Dives ſit Homo Chriſtianus ſive Baptizatus, qui etiam volens non poteſt perdere ſalutem ſuam quantiſcunque peccatis, niſi nolit credere. Nulla enim peccata poſſunt eum damnare, niſi ſola Incredulitas. The King expreſſes ſome Indignation, as he had reaſon, at theſe Heterodoxies, and confutes him ſubſtantially from the New Teſtament. Some of his Texts are theſe; St. Paul tells us, that Faith, which is acceptable to God, works by Love. Gal. 5. 6. To this Senſe agrees the Exhortation of the ſame Apoſtle to the Corinthians, Examine your ſelves whether you 2 Cor. 13. 5. be in the Faith; prove your own ſelves. Now, ſays the King, which way can this Proof be made out excepting by the Teſt of good Works? Thus St. Peter tells us, that whoever works Righteouſneſs Acts 10. is accepted of God. To the ſame purpoſe St. John cautions his Converts againſt the Impoſtures of the Gnoſticks, Little Children, let no Man deceive 1 St. John 3. 7. you, he that doth Righteouſneſs is Righteous. The King proceeds and charges Luther with diſabling the Faculties of the Mind, and maiming the Liberty of the Will, to that degree, as to make the doing any thing that's good an impracticable Attempt. This Doctrine he is ſaid to carry to ſuch an Exceſs, as to make a Man a mere Machine in Piety and Virtue; that with reſpect to Chriſtian Attainments the Will is purely paſſive, and has no Power even to co-operate with the Grace of God. This Aſſertion, as the King goes on, is one of the moſt peſtilent Hereſies that ever was. Thus the Juſtice of God is blaſphemed: Thus the Wickedneſs of Men is by conſequence excus'd, thrown upon the Neceſſity of Fate, and the force of irrevocable Decrees. Now if Men are thus abſolutely impotent and over-rul'd, to what purpoſe did St. John the Baptiſt exhort the St. Matth. 3. Jews to Repentance? And why did our Saviour bid the Adultereſs go, and ſin no more? St. John 8.

The King proceeds to charge the Commotions and Revolts in Germany upon Luther's Doctrine; and that he had been the occaſion of a great deal of Rapine and Diſorder in the World. To conclude, as to Luther's begging his Pardon, the King tells him, he was willing to give it him, upon gentler Conditions than he deſir'd: But then he expects Repentance and Retractation of Error on Luther's part. To this purpoſe he exhorts him to retire from the World, to quit his Engagements with the Nun he had marry'd, and ſpend the Remainder of his Life in Diſcipline and Penance.

Having obſerv'd Luther was charg'd with giving occaſion to the Civil Diſturbances in Germany, it may not be improper to take notice, that the Boors had made ſeveral Inſurrections in the Empire. The laſt Year there was a Riſing of the Peaſants in Swabia; they had form'd themſelves into a Confederacy, and engag'd with the Solemnity of Oaths. Their Pretence was to maintain the Goſpel and their Civil Liberties. Thus they appear'd in great Numbers in the Field, and drew out againſt the Magiſtracy. Some indiſcreet Fanatick Preachers were the Incendiaries of this Rebellion, amongſt whom one Thomas Munſer was Chief. This Munſer not only oppos'd the Doctrine of the Court of Rome, but refin'd upon Luther himſelf. He complain'd the Pope had encroach'd upon the Liberties of Chriſtendom, and unreaſonably hamper'd them in the Canon Law. That Luther had broke theſe Chains, 'tis true; but then he had gone too great a length towards the other Extreme. He had careſs'd the Senſes, and indulg'd the Animal Life too far. Munſer therefore took up the Reins, and drew in the Compaſs of Luther's Liberty. He preach'd up Diſcipline and Self-denial, and oblig'd his Converts to Gravity of Countenance, ſeldom ſpeaking, and long Beards. He had one Fiſer, who aſſiſted him in his Scheme, and was privy to his Deſigns. This Man ſet up for Prophetical Dreams, and holding Intelligence with Spirits. He told the Boors, he had Orders from Heaven to bring them into the Field; and that 'twas part of their Commiſſion to deſtroy the Nobility. The Peaſants, animated by theſe Impoſtors, ventur'd a Battle, were defeated by Count Mansfield, and the Landgrave of Heſſe, and ſoon after Munſer and Fiſer were taken and executed.

Sleidan Comment. lib. 4. & 5.

Francis the Firſt, the French King, being made Priſoner at the Battle of Pavia, was oblig'd to hard Conditions for the Recovery of his Liberty. Among other Securities for Performance of Articles, the Emperor, Charles the Fifth, made him ſwear the Capitulation at Madrid. But the Pope being apprehenſive of the Emperor's Greatneſs ſent Francis a Relaxation of this Oath, and founded the Diſpenſation upon the Dureſs the King was under. Upon this, the Pope, this King, and ſeveral Italian Princes enter'd into an Allyance, and form'd the Clementine League. The States of Italy engag'd, were the Venetians, Sforza, Duke of Milan, and the Government of Florence. The Emperor had the Liberty of coming in if he pleas'd, and they offer'd the King of England the Honour of being Guarantee of the Treaty. But by the Advice of the Council, the King declin'd the Overture; for 'twas thought the Liberty of his Motions might be check'd by concerning himſelf thus far.

A. D. 1526.

This Year Tunſtal, Biſhop of London, ſent out a Monition to bring in Tindal's Tranſlation of the New Teſtament.

He complains ſome of the Lutheran Sect had unfaithfully tranſlated the inſpired Writings, corrupted the Purity of the holy Text, and interpolated it with ſome of their own dangerous Novelties, &c.

See Records N. 12.

Fox tells an odd Story upon this Occaſion: He reports that Biſhop Tunſtal, by the Advice of one Auſtin Packington a Merchant, paid a conſiderable Sum of Money to this Packington, for buying up all the Copies of Tyndall's Tranſlation. The Merchant, who was a private Friend of Tyndall's, remits all the Biſhop's Money to him: And now Tyndall, who liv'd baniſh'd in Holland, was ſupplyed with a Maintenance, and furniſh'd for a ſecond Edition. And thus, as our Martyrologiſt affirms, Packington cheated Biſhop Tunſtall of his Money, and Tyndall receiv'd it.

Fox Hiſt. Martyr. edit. Baſil. p. 138.

I have already obſerv'd, a Match was treated between the Lady Mary and the Houſe of France: While this matter was in Agitation, the Biſhop of Tarbe, the French Ambaſſador, threw in ſome Scruples about the Legitimacy of the Princeſs. He objected the King's Marriage with his Brother's Wife: That this Engagement being a Breach of a divine Precept, no humane Authority could diſpenſe with it. Whether the ſtarting theſe Objections were pre-concerted between the French Court and ours, or between the Cardinal and the Ambaſſador, is not known. 'Tis by ſome conjectur'd, that the King or the Cardinal put the French upon making this Exception: For thus the King might have a colourable Pretence to juſtiſie his proſecuting the Divorce. For if the French receiv'd ſo advantageous a Propoſal, as a Match with the Heir of the Crown, with Coolneſs and Scruples, 'twas reaſonable to fear, that after the King's Death, other Pretenders wou'd ſet up a Claim, and diſpute her Title in another manner (c).

The French Ambaſſador excepts againſt the Legitimacy of the Princeſs Mary.

(c) Biſhop Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. part 1. p. 37.

This Spring Charles, Duke of Bourbon, who commanded the Imperial Army in Italy, ſent to the Pope, to paſs his Troops throw his Holyneſs's Territories, into the Kingdom of Naples: He likewiſe deſir'd Proviſion for his Army upon paying for't. The Pope refuſing theſe Demands, Bourbon marches to Rome, and attacks the Town with an Army of 30000 Men. This General, attempting to ſcale the Walls, was kill'd with a Muſquet Shot: But the Soldiers, enrag'd at the loſs of their General, or, it may be, animated with the proſpect of Plunder, took the Town by Storm, liv'd there at diſcretion ſix or ſeven Days, and kill'd about 5000 Men.

May 6. A. D. 1527.

Guicardine l. 18.

Bellay.

After this Succeſs, they laid Siege to the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and forc'd the Pope and thirteen Cardinals to a Capitulation. By the Articles 400000 Ducats were to be paid in two Months to the Army, and the Caſtle of St. Angelo, Oſtia, Civita Vecchia, and ſome other Places put into the Hands of the Imperialiſts. And for the Security of the Performance, the Pope and Cardinals were to remain in St. Angelo, till part of the Money was paid, and Hoſtages given for the reſt. The Capitulation being thus far made good, his Holyneſs was nevertheleſs to continue a Priſoner: He was to be remov'd to Gaeta, or ſome other Place in the Kingdom of Naples, and there expect the Emperor's Pleaſure.

Guicardine l. 18.

I have mention'd this Revolution of the Pope's Fortune in Italy, becauſe it ſeems to have given a great Turn to the State of the Engliſh Church.

Our King perceiving the Balance of Europe was like to be broken, and that the weight was falling into the Emperor's Scale, reſolv'd to make a cloſer Engagement with the French King. To this purpoſe Cardinal Wolſey was diſpatch'd into France with a ſplendid Equipage, having near a Thouſand Horſe in his Train. He had Inſtructions to form the Treaty upon theſe Three Points.

Lord Herbert.

1ſt, To require the Reſolution of Francis upon the Alternative of the Marriage formerly mention'd.

2dly, To agree upon Meaſures for making a Peace with the Emperor: And here the Enlargement of Francis's Children, now Hoſtages in Spain, was to be comprehended.

The 3d Article was, To conſult upon Methods for procuring the Pope's Liberty.

To the 1ſt, the French King anſwer'd, That the Duke of Orleans's Age being nearer that of the Princeſs Mary, the Match ſhou'd go on between theſe two.

To the 2d 'twas anſwer'd, That Francis, for the Enlargement of his Children, beſides other Conceſſions, wou'd renounce his Claim in Milan.

To the 3d, little more was ſaid than that the Pope ſhou'd be enlarg'd either by Mediation or Force, with all Expedition.

After this Francis brought the Cardinal to Compeigne, from whence Wolſey gave King Henry an Account of the Treaty. The King being much ſatisfy'd with the Cardinal's Negotiation, ſent him a Letter under his own Hand. And here he acknowledges the great Service the Cardinal had done his Highneſs and the Kingdom, and particularly by the Treaty concluded with the French Auguſt 18. By theſe Articles the Treaty made at London April 30 this Year, was to remain in full Force.

A. D. 1527.

It was likewiſe agreed between the Kings of France and England, that no General Council ſummon'd either by the Pope during his Reſtraint, or by the Emperor, ſhou'd be receiv'd. To this purpoſe they ſhou'd prevail with the Clergy of their reſpective Dominions ſolemnly to proteſt againſt ſuch an Aſſembly of the Prelates. That all Orders, Sentences, Bulls, Letters, or Briefs iſſu'd and directed from the Pope, during his Confinement, and tending to the Damage of the ſaid Kings or their Subjects, and eſpecially to the Prejudice of the Legantine Commiſſion of the Cardinal of York, ſhou'd not be obey'd, but declar'd void; and thoſe puniſh'd upon whom they were found. That, during the Pope's Impriſonment, whatever Decrees and Regulations, made in Convocation by the Cardinal of York and the Engliſh Prelates, relating to the Church of England, ſhou'd be obſerv'd: With this Proviſo, that they had the King's Conſent for this purpoſe. 'Twas likewiſe agreed, that Francis and the Gallican Clergy ſhou'd have a Power of the ſame Extent in the French King's Dominions, till the Pope had his Liberty.

Ld. Herbert.

A. D. 1527.

And here the Lord Herbert obſerves, the King's Fancy began of being Head of the Clergy. And that the firſt Impreſſions of this kind were receiv'd from the Cardinal. Of whom likewiſe this noble Hiſtorian reports, the King took the hint for the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries.

The King's Scruples about his Marriage began now to appear. 'Tis ſaid the Cardinal was the firſt, who perplex'd his Majeſty's Conſcience: And that he perſuaded Longland the Biſhop of Lincoln, the King's Confeſſor, to ſuggeſt theſe Scruples to the King (d). 'Tis likewiſe ſaid the Cardinal injected theſe Thoughts as a Revenge upon the Emperor, for breaking his Promiſe with Wolſey and not aſſiſting him in gaining the Popedom. It muſt be confeſs'd the ſtarting this Divorce was a likely way to imbroil the King and the Houſe of Auſtria, and bring the firſt into the French Intereſt.

But Cavendiſh (e), a Gentleman of the Cardinal's Family, and who ſeems to have been much in his Secrets, gives another Account of this Matter. He reports, theſe Scruples began upon the King's Affection to Miſtreſs Anne Bullen: That the King diſcovered his Inclination to Wolſey; and that the Cardinal, often on his Knees, endeavour'd to remove the King's Thought, and break his Fancy, but to no purpoſe. But whatever the King might declare to the Cardinal, he threw his Diſlike of cohabiting with the Queen upon Motives of Conſcience. For four Years after this, in a Letter to Simon Gryneus, he owns he had been govern'd by theſe Scruples for ſeven Years paſt. The Reaſons upon which he went, were theſe: He found by the Law of Moſes, that if a Man took his Brother's Wife, they ſhou'd die childleſs. Now the King had ſeveral Children by the Queen, but none of 'em were living, but the Princeſs Mary. This Misfortune might probably make him think the Marriage unbleſs'd. Whatever his Thoughts were, he ſet himſelf to ſtudy the Point. Thomas Aquinas, of whoſe Judgment he had a great Opinion, decided the Caſe againſt him. In ſhort, the King, by his own Enquiry, concluded the prohibited Degrees of Marriage in Leviticus to be of a moral and unalterable Nature. From whence it follows, that Chriſtians, no leſs than the Jews, are oblig'd by them. That tho' the Pope cou'd diſpenſe with the Canons of the Church, he had no Privilege to relax upon the divine Laws; for no Law can be diſpens'd with by any Authority leſs than that which made it. From hence his Inference was, that the preſent Caſe was not within the Pope's Commiſſion: That notwithſtanding his Holyneſs cou'd diſpenſe with the Laws of the Church, yet the Laws of God were above his Controul, becauſe his Authority muſt be confeſs'd to be of a lower kind. The King is likewiſe ſaid to have requir'd the Opinions of the Engliſh Biſhops: And that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was order'd to report their Judgment. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid, that all the Biſhops, excepting Fiſher of Rocheſter, declar'd under their Hands and Seals againſt the Lawfulneſs of the Marriage (f). But Cavendiſh, whom we may ſuppoſe receiv'd his Memoirs from Wolſey, and was living when this Affair was tranſacted, is ſomewhat different in his Relation. He tells us that the Cardinal, being preſs'd by the King to declare his Opinion of the Marriage, did not think it ſafe to venture his own Judgement in ſo weighty a Buſineſs. He therefore deſir'd leave to conſult the Men of Learning and Character in the Church.

Biſhop Burnet pt. 1. p. 38.

Levit. 20. 21.

This Requeſt being granted, he made uſe of his Legantine Authority, and iſſu'd out his Mandate for a Meeting of the Clergy at Weſtminſter. And here not only the Prelates, but moſt of the eminent Perſons of both Univerſities, not to mention others, were drawn together. At this Convention or Synod, the King's Caſe was examin'd and argu'd for ſeveral Days. But the matter was ſo intricate and involv'd, that they broke up without coming to any Reſolution.

And thus the main Point remain'd undecided. However, they ſuggeſted this Expedient; that the King ſhou'd ſend his Agents to all Univerſities, both at Home and beyond Sea: That the Caſe ſhould be throughly debated by thoſe learned Societies; and that their Deciſion might be brought to his Majeſty under the Seal of every Univerſity (g).

As to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, he was clearly againſt the Divorce as has been obſerv'd. This Prelate in a Letter to the Cardinal, ſeems to found his Opinion upon the twenty fifth of Deuteronomy, where when a Man dy'd without Children, his Brother was to marry the Widow. He lets Wolſey know he had conſulted a great many Caſuiſts upon the Queſtion: That they were divided in their Opinions: And that thoſe who allow'd

Verſ. 37.

the

(d) Sanderus de Schiſm. Angl.

(e) Cavend. Memoirs of Card. Wolſey p. 97.

(f) Biſhop Burnet pt. 1. p. 38.

(g) Cavend. p. 98.

the marrying a Brother's Relict in ſome caſes, ſeem'd beſt ſupported. He argues farther, that ſuppoſing the Reaſons Pro and Con hung in an equal Balance, the Authority of the Pope's Diſpenſation ſhou'd caſt the Scale. The Reader may ſee his Opinion more at large in the Collection of Records (b).

(b) See Records, N. 6.

When the Biſhops met to debate this Queſtion, the Biſhop of Rocheſter refus'd to put his Hand and Seal to the Inſtrument ſign'd by the reſt. By this Writing, 'tis reported, all the other Biſhops declar'd the Marriage unlawful (i). But Cavendiſh, who was with the Cardinal, as has been obſerv'd, and diſcours'd ſome of the moſt eminent Prelates upon that Point, ſays poſitively, they came to no Reſolution, and tells us that the Inſtrument ſign'd by the Prelates, was only to teſtify their Conſent to debate the Queſtion, to which the Biſhop of Rocheſter, it ſeems, wou'd not agree. This is Cavendiſh's Account of that Matter. And that the Biſhops Subſcription did not proceed ſo far as to declare the Marriage unlawful, ſeems farther probable from Wolſey's ſhare in the Affair. For this Cardinal and Campegio, were commiſſion'd by the Pope to hear the Queſtion diſcuſs'd, and pronounce upon the Caſe. Now if Wolſey had already declar'd himſelf of one ſide, had he not been unfit to have been pitch'd on for a Judge? But if all the Biſhops, excepting Rocheſter, had thus publickly affirm'd the Marriage unlawful, the Cardinal being an Engliſh Biſhop, muſt have been one of that Number. 'Tis true the King, in the Lord Herbert's Hiſtory, declares he had conſulted all the Clerks of his Kingdom, and that all, excepting two, reſolv'd the Marriage unlawful (k). And in Cardinal Wolſey's Letter to Sir Gregory Caſſeley at Rome, 'tis ſaid, the King apply'd to the moſt learn'd Prelates, Divines, and Canon Lawyers, both in his own Kingdom and elſewhere, about the Force of the Pope's Diſpenſation, with reference to the Marriage: And that in the Concluſion of the Debate, many of theſe Doctors affirm'd, that the Pope cou'd not diſpenſe in the firſt Degree of Affinity: Such a Relaxation being morally evil, and prohibited by the Law of God. And provided the Pope cou'd relax and give any Relief in this Caſe, they unanimouſly agreed, ſuch a Liberty was not to be indulg'd, but upon the greateſt and moſt urgent Motives, which cou'd not be pleaded in the King's behalf (l).

Whether the Inſtrument the Biſhops ſubſcrib'd, was a Declaration of the Unlawfulneſs of the Marriage, or only their Conſent to debate the Queſtion.

(i) Bp. Burnet, Part 1. pag. 38.

(k) Ld. Herbert's Hiſt. p. 217.

(l) Cotton, lib. Vitel. B. 9.

From the Date of this Letter, December the fifth 1527, it appears the Engliſh Biſhops were conven'd about the Queſtion this Year, and that ſome, tho' not all of 'em, had pronounc'd the Marriage unlawful. I ſay not all of 'em, for had the King been furniſh'd with ſo unanimous a Reſolution of the Engliſh Prelates, we may imagine the Cardinal, who wrote upon the King's Inſtructions, wou'd have made the moſt of this Advantage in his Letter to Caſſeley. Before I diſmiſs this Inqiury, I muſt obſerve, that Cavendiſh reports Wolſey conven'd the Biſhops a ſecond time: That this laſt Meeting was, after the Opinions of the Univerſities at home and abroad had been try'd, and found favourable to the King's Cauſe: And that now 'twas agreed on to ſend the Determination of the Prelates of England to the Pope: Which as Cavendiſh reports, was drawn up in an Inſtrument ſoon after.

But then Cavendiſh is miſtaken in ſaying the Reſolutions of the Univerſities were tranſmitted hither, under their reſpective Seals, before Campegio came over. For this Legate arriv'd in Enland October 1528, but the Decree of Orleance, which bears the earlieſt Date, was ſign'd no ſooner than April 1529, and the reſt are dated the Year after.

Cavendiſh, p. 100, 101.

However, the King and Cardinal's Agents, might have felt the Pulſe of the foreign Univerſities, before this ſecond Meeting of the Biſhops. Thus Wolſey might report the Advices he had receiv'd from abroad. And this Repreſentation might draw the Biſhops to declare their Senſe. But of their being unanimous in the Point, Cavendiſh ſays nothing upon this Occaſion. And thus having cited the Authorities, I ſhall reſt the matter with the Reader. The King, who, as the Lord Herbert obſerves, was reſolv'd to proceed in this Affair, adviſ'd farther with the Cardinal, who told him, that if the Cauſe was try'd in England, the Queen wou'd appeal from the Sentence: That this Buſineſs cou'd not be decided in England, unleſs the Pope wou'd furniſh him with a diſcretionary Commiſſion, and give him abſolute Authority in omnibus caſibus. He adviſ'd the King farther, that the Queen ſhou'd be perſuaded to retire from the World, and turn Religious. And if neither of theſe two Expedients cou'd be brought to bear, then they might proceed to a farther Thought, and conſider quid poſſit clam fieri quoad forum conſcientiæ.

Bp. Burnet's Records, pt. 1. p. 89.

To proceed, the Cardinal told the King, he wou'd do well to diſcover his Mind to Clark Biſhop of Bath and Wells, then Ambaſſador in France. This Prelate being recall'd, the King opening the Caſe, told him the Bull was either of Force, or good for nothing: If it is naught, ſays the King, let it be ſo declar'd: But if it is good, I'll never break through it. The Biſhop reply'd, that the Pope's being a Priſoner, put a ſtop to the Courſe of Juſtice in that Court. Beſides, ſuppoſing the Paſſage open, the Motion of the Proceſs wou'd be ſo ſlow, that Seven Years time wou'd ſcarcely put an End to it. He added, that there muſt be three diſtinct Sentences given in the Cauſe, by three different Judges: And farther, that after all this, the Judgment might be revers'd; quia ſententia contra Matrimonium nunquam tranſit in rem Judicatam. And laſtly, he ſuggeſted his Majeſty might expect the Queen wou'd have Recourſe to an Appeal. To this the King anſwer'd, that in caſe the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of Rocheſter, Ely, and London, gave Sentence againſt her, he believ'd ſhe wou'd not appeal. As to the Tediouſneſs of the Suit, ſince his Patience had already held out for Eighteen Years, he was willing to wait Four or Five more to bring the Matter to a Period. His Majeſty added, that ſince the Marriage ſtood upon the Strength of a Diſpenſation, the ſame Authority might work the other way: for he knew the Key that lock'd the Door, cou'd unlock it. Upon the whole, he thought it moſt adviſeable to ſend his Agents to Rome: That the Pope muſt be ſollicited to unty the Knot, and give him leave to marry another (m).

The King reſolves to ſend his Agents to Rome to diſengage him from his Marriage.

(m) Ld. Herbert, p. 217.

Upon this, Cardinal Wolſey writes a Letter to Sir Gregory Caſſeley, then at Rome: The Purport of this Letter, was to perſuade the Pope to ſet the King at Liberty. The Arguments made uſe of to this purpoſe, are,

Cardinal Wolſey's Letter to Sir Gregory Caſſeley, concerning the Divorce.

1*ſt*, The Opinions of ſeveral Prelates and Divines abovementioned, who pronounc'd the Marriage unlawful.

2*dly*, It was repreſented, that the nulling of the preſent Marriage, was the only Expedient to ſecure the Quiet of the Kingdom. That unleſs the Legitimacy of the King's Iſſue was put beyond Diſpute, there wou'd be Conteſts about the Reaſons for the Pope's granting a Diſpenſation.

the Title to the Crown: That when Matters were leſs perplex'd in this reſpect than they are now, Competitions had been ſet up, the Nation embroil'd, and almoſt brought to Ruine by a Civil War: That there was a late Inſtance of this Misfortune, and that the Kingdom had thus deeply ſuffer'd in the Diſputes between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter.

A third Reaſon to diſpoſe his Holyneſs to a Diſpenſation, was, the divided Condition of Chriſtendom: That ſeveral Princes had ſeiz'd the Keys, and encroach'd upon the Juriſdiction of the Church: That to prevent the ſpreading of this Miſchief, and a farther Revolt from the See of Rome, 'twas neceſſary to apply to the ſafeſt Remedy: That in caſe the King of England was gratify'd in this Matter, the Pope might depend on his Friendſhip, and expect a Protection from him. And to ſhew this Requeſt was not without a Precedent, 'tis farther alledg'd, that the Emperor had been lately diſpens'd with in a reſembling Caſe; that this Prince had ſworn to marry the Princeſs Mary: That notwithſtanding the Solemnity of this Engagement, the Pope had given him a Releaſe without the King's Conſent (n).

Dec. 5. 1527.

(n) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 9.

Now that the King's Application might be leſs ſhocking at the Court of Rome, they pitch'd upon the ſmootheſt Methods, and mov'd in a Manner they thought wou'd be moſt agreeable. To have inſiſted upon the Nullity of Pope Julius's Bull, becauſe the Matter of it was unlawful, and exceeded the Pope's Power: To have inſiſted upon this, I ſay, they knew wou'd have been diſ-reliſhed: For to ſet Barriers to the Pope's Juriſdiction, and limit the Plenitude of his Power, was not the way to gain an Intereſt. To condemn the Bull of a former Pope, was a dangerous Precedent, eſpecially at this time of Day, when the Papal Authority was rejected by ſeveral Princes in Germany. The Cardinal therefore in the Letter abovemention'd, goes another way to work: He makes ſuch Exceptions in Julius's Diſpenſation, as might ſerve to invalidate the Bull, without any Prejudice to the Papal Power. When this point was gain'd, the Marriage muſt be voided of Courſe, and ſink with the Diſpenſation.

Bulls gain'd by Surprize, not binding.

To this purpoſe 'twas alledg'd, that the Diſpenſation was granted upon falſe Suggeſtions. For the purpoſe, that the King deſir'd to engage in this Marriage, for the Continuance of a good Correſpondence between Henry the Seventh, and Ferdinand and Elizabeth of Spain; whereas in truth, there was no Miſunderſtanding, or likelihood of any Rupture between theſe two Princes, neither was the King at that time, grown up to an Age for ſuch Conſiderations. Beſides, he neither gave his Conſent, nor was acquainted with the procuring of the Bull: He neither deſir'd the Marriage, or knew any thing concerning it, till the Bull was granted. The caſe ſtanding thus, the Letter urges that all the Doctors and Prelates formerly mention'd, had declar'd the Diſpenſation not to have Force ſufficient to juſtify the Marriage. The King's Proteſtation is likewiſe alledg'd, but this has been related already.

Cotton. Libr. Ibid.

A. D. 1527. Bilney's Abjuration.

This Year Thomas Bilney Batchelor of Law, abjur'd before Tunſtal Biſhop of London, and ſome other Biſhops, Commiſſaries to Cardinal Wolſey. The Form of the Abjuration runs thus.

Tunſtal's Regiſt. Fol. 135.

"IN the Name of God. Amen. I Thomas Bilney Prieſt, before you Right Reverend Father "in God Lord Cuthbert Biſhop of London, my "Ordinary and Dioceſan, and Commiſſary to "the moſt Reverend Father in God, Lord "Thomas, of the Title of St. Cecil, Prieſt, Cardinal, Archbiſhop of York, Primate of England, "Chancellor of the ſame, of the See Apoſtolick, Legate de Latere; together with you "Reverend Fathers, Henry Biſhop of St. Aſaph, "John Biſhop of Lincoln, and John Biſhop of "Bath, likewiſe Commiſſaries lawfully deputed: "Confeſſing and knowledging the True Catholick and Apoſtolick Faith of holy Church, intend by the Grace of God hereafter, ever to "perſevere and abide in the true Doctrine of "holy Church, and do deteſt and abjure all manner of Hereſies and Articles following, whereupon I am now defamed, noted, vehemently "ſuſpected and convicted; that is to ſay, that "Men ſhou'd pray only to God, and to no "Saints. Item, That Chriſtian Men ought to "worſhip God and no Saints. Item, That Chriſtian Men ought to ſet up no Lights before "Images of Saints. Item, That Men do not well "to go on Pilgrimages. Item, That Man in no wiſe "can merit by his own Deeds. Item, That Miracles daily ſhew'd, be wrought by the Devil by "the Sufferance of God. Item, That no Pope "has ſuch Power and Authority as Peter had, "except he be of like Purity of Life and Perfection as Peter was. And in theſe Articles, "and all other, I here expreſly conſent unto "our Mother the holy Church of Rome, and Apoſtolick Doctrine of the ſame, and both in "Mouth and Heart make Knowledge, that whoſoever hereafter doth preach, teach, or affirm, "any of theſe Articles, or any other Hereſies, "contrary to the Determination of the holy "Church, is worthy to be excluded from the "Communion of the ſame. And in caſe hereafter I do teach, preach, hold, or affirm any "of theſe foreſaid Hereſies, or any other, contrary to the Determination of holy Church, "which by the Grace of God I intend never "to do, then I ſhall ſubmit my ſelf to the Correction of my Ordinary, according to the holy "Canons: And for theſe my Treſpaſſes and Offences, I deſire of you Penance, which I promiſe by theſe holy Evangeliſts and Contents "of this Book by me bodily touch'd, truly "to do, obſerve, and fulfil. In Witneſs whereof, to this my preſent Abjuration, I have "ſubſcrib'd my Name with my Hand, and ſet "to the Sign of the Croſs.

This Bilney afterwards return'd to his former Opinions, and was burn'd at Norwich, as appears by a marginal Note of the ſame Regiſter: The Words are theſe; Iſte Thomas Bilney poſtea die Sabbati 31 Auguſt. 1531, combuſtus fuit Norvici propter Hereſim & relapſum in eandem.

About the ſame time, Thomas Arthere Batchelor of Divinity, of the Dioceſs of London, was convented before the Biſhops abovemention'd, and prevail'd with to abjure. His Abjuration differing in ſome Points from that of Bilney, I ſhall mention part of it. He confeſſeth, "That he "had erroneouſly and damnably, contrary to "the Determination of holy Church, openly "preach'd and maintain'd, that a Batchelor of "Divinity admitted in the Univerſity, or any "other Perſon having or knowing the Goſpel "of God, may go forth and preach the Goſpel "in every Place, and let for no Man. And if "any Biſhop did accuſe them for ſo doing, the "Curſing ſhall turn to the Harm of themſelves. "And that there is neither Biſhop nor Ordinary, nor yet the Pope, that may make a Law

" to let any Man to preach the Goſpel. Alſo " that if a Man be put to Death as an Heretick, " for preaching the Goſpel, he is not therefore " a Heretick, but rather a Martyr.

About the ſame time, and before the ſame Commiſſaries, one Jeoffrey Long abjur'd. The Main of his Charge was, publiſhing and tranſlating Luther's Works, and maintaining his Doctrine. And amongſt other things, affirming that Faith only without good Works, is ſufficient to bring a Man to Heaven.

Alſo one Thomas Gerrard Prieſt, and Maſter of Arts, abjur'd before the ſame Commiſſaries. His Abjuration goes in the ſame Strain, and retracts the ſame Opinions with the laſt mention'd.

Patrick Hamilton ſuffers upon the Score of Religion in Scotland.

This Year Patrick Hamilton, Abbot of Fern, ſuffer'd at the Stake in Scotland. He was a Perſon nobly deſcended, Nephew to the Earl of Arran by his Father, and to the Duke of Albany by his Mother's ſide. This Gentleman travelling into Germany, had made an Acquaintance with Luther, Melancthon, and ſome other Men of Learning of their Perſuaſion. And being proſelyted to their Doctrine, he reſolv'd to propagate it in his own Country. Thus upon his Return, he declar'd againſt the Corruptions of the Roman Church, and pointed at the Errors intermix'd with the ancient Belief. And being a Perſon of Learning and Addreſs, a great many People hearken'd to his Diſcourſes. This Conduct diſpleas'd the Clergy, who upon Pretence of a Conference, brought him to St. Andrews. They appointed Alexander Campbel a Fryer, to keep him Company, and endeavour to bring him off from his Opinions. This Campbel and Hamilton had ſeveral Diſputes upon the Controverſie; and the Fryer granting that the Church wanted a Reformation in ſeveral Points, Hamilton was farther confirm'd in his Perſuaſion. But having ſtay'd ſome few Days in Town, he was ſeiz'd in the Night, and carry'd to the Caſtle. The next Day he was brought before the Biſhop, and charg'd with maintaining the Articles following, which I ſhall give the Reader in Archbiſhop Spotſwood's Words.

The Articles with which he is charg'd.

1. That the Corruption of Sin remains in Children after their Baptiſm.
2. That no Man, by the Power of his Free-will, can do any good.
3. That no Man is without Sin, ſo long as he lives.
4. That every true Chriſtian may know himſelf to be in the State of Grace.
5. That a Man is not juſtify'd by Works, but by Faith only.
6. That good Works make not a good Man, but that a good Man does good Works: And that an evil Man does evil Works, yet the ſame evil Works, truly repented, make not an ill Man.
7. That Faith, Hope, and Charity are ſo linked together, that he who has one of 'em, has all, and that he that lacks one of 'em, lacks all.
8. That God is the Cauſe of Sin in this Senſe, that he withdraws his Grace from Man, and that Grace withdrawn, he cannot but ſin.
9. That 'tis a deviliſh Doctrine, to teach that by any actual Penance, Remiſſion of Sin is purchas'd.
10. That Auricular Confeſſion is not neceſſary to Salvation.
11. That there's no Purgatory.
12. That the holy Patriarchs were in Heaven before Chriſt's Paſſion.
13. That the Pope is Antichriſt, and that every Prieſt has as much Power as the Pope.

This Gentleman, who was little more than Three and Twenty Years of Age, was a very young Divine to determine upon theſe Points. And thus we ſee, either the Heat of his Temper, or his Friends in Germany, led him into Heterodoxy: For ſeveral of theſe Articles are plainly no better. Being requir'd to declare his Opinion, his Anſwer was, that he held the firſt Seven to be unqueſtionably true. The reſt were diſputable Points, however, he cou'd not retract them till he was better inform'd. After ſome Conference with him upon each Article, the Caſe was referr'd to the Divines and Canoniſts. Twelve of the moſt eminent in theſe Faculties, met together, and after two Days Debate, condemn'd all the Articles as Heretical, and contrary to the Faith of the Church. This Cenſure being ſubſcrib'd and deliver'd to the Biſhops, the young Gentleman was pronounc'd a Heretick, and put into the Hands of the ſecular Magiſtrate.

At this Meeting Gavin, Archbiſhop of Glaſgow, the Biſhops of Dunkell, Brechin, and Dumblane aſſiſted, together with Six Abbots and Priors, the Dean and Sub-Dean of Glaſgow, thoſe of Character in the Univerſity, not to mention ſome others. The ſame Day being condemn'd by the ſecular Judge, he was carry'd to the Place of Execution. Before the Fire was kindl'd, the Fryers preſs'd him to renounce his Errors, and pray to the bleſſed Virgin. Fryer Campbel, it ſeems, was particularly buſie: Hamilton thought him a very improper Perſon, and deſir'd him to deſiſt: But Campbel continuing to ſollicite him, Hamilton call'd him a wicked Man, told him, he had privately own'd the Articles, for which he now ſuffer'd, made his Appeal to our Saviour's Tribunal, and ſummon'd Campbel thither to anſwer his Behaviour. In ſhort, Hamilton ſuffer'd with great Conſtancy and Reſolution; and Campbel dying in a Frenzy within leſs than a Year, gave a Reputation to the Memory of the other (o).

This ſanguinary Rigour made a Noiſe all over the Kingdom, put People upon Inquiry into the Charge laid againſt Hamilton, and ſhook their Belief in ſome meaſure. For inſtance, his Tenets had made a conſiderable Impreſſion upon the Univerſity: Inſomuch that ſeveral Fryers began to preach againſt the Errors and Miſmanagement of the Clergy.

Fryer Seaton ſuſpected for Hereſy.

Alexander Seaton a Dominican, a Perſon of a competent Share of Learning, and Confeſſor to King James the Fifth, preach'd commonly at St. Andrews, the next Lent. In his Diſcourſes, he inſiſted much on theſe Points:

Some Singularities in his Doctrine.

" That the Law of God is the only Rule of " Righteouſneſs: That if God's Law be not vio" lated, there is no Sin committed: That it is " not in Man's Power to ſatisfy for Sin: And " that the Forgiveneſs of Sin is no otherways " purchas'd than by unfeign'd Repentance, and " true Faith, apprehending the Mercy of God " in Chriſt. Thus the Points are expreſs'd by Archbiſhop Spotſwood.

Here's Truth and Error blended together: The Two firſt Propoſitions are crude and indefenſible: They ſeem to releaſe the Conſcience from the Obligation of Humane Laws, and make the Authority of Church and State inſignificant.

To proceed, this Seaton deliver'd nothing upon the Subjects of Purgatory and Pilgrimage, nothing to recommend the Invocation of Saints: There was no Rhetorick ſpent upon Merits and Miracles. And thus declining to inlarge upon

the

(o) Spotſwood's Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, p. 62. & deinc.

the uſual matter of Sermons, he was ſuſpected to warp towards Hereſy. At the end of Lent, he went to Dundee, and was there acquainted, that one of his Order was appointed to confute his Doctrine in the Pulpit. Upon this, he return'd to St. Andrew's, preach'd upon the ſame Points, own'd his former Tenets, and ventur'd to add ſomething concerning the Qualifications requir'd in a Biſhop.

He is convented before the Biſhop.

For ſome unuſual Freedoms in this Sermon, he was brought before the Archbiſhop, and charg'd with affirming, that preaching was a neceſſary Requiſite in a Biſhop, that a Biſhop, who did not preach, was a dumb Dog; that ſuch a one did not feed the Flock, but his own Belly. To this the Fryer made an overlively and evaſive Anſwer: I ſhall give it in the Words of Archbiſhop Spotſwood. " He owns he had ſaid indeed, That St. Paul required a Biſhop to be a Teacher, and that Eſay called them Dumb Dogs who did not preach, but that he himſelf had affirm'd nothing. I declar'd, ſaid he, what the Spirit of God ſaid, with whom if Men offend not, they cannot juſtly offend with me: And thoſe that have reported my Speeches, muſt have been unlearned Aſſes, who cannot put a Difference betwixt that which St. Paul and Eſay ſpeaks, and that which of my ſelf I ſpeak. I never ſaid, that you, my Lord, and the other Biſhops who preach not are dumb Dogs, I only told what the Prophet, and the Apoſtle ſaid in that Caſe (p).

*(p)*Spotſwood p. 64.

The Archbiſhop had no great reaſon to be pleas'd with this Anſwer; however, knowing Seaton to be a Man of Stomach and Reſolution, he ſmother'd his Reſentment, in hopes to bring him into Diſfavour with the King. This was done without much Difficulty, becauſe the King had formerly taken check at the Fryer's Reproofs, who it ſeems had taken notice of the King's Licentiouſneſs with his uſual Liberty. But now perceiving the King's Countenance cool and gloomy, and apprehending ſome farther Marks of Diſpleaſure, he retir'd to Berwick. From hence he inform'd the King in a Letter of the Reaſon of his quitting the Court: That he was afraid of being delated for Hereſy, ſeiz'd by the Order of the Biſhops, and not permitted to make his Defence. However he offer'd to return, and juſtify his Conduct, provided he might have leave to plead for himſelf. From hence he runs out into an Invective againſt the Prelates, charges them with encroaching upon the Prince's Juriſdiction, and drawing Cauſes before them, which were foreign to their Courts: In the cloſe, he entreats his Highneſs not to be ſway'd any longer, by the Informations of the Biſhops, but to exert his Character, and maintain the Authority given him by God Almighty. And as for himſelf, he was ready to anſwer to any Charge, provided he had the Promiſe from his Highneſs of a ſafe Conduct.

Seaton goes off to Berwick, and from thence to London. He writes to the King of Scotland.

Seaton, receiving no Anſwer to this Letter, went forward to London, was Chaplain to Charles, Duke of Suffolk, who entertain'd him as long as he liv'd. Soon after this, one Henry Forreſt was delated for ſaying Mr. Patrick Hamilton dy'd a Martyr. But the Proof being not clear, Fryer Lainge was order'd to confeſs him. Lainge ask'd him what his Opinion was of Patrick Hamilton: The Man, being apprehenſive of no danger in the Queſtion, told him, he took him for a good Man, and that the Articles, for which he ſuffer'd, might eaſily be defended. This Confeſſion, diſcover'd by the Fryer, paſſed for ſufficient Evidence, and the poor Man was condemn'd to the Stake. As they were leading him to Execution, he cry'd out againſt the Treachery of his Confeſſor. He was of the Order of the Bennet and Collet, as they call'd it; and when they went about to degrade him, he bid them not only take their Orders from him, but their Baptiſm too. Notwithſtanding the Exceptionableneſs of this Expreſſion, he ſuffer'd with great Fortitude. While they were conſulting on the Manner of his Execution, one John Lindſey, who attended the Archbiſhop, adviſ'd to burn him in ſome Cellar. For the Smoak, ſays he, of Maſter Patrick Hamilton had infected all thoſe on whom it blew.

Henry Forreſt ſuffers for defending Patrick Hamilton.

Id. p. 65. Several others are proſecuted for Hereſy in Scotland.

The Proſecution ſtill going on, ſeveral were cited to appear before James Hay at Holyroodhouſe: This Hay was Biſhop of Roſs, and ſat as Commiſſary to the Archbiſhop of St. Andrew's. James Hamilton of Levingſton, Brother to Maſter Patrick, and Catharine his Siſter were ſummon'd with the reſt. The Gentleman, being privately adviſ'd by the King not to appear was condemn'd for Contumacy. His Siſter appear'd, and being queſtion'd upon the Point of Juſtification by Works, anſwer'd directly, that ſhe believ'd no Perſon cou'd he ſav'd by their Works. Maſter John Spence a Lawyer, who was one of the Committee upon Hamilton, held a long Diſcourſe with her upon that Subject. He inſiſted on the Diſtinctions of the Schoolmen, and dilated upon Works of Congruity and Works of Condignity. The Gentlewoman, being diſturb'd with the Length and Nicety of the Argument, broke out into this Expreſſion; Work here, Work there, what kind of Working is all this? I know perfectly, that no Works can ſave me, but the Works of Chriſt my Saviour. The King, who was preſent, laugh'd heartily at the Anſwer: And taking the Lady aſide, prevail'd with her to recant her Opinions. Her Example, it ſeems, had an Influence upon ſeveral others, who abjur'd at the ſame time.

Miſtreſs Catharine Hamilton her Anſwer.

Ibid. p. 66.

To return to England: The King reſolving to preſs the Divorce, and drive it to a Point, ſent Doctor Knight, Secretary of State, to Rome, with ſome Inſtructions to prepare the Pope, to pitch upon the beſt Method, and employ the propereſt Perſons to work by. At that time three Brothers of the Family of Caſſaley were entertain'd as the King's Agents in Italy, both in Rome, in Venice, and in other Places. Sir Gregory Caſſaley was then his Ordinary Ambaſſador at Rome. To this Gentleman the firſt Diſpatch was directed by Cardinal Wolſey: 'Tis dated December the 5th 1527. Some part of this Letter I have mention'd already: And to come to the remaining part, " Sir Gregory Caſſaley was to apply immediately to the Pope, and deſire his Holyneſs, that without communicating the matter to any Perſon, he wou'd ſign a Commiſſion for the Hearing the Cauſe in England. By this Inſtrument, the Cardinal was empower'd to name what Aſſiſtants he thought fit to join in the Commiſſion; and to proceed in the matter purſuant to ſome Inſtructions, which were ſent for the Pope to ſign. A Diſpenſation was alſo ſent in due form. And if theſe two Inſtruments were paſs'd and executed, Sir Gregory might aſſure the Pope, that as the King had remitted a vaſt Sum to the French King for paying his Army in Italy; ſo he wou'd ſpare no Pains nor Treaſure, to oblige the Court of Rome, but make War upon the Emperor in Flanders with the force of his Kingdom, till he brought him to the Terms of enlarging the Pope, and reſtoring the Church to its former Power and Dignity. And in caſe the Pope was already ſet at Liberty, and had made an

Cardinal Wolſey ſends Inſtructions to the King's Agents at Rome concerning the Divorce.

“Agreement with the Emperor, he was then to ſuggeſt what little Reaſon he had to truſt that Prince: That Prince, who had broke his Faith ſo often, and made it his Buſineſs to depreſs the Intereſt of the Church. And if the Pope ſhou'd make an Objection againſt Wolſey: If he ſhou'd mention his being the King's Subject, and Prime Miniſter: That upon theſe Conſiderations there lay Preſumptions againſt his Indifferency: And that 'twas not prudential to grant a Commiſſion to this Cardinal to try his Maſter's Cauſe. If this Exception was made, Caſſaley was by all means to get over it, and aſſure the Pope, that Wolſey wou'd proceed in the Cauſe with all the Fairneſs and Sincerity imaginable. But after all, if the Pope was not to be remov'd, nor prevail'd with to ſign the Commiſſion for Wolſey, Caſſaley's next ſtep was to propoſe Staphileus, Dean of the Rota, who was then in England: And if his Holyneſs happen'd to mention any other Foreigners, Caſſaley was order'd to refuſe the Propoſal. He was alſo to acquaint the Pope, that the King wou'd interpret a Delay to a Denial: And if his Holyneſs inclin'd to conſult any of the Cardinals upon the Point, he was to diſſuade him as much as might be: But if the Pope wou'd needs take Advice, then Caſſaley was to addreſs theſe Cardinals, to inform them of the Juſtice of the King's Cauſe, and tye them to his Intereſt, by the Promiſe of an Acknowledgment.

“With this Diſpatch, Letters were ſent to Cardinal Pucci, Sanctorum Quatuor, and the other Cardinals, to be made uſe of, as occaſion requir'd. And becauſe Money was thought very welcome to Perſons under Dureſs, 10000 Ducats were ſent to Venice, to be diſtributed as Sir Gregory thought fit. He was likewiſe commiſſion'd to make farther Promiſes, if he thought it neceſſary. And particular Inſtructions were given to engage the Cardinal Datary (q).

(q) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 9.

Dec. 9. 1527.

Secretary Knight had the ſame Inſtructions with Sir Gregory Caſſaley: They were order'd to proceed by Concert, and each of 'em to do their utmoſt. The Pope had now made his Eſcape out the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and was got to Orvietto. Here about the end of December, the Secretary and the Ambaſſador Caſſaley waited upon his Holyneſs, and congratulated his Liberty in the Name of the King and Cardinal. And here inſiſting upon the Buſineſs they had in charge, the Pope ſeem'd diſpos'd to give the King Satisfaction. And when they deſir'd an Authority to try the Cauſe in England, he did not refuſe the Expedient: But told 'em withal, that being not practis'd in the Form of drawing up Commiſſions, he wou'd conſult the Cardinal Sanctorum Quatuor, and quickly acquaint them with his Reſolution.

Upon this, the King's Agents, perceiving how much the Pope depended upon the Cardinal Sanctorum's Advice, went immediatly to him, deliver'd the King's Letters, requeſted his Favour, and gave him an Expectation of being gratify'd.

Cardinal Pucci procures a Commiſſion to try the Cauſe, and a Diſpenſation from the Pope.

After this preparatory Diſcourſe, they produc'd the Commiſſion. He excepted againſt ſeveral Clauſes in this Inſtrument, and pretended it could not paſs in that Form, without great Reflection upon the King, the Pope, and the Cardinal of York. Upon this, they deſir'd him to draw the Minutes of a new Form, which he did accordingly. This Inſtrument being engroſs'd, the Pope told them, that when he was Priſoner in the Caſtle of St. Angelo, the General of the Obſervants in Spain requir'd him from the Emperor, not to paſs any Act that might be preparative to a Divorce between the King and Queen, or any ways relate to that Buſineſs. This Religious likewiſe deſir'd an Inhibition, that the Cauſe ſhou'd not be try'd before any Judge in the King's Dominions. The Pope added, that tho' he moved with more freedom than formerly, yet he cou'd not look upon himſelf as perfectly enlarg'd, as long as the Allemains and the Spaniards were ſo powerful in Italy. And he was perfectly of Opinion, that by granting this Commiſſion, he muſt come to an open Rupture with the Emperor, without any hopes of cloſing the Breach. However, he wou'd rather run the utmoſt Risk, and venture upon apparent Ruin, than that the King or the Cardinal, ſhou'd have any Colour to charge him with Ingratitude. Upon this, he puts the Commiſſion and the Diſpenſation ſign'd into Secretary Knight's Hands: Deſiring them both at the ſame time to beg the King to have a little Patience, to continue his former Friendſhip, and not precipitate him beyond Recovery: Which wou'd certainly follow, if his Majeſty ſhou'd act upon the Inſtruments, and begin the Proceſs upon receiving the Commiſſion.

The Pope deſires the King not to make uſe of theſe Authorities for ſome time.

His Holyneſs deſired a little time, to prevent Miſconſtruction, and preſerve the Character of a Man of Integrity. He told them, Lautretch the French General wou'd quickly march up to him: That at the Arrival of the French Forces, he ſhou'd have an Opportunity of ſaving Appearances, and ſatisfying the King; for then he deſign'd to acquaint Mr. de Lautretch, that the Engliſh Ambaſſador had preſs'd for the Commiſſion abovemention'd: And that he refus'd to grant it, in regard of his Promiſe to the Emperor's Agent: That upon this, Monſieur de Lautretch oblig'd him to yield; repreſenting that ſuch a Commiſſion was nothing more than bare Juſtice. By this Compulſion, as 'twere, he hop'd to ſcreen himſelf from Cenſure; for under theſe Circumſtances, it wou'd not appear he diſoblig'd the Emperor out of Inclination; but that being preſs'd upon the point of Juſtice, and by ſuch powerful Sollicitors, he cou'd do no leſs than give way. And at laſt, he promiſes to diſpatch another Commiſſion to the King of England, bearing Date after the time he had been over-aw'd by Lautretch's Army. To conclude, he intreats the King wou'd let the matter reſt, till this Inſtrument came to him, which he ſuppos'd wou'd ſhortly happen. However, Secretary Knight, perceiving the Pope's Fineſs, and not willing to truſt to Uncertainties, made haſte for England, and brought the Commiſſion and Diſpenſation along with him (r).

His Reaſons for this Requeſt.

(r) Doctor Knight's Letter to Cardinal Wolſey. See Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10. Jan. 1. 1528. The Year at Rome began the firſt of January.

To proceed: Tho' the Form of the Commiſſion was ſomewhat alter'd by the Cardinal Quatuor Sanctorum, yet the Diſpenſation was ingroſs'd, and ſign'd upon the Minutes drawn up in England. And provided there happen'd to be any Omiſſion, the Pope was willing to alter it in an Inſtrument of the ſame Date. The Purport of it was to give the King the Liberty of marrying again, after the Divorce. Thus Secretary Knight repreſents the matter to the King, in a Letter of the ſame Date with that of the Cardinal abovemention'd. And here he acquaints the King how powerful the Imperialiſts were in Italy; that they took Towns and Caſtles almoſt every Day, and committed great Ravage in the Neighbourhood of Rome: That the French General lay ſtill at Bononia, and that his Expedition had not ſo promiſing a face, as ſome pretended. In ſhort, that the Pope was in a manner block'd up, and in

The Purport of the Diſpenſation.

Cotton. Libr. ibid.

The Difficulty of the Pope's Circumſtances.

in great Perplexity: And that if his Majeſty ſhou'd act upon the Commiſſion in this Juncture, his Holyneſs wou'd be utterly undone: And that at preſent he was endeavouring to perſuade the French General to march towards Rome.

Ibid.

The Commiſſion brought over by Gambara.

Secretary Knight falling under ill Health, and not being in a Condition to travel, ſent the Protonotary Gambara with the Commiſſion and Diſpenſation to England, and follow'd in eaſy Journeys. The Perſons delegated to try the Cauſe by a Commiſſion, were the Cardinals Campegio and Wolſey. And as to the Powers, it may not be improper to examine them in a word or two. The Cardinals abovemention'd are ſtyl'd the Pope's Legates de Latere (ſ); and have a full Authority granted them, to hear and determine the Cauſe in a ſummary way, without going through all the Lengths and Forms of Law: And theſe Powers are given them, with a non obſtante to all General Councils, Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, and Decrees whatſoever to the contrary. And to give farther Strength to this Inſtrument, the Pope ſign'd a Pollicitation, about a Month after, to confirm the Sentence of the Legates, provided they purſu'd the Tenour of their Commiſſion: To which he added a Proteſtation, never to retract what was done, upon any Colour, Motive, or Compulſion whatever (t).

(ſ) See Records N. 7.

The Pope not abſolutely ty'd by the Sentence of the Delegates.

'Tis ſaid the Pope reſign'd himſelf entirely to the Delegates Diſcretion; and that, let them proceed as they thought fit in England, He ſhou'd confirm their Sentence (u). But notwithſtanding the Categorical Strain of the Commiſſion, which was no more than a cuſtomary Form, 'tis pretty evident from John Caſſaley's Letter to Cardinal Wolſey, that the Pope did not deliver up his Authority to the Cardinal Delegates without Reſervation, nor put himſelf abſolutely in their Power (w). For, in his Diſcourſe with John Caſſaley, he tells him, that if the King and Wolſey had a mind to diſmiſs Campegio, upon pretence that they deſign'd to proceed no farther in the Hearing: In this caſe, ſays he, let them bring it to what Iſſue they pleaſe, ſuppoſing they do not make uſe of my Authority to do any thing unjuſt. And after ſome other Diſcourſe, he declares himſelf ready to confirm the Legates Sentence, provided the Allegations were prov'd in Court. And whereas 'tis affirm'd, the Pope confeſs'd a Treaty on foot between the Emperor and himſelf, but deny'd, that he had bound himſelf by it as to the King's Buſineſs: This Letter on the contrary makes him ſay, that he knew nothing of the matter, or had any concern in it (x).

The Pope privately ſuggeſts an Expedient to the King.

The Pope, notwithſtanding the Authorities conſign'd into the King's Hands, was willing, as has been obſerv'd, to lie under Covert. To this purpoſe, he orders Sir Gregory Caſſaley to ſend Directions to the Engliſh Court, touching the Management of the matter. By this Letter we are inform'd, that the Pope was willing to comply with the King's Deſire: And that the Proceedings might be more unexceptionable, his Holyneſs had conſulted the Cardinals Quatuor Sanctorum and Simonetta; that in their Opinion, the ſafeſt Method wou'd be, to keep the Powers, tranſmitted from Rome to England, ſecret: That the King's beſt way wou'd be, to refer the Deciſion to the Cardinal of York, who might juſtify his Proceedings, either upon the ſcore of the Commiſſion, ſent by Secretary Knight, or elſe by virtue of his Legantine Character. And here the King, being moſt acquainted with the Condition of his own Conſcience, muſt be the beſt Caſuiſt in that reſpect. If therefore his Highneſs is ſatisfy'd in the Matter, let him order the Cardinal of York to proceed to Sentence: Let him marry another Wife; and then apply to the Conclave to diſpatch a Legate, to confirm the matter. For, as the Letter goes on, it was clearly the Opinion of the Cardinals Sanctorum and Simonetta, that if the Queen was ſummon'd into the Court, ſhe wou'd only proteſt againſt the Indifferency of the Place and Judges: Upon which, the Emperor wou'd preſs the Pope for an Inhibition to ſtop the Cauſe. By virtue of which Inſtrument, the King wou'd be diſabled from marrying elſewhere: And in caſe he ſhou'd break through the Order, the Iſſue wou'd be illegitimate: At leaſt, till Judgment was given on his Highneſs's ſide. And farther, the Imperialiſts wou'd inſiſt upon a Commiſſion to try the Cauſe at Rome. Now, if the Pope was preſs'd upon theſe Points, he cou'd neither deny the one Inſtrument, nor the other, unleſs undue Methods, and meer Violence was made uſe of in the Demand. On the other hand, if the King proceeds quickly to a ſecond Marriage, the Emperor can't reaſonably inſiſt upon the Inſtruments abovemention'd: And, if he does, the Pope can fairly deny him. And in caſe the Emperor objects againſt Wolſey and the other Cardinal, and moves for an Avocation of the Cauſe to Rome: Then, if there's no way to put by this Demand, the Pope will be very expeditious in the Hearing, make a Deciſion to the King's Satisfaction, and proceed in ſuch a manner, that neither Spaniard, nor German ſhall except againſt it.

This Expedient the Pope propos'd, as the moſt practicable and ſecure; deſires the King to manage by it, but not to diſcover the Author of the Intimation (y).

Now to ſet this whole Matter in a fuller light, I ſhall acquaint the Reader with the Inſtructions written with the King's own Hand, upon which Sir Francis Bryan and Mr. Vannes were to take their Meaſures, and purſue their Negotiation. The Reader ſhall have them in Harpsfield's Words, who extracted them from original Letters of the King and Cardinal.

Inſtructions given to Sir Francis Bryan and Mr. Vannes, the King's Agents at Rome, touching the Power and Diſpoſition of that Court.

“ Theſe Agents, ſays he, were required perfectly and ſubſtantially to inſtruct themſelves, againſt the coming of Secretary Knight, of certain Queſtions, by the Learning, Experience, and Knowledge of the beſt Advocates they cou'd get in the Court of Rome, to be retain'd of the King's Council, and to be of his Grace's Part made ſure, by ſecret Rewards, Pact, and Convention, that afterwards they ſhou'd not be allured and drawn to the adverſe Part. The Queſtions were propos'd in form following, whereof I ſhall ſhift no part of the King's own Words; viz.

Whether if the Queen, ſays the King, for the great and manifold Effects that may enſue thereof, can be mov'd and induc'd to take Vow of Chaſtity, and enter into Religion; The Pope's Holyneſs may; ex plenitudine poteſtatis, diſpenſe with the King's Highneſs, to proceed thereupon ad duas nuptias, and the Children to be procreat in the ſame, to be Legitime. And if it be a thing that the Pope per caſe may not do, (ſtanding ſuch Laws as be already written, both Divine and Humane, and uſing his ordinary Power) yet whether his Holyneſs may do it of his mere and abſolute Power, as a thing, that the ſame may diſpenſe in above the Law; muſt ſecretly and perfectly be underſtood and known, and what Precedent has been ſeen of like matter, or how the Court of Rome ſhall define and determine, or what it doth uſe or may do therein; ſo that it may perfectly and aſſuredly appear, that no Exception, no Scruple, Queſtion, or Doubt can or may be found, or alledg'd hereafter in any thing, that may or ſhall be affirm'd

(t) Ld. Herbert, p. 221.

(u) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 59.

(w) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

(x) Ibid. & Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 59. and Collections Book 2. p. 43, 44, 45.

(y) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

“Agreement with the Emperor, he was then to ſuggeſt what little Reaſon he had to truſt that Prince: That Prince, who had broke his Faith ſo often, and made it his Buſineſs to depreſs the Intereſt of the Church. And if the Pope ſhou'd make an Objection againſt Wolſey: If he ſhou'd mention his being the King's Subject, and Prime Miniſter: That upon theſe Conſiderations there lay Preſumptions againſt his Indifferency: And that 'twas not prudential to grant a Commiſſion to this Cardinal to try his Maſter's Cauſe. If this Exception was made, Caſſaley was by all means to get over it, and aſſure the Pope, that Wolſey wou'd proceed in the Cauſe with all the Fairneſs and Sincerity imaginable. But after all, if the Pope was not to be remov'd, nor prevail'd with to ſign the Commiſſion for Wolſey, Caſſaley's next ſtep was to propoſe Staphileus, Dean of the Rota, who was then in England: And if his Holyneſs happen'd to mention any other Foreigners, Caſſaley was order'd to refuſe the Propoſal. He was alſo to acquaint the Pope, that the King wou'd interpret a Delay to a Denial: And if his Holyneſs inclin'd to conſult any of the Cardinals upon the Point, he was to diſſuade him as much as might be: But if the Pope wou'd needs take Advice, then Caſſaley was to addreſs theſe Cardinals, to inform them of the Juſtice of the King's Cauſe, and tye them to his Intereſt, by the Promiſe of an Acknowledgment.

“With this Diſpatch, Letters were ſent to Cardinal Pucci, Sanctorum Quatuor, and the other Cardinals, to be made uſe of, as occaſion requir'd. And becauſe Money was thought very welcome to Perſons under Dureſs, 10000 Ducats were ſent to Venice, to be diſtributed as Sir Gregory thought fit. He was likewiſe commiſſion'd to make farther Promiſes, if he thought it neceſſary. And particular Inſtructions were given to engage the Cardinal Datary (q).

(q) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 9.

Dec. 9. 1527.

Secretary Knight had the ſame Inſtructions with Sir Gregory Caſſaley: They were order'd to proceed by Concert, and each of 'em to do their utmoſt. The Pope had now made his Eſcape out the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and was got to Orvietto. Here about the end of December, the Secretary and the Ambaſſador Caſſaley waited upon his Holyneſs, and congratulated his Liberty in the Name of the King and Cardinal. And here inſiſting upon the Buſineſs they had in charge, the Pope ſeem'd diſpos'd to give the King Satisfaction. And when they deſir'd an Authority to try the Cauſe in England, he did not refuſe the Expedient: But told 'em withal, that being not practis'd in the Form of drawing up Commiſſions, he wou'd conſult the Cardinal Sanctorum Quatuor, and quickly acquaint them with his Reſolution.

Upon this, the King's Agents, perceiving how much the Pope depended upon the Cardinal Sanctorum's Advice, went immediatly to him, deliver'd the King's Letters, requeſted his Favour, and gave him an Expectation of being gratify'd.

Cardinal Pucci procures a Commiſſion to try the Cauſe, and a Diſpenſation from the Pope.

After this preparatory Diſcourſe, they produc'd the Commiſſion. He excepted againſt ſeveral Clauſes in this Inſtrument, and pretended it could not paſs in that Form, without great Reflection upon the King, the Pope, and the Cardinal of York. Upon this, they deſir'd him to draw the Minutes of a new Form, which he did accordingly. This Inſtrument being engroſs'd, the Pope told them, that when he was Priſoner in the Caſtle of St. Angelo, the General of the Obſervants in Spain requir'd him from the Emperor, not to paſs any Act that might be preparative to a Divorce between the King and Queen, or any ways relate to that Buſineſs. This Religious likewiſe deſir'd an Inhibition, that the Cauſe ſhou'd not be try'd before any Judge in the King's Dominions. The Pope added, that tho' he moved with more freedom than formerly, yet he cou'd not look upon himſelf as perfectly enlarg'd, as long as the Allemains and the Spaniards were ſo powerful in Italy. And he was perfectly of Opinion, that by granting this Commiſſion, he muſt come to an open Rupture with the Emperor, without any hopes of cloſing the Breach. However, he wou'd rather run the utmoſt Risk, and venture upon apparent Ruin, than that the King or the Cardinal, ſhou'd have any Colour to charge him with Ingratitude. Upon this, he puts the Commiſſion and the Diſpenſation ſign'd into Secretary Knight's Hands: Deſiring them both at the ſame time to beg the King to have a little Patience, to continue his former Friendſhip, and not precipitate him beyond Recovery: Which wou'd certainly follow, if his Majeſty ſhou'd act upon the Inſtruments, and begin the Proceſs upon receiving the Commiſſion.

The Pope deſires the King not to make uſe of theſe Authorities for ſome time.

His Holyneſs deſired a little time, to prevent Miſconſtruction, and preſerve the Character of a Man of Integrity. He told them, Lautretch the French General wou'd quickly march up to him: That at the Arrival of the French Forces, he ſhou'd have an Opportunity of ſaving Appearances, and ſatisfying the King; for then he deſign'd to acquaint Mr. de Lautretch, that the Engliſh Ambaſſador had preſs'd for the Commiſſion abovemention'd: And that he refus'd to grant it, in regard of his Promiſe to the Emperor's Agent: That upon this, Monſieur de Lautretch oblig'd him to yield; repreſenting that ſuch a Commiſſion was nothing more than bare Juſtice. By this Compulſion, as 'twere, he hop'd to ſcreen himſelf from Cenſure; for under theſe Circumſtances, it wou'd not appear he diſoblig'd the Emperor out of Inclination; but that being preſs'd upon the point of Juſtice, and by ſuch powerful Sollicitors, he cou'd do no leſs than give way. And at laſt, he promiſes to diſpatch another Commiſſion to the King of England, bearing Date after the time he had been over-aw'd by Lautretch's Army. To conclude, he intreats the King wou'd let the matter reſt, till this Inſtrument came to him, which he ſuppos'd wou'd ſhortly happen. However, Secretary Knight, perceiving the Pope's Fineſs, and not willing to truſt to Uncertainties, made haſte for England, and brought the Commiſſion and Diſpenſation along with him (r).

His Reaſons for this Requeſt.

(r) Doctor Knight's Letter to Cardinal Wolſey. See Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

Jan. 1. 1528. The Year at Rome began the firſt of January.

To proceed: Tho' the Form of the Commiſſion was ſomewhat alter'd by the Cardinal Quatuor Sanctorum, yet the Diſpenſation was ingroſs'd, and ſign'd upon the Minutes drawn up in England. And provided there happen'd to be any Omiſſion, the Pope was willing to alter it in an Inſtrument of the ſame Date. The Purport of it was to give the King the Liberty of marrying again, after the Divorce. Thus Secretary Knight repreſents the matter to the King, in a Letter of the ſame Date with that of the Cardinal abovemention'd. And here he acquaints the King how powerful the Imperialiſts were in Italy; that they took Towns and Caſtles almoſt every Day, and committed great Ravage in the Neighbourhood of Rome: That the French General lay ſtill at Bononia, and that his Expedition had not ſo promiſing a face, as ſome pretended. In ſhort, that the Pope was in a manner block'd up, and in

The Purport of the Diſpenſation.

Cotton. Libr. ibid.

The Difficulty of the Pope's Circumſtances.

in great Perplexity: And that if his Majeſty ſhou'd act upon the Commiſſion in this Juncture, his Holyneſs wou'd be utterly undone: And that at preſent he was endeavouring to perſuade the French General to march towards Rome.

Ibid.

The Commiſſion brought over by Gambara.

Secretary Knight falling under ill Health, and not being in a Condition to travel, ſent the Prothonotary Gambara with the Commiſſion and Diſpenſation to England, and follow'd in eaſy Journeys. The Perſons delegated to try the Cauſe by a Commiſſion, were the Cardinals Campegio and Wolſey. And as to the Powers, it may not be improper to examine them in a word or two. The Cardinals abovemention'd are ſtyl'd the Pope's Legates de Latere (ſ); and have a full Authority granted them, to hear and determine the Cauſe in a ſummary way, without going through all the Lengths and Forms of Law: And theſe Powers are given them, with a non obſtante to all General Councils, Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, and Decrees whatſoever to the contrary. And to give farther Strength to this Inſtrument, the Pope ſign'd a Pollicitation, about a Month after, to confirm the Sentence of the Legates, provided they purſu'd the Tenour of their Commiſſion: To which he added a Proteſtation, never to retract what was done, upon any Colour, Motive, or Compulſion whatever (t).

(ſ) See Records N. 7.

(t) Ld. Herbert, p. 221.

The Pope not abſolutely ty'd by the Sentence of the Delegates.

'Tis ſaid the Pope reſign'd himſelf entirely to the Delegates Diſcretion; and that, let them proceed as they thought fit in England, He ſhou'd confirm their Sentence (u). But notwithſtanding the Categorical Strain of the Commiſſion, which was no more than a cuſtomary Form, 'tis pretty evident from John Caſſaley's Letter to Cardinal Wolſey, that the Pope did not deliver up his Authority to the Cardinal Delegates without Reſervation, nor put himſelf abſolutely in their Power (w). For, in his Diſcourſe with John Caſſaley, he tells him, that if the King and Wolſey had a mind to diſmiſs Campegio, upon pretence that they deſign'd to proceed no farther in the Hearing: In this caſe, ſays he, let them bring it to what Iſſue they pleaſe, ſuppoſing they do not make uſe of my Authority to do any thing unjuſt. And after ſome other Diſcourſe, he declares himſelf ready to confirm the Legates Sentence, provided the Allegations were prov'd in Court. And whereas 'tis affirm'd, the Pope confeſs'd a Treaty on foot between the Emperor and himſelf, but deny'd, that he had bound himſelf by it as to the King's Buſineſs: This Letter on the contrary makes him ſay, that he knew nothing of the matter, or had any concern in it (x).

(u) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 59.

(w) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

(x) Ibid. & Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 59. and Collections Book 2. p. 43, 44, 45.

The Pope privately ſuggeſts an Expedient to the King.

The Pope, notwithſtanding the Authorities conſign'd into the King's Hands, was willing, as has been obſerv'd, to lie under Covert. To this purpoſe, he orders Sir Gregory Caſſaley to ſend Directions to the Engliſh Court, touching the Management of the matter. By this Letter we are inform'd, that the Pope was willing to comply with the King's Deſire: And that the Proceedings might be more unexceptionable, his Holyneſs had conſulted the Cardinals Quatuor Sanctorum and Simonetta; that in their Opinion, the ſafeſt Method wou'd be, to keep the Powers, tranſmitted from Rome to England, ſecret: That the King's beſt way wou'd be, to refer the Deciſion to the Cardinal of York, who might juſtify his Proceedings, either upon the ſcore of the Commiſſion, ſent by Secretary Knight, or elſe by virtue of his Legantine Character. And here the King, being moſt acquainted with the Condition of his own Conſcience, muſt be the beſt Caſuiſt in that reſpect. If therefore his Highneſs is ſatisfy'd in the Matter, let him order the Cardinal of York to proceed to Sentence: Let him marry another Wife; and then apply to the Conclave to diſpatch a Legate, to confirm the matter. For, as the Letter goes on, it was clearly the Opinion of the Cardinals Sanctorum and Simonetta, that if the Queen was ſummon'd into the Court, ſhe wou'd only proteſt againſt the Indifferency of the Place and Judges: Upon which, the Emperor wou'd preſs the Pope for an Inhibition to ſtop the Cauſe. By virtue of which Inſtrument, the King wou'd be diſabled from marrying elſewhere: And in caſe he ſhou'd break through the Order, the Iſſue wou'd be illegitimate: At leaſt, till Judgment was given on his Highneſs's ſide. And farther, the Imperialiſts wou'd inſiſt upon a Commiſſion to try the Cauſe at Rome. Now, if the Pope was preſs'd upon theſe Points, he cou'd neither deny the one Inſtrument, nor the other, unleſs undue Methods, and mere Violence was made uſe of in the Demand. On the other hand, if the King proceeds quickly to a ſecond Marriage, the Emperor can't reaſonably inſiſt upon the Inſtruments abovemention'd: And, if he does, the Pope can fairly deny him. And in caſe the Emperor objects againſt Wolſey and the other Cardinal, and moves for an Avocation of the Cauſe to Rome: Then, if there's no way to put by this Demand, the Pope will be very expeditious in the Hearing, make a Deciſion to the King's Satisfaction, and proceed in ſuch a manner, that neither Spaniard, nor German ſhall except againſt it.

This Expedient the Pope propos'd, as the moſt practicable and ſecure; deſires the King to manage by it, but not to diſcover the Author of the Intimation (y).

(y) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

Now to ſet this whole Matter in a fuller light, I ſhall acquaint the Reader with the Inſtructions written with the King's own Hand, upon which Sir Francis Bryan and Mr. Vannes were to take their Meaſures, and purſue their Negotiation. The Reader ſhall have them in Harpsfield's Words, who extracted them from original Letters of the King and Cardinal.

Inſtructions given to Sir Francis Bryan and Mr. Vannes, the King's Agents at Rome, touching the Power and Diſpoſition of that Court.

“ Theſe Agents, ſays he, were required per“ fectly and ſubſtantially to inſtruct themſelves, “ againſt the coming of Secretary Knight, of cer“ tain Queſtions, by the Learning, Experience,
“ and Knowledge of the beſt Advocates they “ cou'd get in the Court of Rome, to be retain'd
“ of the King's Council, and to be of his Grace's “ Part made ſure, by ſecret Rewards, Pact, and “ Convention, that afterwards they ſhou'd not “ be allured and drawn to the adverſe Part.
“ The Queſtions were propos'd in form follow“ ing, whereof I ſhall ſhift no part of the King's “ own Words; viz.

Whether if the Queen, ſays the King, for the great and manifold Effects that may enſue thereof, can be mov'd and induc'd to take Vow of Chaſtity, and enter into Religion; The Pope's Holyneſs may; ex plenitudine poteſtatis, diſpenſe with the King's Highneſs, to proceed thereupon ad duas nuptias, and the Children to be procreat in the ſame, to be Legitime. And if it be a thing that the Pope per caſe may not do, (ſtanding ſuch Laws as be already written, both Divine and Humane, and uſing his ordinary Power) yet whether his Holyneſs may do it of his mere and abſolute Power, as a thing, that the ſame may diſpenſe in above the Law; muſt ſecretly and perfectly be underſtood and known, and what Precedent has been ſeen of like matter, or how the Court of Rome ſhall define and determine, or what it doth uſe or may do therein; ſo that it may perfectly and aſſuredly appear, that no Exception, no Scruple, Queſtion, or Doubt can or may be found, or alledg'd hereafter in any thing, that may or ſhall be af- firm'd to be the Pope's Power touching that Matter. Semblably, foraſmuch that 'tis like that the Queen ſhall make marvellous Difficulty to enter into Religion, or take Vow of Chaſtity: But that to induce her thereunto, there muſt be Ways and Means of high Policy us'd, and all things poſſibly devis'd to encourage her to the ſame: Wherein per caſe, ſhe ſhall reſolve, that in no ways ſhe will condeſcend ſo to do, unleſs the King's Highneſs alſo do the like for his Part. The King's ſaid Orators ſhall therefore in like ways, inſtruct themſelves by their ſecret, learn'd Council in the Court of Rome, if for ſo great a Benefit to enſue to the King's Succeſſion, Realm, and Subjects, with the Quiet of his Conſcience, his Grace ſhou'd promiſe to enter Religion, or make Vow of Chaſtity for his part, only thereby to induce the Queen thereto: Whether in that caſe the Pope's Holyneſs may diſpenſe with the King's Highneſs's Promiſe, Oath, or Vow, diſcharging his Grace clearly of the ſame, and thereupon to proceed ad ſecunda Vota cum legitimatione prolis, as is aforeſaid. Farthermore, to provide ſurely for all Events, as well propter conceptum Odium, as for the Danger that may enſue to the King's Perſon, by Continuance of his Grace in the Queen's Company, (from whoſe Bed he is utterly reſolv'd to abſtain) if it ſhall be found and appear aſſuredly, that the Pope may no ways diſpenſe with the King to proceed ad ſecunda Vota, the Queen being alive in Religion, but that ſhe being in Religion, or without, ſhall ſtill be reputed his Wiſe. Then ſhall the King's ſaid Orators perfectly enquire and inſearch, whether the Pope's Holyneſs may diſpenſe with his Grace upon the great Conſiderations that reſt herein, to have Duas Uxores, and that the Children of the ſaid ſecond Matrimony, ſhall be as well legitimate, as thoſe of the Firſt: Wherein ſome great Reaſons and Precedents, eſpecially of the Old Teſtament appear. Thus far the King's Words; Harpsfield follows.

“ And they are will'd to adviſe the King's “ Highneſs upon the great Conſiderations that “ reſt herein, and the Cardinal of York, by Poſt “ and in Cyphers, what they might know and “ underſtand in all and ſingular the Premiſſes; “ foreſeeing always principally and above all “ things, that in making any privy Search, “ conducting of Advocates or learn'd Council, “ offering of Rewards, or Entertainment or otherwiſe, they ſhou'd uſe ſuch high Circumſpection, as the King's Cauſe were not thereby “ publiſh'd or known, to the Hindrance, Slander, or Impeachment of his Grace's Intent, “ uſing and proponing always the King's Caſe, “ as it were another Man's (a).

(a) Nicholas Harpsfield's MS. in New College Library in Oxford.

Thus we ſee the Matter the Agents were to go upon, the Perſons they were to conſult, and the Secreſie of the Inquiry. By theſe Inſtructions they were only to conſult the moſt learn'd Advocates, to put the Caſe under a Diſguiſe, and not as if the King was concern'd in it. And thus, as far as it appears, they were underhand to feel the Pope's Pulſe, and inform themſelves of the Extent of his Power, without going openly to work, or propoſing the Queſtions to him (b).

(b) See Biſhop Burnet, pt. 1. p. 60.

Jan. 1528.

But it ſeems by the Sequel, and what has been already obſerv'd, they found the Conclave diſpos'd to Compliance, for which the King gives them Thanks in a Letter to the College of Cardinals (c).

(c) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 10. Jan. 1528.

Cardinal Wolſey's Letter to the King's Agents at Rome, to get the Marriage null.

However, Wolſey was anxious about the Event, as appears by his Letter to John Caſſaley, “ in which, beſides preſſing the Affair upon ſome “ Reaſons already mention'd, he inſiſts ſtrongly upon the Benefit of the King's Friendſhip “ to the See of Rome: That provided the Pope “ gives his Highneſs Satisfaction in this Matter, “ he may depend not only on his ſingle Aſſiſtance, but that the King will make it his Endeavour to draw all his Allies into the ſame “ Intereſt. On the other hand, if his Majeſty “ ſhou'd diſ-engage from his Holyneſs, Things “ wou'd have a contrary Iſſue; and ſeveral “ Princes of Europe wou'd be carry'd off with “ him. And to ſpeak clearly, ſays the Cardinal, “ I can't ſee any State or Country in which his “ Holyneſs may better confide, than in his Majeſty; nor any Sovereign who is more likely “ to recover the Apoſtolical See to its ancient “ Dignity: Whereas, without his Aſſiſtance, nothing next to a Miracle, can ſupport its Authority. And after ſome farther Reaſoning upon this Head, “ He deſires the Pope wou'd “ not look on him as a Perſon pre-engag'd by “ Intereſt or Inclination, to ſollicite the King's “ Cauſe, but that he is wholly govern'd by the “ Motives of Juſtice, and ſhou'd recommend the “ Affair with the ſame Earneſtneſs, tho' he had “ never ſeen England, nor had any Engagements “ there (d).

(d) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 10.

Feb. 10. 1528.

He writes to the Pope upon the ſame Buſineſs.

Not long after, he wrote to the Pope himſelf upon the ſame Subject: And here he ſeems to lay out all his Arguments and Elocution, to make an Impreſſion. “ He acquaints his Holyneſs, how much he was perplex'd about the “ Affair of the Divorce: That he purſu'd the “ procuring it, with all the Earneſtneſs imaginable: That if the Safety of the King and “ Kingdom, the Repoſe of Europe, the Apoſtolical Authority, and his own Life and Soul lay “ all at Stake, he cou'd not ſollicite with more “ Application. He throws himſelf at the Pope's “ Feet, begs him, if he has any favourable “ Thoughts of him, if he thinks him a good “ Cardinal or an honeſt Man; if he believes him “ to have any Regard to Juſtice or Conſcience, “ to have any thing of good Faith or Reality in “ his Profeſſions of Duty to the Apoſtolick See; “ In ſhort, if he believes him to have any Regard for his own Salvation, he intreats him “ to conſider his Application, and anſwer the “ King's Requeſts with all Expedition; which “ were they not founded upon Reaſon and Religion, he declares, he wou'd rather ſuffer all “ Extremities of Torture, than recommend “ them: But he was ſo well ſatisfy'd, that he “ was ready to pawn his Life and Soul upon the “ Equity of what was deſir'd. Upon this, he proceeds to alarm the Pope, in caſe of Incomplyance: He tells him, “ That in caſe the King “ found himſelf neglected by the Apoſtolick See, “ when his Claim was ſo well ſupported by “ the Laws of God and Man; if he deſpair'd “ of Friendſhip and Conſideration from Chriſt's “ Vicar; if the Emperor had ſo plainly gain'd “ the Aſcendant, tho' 'twas not in that Prince's “ Power to break the King's Meaſures: if the “ Proſpect look'd thus gloomy and unfavourable 'twas to be fear'd, his Highneſs wou'd “ apply to other Expedients: And that ſuch “ Remedies might be thought on as wou'd not “ only ſink his Holyneſs's Authority, and draw “ off the Engliſh from their Obedience to the See “ of Rome, but likewiſe prove a dangerous Precedent to other Chriſtian Princes to do the “ ſame. That at preſent 'twas in his Holyneſs's “ Power to prevent ſo fatal a Miſchief. He goes on to acquaint the Pope; “ That he ſpoke “ this upon the Faith of a Chriſtian, and as a “ Perſon devoted to the Apoſtolick See. And “ that no Byaſs of Affection, no Partiality to his “ Prince, no ſervile Obnoxiouſneſs, had drawn “ this Expoſtulation from him, but that he was “ perfectly ſway'd by the Juſtice of the Cauſe.

“ That by gratifying the King in this Point, he wou'd not only effectually engage his Highneſs, but that all his Subjects wou'd be ready to offer their Lives and Fortunes for his Holyneſs's Service. Laſtly, he lets the Pope know he had ſent Stephen Gardner his principal Secretary, to wait on him, a Perſon for whom he had a great Value; that his Holyneſs might truſt him intirely, and give Credit to whatever he ſhou'd report. Edward Fox the King's Almoner, was likewiſe join'd with Gardner, in this Buſineſs, and is mention'd in a Character of Reſpect (e).

(e) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 10. Feb. 6. 1528.

Cardinal Wolſey renews his Attempt to gain the Popedom.

In the Beginning of this Year, the Pope fell dangerouſly ill; upon which the Cardinal made another Effort for St. Peter's Chair. For this purpoſe he wrote to Sir Gregory Caſſaly to make him an Intereſt, and ſollicit at the Election. He lets him know, how deeply the King's Honour and Satisfaction was concern'd in the Choice of another Pope. That therefore he was deſir'd to exert himſelf, that no Perſon diſ-inclin'd to his Highneſs, might ſucceed. As to the Meaſures he was to take for recommending the Cardinal, he refers him to larger Inſtructions *. But Pope Clement recover'd, and ſo this Buſineſs came to nothing.

*Cotton. Lib. Vitel. B. 10.

Bulls for the ſuppreſſing ſeveral Monaſteries.

This Year the Pope, at the King's Inſtance, grants a Bull for diſſolving as many Monaſteries as amounted to the yearly Revenue of Eight Thouſand Ducats, provided the Number of the Religious in each Houſe, did not exceed Six. The Lands of the ſuppreſſed Monaſteries were to be ſettled upon the College at Windſor, and upon King's-College in Cambridge.

Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 270.

About the ſame time, at his Majeſty's Deſire, another Bull was directed to the Cardinals Wolſey and Laurentio, for ſuppreſſing Monaſteries of both Sexes, where the Number fell ſhort of Twelve: Theſe Religious were to be remov'd, and their Eſtates annex'd to greater Monaſteries.

Id. pag. 272.

And in a Letter of the ſame Date, his Holyneſs acquaints the Cardinals laſt mention'd, with the King's Requeſt, that ſeveral of the larger and beſt endow'd Monaſteries in great Towns, might be turn'd into Biſhop's Sees. He appears willing to gratify his Majeſty, orders the Legates to enquire into the Practicableneſs of the Scheme: And the next Year ſends them a Commiſſion to erect as many Biſhopricks as they thought convenient.

Id. pag. 274.

Id. pag. 291.

A Decretal Bull for the Legates to proceed on, tranſmitted from hence to Rome.

To ſecure the King the better from Diſappointment in the Divorce, and prevent a Decree of the Legates from being revers'd, a Decretal Bull, for the Pope to ſign, was drawn up here the laſt Year, and tranſmitted to Rome. This Bull was penn'd with great Exactneſs: The Form is very comprehenſive, and guards with great Precaution againſt all manner of Art and Evaſion. The Legates have as large a Juriſdiction as cou'd be deſir'd, and the Pope promiſes to ratify their Sentence without Reſerve. To lay the moſt conſiderable Part of it before the Reader. By vertue of this Bull, the Cardinals Wolſey and Campegio, or one of 'em, in caſe the other ſhou'd be hinder'd, or refuſe to act, are authoriz'd to examine the Diſpenſation of Julius the Second, and in caſe they found any of the formerly mention'd Defects in it, they are impower'd to pronounce the Marriage null, and that both the Parties are at Liberty to engage in a new Relation of that kind, at their Pleaſure, without allowing either of 'em to except againſt the Judgment, or appeal to the Pope's Perſon. Farther, the Pope lodges the Plenitude of his Power with theſe Cardinals, either to diſſolve the preſent Marriage, or for the engaging in a new one, as they ſhou'd find it expedient. They are likewiſe authoriz'd to diſpenſe with all Canons, which may be thought to lie croſs to their Proceedings, and check the Liberty of their Motion. And being furniſh'd with the full Privilege and Juriſdiction of the Pope's Authority, they are enabl'd to ſupply all Defects ariſing from what Cauſe ſoever: And thus by the Strength of an Apoſtolical Diſpenſation, they may, if they find it expedient, pronounce the Iſſue by the firſt Marriage legitimate, in regard of the Innocence and good Conſcience of the Parents, no leſs than the Iſſue by the Second: And that they may legitimate the Children of both Venters, by all manner of Cenſures and Penalties Eccleſiaſtical, by the moſt effectual Ways and Means, that the Law can deviſe. And laſtly, the Pope binds himſelf to ratify and confirm whatever ſhou'd be executed, done, or decreed by them, with a Promiſe never to revoke it. And to make all ſure, this Commiſſion to the Cardinals was to continue in force, till the Divorce was thoroughly diſcuſs'd, and the Matter brought to a final Deciſion (f), and all future Inſtruments of Revocation declar'd void.

(f) See Records, N. 8.

By this Bull, it appears the King was willing the Princeſs Mary ſhou'd be declar'd legitimate, notwithſtanding his Divorce from the Queen her Mother.

A Bull of a leſs comprehenſive Form, ſign'd by the Pope.

As to the Succeſs of this Diſpatch, the Pope comply'd ſo far as to ſign a Decretal Bull; but the Form of it was different: For firſt, there's no Reference to any Sentence to be pronounc'd by the Legates: It ſuppoſes the Pope fully inform'd about the Unlawfulneſs of the King's Marriage, and diſpenſes with him to marry any other Perſon, provided ſhe was not his Brother's Relict, or had not conſummated her Marriage with another Perſon now living. And ſecondly, Thoſe extenſive corroborating Clauſes in the Inſtrument, drawn up in England, were wanting in This (g). It is dated at Orvietto the 27th of January, in the Year 1527. This Bull is ſuppos'd to be the ſame with that which Campegio brought afterwards with him into England. However, the Engliſh Court did not deſpair of ſucceeding upon their own Draught: To this purpoſe Cardinal Wolſey wrote to Sir Gregory Caſſaly, to uſe all his Intereſt to get the Form abovemention'd paſs'd, and ſign'd privately by the Pope, and convey'd hither with all the Secreſy imaginable; aſſuring the Pope at the ſame time, with the higheſt Solemnity of Expreſſion, that no Man living beſides himſelf, ſhou'd ſee it: That he did not deſign to begin any Proceſs upon't: That the only uſe he intended to make on't, was, to have it in his Poſſeſſion as a Mark of his Holyneſs's kind Intentions to the King: That by this means his own Intereſt wou'd riſe, and he ſhou'd be in a better Condition to ſerve his Holyneſs with the King (h).

(g) Lord Herbert, p. 251.

(b) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 10. May 7. 1528.

Afterwards the Cardinal was acquainted, the Pope had granted a Bull, but not of the Engliſh Form: For the Cardinal does not call it a Decretal Commiſſion, which was the Expreſſion he us'd for that laſt mention'd. However, he ſeems contented with what cou'd be gain'd; and only deſires that this Decretal Bull, which the Legate Campegio was now bringing over, might be privately ſhewn to ſome of the Council; not that 'twas deſign'd to bring it into the Court, or make uſe of it for trying the Cauſe, but only as a Teſtimony of Wolſey's Diligence, and that his Holyneſs was willing to grant any reaſonable Requeſt for the King's Satiſfaction, and the Settlement of the Government and Succeſſion (i).

Oct. 9. 1528. Cardinal Campegio arrives in England.

Towards the latter End of this Year, Cardinal Campegio arriv'd at London. The King propos'd his being receiv'd by the City, with all the publick Marks of Reſpect: But this Legate being troubl'd with the Gout, declin'd the Ceremony, and made a private Entry. After a Repoſe of ſome few Days, he had an Audience of the King, where in a Latin Speech made by his Secretary, he acquainted his Highneſs with the Barbarities committed by the Imperial Forces in Italy: How they ſtorm'd and plunder'd Rome: That the King's interpoſing for the Apoſtolick See, in this Diſtreſs, was receiv'd with a very grateful Senſe by the Pope and Cardinals. To this Speech Edward Fox, afterwards Biſhop of Hereford, making a Reply in the ſame Language, told him, the King had been very much afflicted at the Pope's Miſfortune: That common Compaſſion carry'd him thus far. But over and above this natural Sympathy, his Majeſty had taken Care to perform the Part of a Friend, and proceed to thoſe good Offices which the Vicar of Chriſt might expect from a Chriſtian Prince. And ſince his Majeſty had ſhewn himſelf thus remarkably dutiful to the Holy See, he hop'd his Services wou'd be remember'd when Occaſion requir'd (k). Afterwards the King and the Legates diſcours'd the Matter privately. And here Campegio gave the King all the Aſſurance imaginable of the Pope's Reality and Favour. It ſeems this Legate believ'd nothing leſs: For the Pope was not willing to diſcover his whole Mind, nor lodge ſo great a Secret with this Cardinal.

1528.

Campegio taxes the Queen with Miſconduct, and perſuades her to retire to a Monaſtery.

Soon after this, Campegio at an Audience with the Queen, took occaſion to acquaint her with the Danger of the preſent Diſpute, and endeavour'd to perſuade her to retire to a Monaſtery. He ſeem'd to charge her with ſomething of unſeaſonable Freedom and Miſ-conduct in her Behaviour. For ſince the granting of the Legate's Commiſſion, ſhe was obſerv'd to allow Dancing and Court Diverſions, more than before. 'Twas likewiſe taken notice of, that ſhe appear'd publickly with an unuſual Air of Chearfulneſs and Spirit. Whereas the Condition of her Circumſtances ought to have made her more grave and recollected. That the Perplexity of the King's Conſcience, not to mention other gloomy Appearances, were no Motives for Satiſfaction. The Queen, by no means pleas'd with this Diſcourſe, reply'd poſitively, that ſhe was reſolv'd to ſtand by the Marriage, ſo ſolemnly allow'd by the Apoſtolick See: And in caſe the Matter ſhou'd be drawn into Queſtion, ſhe wou'd by no means refer the Cauſe to ſuch partial Judges as this Legate and Wolſey. Campegio, finding her thus averſe, inform'd the Pope of her Reſolution.

His Diſcourſe unſucceſsful.

Lord Herbert. p. 225.

Biſhop Fox's Death and Character.

This Year Richard Fox, Biſhop of Wincheſter departed this Life. I have already obſerv'd *, how much this Biſhop was conſider'd in the Court of Henry the Seventh, and what Share he had in publick Negotiations. That Prince, amongſt other Marks of his Favour, did him the Honour of making him Godfather to the preſent King. He was firſt preferr'd to the See of Exeter, from thence tranſlated to Bath and Wells, from thence to Durham, where after having ſate Six Years, he was remov'd to Wincheſter. Some Years before his Death, he was blind, which ſeem'd the only Miſfortune of his Life. Being reſolv'd upon ſome publick Benefaction, his firſt Thoughts were the founding a Monaſtery: But Oldham Biſhop of Exeter, diverted him from this Deſign: He told him his Bounty wou'd be in danger of being loſt this way; for, in his Opinion, the Monks had more Endowments already than they wou'd be able to keep. Upon this Fox chang'd his Scheme, and founded Corpus Chriſti in Oxford †; where, beſides the Charge of the Buildings, he made a Settlement for a Preſident, Twenty Fellows, Twenty Scholars, &c. to the Number of Threeſcore and Ten, and endow'd the Houſe with Four Hundred and One Pounds per Annum ‡. He likewiſe founded Two Free-Schools, one at Taunton in Somerſetſhire, and the other at Grantham in Lincolnſhire. He likewiſe expended great Sums of Money in repairing and ornamenting his Cathedral at Wincheſter. He ſate Twenty Seven Years in this See, and govern'd to great Commendation.

Godwin, Ib.

To proceed; Campegio and Wolſey were now employ'd in pitching upon the Form of the Trial, and preparing for it. Half a Year was ſpent in adjuſting this Matter. In this Interval, little remarkable occurr'd, excepting a publick Declaration made by the King, with reference to his Marriage. He found the moving for a Divorce, made him ſuffer in his Reputation: That the Women eſpecially charg'd him with Inconſtancy; and that there was more Paſſion than Conſcience in ſolliciting this Matter. To remove this Conſtruction, his Majeſty made a Speech to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal; the Judges and other Perſons of Condition, being preſent.

Nov. 8.

The King's Speech to the Lords, &c. to ſilence the Clamours about the Divorce.

His Majeſty told them, "That ſince his Acceſſion to the Throne, which was about Twenty Years, his Reign, by the Bleſſing of God, had been ſo proſperous, that neither his Subjects had Reaſon to complain, nor his Enemies to boaſt of any Advantage. That he had never yet been attack'd, without Damage to the Aggreſſor: And as for the Wars begun by himſelf, they always terminated in Victory. Inſomuch, that whether the Wealth, conſequent upon Peace, or the Glory of military Exploits were conſider'd, he might modeſtly ſay, his Reign might ſtand a Compariſon with the moſt ſucceſsful of his Predeceſſors. But when he conſider'd, his own Mortality, he ſaid, he cou'd not but be apprehenſive the ſucceeding Reigns might prove very unfortunate: That they wou'd bear no Reſemblance to the preſent Happineſs. And that his Subjects ſhou'd be brought to the Condition of the Romans upon Auguſtus's Death: And either wiſh that he had never been born, or had always liv'd amongſt them.

Then his Majeſty touches briefly upon the Miſeries the Kingdom had lately felt in the Competitions between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter: But this has been mention'd already. "His Majeſty goes on to apply this Remark, and tells them, the Princeſs Mary being his only Child, had a more than ordinary Share in his Affection. That he had lately treated a Match for her, with the Houſe of France: and that one of the French King's Privy-Council had queſtion'd her Legitimacy: That, God knows, the Report of this Matter, touch'd his Highneſs very ſenſibly. That the French had ſupported their Scruples with ſuch Authorities from Scripture, that he thought himſelf bound, at the Peril of his Soul, to endeavour the diſentangling the Queſtion. That to this purpoſe, he had firſt conſulted his Friends, and afterwards the moſt eminent in the Civil and Canon Law. But here the Contrariety of Opinions making him more unreſolv'd than before, he concluded there was no remaining Expedient, but to apply to the Apoſtolick See, in whoſe Judgment both himſelf and all other Chriſtians, ought to acquieſce. To this end,

---

(i) Cotton. Libr. Vitel. B. 10.

(k) Godwin. Annal. p. 36.

*Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1.

† A. D. 1516.

‡ Godwin. de præſul. Angl. Fuller's Church Hiſtory.

“he calls God to witneſs. He had procur'd the Arrival of the Venerable Legate. For the Murmuring of Malecontents, and the Diſcourſes of idle Women apart, I ſhall freely declare, ſays the King, my Thoughts of my dear Conſort, the Queen. A Perſon, tho' Royally deſcended, yet more Illuſtrious in her Virtue than in her Family: A Princeſs ſo valuable, that, as God ſhall help me, if I were now to marry, I ſhou'd make choice of her as ſoon as of any Lady living, provided it cou'd lawfully be done. For, as to Piety, Conjugal Affection, Sweetneſs of Diſpoſition, Prudence, and all other Branches of Unexceptionable Conduct, I am fully ſatisfied, there's no meeting with one equal to her. But ſince we are not born only for our ſelves, and to pleaſe our own Fancy, I thought it much better to have the matter judicially examin'd, than to ſeem regardleſs of my Duty to God, to neglect the Intereſt of my Subjects, which every honeſt Man ought to prefer to all private Conſiderations. I hope, after you have heard me declare my Mind after this manner, neither the little Stories of the Vulgar, nor the Calumnies of the Seditious, will make any Impreſſion upon you.

A particular Correſpondence between the King and Anne Boleyn.

Notwithſtanding this Declaration of Affection to the Queen, and the Agreeableneſs of her Perſon, 'tis pretty evident, the King's Fancy had been ſome time engag'd to Mrs. Anne Boleyn. For Proof of this, we have two original Letters of her's to the Cardinal; which not only diſcover a particular Correſpondence between his Highneſs and this Lady, but that the Cardinal was acquainted with it. There's no Date upon them, but by the Contents, we may conclude them written after the end of May, when the Sweating Sickneſs began, and about the time the Legate Campegio was expected. I ſhall tranſcribe them as they ſtand in Biſhop Burnet.

Biſhop Burnet pt. 1. p. 55, 56.

Two Letters of Anne Boleyn's to Wolſey.

My Lord,

In my moſt humbleſt wiſe that my Heart can think, I deſire you to pardon me that I am ſo bold to trouble you with my ſimple and rude Writing; eſteeming it to proceed from her, that does much deſire to know that your Grace does well, as, I perceive, by this Bearer that you do: The which I pray God long to continue, as I am moſt bound to pray; for I do know the great Pains and Troubles that you have taken for me both day and night, is never like to be recompenc'd on my part, but alonely in loving you, next unto the King's Grace, above all Creatures living. And I do not doubt but the daily Proofs of my Deeds ſhall manifeſtly declare and affirm my Writing to be true. And I do truſt you do think the ſame.

My Lord, I do aſſure you, I do long to hear from you the News of the Legate: For I do hope, and they come from you, they ſhall be very good: And I am ſure you deſire it as much as I, and more, and 'twere poſſible, as, I know, 'tis not. And thus, remaining in a ſtedfaſt Hope, I make an end of my Letter. Written with the Hand of her that is moſt bound to be

The King's Poſtſcript to him.

The Writer of this Letter wou'd not ceaſe till ſhe had caus'd Me likewiſe to ſet to my Hand. Deſiring you, tho' it be ſhort, to take it in good part. I inſure you there's neither of us, but that greatly deſires to ſee you, and much more joyous to hear that you have ſcap'd this Plague ſo well, truſting the Fury thereof to be paſs'd, ſpecially with them that keep a good Diet, as I truſt you do. The not hearing of the Legate's Arrival in France cauſes Us ſomewhat to muſe: Notwithſtanding We truſt by your Diligence and Vigilancy (with the Aſſiſtance of Almighty God) ſhortly to be eas'd out of that Trouble. No more to you at this time; but that I pray God ſend you as good Health and Proſperity as the Writer wou'd

By your

Loving Sovereign and Friend

Henry K.

Your Humble Servant

Anne Boleyn.

My Lord,

In my moſt humble wiſe that my poor Heart can think, I do thank your Grace for your kind Letter, and for your rich and goodly Preſent, the which I ſhall never be able to deſerve without your Help: Of the which I have hitherto had ſo great Plenty, that all the days of my Life I am moſt bound of all Creatures, next the King's Grace, to love and ſerve your Grace: Of the which, I beſeech you, never to doubt, that I ſhall vary from this Thought, as long as any Breath is in my Body. And as touching your Grace's Trouble with the Sweat, I thank our Lord that them that I deſir'd and pray'd for, are ſcap'd, and that is the King and you; not doubting but that God has preſerv'd you both for great Cauſes, known alonely of his high Wiſdom. And as for the coming of the Legate, I deſire that much: And if it be God's Pleaſure, I pray him to ſend this matter ſhortly to a good end: And then I truſt, My Lord, to recompenſe part of your great Pains. In the which I muſt require you in the mean time to accept my Good Will inſtead of the Power; the which muſt proceed partly from you, as our Lord knows; to whom I beſeech to ſend you long Life, with Continuance in Honour. Written with the Hand of her that is moſt bound to be

Your Humble and

Obedient Servant

Anne Boleyn.

To return: His Majeſty's Speech was differently reliſh'd: Some pity'd the King, but the Queen's Caſe had much more Compaſſion. Some ambitious People, who, 'tis likely, had the proſpect of mending their Fortunes, were pleas'd to ſee the Waters diſturb'd. Theſe mercenary and inſidious Spirits, applauded the King's Proceedings, and pretended his Highneſs's Reſolution very pious, and ſerviceable to the publick. (l).

Not long after this, Cardinal Wolſey receiv'd a Letter from John Caſſaley: 'Tis dated December the 17th 1528. In this Letter Caſſaley informs him, that he had deſir'd the Pope to think upon an Expedient to ſhew the Bull to ſome of the King's Privy Council. The Pope reply'd in a poſitive Denial: Adding, had it not been utterly impracticable, it ſhou'd have been done at firſt, without giving the King and Cardinal ſo much Trouble; and in ſhort, bid him not inſiſt any farther upon't. However, Campegio gave the King a ſight of the Decretal Bull; but cou'd not be prevail'd with to leave it for a Minute, either with his Highneſs or Wolſey (m).

The Pope refuſes to let the Bull be ſhew'd to the Privy Council.

The Reaſon of the Pope's Reſervedneſs and Incomplyance in this point, ſeems to have been the Deſign of maintaining himſelf in a Liberty of treating with the Emperor, and breaking with the King. His Holyneſs took notice, that the Mediations of England and France had not prevail'd with the Venetians, to reſtore him Cervia and

The Reaſons of this Incomplyance.

F

(l) Lord Herbert, p. 36, 37.

(m) Biſhop Burnet p. 58.

and Ravenna: Now he thought that Republick wou'd not have been ſo hardy in their Refuſal, if theſe Kings were in earneſt: For it had been promis'd, theſe Towns ſhou'd be reſtored, as ſoon as his Legate was ſent to England. The Cardinals preſſing therefore to have the Bull ſeen by ſome of the Privy Council, did but make the Pope more Averſe to the Requeſt: For, he cou'd not imagine the Application was made out of mere Curioſity, or for direction of the Privy Council; ſince the King and the Cardinal cou'd inform them fully in whatever was material in this Inſtrument. The Importunity for ſeeing it therefore, he concluded was only, that they might have ſo many Witneſſes to prove 'twas once granted: But by taking this ſtep, the Pope knew he ſhou'd put himſelf in the King's Power, and make an Agreement with the Emperor utterly impracticable.

Id. p. 59. Dec. 1528.

However to provide againſt all Events, and keep fair with the Engliſh Court, he diſpatches Francis Campana to England, to give an Expectation of favour, and feed the King with freſh Hopes (n).

But 'tis plain Campana's Coming, and ſmooth Meſſage gave little Satisfaction. For, in the beginning of the next Spring, Wolſey writes a long Diſpatch to the King's Agents at Rome. In this Letter, he takes notice of the Pope's alledging his falling ſick, as an Excuſe for not expediting the King's Buſineſs.

Apr. 6. 1529. Cardinal Wolſey's Complaint of the Pope's unfair Dealing.

This the Cardinal looks upon as mere trifling. That the Pope had ſufficient Opportunities of being fully inform'd of the Juſtice of the King's Cauſe. That Delays in this Caſe are no better than Art and Shifting. That by ſtopping the Cauſe upon a pretence of Ill-health, his Holyneſs muſt inevitably run himſelf upon one of theſe Inconveniences; either he muſt leave the Buſineſs undecided, and by conſequence perplex the Title to the Crown, and embroil the Kingdom; or elſe, he muſt pronounce the Bull or Brief, or both of 'em, to be valid and unexceptionable; which, conſidering the violent Preſumptions to the contrary, the Cardinal believes, that neither his Holyneſs, nor any honeſt Man, can fairly do. If therefore the Pope continues to throw in Delays, and clog the Affair, he can by no means underſtand ſuch myſterious Conduct. And therefore he plainly tells the Agents, that unleſs the utmoſt ſpeed was given to the Buſineſs in hand, he thought his Holyneſs cou'd not die with a good Conſcience (o).

He deſires an Enlargement of the Commiſſion for trying the Cauſe.

By theſe Inſtructions it appears, the King and Wolſey were not altogether ſatisfied: And that, either Campegio's keeping the Bull ſo cloſe, or elſe the form of it, did not pleaſe them. For by theſe Inſtructions, the Agents were to move for Decretals. And, if this cou'd not be granted, they were then to preſs for an Inlargement of the Legate's Commiſſion. The Amendments requeſted were, that Wolſey and Campegio might be ſufficiently authoriz'd to proceed, both upon the Body, and all the Incidents and Dependences of the Cauſe, with the ſame Extent of Juriſdiction, as his Holyneſs (to uſe the Cardinal's Words) may do of his ordinary and abſolute Power; with ſufficient and ample Clauſes ad decernendum & interpretandum Jura Legis & Reſcripta quæcumque hoc Matrimonium concernentia, una cum omnibus & ſingulis Dubiis in eadem Cauſa emergentibus. That there ſhou'd likewiſe be a ſupplemental Proviſion in this Commiſſion, to make out Compulſories to any Princes or Perſons, of what Dignity or State ſoever, etiamſi Imperiali, Regali, vel alia quacumque Dignitate præfulgeant, ſub quibuſcunque pœnis. By virtue of this Order, all Perſons of what Quality ſoever were to furniſh any manner of Witneſs or Records, which were to appear, and be laid before the Legates, as they ſhou'd think fit to require.

And in caſe the Pope ſhou'd happen to die before the King had receiv'd Satisfaction, they were to enquire into the Extent of the Juriſdiction belonging to the Cardinals Sede Vacante: And in caſe they found them authoriz'd to decree any thing in the King's Cauſe, they ſhou'd immediately apply to them for Juſtice and Diſpatch (p).

In another Packet, ſent ſoon after to Rome, the King, in the Cardinal's Letter, complains of the ſtrict Union between the Pope and Emperor. That by this cloſe Correſpondence, 'twas plain the Pope was govern'd by a Byaſs, and that no Juſtice cou'd be expected from him. However, his Highneſs was willing to wait a little longer, and go on with his Application. The Agents therefore are order'd to ſollicit the Enlargement of the Legates Commiſſion abovemention'd. They are likewiſe acquainted, that the Pope's Pollicitation, to ratify the Sentence of the Legates, was defectively drawn up: And that his Holyneſs might recede and diſengage himſelf at his Pleaſure. They were to tell the Pope, that the Pollicitation ſent to England was ſo wetted and ſpoil'd in the Paſſage, that they durſt not ſhew it the King: They therefore entreated his Holyneſs wou'd grant them a new one. And thus when they had gain'd this point, Gardner was ordered to take Care that ſuch ſupplementary Clauſes, as were neceſſary, might be inſerted.

A cloſe Union between the Pope and Emperor.

In this Letter, the Cardinal takes notice, the Emperor refus'd the ſending Pope Julius the Second's Brief into England. He pretended himſelf notwithſtanding willing enough to ſend it to Rome: For that Court, he alledg'd, was the proper place for the Tryal of the King's Cauſe. But this, ſays the Cardinal, is but a Feint: For, by the Advices the King receiv'd from his Ambaſſadors in Spain, there lay ſtrong Preſumption of Forgery againſt the Brief: And that the Marks of Impoſture were ſuch, as wou'd not well bear the light.

Exceptions againſt the Brief of Julius the Second

And here the Cardinal makes a Chronological Exception. That the Court of Rome obſerves a different Computation of the Year in Bulls and Briefs: That in the firſt, the Year begins at the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin, and the latter at the Nativity of our Saviour. That he who forg'd the Brief in Spain, not knowing this different Reck'ning, laid himſelf open to Diſcovery. Under this Ignorance he dates the Brief upon the 26th of December, Anno Domini 1503, which was before Julius was advanc'd to the Papacy. But after all, the Cardinal was not aſſur'd of the force of this Objection: And therefore he adviſes the Ambaſſadors to examine farther into the matter (q).

There are ſeveral other Objections againſt the Authentickneſs of the Brief, of which I ſhall only mention two, and tranſcribe it for the Latin Reader (r).

Firſt, 'Twas argu'd, that the Brief was not enter'd upon the Regiſter at Rome; neither was there any Docket or Memorandum of any ſuch Inſtrument.

And 2dly, 'Twas not to be met with in the King's Paper Office, where publick Records, of that nature are preſerv'd (ſ).

However, that the Brief was no Forgery, or at leaſt, that the Engliſh Court ſuſpected the contrary, is pretty plain from the Inſtructions ſent to the King's Agents to diſſuade the Pope from ſending to Spain for the Original (t). It may poſſibly

---

(n) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 10.

(o) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 11.

(p) Ibid.

(q) Cotton. Libr. ibid.

(r) See Records, N. 9.

(ſ) Ld. Herbert, p. 241, 242.

(t) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 11.

poſſibly be thought theſe Inſtructions might be given to hinder the Avocation of the Cauſe: But this Conjecture is not ſo likely; for if the Brief cou'd have been prov'd a Forgery, the King muſt have carry'd his point, and by conſequence wou'd not have been ſo averſe againſt a Hearing at Rome.

Apr. 5. 1529. The Emperor ſollicits an Avocation of the Cauſe to Rome.

About this time the Biſhop of Worceſter and Doctor Lee, the King's Ambaſſadors in Spain, open'd the Divorce to the Emperor: Upon which his Imperial Majeſty return'd the King this Anſwer: That he was ſorry, his Majeſty had any Thoughts of parting with the Queen; and conjur'd him by the Sacrament of Marriage to proceed no farther. But in caſe he was reſolv'd to go on, his Imperial Majeſty inſiſted, that the Cauſe ſhou'd not be try'd in England, but either referr'd to the Pope, or brought before a General Council: Adding withal, that he was ſatisfy'd, the Right lay on the Queen's Side, and was reſolv'd to abet her Intereſt (u).

The two Legates Letter to the Pope.

They ſuggeſt the Danger of not ſatisfying the King.

And deliver themſelves with great Freedom.

The Legates perceiving the Queen incompliant, and that the Emperor wou'd embarraſs the Affair, joyn'd in a Letter to the Pope for a Decretal Bull: Which, by the way, muſt be of a more comprehenſive Form, than that which Campegio brought with him: For otherways, what Occaſion had there been for requeſting another? And if the draught of this Inſtrument cou'd not quickly be ſettl'd, the Pope was to uſe his Intereſt with the Queen in the mean time. They deſire him to endeavour to remove her from her Reſolution by all means poſſible: To try, if he cou'd bring her Inclination to the Cloyſter: To ſuggeſt to her, that this was the only Expedient to make her eaſy, and ſecure her Intereſt. And here they preſs the Diſpatch of the Divorce, and the Danger of loſing the King by Delays. That both the Nobility and Commons were much diſturb'd at the ſpinning out the Cauſe: That they declar'd their minds with great Liberty, and ſeem'd almoſt ready to renounce his Holyneſs. That amongſt other Inſtances of Satyr, they called thoſe People moſt ſtupidly ridiculous, that pretended the Popes cou'd diſpenſe with divine Laws, and yet had no Power to cancel the Writings, or melt a little Wax or Lead of their Predeceſſors. That they found it very difficult to keep on the King's Patience, and prevent things from running to Extremity. In this Letter, they acquaint the Pope, they were concerting Meaſures for the Trial, and that the Queen had exhibited a Copy of the Brief (w). From whence we may infer 'twas written ſome time before the Cauſe came on at Black-Fryers. This Letter was follow'd by another from Wolſey to the King's Agents; in which he lets them know the Emperor's Ambaſſadors were buſy in ſolliciting a Revocation of his Commiſſion and Campegio's: That if his Imperial Majeſty ſhou'd gain this Point, the King wou'd be wholly diſappointed. They were therefore to do their utmoſt to prevent the paſſing of any ſuch thing. They were to remonſtrate to the Pope and Cardinals upon this Head: They were to acquaint them, that a Compliance with the Emperor, in this particular, wou'd be a Flaming Injury to the King and Kingdom. That by yielding in a point, ſo contumelious to his Legates; that by ſuch an open Breach of good Faith, his Holyneſs wou'd certainly give the higheſt Provocation imaginable to the King and Nobility. That upon ſuch a notorious Violation of his Promiſe, they wou'd undoubtedly renounce their Obedience, and deſert the Apoſtolick See: And that when other Countries found, there was neither Juſtice, nor Truth to be met with there, they wou'd, in all likelyhood, follow the Example of the Engliſh. This Diſpatch is dated May the twenty firſt this Year (x).

The Pope's Excuſe to Wolſey.

The Pope, who had taken new Meaſures, and was patching up with the Emperor, wrote an excuſing Letter to Wolſey. “He pretends himſelf very ſorry that he cou'd not make a Return to the King and Cardinal for their good Offices to his See. That he deſir'd nothing more, than to ſhew his Inclination this way; but that at preſent, the Regards of Juſtice check'd his Motion, and put him to a ſtand: That he had a great many weighty Reaſons, which hinder'd him from giving Satisfaction in this Point; And that he had endeavour'd to convince the King's Ambaſſadors of the Cogency of 'em. And for the particulars, he refers Wolſey to Campegio (y).

A Hearing concerning the Divorce at Black-Fryers.

The King and Queen appear in Court.

The Meaſures being now adjuſted for the hearing of the Cauſe, the Legate's Court was prepar'd at Black-Fryers. And the King having, by a Warrant under the Great Seal, given them leave to execute their Commiſſion, they ſat on the laſt of May. The Commiſſion exhibited by Longland Biſhop of Lincoln, was read in Court. And now the Clerks of the Court took the uſual Oaths: And the King and Queen were cited by the Legates to appear on the eighteenth of June, which was all the Buſineſs of that Day. The King's Proxies were Doctor Sampſon, Doctor Hall, Doctor Petre, and Doctor Tregonnell. The Queen's Council were Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter, Standiſh Biſhop of St. Aſaph, and Doctor Ridley. Upon the eighteenth of June the Court ſate again: The King ſent his Proxies; but the Queen, appearing in Perſon, proteſted againſt the Legates, as incompetent Judges: She alledg'd the Pope had order'd the Cauſe ſhou'd be try'd at Rome, and deſir'd time might be allow'd to prove the Allegation. The Legates gave her Highneſs three Days, and adjourn'd the Court (z).

On the twenty firſt of June there was another Seſſion: And now the King and the Queen being preſent, Campegio open'd the Buſineſs in a long Speech: And both this Legate and Wolſey made ſolemn Proteſtations of their Impartiality; and that they intended to proceed without any Byaſs of Favour or Affection.

The Queen's Speech.

When the King was call'd, he anſwer'd here: But the Queen, being call'd, made no Anſwer; but riſing from her Chair, came up to the King, and kneeling to him, made a moving and ſignificant Speech. She told him, “what Diſadvantages ſhe lay under, in being a Woman, and of a Foreign Nation: That her Council were the King's Subjects; and that ſhe had little Expectation either of Friendſhip or Equity: ſhe deſir'd to know, how ſhe had diſoblig'd his Highneſs, and why this Uſage was put upon her? She ſolemnly proteſts, ſhe had always made it her Buſineſs to live agreably to to his Majeſty, and comply with his Humour: And that her Favour and Fancy to other People was always govern'd by his Choice and Direction. She ſuggeſted, ſhe had been his Wife twenty Years; and had ſeveral Children by him: And that the Marriage between Prince Arthur and herſelf, was unconſummated, ſhe appeal'd to God and the King's Conſcience. And if his Highneſs cou'd charge her with any Breach of Faith or Blemiſh in her Honour, ſhe was willing to be diſmiſs'd with Infamy: But if nothing of this cou'd be prov'd, ſhe deſir'd to have Juſtice at his Hands. The King's Father and hers, ſhe ſaid, had the Character of very wiſe Princes; and without queſtion, con-

---

(u) Ld. Herb. p. 225.

(w) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 11.

(x) Ibid. May 31. 1529.

(y) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 11.

(z) Cavend. p. 106. Godwin Annal. Ld. Herbert, p. 235. Burnet, p. 72.

“ ſulted Perſons well qualify'd for Advice, when “ they ſettled this Marriage. In ſhort, ſhe “ durſt not truſt her Cauſe with this Court: For, “ her Council being his Highneſs's Subjects, and “ aſſign'd by him, ſhe was afraid, wou'd either “ be prepoſſeſs'd or over-aw'd. She therefore “ humbly entreats the King to let the matter “ reſt till ſhe cou'd hear from her Friends in “ Spain. Upon this, ſhe roſe up, made the King a low Reverence, and went out of the Court. The King order'd the Cryer to call her in again, but ſhe refus'd to return. When ſhe was gone, the King began a Diſcourſe in her Commendation, much to the ſame effect with his Speech to the Lords already mention'd: Adding withal, that he had formerly mention'd his Scruples to Longland, Biſhop of Lincoln, in Confeſſion. And here, Cardinal Wolſey deſiring the King to declare to the Court, whether he had been the Perſon, who firſt ſuggeſted the debating this matter. His Highneſs clear'd the Cardinal from this Imputation, and declar'd he had never injected any ſuch Thoughts, but rather adviſ'd the contrary.

The King clears Wolſey from firſt ſuggeſting the Divorce.
June 25.

The Court adjourn'd to the twenty fifth, ordering Letters Monitory to be iſſu'd for citing the Queen to appear; but ſhe refuſing, was declar'd contumax.

Three Days after, ſhe was cited a ſecond time, and, for not appearing, pronounc'd again contumax (a).

The King's Letter to his Ambaſſadors at Rome, June 28. 1529. Cotton. Libr. Vitell B. 11.

Notwithſtanding the Queen's Abſence, the diſpenſing Bull and Brief were call'd for, and Witneſſes examin'd to prove the Marriage conſummated between Prince Arthur and the preſent Queen.

The Queen's Council argue againſt the Divorce.

On the other ſide, the Queen's Council urg'd, that ſuppoſing the Marriage conſummated, which was more than was prov'd, yet the forbidding the marrying the Brother's Relict was no Moral Law: That 'twas only a judicial Regulation of the Moſaick Inſtitution: That none but the Jews were bound by it; and that after the coming of our Saviour 'twas abrogated of Courſe: 'Tis true, the Chriſtian Church was govern'd by this Reſtraint: But then as it ſtood only on Eccleſiaſtical Authority, the ſame Power might diſpenſe with it (b).

The Queen ſollicits the Emperor to inſiſt upon an Avocation.

The Queen was not negligent in preventing the Legates Sentence: She ſent the Lady Margaret, Regent of the Low Contries, a Detail of the whole Proceſs: From hence the Account was tranſmitted to the Emperor Charles and his Brother Ferdinand, with Entreaties to aſſiſt their Aunt. Theſe Princes immediately diſpatch'd their Ambaſſadors to the Pope, to ſollicit the matter. Theſe Agents were the Queen's Proxies at Rome; and had a Commiſſion to give his Holyneſs a Copy of the Bull and Brief of Julius the Second; together with her Declaration, that the Marriage between Prince Arthur and her ſelf was not conſummated.

A Proteſtation againſt the Proceedings of the Legates.
July.

The King, ſuſpecting the Matter wou'd be work'd this Way, and that the Emperor wou'd do his utmoſt, had lately ſent Inſtructions to his Ambaſſadors to prevent the Avocation of the Cauſe; and to remind the Pope, that by conſenting to ſuch an Expedient, his Holyneſs wou'd put a great Diſgrace upon his Legates, contradict his late Bull and Commiſſion, break through his Pollicitation, and diſoblige the King and Kingdom in a very remarkable manner. But all this Remonſtrance ſignify'd nothing: The Poſture of Affairs in Italy was chang'd, and the Pope fall'n into new Meaſures. In fine, the Ambaſſadors of the Houſe of Auſtria made a Proteſtation in the Queen's Name, againſt the Proceedings of the Legates in England: Every Page of this Inſtrument was ſubſcrib'd by the Queen's Hand. The Purport of it was, to entreat the Pope to null the Proceedings in England, to admoniſh the King to ſtop the Proceſs, or conſent to a Tryal of the Cauſe at Rome. The Ambaſſadors added, that in caſe they were refus'd in theſe Particulars, their Maſters wou'd apply to other Remedies.

The Pope grants an Avocation.
July 3.
And concludes a Treaty with the Emperor.

By the way, the preſſing for an Avocation was agreable to the Courſe of Law, founded in general upon Motives of Equity: And if the Pope had not bound himſelf up by his Pollicitation and Decretal Bull, cou'd ſcarce fairly have been deny'd. However, theſe Conſiderations were all overweigh'd; for a Treaty was lately concluded between the Emperor and him at Barcelona. By virtue of this Treaty the Pope's Nephew, Alexander di Medici, was to be reſtor'd to the Government of Florence: The Emperor was likewiſe to hold the Kingdom of Naples of his Holyneſs, to aſſiſt him, in the Recovery of Cervia and Ravenna, of Modena and Reggio, taken from him by the Venetians and the Duke of Ferrara. The Pope had ſome other Articles of Advantage, which I ſhall forbear to mention (c). In ſhort, the Power of the Emperor, and intereſt of the Pope's Family, prevail'd in all Appearance, with him ſo far as to forget his former Promiſes, and venture the breaking with the King. Thus he ſign'd an Avocation of the Cauſe, and forbid all farther Proceedings in England under great Penalties (d).

July 15.

He was ſenſible, how deeply this Uſage wou'd be reſented by the King: And therefore to ſhew he was dragg'd into this Expedient, he writes an excuſing Letter to Cardinal Wolſey: In which, he tells him, “ how much he was afflicted at the “ Neceſſity of the Juncture; that nothing was “ more averſe to his Inclination than the Avoca- “ tion of the Cauſe. That he was ſo ſenſible of “ the King's Merit and kind Offices, that no- “ thing but mere Juſtice cou'd have forc'd him to “ have done any thing againſt his Highneſs's In- “ clination. He deſires the Cardinal to repre- “ ſent his Regret to the King upon this Occaſion, “ to put the beſt Complexion upon the matter, “ and to uſe his Intereſt to continue him in his “ cuſtomary Friendſhip and Eſteem to the Apo- “ ſtolick See; acquainting his Highneſs, that “ he had the ſame Regards for him as for- “ merly (e).

Card. Campegio adjourns the Court to October.

Before the Avocation was ſign'd at Rome, the Pope had inſtructed Campegio to draw out the matter in length: The Cardinal manag'd this Buſineſs with dexterity enough. He told the King, that over-driving the Cauſe and precipitating a Sentence, wou'd not be for the King's Honour; and that the Queen's Party wou'd take an Advantage by ſuch Expedition. The Court therefore adjourn'd from day to day, handled the matter ſlowly, and kept off an Expectation of Judgment till July the twenty third. On this day, there was a great Appearance; and the Sentence was generally expected: But the Audience were ſtrangely diſappointed; for, inſtead of coming to a Deciſion, Campegio adjourn'd the Court to the firſt of October. To give this ſurprizing turn a Colour, he pretended, they ſat there as part of the Conſiſtory at Rome; and therefore muſt be govern'd by the Rules of that Court: Now at Rome, he ſolemnly declar'd, there was a Vacation from that time to October; during which Interval, no Cauſes were heard (f). And here we may obſerve, that the Pope had concluded a Treaty with the Emperor, three Weeks before this laſt Adjournment. From whence 'tis not unreaſonable to infer, that the latter Formalities and Proceedings of Campegio, in the Divorce, were only an Amuſement (e).

(a) Ld. Herbert.

(b) Godwin Annal.

(c) F. Paul. Hiſt. Coun. of Trent.

(d) Ld. Herbert, p. 254.

(e) Cotton. Libr. Vitell. B. 11.

(f) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 76, 77.

(e) Ld. Herbert, p. 254.

And thus the Pope, by ſtraining his Credit, and being govern'd too much by ſecular Views, loſt England, and ſacrific'd the Intereſt of his See to the Grandeur of his Family: But of this afterwards.

The King much diſſatisfy'd with the Proceedings of the Legates.

When Campegio adjourn'd the Court to October, the King was in ſome hopes of preventing the Avocation: And for this Reaſon 'tis likely he was diſpleas'd with the Cardinals for proceeding no faſter. And upon this laſt Adjournment, the Duke of Suffolk, by the King's Order, complained of the Uſage: And being a Perſon of a warm Temper, deliver'd himſelf in rugged Language. Wolſey told him, he had no reaſon to be angry, nor to charge him with Misbehaviour, that he had given the Duke no Provocation; that he ow'd his Life to him; and therefore ſhou'd have treated him with more regard; that he acted under the Pope's Authority; and that 'twas not in his Power to proceed to Sentence, without knowing his Holyneſs's Pleaſure (h).

(h) Cavendiſh p. 126.

The Pope ſends the King a Brief to exempt him from the Cenſures of the Inhibition.

While the Matter reſted, the King went a Progreſs, to ſhake off his Spleen, and relieve him under his Diſappointment. For as yet, he did not wholly deſpair of ſeeing the Cauſe decided by the Legates: But when the Avocation was declar'd, theſe Hopes vaniſh'd. To clench the Matter, the Pope ſent an Inhibition to ſtop the Proceedings of the Legates, which was deliver'd in the Beginning of September, and privately executed upon the Legates. By this Inſtrument, thoſe who abetted the carrying on the Proceſs were liable to the Cenſures of the Church. The Pope therefore, to prevent the King's Reſentment, ſent him a Brief to exempt him from the Penalties of the Inhibition (i). Soon after this, Cardinal Campegio was recall'd; took his leave of the King, and left England. 'Twas ſaid, Cardinal Wolſey had lodg'd a vaſt Sum of Money with him, to be carry'd off. Upon this, the King order'd Campegio's Equipage to be ſearch'd at Calais; where nothing was found upon him, excepting the Preſent he had receiv'd from the King (k).

(i) Lord Herbert, p. 255.

(k) Cavendiſh.

To go back a little: Before the laſt Adjournment of the Legates Court, the King was diſpleas'd with Wolſey; poſſibly it might be, becauſe he thought him too dilatory and paſſive in the Exerciſe of his Commiſſion: That he reſign'd too far to Campegio, and did not puſh for a Sentence with the Vigour expected. 'Tis certain, the King was uneaſie with the Delays, ſent for Wolſey to Bridewell, and gave him a warm Reprimand, as the Cardinal confeſs'd to the Biſhop of Carliſle. The ſame Day the Cardinal was order'd to wait upon the Queen with Campegio. Their Buſineſs was, to try if they cou'd prevail with her to drop the Conteſt, and give way to the Divorce. The Queen told them, ſhe was not prepar'd to anſwer a Queſtion of that Importance, and ſo that Meſſage miſcarried.

Id. p. 119.

The two Cardinals wait upon the Queen, but to no effect.

Anne Boleyn the Cardinal's Enemy.

Conjectures upon the Cauſe.

To proceed: The Cauſe being drawn to Rome, and the King's Expectation baulk'd, he throws his Diſappointment upon the Cardinal, and ſeems from this Moment to have taken ſevere Reſolutions againſt him. Tho' from the Account of the whole Matter, it appears the Cardinal was very ſincere in the King's Buſineſs; and proſecuted the Divorce with all the Heartineſs and Application imaginable. But the King's Inclination was ſtrongly ſettl'd upon Miſtreſs Boleyn. This Fancy made him reſent the Pope's Colluſion to the higheſt degree, and diſcharge his Revenge upon this Miniſter. Beſides the Cardinal had great Enemies at Court; and amongſt the reſt, Miſtreſs Boleyn help'd to draw down the Storm upon him. 'Tis hard to tell the Reaſon of this Lady's Diſguſt: Cavendiſh and the Lord Herbert are of Opinion, ſhe ow'd him a Grudge for his breaking the Contract between her and my Lord Percie. Upon which ſhe was diſmiſs'd the Court. But not to mention the Cardinal's doing nothing in this Affair without the King's Order, this Conjecture will not hold upon another Account. For, by the two Letters of Anne Boleyn's to the Cardinal, already related, it appears ſhe took this Miniſter for her Friend, and was very ſenſible of the kind Offices he had done her: That ſhe had now an Expectation of marrying the King, and depended on the Cardinal's Favour for this Advancement. 'Tis plain therefore, that breaking of the Contract with the Lord Percie, was no preſent Mortification. She cou'd not therefore bear the Cardinal any Ill-will upon this Score. Thus we are at a loſs for her Diſſaffection to the Cardinal, if her two Letters are genuine, as by the manner they appear to be, tho' the Hiſtorian does not tell us where he had them (l). But tho' the Cauſe is hard to diſcover, that ſhe was his Enemy is certain, as may be ſeen both from Cavendiſh in Print, and more fully from his Manuſcript Copy. Here the Cardinal takes notice of the Aſcendant ſhe had with the King, of the ill Offices ſhe was diſpos'd to do him; and for that reaſon, he thought it beſt to drop his Defence, as will be afterwards related.

Id. p. 40.
Id. p. 37.

(l) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 55.

The Cardinal order'd to deliver up the Broad Seal, and convey away York-Place.

The King's Diſpleaſure began now to break out againſt the Cardinal; of which, the firſt conſiderable Inſtance was, his ſending for the Broad Seal, and ordering Wolſey to quit York Place, and retire to Aſhur, a Houſe near Hampton-Court, belonging to the See of Wincheſter.

The Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, being ſent to demand the Seal, the Cardinal told them, 'twas given him by the King himſelf, and the Office ſettl'd by Letters Patents for Term of Life; and therefore refus'd to part with it. But the next Day, when theſe Noblemen return'd to him with the King's Letter, he acquieſc'd, and put it in their Hands (m.) According to Sir Edward Cook, the Law wou'd not have ſupported him in the Conteſt. For the Grant by Patent for Term of Life, was holden void, becauſe an antient Office muſt be granted as it has been accuſtomed (n).

(m) Cavendiſh. p. 141.

(n) Cook's Inſtitut. pt. 4. fol. 87.

His Compliance in both Inſtances.

The Cardinal finding how Matters went, endeavour'd to put a Stop to his Misfortune. He did not know but that the King might either diſlike his Greatneſs, or have a Fancy for ſome of his Wealth. He therefore reſolves to try the Expedient of a rich Preſent. He orders Sir William Gaſcoyn his Treaſurer, to bring out all his beſt Furniture; amongſt which were Hangings of Gold and Silver Tiſſue, Copes of great Value, and two large Tables full of Gold and Silver Plate. All this Treaſure the Cardinal order'd to be deliver'd to the King: But it miſs'd the Succeſs which Jacob's Preſent had upon Eſau; the King's good Humour was not to be recover'd. For, at the Meeting of the Parliament, as Cavendiſh reports, a Bill of High Treaſon was brought into the Houſe againſt Wolſey. But Thomas Cromwel, the Cardinal's Secretary, who was now a Member of the Houſe of Commons, ſpoke to the Charge and defended his Maſter ſo well, that the Bill was thrown out of the Houſe. His Enemies being diſappointed in this Attempt, got him indicted in a Premunire. Thus Cavendiſh reports the Matter: But the Lord Herbert ſuppoſes the Indictment prior to the Bill of Attainder: At preſent I ſhall follow the Order of this noble Hiſtorian. To begin; the Cardinal was proſecuted by Hales the Attorney General, and indicted upon the Statute enacted againſt the purchaſing or purſuing Bulls, Inſtruments, Proceſſes, &c. in the Court of Rome, or elſewhere againſt the King, his Crown, and Dignity *. He was allow'd to appear by his Attorney.

He makes the King a large Preſent.

Cavendiſh.

Id. p. 150.

He is indicted in a Premunire.

* 16 R. 2. cap. 5.

And here the Indictment ſet forth, "That Thomas Legatus de Latere, Cardinal and Archbiſhop of York, being not ignorant of the Premiſes, had obtain'd certain Bulls from Clement the Seventh, by vertue of which, he exercis'd Juriſdiction and Authority Legantine, to the Deprivation of the King's Power eſtabliſh'd in his Courts of Juſtice: Which ſaid Bulls he caus'd to be publickly read in Weſtminſter, aſſuming to himſelf thereupon the Dignity and Juriſdiction of Legatus de Latere: Which he has exercis'd to this Day, to the Prejudice of both Secular and Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. And that by Colour thereof, he had given away the Church of Stow-Gilford in the County of Surrey, &c. All which was to the Contempt of the King and his Crown, and contrary to the foreſaid Statute of 16 Richard the Second. Moreover, that by Colour of the ſaid Authority, he had caus'd the laſt Wills and Teſtaments of many (out of his Dioceſs) to be exhibited and prov'd in his Court, and their Goods and Chattels to be adminiſter'd by ſuch as he appointed. Alſo, that under Colour of his ſaid Authority, he had made divers Viſitations out of his Dioceſs, and drawn Penſions from Abbeys, to the Contempt of the King and his Laws (n).

1523. 28. Auguſt, 15. H. 8.

(n) Lord Herbert, p. 262. & deinc.

The Cardinal being not in Court, before the Trial came to Conviction, ſome of the Judges were ſent down to Aſhur to receive his Anſwer. 'Tis ſaid, the Cardinal pleaded Ignorance of the Statute (o). But this is very improbable: For, 1ſt, 'tis very unlikely the Cardinal who had been ſo long Lord Chancellor, ſhou'd be thus unacquainted with the Laws, and know nothing of a Statute, in which the Penalties were ſo heavy, and the Clergy principally concern'd. 2*dly*, The Cardinal juſtify'd the Exerciſe of his Legantine Character, to the Judges who were ſent to examine him. He told them he had the King's Licenſe under his Hand and Broad Seal to indemnify him: But that he cou'd not produce the Inſtrument, becauſe his Trunks and Coffers were ſeiz'd: And that he did not miſ-report the Matter, I ſhall afterwards prove to a Demonſtration. Now, to what purpoſe ſhou'd he have taken the King's Letters Patents to cover him in the Functions of a Legate, had he not been apprehenſive of Danger without them, at leaſt if he had not been conſcious of ſome Stretches in the Exerciſe of that Character? However, not thinking it adviſeable to maintain his Conduct, he confeſs'd the Indictment, ſent his Submiſſion, and caſt himſelf upon the King's Honour (p).

He pleads the King's Letters Patents.

(o) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 80.

But declines the Conteſting it any farther.

(p) Cavendiſh, p. 151.

His Diſcourſe with Judge Shelly.

Before this Indictment took effect, Judge Shelly was ſent to the Cardinal to perſuade him to convey York-Place (now White-Hall) to the Crown. The Reaſon of this Meſſage, I ſuppoſe was, becauſe the Forfeiture in the Premunire wou'd only veſt that Houſe in the King during the Cardinal's Life, or at moſt no longer, than while the See of York was vacant. Shelly told the Cardinal, 'twas the King's Pleaſure, he ſhou'd convey York-Place to his Highneſs; that this muſt be done by way of Recognizance. The Cardinal reply'd, he knew the King to be of a noble and equitable Temper; and that he did not deſire to ſtretch his Prerogative to the Oppreſſion of the Subject. He therefore deſir'd Judge Shelly and the reſt of the Bench not to miſlead his Highneſs, and put him upon Strains of Conſcience and Law. And as to the Matter in hand, whether he might honeſtly convey York Place to the King, which was Parcel of the Archbiſhoprick, in which the Cardinal was a Truſtee for the Church, and had no Right any longer than his Life; which was by no means clear. Shou'd every Biſhop manage by this Direction, the Patrimony of the Church wou'd be in a low Condition: At this rate, 'tis likely nothing might be left for the Benefit of their Succeſſors. And which way then cou'd they ſupport their Character, and anſwer the Expectations of their Poſt? Judge Shelly did not ſtick to tell him, there was no great Conſcience in ſuch Compliance: But he added, 'twas in the King's Power to make the Church of York more than Amends ſome other way; and that in Confidence of the King's Juſtice, that Scruple might be the better diſcharg'd. The Cardinal told him, the King had made no Promiſe of Returning a Recompence. However, he ſign'd the Recognizance, and was willing to try how far an abſolute Obedience might work upon the King.

But nothing cou'd ſtop the Motion of his Misfortune: For, not long after, ſeveral Lords and others of the Privy-Council, exhibited Articles to the King againſt him. This Charge was tranſcrib'd from the Original, and afterwards compar'd by Sir Edward Cook. 'Tis taken Word for Word from the original Record, without the leaſt Omiſſion. This Matter having been imperfectly and unfairly repreſented in the Engliſh Chronicles, I ſhall give it the Reader as it ſtands in the Inſtitutes of this learn'd Gentleman. It begins thus (a).

Dec. 1. 21. H. 1.

Articles exhibited againſt the Cardinal by the Privy-Council.

(a) Cook's Inſtitutes, pt. 4. fol. 89. & deinc. Cotton. Libr. Julius I. fol. 24.

> "Conſtrain'd by Neceſſity of our Fidelity and Conſcience, complain and ſue to your moſt Royal Majeſty, We your Grace's humble, true, faithful and obedient Subjects, That the Lord Cardinal of York, lately your Grace's Chancellor, preſuming to take upon him the Authority of the Pope's Legate de Latere, hath by divers and many ſundry Ways and Faſhions, committed high and notable grievous Offences, miſ-uſing, altering, and ſubverting the Order of your Grace's Laws, and other ways contrary to your High Honour, Prerogative, Crown, Eſtate, and Dignity Regal, to the ineſtimable great Hinderance, Diminution, and Decay of this your Grace's Realm. As 'tis touch'd ſummarily and particularly in certain Articles here following, which be but a few in compariſon of all his Enormities, Exceſſes, and Tranſgreſſions againſt your Grace's Laws.

That is to ſay:

1 Where your Grace and Noble Progenitors within this Realm of England being Kings of England, have been ſo free, that they have had in all the World no other Sovereign, but immediately ſubject to Almighty God in all things touching the Regality of your Crown of England, and the ſame Pre-eminence, Prerogative, Juriſdiction, lawful and peaceable Poſſeſſion,

Your Grace and noble Progenitors have had, us'd and injoy'd without Interruption of Buſineſs, therefore by the ſpace of two hundred Years and more; whereby your Grace may preſcribe againſt the Pope's Holyneſs, that he ſhou'd not, nor ought not to ſend or make any Legate, to execute any Authority Legantine, contrary to your Grace's Prerogative within this your Realm: Now the Lord Cardinal of York, being your Subject, and natural Liege born, hath of his high Orgullows, and inſatiable Mind, for his own ſingular Advancement and Profit, in Derogation, and to the great Emblemmiſhment and Hurt of your ſaid Royal Juriſdiction and Prerogative, and the long Continuance of the Poſſeſſion of the ſame, obtain'd Authority Legantine: By reaſon whereof, he has not only hurt your ſaid Preſcription, but alſo by the ſaid Authority Legantine, hath ſpoil'd and taken away from many Houſes of Religion, within this your Realm, much Subſtance of their Goods, and alſo hath uſurped upon all your Ordinaries, within this your Realm, much part of their Juriſdiction, in Derogation of your Prerogative, and to the great Hurt of your ſaid Ordinaries, Prelates, and Religious.

2. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, being your Ambaſſador in France, made a Treaty with the French King for the Pope, your Majeſty not knowing any part thereof, nor named in the ſame; and binding the ſaid French King to abide his Order and Award, if any Controverſie or Doubt ſhou'd ariſe upon the ſame, betwixt the ſaid Pope and the French King.

3. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, being your Ambaſſador in France, ſent a Commiſſion to Sir Gregory de Caſſalis, under your Great Seal, in your Grace's Name, to conclude a Treaty of Amity with the Duke of Ferrara, without any Commandment or Warrant of your Highneſs, nor your ſaid Highneſs advertis'd or made Privy to the ſame.

4. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, of his preſumptuous Mind, in divers and many of his Letters and Inſtructions, ſent out of this Realm to outward Parts, had join'd himſelf with your Grace, as in ſaying and writing, The King and I wou'd ye ſhou'd do thus: The King and I do give unto you our hearty Thanks: Whereby it is apparent that he us'd himſelf more like a Fellow to your Highneſs than like a Subject.

5. Alſo where it hath ever been accuſtomed within this Realm, that when Noblemen do ſwear their Houſhold Servants, the firſt part of their Oath hath been, that they ſhould be true Liege Men to the King and his Heirs Kings of England: The ſame Lord Cardinal cauſed his Servants to be only ſworn to him, as if there had been no Sovereign above him.

6. And alſo whereas your Grace is our Sovereign Lord and Head, in whom ſtandeth all the Surety and Wealth of this Realm; the ſame Lord Cardinal knowing himſelf to have the foul and contagious Diſeaſe of the Great Pox broken out upon him in divers Places of his Body, came daily to your Grace, rowning in your Ears, and blowing upon your moſt noble Grace, with his perilous and infective Breath, to the marvellous Danger of your Highneſs, if God of his infinite Goodneſs had not better provided for your Highneſs. And when he was once healed of them; he made your Grace to believe, that his Diſeaſe was an Impoſthum in his Head, and none other thing.

7. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, by his Authority Legantine, hath given by Prevention, the Benefices of divers Perſons, as well Spiritual and Temporal, contrary to your Crown and Dignity, and your Laws and Statutes therefore provided: By reaſon whereof, he is in danger to your Grace of Forfeiture of his Lands and Goods, and his Body at your Pleaſure.

8. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, taking upon him otherwiſe than a true Counſellor ought to do, hath uſed to have all Ambaſſadors come firſt to him alone, and ſo hearing their Charges and Intents, 'tis to be thought he hath inſtructed them after his Pleaſure and Purpoſe, before that they came to your Preſence, contrary to your high Commandment by your Grace's Mouth to him given, and alſo to other Perſons ſent to him by your Grace.

9. And alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath practiſed ſo, that all manner of Letters ſent from beyond the Sea to your Highneſs, hath come firſt to his Hands, contrary to your high Commandment by your own Mouth; and alſo by others ſent to him by your Grace: By reaſon whereof your Highneſs nor any of your Council, had Knowledge of no Matters but of ſuch as it pleaſed him to ſhew them: Whereby your Highneſs and Council have been compelled of very Force, to follow his Devices, which oftentimes were ſet forth by him under ſuch crafty and covert Meanings, that your Highneſs and your Council hath oftentimes been abuſed, inſomuch that when your Council have found and put divers Doubts and Things, which afterwards have enſued; he, to abuſe them, uſed theſe Words, [I will lay my Head that no ſuch thing ſhall happen.]

10. And the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath practiſed, that no manner of Perſons having charge to make Eſpial of things done beyond the Sea, ſhould at their Return, come firſt to your Grace, nor to any other of your Council, but only to himſelf: And in caſe they did the contrary, he puniſhed them there for ſo doing.

11. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath granted Licenſes under your great Seal, for carrying out of Grain and other Victuals, after the Reſtraint hath been made thereof, for his own Lucre and ſingular Advantage of him and his Servants, for to ſend thither; as he bare ſecret Favour, without your Grace's Warrant or Knowledge thereof.

12. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal uſed many Years together, not only to write unto all your Ambaſſadors reſident with other Princes in his own Name, all Advertiſements concerning your Grace's Affairs, being in their Charge: And in the ſame his Letters wrote many Things of his own Mind, without your Grace's Pleaſure known, concealing divers things which had been neceſſary for them to know; but alſo caus'd them to write their Advertiſements unto him; and of the ſame Letters he uſed to conceal, for the compaſſing of his Purpoſe, many things both from all your other Counſellours, and from your ſelf alſo.

13. And where good Hoſpitality hath been uſed to be kept in Houſes and Places of Religion of this Realm, and many poor People thereby reliev'd, the ſaid Hoſpitality and Relief is now decay'd and not us'd; And it is commonly reported that the Occaſion thereof is, becauſe the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath taken ſuch Impoſitions of the Rulers of the ſaid Houſes, as well for his Favour in making of Abbots and Priors, as for his Viſitation by his Authority Legantine; And yet nevertheleſs taketh yearly of ſuch religious Houſes ſuch yearly and continual Charges, as they be not able to keep Hoſpitality as they were us'd to do; which is a great Cauſe that there be ſo many Vagabonds, Beggars, and Thieves.

14. And where the ſame ſaid Lord Cardinal ſaid before the Suppreſſion of ſuch Houſes as he hath ſuppreſs'd, that the Poſſeſſions of them ſhould be ſett to Ferme among your Lay Subjects, after ſuch reaſonable yearly Rent as they ſhould well thereupon live and keep good Hoſpitality: Now the Demeſne Poſſeſſion of the ſame Houſes ſince the Suppreſſion of them hath been ſurvey'd, mete, and meaſur'd by the Acre, and be now ſet above the Value of the old Rent; And alſo ſuch as were Farmers by Covent Seal and Copieholders be put out and amoved of their Farms, or elſe compell'd to pay new Fine, contrary to all Equity and Conſcience.

15. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, ſitting among the Lords and others of your moſt honourable Privy Council, uſed himſelf, that if any Man would ſhew his Mind, according to his Duty, contrary to the Opinion of the ſaid Cardinal, he would ſo take him up with his accuſtomable Words, that they were better to hold their Peace than to ſpeak, ſo that he would hear no Man ſpeak but one or two great Perſonages, ſo that he would have all the Words himſelf, and conſum'd much time with a fair Tale.

16. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal by his Ambition and Pride hath hinder'd and undone many of your poor Subjects for want of Diſpatchment of matters, for he would no Man ſhould meddle but himſelf; Inſomuch that it hath been affirm'd by many wiſe Men, that ten of the moſt wiſe and moſt expert Men in England were not ſufficient in convenient time to order the matters that he would retain to himſelf; And many times he deferr'd the ending of matters, becauſe that Suiters ſhould attend and wait upon him, whereof he had no ſmall Pleaſure, that his Houſe might be repleniſh'd with Suiters.

17. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, by his Authority Legantine, hath us'd, if any ſpiritual Man having any Riches or Subſtance, deceas'd, he hath taken their Goods as his own, by reaſon whereof their Wills be not perform'd; And one mean he had to put them in fear that were made Executors to refuſe to meddle.

18. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal conſtrain'd all Ordinaries in England yearly to compound with him, or elſe he will uſurp half or the whole of their Juriſdiction by Prevention, not for good Order of the Dioceſs, but to extort Treaſure; for there is never a poor Archdeacon in England, but that he paid yearly to him a Portion of his Living.

19. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath not only by his untrue Suggeſtion to the Pope, ſhamefully ſlander'd many good religious Houſes, and good vertuous Men dwelling in them, but alſo ſuppreſs'd, by reaſon thereof, above thirty Houſes of Religion. And where by Authority of his Bull, he ſhould not ſuppreſs any Houſe that had more Men of Religion in number, above the number of ſix or ſeven, he hath ſuppreſs'd divers Houſes that had above the number; And thereupon hath caus'd divers Offices to be found by verdict untruly, that the religious Perſons ſo ſuppreſs'd had voluntarily forſaken their ſaid Houſes, which was untrue, and ſo hath caus'd open Perjury to be committed, to the high Diſpleaſure of Almighty God.

20. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath examin'd diverſe and many matters in the Chancery, after Judgement thereof given at the Common Law, in Subverſion of your Laws, and made ſome Perſons reſtore again to the other Party condemn'd that they had in Execution by virtue of the Judgment of the Common Law.

21. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath granted many Injunctions by Writte, and the Parties never call'd thereunto, nor Bill put in againſt them; And by reaſon thereof divers of your Subjects have been put from their lawful Poſſeſſion of their Lands and Tenements. And by ſuch means he hath brought the more Party of the Suiters of this your Realm before himſelf; whereby he and divers of his Servants hath gotten much Riches, and your Subjects ſuffer'd great Wrongs.

22. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, to augment his great Riches, hath caus'd divers Pardons granted by the Pope to be ſuſpended, which could not be reviv'd till that the ſaid Lord Cardinal were rewarded, and alſo had a yearly Penſion of the ſaid Pardon.

23. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, not regarding your Laws nor Juſtice, of his extort Power hath put out diverſe and many Farmers of his Lands, and alſo Patentees of the Archbiſhoprick of York, and of the Biſhoprick of Wincheſter, and of the Abbey of St. Albans, which had good and ſufficient Grant thereof by your Laws.

24. Alſo the ſame Lord Cardinal at many times when any Houſes of Religion hath been void, hath ſent his Officers thither, and with crafty Perſuaſions hath induc'd them to compromit their Election in him; And before he nam'd or confirm'd any of them, he and his Servants receiv'd ſo much great Goods of them, that in a manner it hath been to the undoing of the Houſe.

25. Alſo by his Authority Legantine, the ſame Lord Cardinal hath viſited the moſt part of the religious Houſes and Colleges of this your Realm, and hath taken from them the twenty fifth part of their Livelyhood, to the great Extortion of your Subjects, and Derogation of your Laws and Prerogative, and no Law hath been to bear him ſo to doe.

26. Alſo when matters have been near a Judgment by Proceſs of your Common Law, the ſame Lord Cardinal hath not only given and ſent Injunctions to the Parties, but alſo ſent for your Judges, and expreſsly by Threats commanded them to defer the Judgement, to the evident Subverſion of your Laws, if the Judges would ſo have ceas'd.

27. And whereas neither the Biſhop of York, nor Wincheſter, nor the Abbey of St. Albans, nor the Profit of his Legation, nor the Benefit of the Chancery, nor his great Penſion out of France, nor his Wards and other inordinate taking could ſuffice him, he hath made his Son Winter to ſpend ſeven and twenty hundred Pounds by the Year, which he taketh to his own Uſe, and giveth him not paſt two hundred Pounds yearly to live upon.

In this Impeachment 'tis confeſs'd the Cardinal had the King's Licenſe to exerciſe his Legantine Commiſſion.

28. Alſo whereas the ſaid Lord Cardinal did firſt ſue unto your Grace to have your Aſſent to be Legate de Latere, promiſing and ſolemnly proteſting before your Majeſty, and before the Lords both Spiritual and Temporal, that he would nothing do nor attempt by the virtue of his Legacie that ſhould be contrary to your gracious Prerogative or Regality, or to the Dammage or Prejudice of the Juriſdiction of any Ordinary, and that by his Legacie no Man ſhould be hurted nor offended: And upon that condition, and no other, he was admitted by your Grace to be Legate within this your Realm: This Condition he hath broken, as is well known to all your Subjects. And when that he made this Promiſe, he was buſſy in his Suit at Rome to viſit all the Clergy of England both exempt and not exempt.

29. Alſo upon the Suit of the ſaid Lord Cardinal at Rome to have his Authority Legantine, he made untrue Surmiſe to the Pope's Holyneſs againſt the Clergy of your Realm; which was, that the regular Perſons of the ſaid Clergy had given themſelves in reprobum Senſum; which Words St. Paul, writing to the Romans, apply'd to abominable Sin; which Slander to your Church of England ſhall for ever remain in the Regiſter at Rome againſt the Clergy of this your Realm.

30. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal had the more part of the Goods of Doctor Smith, late Biſhop of Lincoln, Biſhop Savage of York, Maſter Dalbye Archdeacon of Richmond, Maſter Tonyers, Doctor Rothall late Biſhop of Durham, and of Doctor Foxe late Biſhop of Wincheſter, contrary to their Wills, and your Laws and Juſtice.

31. Alſo at the Oyer and Terminer of York, Proclamation was made that every Man ſhould put in their Bills for Extortion of Ordinaries; And when divers Bills were put in againſt the Officers of the ſaid Lord Cardinal of Extortion, for taking twelve Pence of the Pound for Probation of Teſtaments, whereof diverſe Bills were found before Juſtice Fitz Herbert and other Commiſſioners, the ſaid Lord Cardinal remov'd the ſaid Inditements into the Chancery by Certiorari, and rebuked the ſaid Fitz Herbert for the ſame Cauſe.

32. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath buſſy'd himſelf, and endeavoured by crafty and untrue Tales to make Diſſenſion and Debate amongſt your Nobles of your Realm, which is ready to be prov'd.

33. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal's Officers hath diverſe times compell'd your Subjects to ſerve him with Carts for Carriage, and alſo his Servants hath taken both Corn and Cattel, Fiſh, and all other Victual, at your Grace's Price, or under, as tho' it had been for your Grace, which is contrary to your Laws.

34. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal hath miſus'd himſelf in your moſt honourable Court, in keeping of as great Eſtate there in your abſence, as your Grace would have done if you had been there preſent in your own Perſon.

35. Alſo his Servants, by vertue of your Commiſſion under your Broad Seal by him to them given, hath taken Cattel and all other Victual at as low a Price as your Purveyors hath done for your Grace by your Prerogative, againſt the Laws of your Realm.

36. Alſo where it hath been accuſtomed, that your Purveyors for your honourable Houſhold have had yearly out of your Town and Liberty of St. Albans three or four hundred Quartars of Wheat; truth it is, that ſince the Lord Cardinal had the room of the Abbot, your ſaid Purveyors cou'd not be ſuffer'd by him and his Officers to take any Wheat within the ſaid Town or Liberty.

37. Alſo he hath diverſe times given Injunctions to your Servants that have been for Cauſes before him in the Star Chamber, that they, nor other for them, ſhould make or labour by any manner of way, directly or indirectly, to your Grace, to obtain your Grace's Favour or Pardon which was a preſumptuous Intent for any Subject.

38. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal did call before him Sir John Stanly Knight, which had taken a Farm by Covent Seal of the Abbot and Covent of Cheſter, and afterwards by his Power and Might, contrary to right, committed the ſaid Sir John Stanley to the Priſon of Fleet by the ſpace of a Year, unto ſuch time as he compell'd the ſaid Sir John to releaſe his Covent Seal to one Leghe of Adlington, which marry'd one Lark's Daughter, which Woman the ſaid Lord Cardinal kept, and had with her two Children. Whereupon the ſaid Sir John Stanly upon Diſpleaſure taken in his Heart made himſelf Monk in Weſtminſter, and there dy'd.

39. Alſo on a time your Grace being at St. Alban's, according to the ancient Cuſtom us'd within your Verge, your Clerk of the Mercat doing his Office, did preſent unto your Officers of your moſt honourable Houſhold the Prices of all manner of Victuals within the Precinct of the Verge. And 'twas commanded by your ſaid Officers to ſet up the ſaid Prices both on the Gates of your honourable Houſhold, and alſo within the Market Place within the Town of St. Alban's, as of antient Cuſtom hath been uſed. And the Lord Cardinal hearing the ſame, preſumptuouſly, not like a Subject, caus'd the aforeſaid Prices, which were ſeal'd with your Grace's Seal, accuſtomably uſed for the ſame, to be taken off and pull'd down in the ſaid Market Place where they were ſet up, and in the ſame Places ſet up his own Prices ſeal'd with his Seal, and would, if it had not been letted, in ſemblable manner have uſed your Seal ſtanding upon your Gates: And alſo would of his ſumptuous Mind have openly ſet in the Stocks within your ſaid Town your Clerk of your Market. By wihch Preſumption and Uſurpation your Grace may perceive, that in his Heart he hath reputed himſelf to be equal with your Royal Majeſty.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

40. Alſo the ſaid Lord Cardinal, of his farther pompous and preſumptuous Mind, hath enterpriz'd to join and imprint the Cardinal's Hat under your Arms in your Coyn of Groats made at your City of York, which like Deed hath not been ſeen to be done by any Subject within your Realm before this time.

41. Alſo where one Sir Enward Jones Clerk, Parſon of Orewley in the County of Bucks, in the eighteenth Year of your moſt noble Reign let his ſaid Parſonage with all Tithes and other Profits of the ſame to one William Johnſon by Indenture for certain Years, within which Years the Dean of the ſaid Cardinal's College in Oxford pretended Title to a certain Portion of Tithes within the ſaid Parſonage, ſuppoſing the ſaid Portion to belong to the Parſonage of Chichelly, which was appointed to the Priory of Tykeford lately ſuppreſs'd, where (of truth) the Parſons of Orewly have been peaceably poſſeſs'd of the ſaid Portion out of the time of mind; Hereupon a Subpœna was directed to the ſaid Johnſon to appear afore the Lord Cardinal at Hampton Court, out of any term with an Injunction to ſuffer the ſaid Dean to occupy the ſaid Portion. Whereupon the ſaid Johnſon appeared before the ſaid Lord Cardinal at Hampton Court, where, without any Bill, the ſaid Lord Cardinal committed him to the Fleet, where he remain'd by the ſpace of twelve Weeks, becauſe he would not depart with the ſaid Portion. And at the laſt upon a Recognizance made that he ſhould appear before the ſaid Lord Cardinal whenſoever he was commanded, he was deliver'd out of the Fleet; Howbeit as yet the ſaid Portion is ſo kept from him that he dare not deal with it.

42. Alſo where one Martin Docowra had a Leaſe of the Mannor of Balſall, in the County of Warwick, for Term of certain Years, an Injunction came to him out of the Chancery by Writ upon pain of a Thouſand Pounds, that he ſhould avoid the Poſſeſſion of the ſame Mannor, and ſuffer Sir George Throckmorton Knight to take the Profits of the ſame Mannor to the time the matter depending in the Chancery between the Lord of St. John's and the ſaid Docowra was diſcuſs'd. And yet the ſaid Docowra never made anſwer in the Chancery, nor ever was call'd into the Chancery for that Matter; And now of late he hath received a like Injunction upon pain of Two Thouſand Pounds, contrary to the Courſe of the Common Law.

43 Alſo whereas in the Parliament Chamber, and in open Parliament, Communication and Deviſes were had and moved, wherein an incident Mention was made of Matters touching Hereſies and erroneous Sects: It was ſpoken and reported by one Biſhop there being preſent, and confirmed by a good Number of the ſame Biſhops, in preſence of all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal then aſſembled, That Two of the ſaid Biſhops were minded and deſired to repair unto the Univerſity of Cambridge for Examination, Reformation, and Correction of ſuch Errors as then ſeemed and were reported to reign among the Students and Scholars of the ſame, as well touching the Lutheran Sect and Opinions, as otherwiſe: The Lord Cardinal informed of the good Minds and Intents of the ſaid two Biſhops in that behalf, expreſly inhibited and commanded them in no wiſe ſo to do. By means whereof, the ſame Errors, as they affirmed, crept more abroad, and took greater place; ſaying furthermore, that 'twas not in their Defaults that the ſaid Hereſies were not puniſhed, but in the ſaid Lord Cardinal, and that 'twas no reaſon any Blame or Lack ſhould be arrected to them for his Offence. Whereby it evidently appeareth, that the ſaid Lord Cardinal, beſides all other his heinous Offences, hath been the Impeacher and Diſturber of due and direct Correction of Hereſies, being highly to the Danger and Peril of the whole Body, and good Chriſtian People of this your Realm.

Hen. VIII. K.

44. Finally, Foraſmuch as by the foreſaid Articles, is evidently declared to your moſt Royal Majeſty, that the Lord Cardinal by his outragious Pride, hath greatly ſhadowed a long Seaſon, your Grace's Honour, which is moſt highly to be regarded, and by his inſatiable Avarice, and ravenous Appetite, to have Riches and Treaſure without meaſure, hath ſo grievouſly oppreſſed your poor Subjects with ſo manifold Crafts of Bribery and Extortion, that the Commonwealth of this your Grace's Realm, is thereby greatly decayed and impoveriſhed: And alſo by his Cruelty, Iniquity, Affection, and Partiality, hath ſubverted the due Courſe and Order of your Grace's Laws to the undoing of a great Number of your loving People.

Pleaſe it your moſt Royal Majeſty therefore, of your excellent Goodneſs towards the Weal of this your Realm and Subjects of the ſame, to ſet ſuch Order and Direction upon the ſaid Lord Cardinal, as may be to the terrible Example of others to beware ſo to offend your Grace and your Laws hereafter; and that he be ſo provided for, that he never have any Power, Juriſdiction, or Authority hereafter, to trouble, ver, and impoveriſh the Commonwealth of this your Realm, as he hath done heretofore, to the great Hurt and Damage of every Man almoſt high and low, which for your Grace ſo doing, will daily pray, as their Duty is, to Almighty God for the proſperous Eſtate of your moſt Royal Majeſty, long to endure in Honour and good Health, to the Pleaſure of God, and your Heart's moſt Deſire.

Subſcribed the firſt Day of December the 21ſt Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King Henry the Eighth.

T. More.
T. Norfolk.
Charl. Suff.
Tho. Dorſet.
H. Exon.
John Oxinford.
H. Northumberland.
G. Shrewsbury.
R. Fitzwater.

T. Rocheford.
T. Darcy.
W. Mountjoy.
W. Sandys.
W. Fitzwilliam.
Henry Guldeford.
Anthony Fitzherbert.
John Fitzjames.

Remarks upon ſome of the Articles.

To remark a Word or two upon ſome of theſe Articles. The Seventh Article informs us, that the Cardinal, by giving by Prevention, the Benefices of ſeveral Perſons, was in danger of the Forfeiture of his Lands and Goods, and that his Body was at the King's Pleaſure. From whence 'tis plain, the Cardinal was not convicted of incurring a Premunire, when theſe Articles were exhibited: And that Cavendiſh has rightly obſerv'd the Order of Time in reporting this Matter. For if the Cardinal had been caſt in a Premunire, the Impeachment wou'd not have ſet forth, that he was in danger of forfeiting his Lands and Goods: For the Penalty of 16 Rich. 2. had been executed upon him already. Neither had he his Pardon, nor any thing granted him to loſe, till the 12th of February.

The 19th Article ſets forth, that the Pope had not given him leave to ſuppreſs any Abbeys, which had more than 6 or 7 Religious. This Allegation ſeems to go againſt Matter of Fact: For the Pope had given Wolſey leave to ſuppreſs the Priory of Canwell in the Dioceſs of Litchfield and Coventry. He was likewiſe furniſh'd with the King's Letters Patents for this purpoſe. In Obedience to this Authority, the Prior and Convent ſurrender'd their Houſe and Eſtate to the Cardinal: And as the Record has it, Sponte & ſpontanea, voluntate & aſſenſu reſignaverunt, remiſerunt, & relaxaverunt, ſurſum reddiderunt, & quietè clamaverunt prædictum Prioratum, ac Officium Prioratûs ejuſdem, in manus Cardinalis, una cum omnibus Manerijs, Poſſeſſionibus, & Hereditamentis eidem pertinentibus ſive ſpectantibus (k).

Now that this Houſe had more than ſeven Monks, appears by the Recital of the Eſtate: For 1*ſt*, There are ſeveral Mannors mention'd in the Surrender to the Cardinal: Which ſeems more than a Preſumption, the Houſe exceeded that Number.

2*dly*, When this Priory was forfeited to the Crown, upon Wolſey's being caſt in a Premunire, the King granted it by Act of Parliament to the Heirs of one Bradborn (l). This Conveyance was made in conſideration of a Releaſe of a Penſion of Five hundred Marks per Annum, granted to an Anceſtor of Bradborn and his Heirs, in the Reign of King Edward the Third. Now a perpetual Penſion of Five hundred Marks per Annum, in the Reign of Edward the Third, was a very great Eſtate. From whence we may conclude, that an Equivalent in Land to ſuch a Penſion, was much too large a Proviſion for ſeven Monks*.

The Cardinal miſreported by Fox. He is not charged in the Articles with ſaying, I and the King.

The Fourth Article charges him with the Preſumption of ſpeaking in this manner; The King and I wou'd you ſhou'd do thus. From hence 'tis plain, that Fox has miſreported the Charge, to the Cardinal's Diſadvantage: For in Fox, the Cardinal is impeach'd of a higher Preſumption, made to ſet himſelf before the King, and to ſpeak in the Language of Ego & Rex meus (m).

The Twenty eighth Article declares expreſly, he had the King's Licenſe to exerciſe his Legantine Authority. And ſince the Cardinal had the King's Leave, and was admitted by his Highneſs, as the Article ſpeaks, to be a Legate within this Realm; Was it not a great Hardſhip, he ſhou'd be indicted upon the Statute of Premunire? For, as it appears by the Proceſs, he was not proſecuted ſo much for the Abuſe, as for the bare uſing his Legantine Commiſſion (n). 'Twas for cauſing the Pope's Bull to be publickly read in Weſtminſter, and aſſuming to himſelf the Dignity and Juriſdiction of Legatus de Latere. Thus the King made the Privilege of his Letters Patents a Crime, ſued againſt his own Licenſe, and brought the Cardinal under a ſevere Forfeiture, for making uſe of the Royal Authority.

And whereas 'tis ſaid, the Cardinal promis'd to do nothing to the Prejudice of the Juriſdiction of any Ordinary; 'tis poſſible he might engage thus far: But then the alledging, he broke his Promiſe in viſiting the Religious Houſes, won't hold. For, according to the Doctrine of thoſe Times, the viſiting the Religious and Clergy, was a Branch of the Legantine Commiſſion; and therefore St. Bernard (o), who declaims with great Vehemence againſt the Avarice and Miſbehaviour of ſome of the Legates, makes their Viſitation of Monaſteries, and correcting what was amiſs in the Clergy, a commendable Diſcharge of their Commiſſion, Redeant fatigati quidem, ſed non ſuffarcinati, ſimul & gloriantes, non quod curioſa ſeu pretioſa quæq; terrarum attulerint, ſed quod reliquerint pacem Regnis, legem barbaris, quietem Monaſterijs, Eccleſijs ordinem, Clericis Diſciplinam, &c. And within this Compaſs of Juriſdiction, the famous De Marca agrees with him (p). Beſides, as the Article obſerves, ſeveral of the Monaſteries were exempted, immediately under the Pope, and viſitable by none but his Legates.

In the Forty Third Article, he is charg'd for hindering the Correction of Hereſies, and ſtopping two Biſhops from going to Cambridge to enquire into the Belief of the Students, and puniſh them for Lutheraniſm. Here the Cardinal is impeach'd for the Gentleneſs of his Government, and the Charity of his Temper. Is a Prelate bound then to be of a rigid and proſecuting Humour? Is it part of his Office to rack People to the Dimenſions of his own Faith? One wou'd think the Abſence of this Quality had more of Commendation than Crime in it.

The Twentieth Article againſt the Cardinal looks ſomewhat frivolous: He is charg'd with reverſing Judgements at Common Law, when Lord Chancellor. What harm was in this, provided the Decree was equitable? Is not this frequently done, without Cenſure? And is it not part of the Buſineſs of the Chancery to moderate the Rigour of the Common Law, and relieve the Subject againſt Inferior Courts? But no more of this.

As to the whole Body of the Articles, the Lord Herbert obſerves, that nothing of this Nature was objected to the Cardinal, till he fell under the King's Diſpleaſure, which is a ſign that 'twas the Envy and the Ambition of his Enemies, that form'd the Impeachment: They malign'd his Greatneſs, coveted his Poſt, and it may be, hop'd ſome part of his Wealth might fall to their Share. That the Articles wou'd not ſtand the Teſt, is plain, by their being thrown out of the Houſe of Commons; where Cromwell, by the Cardinal's Inſtructions, diſprov'd and broke the Force of 'em as faſt as they were urg'd (q).

From hence, I ſay, 'tis pretty plain, there was more Clamour than Proof in the Allegations: For when Cromwell came to ſpeak to them, they fell flat, and the Bill was diſmiſs'd.

To proceed: The Cardinal being ſtript of his vaſt Fortune by a Premunire, remain'd in a very unfurniſh'd Condition for ſome time. And now the hard Uſage he lay under, and the Proſpect continuing dark, made an Impreſſion upon his Spirits, and threw him into a Sickneſs. At the hearing of this, the King began to relent, ſent him a Ruby and a kind Meſſage by his Phyſician Doctor Butts, and prevail'd with Miſtreſs Anne Boleyn to make him a Preſent at the ſame time. What Effect this Glimpſe of Favour had upon the Cardinal's Health, is uncertain; but he recover'd ſoon after. And the King, to aſſure him farther, paſs'd his Pardon on the Twelfth

A. D. 1529.

(k) More's Reports, fol. 282.

22 H. 8.
(l) Id. ibid.

* See above, p. 31.

(m) Fox, p. 255. vol. 2.

(n) Ld. Herbert, p. 263.

(o) Epiſt. ad Eugen. III.

(p) De Concord. ſacerdot. & Imper. Tom. 2. lib. 5. cap. 48.

(q) Cavendiſh, p. 150. Ld. Herbert, p. 274. Id.

See Records, Numb. 10.

of February. This Pardon was drawn very full, and takes in the higheſt Articles which had been charg'd upon him. That it was penn'd with the utmoſt Advantage and Strength of Law, may be farther prov'd from Sir Edward Coke's Authority. I ſhall cite this learned Gentleman in his own Words.

"The moſt large and beneficial Pardons, ſays he, which we have read and do remember, were that to William Wickham Biſhop of Wincheſter, (for good Men will never refuſe God and the King's Pardon, becauſe every Man does often offend both of them) and that other to Thomas Wolſey Cardinal, which are learnedly and largely penn'd.

Coke's Inſtit. pt. 3. cap. 105. of Pardons, fol. 235.

The Cardinal pardon'd and reſtor'd to the Archbiſhoprick of York.

And now the King gave him farther Marks of his Friendſhip, reſtor'd him the Archbiſhoprick of York, and ſent him Money, Plate, and rich Furniture for his Houſe and Chapel. Inſomuch, that 'tis thought, the Cardinal had ſome Hopes of recovering his Intereſt at Court. He petition'd the King for leave to remove from Aſhur to Richmond, and had ſome Expectation of ſucceeding in his Requeſt. But his Enemies ſuſpecting this Nearneſs to the Court might make way to his former Aſcendant, prevail'd with the King to ſend him to his Dioceſs of York. The Cardinal being commanded to the North, had no Excuſe for Delays, but want of Money; with which he acquainted the King. Upon which Complaint, being furniſh'd with a Thouſand Pound, he ſet forwards, was remarkably charitable and devout in his Journey, and had the Reſpect of great Numbers of People, who came to him all along upon the Road. And thus by ſlow Removes, he came to Cawood Caſtle near *York, about the End of September. And here Proviſion was made for a cuſtomary and ſolemn Inſtalment about a Month after. But whether the King thought the Pomp of this Ceremony unſeaſonable, and too much for a Man in Diſgrace, or whether the Cardinal had thrown out ſome Expreſſions of Diſcontent, is but meer Conjecture: However 'tis certain, his Fate was determin'd. Indeed the true Reaſon why the King reſolv'd his Ruine, ſeems to have been his Incompliance in the Divorce. When the Cardinal was at Cawood, the King endeavoured ſtrongly to work him to his Purpoſe. Here he was ply'd with Menacing and Carreſſes (r). Now to what purpoſe cou'd all this Viciſſitude of Favour and Frowns ſerve? Why, I ſay, was this Expedient made uſe of, unleſs 'twas to prevail upon the Cardinal's Paſſion, and bring him to the King's Bent? But Wolſey continued inflexible; and the King was diſappointed. But what Criminal Inobſequiouſneſs was there in all this? By the Principles of that Age, the Cardinal was bound to Incompliance. His Commiſſion was revok'd, and the Cauſe call'd over to Rome. 'Twas therefore not in his Power to diſſolve the Marriage, without renouncing the Pope; which was more than had yet been done by the King himſelf.

A. D. 1530.

* A Seat belonging to the Archbiſhoprick.

Cavendiſh and Lord Herbert.

A Conjecture upon the Cardinal's Ruine.

(r) Godwin. Annal.

Fox miſrepreſents the Cardinal.

Fox pretends, Wolſey and Campegio doubl'd with the King, and deluded him in the Buſineſs of the Divorce (s). But to ſay nothing concerning Campegio, 'tis plain this Martyrologiſt miſreports Wolſey: For by what has been cited already, 'tis ſufficiently evident, that our Cardinal was both ſincere and very active in procuring the King Satisfaction, and a learned Prelate (t) who is no Friend to the Cardinal's Memory, acquits him of all Blame in this Particular.

(s) Fox, Vol. 2. p. 253.

(t) Bp. Burnet, p. 53. pt. 1.

He is arreſted for High-Treaſon.

But now the Ceremony of the Inſtalment approaching, the Cardinal was arreſted for High-Treaſon by the Earl of Northumberland, and Sir Walter Walſh. The Cardinal, at the Earl's coming, receiv'd him very friendly, and prepar'd for his Entertainment. But when he underſtood his Buſineſs, and was deny'd a Sight of the Earl's Commiſſion, he refus'd to obey the Arreſt. 'Tis probable, he might have ſome Reaſon of Diſguſt againſt this Nobleman. But when Walſh, a Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber, appear'd, he ſurrender'd himſelf (u) to him. Cavendiſh reports, this Charge of High-Treaſon againſt the Cardinal, was a Plot of his Enemies at Court. Indeed there's little Probability of the Cardinal's being guilty, if we conſider his Appeal to the King for his Innocence in his laſt Sickneſs, and his dying Words to the ſame purpoſe. And farther, a Crime of this Nature is very unlikely, in reſpect of the Time. For in February laſt the Cardinal was pardon'd for all High-Treaſons: Since which time, his Intereſt was broken, he had been confin'd, and acted in no Buſineſs. After the Arreſt, he ſet forward for London; fell ſick by the Way, and dy'd at the Abbey of Leiceſter. Fox charges the Cardinal with poiſoning himſelf (w). But Cavendiſh, who attended him, gives no Hint of any ſuch Suſpicion. By this Gentleman's Report he dy'd of a Dyſentery. Indeed, the Manner of his Carriage is an Argument, he did not ſend himſelf into the other World. For, when he was attach'd for High-Treaſon, he behav'd himſelf with Spirit and Preſence of Mind. He refus'd to obey the Arreſt, and ſurrender to the Earl of Northumberland. He maintain'd his Innocence with the higheſt Solemnities, preſs'd for a Trial, and deſir'd nothing more than to be brought Face to Face before his Enemies. Theſe, one wou'd think, are no great Signs of Dejection or Deſpair (x). By the way, this Remark may ſerve to clear him in ſome meaſure from the Imputation of Cowardice, which a learned Hiſtorian has lately thrown upon him (y). But to do him Juſtice againſt Fox: If there was any foul Play, 'tis moſt likely 'twas receiv'd from thoſe who had him in Cuſtody. For once at Dinner, he complain'd of being taken with an extraordinary Coldneſs at his Stomach: Upon which, he fell into that Sickneſs, which carry'd him off (z).

But refuſes to ſurrender himſelf to the Earl of Northumberland.

(u) Cavendiſh and Ld. Herbert.

A. D. 1530. Nov. 26.

(w) Fox Vol. 2. p. 258.

He falls ſick, and dies at Leiceſter.

(x) Cavendiſh, p. 178, 180, 186.

(y) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 81.

(z) Cavendiſh, p. 185.

His Character and Benefactions.

To ſay ſomething farther of him, by way of Character. He was not altogether without his Failings. He ſeems to have affected Pomp and ſecular Grandeur too much. He held the Office of Lord Chancellor, the Biſhoprick of Wincheſter, the rich Abbey of St. Albans, and the Archbiſhoprick of York, all at one time. This, without doubt, was being too great a Pluraliſt. He appears likewiſe to have been too reſign'd a Courtier, and over obſequious to the King's Pleaſure. And this Exceſs of Compliance he regretted at his laſt Hour. And to this ſort of Miſconduct, a High Station lies not a little expos'd. But then to ballance theſe Infirmities, he had the Mixture of many good Qualities. He was, as the Lord Herbert obſerves, a Perſon of great Parts and Induſtry (a). Had deſervedly the Reputation of an Able Miniſter, and was courted by the Greateſt Princes. His Learning is ſaid to have lain moſt in School Divinity and Canon Law. But notwithſtanding this Character of Abatement, we don't find he was ever tax'd with being underqualify'd for the Chancery Bench. He is much blam'd, by ſome Hiſtorians, for Haughtineſs and ſtiff Behaviour. But if this had been his Fault, it ſeems he left it off before his laſt Miſfortune. For Cavendiſh relates, that in his laſt Journey to the North, he gain'd very much upon all ſorts of People: And that he was remarkable, not only for his Bounty and exemplary Life, but likewiſe for his Condeſcenſion and obliging manner(b). He ſeems to have been a good natur'd Maſter, by the Tenderneſs and Regret between him and his Family at parting, and his declaring, that no Circumſtance in his Misfortune, troubl'd him ſo much, as his being diſabl'd from making a Proviſion for his Servants. His Schemes for the Benefit of Learning, were noble and well laid: As appears by his College at Oxford. He likewiſe founded a College at Ipſwich, for the Service of Religion and the Poor. He likewiſe deſign'd the Founding a Society in London, for the Civil and Canon Law. For this purpoſe, he projected the building a fine Stone-College. The famous Antiquary, Sir Robert Cotton, ſaw the Model of this Structure. He built the greateſt part of Whitehall, and Hampton Court intirely. The Monument of Braſs, which he left imperfect, was a Work of extraordinary Curioſity and Expence. 'Tis not certain whether he deſign'd this Mauſoleum for himſelf or the King. He came into the World with no Advantage of Family, his Father being but a poor Man in Ipſwich. But Cavendiſh ſays nothing of his being a Butcher. While the Cardinal ſate at the Helm, the Kingdom held on in a Courſe of Proſperity, and the publick Motions were ſteady and ſtrong. But not long after, the Government grew perplex'd and unacceptable: And the Face of things was much alter'd both at Home and Abroad (c). And to ſpeak ſoftly, it muſt be ſaid, the King cruſh'd this Miniſter with a very indifferent Grace. Indeed the King had ſhewn himſelf ſomewhat Arbitrary with the Cardinal, before the Premunire. He had oblig'd Wolſey to reſign his Benefices in the Dioceſs of Wincheſter, to the Diſpoſal of the Crown. There was a Commiſſion made out for this purpoſe. Which being an unprecedented Command, I ſhall tranſcribe it into the Records for the Reader.

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 314.

An uncharitable Inference in Fox.

Fox, after he has laſh'd the Cardinal's Memory, and overloaded him with Cenſure, draws a Remark of Diſadvantage upon the Clergy, from this one Inſtance. He makes the Cardinal a ſort of Pattern, by which we are to judge of the reſt of the Hierarchy (d). Now, ſuppoſing the worſt of the Cardinal's Character had been true, Which way are all the Spirituality concern'd in the Imputation? Can any thing be more injudicious, and lean-temper'd, than to throw the Blemiſhes of a ſingle Perſon, upon a whole Order of Men? An Author, who gives ſuch broad Signs of Diſaffection, and cenſures at this looſe rate, ſhou'd be read with great Caution.

A. D. 1529.

To go back a little: Laſt Summer the Treaty of Cambray was concluded between the Emperor and the French King. By an Article in this Peace, King Francis's Two Sons were diſcharg'd, who had been given as Hoſtages for the performing the Capitulation at Madrid. The French King being obliged to the King of England, for the Inlargement of his Children, held on his Correſpondence, and acquainted the King with what paſs'd at Cambray (e).

A Parliament call'd. Lutheraniſm gains ground in England.

In the Beginning of November, this Year, the King call'd a Parliament. The Lord Herbert obſerves, the Lutheran Tenents had gain'd Ground in ſeveral Places of England; and that the Common People began to queſtion ſome of the receiv'd Doctrines, and fall off from implicite Belief. On the other hand, the leading Church-Men thought all Innovation dangerous, and that the Fundamentals of Religion might ſuffer this way. This Concluſion, ſays the noble Hiſtorian, was a fatal Miſtake. For in the Beginning of theſe Debates, a little Mitigation of Rigor, a Voluntary Relaxation of ſome of the late Doctrines of the Church of Rome, and a favourable Conſtruction in the reſt, might have prov'd an admirable Expedient. By this means Extremities might have been prevented, and the Peace of Chriſtendom preſerv'd. For want of ſuch moderate Compliance, the Rupture follow'd.

Incompliance and Rigour a wrong Expedient.

Now Separations commonly raiſe ill Blood, and make the Spirits turn eager. Diviſions occaſion Diſaffection: And when Prejudice and Partialities run high, Men loſe their Way in the Controverſie, and Truth ſuffers in the Conteſt. And when Books are ignominiouſly ſuppreſs'd, and Perſons ruggedly treated for their Diſſent, as ſome were in England, the Averſion is ſtill more inflam'd. Theſe Severities made the Lollards and Lutherans fall foul upon the Clergy, and print Invectives againſt the whole Order. Theſe Remonſtrances coming to the King's Ear, made him enquire into Matter of Fact, and refer the Grievances to the Parliament.

Complaints of the Exactions and Miſconduct of the Clergy.

In the Houſe of Commons ſeveral Bills were brought in for Relief, againſt the Exactions of the Clergy: One was to moderate their Demands for probate of Wills: And another for the regulating of Mortuaries: They likewiſe complain'd of the Plurality of Benefices, of Non-reſidence, and Church-Mens being Farmers of Lands. This Buſineſs did not paſs without Satyrical Remarks upon the Miſmanagement of the Clergy.

When theſe Bills were ſent into the Houſe of Lords, Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter, deliver'd himſelf with ſome Vehemence againſt the Commons. He told the Lords all Heat and Cenſure of this kind proceeded from want of Faith; letting 'em know the Danger the Kingdom was in, by the Fate of Bohemia. The Lower Houſe complain'd to the King of the Biſhop's Speech, and mov'd for Reparation. Fiſher, to avoid the Shock, explain'd himſelf to an inoffenſive Senſe, and ſaid, by thoſe who wanted Faith, he meant only the People of Bohemia. This Conſtruction the King order'd Sir William Fitz Williams to report to the Lower Houſe. And thus by his Majeſty's Interpoſing, the matter was paſt over. However, the Affront, as 'twas counted, occaſion'd one of the Members to make an odd Speech upon the Subject of Religion. The Biſhop of Rocheſter had complain'd, that the Charge of Abuſes upon the Hierarchy proceeded from Diſaffection: And that nothing wou'd content the Commons but Pulling down the Church. From the Biſhop's calling the Clergy, the Church, this Gentleman takes the riſe of his Speech.

A Speech in the Houſe of Commons, concerning Religion.

" Did the Biſhop of Rocheſter, ſays he, and his " Party talk only in this manner, I ſhou'd be the " leſs concern'd at the Language. But ſince there " are ſo many Diverſities of Sects, ſo many Di- " ſtinctions in Religion, ſo many who encloſe " the true Church, and appropriate the Privi- " lege of Catholick Communion to themſelves: " Since upon this Claim, they both invite and " menace to Conformity, and preſs a Reſigna- " tion of our Belief without Heſitancy or Scru- " ple. Theſe things conſider'd, I ſhall crave " leave to propoſe, how 'tis proper for us of " the Laity to manage our ſelves: Not that I " pretend to be infallible in my Expedient, or " would ſettle my Opinion for a Rule of Pra- " ctice: But I conceive an Affair of this nature " is of the laſt Importance, and therefore ſhou'd " be thoroughly debated.

" I grant in all Reſolutions of Moment, 'tis " difficult to manage with Temper, to ſtop at " the right Point, and keep off from running in-

---

(b) Cavendiſh p. 173. Id. p. 148, 183.

Buck of the third Univerſity, &c. at the End of Stow, pag. 1078.

(c) Godwin. Annal.

See Records N. 11.

(d) Fox, vol. 2. p. 258.

(e) Ld. Herbert, p. 229. Id. 292.

“to Extremes. The Danger of a falſe Step is ſtill greater in religious Matters: For here the Path is narrow, the Ground often ſlippery, and the Precipices deep on either ſide. And becauſe the chief Buſineſs of Man's Life, is to enquire into the means of being happy for ever, 'tis fit he ſhou'd not reſign himſelf to chance, but carefully compute upon the Qualities and Conduct of his ſpiritual Guides. For thoſe, who take this Charge upon 'em, differ not only in Ceremonies and Circumſtantials, but the main Doctrines are ſometimes oppoſite and inconſiſtent with each other. What then is to be done? Are we to deliver our ſelves up to the firſt Pretender, and take the Religion of our Country upon Content? How can a Man ſatisfy his Conſcience by being thus implicit? Let him but look abroad, and he'll ſee the heavieſt Denunciations imaginable againſt his own Belief. And yet amongſt thoſe, who cenſure thus deeply, he'll find Perſons of equal Abilities with his own Inſtructors. Now is it reaſonable for him to believe, that God has confin'd Truth and Happineſs to his ſingle Religion, and abandon'd the reſt of Mankind? Eſpecially, ſince all the World are deſcended from the ſame common Anceſtors, and equally related to God Almighty: Is every Man therefore bound to believe the Prieſts of his Communion, without Tryal or Reſerve? On the other hand, if he muſt argue for his Faith, and diſpute every Inch of Ground, what length of time is ſufficient for the Inquiry? What Fatigue and Expence muſt be gone through for Satisfaction? How many Languages muſt be learn'd, and Authors turn'd over? How far muſt he run up into Antiquity? How many Syſtems and Schemes of Belief muſt he examine? How many Expoſitions of Doctrine muſt be compar'd? How many ſeeming Contradictions reconcil'd? What diſtant Countries muſt be travelled, and what Hazards undergone upon this ſcore? At this rate, a Man muſt be always rambling, and in motion, to find out the right way into the other World. How then is he to manage himſelf? Is every thing, or nothing to be believ'd? To be indifferent to all Sects, and cloſe with all Communions, is ſenſeleſs and unaccountable. On the other ſide, to throw off all Religion, is ſingular, wicked, and unſafe. To turn Sceptick to this degree, is little ſhort of Diſtraction: For the moſt barbarous People are not without the Worſhip of a ſupreme Being. The Medium therefore between theſe two Extremes, is to ſearch upon the Main, and diſtinguiſh: Not that we can reach the Extent of each Diviſion, or go the whole Length of the Compariſon. But notwithſtanding the Impracticableneſs of ſuch an Enquiry, yet every Man may collect the more eſſential and demonſtrative Parts of his own Religion, and lay them by themſelves. Neither ought he to be over-ruled in this Freedom by the Diſcountenance of any other Perſuaſion. Having thus exerted his Reaſon, and implor'd the Aſſiſtance of the ſupreme Being, his next Buſineſs will be to find out what inward Means Providence has furniſh'd for a Teſt of Truth and Falſhood: And not only ſo, but which way the Approaches towards theſe Qualities may be diſcover'd: And by what Marks we may pronounce upon the Degrees of Probability.

“Neither will this Method deliver him up to the Guidance of private Reaſon, which may miſlead him to Hereſy: For by throwing aſide all doubtful and controverted Points, nothing but common and univerſal Truths will remain. And thus the generally acknowledg'd Doctrines will be a ſort of Touchſtone to try the reſpective Articles of Belief propos'd to him. The keeping this High Road is the beſt Direction not to go wrong in his Journey. By holding to this Rule he'll find how far the Impreſſions of God's Wiſdom and Goodneſs are viſible upon all Mankind: How far he has gone in the General Inſtruction: And to what Degrees his Univerſal Providence extends. And thus by aſcending towards God by the ſame ſteps he deſcends to us, the Enquirer cannot miſs the meeting with the divine Majeſty. What if theſe Truths are perplex'd with Difficulties, and confine upon Error? He ought not to deſpond upon this ſcore. His Intereſt will be to keep to unconteſted Points, and range them in a Method. Neither will this latter Task give much Trouble, ſince theſe Catholick Verities are few, and naturally diſpos'd to connection. And thus thoſe who are our Teachers, ſhou'd imitate our Conduct, and manage by theſe Maxims for Enquiry. To proceed otherwiſe is in effect to bid us not make uſe of the Benefit and Brightneſs of the Day, but only ſtudy by their Candle. Upon the whole, 'tis certainly worth the while to examine how far theſe univerſal Notions will carry us, before we reſign our ſelves to Myſteries and ſupernatural Diſcovery. Not but this way of Information may juſtly challenge our Belief, when the Teſtimony is good, and the Conveyance warrantable.

“And to bring our Principles to Inſtance and Application, if we look into the ſeveral Ages and Quarters of the World, we ſhall find a Supreme Being, diſtinguiſh'd from other queſtionable and miniſterial Deities, and worſhipped with a proportionable Regard.

“Amongſt Diverſities of Rites and Ceremonies, deliver'd as parts of divine Worſhip, we ſhall perceive Virtue under a diſtinguiſh'd Preference: And that the reſt are but Circumſtantials, and attendant upon it. Inſomuch that there is no Sacrament without a View upthis Quality. For the Purpoſe, Benevolence, and regular Practice, Faith, and the Love of God, are ſuch Eſſentials of Religion, that all Exerciſes of Diſcipline, all the Train of Externals, all holy Applications, are perform'd in order to theſe, and ſubſervient to them.

“Amongſt the ſeveral Expiations for ſin preſcrib'd in the World, we ſhall find nothing to the purpoſe without inward Regret for our Miſcarriages, and Submiſſion to the God we have offended.

“And laſtly, notwithſtanding the different Opinions of former Ages with reſpect to Rewards and Puniſhments, we ſhall find the Juſtice and Mercy of God not limited to this Life: No; Theſe Attributes are at Liberty to exert after Death, and to cheriſh, or correct for ever.

“Theſe clear univerſal Truths, continues he, ſhould be firſt entertain'd. Theſe will ſecure us from Impiety and Atheiſm, lay a Foundation for divine Service, and raiſe us to the Hopes of a better Life. Thus Men will be brought off from Controverſy and Jangling, and ſettled upon the Practice of Virtue. And when they fail in their Duty they'll ſeriouſly apply to Repentance and Reformation; without making Pardon ſo cheap and mercenary, “as it ſometimes happens. Beſides, this Method will diſpoſe us to Union and good Correſpondence. For when we are agreed about theſe primary Truths, theſe neceſſary means of Salvation, why ſhould we fall out about the reſt. Theſe Principles exclude nothing of Faith or Tradition; they allow the Benefit of Miracles: They only deny us the Liberty of Ill-nature; and bind us up from breaking into Parties and Animoſities about leſſer matters. Let us therefore furniſh our ſelves with theſe Catholick Notions: They'll never check the Progreſs of our Faith, nor weaken the Authority of the Church: ſo that whether the Eaſtern or Weſtern Chriſtians, whether my Lord of Rocheſter or Luther, whether Eccius or Zuinglius, Eraſmus or Melancton are in the right, we of the Laity ſhall ſuffer nothing by the Diſagreement. Theſe univerſal Verities, theſe infallible Grounds of Religion, already ſuggeſted, will be eaſily reconciled with particular Opinions. For, to conclude, theſe Foundations are ſtrong enough to bear whatever Superſtructures of Faith are rais'd upon them (f).

(f) Lord Herbert, p. 293.

This odd Speech is not mention'd either by Hollingſhead, Goodwin, or Stow: Neither does Lord Herbert tell us the Perſon's Name. All that I ſhall obſerve upon this Free-thinker is, that he gives too much Liberty to private Reaſon: His Maxims are dangerous, and his Scheme ill ſuited to the general Capacity: The Bills concerning Probate of Wills, &c. abovemention'd, paſs'd in this Parliament.

I have already obſerved ſome Regulations were made in this Seſſion concerning Mortuaries; 'tis ſaid the Lords ſpiritual oppoſed the Paſſing this Bill with a great deal of Vehemence and Satyr (g). But Fox reports the Biſhops much more to Advantage (h). This Hiſtorian expreſly aſſures us that the firſt Bills ſent up from the Commons to the Lords were warmly conteſted; and after a great length of Debate came to nothing. Upon this Diſappointment two new ones were drawn by the King's Order, which appeared ſo reaſonable that the Spiritual Lords made no Difficulty to paſs them.

(g) Bp Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 83.
(h) Fox, p. 995, Edit. 2.

The Lords Spiritual paſs'd the laſt Bill concerning Mortuaries without Oppoſition.

In the Act againſt Pluralities, Chaplains to Noblemen, both Spiritual and Temporal, are allowed the Privilege of a Diſpenſation, for two Benefices. But then they are mentioned with Diſadvantage in another reſpect. Their Character is ſomewhat maim'd, and incumbered by the Language of the Statute. But whether the Commiſſion of Prieſts can be ſunk, or their Relation to the Laity inverted, I have elſewhere conſidered at large.

Moral Eſſays, pt. 1. Office of a Chaplain.

To proceed: In this Act there is a remarkable Clauſe with reference to the See of Rome. The Words are theſe.

(i) 21 H. 8. cap. 13. Suing to the Court of Rome for Diſpenſations prohibited.

(i) And if any Perſon or Perſons at any time after the firſt Day of April, in the Year of our Lord God one thouſand, five hundred, and thirty, contrary to this preſent Act, procure and obtain at the Court of Rome or elſewhere, any Licence or Licences, Union, Toleration, or Diſpenſation, to receive and take any more Benefices with Cure than is above limited ſhall for every ſuch Default incur the Danger, Pain, and Penalty of ſeventy Pounds Sterling. And alſo looſe the whole Profits of every ſuch Benefice or Benefices as he receives or takes by force of any ſuch Licence or Licences, Union, Toleration, or Diſpenſation.

And if any Perſon or Perſons procure or obtain at the Court of Rome, or elſewhere, any manner of Licence or Diſpenſation to be non-reſident at the ſaid Dignity, Prebend, or Benefices contrary to this Act, that then any ſuch Perſon or Perſons putting in Execution ſuch Diſpenſation or Licence for himſelf from the ſaid firſt Day of April, in the Year of our Lord God one thouſand, five hundred, and thirty, ſhall run and incur the Penalty, Damage, and Pain of twenty Pounds Sterling, for every time ſo doing, to be forfeited and recovered, &c. And ſuch Licence or Diſpenſation ſo procured or to be put in Execution, to be void and of none effect.

The firſt Check upon the Pope's Supremacy.

This Clauſe gave the firſt Blow to the Pope's Supremacy in England; and upon this View we find theſe two Paragraphs of this Act, repealed the firſt and ſecond of Philip and Mary. From hence it appears the forbidding the Payment of Annates, was not the firſt ſtep towards a Breach with the Court of Rome (k). 'Tis true the Spiritual Lords oppoſed the Paſſing this Bill (l). The unuſual Check given to the Pope's Authority was plainly the Biſhops Reaſon for diſſenting to this Bill: For we are to obſerve the Court of Rome, having exerciſed a ſort of unlimited Sway over the Engliſh Church for ſeveral Ages, 'tis no wonder the Biſhops ſhould be ſurprized at theſe Clauſes of the Act, and not diſentangle themſelves on the ſudden. But then our learned Hiſtorian's remark that they oppoſed this and all other Motions for Reformation (m), is over ſevere, as will appear upon the Courſe of this Work.

(k) Bp. Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 136.
(l) Fox, p. 995.
(m) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 83.

There's another Clauſe in this Act, which forbids all Spiritual Perſons the having or occupying by himſelf or any other to his uſe any Parſonage or Vicaridge in Farm, of the Leaſe or Grant of any Perſon or Perſons, or to take any Profit or Rent out of any ſuch Farm, upon Pain to forfeit Fourty Shillings for every Week, and to looſe ten times the Value of ſuch Profit or Rent as he ſhall take out of any ſuch Farm. All Spiritual Perſons both ſecular and regular benefic'd with Cure, are forbidden under the ſame Forfeiture to take any Stipend or Sallery to ſing for any Soul.

The Clergy of the Province of Canterbury thought their Privileges ſomewhat embarraſs'd by this Act, and particularly by the Clauſe laſt mention'd. Upon this View, they addreſs the King for Protection in their Rights and Immunities ſettled by the Conſtitution; and that they may be in a better Condition to avoid giving Offence to his Highneſs; they deſire the Statutes of Premunire may be farther explain'd in Parliament, and the Caſes where the Penalty is incurr'd, expreſly declar'd: And that it may not be lawful for the Temporal Courts to award a Writ of Premunire againſt Eccleſiaſtical Judges unleſs in the Caſes named in the Statute, and after the Grant of a Prohibition. And they complain in their Petition that this preſent Parliament has preſs'd hard upon the Liberties of the Church. That by enacting ſome things of this nature, they have plainly hazarded their Salvation, and made themſelves liable to the Cenſures of the Church. They remonſtrate farther, that they neither by themſelves, nor their Proxies conſented to the Paſſing this Act, neither were they conſulted in the matter. And laſtly they take the Freedom to ſay, that there was ſomething of Injuſtice in the Law, that the Penalties were exceſſive, and that by diſabling poor Vicars from farming their Rectories, they muſt be thrown out of all Capacity of living hoſpitably *.

* See Records, N. 28.

Supplication of Beggars anſwered by Sir Tho. More.

This Year Sir Tho. More privy Councellor, and Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, wrote a Book, entitul'd, The Supplication of Souls, ſuppos'd in Purgatory. 'Tis written in Anſwer to a Pamphlet, call'd, The Supplication of Beggars. This Beggars Supplication is a feigned Addreſs to the King. In this Application, they acquaint his Highneſs their Numbers are much encreaſed, and that they were ſtarved for want of ſufficient Relief. That this Calamity was brought upon them by the Clergy's ingroſſing the Wealth of the Kingdom. This Pamphlet computes the Number of the Clergy with reſpect to the Laity, and then concludes, they ought only to have the two hundredth part of their Income left them. (n) Sir Thomas More, in giving a Character of this Performance, tells us, whoſoever ſhall read this Book ſhall ſoon perceive, Flouriſhing without Fruit, Subtilty without Subſtance, Rhetorick without Reaſon, bold Babbling without Learning, and Wileneſs without Wit.

Some of the Singularities of this Book.

(n) More's Works. p. 290.

Id. p. 291.

Id. p. 295.

To go on: The Beggars Supplication condemns the Vows of Chaſtity, and rails horribly againſt the Clergy and Religious. He miſreports the Clergy as if they fomented Rebellion, and were in a Practice againſt the State. And yet has the Reſolution to menace the Government. For he makes no Scruple to ſay, that unleſs there is Liberty granted to declaim againſt the Church, the King would be in Danger of loſing his Crown.

Ibid.

Id. p. 301.

The Supplicator advances in his Singularities, and declares againſt Founding of Hoſpitals for the Support of the Poor. Inſtead of this common Method of Charity, he pretends to lay down a more ſerviceable Project. The moſt effectual Relief for the Beggars, is, to put the Church under Contribution, and ſtrip the Clergy of all their Eſtates. And to make this Expedient go down the better, he tells the King, the Clergy are bound to Manual Labour, and to maintain themſelves by the Sweat of their Faces. This declaiming againſt the Revenues of the Clergy, is exactly the Doctrine of the Lollards, and has been already conſider'd (o).

Id. p. 302.

Id. p. 303.

(o) See my Church Hiſtory, pt. 1. p. 661.

The Supplicator complains, no Proviſion of the State can be Proof againſt the Covetouſneſs of the Clergy: He means the Statute of Mortmain, and pretends the Eccleſiaſticks broke through it. To ſhew the Unreaſonableneſs of this Clamour, Sir Thomas More replys, that the Statute of Mortmain was not made for the ſole Advantage of the Temporalty: That the Church had likewiſe a Share in the Benefit of this Act. For if the Tenants of a Biſhop or Abbot, alienate their Lands, theſe ſpiritual Perſons have a Remedy by this Law, no leſs than an Earl or a Duke (p).

(p) More, pag. 333.

A Proclamation to ſuppreſs the Lollards Books.

'Tis probable, the publiſhing this Pamphlet, with ſome others of a reſembling kind, occaſioned the putting out a Proclamation againſt the Lollards; in which, the Teaching, Preaching, or Abetting the Opinions of Wickliffe, Luther, or others of that Perſuaſion, are forbidden. This Proclamation likewiſe forbids the Importing, or Printing any Books contrary to the receiv'd Doctrine of the Church. And for the more effectual Execution of this Order, the Judges and Juſtices of Peace, are commanded to enquire after ſuch Offenders, to apprehend and deliver them to the Biſhops and their Commiſſaries, in order to their Trial (q).

(q) Regiſt. Tunſtal, fol. 145.

Dr. Crome's Recantation. A. D. 1530.

The Beginning of the next Year, Edward Crome, Doctor in Divinity, and Rector of St. Antholin's London, being delated for Preaching erroneous Doctrine, and convented before the Biſhop of London, and others of the ſame Character at York-Place, purg'd himſelf upon the Articles following.

1. He declares his Belief, That departed Souls ſuffer, and are detain'd in Purgatory.
2. That the Holy Martyrs, Apoſtles, and Confeſſors deceas'd, ought to be honour'd and pray'd to.
3. That the Saints in Heaven are our Mediators, and pray for us.
4. That Pilgrimages, and Oblations to the Sepulchres, and Relicks of the Saints, are conſiſtent with Piety, and to good Purpoſe.
5. That the Lent-Faſt, and other Times of Abſtinence, preſcrib'd by the Canons, and cuſtomarily practiſed amongſt Chriſtians, are to be obſerv'd, unleſs in Caſes of Neceſſity.
6. That it is of Neceſſity to Salvation, to believe God confers Grace upon the Uſe of the Seven Sacraments, provided the Perſons receiving, are rightly qualified.
7. That it is a laudable and profitable Practice, to ſet up Images in Churches, in Memory of our Saviour, and his Saints.
8. That the Prayers of the Living are ſerviceable to thoſe in Purgatory.
9. That Faſting, and other Works of Piety, are beneficial, or meritorious.
10. That thoſe, who, upon the Score of erroneous Doctrines, are ſilenc'd by their Ordinary, ought neither to preach nor teach, till they have purg'd themſelves before their Superiors, from ſuch Imputation.
11. That Kings, and other chief Magiſtrates, are not neceſſarily bound to give the People the Holy Scriptures in the Vulgar Tongue, as long as they may be inſtructed in all Points neceſſary to Salvation, by other Methods.
12. That with reſpect to the Exigence of the Juncture, 'tis lawful for Kings, when they are convinc'd of the Reaſonableneſs of ſuch Management, to forbid the putting the Scriptures into the Peoples Hands in the Vulgar Tongue.
13. That the cuſtomary Conſecrations, Sanctifications, and Benedictions, receiv'd in the Church, are commendable Uſages.
14. That he always believ'd the abovemention'd Opinions true, and that in his Judgment, the contrary cannot be maintain'd without Error (r).

(r) Regiſt. Tunſtal, fol. 135.

About two Months forward, Archbiſhop Warham had a Meeting of ſeveral Perſons of Learning and Character, at Lambeth: The Buſineſs was to examine the Books of the Wickliffiſts: To this purpoſe, there was an Inſtrument drawn up and ſign'd, in which we have a Recital of the Lollards Tenents; I ſhall give the Reader an Extract of this Matter. The Inſtrument begins thus,

(s) Regiſt. Warham, fol. 188.

An Extract of the Opinions of the Wickliffiſts.

May 24. A. D. 1530.

In the Name of God: Amen (s). "Be it known "to all, and ſingular true, and faithful Chriſtian People, to whom theſe preſent Letters "Teſtimonials, or theſe preſent publick and "authentick Inſtruments ſhall come, and whom "here underwritten ſhall or may appertain in "any manner or wiſe in Time to come: William, "by the Sufferance of Almighty God, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c. ſends greeting in our "Lord God everlaſting. We ſignifie unto you "All, and let you well weet, and know by "theſe Preſents, That where the King our Sovereign Lord hearing many Books in the Engliſh Tongue containing many deteſtable Errors and damnable Opinions, printed in Countries beyond the Sea, to be brought into divers Towns and ſundry Parts of this his Realm of England, and ſown abroad in the ſame, to the great Decay of our Faith, and the perilous Corruption of his People, unleſs ſpeedy Remedy were briefly provided: His Highneſs willing evermore to employ all his Study and Mind in the high Degree to which Almighty God has call'd him unto, to the Wealth of his Subjects, that they might live, not only in Tranquillity and Peace, but alſo to keep pure and clean of all Contagion of wrong Opinions in Chriſt's Religion: Conſidering alſo that he being Defender of the Faith, wou'd be full loath to ſuffer ſuch evil Seeds ſown amongſt his People, and ſo to take Root, that it might over-grow the Corn of the Catholick Doctrine, before ſprung in the Souls of his Subjects: For the repelling of ſuch Books, calling unto him, of his great Goodneſs and gracious Diſpoſition, not only certain of the chief Prelates and Clerks of his Realm, but alſo of each Univerſity, a certain Number of the chief learn'd Men of them, purpoſed ſuch of thoſe Books as his Grace had read, therefore unto them to be read: Requiring to hear in that behalf, their Advice and Judgments of them; who both by great Diligence and mature Deliberation, peruſing the ſaid Books, found in them many Hereſies both deteſtable and damnable, being of ſuch a ſort that they were like, briefly, to corrupt a great Part of his People, if they might be ſuffered to remain in their Hands any ſpace; gathering alſo out of them, many great Errors and peſtilent Hereſies, and noting in Writing, to the Intent to ſhew for what Cauſe they reputed the ſaid Books damnable; of which hereafter, out of each Book gather'd, many do enſue: Albeit many more there be in thoſe Books, which Books totally do ſwarm full of Hereſies and deteſtable Opinions. Hereafter follows the Hereſies and Errors in the Book call'd the Wicked Mammon *, (viz.) Faith only does juſtify us. (2) The Law does make us to hate God, becauſe we are born under the Power of the Devil. 'Tis impoſſible for us to conſent to the Will of God. The Law requires impoſſible Things of us. The Spirit of God turns us and our Nature, that we do Good as naturally as a Tree does bring forth good Fruit. (8) Works do not only declare to thee, that thou art juſtified. (9) Chriſt in all his Deeds, did not deſerve Heaven. Labouring in good Works to come to Heaven, thou doſt ſhame Chriſt's Blood. (17) Saints in Heaven, cannot help us thither. To build a Church in Honour of our Lady, or any other Saint, is in vain: They cannot help thee, they be not thy Friends. (18) All Fleſh is in Bondage of Sin, and cannot avoid to ſin continually. (27) The Commandments be given us not to do them, but to know our Damnation, and call for Mercy to God. (28) Faſting is only to avoid Surfeit, and to tame the Body, all other Purpoſes are naught. (36) To bid the poor Man pray for me, is only to remember him to Duty, not that I have any Truſt in his Prayer. (38) Tho' thou give me a thouſand Pound to pray for thee, I am no more bound now than I was before. (40) A good Deed done, and not of fervent Charity, as Chriſt's was, is Sin. The worſt Turk living, has as much Right to my Goods at his Need, as my own Houſhold, or I my ſelf. (42) Alms deſerve no Meed. There is no Work better than another to pleaſe God. To waſh Diſhes and to preach, is all one as touching the Deed to pleaſe God. (44) Ceremonies of the Church have brought the World from God. (45) Beware of good Intents, they are damn'd of God. (46) See thou do nothing but that God bids thee. Churches are for Preaching, and not as they be uſed now. (47) To worſhip God otherwiſe than to believe that he is juſt and true in his Promiſe, is to make God an Idol. Pharaoh had no Power to let the People depart at God's Pleaſure. (61) Our Prelates in Sin, ſay they have Power. We be ſo in Captivity of the Devil, and he holds our Will in his Power, that we cannot conſent to God's Law, and his Will is impoſſible for us. Every Man is Lord of another Man's Good. I am bound to love the Turk with the very Bottom of my Heart.

Errors, Blaſphemies, and Hereſies, noted in the Book of the Revelation of Antichriſt, and in the Epiſtle going before. “To bind a Man perpetually to any Vow of Religion, is without doubt, an Error. (Fol. 19. pt. 2.) To ſay that Conſtitutions of Religion are good, becauſe holy Men did ordain them, as Auguſtin, Benedict, Barnard, Francis, Dominico, and ſuch other: This is to leave the Faith, and to follow the Examples of Fathers in ſome Things, hoc eſt in iſtis rebus, erring. (Fol. 19. pt. 1.) Whoſoever firſt ordain'd Univerſities, be he Alexander D'Hales, St. Thomas, or any other, he was a Star that fell from Heaven to Earth: There are brought in moral Virtues for Faith, and Opinions for Truth. (Fol. 32, 33, pt. 2.) The Univerſities are the confuſed Cloud and open Gate of Hell, and this Cloak of all other, is moſt noiſom, and does moſt Hurt and Damage. (Fol. 31. pt. 1.) All moral Divines have a wicked Conſcience full of Scrupicity. (Fol. 34. pt. 1.) Not only the Popiſh Wicked, but the Popedom it ſelf, and the Office is Iniquity, and is ſuch a Power, that it ſuppreſſes the Faith and Goſpel, and cannot be adminiſter'd by a good Prince, but by the Adverſary of Chriſt. (Fol. 52. pt. 2.) In the whole new Law is no urgent Precept not grievous, but only Exhortations to obſerve things neceſſary for Soul Health. (Fol. 63. pt. 2.) Moral Virtues, as Juſtice, Temperance, Strength, and Chaſtity, deſcribed by natural Reaſon, makes a Synagogue, and corrupts Chriſt's Faith. (Fol. 64. pt. 2.) Chriſt took away all Laws, and makes us Free and at Liberty, and moſt of all he ſuppreſſes all Ceremonies, &c. (Fol. 63. pt. 2.) If the Pope wou'd make all the Obſervation of Ceremonies, as Lent, Faſting, Holidays, Confeſſion, Matrimony, Maſs, Matins, and Relicks, &c. free and indifferent, he ſhou'd not be Antichriſt: But now becauſe he commands it in the Name of Chriſt, he does utterly corrupt the Church, ſuppreſs the Faith, and advance Sin. (Fol. 67. pt. 2.) To believe in Chriſt, makes ſure Inheritance with Jeſu Chriſt. (Fol. 1. pt. 1.) If a Man ſay, then ſhall we no good Work do? I anſwer as Chriſt did, this is the Work of God, to believe in him that God ſent. (Part 1. & 2.) Numbering of Sins makes a Man a more Sinner, yea, a Blaſphemer of the Name of God. (Fol. 3. pt. 1.) Sin cannot condemn us, for our Satisfaction is made in Chriſt, who died for us. (Fol. 4. pt. 1.) I will ſhew you

* This Book was written by Tyndal.

“ an evident Argument and Reaſon that thou mayſt know without doubt, who is Antichriſt, all they that do perſue are Antichriſts; the Popes, Biſhops, Cardinals, and their Adherents, do perſue [perſequuntur I ſuppoſe] therefore they are Antichriſt: I ween our Sylogiſms be well made. (Fol. 9. pt. 2.) I think verily that ſo long as the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles were perſecuted and martyr'd, they were good Chriſtian Men, and no longer. (Fol. 10. pt. 1.)

There are a great many more odd Propoſitions drawn out of this Book, which I omit. To proceed to the Arch-Biſhop's Inſtrument.

Errors and Hereſies contain'd in the Book call'd, The Sum of Scripture, (viz.) “ The Water of the Font has no more Virtue in it, than the Water of the River: The Baptiſm lies not in hallowed Water, or in any other outward thing, but in the Faith only. (Fol. 6. pt. 1.) The Water of Baptiſm is nothing but a Sign that we muſt be under the Standard of the Croſs. (Fol. 12. pt. 2.) We have as great Right, and as much to Heaven, as Chriſt. (Fol. 19. pt. 1.) We need not to labour to be Chriſt's Heirs and Sons of God, and to have Heaven, for we have all theſe Things already. (Fol. 27. pt. 1.) All that thinketh that their good Works help any thing, or profit any thing to get the Gift of Salvation, they blaſpheme againſt God, and rob God of his Honour. (Fol. 28. pt. 2.) To ſerve God in Tediouſneſs, or for fear of Hell, or for the Joys of Heaven, is but Shadows of good Works, and ſuch Service does not pleaſe God. (Fol. 41. pt. 1.) Jews kept the Commandments and the Law of God, yet they could not come to Heaven. (Fol. 43. pt. 2.) If Works might have ſaved, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and David had been ſaved before the Nativity of Chriſt. (Fol. 44. pt. 1.) Chriſtian Men among themſelves, have nought to do with the Sword, nor with the Law, for that is to them neither needful nor Profit. (Fol. 109. pt. 2.) The Goſpel makes all true Chriſtian Men Servants to all the World. (Fol. 110. pt. 1. Chriſt ſays, that no Chriſtian ſhall reſiſt Evil, nor ſue any Man at the Law. (Fol. 110. pt. 2.) A true Chriſtian Man never plaineth to the Judge of the Injury that's done unto him. (Fol. 114. pt. 1.) The Obedience of a Chriſtian Man to Temporal Power, is as Chriſt was obedient to temporal Puiſſance, and paid Tribute Money, not becauſe that he ought it, but becauſe he would not offend; ſo muſt a Chriſtian Man do: But when that Lords ask nought, thou oughteſt them nought before God, &c. (Fol. 116. pt. 2.) Men of War are not allow'd by the Goſpel, the Goſpel knows Peace, and not War. (Fol. 113. pt. 1.) Some Texts of Canon Law ſuffer War, but the Teaching of Chriſt forbids Wars. (Fol. 118. pt. 1.) Nevertheleſs, when a City is beſieged, or a Country invaded, the Lord of the Country is bound to put his Life in Jeopardy for his Subjects. (Ibid.) God took Enoch away, that is to-ſay, he departed out of this World like other Men. (Fol. 44.) David's good Intent, and Nathan's in Building the Temple, were naught.

There are likewiſe ſeveral Tenents drawn out of a Book, call'd The Obedience of a Chriſtian Man, ſome of which are inoffenſive, but moſt of them erroneous: There are likewiſe ſome exceptionable Propoſitions extracted from a Book, entitled, An Expoſition upon the ſeventh Chapter to the Corinthians; tho' many of them may paſs: I ſhall therefore proceed to the Biſhop's Inſtrument, viz.

“ All which great Errors and peſtilent Hereſies, being contagious and damnable, with all the Books containing the ſame, with the Tranſlation alſo of Scripture corrupted by William Tyndal, as well in the Old Teſtament as in the New, and all other Books in Engliſh, containing ſuch Errors; the King's Highneſs in Perſon, by one whole Advice and Aſſent of the Prelates and Clerks, as well of the Univerſities, as all other aſſembl'd together, determin'd utterly to be expelled, rejected, and put away out of the Hands of his People, and not to be ſuffer'd to get abroad among his Subjects: And his Highneſs willing farther that this his Pleaſure and Determination ſhou'd be notify'd by Preachers abroad unto the People, as well for putting away all ſuch Books, as reading, retaining, or having hereafter of any other like, deliver'd unto certain Preachers the Form of a Writing to be publiſh'd in effect, unto the People in their Sermons; whereof the Form here follows, willing them in all his Realm to publiſh the ſame.

Here follows the Bill in Engliſh to be publiſhed by the Preachers.

The Warning the Preachers were obliged to give the People againſt reading the cenſured Books.

“ It is the Office and Duty of every Preacher and Teacher of the Word of God, not only to ſhew and declare unto his Audience, that which might be profitable and wholeſome for the Wealth of their Souls to be followed and taken, but alſo to note and ſignifie unto them ſuch Things as be dangerous and contagious, to the Intent they might be avoided and eſchewed; and alſo as near as they can, judge who be the Teachers and Authors of the ſame: This Example we have of our Saviour Chriſt, who ſaith, Beware of falſe Prophets; St. Paul likewiſe many Times gives warning to ſuch as he wrote unto, that they ſhou'd beware of the falſe Apoſtles, that in his Abſence went about to corrupt the true Doctrine that he had taught: Wherefore, conſidering that it hath pleas'd the King's Highneſs like a noble and virtuous Prince, tendering not only the preſent bodily Wealth and Tranquillity of all his Subjects, for his and the worldly Commodity and Benefit, but moſt chiefly regarding the Wealth of their Souls, and their due Order towards God, thereby to deſerve and attain immortal Glory, to aſſemble and call together the chief Perſonages of his Prelates, and a great Number of learned Men of both Univerſities, charging and commanding them for the Diſcharging and Exoneration of his Conſcience, to find, read, and examine, and diſcuſs the Contents of ſuch Books as be now ſpread abroad within his Grace's Realm in the Engliſh Tongue, concerning the Points and Articles of our Faith; and after their Learning and Conſcience, to make Relation unto his Highneſs, whether the ſaid Books were expedient and profitable for his People, for the Direction and ordering of their Conſcience and Souls, or elſe contagious and peſtiferous for the ſame: And whether the Opinions contained in them, were agreeable to God's Word and Doctrine or no: Foraſmuch as in the ſaid Congregation and Aſſembly, free Liberty and Licenſe, granted unto “ every Man, to ſay as his Conſcience and Learning ſerved him; without any Reproach or Blame to be imputed or arrected for any thing to be ſpoken there; whoſe Perſon ſoever it touched; or any Neceſſity to agree to the more part; but only to ſay as his own Learning and Conſcience would maintain and juſtify: After mature Deliberation and Conſultation had, it was there by a whole Conſent, no Man repugning or gain-ſaying, determined and agreed that the Books publiſhed now in the Engliſh Tongue, contain falſe Traditions and corrupt Doctrine, far diſcrepant from the true Senſe of the Goſpel and Catholick Underſtanding of the Scripture; only perſuading pernicious Hereſies to the Deſtruction of the Souls of good Chriſtian Men: And that the Certainty hereof I can report unto you of mine own Knowledge, being one of the ſaid Aſſembly, and hearing, and ſeeing the ſaid Opinions read, and declared, and examined, and by the true Senſe and Meaning of God's Learning reproved and rejected: I think therefore my Duty is taking upon me the Office of a Preacher, following the Example of our Maſter Chriſt, and St. Paul, as is aforeſaid, to warn and moniſh you by the Words of Chriſt, as I ſpake before, Take heed of Falſe Prophets, &c. and take heed of your ſelf that you be not infected by the Contagion and Infection of ſuch Pſeudo-Apoſtles, as have in our Engliſh Tongue ſet forth Books to ſeduce you from the true Knowledge of God's Laws, and bring you by their falſe Interpretation of Scripture into deteſtable and abominable Hereſies, to the Deſtruction of your Souls; wherefore you that have the Books called, The Obedience of a Chriſtian Man: The Sum of Scripture, The Revelation of Anti-Chriſt, The Supplication of Beggars, Mammon: The Matrimony of Tyndal, the new Teſtament in Engliſh, of the Tranſlation that is now printed, and ſuch other Books in Engliſh; the Authors whereof, either dare not, ne do not put to their Name; be unknown unto you, or elſe be ſuch as have ſet forth theſe pernicious Books, deteſt them, abhor them, keep them not in your Hands, deliver them to the Superiours, ſuch as call for them: And if by reading of them heretofore, any thing that remains in your Breaſt of that Teaching; either forget it, or by Information of the Truth expel it, and purge it, to the intent that ye ſo purified and cleanſed of that contagious Doctrine, and peſtiferous Traditions, may be fit and apt to receive, and retain the true Doctrine, and underſtanding of Chriſt's Laws, to the Comfort and Edification of your Souls: Thus I move and exhort you in God to do: This is your Duty to do, this you ought to do: And being obſtinate and denying or refuſing this to do, the Prelates of the Church having the Cure and Charge of your Souls, ought to compel ye; and your Prince to puniſh and correct you, not doing of the ſame. Unto whom, as St. Paul ſaith, the Sword is given by God's Ordinance for that purpoſe. Ye ſhall alſo farther underſtand, that the King's Highneſs, for as much as it was reported unto him, that there is engendered an Opinion in divers of his Subjects, that it is his Duty to cauſe the Scripture of God to be tranſlated into the Engliſh Tongue, to be communicate unto the People: And that the Prelates and alſo his Highneſs do wrong in letting or denying of the ſame. His Highneſs therefore willed every Man there preſent in that Aſſembly, freely and frankly, to ſhew and open unto him, what might be approved and confirmed by Scripture and holy Doctrine in that Behalf: To the Intent that his Highneſs, as he then openly proteſted, might conform himſelf thereunto: minding to do his Duty towards his People, as he would they ſhould do their Duties towards him; in which Matter after Scriptures declared, holy Doctors, and Authors alledged, and read; and all things ſaid might be on both Sides, and for both Parties ſpoken, deduced, and brought forth; finally it appeared, that the having of the whole Scripture in Engliſh is not neceſſary to Chriſtian Men; but that without having any ſuch Scripture, endeavouring themſelves to do well, and to apply their Minds to take and follow ſuch Leſſons as the Preacher teacheth them, and ſo learn by his Mouth, may as well edify ſpiritually in their Souls, as if they had the ſame Scripture in Engliſh. And like as the having of Scripture in the vulgar Tongues, and in the Common Peoples Hands, hath been by the holy Fathers of the Church heretofore, in ſome times thought meet and convenient; ſo at another time it hath been thought to holy Fathers, not expedient to be communicate amongſt them. Wherein for as much as the King's Highneſs by the Advice and Deliberation of his Council, and the Agreement of great learned Men, thinketh in his Conſcience that the divulging of this Scripture at this time in the Engliſh Tongue to be committed to the People, conſidering ſuch peſtilent Books and ſo evil Opinions as be now ſpread among them, ſhould rather be to the farther Confuſion and Deſtruction, than the Edification of their Souls. And that, as holy Doctors teſtify, upon ſuch like Conſiderations, the ſemblable has been done in times paſt, it was thought there in that Aſſembly, to all and ſingular in that Congregation, that the King's Highneſs, and the Prelates in ſo doing, not ſuffering the Scripture to be divulged and communicate to the People in the Engliſh Tongue at this time, doth well: And I alſo think and judge the ſame; exhorting and moving you that in Conſideration his Highneſs did there openly ſay and proteſt, that he would cauſe the New Teſtament to be by learned Men faithfully and purely tranſlated into the Engliſh Tongue: To the intent he might have it in his Hands ready to be given to his People, as he might ſee their Mannors and Behaviour meet, apt and convenient to receive the ſame; that you will ſo deteſt theſe pernicious Books, ſo abhor theſe Hereſies and new Opinions, ſo decline from Arrogancy of Knowlege, and underſtanding of Scripture after your Phantaſies; and ſhew your ſelves in communing and reaſoning, ſo ſober, quiet, meek, temperate, as all Fear of miſuſing the Gift of Scripture, taken away, ye may appear ſuch in your Prince's Eyes, and the Eyes of your Prelates, as they ſhall have no juſt Cauſe to fear any ſuch Danger: Perſuading unto your ſelf in the mean time without grudging or murmuring, the very Truth which is this; That you cannot require or demand Scripture to be divulged in the Engliſh Tongue, otherwiſe than upon the Diſcretions of the Superiors; ſo as whenſoever they think in their Conſcience it may do you good, they may and do well to give it unto you. And whenſoever it ſhall ſeem otherwiſe unto them they do amiſs in ſuffering you to have it.

“Of and upon the which Decree, Order, and Determination above recited, his Grace's Highneſs being in Perſon in the Chapel called the Old Chapel, which ſome time was called St. Edward's Chamber, ſet on the Eaſt Side of the Parliament Chamber within his Grace's Pallace at Weſtminſter upon the 24th Day of May, the Year of our Lord God Jeſu Chriſt 1530; and in the twenty ſecond Year of his Reign. The third Indiction, and the ſeventh Year of the Pontificacy of our Holy Father Clement, of that Name the Seventh, Pope; called before his Grace the Notaries here under written. And then and there in the Preſence of all the Perſonages there aſſembled and gathered together, will'd and required the ſame three Notaries to make Publiques and Authentiques Inſtruments, and to ſet thereunto our Seal accordingly; In and for Witneſs and perpetual Memory, of this his Grace's Decree, Order, and Determination, and of all and ſingular the Premiſes; and all the Perſonages then and there being preſent to teſtify the ſame, and bear Record and Teſtimony thereupon.

The Perſons atteſting the Inſtrument.

“In witneſs of all and ſingular the Premiſes, we William Archbiſhop, Primate, and Legate aforeſaid, have commanded and obtained theſe preſent Letters Teſtimonials, or preſent publique and authentique Inſtrument containing therein the Order, Decree, and Determination aboveſaid, to be made and to be ſubſcribed, and conſigned by the Hands of the Notaries hereafter named, and to be ſealed with our own Seal: All which Premiſes hath been done in Manner and Form above ſpecified: The Year, Indiction, Pontificate, Month, Day, and Place above ſpecified: Then, and there being preſent the noble Perſonages Sir Thomas Moore Knight, great Chancellor of England; our Reverend Brother in Chriſt Cuthbert, by the Permiſſion of God, Biſhop of Durham; and worſhipful Perſonages Mr. Stephen Gardiner, Secretary; Mr. Richard Sampſon, Dean of the Chapter, Doctor of Law; Mr. Woolman, Maſter of the Requeſts; Mr. John Bell, Councellor, Doctors of Holy Decrees; Mr. Nicholas Wilſon, the King's Confeſſor; Mr. Richard Dooke, Archdeacon of Wilts, Doctors of Divinity; Mr. John Oliver, Mr. Edward Steward, Doctors of Law, Chaplains to our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King's Grace; Mr. Richard Mandelly, Mr. William Mortimer, Mr. Edward Crome, Mr. Edward Wiggen, Doctors alſo of Divinity; Mr. Robert Carter, Mr. Edward Leighton, Mr. Hugh Latimer, Mr. John Thixtite, Batchelors of Divinity; Mr. William Latimer, and Mr. Roger Tibſon, Maſters of Art in both the Univerſities abovеſaid; with many more learned Men of the ſaid Univerſities, in a great number aſſembled, then and there together Witneſs to the Premiſes required and adhibited.

“The three Publique Notaries who atteſted this Inſtrument are Thomas Aſhley, Richard Watkyns, and Matthew Greſton.

Fox Vol. 2. p. 14. Edit. 1641.

Fox fixes this Cenſure to the Year 1531; but 'tis plain from the Date of the Inſtrument that he is a Year too forward in his Chronology. But Miſtakes of this kind are not uncommon with this Martyrologiſt. For inſtance, He ſays the Parliament the twenty firſt of Henry the Eighth was held in the Year 1530; whereas, this Parliament met in the Year 1529. He ſets Cardinal Wolſey's Journey to York a Year too forward: And ſo he does the King's Speech at Black Fryers, which he refers to November the eighth 1529.

Fox, Vol. 2. p. 254, 256, 327.

To return to the Buſineſs of the Divorce: The King notwithſtanding his former Diſappointments in this Affair, was willing to make a farther Tryal. To this purpoſe Sir Thomas Bolen, now Earl of Wiltſhire, John Stokeſly, Elect of London, and Edward Lee, Doctor of Divinity, the King's Agents at Rome, had a joint Commiſſion for an Embaſſy to the Emperor. They waited upon this Prince at Bolonia, who told 'em, he was obliged in honour not to deſert his Aunt's Cauſe. Upon this, they addreſs'd the Pope, and preſſed for a favourable Iſſue of the King's Buſineſs. The Pope's Anſwer was, that notwithſtanding he had been urged by the Queen's Sollicitor to proceed to the Cenſure, was reſolved upon a gentler Expedient. And therefore had given order the matter ſhould ſleep, provided the King would engage to ſtop the Courſe of the Proceſs in England. The King being inform'd of the Pope's Propoſal, replied, that his Holyneſs had hitherto entertained him only with good Words. And that by lately denying his Ambaſſadors Audience to juſtifie his Cauſe, he plainly perceived there was nothing real or friendly at the Bottom.

The King conſults the Univerſities about the Divorce.

The King therefore finding his Holyneſs ſomewhat myſterious, reſolved to conſult the Opinions of the Univerſities. 'Tis ſaid, Doctor Cranmer put the King upon this Expedient (t). Fox pretends, this Thought was ſuggeſted by Cranmer at his Meeting with Gardiner, and Edward Fox, the King's Secretary, at Waltham. But here the time ſpoils the Story: For this Conference at Waltham between Cranmer, Gardiner, and Secretary Fox, was in Auguſt 1529. From whence it evidently follows, that Cranmer could not be the firſt Mover of the Expedient of conſulting the Univerſities both at home and abroad. Becauſe the Determination of the Univerſity of Orleans, relating to the King's Marriage, bears Date April the 5th 1529 (u) Now this Date is more than three Months before the Conference above-mentioned at Waltham.

This Expedient not ſuggeſted by Cranmer.

2dly, The King in his Speech before the Legates at Bridewel, already related, declares he had applied to the greateſt Clerks in Chriſtendom, for their Reſolution about his Marriage: Now this Speech was made in November 1528.

And that Fox was miſtaken, in giving Cranmer the Credit of this Suggeſtion, appears plainly from Cavendiſh, an Author of unexceptionable Authority. This Gentleman, who was one of Wolſey's Family, tells us 'twas the Cardinal that was the firſt in this Motion. And that in a Meeting of the Biſhops, and other learned Men, 'twas thought adviſable the King ſhould ſend his Agents to all the Univerſities both in England and elſewhere; that the Caſe ſhould be argued at length, by thoſe learned Societies: And that their reſpective Decrees under the Seal of each Univerſity ſhould be tranſmitted to his Highneſs (w).

Having now ſettled the Author of the Advice, I ſhall proceed to relate the Succeſs. To begin at home with the Univerſity of Oxford. The Biſhop of Lincoln was order'd to Oxford with the King's Letters, requiring 'em, to ſend him their Determination, whether marrying the Brother's Relict, was defenſible, or not? A Convocation being called, the Majority of the Doctors declared for the Negative. But the Maſters of Art being on the other ſide of the Queſtion, the Meeting broke up without effect. The King being informed of this Incomplyance, was much diſpleas'd, and without loſing any Time, ſends a Letter under der his own hand directed to the Vice-Chancellor, to the Doctors and Batchellors of Divinity, without taking any notice of the Regents. In this Letter he acquaints 'em, “how deeply he reſented the Stubbornneſs and Miſbehaviour of the Maſters of Art; that they ſeem'd to him, not to have lived long enough to qualify 'em with Capacity and Diſcretion for this Buſineſs: That therefore they ought to reſign to the Judgment of wiſer Men, and be governed by the Precedent of the Doctors: That provided they held on in their Obſtinacy and gave their Sovereign any farther Trouble, they ſhould quickly be made ſenſible of the ill Conſequence, and underſtand 'twas not their beſt way to provoke a Hornet's Neſt (x).

(t) Fox, p. 1860. Edit. 2. Antiquit. Brit. p. 322. Biſhop Burnet pt. 1. p. 79.

(u) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Collection of Records, Book 2. p. 90.

(w) Cavendiſh. p. 97, & deinc.

The Divorce oppos'd by the Maſters of Art in Oxford.

(x) Wood. Hiſt.& Antiq. Univerſ. Oxon. l.1.p.255.

Soon after this, Doctor Bell, and Longland, Biſhop of Lincoln, were diſpatched to Oxford. Their Commiſſion was to inform the Maſters farther upon the Caſe, and prevail with them to give Satisfaction. But this Attempt failing of Succeſs, the Chancellor wrote down, to refer the Deciſion to a Committee: But this Expedient was at firſt refuſed. Afterwards Secretary Fox was ſent thither, to try his Intereſt. But all being to no purpoſe, the Maſters being not to be brought off, and ready to grow mutinous, the Chancellor ſent the Heads a very extraordinary and unprecedented Order. He required 'em to exclude the Maſters from the Convocation, and proceed to a Reſolution without 'em. And thus by a Committee of the Doctors and Batchellors of Divinity, the Queſtion was drawn up in Form, determined in the negative, and the Seal of the Univerſity ſet to the Inſtrument. This Determination was ſoon after brought to the King by the Vice-Chancellor, who was well received, for making ſo acceptable a Preſent.

The Maſters excluded the Convocation. Ibid.

Ibid.

The Queſtion determined by a Committee of Doctors,&c.

The Hiſtorian Wood complains of this Management, and takes the Freedom to ſay, the Privileges of the Univerſity were plainly over-ruled, and that the excluding the Maſters from their Right in voting, made the Decree of no force. That ſeveral Members of the Univerſity not thinking themſelves bound by this Deciſion, preach'd openly againſt the Divorce.

Id. p. 256.

This Relation of Wood is cenſured by a learned Church-Hiſtorian (y). This Author charges the Oxford Antiquary, with giving Credit to a lying Story ſet down by Saunders: That he had either not ſeen, or not conſidered another Inſtrument, to which the Univerſity ſet their Seal: That this Inſtrument was paſſed in a Convocation of all the Doctors and Maſters, Regents and Non-Regents: That by virtue of a Vote paſſed in this Convocation they all reſigned themſelves to the Determination of a Committee; and that this Committee was only to conſiſt of Doctors and Batchellors of Divinity. And for this the Lord Herbert is vouch'd, who peruſ'd the Original, which I ſhall tranſcribe into the Records (z).

(y) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 86.

(z) See Records, N. 13.

Notwithſtanding Wood is charged with relying upon the Teſtimony of Saunders, 'tis plain, he makes no uſe of his Authority, but cites the Records of the Univerſity for the main of his Narrative. As to the Inſtrument mentioned by my Lord Herbert, tho' he calls it an Original in one Place, yet after the Recital, he makes no more of it than a blurr'd Copy: And, without telling us where he had it, does not ſcruple to confeſs, that 'tis not probable, it ſhould be intended for the King in that manner: All which plainly proves, that in Lord Herbert's Opinion, it could be no Original. And therefore, for ought we know, it might only be a rough Draught. And that when the Doctors found the Maſters would not paſs it, they laid it aſide without engroſſing. However, they might think fit to preſerve it, to ſhew their Zeal for the King's Service.

The Oxford Antiquary defended.

And for a farther Defence of the Oxford Antiquary, it may not be improper, to give the Reader a remarkable Paſſage from the Lord Herbert's Collections concerning this Matter (a). The Words run thus,

(a) Ld. Herbert's MS. Collections in Jeſus College Library in Oxford.

“The King, ſays this noble Hiſtorian, ſent his Confeſſor Longland to the Univerſity of Oxford, to procure their Confirmation of his Divorce from Catharine. The King joyn'd Intreaties and Threats, the Chancellor Warham adviſed 'em to follow the Truth. Here Seniores facilè aſſenſerunt Regi, but the younger ſort (Regent Maſters) flatly denied. The King ſent 'em more threats, but moves them not: So that at laſt the Artiſts or Regent Maſters (although by the Statutes nothing can be done without them) are excluded, and the Matter committed only to Divines, who determin'd for the King, who puniſh'd the Regents.

Thus much for Oxford. How the Matter paſs'd at Cambridge will appear from an Original Letter, written by Gardiner and Fox to the King.

Febr. 1530.

(b) Biblioth. Cotton. Vitell. B. 13.

The Univerſity of Cambridge divided about the Divorce.

(c) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 86.

(d) Wharton de Epiſc. Londinenſ. p 193.

In this Letter (b) they acquaint the King, that the Vice Chancellor, one Dr. Edmonds, and ſeveral others were willing to ſatisfy his Highneſs. And here, by the way, this Dr. Edmonds was not Edmond Bonner, afterwards Biſhop of London, as our learned Church-Hiſtorian affirms (c); but John Edmonds, Maſter of Peter houſe (d). To proceed, they informed the King, there was a ſtrong Party in the oppoſite Sentiment, who endeavoured to perplex the Matter, and hinder the paſſing of any Decree. However in a Congregation of about two hundred, the King's Letters were read. After which the Vice-Chancellor called the Doctors aſide, and asked their Opinions: They were divided in their Anſwer, and the Iſſue ſeem'd doubtful. At laſt they were contented the Queſtion ſhou'd be referred to indifferent Men. But when they came to debate upon the Perſons for the Committee, they excepted againſt the Abbot of St. Bennet's, againſt Dr. Repps, and Dr. Crome, and others of that Complexion. The Reaſon of their Diſlike of theſe Perſons, was their Approbation of Cranmer's Book lately written in favour of the Divorce: For by their Commendation of this Performance, they were look'd on as Perſons prepoſſeſſed.

After a great deal of time ſpent in debating this Affair, the Vice-Chancellor propoſed a Committee, but this Motion was rejected.

The Convocation being adjourned 'till the next Day, the Vice-Chancellor offered an Order to refer the Queſtion to a Committee of twenty nine: This Committee was to conſiſt of himſelf, ten Doctors, ſixteen Batchellors of Divinity, and the two Proctors. And here what two thirds agreed to, was to be taken for the Senſe of the whole; and the Seal of the Univerſity ſet to the Deciſion. And for the more honourable Proceeding, the Queſtion was firſt to be publickly diſputed. This Motion was oppoſed at firſt: The ſecond time the Queſtion was put, the Votes were equal: The third time, by prevailing with ſome of the contrary Opinion to quit the Houſe, the Order for a Committee paſs'd. Gardiner and Fox having gain'd this Point, gave the King an Account, and ſent up the Names of the Committee, acquainting the King with the good Condition of the Affair; and that they hoped in a ſhort time to procure a Majority, which happened accordingly.

But at laſt they decree for him.

And thus, with a great deal of Difficulty, the King gain'd his Point; and the Marriage was declared unlawful.

I ſhall now proceed to relate how this Affair ſucceeded Abroad. The French King having now received his two Sons, who had been detain'd Hoſtages at Madrid, was in a Condition to declare himſelf more freely in the Queſtion concerning the Divorce. The Juncture therefore being ſomewhat more favourable than formerly, King Henry requeſted that Prince's Aſſiſtance to procure a Reſolution of the Univerſities in France. Francis having promis'd his Friendſhip, Sir Francis Bryan, Fox afterwards Biſhop of Hereford, and Mr. William Paget were diſpatch'd to Orleans and Tholouſe: Reginal Pole of the Blood-Royal, and ſome of thoſe above-mention'd, receiving Orders to ſollicit this Matter at Paris. The King's Agents in Italy for this purpoſe, were Dr. Richard Croke at Padua; Hierom de Genucci Biſhop of Worceſter, and Gregory Caſſalis at Rome; Dr. Stokeſly at Venice; Dr. Cranmer, Andrew and John Caſſalis, and Previdellus were likewiſe employ'd by the King in Italy.

A. D. 1530.

June 13.

Stokeſly wrote to the King that he had gained the Opinions of the Univerſity of Bononia, and that he cou'd have ſucceeded in other Places, had the Pope been wholly neuter in the Affair.

June 22.

Croke wrote to the Engliſh Court that the Pope and Emperor menac'd thoſe who determin'd on the King's Side.

July 4.

That the Emperor's Ambaſſador at Padua expoſtulated with one Fryer Thomas, for abetting the King's Cauſe; letting him know, that if the Queſtion ſhou'd be decided for the Divorce, there wou'd be a Blemiſh thrown upon the Birth of ſeveral of the greateſt Princes of Chriſtendom: That their Right to their reſpective Crowns would be extinguiſh'd upon this Reſolution: And that the Emperor and the King of Portugal would be particularly affected in the Caſe. Notwithſtanding this Diſcouragement he had procured eighty Subſcriptions from Men of Character. And in another Letter he informs the King, that the Emperor practiſed with the State of Venice againſt his Highneſs. He likewiſe complains, that Andrew Caſſali and Previdellus diſcover'd the King's Secrets to the Imperialiſts. He acquaints the King farther, that the Emperour had procured ſome Subſcriptions in Mantua for Money; But theſe it ſeems were Perſons of no great Figure. Whereas nine and twenty Doctors in that Town had given their Opinion Gratis, againſt the Lawfulneſs of the Marriage.

Aug. 31. Ld. Herbert, p. 301.

To take off theſe Reſtraints, and give a juſt Freedom, Croke ſuggeſted the Expedient of procuring a Brief from the Pope to this Purpoſe. It was to run towards this Form.

“ That Divines or Canoniſts might declare
“ their Conſciences without Fear or Hazard, re“ quiring them under the Penalty of Excommu“ nication, that they ſhou'd not be govern'd in “ the Debate by Partialities or Reward, but pro“ nounce upon the Caſe, according to the beſt
“ of their Underſtandings without being biaſs'd
“ by any indirect Motives, as they wou'd anſwer
“ their Conduct to God at the great Day of Judg“ ment (c).

The King approv'd this Suggeſtion of a Brief, and wrote to the Biſhop of Verona to aſſiſt his Agents at Rome in procuring it. In ſhort, the Inſtrument was gain'd at laſt, tho' not without Difficulty, becauſe of the Oppoſition from the Emperor's Ambaſſadors.

From Padua Croke advertizes the King, that the Caſe having been thoroughly debated by the Doctors for five Days together, the Common Seal of the Univerſity was ſet to their Deciſion in favour of his Highneſs Cauſe (d).

To mention ſome Particulars. They declare, they had conſider'd all the Arguments on the other ſide of the Queſtion, and found 'em defective, and that they may not fall under the Charge of any Omiſſion, they mention, their having examin'd that remarkable Text in Deteronomy; and after having given a due Weight to all Objections, they poſitively determine, the marrying a Brother's Relict to be unlawful, void and deteſtable, and that nothing can be a clearer Contradiction to the Law of Nature, and divine Inſtitution.

Deut. 25. 5.

July 1. 1530.

The Univerſity of Bononia declared their Senſe upon the Queſtion to the ſame effect.

June 10 1530. The Univerſities of Padua and Bononia declare for the Divorce.

After having premis'd how carefully they had qualified themſelves with Time and Application, how nicely they had ballanc'd the Arguments urged by both Parties; and particularly the Expoſition of Cardinal Cajetan upon the Diſpenſation in Deuteronomy for marrying the Brother's Wife: After this Preliminary Proteſtation, they come to the deciſive Part, and pronounce ſuch a Marriage execrable and unlawful to the laſt degree. And that his Holyneſs, notwithſtanding he can do almoſt every thing, in virtue of his Commiſſion from our Saviour, yet his Privilege of Diſpenſing is wholly barr'd in this Matter.

Biſhop Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. Collection of Records, Book 2. p. 92. Croke's Negotiation in Italy about the Divorce.

How this Matter was carried in the Univerſities of France, will appear from their publick Cenſures (e). The Univerſity of Orleans, the Faculty of the Canon Law at Paris, declar'd the Pope had no Power to diſpenſe in that Caſe. The famous Faculty of Sorbonne, proceeded to the Enquiry, with the higheſt Solemnity. They met firſt at the Church of St. Mathurin, where, after a Maſs and Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt, they took an Oath to examine the Queſtion thoroughly, and to follow their Conſcience in the Reſolution. The Time they took in preparing for the Deciſion, was from the eighth of June to the ſecond of July. During which Interval, they declar'd they had conſulted the Holy Scriptures with the beſt Expoſitors, and perus'd the Canons and Conſtitutions of General and Provincial Councils. After all this Solemnity and Deliberation, 'twas agreed by the Majority, That the marrying of the Relict of a Brother dying without Iſſue, was ſo clearly prohibited by natural and revealed Religion, that it was not within the Pope's Authority to diſpenſe with ſuch a Relation. The Univerſity of Angiers, of Bourge, and of Tholouſe, determin'd to the ſame effect. The Seals of each reſpective Univerſity, was likewiſe put to their Deciſion *.

The Judgments of the Univerſities in France.

But here we are to obſerve, the Sorbonne and the Faculty of the Canon Law at Paris, the Univerſities of Angiers and Bourges, expreſly ſuppoſe the Marriage conſummated between Arthur and Catherine, which, as has been already related, the Queen poſitively deny'd: This ſhe did before the King and Court at Black-Friers, and appeal'd to his Highneſs for the Truth of it. Upon the whole therefore, we cannot rightly reckon theſe three Univerſities of the King's ſide, becauſe the Matter of Fact upon which they founded their Reſolution, was deny'd by the Queen.

Farther, 'tis probable the other Univerſities in France and Italy went upon the Suppoſal of the Marriage being conſummated between Arthur and Catherine: 'Tis not improbable, I ſay, they went upon this Suppoſition, both by the ſtrong Expreſſion in their Cenſure; and becauſe the Reaſon

(c) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 89.

(d) Biblioth. Cotton. Vitell. 13.

(e) Printed at London 1532.

* Conventiones, Acta Publica, Tom. 14. p. 397.

ſon of the Levitical Prohibition, cou'd not otherwiſe ſo much affected this Marriage.

Levit. 20. 21.

In Germany, Spain, and Flanders, the Emperor's Authority is ſaid to have been ſo great, that much cou'd not be expected from the Lutherans, tho' Cranmer endeavour'd to make an Intereſt with them, and particularly with Oſiander, whoſe Niece Cranmer married during his Stay in Germany. This Oſiander publiſh'd a Book concerning inceſtuous Marriages, but it was call'd in at Ausburg, becauſe it determin'd in favour of the Divorce (f).

(f) Biblioth. Cotton. Otho. C. 10.

Croke complains of the Lutherans.

As to the Lutherans, Croke in his Letter to the King, complains that all of that Perſuaſion at Venice, Padua, and Ferrara, where there were no ſmall Numbers of 'em, oppoſed the King's Cauſe with great Activity and Vehemence (g). The famous Eraſmus thought the Queſtion much perplex'd, and refuſ'd to give his Judgment either way.

(g) Biblioth. Cotton. Vitel. B. 13.

Oecolampadius, as appears by three of his Letters, was clearly of Opinion, that the Law in Leviticus, was binding upon all Mankind; and affirms, that the Permiſſion for a Brother's marrying his Siſter in Law, was a Diſpenſation deſigned only for the Jews; and therefore he conceiv'd the King might part with the Queen without any Scruple (h). But Bucer was of a different Sentiment: He thought the Law in Leviticus cou'd not be moral, becauſe God had diſpenſed with it in one Caſe, for the Preſervation of Families. But then he was of Opinion, that neither the Law, nor the Diſpenſation in Deuteronomy, continued under the New Teſtament, nor reach'd over to the Chriſtian Inſtitution. In ſhort, he neither thought the Law in Leviticus, or the Exception in Deuteronomy, any more than judicial Precepts, and calculated only for the Country and Government of Judea. So that by his Caſuiſtry, Chriſtians were at Liberty to follow their Inclination in this Matter.

Levit. 20. 21.

Deut. 25. 5.

The Opinion of Oecolampadius.

(h) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 92.

Of Bucer.

Bp. Burnet, ibid.

Phrygion.

Paulus Phrygion another Proteſtant, was of Opinion, that the Laws in Leviticus were deſign'd for a Standard of Practice in all Ages and Countries: His Reaſon was, That the Canaanites were puniſhed for a contrary Behaviour: That ſuch Severity was not conſiſtent with the Juſtice of God, unleſs thoſe Prohibitions had been Branches of the Law of Nature.

Id. pag. 93.

Zuinglius. and Grineus.

Zuinglius is pretty full for the King's Purpoſe. Firſt, he diſproves the Pope's Power of diſpenſing with the Law of God: Then he lays it down for a Maxim, that the Apoſtles had made no Alterations concerning matrimonial Engagements: That the Marrying within near Degrees, was the Averſion of the Greeks and other Heathen Nations. And whereas Grineus (a Proteſtant of Reputation) ſeem'd to be of Opinion, that tho' the Marriage was ill made, yet it ought not to be diſſolv'd; So that this Divine adviſed the King to marry another, and live with the Queen ſtill. Zuinglius combats this Opinion, determines for nulling an unlawful Marriage, and rejects the Expedient of Polygamy. But then he concludes, that the Queen ſhou'd be honourably diſmiſs'd, and treated up to her Character. This Divine has ſome farther Reſerves of Civility and good Nature. He throws in a Salvo for the Legitimacy of the Iſſue, and ſince the Marriage had continued ſo long without Scruple or Remonſtrance, he thought it unreaſonable there ſhould be any Blemiſh, or Mark of Diſadvantage laid upon the Children.

A pretended Letter of Calvin's.

There is a Letter of Calvin's upon this Subject, but without either Date or Perſon to whom it was directed: In this Letter, the Marriage is declar'd null, and that the King ought to part with the Queen upon the Law of Leviticus. And whereas it was objected, the Law was only meant of marrying the Brother's Wife living the Brother: He argues, this Interpretation was foreign to the Text. For ſince all the prohibited Degrees are forbidden in the ſame Stile, they ought to be underſtood in the ſame Senſe. Since therefore the marrying the Father's, Son's, Uncle's, or Nephew's Wives after the Death of their Husbands, is unconteſtedly unlawful, by parity of Reaſon it muſt be likewiſe a Sin to marry the Brother's Relict. And as for the Law in Deuteronomy, of marring the Brother's Wife, &c. he conceives that by Brother, we are to underſtand a near Kinſman, of which we have ſome Inſtances in Holy Writ. By this Expedient, he reconciles the two Laws of Leviticus and Deuteronomy, and fortifies his Expoſition by the Caſe of Boaz and Ruth.

The Reaſoning in this Letter not concluſive.

But here we are to obſerve, that this Letter having neither Date nor Perſon, ſeems not to belong to the Matter in queſtion. Beſides, Calvin was born in the Year 1509: Now this Letter is ſuppoſ'd to be written in the Year 1530, when Calvin was but Twenty One Years of Age. 'Tis very improbable therefore, a Controverſie of this Importance ſhou'd be referr'd to ſo young a Divine. Farther, his Expoſition of the Text in Deuteronomy, ſeems forc'd and new. For firſt, this Interpretation does not agree with the Language of the New Teſtament, where Kinsfolk are expreſs'd by Συγγενεῖς, and not by ἀδελφοὶ in the Original. Secondly, Calvin's Expoſition deſtroys Affricanus's Scheme of reconciling the ſeeming Differences in our Saviour's Genealogy mention'd by St. Matthew and St. Luke. Now the learn'd Valeſius allows Affricanus's Expedient, and ſuppoſes the marrying the Brother's Wife, common among the Jews (i). But notwithſtanding this Letter ſeems embaraſs'd in the Expoſition of the Text, yet it muſt be ſaid, the Author made a Puſh at the main Difficulty.

Luke 2. 44.

(i) Annot. in lib. 1. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. cap. 7.

Melancthon a Favourer of Polygamy.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves that Melancthon adviſ'd the King's taking another Wife, and offer'd to juſtifie Polygamy from the Old Teſtament. But this he can't believe. However, he grants the Lawfulneſs of Polygamy was much controverted at this time. And as in all Controverſies newly ſtarted, many crude things are ſaid; ſo ſome of the Helvetian and German Divines ſeem not ſo fierce againſt it. But of Melancthon's being of that Mind, great Evidences appear to the contrary; for there is a Letter of Oſiander's to him, giving him many Reaſons to perſuade him to approve of the King's putting away the Queen, and marrying another. The Letter alſo ſhews he was of Opinion, that the Law in Leviticus was diſpenſable (k).

(k) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 93.

But with due Deference to this Hiſtorian's Judgment, his Reaſoning looks ſhort of Proof. Indeed he ſeems to overthrow his Remark, by what he obſerves afterwards. For he tells us, that Melancthon, and others, had no Mind to enter much into the Diſpute about the King's Divorce, both for fear of the Emperor, and becauſe they judged the King was led in it by diſhoneſt Affections: And thus this learned Author has anſwer'd himſelf: For the Reaſon, as he obſerves, why Melancthon wou'd not approve of the ſecond Marriage, might be becauſe he was afraid of the Emperor, or thought the King was led into it by diſhoneſt Affections, and not upon the Score of his believing Polygamy unlawful.

Ibid.

But that Melancthon, and other German Divines, were not very Orthodox in this, and ſome other Matters, appears from Cranmer's Letter to Oſiander. In this Letter, “he complains of the looſe Caſuiſtry and miſtaken Opinions of the German Divines, and what Scandal they gave to the Reformation. For the purpoſe, he tells us, they allow'd the younger Sons of Noblemen to entertain Strumpets, to prevent the parcelling out their Eſtates, and leſſening the Figure of the elder Family. That Divines who allow'd this Liberty, were altogether unqualify'd to make Invectives againſt any Indulgence in the Church of Rome. Farther, I deſire, ſays he, to know, what Excuſe can be made for your Permiſſion of a ſecond Marriage after Divorce, while both the Parties were living; and which is ſtill worſe, you allow a Man a Plurality of Wives without the Ceremony of a Divorce. That this is Matter of fact, you acquainted me, as I remember, in ſome of your Letters, adding withal that Melancthon himſelf was preſent at one of theſe Second Weddings, and gave Countenance to it.

Some German Divines charged with abetting this Liberty by Cranmer.

“But this Practice diſagrees both with the Nature of Marriage, which does not make Two but One Fleſh, and is likewiſe a clear Contradiction to the Holy Scriptures. And here the Archbiſhop (for that was his Diſtinction when he wrote this Letter) cites ſeveral Texts in the New Teſtament. From theſe Places he continues, 'tis plain from the Inſtitution of our Saviour and his Apoſtles, that Matrimony ought to be a ſingle Relation. And that this Engagement muſt not be repeated, till the Death of one of the Parties. If you reply, the Caſe of Fornication muſt be excepted: If this is your Anſwer, I deſire to know, whether the Loſs of the Wives Honour was the Reaſon of Melancthon's indulging the Husband in Polygamy? If he went upon this ground, then we have the receiv'd Doctrine of the Church, from the firſt Ages to our own Times, againſt this Expoſition. Now we ought to interpret the Scriptures in Conformity to the Senſe of the Antients. What St. Auſtin's Opinion, or rather what the Opinion of the Church was, to the Century in which this Father liv'd, he gives us to underſtand in his Diſcourſe to Pollentius (l). I wou'd gladly know, continues the Archbiſhop, how they diſengag'd themſelves from this Charge? Whether they maintain'd the Lawfulneſs of Polygamy, and endeavour'd to reconcile it with the New Teſtament? Or whether they believe ſomething of Condeſcenſion or Connivance, neceſſary to the preſent Juncture? And that unleſs they ſhould relax a little upon this Point, ſome greater Miſchief might happen. If they go upon the firſt Grounds (which I fancy they don't) they have more of the Turk than the Chriſtian in them. And if they rely upon the latter Scheme, they will find themſelves extremely incumber'd: For which way can they indulge that Liberty which Chriſt, his Apoſtles, and the whole Church, has directly forbidden. He proceeds to anſwer ſome other of their Objections, from the Old Teſtament, and expoſes the Indulgence with ſufficient Force and Smartneſs: But what I have already tranſlated, may ſerve to ſhew the German Divines, and particularly Melancthon, were no good Caſuiſts in this Matter (m).

Mat. 19.
Mark 10.
Luke 16.
Rom. 7.
1 Cor. 7.

(l) Lib. de Adulterinis conjugiis.

(m) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. Fol. 111.

The Reſolution of the Lutheran Divines in the Caſe of the Divorce.

To go on: As to the Body of the Lutheran Divines, conſulted by the King, their Reſolution is better guarded. They declare now at laſt, “That the Law in Leviticus againſt marrying the Brother's Wife, whether dead or living, was of a moral Nature, and by conſequence unalterable. That therefore 'twas their Opinion, the Practice of all Chriſtians ought to be govern'd by it; that they ſhou'd never give an Allowance for a Marriage within ſuch a Relation. But then as to the Divorce, they were not inform'd far enough to deliver their Opinion. That is, they were not furniſh'd with ſufficient Reaſons, whether the King might be divorc'd after the Solemnization of the Marriage. And therefore, they deſire his Highneſs not to take it amiſs, that they ſuſpended their Judgment as to this Part of the Queſtion (n).

(n) Ex MSS. R. S. Lond. See Bp. Burnet's Collections, pt. 1. book 11. p. 94
Id. pt. 1. *p.*94.

The learned Church Hiſtorian abovementioned, takes notice, That the Proteſtants expreſs'd great Sincerity in this Matter; ſuch as became Men of Conſcience, who were acted by true Principles, and not by Maxims of Policy. I hope they did ſo, but am ſorry to find this Commendation no better prov'd. For in the Paragraph immediately foregoing, he tells us, theſe German Divines had no mind to engage in the Diſpute, for fear of the Emperor: Now if they were over-aw'd by this Paſſion, they were in ſome meaſure govern'd by their Intereſt: And how then does it appear, that they ſtood clear of Politick Maxims?

However, as the learned Hiſtorian goes on, none of 'em went ſo far as the Pope did, who plainly offered to grant the King a Licence to have two Wives. And for this we have the Authority of Caſſali's Letter to the King (o).

Now notwithſtanding the Colour in this Letter, I rather think 'twill appear the Pope did not indulge this Liberty. For firſt, as to Caſſali's Authority the Lord Herbert, who cites the Letter (p), tells us this Caſſali was a Man of no Integrity: That notwithſtanding his being employ'd as the King's Agent, he held a private Correſpondence with the Imperialiſts: And he farther tells us, it does not appear, whether any Credit was given to this Letter at the Engliſh Court.

(o) Bp. Burnet, *pt.*1.*p.*93. See Records, Numb. 16.

Whether the Pope allow'd Polygamy.

(p) Page 302.

And that the Pope was either miſreported, or Caſſali miſunderſtood, ſeems farther probable, from what is delivered by our learned Church Hiſtorian (q): Who informs us, that Sir Francis Bryan and Peter Vannes, the King's Agents at Rome, had Inſtructions to propoſe, whether in Caſe other Expedients were rejected, the Pope wou'd not diſpenſe with the King's having two Wives?

(q) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 60. compared with p. 93.

And elſewhere he acquaints us, that this Motion was conſented to, and promoted by the Imperialiſts *. That is, the Emperor was willing to gratify the King, and come up to his Fancy. Now ſince the Pope and the Emperor were thus flexible to the King's Inclination, and agreed to his Terms, how comes it about his Highneſs did not take theſe Princes by the Hand, and cloſe with them upon his own Propoſal? 'Twas never pretended the King mov'd for more than two Wives at once; Why then did he not acquieſce, when thus fairly offer'd? What made him come to the laſt Extremities, break wholly with the Pope, and make the Emperor his Enemy, when they conſented to oblige him, by ſo unuſual a Favour, and comply'd to the length of his Demands? I own theſe Queſtions are too hard for me, and therefore I muſt leave 'em.

* Id. p. 93.

Having already mention'd the Univerſities, and other Divines, who declared for the Divorce, it may not be improper to ſay ſomething of the Authorities on the other ſide. Amongſt theſe, we have Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter, John Holiman Biſhop

An Abſtract of the Arguments of thoſe who wrote againſt the Divorce.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

Biſhop of Briſtol, Clark Biſhop of Bath and Wells, Tonſtal Biſhop of Durham, and Weſt Biſhop of Ely, to which we may add, Thomas Abel, Edward Powel, Richard Featherſtone, and one Dr. Ridley, all Engliſh Canoniſts. And for Foreigners, Franciſco Royas, Alphonſo de Verves, Alphonſo de Caſtro, and Sepulveda, Spaniards: The famous Cardinal Cajetan, and Ludovico Nugarrola, Italians: Alvarus Gomeſius a Portugueeze: Johannes Cocleus, an High-German: Equinarus, Duarenus, Convanus, French Men: And Ludovicus à Schota, a Low Country Man (s). But after all, whether theſe Engliſh Men abovemention'd, were all concern'd as Authors in the Controverſy, is farther than I ſhall determine.

Sanders de Schiſm. Anglic. p. 79.

(s) Fuller's ChurchHiſtory, Book 5. pag. 182.

The Subſtance of what theſe Advocates for the Queen alledged, is this.

"Cardinal Cajetan endeavour'd to prove the Prohibitions in Leviticus, were no Branches of the moral Law. They were not obſerv'd, as he reaſons, before the Law, no not by the Holy Seed. For did not Abraham marry his Siſter, and Jacob two Siſters? Thus Judah made no Scruple to give his two Sons to Thamar, and after their Deceaſe, promis'd her the Third. To advance to the Moſaick Inſtitution: The Prohibition in Leviticus is relax'd in Deuteronomy, which proves the Law was not moral. For whatſoever is moral, muſt by conſequence be immutable. Then as to the Places cited for the Divorce, from the New Teſtament, they wou'd not bear in the Argument. For inſtance, St. John Baptiſt's Reproof of Herod is foreign to the Point: For both Joſephus and Euſebius inform us, that his Brother Philip was alive, when Herod liv'd with his Wife, and by conſequence this Prince's Crime, was Adultery, and not Inceſt. And thus we have reaſon to believe, the inceſtuous Corinthian cohabited with his Father's Wife, when his Father was living. For had he been dead, St. Paul cou'd not have call'd it a Fornication not named among the Gentiles; for we find the Marriage of Step-Mothers, not only allow'd among the Perſians, and other heathen Nations, but even among the Jews. For did not Adonijah requeſt the marrying of Abiſhag, who had been his Father's Concubine?

From all which, thoſe who wrote againſt the Divorce, concluded, "That the Laws touching the Degrees of Marriage, were binding only to the Jews: And that Chriſtians were bound to obey 'em no farther than they were incorporated with the Laws of the Church: And that it was in the Pope's Power to diſpence with the Eccleſiaſtical Cuſtom and Conſtitutions.

"They urg'd farther, that the Pope had granted this Diſpenſation upon weighty Conſiderations, to keep a good Correſpodence between the Crowns of England and Spain. That after the Marriage had continued above twenty Years, 'twould be highly ſcandalous to bring it under Debate. Beſides, the proceeding to a Divorce, might be a dangerous Precedent, and perplex the Titles of ſeveral Princes.

And laſtly, they concluded, "That whatever Nullities or Defects of Form were charg'd upon the Bulls or Briefs, the Pope was the only Judge of that Matter: And that it was a Preſumption in inferior Prelates, to determine upon the Point *.

* Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 103.

The Reply of thoſe who wrote on the King's ſide.

To theſe Arguments, thoſe who wrote for the King's Cauſe, reply'd "That they were ſurpriz'd to find Men who declar'd againſt heretical Novelties, to argue in ſo un-orthodox a manner! For what is the Inlet into all Hereſie in the Opinion of Catholick Doctors? Is it not the ſetting up new Interpretations of Scripture? Is it not the preference of private Reaſoning, to the Doctrine and Tradition of the Church? We have fully made out, continue theſe Advocates, that the Fathers have unanimouſly maintain'd the Levitical Prohibitions of Marriage, to be of a moral and unalterable Nature: And that Cajetan was the firſt that was ſo hardy as to ſet up his own Expoſition againſt the Senſe of Antiquity. 'Tis true, before the Moſaick Law, theſe prohibited Degrees were not obſerved: But this proves only, that the Immorality of ſuch a Correſpondence, does not ſtrike full upon the Underſtandings of all Men. And therefore, ſince the Thing has not the cleareſt Evidence, nor can be eaſily diſcover'd by the Light of Nature; conſidering this, we need not wonder to find a Law in Leviticus for the better Direction of Practice. And as for the Inſtance of Judah and Tamar, there is ſo much Irregularity in all the Circumſtances, that it does not ſeem ſafe to bring it into Precedent. And as to the Permiſſion, of marrying the Brother's Wife, we can only infer from hence, that the Reaſon of the Law, is not altogether unalterable. From whence it follows, that it may be diſpens'd with by the Authority that made it. But though Moſes relax'd by divine Revelation, it does not follow, the Pope can give this Liberty by the Privilege of his Character.

As to the Inſtance of Herod, they aſſert, "'tis not clear from Joſephus, that Philip was alive when Herod marry'd his Wife: For Joſephus ſays no more, than that ſhe elop'd from her Huſband, and then divorc'd herſelf from him. And as to the inceſtuous Corinthian, tho' ſome few Precedents of a King of Syria, and ſome others, may be brought of Sons marrying their Step-Mothers, yet theſe Liberties had generally an ill Complexion, and were look'd on as the Exceſſes of arbitrary and licentious Princes *.

* Id. pag. 104, 105.

A Remark upon the Argument.

And now, whether thoſe who argued for the Divorce, diſentangl'd the Texts of Leviticus and Deuteronomy †, may be ſomewhat a Queſtion. For granting as they affirm, the Prohibition in Leviticus was binding upon all Nations: Granting this, Why ſhou'd not the Diſpenſation in Deuteronomy be interpreted to the ſame Extent? Why ſhou'd the Relaxation not be as general as the Reſtraint? 'Tis a receiv'd Maxim, that Laws are to be expounded in Favour of Liberty. Indeed, were there any Limitation in the Text to bar this Privilege, the Caſe wou'd be alter'd. But ſince this can't be pretended, why may not Chriſtians have the Benefit of the Deuteronomy Exception, as well as the Jews? Since the Goſpel allows greater Liberties in other Matters, why muſt it go leſs in this? Has not God as great a Regard for the publick Intereſt, and the Repoſe of Kingdoms, under the Chriſtian, as under the Jewiſh Church? And if ſo, How can the Proviſion allow'd the one, be deny'd the other?

† Levit. 20. 21. Deut. 25. 5.

However, though the King's Cauſe might be ſomewhat preſs'd in this Particular, he is ſaid to have had the Advantage in another reſpect. For the Univerſities and Divines, declar'd frankly for him. There was no Biaſs of Preſents, no Proſpect of Preferment to prepoſſeſs them againſt Truth (t). And for this fair Proceeding, Dr. Croke is produc'd as an Evidence. But there's a Letter wrote to the King by this Gentleman, which ſeems to ſpeak to another Senſe (u). I ſhall tranſcribe ſome Part of it.

(t) Bp. Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 89, 90. Octob. 23. 1529.

Whether the Univerſities, &c. deliver'd their Opinions gratis.

He acquaints the King, "he had paid three and twenty Crowns to Frier Thomas, who, notwithſtanding he had given Hopes of his declaring for the Divorce, yet he had now deſerted the King's Side, and argued for the Lawfulneſs of the Marriage. He mentions one Raphael who had printed againſt the Divorce in Italy. In this Book, the Author proteſts that what he had formerly written for the King's Satisfaction, was only by way of Exerciſe, but that now he had declar'd his Mind without Reſerve. He lets the King know farther, that one Ambroſe had twenty Crowns of him for determining at Padua, in Favour of the Divorce: And that two other Friers had ſeventy ſeven Crowns.

Cornelius Agrippa ſtands recommended as a Man very famous for great and curious Learning, and ſo ſatisfied in the King's Cauſe, that he gave it out, that the Thing was clear and indiſputable, for which he was afterwards hardly us'd by the Emperor, and died in Priſon (w). If Agrippa's Fancy then was not exactly ballanc'd, the Overweight lay in the King's Scale. However, in one of his Books he breaks out into this Expoſtulation (x). Who would have imagin'd, that Divines in Matters of Faith and Conſcience, ſhou'd have been govern'd by Partialities or Averſion? Who wou'd have thought they cou'd have been bribed by Treats and Preſents, unleſs they had given Proof of this mercenary Temper, in declaring againſt the King of England's firſt Marriage? Cavendiſh, Cardinal Woolſey's Gentleman-Uſher, is another Authority, that the King was at a conſiderable Expence for the gaining the foreign Univerſities. He tells us, that thoſe who govern'd thoſe Societies, or had the keeping of the common Seals, were fed by the Commiſſioners with great Sums of Money (y); and gain'd by the Prevalence of Bribery. One of our own Parliaments concurs with Cavendiſh in his Reflection *.

The Act ſets forth, That the Seals as well of certain Univerſities in Italy and France, were gotten (as it were for a Teſtimony) by the Corruption of Money, with a few light Perſons, Scholars of the ſame Univerſities: As alſo the Seals of the Univerſities of this Realm, were obtain'd by great Travel, ſiniſter Working, ſecret Threatnings and Entreatings of ſome Men of Authority, ſpecially ſent at that time thither for the ſame Purpoſes.

Lib. 9 p. 140. Farther, Sleiden believes that the foreign Univerſities, and particularly that of Paris, were brib'd for the King. Laſtly, in the Year 1532, there was a Book publiſh'd at Lunenburgh, entitul'd, a Confutation of the Cenſures of the Univerſities, printed with the King's Licenſe in England. This Book now in the Bodlean Library, informs us, that the Univerſity of Paris were at the loweſt at an even Diviſion, as many being againſt, as for the Divorce. And that ſome Members of that Body, publiſh'd Diſcourſes againſt the other Party, who gave their Opinions for the King. This Author wrote on the Queen's ſide, and dedicated his Book to Euſtathius Chapnytius, the Emperor's Ambaſſador in England.

On the other ſide, it may be ſaid, People won't always ſtudy an intricate Queſtion, and take Pains in a fair Cauſe, without a Conſideration.

An Addreſs to the Pope from the Nobility, &c.

The King being thus fortified with the Cenſures of the Univerſities, and other learned Men, reſolv'd to publiſh their Concluſions. And to make the moſt of the Advantage, he procures an Addreſs, or rather a Remonſtrance to be ſent from ſeveral of the Nobility and Commons to the Pope (z). "In this Letter, they complain how long they have been diſappointed in this Buſineſs; that they wou'd not have given his Holyneſs any Trouble, had not the King, the Soul of the Government, been ſo deeply concern'd; but when the Head ſuffers ſo much, the Body muſt of courſe be uneaſie. That they humbly conceiv'd, the Juſtice of the Cauſe, approv'd by the Determination of ſo many famous Univerſities in France, Italy, and England, might have ſuperceded the Trouble of any farther Importunity: And that there had been no need of ſolliciting his Holyneſs to confirm the Opinions of ſo many learn'd Men: Eſpecially ſince the Deciſion of the Cauſe relates to a King and Kingdom, which have ſo well deſerv'd of the Apoſtolick See. But neither the Reaſonableneſs of the Requeſt, the Memory of Obligations receiv'd, nor the repeated Entreaties of an excellent Prince, can prevail with your Holyneſs, and diſpoſe you to a juſt Regard. And ſince all theſe Motives are without Effect, 'tis no Wonder if our Grievances have made us break Silence, and forc'd us upon the Freedom of a Remonſtrance. For is it not a very unfortunate thing, that the Declaration of ſo many famous Univerſities, and other Perſons of Learning, ſhou'd not be able to do the King their intended Service: That theſe celebrated Societies can't prevail with the Apoſtolick See to exert the Functions of its Character? And that a Prince who has engag'd for St. Peter's Chair, againſt ſo many potent Enemies, and defended the Popedom, both with his Sword and Pen, ſhou'd be deny'd in a Caſe of common Right; ſhould be refus'd the Benefit of that ſpiritual Authority, which had it not been for his Highneſs, wou'd have been in no Condition to have oblig'd any Part of the Church. Theſe myſterious Proceedings put us perfectly to a Stand: And in conſequence of this Uſage, we are threatned as it were, with a Deluge of Misfortune: For indeed, what Inundation can be more calamitous, than the perplexing the Royal Title, and reviving the Controverſy of the Succeſſion, which has lately coſt the Nation ſo much Treaſure and Blood?

"God be thanked, we have an admirable Prince, whoſe Right to the Crown is unqueſtionable, and were he bleſs'd with any Iſſue Male, wou'd ſettle Peace and Tranquillity upon the Kingdom: But the Hopes of this Happineſs depends wholly upon an unconteſted Marriage. Now for the procuring this Bleſſing, there is nothing wanting, but that your Holyneſs ſhou'd interpoſe your Authority in pronouncing againſt the former Marriage, and corroborate the Sentence of ſo many learned Men.

"But if this Aſſiſtance is refus'd: If a Father will deſert his Relation, throw up his Children, and put them in the Condition of Orphans: If this is the Caſe, we muſt conclude, we are left to take care of our ſelves, and ſhall be oblig'd to think of ſome other Remedy. To prevent theſe Extremities, we beſeech your Holyneſs to comply with our Sovereign in his very reaſonable Requeſts, and to give us this Relief with all Expedition. And ſince we move for no more than what your Paſtoral Office may fairly ſuggeſt, we hope your Holyneſs will ſhew ſome Tenderneſs and Affection to ſuch dutiful and obedient Sons. We are all concern'd to the laſt

(u) MS. ex Biblioth. R. Harley Armig.

(w) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 95.

(x) Apolog. adverſ. theologos Lovanienſes, cap. 2. Harmar. p. 18.

(y) Cavendiſh's Memoirs, &c. p. 99.

*1 Mar. Seſſ. 2. c. 1.

(z) See Records, N. 14.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

“degree in the King's Cauſe. Whatever Miſfortune happens to the Head, muſt of conſequence affect the whole Body: And thus we muſt all ſuffer in his Majeſty. And ſince 'tis in your Holineſs's Power to give an eaſy Redreſs to this Grievance, we can't help ſaying, with Submiſſion, that it ought to be in your Will too. But if your Holyneſs ſhall think fit to do nothing, or proves dilatory in your Proceedings, our Condition will be ſo much the more unfortunate, becauſe we have waited and labour'd a great while to no purpoſe: However, we ſhall not altogether deſpair of diſintangling our ſelves. Some Remedies indeed are rough in the Operation, but the Patient muſt cure himſelf as well as he can: There's ſomething of Comfort in the Change of a Miſfortune; for tho' a Man may fail of having all he wiſh'd for, yet the Burthen may be ſomewhat lighten'd, and grow eaſy upon Cuſtom and Time. We once again entreat your Holyneſs wou'd pleaſe to conſider theſe things, and ſhew your ſelf the Vicar of Chriſt, no leſs in your Actions than in your Title: And that the Truth which has been brought to light by the Labour and Study of ſo many learned Perſons, may receive a more illuſtrious Evidence by your Holyneſs's Concurrence. In the mean time, we ſhan't ceaſe to beg God Almighty to direct your Holyneſs to a juſt Reſolution, that by this means we may be freed from the Trouble of any other Expedient.

By this Letter, the Pope might pretty well foreſee the Conſequence of his Incomplyance: And that, unleſs he gave the King Satisfaction, he was in danger of loſing England. But notwithſtanding the Niceneſs of the Affair, he was reſolv'd not to ſtoop his Authority, but holds up his Pretenſion, at the Cuſtomary Pitch (a).

(a) See Records, N. 15.

The Pope's Anſwer.

In his Anſwer, he lets them know, “that their Letter wou'd have been more unacceptable to him, had he not been ſenſible of their being tranſported into ſome Freedoms by their Affection to their Sovereign. He ſhall therefore make 'em a return without any thing of Paſſion, and only give them to underſtand, that no Regards of Duty or Inclination to their Prince ought to have carried them ſo far, as to charge him with Ingratitude, and denying of Juſtice. We own, ſays he, your King has deſerv'd a great deal more than you mention; and that his Favours will never be forgotten by the Apoſtolick See. We confeſs our ſelves extremely obliged to his Highneſs, both in our private and publick Capacity, and that we are never likely to make him a Requital. But as to the Diſpute of the Marriage between his Highneſs and Queen Catharine, we are ſo far from diſappointing the King, by ſtopping the Courſe of Juſtice, that on the other hand, we are charged with carrying our ſelves ſomewhat uneven, and inclining to a Partiality to his Highneſs.

A. D. 1530.

To juſtify his Conduct, he reminds them, how at the King's Inſtance, he at firſt referr'd the Deciſion to the Cardinals Wolſey and Campegio, and ordered the Cauſe to be tryed, as it were, in the King's Palace: But when the Queen complaining of the Diſadvantage of the Place, and the Diſaffection of the Legates, made her Appeal to the Apoſtolick See, tho' he cou'd not refuſe her in this Application, yet even then, he was not wanting in giving Proof of his Friendſhip to the King. To this Purpoſe he threw in all poſſible Delays, in hopes that the Difference might have been adjuſted in an amicable way. But ſince it happen'd otherwiſe, and the whole Conclave have unanimouſly reſolv'd, his Holyneſs cou'd not deny the Proceſs upon the Appeal; there was no Evaſion but that the Cauſe muſt go on in the Forms of Law, and be referr'd to the Conſiſtory.

“Now as we ought to proceed always, continues the Pope, with due Care; ſo we are particularly oblig'd to the utmoſt Circumſpection, in a Cauſe where Kings and Princes are concern'd, and where the Eyes of Chriſtendom are all upon us. Now the King having conſtituted no legal Proxy to make out his Pretenſions, and plead for him, what wonder is it, if this Failure has occaſion'd the hanging of the Controverſy? For we are oblig'd to give Sentence upon Reaſons and Records; and not out of Fancy and Inclination. You have no Reaſon therefore to blame us for the Length and Tediouſneſs of the Diſpute: Indeed, we are much ſurpriz'd you ſhou'd complain upon this Head, ſince the King's Ambaſſadors ſolicited us for Time and Reſpite, both at Bononia and elſewhere; and to this Motion we then agreed, tho' the Queen's Proxies appear'd ſtrongly againſt it. Since therefore we have put no manner of Stop to the Buſineſs, we can't imagine why you ſhou'd remonſtrate upon this ſcore; unleſs you are of Opinion that the Apoſtolick See, is ſo deeply indebted to the King, that we ought to reſign to his Pleaſure, and gratify him at any rate: Indeed this ſeems to be plainly your Meaning, when you tell us, we ought to have ſubſcribed the Cenſure of the Univerſities, without any Application: Notwithſtanding the loudeſt Oppoſition and Counter-claim on the other ſide. Now in this matter, we can't help ſaying, you have fail'd a little in point of Modeſty and Diſcretion. For 'tis unintelligible to us, why we ſhou'd be deſired to give Sentence unrequeſted in a Cauſe of the laſt Importance; why we ſhou'd be thus preſs'd when the contrary Party urges the Scandal of Chriſtendom, the long Continuance of the Marriage, made upon a Diſpenſation from the Apoſtolick See, at the Inſtance of two illuſtrious Monarchs of England and Spain: When they plead a Daughter ſtill living, and ſeveral other Children born of the Queen: When they counterballance your learned Authorities with numerous Teſtimonies of no leſs Weight: And when they offer to fortifie their Cauſe, from Scripture Evidence, and Hebrew Learning: Notwithſtanding all this Counter-proof, we have held our Situation, and kept cloſe to an exact Neutrality.

“As for thoſe Univerſities and other Men of Letters, who as you alledge have declared in your Favour, very little of this kind has been ſeen by us, and that which has appear'd has not been deliver'd by the King's Ambaſſadors, nor come before us in a legal Manner. And beſides, they are only naked unſupported Reſolutions, without any Reaſons, drawn either from Scripture and the Canons upon which they ſtand.

“Now to require us to determine in favour of the King, without Thought or Conſideration, is neither fair in itſelf, nor does it become Perſons of your Senſe to ask it. For notwithſtanding we are extremely oblig'd to his Highneſs, yet in giving Judgment we muſt have a greater Regard to him, by whom Kings reign, and Princes decree Juſtice. And, indeed, it is a Father's Buſineſs to take care his Affe“ ctions don't gain the Aſcendant, and make him over-indulgent to his Children. Beſides, by a raſh and precipitate Sentence, we ſhou'd only perplex our own, and his Highneſs's Conſcience, and publiſh a dangerous Precedent to the Chriſtian Church.

“ And whereas in the Cloſe of your Letter, you acquaint us, that unleſs we ſatisfy your Requeſt, you ſhall look upon your ſelves as left to your own Diſcretion, and think upon other Meaſures: This Reſolve we conceive is ſhort both in Prudence and Conſcience; and therefore in Charity we can't but adviſe you to deſiſt from any ſuch Courſe. And be pleas'd to take notice, there wou'd be no reaſon to blame the Phyſician, if the ſick Perſon, growing impatient under the Cure, ſhould fly out of Regimen, and deſtroy his Health. As for us, we are always willing to allow of warrantable Remedies: *For who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not? Our Mouth is open unto you, dear Sons, and out of Tenderneſs of Affection, we ſuggeſt this Warning. To ſpeak clearly, I am of Opinion, the King for whom you ſollicit, wou'd not have approved the manner of your Application: For we are ſo well aſſur'd of his Highneſs's Integrity, that we cant help ſaying, that he wou'd have refus'd an unjuſt Deciſion, tho' made in favour of himſelf. And notwithſtanding we have a great Regard for the Interceſſion of ſo many Perſons of Quality, yet our Affection to his Highneſs, will not give us leave to be wholly govern'd by the ſtrength of Intreaty: Tho' on the other ſide, we can't recollect our refuſing his Majeſty any thing which was conſiſtent with the Honour of our See: And we ſhall always continue in the ſame friendly Inclination. As to the Cauſe, when 'tis fully opened and pleaded home on both ſides, it ſhall be diſpatch'd with all imaginable Expedition: For no Body living can be more deſirous than we are to ſet the King and Queen at their eaſe, and put a ſpeedy Iſſue to ſo very troubleſome an Affair. In the mean time, we entreat the King, and your Lordſhips not to preſs his Highneſs's Favours too hard upon us, nor demand that which we can't grant without offending God Almighty: Now with this Reſerve, you may expect a Complyance in every thing from us, which lies within the Compaſs of Juſtice, and the Character we bear.

*2 Cor. 11. 29.
2 Cor. 6. 11.

“ Dated at Rome, &c. the 27th Day of September 1530, and the 7th Year of our Pontificate.

Sept 19. 1530.

Some little time before this, the King being apprehenſive of the Queen's or Wolſey's procuring Bulls againſt him, ſet forth the following Proclamation (b).

(b) Hall.

A Proclamation againſt acting upon the Pope's Bulls.

“ The King's Highneſs ſtraightly charges and commands, that no manner of Perſon of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he, or they be of, do purchaſe or attempt to purchaſe from the Court of Rome, or elſewhere, nor uſe and put in Execution, divulge or publiſh any thing heretofore within this Year paſt, purchas'd or to be purchas'd hereafter, containing Matter prejudicial to the high Authority, Juriſdiction, and Prerogative Royal of this his ſaid Realm, or to the Let, Hinderance or Impeachment of his Grace's noble and virtuous intended Purpoſes in the Premiſes; upon pain of incurring his Highneſs's Indignation and Impriſonment, and farther Puniſhment of their Bodies for their ſo doing, at his Grace's Pleaſure, to the dreadful Example of all others.

This Proclamation as appears by the Date was publiſh'd ſomewhat more than a Month after the Expoſtulating Letter ſent to the Pope: And 'tis probable the King might be encourag'd to exert himſelf thus far, by ſeeing the Principal of his Subjects ſo forward in his Intereſt.

The Pope and Conclave, we may imagine, were ſomewhat alarm'd at the Proclamation and Remonſtrance. Theſe, they perceived, were unuſual Freedoms, and look'd like Steps to a farther Remove. To prevent worſe Conſequences, the Pope was willing to ſalve up the matter, and recover the King's Friendſhip. To this his Holyneſs was the more diſpos'd by a late Diſappointment from the Emperor. The Caſe was this: His Imperial Majeſty was deſir'd to refer the Determination of the Differences between the Pope and the Duke of Ferrara, to ſuch Perſons as he thought fit. Modena and Rhegio were the matter in Diſpute. Now the Emperor happen'd to pitch upon ſuch Judges, as awarded theſe Towns to the Duke. This Sentence ſo far diſguſted the Pope, as to diſpoſe him to break with the Emperor. The Juncture ſtanding thus, 'tis probable the King might have clos'd with him, and been gratified in the Divorce, had not his Parliament diſcovered their Inclination to extend the Regale.

The Pope inclin'd to give the King Satisfaction.

The Parliament being now ſitting, 'twas thought fit to acquaint the Houſes, with the Reſolutions of the learned relating to the Marriage. To this Purpoſe, the Lord Chancellor, Stokeſly Biſhop of London, and ſeveral other Lords Spiritual and Temporal, went to the Houſe of Commons, and told 'em, they cou'd not be unacquainted how the King's Mind was diſturb'd for having married his Brother's Wife. That to diſintangle his Conſcience, he had applied to the moſt celebrated Univerſities; not but that Oxford and Cambridge were well qualified for the Debate: But his Majeſty was willing to give himſelf and the World all imaginable Satisfaction. Upon this, Mr. Bryan Tuke was ordered to read the Determinations of the Univerſities in France and Italy, which were only ſix; to which may be added the two Engliſh Univerſities.

The Cenſures of the Univerſities read in Parliament.

And to ſtrengthen the Authority of theſe Deciſions, the Matter had been referr'd to the Convocation. The Caſe was propoſed under theſe two Queſtions; Whether the marrying the Relict of a Brother deceaſing after the Conſummation of the Marriage, was prohibited by the Law of God, and above the Pope's Diſpenſation? This Queſtion being debated by the Prelates and lower Houſe for ſeveral Days together, 253 of the Members determin'd for the Affirmative, the Negative being maintain'd by no more than 19.

Apr. 5. 1530.
Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 106.
Conventiones, Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 454.

The Convocation determined for the Divorce.

The ſecond Queſtion, which lay within the Profeſſion of the Canoniſts and Civilians, was put thus, Whether the Conſummation of the Marriage between Prince Arthur, and the Princeſs Catherine now Queen, was ſufficiently proved? For the debating this Queſtion, there were 47 Profeſſors of the Canon and Civil Law, of which 3 were Proxies. Of theſe, 41 decided the Queſtion in the Affirmative. And here it may not be improper to obſerve that John Biſhop of Rocheſter, and George Biſhop of Landaff, were on the negative ſide in the firſt Queſtion, and ſo was John Biſhop of Bath and Wells in the ſecond (c). From whence it appears our learned Church-Hiſtorian was miſtaken in affirming, that all the Biſhops excepting Fiſher declared under their Hands and Seals that they judged the Marriage unlawful (d).

But three of the Biſhops, &c. were againſt it.

(c) Harmer, p. 193, 296.

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

(d) Bp. Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 38. Reflections on Varillas, p. 22, 28, 35.

May 31. 1531. Two Meſſages ſent to the Queen upon this Buſineſs.

The King being thus fortified with the Deciſions of the Learned, ſent ſome Lords of the Council to acquaint the Queen with it: They had likewiſe in Charge the propoſing of an Expedient to put an end to the Debate: And that her Highneſs wou'd refer the matter to four Spiritual and four Temporal Lords of this Kingdom. But the Queen would not be prevail'd with to depart from her Appeal. Her Anſwer therefore was, that ſhe could not quit the Relation of being the King's Wife, 'till the Court of Rome ſhou'd determine the contrary (e).

(e) Lord Herbert, p. 326.

But to no effect.

The King who was reſolved to omit nothing to bring her to an Acquieſcence, ſent another Meſſage. The Inſtructions were ſomewhat more rugged and menacing than the former: In the cloſe, ſhe was told, that the Scruples of the King's Conſcience ran ſo high, that of late his Highneſs had forborn to hold any Correſpondence with her by Viſits, or receiving of Tokens: And that now her Grace had the Liberty of retiring to Oaking, Eaſt-Hamſtead, or the Monaſtry of Biſham, as ſhe lik'd beſt. To which the good Queen replied little more than this: That no Diſtance cou'd diſcharge the Relation, or remove her from being the King's Wife. And from this time 'tis ſaid the King never ſaw her more.

July 14.

Ibid.

There's one remarkable Paſſage, which I ſhou'd have mention'd the latter end of the laſt Year; and that is the whole Clergy's falling under a Premunire for acknowledging Cardinal Wolſey's Legantine Authority. And thus an Indictment was brought againſt the Body of this Order into the King's Bench (f). And here, as 'tis ſaid, 'twas in vain to plead the King had not only connived at the Cardinal's Proceedings, but made him all that while his chief Miniſter. That therefore they were excuſable in ſubmitting to an Authority ſo much encouraged by the King; eſpecially ſince if they had done otherwiſe, they muſt have been unavoidably ruin'd. For to all this, 'twas anſwer'd that the Laws were ſtill in Force: That they ought to take notice of the Conſtitution at their Peril, and that their Ignorance could not excuſe them. However, tho' by the Courts proceeding to a Sentence, they were all out of the King's Protection, and liable to the Forfeitures in the Statutes; his Highneſs notwithſtanding was willing upon a reaſonable Compoſition, and a full Submiſſion, to pardon 'em.

(f) Antiquit. Brit. Eccleſ. p. 325. Biſhop Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 106.

The Clergy brought under a Præmunire for owning Cardinal Wolſey's Legantine Authority.

Id. p. 112.

They compound with the King.

The Clergy finding themſelves thus diſtreſs'd were glad to compound for their Acquittal: But as for any Submiſſion with reſpect to their Power of not making Canons without the King's Licence, there was none ſuch made till two Years forward, as will appear hereafter. To return to their Compoſition, which was ſomewhat ſevere; for the Province of Canterbury parted with an hundred thouſand Pounds; and the Province of York with eighteen thouſand, eight hundred and Forty. This was a prodigious Fine at that time of day; and 'tis probable, was more than twenty times the Value of the ſame Sum, at preſent.

But after all, 'tis probable the Proceſs was not carried thro', nor Judgment given againſt the Clergy in the King's Bench. For Hollingſhead ſays they compounded before the Day of their Appearance *. And Lord Herbert only ſays they were brought to the King's Bench, which it may be, means no more than a Summons. For had their Tryal paſs'd thro' the Forms, and the Court proceeded to Judgment, we ſhould in all likelihood have had a particular Account of the Judges that ſat, of the Prelates who came thither, and the Council that pleaded the Cauſe. Such a famous Caſe as this, we may imagine wou'd never have been omitted in our Lawyer's Reports.

* Hollingſhead, p. 923.

Hen. VIII. K.

Their Caſe conſider'd.

Now whether the Clergy were hardly us'd or not, will appear in ſome meaſure from a few Remarks upon this Subject.

Firſt, If the Clergy were indicted upon the Statutes of Proviſo's or Præmunire (g), the Queſtion will be, whether their Caſe falls under the Penalties of theſe Acts? And here I ſhall only offer ſomething in a Problematical way, without pretending to determine upon the Point.

(g) 27 Ed. 3. cap. 1. 16. Ric. 2. cap. 5.

Now it may be alleg'd, the Clergy did not fall under the Forfeitures of the Statutes above-mention'd by owning Wolſey's Legantine Character: For do theſe Statutes either make a Grievance of the Functions of a Legate, or ſo much as mention that Character? The Purview of theſe Acts ſeems plainly ſet forth in the Preamble. And what is that? 'Tis to ſecure Patronages from Papal Proviſions; 'tis to prevent the Impeachment of Judgments given in the King's Courts; 'tis to guard the Prerogative from the Encroachment, of the Conclave. Now which way does it appear that a moderate Exerciſe of the Legantine Commiſſion was inconſiſtent with the Rights of the Subject, or the Juriſdiction of the Crown above mention'd? Might not Wolſey make uſe of his Legantine Authority in convening National Synods, Voting for the paſſing or nulling of Canons, and doing other things of a Spiritual Nature, without encroaching upon any Branch of Property or Prerogative? One would think there were many Powers within the Verge of his Authority inoffenſively practicable.

Farther, 'Tis obſerved that ſeveral Engliſh Archbiſhops, ſince the making of theſe Statutes, have acted as Popes Legates without any Proſecution from the State (h). And which is more, it appears pretty plainly that thoſe Lords and other Perſons of Figure who exhibited the Articles abovementioned againſt Cardinal Wolſey, were not of Opinion that the Legantine Authority was neceſſarily ſubverſive of the King's Prerogative, or inconſiſtent with the Laws of the Land: This I ſay, ſeems to appear clearly enough from the twenty eighth Article, which runs thus:

(h) Godwyn de Præſul. in Chicheley. Biſhop Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 112.

> That the ſaid Lord Cardinal did firſt ſue unto your Grace to have your Aſſent to be Legate a Latere, promiſing and ſolemnly proteſting before your Majeſty, and before the Lords both Spiritual and Temporal, that he would nothing do nor attempt by the Virtue of his Legacy, that ſhould be contrary to your gracious Prerogative or Regality, or to the Damage or Prejudice of the Juriſdiction of any Ordinary, and that by his Legacy no Man ſhou'd be hurted nor offended; and upon that Condition, and no other, he was admitted by your Grace to be Legate within this your Realm (i).

(i) Coke Inſtit. pt. 4. fol. 92.

Now is it not pretty plain by the Tenor of this Article, that the Functions of a Legate were not ſo irreconcilable with the Laws as has been affirm'd (k)? One would imagine the Lords who exhibited the Charge, ſhould underſtand the Conſtitution in this Matter; eſpecially ſince they had three eminent Lawyers, Sir Thomas Moor Lord Chancellor, Fitz-James Chief Juſtice of England, and the famous Fitz-Herbert another Judge, to direct 'em: for theſe three ſubſcrib'd the Impeachment with the other Lords (l).

(k) Antiquit. Brit. Eccleſ. p. 325. Bp Burnet, pt. 1. p. 112.

(l) Coke, ibid. fol. 95.

Secondly, Suppoſing theſe Statutes ſhou'd affect the Legantine Authority, and thoſe who own'd it, 'twas within the King's Prerogative to have diſpenſed with the Penalty. That the King might have skreen'd the Clergy from Puniſhment, appears by the Reſolution of all the Judges of England; where they unanimouſly deliver it as their Opinion, that notwithſtanding the King cannot grant the Benefit of a Penal Statute to a Subject under the Broad Seal, yet they agree that his Majeſty (upon any Conſideration moving him with reſpect to Time, Place, or Perſon, &c.) may grant a non-obſtante to diſpenſe with any particular Perſon, to prevent his incurring the Penalty of the Statute: And to affirm this, ſay they, we are warranted by our Books (m). And in Calvin's Caſe the King's Prerogative to diſpenſe with an Act of Parliament, is maintain'd by all the Judges in a very remarkable Inſtance.

Thirdly, Since it was in the King's Power to have granted a Noli proſequi, to remit the Penalty, or at leaſt, to have returned their Money: The Queſtion is, whether he was not bound in Juſtice to do it? The Reaſon of this Queſtion is, becauſe the Cardinal, as has been prov'd already, had a Warrant under the Broad Seal to indemnify him in the Exerciſe of a Legate's Office. And is it not ſomewhat rigorous the King ſhou'd proſecute his own Act and Deed: That he ſhou'd lay ſo heavy a Burthen upon the Clergy, and draw ſo vaſt a Sum from 'em, for owning an Authority under ſo publick a Countenance? Wou'd not this Uſage have been complain'd of as intolerable Oppreſſion had it been put upon any other Perſons? Beſides, the Clergy were paſſive more than any thing elſe: And rather ſuffered under, than abetted Wolſey's Legantine Authority. That this was their unfortunate Caſe, appears by the Articles againſt the Cardinal already mention'd.

The Clergy acknowledge the King ſupreme Head of the Church but not without a Reſerve.

But this was not all: There was more than Money requir'd of the Clergy. The King perceiving the Proceſs of the Divorce move ſlowly at Rome, and the Iſſue look unpromiſing, projected a Relief another way. To this purpoſe he ſeems to have form'd a Deſign of transferring ſome Part of the Pope's Pretenſions upon the Crown, and ſetting up an Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy. And now having gotten the Clergy entangled in a Præmunire, he reſolv'd to ſeize the Juncture, and puſh the Advantage. Thus the Regale was requir'd to be acknowledg'd in uncuſtomary Language; and a new Submiſſion of this kind put to the Convocation. The Author of the Antiquitates Britannicæ informs us, “ That the King refus'd to pardon the Præmunire, unleſs the Clergy ſubmitted to own him their ſole and ſupreme Head next and immediately after Chriſt: Cranmer and Cromwell were ſuſpected to have ſuggeſted this Thought to the King. The Demand of this new Title ſurpriz'd the Clergy extremely, they were ſomewhat at a ſtand about the Meaning; and were apprehenſive dangerous Conſequences might be drawn from it. The Matter was debated a great while; and the Archbiſhop obliged the Houſes to Secrecy under the higheſt Cenſures. To over-aw them into a Complyance, the Lord Rochford, Cromwell Maſter of the Rolls, and ſome of the Judges were ſent to the Convocation: They told them that the King was reſolv'd not to diſcharge the Penalties incurr'd, unleſs they would acknowledge the Title abovemention'd. At laſt the Archbiſhop demanding the Senſe of the Houſes, moſt of 'em ſaid nothing: Upon which he told 'em, Silence implied Conſent. To this they replied, then we are all ſilent. But ſuch a dark imperfect Way of declaring themſelves being look'd on as unſuitable to a Synod; and might be conſtrued an evaſive Anſwer, 'twas thought fit to come to a more explicit Reſolution: And thus at laſt they agreed to acknowledge the King Supreme Lord and Protector, and alſo, as far as was conſiſtent with the Laws of the Goſpel, Supreme Head.

“ The King was not pleas'd to find their Submiſſion thus ſoften'd with Ambiguities and Exceptions: Cromwell therefore was ſent to the Convocation, and ordered to tell 'em, that unleſs they ſpoke plain, and threw out the Reſtriction, the Præmunire wou'd not be diſcharg'd. Upon this they unanimouſly voted the King chief Head of the Church of England without Reſerve (n).

Thus far this Author, who is follow'd in this Account by Maſon de Miniſterio Anglicano (o). But after all, the Matter is miſreported: For the Clergy did not make ſo abſolute a Submiſſion, nor throw out this Clauſe, as theſe Writers pretend. To give a ſhort Account of this remarkable Buſineſs.

Several Forms propoſed.

The new Acknowledgment was firſt propoſed in this Form, Eccleſiæ & Cleri Anglicani cujus Protector & Supremum Caput is ſolus eſt, id eſt, The King is ſole Protector and Supreme Head of the Church and Clergy of England. But this wou'd not paſs; the Reaſon aſſign'd for their Refuſal was, the Article being couch'd in ſuch general Terms, they were afraid it might be miſunderſtood in future Ages, and interpreted to an ungodly Senſe *. After three Days the King finding 'em conſtant to their Reſolve, relax'd a little, and ſtoop'd to ſomething of a Mitigation: He was prevail'd with, that the Addition after God, ſhou'd follow the Words Head of the Church, &c. But neither did this Qualification ſatisfy the Clergy, who choſe rather to run the utmoſt Hazards than comply. This Fortitude prov'd very ſerviceable: For ſoon after the Archbiſhop brought in a more inoffenſive Form, letting 'em know, the King was willing to accept the Acknowledgment with the Limitation of quantum per Legem Chriſti licet, Supremum Caput, &c. And with this Proviſo, the Supremacy was paſs'd, tho' not without ſomething of a Struggle.

Their Submiſſion not drawn in a Petition, but acknowledged in a Grant.

But then this Submiſſion was not made by way of Petition to the King, as a Reverend Prelate ſuppoſes (p). The Clergy pitch'd upon a leſs obnoxious manner; and tack'd their Acknowledgment to the Grant of a hundred thouſand Pounds, which they gave to the King by way of Compoſition (q). I ſhall tranſcribe ſome part of the Inſtrument (r). And here in the penning of this Grant, the Clergy ſeem very cautious to remove the Imputation of a Forfeiture, as much as may be: For the Money granted runs in the Form of a Benevolence or Gratuity. They give the King this Sum by way of Gratitude; particularly for Writing the Book againſt Luther: For ſuppreſſing the Heterodoxies, and checking the Inſults upon the Clergy, from that Party. As for their Submiſſion, 'tis not only penn'd with a Salvo, but thrown into a Parentheſis, as if it came in only by the by. And where they move for a Diſcharge from any Forfeitures incurr'd by the Statutes of Proviſo's and Præmunire, they likewiſe addreſs for a Pardon of the Breach of other Pœnal Laws: And thus, by moving for a Security againſt other Acts of Parliament, they ſeem to fence againſt the Proſecution, and keep their Fault from being particularly pointed upon the Act of Præmunire. And this ſeems the Reaſon why they are not more

(m) Coke's Rep. pt. 7. fol. 36, 37.
Ibid. fol. 14.

(n) Antiquit. Brit. Eccleſ. p. 325, 326.

(o) Lib. 3. c. 4. p. 281.

* Ne Termini, &c. in ſenſum improbum traherentur.
Journal of Convocation.

(p) Bp Burnet, pt. 1. p. 112.

(q) Journal of the Convocation Book.
Regiſt. Warham & Stokeſly.

(r) See Records, N. 17.

preciſe and determinate in owning the Cauſe of their Indictment. This ſeems to be the Reaſon, I ſay, why they are not more particular in addreſſing for their Pardon, nor take any notice of their owning the Legantine Authority.

Journal of Convocation. (s) Dr Atterbury's Rights &c. of an Engliſh Convocation, &c. pag. 84.

Thoſe who agreed to the Form of Submiſſion in the Upper-Houſe, were Nine Biſhops, Sixty Two Abbots and Priors: In the Lower-Houſe, Thirty Six voted for it in Perſon: And theſe being Proxies for Forty Eight more, came up to a Majority (s).

Reginald Pool not preſent in this Convocation. (t) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 112, 113.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian is of Opinion, that Reginald Pool ſate in the Houſe when this Submiſſion paſs'd (t). But that noble Perſon in his Book de Unione Eccleſiaſtica, diſproves this Conjecture. Where ſpeaking to King Henry the Eighth, your Highneſs, ſays he, is very deſirous of being call'd the Supreme Head of the Church: And you declare this additional Title was given you by the Conſent of All the States of the Realm. But as for me, I was not upon the Spot when theſe Things paſt (u). The Reverend Prelate above-mentioned, fortifies his Conjecture, by obſerving, that the King continu'd Pool's Penſions and Preferments after this Time: But by the way, this is no Proof that Pool ſubſcrib'd for the King's new Title: For notwithſtanding he had diſobliged the King, in a higher manner than this comes to, his Preferments were not taken from him: And of this we have a remarkable Inſtance in his Book abovementioned. " Now this Book was publiſh'd in " Year 1536, and written expreſly againſt the " King's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy (w); yet even " there Pool owns himſelf extremely oblig'd to " the King for his Bounty. And that tho' his " Highneſs puniſh'd his Opinion in others, yet " he was pleas'd to encourage his Studies, and " continue his Favours to him (x).

(u) De Union. p. 58. Bp. Burnet, Ibid.

(w) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. pag. 221.

(x) De Union. Eccleſ. p. 58. p. 1. & p. 84.

The Clergy pardon'd by Act of Parliament.

The King receiving Satisfaction in this Matter, ſign'd a Bill to pardon the Clergy. This Bill paſs'd with the Lords, but ſtuck in the Lower Houſe: The Reaſon why the Commons demurr'd, was their not being included themſelves. The King being diſpleas'd with their Refuſal, let 'em know, they were not to ſtand upon Terms, nor capitulate for an Act of Grace. The Commons perceiving they had taken a wrong Step, reſign'd themſelves to the King's Clemency, and gain'd their Deſire (y).

Hollingſhead, p. 923.

(y) Ld. Herbert, p. 321.

(z) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 114.

The Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, being thus pardon'd, proceeded to tax their Body in Convocation (z). And here all the City Clergy are ſaid to refuſe contributing their Proportion towards the Payment of the Hundred Thouſand Pound. Thus our learned Church Hiſtorian reports the Matter from Hall. But Hall, this Reverend Prelate elſewhere obſerves, was but a ſuperficial Writer: And here eſpecially he ſeems to deſerve that Character. For why ſhou'd the inferior Clergy claim an Exemption from being aſſeſs'd? For the Lord Herbert informs us, that the King's learned Council, had declar'd after a long Debate, that the whole Clergy were fallen under a Premunire (a). Secondly, What Reaſon had the City Clergy to refuſe paying their Share of the Compoſition, when they muſt needs know the Lower Houſe had conſented to the Grant no leſs than the Prelates? That this was matter of Fact, appears plainly from the Grant already mention'd.

Id. in Pref.

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 320.

(b) Dr. Atterbury's Rights, &c. of an Engliſh Convocation, pag. 85.

May 4. A. D. 1531.

The Convocation at York more dilatory in paſſing the Acknowledgements.

The Convocation at York ſtuck longer upon the New Title, and came not to a Reſolution till May following (b). The See of York was then void; and Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham, proteſted againſt the Proceedings. Which being remarkable both for Perſon and Matter, I ſhall tranſlate Part of it. " And here he ſcruples the ſubſcribing this Clauſe, Cujus ſingularem Protectorem, " Unicum & Supremum Dominum, & quantum per " Chriſti legem licet etiam Supremum Caput, ipſius " Majeſtatem recognoſcimus. This Clauſe, ſays the " Biſhop, ſeem'd to have an inoffenſive Appear- " ance at the firſt View: But conſidering that " ſome Perſons lately proſecuted upon Suſpi- " cion of Hereſy, have interpreted theſe Words " to an ill Senſe, queſtion'd the Juriſdiction of " their Ordinaries, and endeavour'd to ſhelter " themſelves from the Cenſures of the Church: " for this Reaſon, I conceive, this Recognition " ought to be couch'd in Terms more preciſe " and diſtinguiſhing. For if the Words hold " forth no more than this Meaning, that the " King is under Chriſt, ſupreme Head in his " Dominions, and particularly of the Engliſh " Clergy, in temporal Matters: This as it is " nothing more than we are all willing to ac- " knowledge, ſo to prevent all Miſconſtructions " from Hereticks, the Clauſe ſhou'd be put in " clear and deciſive Language. But on the o- " ther ſide, if we are to underſtand, that the " King is Supreme Head of the Church both in " Spirituals and Temporals, and that this Supre- " macy is conferr'd upon him by the Laws of " the Goſpel: For thus ſome heterodox and ma- " levolent Perſons conſtrue the Proviſo, quantum " per Chriſti legem licet. Then this Conſtruction " being repugnant, as I conceive, to the Do- " ctrine of the Catholick Church, I muſt diſ- " ſent from it. And notwithſtanding the Clauſe " of quantum per Chriſti legem licet, may be taken " by way of Limitation and Reſtriction, yet be- " cauſe the Propoſition is ſtill ſomewhat invol- " ved, I think it ought to be farther diſcharged " from Ambiguity. For ſupreme Head of the " Church carrys a complicated and myſterious " Meaning: For this Title may either relate " to Spirituals or Temporals, or both. Now " when a Propoſition is thus comprehenſive and " big with ſeveral Meanings, there is no re- " turning a ſingle and categorical Anſwer. And " therefore, that we mayn't give Scandal to weak " Brethren, I conceive this Acknowlegement of " the King's ſupreme Headſhip, ſhou'd be ſo " carefully expreſs'd as to point wholly upon " Civil and Secular Juriſdiction. And with this " Explanation, the Engliſh Clergy, and particu- " larly my ſelf, are willing to go the utmoſt " Length in the Recognition. But ſince the " Clauſe is not at preſent thus guarded and explain- " ed, I muſt declare my Diſſent; and deſire my " Proteſtation may be entered upon the Journal " of the Convocation (c).

Bp. Tunſtal's Remonſtrance againſt the King's Title of Supreme Head of the Church and Clergy.

(c) Id. Appendix, p. 519.

The King not being pleas'd with theſe Scruples, returns an Anſwer to this Proteſt, or at leaſt to ſome other Paper of a like Tendency. However, by the Terms of Salutation, we may certainly conclude the Anſwer was directed to a Biſhop (d). In the Entrance upon the Diſpute, the King complains " The Biſhop had ſtrain'd " the Clauſe of Recognition, and perplexed the " Meaning. That if Words were always thus " rack'd, and ſet upon the Tenters, Letters " and Learning wou'd ſignifie little.

(d) Cabala, pag. 227.

" The King takes notice, the Biſhop had " prov'd our Saviour the Head of the Church; " that he lodg'd the Branches of his Spiritual " and Temporal Juriſdiction, in different Sub- " jects; that he made a Grant of the latter to " Princes, and that Biſhops were commiſſion'd " for the other. But then the Text cited to " prove Obedience due to Princes, comprehends " all Perſons, both Clergy and Laity, and no

The King's Anſwer to the Objections upon this Argument.

Order of the Hierarchy is exempted. 'Tis true, you reſtrain this Submiſſion to Temporal Matters, but the Scripture Expreſſions are General and without Reſerve. For you don't ſtick to confeſs, That whatever Power is neceſſary for the Peace of Civil Society, is included in the chief Magiſtrate's Commiſſion. From hence we infer, that the Prince is authoriz'd to animadvert upon thoſe who outrage Religion, and are guilty of the Breach of the divine Precepts. For certainly we are not bound to give our own Laws a Preference to thoſe of God Almighty, nor puniſh the Violation of the one, and connive at the other. All ſpiritual Things therefore in which Liberty or Property are concern'd, are neceſſarily included in the Prince's Power. And this may be made good by the Scriptures, Fathers, and other Authorities of the Learned, cited in your Letter. Your next Buſineſs is to prove that Preaching and Adminiſtering the Sacraments, belongs to the Sacerdotal Function; and that our Saviour gave the Hierarchy a Commiſſion for this purpoſe. We know no Body denies you this: But then Spirituals are commonly taken in too extenſive a Senſe, and the Prieſt's Authority ſtrain'd beyond the Warrant of the Text. Our Saviour himſelf had a ſacerdotal Character, and yet ſubmitted to Pilate's Juriſdiction. And St. Paul, tho' a Prieſt of Apoſtolical Diſtinction, makes no Scruple to ſay, I ſtand at Cæſar's Judgment Seat, where I ought to be judged. The King proceeds to reaſon upon Parallel Caſes. “A Phyſician can cure a Diſeaſe much better than a Prince, and yet neither his Power nor his Quality reaches up to a Royal Diſtinction. Thus when Biſhop's aſſiſt in the Conſecration of Archbiſhops, don't they beſtow a higher Dignity than they have themſelves? 'Tis true, Kings and Emperors obey Biſhops and Prieſts as Chriſt's Ambaſſadors: But when their Embaſſay is over, they leſſen to a private Condition; their publick Character ſleeps, and they acknowledge the Civil Magiſtrate for their Sovereign.

“Farther, to prove the Supremacy of Princes, he refers to the Laws of Juſtinian. For as his Majeſty continues, with what Conſcience cou'd that Emperor have made Laws touching the Regulation of the Church, if he had not believ'd that Spiritual Society had been part of his Charge? 'Tis true, Princes are Sons of the Church in your definition of that Body: But this does not hinder 'em from being ſupreme Heads of Chriſtian Men. The King advances in the Diſpute, and argues for his Title from the Convocations meeting by Writ; from the Biſhops Homage and Oaths of Allegiance; from the Royal Licenſe and Aſſent in the Election of Abbots. And as concerning the Goods and Eſtates of the Clergy, 'tis plain, ſays he, they are under the Settlement and Direction of our Laws.

“Then as to the Government of the Clergy, with reſpect to their Manners and Behaviour, ſome criminal Cauſes are reſerv'd to our Courts, and ſome by our Permiſſion remitted to the Ordinaries. Murder, Felony, and Treaſon we reſerve to our Correction: As for other Inſtances of Miſbehaviour we leave the Clergy to be puniſhed by their reſpective Biſhops. Not becauſe we have no Authority to interpoſe in Caſes of this Nature; for you know very well, 'tis within our Commiſſion to puniſh Prieſts for Adultery, if we thought fit. We grant the Sacraments, thoſe Conveyances of Grace are to be adminiſter'd by Perſons of a holy Character: But then, if they miſbehave themſelves in their Function, to a Degree of Scandal, the Civil Magiſtrate may try the Cauſe, and puniſh the Crime. And then as to the ſpiritual Character, ſince the Prince's Authority or Permiſſion is previous to the Execution of their Office, why ſhou'd they ſcruple to call him Head, with reſpect to that Power which is deriv'd from him? However to avoid Calumny, there is added a Reſtriction of quantum per Chriſti legem licet, that is, as far as is conſiſtent with the Goſpel Diſpenſation, — &c.

The King's Anſwer goes ſomewhat farther. But thus much may be ſufficient to diſcover the Manner. Whether his Majeſty's Precedents were unexceptionable, his Grounds firm, and his Inferences well drawn, I muſt leave to the Collection of the Reader.

By ſeveral Paſſages referr'd to in this Letter, 'tis plain 'twas not an Anſwer to Biſhop Tunſtal's Proteſtation: For in that Inſtrument there are none of thoſe Paſſages. However, 'tis poſſible, it might be a Reply to ſome other Diſcourſe of that Prelate upon this Subject. As to the Clauſe of quantum per Chriſti legem licet, we have the Authority of this Letter for its being inſerted: To which, beſides the Proof already given, we may add the Teſtimony of the Lord Herbert (e), and of Fuller too, who ſaw the Acts of the Convocation. And here I ſhall only obſerve, that the King's Letter in the Cabala is miſdated and ſet two Years forward. But this might be only the Negligence of the Tranſcriber.

Aug 19. A. D. 1531. Bylney ſuffers for his Tenents at Norwich.

This Year Bylney was delated for relapſing into Hereſie, and burnt at Norwich. Sir Thomas More is poſitive, that before he ſuffer'd, he recanted in Form, and received Abſolution and the Sacrament from the Biſhop's Clergy (f). Fox denies this Recantation, and endeavours to diſprove More: But then he writes out of his Talent, and rallies ſomewhat untowardly. He charges this Gentleman, then Lord Chancellor, with Inſincerity; but gives up the main Cauſe. He ſuppoſes Bylney's receiving Abſolution, and confeſſing his Sins to one of the Biſhop's Prieſts, does not imply the retracting his former Opinions. But here it muſt be granted, Fox fails in his Reaſoning: For when a Perſon is charg'd with Hereſy, and proſecuted to Proof, 'twas never the Cuſtom of any Church to abſolve him without a previous Recantation.

Fox denies his Recantation.

Fox goes farther in his Conceſſions: He ſuppoſes Bylney might hear Maſs, and receive the Sacrament in the Church of Rome, without recanting his Tenents. Nay, he believes he did receive the Sacrament (g). This Acknowledgement makes all Fox's Conjectures inſignificant, and deſtroys the Force of his counter Evidence. For we may be aſſur'd, he wou'd never have been admitted to the Holy Eucharift, had he not been reconciled to their Communion. But he has one Remark upon Sir Thomas More's Narrative, which has more Weight in it: And here he puts ſomewhat of a hard Queſtion. Why did they burn him after his Recantation? By going this Length, he was no Heretick; Why then ſhou'd he ſuffer the Penalties of Hereſie? But then Fox's ſaying this was only an Eccleſiaſtical Law, is a Miſtake. For by Act of Parliament, thoſe who relaps'd into Hereſy were to be burnt in terrorem (h). Thus it may be the Church cou'd not help it; and therefore the Rigour of the Execution muſt be thrown upon the

---

(e) Lord Herbert, p. 320. Fuller's Church Hiſt. p. 84.

(f) More, p. 349.

(g) Fox, p. 273. Edit. 1641.

Id. p. 274.

(h) 25 H. 8. cap. 14. 20 H. 5. cap. 7.

the State. 'Tis true, ſome Caſuiſts affirm, that 'tis in the Power of the Spiritual Court to wink at the Proof of a Perſon thus proſecuted, and not pronounce him relaps'd. And here the Canon Lawyers are almoſt at a loſs: Some affirm, that the Eccleſiaſtical Judge is under no Neceſſity of putting a Heretick relaps'd into the Hands of the ſecular Magiſtrate, and that he may mitigate the Rigor of this Puniſhment, and commute it to perpetual Confinement in the Biſhop's Priſon. But then there muſt be ſome Colour of Defect in the Evidence, to make way for this Favour: For when the Proof is clear and demonſtrative againſt the Criminal, 'tis not in the Church's Power to preſerve him. Not long after, Bayfield a Prieſt was burnt upon the Charge of Hereſie. But the Buſineſs of this Work being no Martyrology, I ſhall not be particular in every thing of this kind.

Lynwood lib. 5. de Hæreticis. Tit. item quia turpis, &c.

Jan. 15. A. D. 153$\frac{1}{2}$.

The Grievances of the Commons with reſpect to the Clergy redreſſed in ſeveral Statutes.

The latter End of this Year, the Parliament ſate again after a Prorogation. This Seſſions the Commons addreſs'd the King againſt the Clergy. The Articles were digeſted in a Book call'd the Supplication. The King's Anſwer was, he wou'd be farther adviſ'd, and hear the Defence of the Parties accus'd: And then after a Repreſentation on both ſides, he ſhou'd proceed as the Caſe requir'd. This Complaint occaſioned the making ſeveral Statutes this Parliament. For inſtance, “ None under a Subdeacon who had been convicted of Petty-Treaſon, Murder, or Felony, ſhou'd have the Benefit of the Clergy, and be delivered to their Ordinary. 'Twas likewiſe enacted, that none within the Orders of Subdeacon, or above, who were found guilty of the Crimes aforementioned, ſhou'd be admitted to make their Purgation, without being bound with ſufficient Sureties for their good Abearing. Neither was this Favour of Purgation allow'd thoſe, who after Confeſſion or Judgment, were admitted to their Clergy, and deliver'd to the Ordinary. 'Twas likewiſe provided, that Ordinaries having ſuch Perſons in their Cuſtody, might degrade them, and ſend 'em to the King's-Bench (i).

“ Farther, Feoffments of Land to the uſe of a Church, as little differing from Mortmain, were made void (k). And whereas divers having the Privilege of their Clergy, and being afterwards committed to their Ordinaries, brake Priſon, ſuch an Eſcape was now made Felony.

23 H. 8. c. 11.

Payment of Annates extinguiſhed under ſome Proviſo's.

This Year there paſs'd a remarkable Act concerning Annates, or the Firſt Fruits of Biſhopricks, paid uſually to the See of Rome, for the obtaining of Palls, Bulls, &c. The Preamble ſets forth the Reaſons and Conſiderations upon which the Statute was grounded.

“ As firſt, becauſe great Sums of Money had been already drawn out of the Kingdom upon this Score. The Sum is mention'd, and amounts to no leſs than a Hundred and Sixty Thouſand Pound Sterling, ſince the ſecond Year of King Henry the Seventh.

“ Secondly, This Grievance was likely to export more Treaſure ſhortly, becauſe many of the Biſhops were very far advanced in Life.

“ Thirdly, 'Tis obſerv'd, theſe Annates were firſt granted for maintaining Forces againſt the Infidels: 'Tis therefore enacted, that this Burthen ſhou'd be taken off, and no more Payments made to the Pope, unleſs under the Qualifications and Reſtrictions afterwards mention'd. To mention one of the Limitations, viz. That the Court of Rome may not think themſelves unrewarded for their Trouble, in drawing up Bulls, ſealing them in Lead, &c. 'Twas enacted, that Five Pounds in the Hundred, according to the Rate of the Annual Value of the Biſhopricks, all Charges deducted, might be allow'd upon this Conſideration. To proceed.

“ And if any Perſon elected to a Biſhoprick, and preſented by the King to the Pope, ſhall be either deny'd or delay'd in his Bulls, the King's Highneſs may then preſent him to the Archbiſhop of the Province for his Conſecration: And in Caſe the ſaid Archbiſhop ſhall delay the Proceeding to this Solemnity, for lack of Palls, Bulls, or other pretended Requiſites, the Perſon ſo named, ſhall be conſecrated and inveſted by any two Biſhops of the Realm, appointed by the King for the Time being, for this Purpoſe. And that every ſuch Archbiſhop and Biſhop ſo named, preſented, and conſecrated, ſhall be taken and reputed as perfect and complete in every Part of their Character.

By the way, there is an expreſs Clauſe to impower the King to void, or confirm this Statute, or any Branch of it, within two Years next following. Having obſerv'd this, I ſhall proceed to the Remainder. For the Purpoſe; 'tis declared in this Act.

The Pope's Cenſures over-rul'd, in caſe be refus'd a Compoſition.

“ That the King and the Eſtates, have no Intention of coming to Extremity, unleſs gentler Methods prove ineffectual. If therefore the King ſhall pleaſe to propoſe an amicable Compoſition, and his Holyneſs ſhall think fit either to relinquiſh his Claim to theſe Annates, or moderate his Demands, that in this Caſe, ſuch Agreement and Compoſition between his Highneſs and the Court of Rome, ſhould ſtand firm in Law, and be punctually obſerv'd. But if the Pope ſhou'd refuſe to take off part of the Preſſure, continue his former Exactions, and perſue his Claim by Excommunications, Interdictions, or any other Proceſs and Cenſures upon the King and his Subjects, 'tis then enacted, That the King's Highneſs, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, Kings of England, and all his Spiritual and Lay Subjects of the ſame, without any Scruples of Conſcience, ſhall and may lawfully, to the Honour of Almighty God, the Increaſe and Continuance of Virtue, and good Example within this Realm, the ſaid Cenſures, Excommunications, Interdictions, Compulſories, or any of 'em notwithſtanding, miniſter, or cauſe to be miniſter'd throughout this ſaid Realm, and all other the Dominions and Territories belonging or appertaining thereunto; all and all manner of Sacraments, Sacramentals, Ceremonies, or other divine Services of the Holy Church, or any other Thing or Things, neceſſary for the Health of the Soul of Mankind, as they heretofore at any Time or Times, have been virtuouſly uſed, or accuſtomed to do within the ſame; and that no manner ſuch Cenſures, Excommunications, Interdictions, or any other Proceſs or Compulſories, ſhall by any of the Prelates, or other ſpiritual Fathers of this Region, nor by any of their Miniſters, or Subſtitutes, be at any Time or Times hereafter publiſhed, executed, or divulged, nor ſuffer to be publiſhed, executed, or divulg'd, in any manner of ways (l).

This Act gave a remarkable Check to the Pope's Supremacy, ſtruck off his former Claim, and oblig'd him to a reaſonable Compoſition: And in Caſe he cou'd not be drawn to an Abatement of Pretenſion, his Cenſures and Proceſs are made inſignificant, and the Biſhops and Clergy were to go on in their Functions, notwithſtanding any Excommunications or Interdictions

(i) 23 H. 8. cap. 1.

(k) 23 H. 8. cap. 10.

(l) Ld. Herbert, p. 330. Bp. Burnet, Records, Book 2. Numb. 41.

to the contrary. This Act was afterwards confirm'd by the King's Letters Patents within the time limited (m).

(m) See Records, N. 18.

Now when this Payment was firſt claim'd, how warmly the Matter has been conteſted, and how the Court of Rome carried their Point at laſt, has been already related *. Here therefore I ſhall only mention the Rates with which the Engliſh Sees were charg'd. And here the Reader may pleaſe to take Notice that F. ſtands for Florens, D. for Ducats, and Cr. for Crowns.

* Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 503.

Biſhoprick	Paid
Canterbury	10000 F.
Beſides for his Pall	5000 F.
London	3000 F.
Wincheſter	12000 D.
Ely	7000 D.
Lincoln	. . . . ..
Coventry and Lichfield	1733 D.
Saliſbury	4500 Cr.
Bath and Wells	430 D.
Exeter	6000 D.
Norwich	5000 D.
Worceſter	2000 F.
Hereford	18000 F.
Chicheſter	333 F.
Rocheſter	. . . . ..
St. Davids	1500 F.
Landaff	700 F.
Bangor	126 F.
St. Aſaph	126 F.
York	10000 D.
Beſides for his Pall	5000 D.
Durham	9000 F.
Carliſle	1000 F.

Lincoln's not being valued, ſeems to be a caſual Omiſſion: And the See of Rocheſter being within the Patronage of Canterbury, 'tis probable it may be rated in that Archbiſhoprick *.

* Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 5. p. 196.

To proceed: Notwithſtanding the Preamble of the York Subſidy, the Body of the Grant was not perfected till November the twentieth: For this Reaſon the Act of Pardon for this Province did not paſs 'till this Seſſion of Parliament: And now the Clergy were call'd upon to explain themſelves farther, and to make a more diſtinct Recital of the Powers implied in their new Acknowledgment.

An Addreſs of the Commons againſt the Clergy.

The Commons in their Supplication abovemention'd, had complain'd of the Clergy's Claiming a Privilege of making Canons by their ſole Authority. This was the principal Grievance in their Addreſs. The Subſtance of the Reaſons on which the Complaint is formed, is contain'd in the Clergy's Reply.

I ſhall give the Reader an Account of this matter from authentick Records, and particularly from two Inſtruments which I tranſcrib'd from the Cotton Library.

The Clergies Anſwers to this Remonſtrance are drawn by way of Addreſs: The firſt begins thus:

The Convocation's firſt Anſwer to the Supplication of the Commons. Apr. 12. 1532.

“ After our moſt humble wiſe, with our moſt bounden Duty of Honour and Reverence to your moſt excellent Majeſty, endued of God, with moſt incomparable Wiſdom and Goodneſs; pleaſeth it the ſame to underſtand that we your Orators and daily bounden Bedeſmen the Ordinaries, have read and peruſed a certain Supplication, which the Commons of your Grace's moſt Honourable Parliament now aſſembl'd have offered unto your Highneſs, and by your Command deliver'd to us, to make thereunto Anſwer: And as the time has ſerved and permitted we have according to your Highneſs's Commandment made thereunto this Anſwer following, beſeeching your Grace's indifferent Benignity graciouſly to hear the ſame.

And here, after a general Complaint againſt ſeditious Books imported from foreign Parts, and the Miſmanagement of the Spiritual Courts, the Supplication proceeds to Particulars. “ And here the Clergy are charg'd with falling foul upon the Conſtitution, and making Canons in contradiction to the Laws of the Realm: That theſe Eccleſiaſtical Regulations were publiſh'd in a foreign Language, and paſs'd without the Aſſent of either the Lay-Subjects or the Crown. That ſeveral of theſe Proviſions of the Church preſs'd upon the Prerogative Royal, and were Oppreſſions upon Liberty and Property, that they reach'd to the Interdiction upon Lands and Eſtates: And that the Breach of the Canons being menac'd with Excommunication: The Terror of this Cenſure put ſome of the Lay-Subjects to a ſtand, made 'em timerous and unreſolv'd in their Obedience to the King and Conſtitution.

To this Article the Clergy replied, “ That they preſum'd their Authority in making Laws is founded upon the holy Scriptures, and the Reſolutions of holy Church: That theſe Grounds and Principles being thus unqueſtionable, are by Conſequence a proper Teſt to try the reaſonableneſs of all other Laws both Spiritual and Temporal: And upon a juſt Inquiry, they hoped there will be no Inconſiſtency found between the Laws of the Church and State. That if any of their Canons are found to diſagree with the Rule abovemention'd, they are willing to reform what's amiſs, and bring every thing up to the proper Standard: and on the other ſide they hope that if any Laws of the State ſhou'd deviate from the inſpir'd Writings and claſh with the Privileges of the Church, his Highneſs, with the Conſent of his Parliament will condeſcend to a Temper in ſuch Caſes: And thus there will be a perfect Harmony between both Societies. In the mean time they humbly entreat his Majeſty not to be prepoſſeſs'd againſt his Subjects of the Spirituality, as if they intended any manner of Encroachments upon Prerogative and Law *.

* Dr. Atterbury's Rights of an Engliſh Convocation, &c. Appen. p. 521.

Gardiner's Letter of Excuſe to the King.

The King was neither pleas'd with this Anſwer, nor with Gardiner for drawing it. This Divine therefore, now Biſhop of Wincheſter, thought it neceſſary to write a Letter of Excuſe. “ In this Apology, amongſt other things, he ſeems ſomewhat ſupriz'd the King ſhou'd be diſpleas'd with the Clergy's aſſerting a Legiſlative Authority in Spiritual Matters: He takes the Freedom to ſuggeſt, that he humbly conceiv'd his Highneſs's Book againſt Luther amounted to a Conceſſion of this Point, and that the ſame Doctrine ſeems plainly declared by the Council of Conſtance in their Cenſure of Wickliff's Opinions: And if he ſhou'd happen to miſtake by not being acquainted with the Strength of thoſe Proofs his Majeſty cou'd produce, he hopes his not knowing this Evidence in reſerve, may plead his Excuſe. On the other ſide he obſerves that if the Biſhops have their Authority by divine Right or God's Law, then, tho' they ſhou'd miſmanage “in the Exerciſe, or fail in the Diſcharge of their Commiſſion, yet 'twould not be in their Power to reſign it to the Secular Magiſtrate: And in caſe they ſhou'd go thus far; ſuch a Surrender wou'd be no leſs dangerous to the Receiver than to the Giver *.

But neither wou'd this Letter diſpoſe the King to acquieſce: He was ſtill reſolv'd to preſs the Point. And therefore the Convocation was order'd to conſider farther. This Buſineſs was debated without Effect for ſeveral Days. The Defects and Reſervations in the Anſwer were laid moſtly to the Charge of the Biſhops and Abbots: The Prelates therefore perceiving themſelves unſucceſsful referr'd the drawing a ſecond Reply to the Lower Houſe. Upon this a Committee was appointed, a new Anſwer pen'd and laid before the Prelates, who agreed to it †.

And now the Biſhops of London and Lincoln, the Abbots of Weſtminſter and Burton, Sampſon Dean of the Chapel, and Fox the Almoner were deſired to preſent it to the King, which was done accordingly. The Form runs thus:

The Clergy's ſecond Anſwer to the Supplication.

“Foraſmuch as the Anſwer lately made by your Clergy to your honourable Commons, for your Satiſfaction in the Bill of Complaint put up unto your Highneſs, does not pleaſe nor ſatiſfy your Highneſs in ſome Points concerning your own particular Intereſt; ſpecially in that Point that concerns Laws either New, to be by us made, or elſe Old to be by us reform'd. For your Highneſs's better Contentation in that Behalf, we your ſaid moſt humble Chaplains, do now more ſpecially anſwer to thoſe Points, as follows.

“Firſt, as touching New Laws to be by us hereafter made, we ſay that the Laws and Determinations of Chriſt's holy Church thro' all Chriſtian Realms receiv'd and us'd, be clear and manifeſt, that the Prelates of the ſame Church have a ſpiritual Juriſdiction and judicial Power, to rule and govern in Faith and good Manners neceſſary to the Soul's Health, their Flocks unto their Cure committed. And that they have Authority to make and ordain Rules and Laws tending to that purpoſe: Which Rules and Laws hath and doth take their Effect, in binding all Chriſtian People, as of themſelves: So that, before God, there needs not of neceſſity any temporal Power or Conſent to concur with the ſame by way of Authority.

“Item, They ſay that this Power and Authority in making Laws in Matters concerning the Faith and good Manners, neceſſary to the Soul's Health, all Chriſtian Princes have hitherto recognized themſelves bound to ſuffer the Prelates to uſe within their Realms: And have not claim'd of the ſaid Prelates, that they ſhou'd from time to time require their Conſent or Licence, by the way of Authority, more in making of ſuch Laws, then they do claim that the ſaid Prelates ſhou'd from time to time require their Conſents authoriſable in giving of Holy Orders to any of their Subjects, or in the exerciſing of any other Spiritual Act depending upon their Spiritual Juriſdiction; (the Authority whereof proceeds immediately from God, and from no Power or Conſent authoriſable of any Secular Prince) except it be that Conſent that is taken of the Prince's own Submiſſion to the Faith Catholick, made not only by your noble Progenitors, when they firſt admitted Chriſt's Faith, and the Laws of the holy Church within their Realms; but alſo by themſelves firſt generally at their Baptiſm, and after more ſpecially and moſt commonly, by their corporal Oaths at their Coronation.

“We ſay alſo, that this Power of making Laws aforeſaid is right well founded in many Places of holy Scripture, now ſo much the leſs neceſſary here to be rehears'd, foraſmuch as that Matter is at large ſet out in a Book, now by us put up unto your Highneſs; and your Highneſs your ſelf in your own Book moſt excellently written againſt Martin Luther, for the Defence of the Catholick Faith, and Chriſt's Church, does not only knowledge and confeſs, but alſo with moſt vehement and inexpugnable Reaſons and Authorities doesdefend the ſame: Which your Highneſs's Book, we reckon that of your Honour you cannot, and of your Goodneſs you will not revoke.

“Yet theſe Conſiderations notwithſtanding, we your moſt humble Chaplains, and Bedeſmen, conſidering your high Wiſdom, great Learning, and infinite Goodneſs towards us and the Church, and having ſpecial Truſt in the ſame, and not minding to fall into Contention or Diſputations with your Highneſs in any manner of Matter, which we may do; we be contented to make Promiſe to your Highneſs, that in all ſuch Acts, Laws and Ordinances, as upon your Lay-Subjects, we by the Reaſon of our ſpiritual Juriſdiction and judicial Power, ſhall hereafter make, we ſhall not publiſh, nor put them forth, except firſt we require your Highneſs to give your Conſent and Authority unto them: And ſo ſhall from time to time ſuſpend all ſuch our Acts, Ordinances and Laws, hereafter to be made, until ſuch time as your Highneſs by your Conſent and Authority ſhall have authoriz'd the ſame. Except they be ſuch as ſhall concern the Maintenance of the Faith and good Manners in Chriſt's Church, and ſuch as ſhall be for the Reformation and Correction of Sin, after the Commandments of Almighty God, according unto ſuch Laws of the Church, and laudable Cuſtoms as have been heretofore made, and hitherto receiv'd and uſed within your Realm.

“In which Point our Truſt is, and in our moſt humble manner we deſire your Grace, that it may ſo be, that upon the Refuſal of your Conſent, which we reckon that we need not to fear, but yet if any ſuch thing ſhou'd fall, your Highneſs will be then contented that we may exerciſe our Juriſdiction, as far as it ſhall be thought neceſſary unto us, for the Maintenance of Chriſt's Faith, and for the Reformation of Sin, according to our Offices, and the Vocation that God has called us unto.

“As for the ſecond Point, concerning Laws which in time paſt have been made by us, or by our Predeceſſors, contrary to the Laws of this your Realm, and to your Prerogative as is pretended. To this Point, we, your Highneſs's moſt humble Chaplains, anſwer, and ſay, that ſuch our Laws, by our Predeceſſors within this Realm made, as contain any matter contrary to your Laws or Prerogative, and be not now in uſe, and do not concern the Faith nor Reformation of Sin; when we ſhall be advertiz'd of 'em, we ſhall right gladly in that Part revoke 'em, and declare 'em to be void and of none effect: So that your ſaid Honourable Commons ſhall now dare execute your Laws

---

* Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E 5. fol. 200.

† Journal of the Convocation.

“ without any Fear, Dread or Danger of our ſaid Laws if any ſuch there be *.

* Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. 6. fol. 101.

May 10. 1532.

The King thought this Anſwer too artificially drawn; and that there was too much of Ambiguity and Subterfuge in it. He therefore order'd a Form to be deliver'd to the Almoner, which the Convocation were requir'd to ſign, and from which his Highneſs was reſolv'd not to depart. 'Twas couch'd in theſe Terms.

Articles ſent by the King to the Convocation.

“ Firſt, That no Conſtitution, or Ordinance ſhall be hereafter by the Clergy Enacted, Promulg'd, or put in Execution, unleſs the King's Highneſs do approve the ſame by his Authority and Royal Aſſent: And his Advice, Aid, and Favour be alſo interpon'd for the Execution of every ſuch Conſtitution to be made in time coming among his Highneſs's Subjects.

“ Secondly, That whereas divers of the Conſtitutions Provincial, which have been heretofore enacted, be thought not only much prejudicial to the King's Prerogative Royal, but alſo much onerous to his Highneſs's Subjects, it be committed to the Examination and Judgment of thirty two Perſons; whereof ſixteen to be of the upper and the nether Houſe of the Temporality, and other ſixteen of the Clergy; all to be appointed by the King's Highneſs: So that finally which ſoever of the ſaid Conſtitutions ſhall be thought and determin'd by the moſt part of the ſaid thirty two Perſons worthy to be abrogated and annull'd, the ſame to be afterwards taken away and to be of no Force and Strength.

“ Thirdly, That all other of the ſaid Conſtitutions which ſtand with God's Laws, and the King's, do ſtand in full Strength and Power, the King's Highneſs Royal Aſſent given to the ſame.

The Convocation were much perplex'd at their receiving this Meſſage from the King: And after ſome time ſpent in Conſultation, 'twas reſolved to ſend four of the Upper, and ſix of the Lower Houſe to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, by whoſe Advice they ſeem'd diſpos'd to govern themſelves: And to wait for this Prelate's Reſolution they adjourn'd three Days. Now Fiſher's Principles were not likely to put the Clergy upon any Meaſures acceptable to the Court. The King therefore, being inform'd to whom the Matter was referr'd, ſends for the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, complains the Clergy were but half his Subjects. To juſtify this Imputation, ſuggeſts an Inconſiſtency between the Oaths taken by the Biſhops and Abbots to the Pope, and that of Allegiance. Theſe two Oaths being read by the King's Order in Parliament, not only over-aw'd the Clergy to a cloſer Submiſſion, but alſo led the way to a full Renunciation of the Pope's Authority.

'Till Monday May 13.

The King complains of an Inconſiſtency of Oaths taken by the Clergy.

Lord Herbert, p. 335.

And that the Reader may judge how far this Complaint was reaſonable, I ſhall lay them before him.

Their Oath to the Pope.

The Biſhops Oath to the Pope.

* Biſhop Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 123, 124.

“ I John Biſhop or Abbot of A. from this Hour foreward ſhall be faithful and obedient to St. Peter, and to the holy Church of Rome *, and to my Lord the Pope and his Succeſſors canonically entering. I ſhall not be of Counſel nor Conſent that they ſhall loſe neither Life or Member, or ſhall be taken or ſuffer Violence or any Wrong by any means. Their Counſel truſted as a Secret to me, their Meſſengers or Letters I ſhall not willingly diſcover to any Perſon. The Papacy of Rome, the Rules of the holy Fathers, and the Regalia of St. Peter, I ſhall ſupport, maintain and defend againſt all Men. The Legate of the See Apoſtolick going and coming I ſhall honourably treat. The Rights, Honours, Privileges and Authorities of the Church of Rome, I ſhall endeavour to preſerve, defend, augment and promote. I ſhall not be in Council, Treaty or in any Act, in the which any thing ſhall be contrived againſt the Church of Rome, their Rights, Sees, Honours or Powers. And if I know any ſuch to be mov'd or compaſs'd, I ſhall reſiſt it to my Power, and as ſoon as I can, I ſhall advertize him or ſuch as may acquaint him with it. The Rules of the holy Fathers, the Decrees, Ordinances, Sentences, Diſpoſitions, Reſervations, Proviſions and Commandments Apoſtolick, to my Power I ſhall keep, and cauſe to be kept by others. Hereticks, Schiſmaticks and Rebels to our holy Father, and his Succeſſors, I ſhall reſiſt and proſecute * to my Power. I ſhall come to the Synod when I am call'd, unleſs hinder'd by a Canonical Impediment. The Threſholds of the Apoſtles I ſhall viſit yearly in Perſon, or by my Deputy. I ſhall not alienate or ſell my Poſſeſſions without the Pope's Advice. So help me God and the holy Evangeliſts.

* Bp. Burnet tranſlates proſequar & impugnabo in the Original by reſiſt and perſecute.

Their Oath to the King.

Their Oath to the King.

“ I John Biſhop of A. utterly renounce, and clearly forſake, all ſuch Clauſes, Words, Sentences and Grants which I have, or ſhall have hereafter of the Pope's Holyneſs, of and for the Biſhoprick of A. that in any ways has been, is, or hereafter may be hurtful or prejudicial to your Highneſs, your Heirs, Succeſſors, Dignity, Privilege or Eſtate Royal. And alſo I do ſwear, that I will be faithful and true, and Faith and Truth will bear to you my Sovereign Lord, and to your Heirs, Kings of the ſaid Realm, of Life and Limb, and earthly Worſhip, above all Creatures, for to live and die with you and yours, againſt all People. And diligently I ſhall be attendant on all your Affairs and Buſineſs according to my Skill and Power; and your Counſel I ſhall keep, acknowledging my ſelf to hold my Biſhoprick of you only, beſeeching you for the Reſtitution of the Temporalities of the ſame, promiſing as before that I ſhall be a faithful, true and obedient Subject to your Highneſs, your Heirs and Succeſſors, during Life: And the Services due to your Highneſs for the Reſtitution of the Temporalities of the ſaid Biſhoprick, I ſhall truly and obediently perform. So help me God, and the holy Evangeliſts *.

* In Bp. Burnet's Tranſlation it is So help me God, and all Saints. But all Saints are not in the Original.

Cotton. Libr. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 54.

Whether any dangerous Inconſiſtency between theſe Oaths.

I have tranſcrib'd Biſhop Burnet's Tranſlation as to the main: This learned Hiſtorian ſuppoſes the Contradiction between theſe two Oaths was ſo viſible that it had ſoon produced a ſevere Cenſure from the Houſe, if the Plague had not hinder'd, and brought on a Prorogation. But then he is not pleas'd to give us the Proof of this Conjecture. And poſſibly after all, the Inconſiſtency between theſe Oaths may not be ſo clear as has ſometimes been pretended. The moſt exceptionable Clauſe in the Biſhops Engagement to the Pope, is their ſwearing to maintain the Regalia or Royalties of St. Pe-

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

St. Peter. Now why mayn't theſe Words be reſtrain'd to a Spiritual Supremacy? Theſe the Biſhops promis'd to maintain againſt all Men; that is, within the Compaſs of their Duty and Character. And in caſe the Court of Rome ſhou'd wreſt the Oath, and enlarge their Claim to Temporal Homage; to give the King Security againſt their Conſent to any ſuch Incroachment, the Biſhops in their Oath of Allegiance renounce all Clauſes, which may be dragg'd to ſuch an Abuſe, or conſtrued to the Prejudice of the Crown.

The Clergy reputed Loyal in preceding Reigns.

That the Clergy did not believe the Pope Monarch of Chriſtendom, or that they were the King's Subjects only during his Holyneſs's Pleaſure, appears plainly enough by the Form of their late Submiſſion. For in the firſt Draught of this kind, tho' they maintain their Legiſlative Authority in Spiritual Matters, yet as to Temporal Caſes and Concerns, they make no ſcruple to profeſs themſelves the King's Subjects, and own him their Supreme Head in the moſt reſpectful and comprehenſive Terms imaginable *. And that this was the Senſe of the Engliſh Church in former Reigns, appears by the Inſtance of Archbiſhop Courtney; who ſolemnly declared, that in caſe any Prelates were tranſlated to Sees in foreign Dominions, or the ſage Lieges of the King's Council were forc'd out of the Kingdom againſt their Will, that by this means the Wealth and Treaſure of the Nation ſhould be exported: In this Caſe the Archbiſhop declares ſuch Tranſlations wou'd be prejudicial to the Crown: For which Reaſon he reſolves to adhere to the King, and endeavour as bound by his Allegiance to ſupport his Highneſs in this and all other Inſtances in which the Rights of his Crown are concern'd, and laſtly he deſir'd this Schedule might be enterr'd upon the Parliament Roll, which was done accordingly †.

* See the Clergy's firſt Addreſs, and Bp. Tonſtal's Proteſtation.

† Cotton's Abridgment, p. 348. 16. R. 2.

From this Declaration of the Archbiſhop, 'tis plain he did not aſſert the Pope's Supremacy, ſo far, as to weaken his Allegiance and make him an ill Subject.

Farther, this Schedule of the Archbiſhop ſeems to have led the Way to the Statute of Præmunire, paſs'd in this Parliament. For the Preamble is but a Copy as it were of this Declaration. The Bill was brought in by the Commons, who pray'd the King to examine the Opinions of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal upon the Contents. The Queſtion being put, the Lords Temporal promis'd to ſtand by the King againſt the Pope's Encroachments; neither were the Engagements of the Lords Spiritual leſs loyal and Satisfactory: For they concurr'd wholly with the Commons Petition, and renounced the Pope in all his Attempts upon the Crown *.

*16 R. 2. c. 5.

Thus we ſee the then Church of England was no Vaſſal to the Court of Rome: Neither do we find the Pope exerted any Cenſure upon the Prelates, or charg'd them with the Breach of their Oaths, for this ſolemn Adherence to the Civil Magiſtrate. And that the Practice of the Clergy was ſuitable to this Declaration we have the Teſtimony of Sir Edward Coke, whoſe Cuſtom is not to flatter that Order. This celebrated Lawyer having obſerv'd that both before, and after the Reign of King Henry the Third, many of the Judges, and great Officers of the Realm were of the Clergy: Having obſerv'd this, he gives 'em the Commendation of a general Integrity: That they were not overborn by any Partialities to the Court of Rome: That they were true to their Office and the Conſtitution: That they conſtantly maintain'd the Laws of England, ſo as no Encroachment or Breach was made upon 'em by any Foreign Power *.

Hen. VIII. K.

*Coke's Inſtitutes, pt. 2. fol. 96. & dehinc. in Weſtm. Primer cap. 51. fol. 265.

Farther, the King upon the peruſing theſe Oaths, complains the Prelates were but half his Subjects. His Majeſty then grants they were half what he deſired: Now does it not appear by things then upon the Anvil, that the King was puſhing his Regale to an unuſual Extent, and govern'd by ſome People malintention'd to the Church? In ſhort, it ſeems not improbable the King was now deſigning to enlarge his Prerogative upon the Clergy, and annex the Papal Pretenſions to the Crown. Now theſe things conſider'd, the Biſhops Engagements to the Pope ought to be candidly interpreted. For to ſtrain the Oaths to a Contradiction without Neceſſity, and make the Prelates ſo conſtantly forſworn, is neither Juſtice to their Memories, nor ſerviceable to Religion.

The King's Complaint draws the Clergy towards Complyance.

However, This Complaint made a ſtrong Impreſſion upon the Clergy, and brought 'em to a Compliance with the King's Terms, upon the firſt Article. "And thus they promis'd not to enact, promulge, or put in Execution, any Conſtitution made for the future, unleſs they had the Royal Aſſent for that purpoſe. This was likewiſe aſſented to by the Lower Houſe, on condition the Promiſe might bind 'em for the King's Life only. But upon the Second Article, neither of the Houſes cou'd be driven any farther, than to refer all the old Canons to the King's Inſpection and Judgment; promiſing withal to qualify or annul ſuch as ſhou'd be diſlik'd by his Highneſs: But then this Promiſe was incumber'd with a general Saving: This Proviſo made the Clergy Judges of the Canons, and Maſters of any doubtful Conſtruction: So that it was thought the Old Canons were ſtill at their Diſpoſal, to be kept or given up, as they ſhould think fit *.

Dr.* Atterbury, Rights, &c. of an Engliſh Convocation, Append. p. 534. Cotton. Libr. Cleop. 6. F. fol. 96.

This Anſwer not coming up to the King's Expectation, he reſolv'd to come cloſer in his next Demands: And to prevent an evaſive Reſolution, he took care to preſs 'em hardeſt where they endeavour'd to be moſt at Liberty. Thus a new Form was ſent to 'em: And here they are expreſly requir'd, neither to attempt, alledge, claim or put in ure any of the Old Canons without Leave from the Crown, nor yet to enact, promulge or execute any new ones. And all this without any Limitation to the King's Life, or any other favourable Salvo whatſoever †.

† See Records, N. 19.

This Form was look'd on as ſomewhat rigorous, ſeem'd to diſable the Convocation, and lay the Authority of the Church aſleep. For thus, as has been obſerv'd by a learned Remarker *, not only the Legiſlative Power of the Hierarchy, but alſo the Juriſdiction of the Prelates, had been extinguiſh'd, or which is much the ſame thing, made precarious, and wholly dependent on a Foreign Society.

* Dr. Atterbury, ibid.

But they refuſe to go the length of the King's Demands.

The Prelates therefore who had hitherto been obſequious and reſigning, refus'd poſitively to comply to this length. The King perceiving the Matter ſtick, ſent ſix Noblemen to 'em *, to try to over-bear their Conſtancy. But it ſeems their Courage did not deſert 'em upon this Occaſion. For after an Hours Conference with theſe Lords, they return'd this final Anſwer, That they cou'd not ſubmit to the Clauſe preſcrib'd, not to attempt, claim or put in ure, any of the old Canons, without Leave from the Crown.

* Duke of Norfolk, Marquis of Exeter, Earl of Oxford, Ld. Sands, Bullen and Rochford. Journal of the Convocation.

The Apprehenſion of a Storm from the Court was more prevalent upon the Lower Houſe who paſs'd the Submiſſion in the Terms preſcrib'd. When this Paper was brought up to the Prelates, the Archbiſhop acquainted them, how the Matter had paſs'd at their Conference with the Temporal Lords; That they expected a Return of their Meſſage to the King, and hop'd his Highneſs wou'd condeſcend to an Abatement. About Noon, the Lords abovemention'd came back with the King's Conſent to what the Clergy had offer'd: And that his Highneſs was willing to be contented, that they ſhou'd be oblig'd to no more than not to enact, promulge, or put in ure new Canons *. And thus a new Draught of the Submiſſion was ingroſs'd, and agreed to by all the Upper-Houſe, the Biſhop of Bath and Wells only excepted †. But when it was brought to the Lower Clergy, they thought their Conſent unneceſſary. Their Reaſon was, becauſe having already paſs'd a more comprehenſive Form, this was by conſequence included in't: And thus without putting the Matter to the Vote, they were prorogued to the Fifth of November. And by the way we are to obſerve, that the larger Form of the Lower-Houſe, was never deliver'd to the King, nor made authentick ‡.

By their laſt Submiſſion, they are only barr'd the enacting new Canons without leave from the Crown.

* Journal of the Convocation.

† Three other Biſhops, London, Lincoln, and St. Aſaph, admitted it conditionally.

‡ Journal of the Convocation.

And thus the laſt Inſtrument of Submiſſion, preſented the next Day to the King by the Archbiſhop, ran only in the Name of the Upper-Houſe.

See Records, Numb. 20.

May 19. 1532.

Thus the Matter reſted till Two Years afterwards, when the Submiſſion of the Clergy paſs'd into an Act of Parliament, with a Penalty annexed.

In the Year 1532, the Body of William Tracy of Toddington in Worceſterſhire, Eſq; was taken up by the Chancellor of Worceſter, and burn'd. But in burning the Corps, this bigotted Officer exceeded his Commiſſion, for which he was ſued by Tracy's Heirs, turn'd out of his Chancellorſhip, and fin'd Four Hundred Pounds. The Reaſon of this Proceſs, was occaſion'd by an Omiſſion (as it was then accounted) in Tracy's Will. It ſeems he had left out the uſual Form of recommending his Soul to the Interceſſion of the Saints. This being obſerv'd at the Probate, Archbiſhop Warham ſent a Copy of it to the Univerſity of Oxford, where being examin'd in Convocation, Tracy was pronounc'd a Heretick. Upon this Cenſure, the Order abovemention'd for taking up the Corps, was directed to the Chancellor *.

* Wood. hiſt. & Antiq. Univer. Oxon. lib. 1. p. 256. Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 166.

The King writes to the Conclave to make the Bp. of Worceſter a Cardinal.

About this time, the King wrote to the Conclave, for a Cardinal's Cap for Jerom Biſhop of Worceſter, an Italian; letting them know how acceptable ſuch a Promotion wou'd be to his Highneſs. And that the Reader may perceive upon what Terms of Friendſhip, or of Ceremony at leaſt, the King continued ſtill with the Court of Rome, I ſhall tranſcribe the Letter (n). By the way, this Biſhop Hierom Ghinucci was the King's Agent for the Divorce, and manag'd to Satisfaction. It appears by this Letter, the King had formerly ſolicited for the ſame Favour: But why the Court of Rome was ſo impolitick as to refuſe him, is hard to diſcover.

(n) See Records, Numb. 21.

The Buſineſs of the Divorce farther purſued.

In the Beginning of this Year, the King had procur'd ſeveral learned Men from all Parts of Italy, to offer the Pope a Diſputation in Favour of the Divorce: But this Motion was refus'd. However, the Pope to ſhew his Willingneſs to end the Controverſie, order'd a Citation for the King to appear in Perſon, or by Proxy, at Rome: This Summons was ſent his Highneſs to anſwer the Queen's Appeal (o). Upon this the King diſpatch'd Sir Edward Karne to Rome, to excuſe his Non-appearance, and to inſiſt that there was no Law to oblige him to ſuch an Attendance. The King to fortifie his Intereſt, ſends Inſtructions to Sir Francis Bryan, to preſs the French King to do him what good Offices he cou'd with the Pope. Francis complys with this Application, owns the Juſtice of the King of England's Requeſt, and tells the Pope, that Prince ought to be ſatisfied. That in Caſe of a Refuſal, himſelf and his Brother of England, ſhall be forc'd upon ſuch Meaſures as may not prove agreeable to his Holyneſs.

(o) Lord Herbert, p. 335, 336.

This Year one Mr. James Bainham, a Lawyer of the Middle-Temple ſuffer'd upon the Charge of Hereſy. He was brought in December laſt before Stokeſly Biſhop of London, and interrogated upon ſeveral Articles. He deny'd Purgatory, the Neceſſity of Auricular Confeſſion, Extreme Unction, and Invocation of Saints. Fox reports, that Sir Thomas More then Lord Chancellor, order'd Bainham to be whip'd in his Garden at Chelſea, and afterwards ſent him to the Tower, and ſaw him tortur'd upon the Rack; and that all this Cruelty was us'd only becauſe he refus'd to inform againſt ſome of the Students of the Temple; and cou'd not be brought to diſcover where ſome prohibited Books lay, which he was ſuppos'd to make uſe of. Theſe were illegal Barbarities, and argue Sir Thomas More of a different Temper from what he is commonly repreſented. If his Bigottry carry'd him to theſe Rigors, he can never deſerve the Character Biſhop Burnet is pleas'd to give him: That for true Generoſity of Mind, he was an Example to the Age in which he liv'd *. The Fact therefore ought to be well atteſted before we give Credit to the Relation. But here Fox vouches no Records for this Part of the Narrative, neither is it mention'd by other Hiſtorians.

* Bp. Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 356.

To proceed: Bainham was afterwards brought to a Submiſſion, abjur'd his Tenents, and underwent the Penance injoin'd. Soon after his Diſcharge, he recanted his Recantation at St. Auſtin's, London. Upon which, he was apprehended, committed to the Tower, and pronounc'd a Heretick relaps'd.

He had ſome odd Opinions: He was miſtaken about the Authority of the Hierarchy, and affirm'd, That he that preached the Word of God purely, whatſoever he was, and liv'd conformably to his Doctrine, had the Key that binds and looſes both in Heaven and Earth. As to the Sacrament of the Altar, he ſeems to believe at leaſt as far as Conſubſtantiation. He affirm'd, Archbiſhop Becket was a Murderer, and if he did not repent his Murder, he was rather a Devil in Hell, than a Saint in Heaven. His Notion of Baptiſm, as Fox repreſents it, was unſound and wretched. His Words are theſe, If a Turk, a Jew, or a Sarazen do truſt in God and keep his Law, he is a good Chriſtian Man. Thus we ſee upon the whole, he was right in ſome Things, and wrong in others. However, he ſuffer'd at the Stake with great Conſtancy and Reſolution *.

* Fox, 297. to p. 302.

June, 1532. A Prieſt impriſon'd for maintaining the Pope's Authority.

This Summer very unacceptable News came from England to Rome. A Prieſt was committed for maintaining the Papal Authority. And another Prieſt being impriſon'd for Lutheraniſm by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, appeal'd to the King as Supreme Head. This was an Application ſomewhat unuſual; however, the Juncture made it ſucceed: For he was taken out of the Archbiſhop's Hands, brought before the Temporal Court, and diſcharg'd there.

Ibid.

To return to the Buſineſs of the Divorce, the Pope writes again to the King, intreats him to conſtitute a Proxy, acquainting likewiſe the Engliſh Agents, that he was willing the whole Proceſs ſhou'd be manag'd in England, only the final Deciſion he muſt reſerve to himſelf. Thus

the

Warham W. Abp. of Cant.

Ibid. Bp. Burnet's Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 122.

Id. p. 125.

the Lord Herbert. But Biſhop Burnet from other Records, gives ſomewhat a different Repreſentation of the Matter. He reports, the Pope offer'd the King to ſend a Legate, and two Auditors of the Rota, for the purpoſes abovemention'd: But then it was with this Condition, that the King was to name ſome indifferent Place out of his own Kingdom.

The Death of Archbiſhop Warham.

To proceed: In the Convocations held under Warham, there were ſeveral Canons paſs'd againſt the Lutherans: And at laſt, the Pope's Supremacy began to be warmly diſputed, but they came to no Reſolution at preſent. Warham departed this Life in Auguſt, and was buried privately at Canterbury. He held that See Eight and Twenty Years. I have given part of his Character in the late Reign, and ſhall only add the Commendation given him by the Reverend Church Hiſtorian: "That he was a great Canoniſt, an "able Stateſman, a dextrous Courtier, and a "Favourer of learned Men. He was not ſo "fancifully fond of the Learning of the Schools "as ſome others, but encourag'd a more gene-"rous way of Knowledge. But then by way "of Abatement, he muſt be ſaid to have pro-"ſecuted ſome of the Lollards with too much "Rigour (p).

Id. pag. 127.

(p) Godwyn. de præſul. Angliæ.

Regiſt. Warham, fol. 252.

Battle-Abby viſited by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Before I take leave of this Archbiſhop, I ſhall mention one remarkable Paſſage which happen'd towards the latter End of his Time. This Prelate in the Vacancy of the See of Chicheſter, gave a Commiſſion to his Chancellor Dr. John Young, to viſit Battle-Abby in Suſſex. And by Young's Commiſſion, it appears, that this was a cuſtomary Branch of the Archbiſhop's Juriſdiction during the Vacancy: And by conſequence it muſt belong to the Biſhop of the Dioceſs when the See was full. From whence it follows that the Charter of Exemption granted to that Abby, by William the Conqueror, was either revok'd, or which is much more probable, that Exemption did not extend to any Diſcharge from ſpiritual Authority.

To this I ſhall ſubjoin a Letter of the Archbiſhop's to the King, in which he complains his Juriſdiction was check'd by the Temporal Courts, and ſeems apprehenſive of farther Encroachments. The Year is not mention'd, but the Letter runs thus *.

* Cotton. Libr. Cleop. VI. F. II. fol. 173.

"Pleaſe it your good Grace to underſtand "I am informed, your Grace intends to inter-"rupt me in the uſe of the Prerogative in the "which my Predeceſſors and I, in the Right "of my Church of Canterbury, have been poſ-"ſeſs'd by Privilege, Cuſtom, and Preſcription, "Time out of mind. And for the Interrupti-"on of the ſame, your Grace is minded, as I "am informed, to depute Dr. Allen. Which if "your Grace ſhou'd ſo do, (conſidering that "not only all mine Officers of mine Courts, the "Arches and the Audience, but alſo the Comiſ-"ſary of my Dioceſs of Kent, and I my ſelf, "not only in Matters of Suit of Inſtance of "Parties, but alſo in Cauſes of Correction de-"pending before me and them, be continually "inhibited by your Officers) I ſhou'd have no-"thing left for me and my Officers to do, but "ſhou'd be as a Shadow and Image of an Arch-"Biſhop and Legate, void of Authority and "Juriſdiction, which ſhould be to my perpetu-"al Reproach, and to my Church a perpetual "Prejudice. Wherefore inaſmuch as I truſt ve-"rily in your great Goodneſs, that your Grace "will not be ſo extreme againſt me and the "Right of my Church before-nam'd, I beſeech "your Grace, the Premiſſes conſider'd, to de-"fer and reſpite this Matter, till I may have "Communication in this behalf with your Grace "when it ſhall pleaſe you at your Leiſure: And "your Pleaſure known, I will be ready to give "Attendance on your Grace; beſeeching you "alſo to give Credance to my Chaplain Mr. "Wells this Bearer, in ſuch Matters as He ſhall "ſhew your Grace on my Behalf.

Dated at Croyden, March 17. At Your Grace's Command,

W. Cantuar.

Octob. 1532. An Interview between the Kings of England and France at Calais.

About this time, the King's of England and France had an Interview at Calais, where Mrs. Anne Boleyn, now Marchioneſs of Pembroke, appeared. Theſe Two Princes had lately enter'd into a cloſe Treaty. By Virtue of this Alliance, they were to raiſe a great Army againſt the Turk. And upon the King of England's Complaint of ill Uſage from the Court of Rome; The French King ſeem'd to cloſe with his Reſentment: And here it was agreed, they ſhou'd both inſiſt upon Reparation. And that unleſs this Grievance was redreſs'd, and the Exactions of Annates upon both Kingdoms drop'd, they wou'd apply to a farther Remedy, and either ſummon the Pope to a Council, or refer the Debates to Provincial Synods within their reſpective Dominions. A Remonſtrance of this kind was ſpeedily to be made by their Ambaſſadors at Rome. Theſe Agents were to put the Pope in Mind of an Interview propos'd between his Holineſs and the French King, at Avignion, or Nizza. And that the King of England was inclin'd to take a Journey of that length, provided the Motion was well receiv'd by his Holineſs. The French Ambaſſador was likewiſe to acquaint the Pope, that the Cardinals of Tournon and Granmont wou'd be preſent at the Interview between the Pope and the Emperor at Bononia: That their Buſineſs wou'd be, to ſolicite his Holyneſs that King Henry might have a Legate and other Commiſſioners, ſent into his own Kingdom to determine the Buſineſs touching the Divorce.

And when King Henry diſcovered his Intentions of marrying the Marchioneſs of Pembroke, the French King encourag'd him to proceed. And to ſhew he was in earneſt, promis'd him the utmoſt Aſſiſtance, if Occaſion requir'd. Thus having concerted a firm Union, and treated each other with great Compliment and Magnificence, they took their Leaves, and the King return'd for England.

Nov. 14. 1532. The King privately marry'd to Mrs. Boleyn.

Soon after his Arrival, he was privately married to Anne Boleyn, Rowland Lee, afterwards Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, officiating in the Marriage. At this Solemnity there were none preſent, excepting the Duke of Norfolk, and her Father, Mother, Brother and Dr. Cranmer (q). This may ſeem an unuſual Step, becauſe the Divorce was ſtill undecided. But the King broke thro' this Difficulty: He concluded there had Proof been made of the former Marriage's being null. The Caſe ſtanding thus, there was no need of a declarative Sentence, after ſo many Univerſities and Doctors had given their Judgments againſt it (r). This ſecond Marriage being not publiſhed till Eaſter following, the King in the mean time endeavour'd to diſengage handſomly from the Firſt. To this purpoſe, he ſent Inſtructions to his Agent Dr. Bennet, to make ſeveral Propoſals to the Pope: But then theſe Overtures were to be delivered, as ſuggeſted only by himſelf ſelf. Firſt, Bennet propos'd, that the Matter might be decided in England, and that his Holyneſs wou'd be contented the Archbiſhop of Canterbury with the Aſſiſtance of Two other Prelates, or the Clergy of that Province, might have the Caſe referr'd to 'em. The Reaſonableneſs of this Motion, was recommended by the Opinions of Lawyers, and by the Authority of the Council of Nice: To this it was farther urg'd, that ſince the Succeſſion of the Crown was concern'd in the Cauſe, the Engliſh Conſtitution wou'd not allow of its being decided in Foreign Parts. This Overture being diſliked, Bennet propos'd another Scheme. By this, the Deciſion was to be referred, either to Sir Thomas More, or the Biſhop of London, nominated by the King; the Queen, or Emperor, were likewiſe to have the Privilege of naming another: The French King was to aſſign a Third, and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was to be the Fourth. But this being likewiſe refus'd by the Pope, Bennet was driven to the laſt Reſerve in his Inſtructions: He moved therefore that the Cauſe might be heard in England, and in caſe the Queen declin'd to acquieſce in the Sentence, ſhe ſhou'd have the Liberty of appealing to Three Judges jointly commiſſion'd: One of which were to be ſent from England, another from France, and a Third from the Pope, with Powers to ſettle the Matter in ſome indifferent Place (s). To this the Pope reply'd, That ſince the King ſtood ſo cloſe to his Prerogative, he ſhou'd govern himſelf by the ſame Meaſures, and not take the Proceſs out of the common Courſe.

(q) Ld. Herbert, p. 340, 341.

(r) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 126.

Dr. Bennet*'s Propoſals to the Pope, for deciding the Buſineſs touching the Divorce.*

(s) Ld. Herbert, p. 342.

June 4.
A. D. 1532.

The Religious Houſes of St. James*'s and* Chriſt-Church, London, ſuppreſſed.

This Summer the King enlarg'd and ornamented Whitehall, lately forfeited to the Crown by the Premunire driven upon Cardinal Wolſey. And to make his Reſidence in Town more commodious, he procur'd a Conveyance of the Mannor of St. James's, and built that Palace. This Houſe was then an Hoſpital: But the King compounded with the Siſters for a Penſion during Life. Not long after, he ſuppreſs'd the Priory of Chriſt Church, London. Theſe Religious being Franciſcans, were diſpos'd of in other Houſes of that Order. The Lands and Church Plate were beſtow'd on Sir Thomas Audley, now Lord Chancellor. For here we are to obſerve, that Sir Tho. More had lately given up the Broad Seal: He had ſeveral times ſollicited the King for a Diſcharge, and at laſt gain'd it. His Fortune was but ſlenderly eſtabliſh'd, and therefore his true Reaſon for reſigning an Office of ſuch Honour and Profit, is not eaſily to be diſcover'd. Whether a ſtrong Inclination to Retirement and Letters, a Diſguſt, or claſhing with ſome great Perſon, or the new Meaſures taken by the Court, put him upon this ſingular Reſolve, is ſomewhat uncertain. And though he acquainted Archbiſhop Warham and Eraſmus, with ſomething of the Secret, yet he publickly own'd no other Motive, but want of Health.

Some of Tyndal*'s Opinions.*

Some time this Year, before the parting with his Office, he publiſh'd a Tract againſt Tyndal: This Performance is divided into three Books: The firſt is, a Reply to Tyndal's Anſwer to his Dialogues. His Second anſwers Tyndal's Defence of his Tranſlation of the New Teſtament. His Third Book argues againſt two Chapters of Tyndal's Anſwer. And here the Diſpute is, whether the Scriptures were before the Church? And whether the Apoſtles left any thing unwritten, neceſſary to Salvation? Sir Thomas More maintains the Affirmative (t). And now it may not be improper to mention ſome of Tyndal's Aſſertions, as he is repreſented by More. To begin: Tyndal in the Preface to his Anſwer to More's Dialogues, miſ-interprets a Text in the Epiſtle to the Corinthians; and ſeems to apply the Character of the Natural Man to the Clergy. Now the Miſ-interpretation of this Text, is of dangerous conſequence: It makes Men think themſelves in a manner inſpired, reſt upon their private Judgment, deſpiſe the Authority of the Antients, and believe Honeſty ſufficient to qualifie 'em for Judges in Controverſie. Tyndal in his Deſcription of his Spiritual Man, has ſeveral crude, irreverent Expreſſions. He will not allow any Ceremonies, unleſs the Signification of 'em is underſtood: And yet as Sir Thomas More obſerves, the Reaſons of all the Jewiſh Obſervances are not explain'd in the Old Teſtament. Upon the Courſe of this Diſpute, he grows more indefenſible: He ſpeaks ſcandalouſly of Auricular Confeſſion, and calls it a Work of Satan. And in mentioning Confirmation, he is downright prophane. His Words are: They think that if the Biſhop butter the Child in the Forehead, that then 'tis ſafe. To proceed, he miſreports the Church in matter of Satisfaction, and affirms Baptiſm inſignificant, becauſe the Children are chriſtned in Latin. He ſlanders the then Church about the Opus operatum, and maintains the Sacraments are of no Benefit, but as they preach the Promiſes of God, as a Preacher muſt do. He makes all Chriſtians Prieſts, and denies the Neceſſity of any diſtinct Order. He ſays, a Turk believes in God, better than thoſe of the Roman Communion. And to conclude with him, he jeſts prophanely upon the Biſhop's Bleſſing.

Fox affirms Tyndal miſreported, vol. 2. p. 351.

(t) More*'s Works, p.* 354.

1 Cor. 2. 14, 15.

More, p. 360.

Id. p. 374.

Id. p. 380.

Id. p. 381.

Id. p. 382.

Id. p. 383.

Id. p. 391.

Id. p. 396.

Theſe were Tyndal's Opinions, as they ſtand in Sir Thomas More's Works. Now if he is not miſreported (which is ſomewhat unlikely) he has fail'd both in Truth and Decency in ſeveral material Points. And in ſhort, his Heterodoxies are too viſible to reckon him amongſt the Reformed of the Engliſh Church.

Id. p 398.

In July, this Year, John Fyrth was burn'd in Smithfield for a Heretick. In June laſt, he was convented before Stokeſly Biſhop of London, (the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln being his Aſſeſſors.) He was interrogated concerning his Belief, touching the Sacrament of the Altar and Purgatory. As to the firſt Article, he anſwer'd, that the Natural Body of Chriſt was only in one Place at once, and that the Corporeal Preſence was not neceſſary to be believ'd. As to the Second, he ſaid he did not believe there was any Purgatory for the Soul after this Life*.

* Stokeſly Regiſt. p. 71.

He had formerly diſputed at length, the firſt Article, argued ſolidly as to the Main againſt Tranſubſtantiation and worſhipping the Hoſt. Sir Thomas More and Fryth had a Conteſt upon this Argument in Writing. As Fox reports the Matter, he was very moderate in his Diſſent, and ſeems to have affirm'd little more than that Tranſubſtantiation and Purgatory were no neceſſary Points of the Chriſtian Belief. But this Modeſty and Reſervedneſs gave no Satisfaction to the Bigottry of the Court; who not prevailing with him to retract to the length preſcrib'd, deliver'd him to the ſecular Magiſtrate. Being brought to the Stake, he endured the Fire with great Fortitude, and ſeem'd inſenſible of Pain. This Fryth was a lively Genius. He was bred at Cambridge, where he made a conſiderable Proficiency in the Latin and Greek Languages. His Parts and Improvement made him taken notice of by Cardinal Wolſey, who deſign'd him with ſome other Perſons of Eminence, for his new Foundation of Chriſt-Church in Oxford. And See my Ecclefiaſt. Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 262.

to conclude with him, he was no leſs remarkable for the Regularity of his Life.

Feb. 4. A. D. 153$^{2}_{3}$. Appeals in Cauſes Teſtamentary, Matrimonial, &c. prohibited under Præmunire.

In the latter end of this Year, there was another Seſſion of Parliament. Amongſt other Acts, we have one againſt Appeals to Rome. The Preamble ſets forth, "That the Kingdom of England "is an Empire provided with Perſons, both "Spiritual and Temporal, well qualified to de"termine all Controverſies ariſing in it, without "Application to any foreign Princes or Poten"tates. And more particularly, that Part of "the ſaid Body Politick call'd the Spiritualty, or "the Engliſh Church, have always been eſteem'd "and found upon Trial, ſufficiently furniſh'd "with Skill and Integrity to determine all ſuch "Doubts, and to adminiſter all ſuch Offices and "Duties, as to their Room's Spiritual does appertain. From hence the Preamble proceeds to complain, "that ſeveral Appeals have been made "to the See of Rome in Cauſes Teſtamentary, "and Matrimonial, in Divorces, Rights of "Tythes, Oblations and Obventions, to the "Delay of Juſtice, and the great Vexation and "Charge of the King's Highneſs and his Sub"jects. And foraſmuch as the Diſtance from "Rome is ſuch, that Proof and Evidence re"lating to a Cauſe, cannot be brought thither "without great Inconvenience; for which Rea"ſon many Perſons are forc'd to ſuffer in their "Rights, and ſit down without Remedy. 'Tis "therefore Enacted, that all Cauſes, Teſtamen"tary and Matrimonial, all Diſputes concern"ing Divorces, Tythes, Oblations and Obven"tions, either commenc'd and now depending, "or which hereafter ſhall commence in any of the "King's Dominions, ſhall be heard, diſcuſs'd, and "finally adjudg'd and determin'd within the "King's Juriſdiction and Authority, in ſuch "Courts Spiritual and Temporal of the ſame, as "the Nature and Quality of the Caſes ſhall re"quire, without regard to any Cuſtom pre"judicial to the ſame; any foreign Inhibitions, "Appeals, Interdictions, Excommunications, or "any other Proceſs from the See of Rome, or "any other foreign Courts to the contrary not"withſtanding. And here thoſe who make any "ſuch Appeals, or procure any ſuch Cenſures "in purſuit of 'em, fall under the Penalty of "Præmunire. And thoſe who refuſe to give the "Sacraments to ſuch as are interdicted or ex"communicated by the Pope, are to ſuffer one "Year's Impriſonment, and make Fine and "Ranſom at the King's Pleaſure.

The Order of the Proceſs ſettled by this Statute is, this, "If the Suit was commenc'd "before the Arch-Deacon, or his Officials, the "Party grieved had the Liberty of Appealing "to the Dioceſan, and from thence within "Fifteen Days after Judgment, to the Arch"biſhop of the Province. And in caſe this "Suit was commenc'd before the Arch-Deacon "of any Biſhop, or his Commiſſaries, then the "Appeal might be made within Fifteen Days "after Sentence to the Court of Arches, and "from the Court of Arches within the ſame In"terval, to the Archbiſhop of the Province, "there to be finally determined. In all which "Caſes, there is a Saving for the Prerogative of "the Archbiſhop, and Church of Canterbury. And "laſtly, in all Cauſes where the King was con"cern'd, the laſt Appeal was to be made to the "Upper Houſe of Convocation (u).

This Statute againſt Appeals, ſeems to point particularly at the Divorce now depending, and to preclude the Queen from any Applications to the Court of Rome.

The King expoſtulates with the Pope, and propoſes his retiring to Avignon.

Amongſt other Things, at the late Interview at Bononia, 'twas concerted, that the Pope ſhou'd write to the King of England, to ſend Forces againſt the Turk, who threatn'd Chriſtendom with another Invaſion. The King anſwer'd, That if any ſuch Misfortune happen'd, it muſt be thrown upon the Emperor's Ambition, and the uncautious Temerity of the Pope. It ſeems, his Holyneſs at the Emperor's Inſtance, had lately excommunicated John Sepuſe Vayvode of Tranſylvania, and elected King of Hungary. That this Prince had apply'd for Succour to the Port, and drawn the Infidels upon Chriſtendom. Upon this Occaſion the King puts his Holyneſs in Mind, how neceſſary Precaution is in ſuch Caſes. But to offer ſomewhat towards Satisfaction; If his Holyneſs was apprehenſive of having any ſhare in this Calamity, he adviſes him to retire to Avignon: And that then himſelf and the French King wou'd engage for his Protection. As to the Emperor, there was little to be expected; for 'twas plain, that Prince was reſolv'd to gratifie the German Princes, and yield to ſome Innovations in Religion, on Purpoſe to reduce his Holineſs, and leſſen his Power (w).

A Treaty between the Pope and the French King.

How this Motion was reliſh'd by the Pope, is ſomewhat uncertain. However, he does not ſeem to be in a Condition to diſcover his Mind. Such Freedom might have prov'd dangerous, while the Emperor's Army was quarter'd in Italy. But after thoſe Forces were withdrawn, he concluded a private Treaty with the French King. This Prince having concerted new Meaſures with the Pope, began to grow leſs hearty in his Correſpondence with King Henry. At this Treaty, the Marriage between Catherine de Medices, his Holyneſs's Niece, and Henry Duke of Orleans, ſecond Son of Francis, was concluded, and ſolemnized at Marſeilles in October following. The Pope had likewiſe promis'd the French King an Aſſiſtance for recovering his Claims in Italy, and hop'd that Monarch wou'd favour him in his Deſigns upon Modena and Rheggio.

The French King goes off from King Henry's Intereſt.

The King of England perceiving the Courts of France and Rome thus cloſely united, and that the French King ſeem'd to forget ſome of his Engagements at the Interview at Calais; particularly that he had executed ſome Perſons in France, for oppoſing the Papal Authority, and recall'd one Bede from Baniſhment, who had vigorouſly oppos'd the King of England's Divorce. For theſe Reaſons the King reſolved to end this Controverſy at Home, and to ſtand to the Deciſion of the Engliſh Clergy.

Cranmer promoted to the See of Canterbury.

To ſucceed the better in this Affair, a proper Perſon was to be pitch'd on for the See of Canterbury: A Perſon of Character and Reſolution, and not over-obſequious to the See of Rome. Theſe Qualities ſeem'd to concur in Dr. Cranmer, who had lately been employ'd by the King in Italy, and was now in Germany negotiating for the Divorce. The King who had reſolv'd his Promotion, acquainted him with it, with Orders for a ſpeedy Return. Cranmer endeavoured to decline the Station, and mov'd ſlowly in his Journey, in hopes, as 'tis ſaid, the See might be fill'd before his Arrival. But all this Backwardneſs and Excuſe ſerv'd only to raiſe the King's Opinion of his Merit: So that at laſt, he found himſelf oblig'd to reſign, and undertake the Charge.

Papal Bulls for Biſhops not yet prohibited.

Our Learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, that the King ſent to the Pope for the Bulls for Cranmer's Promotion; and though the Statutes were paſs'd againſt procuring more Bulls from Rome, yet the King reſolv'd not to begin the Breach till he was forc'd

---

(u) 24 H. 8. cap. 12.

(w) Ld. Herbert, p. 346.

forc'd to it by the Pope (x). But here I muſt take notice of a Miſtake; for tho' there were Statutes paſs'd againſt the Payment of Annates and Appeals, yet there was no Acts againſt procuring of Bulls for the Conſecrating of Biſhops, till the twenty fifth of this Reign (y).

(x) Bp. Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 128.
(y) 25 H. 8. cap. 20.

To proceed: The Pope on the other ſide had no mind to come to a Rupture with England: 'Tis true Cranmer had taken ſeveral unacceptable Steps: He had publiſh'd a Diſcourſe for the Divorce, diſputed againſt the Pope's Power in diſpenſing, and held a Correſpondence with Oſiander, and other Lutherans in Germany. Theſe were ill Recommendations at Rome; however the Pope went through, and diſpatch'd eleven Bulls to complete his Character. By one Bull he is upon the King's Nomination promoted to the See of Canterbury: This Inſtrument is directed to the King. By a ſecond, directed to himſelf, he is made Archbiſhop. A third abſolves him from all Cenſures. A fourth is ſent to the Suffragans. A fifth to the Dean and Chapter. A ſixth to the Clergy of Canterbury. A ſeventh to all the Laity in his Dioceſe. An eighth to all who held Lands of the See, requiring 'em to acknowledge him as Archbiſhop. All theſe bear date the twenty firſt of February 1533. But then we are to obſerve, that this Computation of the Church of Rome, begins the Year with January. For in England the Year 1532 was not expired. By a ninth Bull dated the twenty ſecond of February, he was to be conſecrated upon taking the Oath in the Pontifical. By a tenth Bull dated tne third of March, the Pall was ſent him. And by the eleventh the Archbiſhop of York, and the Biſhop of London were ordered to put it on (z).

(z) Regiſt. Cranmer. March 30. 1533.

Upon the Arrival of theſe Bulls Cranmer was conſecrated by the Biſhops of Lincoln, Exeter and St. Aſaph.

Cranmer ſcruples the taking an Oath to the Pope, but complies upon the Expedient of a Proteſtation.

It has been obſerved that by one of theſe Bulls Cranmer was obliged to take a cuſtomary Oath to the Pope. This Circumſtance he cou'd not get over at firſt; and 'tis ſuppos'd by ſome Writers, that it was this Condition which made him ſo backward in accepting that Dignity. He thought ſeveral Papal Conſtitutions wanted Reformation; and that his taking this Oath wou'd embarraſs his Motion, and make his Duty impracticable. But the Canoniſts found out a Temper, and releiv'd him under this Scruple. They propos'd the making a Proteſtation before he took the Oath. By this Expedient he was to ſave his Liberty, and renounce every Clauſe in the Oath, which barr'd him doing his Duty to God, the King, and his Country (a).

(a) Se Records, N. 22.

This Expedient not wholly defenſible.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, this Temper agreed better with the Maxims of the Canoniſts and Caſuiſts, than Cranmer's Sincerity (b). This Gentleman means there were ſome Strains of Art, and myſterious Practice in't; and I am altogether of his mind. For this Proteſt was not made at Rome to the Pope: Cranmer's Proxies had no ſuch Inſtructions, as appears by the Inſtrument. Had this Reſerve been inſiſted on in the Conclave, we have Reaſon to believe the Bulls wou'd never have been granted. We can't conceive the Pope wou'd have ever agreed to this Latitude: So that it is pretty plain, the Oath was not taken in the Senſe of the Impoſer. However the Reverend Prelate abovemention'd infers, that if Cranmer did not wholly ſave his Integrity, yet he intended to act fairly and above board. But to act above board is not always defenſible: 'Tis ſometimes an Aggravation of a Fault. Beſides, how a Man can act fairly, and yet not ſave his Integrity is farther than I can diſcover. And therefore with due Regard to Cranmer's Memory, it muſt be ſaid there was ſomething of human Infirmity in this Management.

(b) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 129.

Ibid.

The Queſtion about the Divorce debated this Year in Convocation.

When Cranmer's Conſecration was over, he is ſaid to come into the Convocation: And that the Houſes were warmly debating the Buſineſs of the Divorce. That is, whether it was lawful for a Man to marry his Brother's Wife, upon the Suppoſition the Marriage had been conſummated? And ſecondly, whether this Suppoſition was matter of Fact between Prince Arthur and Queen Catharine? But this Account, as to the time, looks ſomewhat improbable. For theſe two Queſtions about the Divorce, had been already ſettled under Archbiſhop Warham: They had been ſettled, I ſay, as our Hiſtorian reports, to the King's Satisfaction three Years ſince. Why then ſhou'd this Diſpute come upon the Board again, when it had been thus acceptably determin'd in Convocation ſo long ago? But after all, 'tis poſſible the two Queſtions might not be formally debated in the Convocation till this Year: For upon peruſing the Journal of the Upper Houſe I find nothing of this kind upon the Board till March the twenty ſixth 1533. And now within ten Days the Point was ſettled, as before related, and a publick Inſtrument drawn up for the King's Satisfaction.

Ibid.

See above, Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 106.

Journal of the Upper Houſe of Convocation, fol. 55, 56, 57.

Theſe two Queſtions were determin'd the ſame way on the King's ſide, by the Convocation at York, two only diſſenting to each Point propos'd.

Conventiones, Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 454. May 13. Ibid. p. 474.

Before I part with this Account, I am oblig'd to make another Remark. Our learned Church-Hiſtorian relates, that the Opinions of Nineteen Univerſities were read for the Divorce in the Convocation. But this Number exceeds by more than half as has been prov'd already. This Gentleman ſeems to be led into this Miſtake, by a haſty Tranſlation of Joſceline whom he quotes upon this Occaſion. To put this matter beyond doubt, I ſhall cite the Author in his own Language. (c) In ſuperiori autem Patrum Conventu, in quo Bononienſis, Patavinenſis, Pariſienſis, aliarumque Univerſitatum, de eâ Queſtione Judicia recitata ſunt, Controverſia inter Stokeſleyum Londinenſem, & Fiſherum Roffenſem Epiſcopos aliquandiu mota, ab omnibus Patribus, qui ducenti ſexdecim perſonaliter, vel per Procuratores interfuerunt, præterquam a 19, Univerſitatum prædictarum Sententiis aſſenſum eſt. The Engliſh of which is this. In the Upper Houſe of Convocation, the Cenſures upon the Queſtion of the Divorce paſs'd at Bononia, Padua, Paris and ſome other Univerſities, were reported. Now Stokeſly Biſhop of London, and Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter happening to claſh in the Debate, this Houſe conſiſting of two hundred and ſixteen, including Proxies, all of 'em excepting nineteen, agreed to the Deciſion of the Univerſities abovemention'd.

Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 129.

(c) Antiquit. Brit. p. 327, 328. Edit. Han.

A Miſtake concerning 19 Univerſities rectified.

Our learned Church-Hiſtorian upon this Occaſion attempts ſomewhat of a Hiſtory of the Convocation: And offers a Conjecture into what Members the Houſes were diſtinguiſhed. He believes none ſat in the Lower-Houſe, but thoſe who were deputed by the inferior Clergy: And that Biſhops, Abbots, mitred and not mitred, and Priors, Deans, and Archdeacons ſat then in the Upper Houſe of Convocation. But firſt, this Conjecture diſagrees with what he has already affirm'd: For he has told us, that Reginal Pool as Dean of Exeter, was a Member of the Lower Houſe of Convocation. But farther, the Truth of the Caſe is fully diſcovered from the Subſcriptions of the Convocation publiſh'd by this Reverend Prelate (d). In this Liſt all the Members of the Upper Houſe ſubſcribe apart, which Method was follow'd by thoſe of the Pag. 113.

(d) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. Addend. p. 315.

Lower: The Inſtrument is an Original, and may ſafely be truſted.

Here 'tis evident that the Biſhops, Abbots and Priors conſtituted the Upper Houſe: And that all Deans, Archdeacons, Proctors of the Clergy, and Chapters of Cathedrals, ſat in the Lower Houſe of Convocation.

And that this Reign did not introduce any thing new as to this Point, may be prov'd from Precedents more than one Century prior to the Reformation. For inſtance, in the Convocation held in the Year 1462, the Lower Houſe wanting a ſmall Sum of ready Money, agreed to raiſe it by ſetting a Fine upon the abſent Members. To this purpoſe a Liſt of the Abſentees of the Lower Houſe was brought in. Amongſt which were theſe, the Deans of Sarum, Lincoln, Windſor, Wells, and Chicheſter: The Archdeacons of Colcheſter, Wincheſter, Surrey, Taunton, Dorſet, &c. (e).

What Members ſat in each Houſe of Convocation.

(e) Harmer, p. 31, 32.

How the Diſtinction of the two Houſes was thus ſettled, may not be improper to relate.

Some time after the preſent Conſtitution of Parliaments was introduced in the Reign of Henry the Third; ſome time after this, great Numbers of Abbots and Priors were ſummon'd to Parliament by Writs directed to each of 'em. Now all the Religious thus ſummon'd by particular Writs ſat amongſt the Peers. Theſe Abbots and Priors had a double Capacity, and were rang'd under two Diſtinctions: As Eccleſiaſtical Prelates they were part of the Firſt; and as holding their Baronies of the King, part of the Second Eſtate repreſented in Parliament. For we are to obſerve, that ſuch Abbots and Priors as held in chief of the King were uſually ſummon'd to Parliament.

In the Reign of Edward the Third, the Number of Abbots and Priors ſummon'd by particular Writs was conſiderably leſſen'd: And this Cuſtom held on to the Reformation. For after the Reign laſt mention'd, only ſome of the greater Abbots receiv'd Summons. And here the Number, tho' not unalterably fix'd, was always between twenty and thirty. They had ſometimes a Warrant from the King to diſpenſe with their Attendance: Of which we have an Inſtance in the Reign before us (f).

(f) See Records, N. 23.

To return: When the Kings forbore ſending particular Summons to the leſſer Abbots and Priors, they loſt the Privilege of being Members of the Second Eſtate. However, they ſtill continued to be ſummon'd to Convocations by the Archbiſhop's Mandate. Now thoſe Religious who held immediately of the King; and whoſe Predeceſſors had been ſummon'd as Part of the Baronage, continued their Claim in the Convocation, and were admitted to ſit with the Biſhops as formerly (g).

(g) Harmer, p. 32. & de- inc.

A. D. 1532.
Latimer preaches againſt Purgatory, &c.

About this time Hugh Latimer's Caſe was brought before the Upper Houſe of Convocation. This Latimer had been delated in the Synod laſt Year for maintaining erroneous Doctrine in ſome Letters written to one Greenwood of Cambridge: And being requir'd to take an Oath to make a true Anſwer to Interrogatories, he declin'd the Juriſdiction of the Houſe, and appeal'd to the King: But the King refuſing the Application, return'd him to the Convocation, upon which he acknowledg'd himſelf miſtaken, and was pardon'd upon his Submiſſion *. But now he relaps'd, as they call'd it, to his former Opinions. The Articles he was charg'd with, were his denying Purgatory, worſhipping of Saints, and going in Pilgrimage to their Images. He had ſubſcrib'd a Recantation upon theſe Heads, and promis'd not to preach Offenſively upon them for the future. Notwithſtanding this Engagement his Conſcience wou'd not give him leave to keep his Word: For in the Pulpit at Briſtol he declaim'd againſt the receiv'd Doctrines: And therefore to diſable him in his Credit, the Houſe, at the Motion of the Biſhop of Wincheſter, order'd a Copy of his Submiſſion ſhould be ſent down into thoſe Parts.

His Submiſſion.

* Convocation Journal, fol. 46, 47.

March 26. 1533.

Id. fol. 53, 54.

The King attempts to prevail with Queen Catharine to relinquiſh her Marriage, but without Succeſs.

To proceed: The King tried once more to prevail with the Queen to acquieſce in the Divorce. And to make the Propoſal go down the better, ſhe was told the King wou'd ſettle her firſt Joynture, and that ſhe ſhou'd be treated with the Honour of Princeſs of Wales. But this Offer was refus'd; ſhe ſtill continued to juſtify her Marriage, and held to her Appeal. But the King's Marriage with Anne Boleyn cou'd be conceal'd no longer; and therefore on Eaſter-Eve ſhe was declared Queen, and pompouſly crown'd in June following. But before this laſt Solemnity, 'twas thought fit to proceed to a Judicial Diſſolution of the former Marriage. The Proceſs was form'd in this Manner. Firſt, Cranmer acquainted the King in a Letter, that his Marriage with Queen Catharine had been much cenſur'd both at home and abroad: That his Subjects were particularly apprehenſive the Title to the Crown might be entangled, and the Peace of the Kingdom endanger'd by this Means. That therefore he deſired an Authority of his Majeſty to put an end to this Matter. Upon this Requeſt, the King ſends him an Order to call a Court, and proceed to Judgment (h).

(h) See Records, N. 24.

The Sentence of the Divorce pronounc'd by Cranmer. May 23.

Cranmer being thus furniſh'd, the King and the Queen were cited to appear before him at Dunſtable. This Place was pitch'd on becauſe the Queen lay near it at Ampthill: For this reaſon ſhe cou'd not pretend being unacquainted with what was doing. And thus there being no need of many Days in the Citation, the Proceſs might be ended the ſooner. The Court was held upon the tenth of May; the King appear'd by Proxy, but the Queen neither in Perſon nor otherwiſe. For this Reaſon, after a third Citation, ſhe was declared Contumax. And here the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes relating to the Conſummation of the Marriage with Prince Arthur were read. The Cenſures of the Univerſities, the Determinations of the Provinces of Canterbury and York, the Opinions of Canoniſts and Divines in favour of the Divorce, were likewiſe recited in Court. And laſtly, on the twenty third of May the Archbiſhop, by the Advice of Canoniſts and Divines, conſulted upon this Occaſion, proceeds to give Judgment, and pronounces the Marriage between the King and Queen Catharine to have been only an Engagement de Facto, and not de Jure, and by conſequence, to have been null, and of no Force from the Beginning. And thus King Henry and the Lady Catharine * (for ſhe is not call'd Queen) are pronounc'd ſeparated, and divorc'd from each other, and at Liberty to engage elſewhere (i).

* Domina Catharina.

(i) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. Collect. of Records, Book 2. N. 47. from an inſpeximus Rot. Pat. 25 H. 8.

Doctor Heylin mentions a Letter of Cranmer's to Cromwell upon this Occaſion. The Letter, tranſcrib'd from the Cotton Library, imports a Reſolution of the Archbiſhop's coming to a final Sentence on the eighteenth of May. And here Cranmer conjures Cromwell and the King not to divulge ſo great a Secret: For he was afraid ſuch a Diſcovery might bring the Princeſs Dowager to Dunſtable. And that her appearing in Court either at, or before the time of Sentence, might perplex the Affair, and put them all to a ſtand *; but by her not appearing this Danger was over, over, and the Matter went as the King would have it.

*Heylin Hiſt. Ref. under Q. Mary, p. 7.

The Proceedings cenſur'd.

And thus the Cauſe which had been ſix Years depending was determin'd at laſt. However, the King's Proceedings did not paſs without Cenſure. Some of thoſe who believ'd him well founded as to the main, were not ſatisfied in every Circumſtance. They were altogether of Opinion the Divorce ought to have been pronounc'd before the King's Engagements with Anne Boleyn: And that the firſt Marriage ought to have been diſſolv'd, before the ſecond was made. For to break a Marriage without any publick Sentence was, as they conceived, an unprecedented Singularity. And ſince one of the principal Reaſons of State urg'd in this Affair, was to ſettle the Succeſſion, they thought this End wou'd not be anſwer'd, that the Title to the Crown wou'd be more entangled: For was there not a ſtrong pretence to queſtion the ſecond Marriage, upon the ſcore of its being made before the firſt was diſcharg'd? In ſhort, it was generally concluded that Judgment in form had been better omitted, than come ſo late. Some excepted to the Archbiſhop's being Judge. He had written a Book for the Divorce, and declared himſelf on the King's ſide of the Queſtion. To this it was anſwer'd, that when a Man acts in a new Poſt, his former Sentiment is no diſabling Circumſtance. For don't Judges ſometimes try Cauſes in which they formerly gave Counſel, and pleaded at the Bar? And to come ſomewhat nearer; Popes are not ſuppos'd tied to the Opinions they held in a lower Station. And laſtly, 'twas replied, that the Archbiſhop proceeded only upon what had been already concluded by the Univerſities, Convocations, &c. and did no more than put their Deciſions into a Form of Law (k).

Upon the twenty eighth of May the Archbiſhop held another Court at Lambeth, where without aſſigning the Reaſons in the Judgment, he confirm'd the King's Marriage with the new Queen Anne.

The King endeavours to juſtify himſelf to foreign Princes.

The King diſpatch'd Ambaſſadors to moſt of the Courts of Europe, to juſtiſie his Marriage upon the Grounds already mention'd. He was particularly ſolicitous to give the Emperor Satisfaction, and prevent a Rupture with that Prince. To this purpoſe he acquaints his Imperial Majeſty, that he deſign'd to juſtify his Practice at the Court of Rome and treat farther with the Pope. That he hop'd his Imperial Majeſty wou'd put a friendly Conſtruction upon his Proceedings, and continue his Correſpondence as formerly. The Emperor told Sir Thomas Wyat, the Ambaſſador, that he was well inform'd how that Affair had been manag'd; and that he ſhou'd adviſe with his Council upon farther Meaſures. By this Anſwer, it might eaſily be perceived, he intended to break with the King (l).

The Emperor not ſatisfied.

The Court of Rome highly diſguſted.

The News of Archbiſhop Cranmer's Sentence, and the King's Marriage with Mrs. Boleyn was very ill receiv'd at Rome. That Court thought the Papal Authority much diſregarded: For the King to commiſſionate one of his Subjects to judge finally in the Cauſe while the Appeal was depending, was new, and unprecedented: And that by ſuch Freedoms the Supremacy of the See of Rome was plainly ſtruck at. Thus the College of Cardinals were much diſguſted; and thoſe in the Emperor's Intereſt, addreſs'd the Pope to exert his Character, and proceed to Cenſures againſt the King.

June.

The Pope tho' not willing to come to Extremities, gratified 'em in ſome meaſure. He gave Sentence againſt the Attentates as they call 'em; that is, he declared Archbiſhop Cranmer's Judgment of no Force. For ſince the Queen by her Appeal, had remitted the Cauſe to the Court of Rome, 'twas not in the Power of any other Prelates or Prince, to intermeddle with it. And ſince the King had countenanc'd Cranmer in this late Proceſs, he is declared liable to Excommunication, unleſs he diſowned Cranmer's Sentence, and reſtored the Cauſe to its former Condition. And to do this, he had time given him 'till the end of September (m).

The King's Agents at the Interview at Marſeilles.

The Pope and the French King had concerted an Interview at Marſeilles: And now the time drawing near, the King of England endeavour'd to diſengage Francis from meeting his Holyneſs. To this Purpoſe the Duke of Norfolk was diſpatch'd to the French Court. His Inſtructions were to deſire the King of France to make a Hault at leaſt, till the Pope had given his Maſter Satisfaction: He had likewiſe in Charge to offer the French King an Aſſiſtance for a War in Piedmont: But then this Propoſal was made upon Condition, that King Francis ſhou'd ſtop the exporting of Treaſure out of his Dominions to Rome: And likewiſe erect a Patriarchate in purſuance of the late Treaty at Calais.

The French King's Anſwer was ſmooth and friendly: And tho' his Word had gone too far to break off the Interview, yet he promis'd the King his beſt Offices at Marſeilles: And that if any ill Treatment was put upon his Highneſs, he ſhou'd reſent it as done to himſelf.

The Duke of Norfolk ſent the King Advice of his Negotiation with the French King, and of what had paſs'd at Rome. Upon this the Dukes of Norfolk and Richmond were recall'd from the French Court. However, at the Inſtance of King Francis, Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, Sir Francis Bryan, and Sir John Wallop were diſpatch'd in their Place, with Orders to attend at the Interview.

Queen Catharine refuſes to acquieſce.

To return to England: After the Sentence pronounc'd at Dunſtable the Lord Mountjoy was ſent to Queen Catharine to acquaint her with the Proceedings: And that now ſhe muſt drop the State of a Queen, and ſink her Title to Princeſs Dowager: He was order'd to work upon her Paſſions different ways, and to promiſe or threaten as he found Occaſion. Amongſt other things, he was to give an Aſſurance of the Lady Mary's being put next Queen Anne's Iſſue in the Succeſſion: But Queen Catharine refus'd to comply upon any Conditions. She wou'd not, ſhe ſaid, injure her Honour, and deſtroy her Soul upon any Conſiderations whatſoever: She was his Wife, and while the Cauſe was depending at Rome wou'd never ſubmit to any other Diſtinction. And when this Lord had written a Relation of what paſs'd between them, and ſhew'd it to her Highneſs; ſhe ſtruck out all thoſe Places where ſhe was call'd Princeſs Dowager, and wou'd be ſerved by no body but thoſe who call'd her Queen (n).

The King made uſe of ſome rough Expedients to bring her to his Purpoſe, but all without Effect. 'Twas thought his Rigours in this kind, were ſomewhat remote from noble Temper: And that ſince he had taken away the ſubſtantial Part of her Grandure, 'twas ſomewhat hard to grudge her the Ceremony of a Title.

Upon the ſeventh of September, Sunday, Queen Anne was delivered of a Daughter. This Lady was baptized the Wedneſday following, and named Elizabeth. Archbiſhop Cranmer was her Godfather; and the two Dowagers of Norfolk and Dorſet, the firſt a Dutcheſs, the other a Marchioneſs, were Godmothers.

To

(k) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 101, 102.

(l) Lord Herbert, p. 350, 351.

(m) Id. p. 357, 358. Sanders de Schiſm. Anglic. p. 111.

(n) Biblioth. Cotton. Otho c. 10.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

To go on: At the Interview at Marſeilles, the French King ſollicited the Pope to deal gently with the King of England, and prolong the time for the Cenſures. The Pope anſwer'd, that notwithſtanding the Term was paſs'd, he was willing the Matter ſhou'd reſt till he came to Rome. The Engliſh Agents not ſatisfied with this Reſpite, laid open their Inſtructions: And here Dr. Bonner, after ſome introductive Ceremony, that the King intended no Diſregard to the Apoſtolick See, acquainted the Pope with his Maſter's Appeal to the next General Council lawfully aſſembled. This being an unexpected Step, diſpleas'd the Pope very much, who told him it ſhou'd be referr'd to the Conſiſtory. The Cardinals meeting under this Form three Days after, he let Bonner know, he was oblig'd to reject the King's Appeal, as being an unlawful Expedient, and contrary to a Conſtitution of his Predeceſſor Pope Pius. And as to a Council, he ſhou'd convene it. But that this Matter was a Privilege belonging to his Authority, and not King Henry's. Upon this Bonner deſired the Inſtruments of the Appeal might be return'd him; but this was likewiſe deny'd by the Pope.

Nov. 7. 1533. The King and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury appeal from the Pope to a general Council.

About this time, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſuſpecting the Pope might proceed againſt him, put in his Appeal likewiſe to a General Council (o).

(o) Lord Herbert, p. 361.

The French King ſent John de Bellay Biſhop of Paris to King Henry, to acquaint him with what had paſs'd at Marſeilles, and to perſuade him to diſpatch Ambaſſadors to Rome, to gain more time with his Holyneſs, and prevent the Fulmination of the Cenſures. But the King who ſeems to have form'd a Project of extending the Regale, replied he wou'd adviſe with his Council. And now the King being at the Board, the Matter was debated on both ſides.

The Speech for keeping on the uſual Correſpondence with the Court of Rome was to this Effect.

SIR,

Id. p. 362. A Speech at the Council Board in Defence of the Papal Supremacy.

"Your Highneſs is upon a Debate of the laſt Importance, ſuch as in the Conſequence will affect your Kingdom and Poſterity. A Reſolution therefore of this nature, ought to be made with the utmoſt Caution. The Queſtion is, whether in this Affair of your Divorce, and in other Eccleſiaſtical Concerns, you intend to proceed on your own, or the Papal Authority? As for my Part, 'tis natural for me, who am born your Subject, to wiſh your Highneſs the utmoſt Extent of Power: But when I recollect the ancient Practice of this Kingdom, I can't but think Innovations dangerous. For if the Regards of Order and Government infer a Neceſſity of Supreme Authority in the State, it ſeems ſtill more neceſſary, that ſuch a Subordination of Power, ſuch a laſt Reſort ſhou'd be kept in a Religious Society. For is not ſuch a Spiritual Body more capable of a Head ſo diſtinguiſh'd? And beſides, is not ſuch a Character more wanted, becauſe ſo many ſtand in need of its Direction? In my humble Opinion therefore, we are chiefly oblig'd to ſupport ſuch a Principle of Unity. For by this Cement, not only the Body Spiritual, but likewiſe Civil Society is preſerv'd from flying aſunder. Now, how can we conſult the Dignity of any Government, when the moſt eminent Part of it is laid aſide? And how oddly muſt that Body look which is made ſhorter by the Head?

"Without doubt, Sir, an Authority which has ſo much Antiquity to plead, ought not be raſhly ſet aſide. Is not the Pope a common Father to Chriſtendom? And are not the Differences among Princes and Prelates referr'd to his Deciſion? Is not the Majeſty of Religion ſupported by the Prerogative of his See? Is not Diſcipline maintain'd by the Extent of his Juriſdiction? Does not his Commiſſion from God keep Chriſtendom in Awe? And are not Men reſtrain'd from Liberty and Diſorder, by conſidering the force of his Character? Shall we then part with the Terrors of the other World, with theſe powerful Motives to Duty and Obedience, and truſt only to the Civil Sword, to Jayls and Executions? Beſides, who ſhall provide for unforeſeen Caſes, diſpenſe againſt the Letter, and ſoften the Rigour of Law, if the Pope is once gone? How ſhall Sacraments, Pardons, and Indulgences, and other holy Performances be maintain'd in the uſual Significancy? Who ſhall be Guarrantee for the Leagues of Princes, hold 'em to their Oaths and Articles, and thunder againſt Perjury and Injuſtice? As Affairs now ſtand, I can't conceive how a general Peace can go on among Princes, nor how Order and Equity can well ſubſiſt without Recourſe to his Holyneſs. For as his Court is a ſort of Chancery to all Chriſtendom, ſo if you take it away, that Equity and Conſcience which ought to over-rule and explain all Laws and Conſtitutions whatſoever, muſt fall with it.

"To conclude; As your Highneſs is my Sovereign, I wiſh you all imaginable Advantage of real Greatneſs, but as to Eccleſiaſtical Government, I humbly conceive, 'tis beſt not to bring it to a Review; not to ſuffer either the Seat of the Power, or the Extent of the Obligation to be expoſed to Queſtion, or examin'd by your Subjects. An Experiment of this nature may occaſion an unfortunate Diviſion; and endanger both the Spiritual and Civil Authority. And beſides, ſuch a Liberty wou'd be ill receiv'd Abroad; make our Proceedings be cenſur'd by foreign Princes, and diſpoſe 'em upon every Occaſion, to enter into an Alliance againſt us.

This Speech was anſwer'd by a Perſon of a different Sentiment.

SIR,

An Anſwer on the other ſide.

"Had the Queſtion now ſpoken to, been reſolv'd to Satisfaction, I ſhould not have troubled your Majeſty with a Reply. But tho' his Principles are true, in my Opinion, he fails in his Inferences: I ſhall therefore crave leave to examine his Arguments, from common Topicks and Rules of Reaſoning. For here 'tis not my Intention to produce any Proof from Revelation, or enter upon Points of Divinity. That there is a Neceſſity of ſome Supreme Power in Spiritual, as well as Temporal Concerns, is evident enough. But the Queſtion is, whether 'tis more beneficial for theſe Offices to be lodg'd in one Perſon, or Two? I confeſs I am clearly for Incorporating the Character, provided the Claims of each reſpective Branch are of the ſame Extent: And the Perſon pretends to be Supreme in one Caſe, no farther than he is in the other. To advance towards farther Proof, Can we ſuppoſe Government without Religion, or Religion without Government? Will moral Precepts, and the bare Force of Doctrine, keep People to their Duty without the Countenance nance of the Civil Authority? Or on the other hand, Is Severity and the Terror of Executions, ſufficient Inſtruction to inform the Underſtanding, to regulate the Practice, and make us happy in the other World? Beſides, how can the Repoſe of a Kingdom be ſecur'd, if the Secular Magiſtrate commands one thing, and the Spiritual another? Such Inconſiſtency of Orders, ſerves only to diſtract the Mind of the Subject, and make Duty impracticable. Inſomuch, that ſometimes a Man muſt be under a Neceſſity of being counted, at leaſt, either a Schiſmatick, or a Rebel. Theſe Inconveniencies as they are poſſible in the Scheme, ſo they may be prov'd from Practice. For what Claſhings has there been between Princes and Popes? What Deſolations and publick Ruin? What Scandal to common Chriſtianity, both in this Kingdom and elſewhere, have happen'd upon this Score? I ſhall take it for granted then, that the Union of the Spiritual and Temporal Supremacy, are extremely ſerviceable. We are now to enquire in the next place, for the moſt proper Perſon, for the Exerciſe of this double Juriſdiction: I mean only at preſent with reſpect to this Kingdom. And here it is evident, the Popes are not qualified for this Function. For as to the Temporal Part, they have no Claim either from Blood or Election, to found their Title upon. So neither on the other hand, are they in any good Condition to manage the Spiritual. The See of Rome is too remote to exert their Character: This Diſtance makes Information and Redreſs come oftentimes too late. 'Tis true, they endeavour to fence againſt this Inconvenience, by admitting Appeals. But this Expedient is but a weak Remedy. For thoſe who apply to this Relief, are oftentimes tir'd and worn out with a dilatory Proceſs. And thus the Remedy being held too high, and neither agreeing with the Health or Pocket of the Parties, they chuſe rather to throw up the Cauſe, and ſet down under Oppreſſion. This was one of the centum gravamina complain'd of by the Germans, neither cou'd the Court of Rome contrive 'em a Satisfaction upon this Head. And thus we ſee the Pope is barr'd the Exerciſe of either Juriſdiction in England, for the Reaſons already mentioned. With whom therefore muſt this Authority be lodged? Without Queſtion, with the Crown. For have not Princes part of the Sacerdotal, as well as the Regal Power, annex'd to their Office? Beſides, they claim this Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy no farther than their Dominions reach, and their Swords can ſupport their Title. Neither are they ſuppos'd to have any Intereſt diſtinct from their Subjects; for this Reaſon they will be diſpos'd to preſerve a Harmony in Religion. And beſides, the Union of the Sacred and Civil Authority, will double the Force of each, and be a ſtronger Reſtraint upon the Paſſions of the People. And thus they will be the better ſecur'd from breaking out into Singularities and Schiſm. If any Perſon thinks this Notion Chimærical, he may be convinc'd of the Practicableneſs of it, by the Popes themſelves. For are not the Biſhops of Rome, Princes and High Prieſts in the Patrimony of the Church? And don't we perceive a better publick Correſpondence, and a firmer Union in thoſe Places, than elſewhere? Since therefore it appears both by Reaſon and Precedent, that both Juriſdictions may ſubſiſt in one Subject, and be executed by the ſame Perſon, I conceive it will eaſily be granted, that theſe Functions ſuit better with a Temporal than a Spiritual Monarch. For is not the Proviſion of Laws, and the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, much more ſerviceable than Controverſial Diſputes? (I mean where the Fundamentals are ſettled) And is it not more for the Benefit of Mankind to defend the Publick againſt foreign Invaſion, than to harrangue againſt Vice, and complain of the Non-payment of Church Duties? And may we not conclude from hence, that there is no more Neceſſity of a Pope, in the modern Extent of that Character, than there is of a univerſal Emperor? For Government as well as other Bodies, muſt be reſtrain'd to a certain Proportion. 'Tis ſwell'd into a Monſter, if you carry it beyond its due Bulk.

“In the next place, let us conſider whether the Pope is not diſabled for his Pretenſion upon another Account. For is not his Holyneſs obnoxious to other Princes? 'Tis plain, his Motions are frequently embarraſs'd by the French and Spaniard. His See lies as it were in the middle between theſe contending Crowns. By this Situation, he muſt either be oblig'd to comply with the prevailing Party, or elſe expoſe himſelf to Inſult and Outrage, as has lately happen'd. And ſince the State has ſometimes an Intereſt in religious Diſputes, it muſt be dangerous for England, to make his Holyneſs the laſt Judge in theſe Matters. For let us ſuppoſe him never ſo impartial between Princes at a diſtance, where he is free and unmenac'd, this Advantage of Circumſtance, will often be none of our Caſe. For what can we expect where the Intereſt of his See, and the Neighbourhood of potent Princes, hang in his view? I grant he may ſpare us a good Wiſh, or beſtow his Benediction, But what of that? where his Perſon, or his Power are concerned, his Conduct may not be ſo acceptable. In ſuch Caſes, I conceive, it might not be ſafe for him to do us Juſtice; nay, I think it wou'd ſcarcely be Manners to aſk it.

“But may we not continue our Regards to his Holyneſs in ſome Meaſure? May he not be apply'd to in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and the Differences of Chriſtendom be referr'd to him? With all my Heart, provided he keeps within the Functions of a Common Father. But if he exerts his Cenſures without Juſtice and Meaſure; if he interdicts and exterminates without due Provocation; Is not this in effect to throw up his Character, and renounce his Relation? If inſtead of ſettling the Conſciences of thoſe within his Charge, and providing for the Repoſe of Chriſtendom, he makes uſe of Extremities, and embroils the World: If he endeavours to ſupport his Authority by Arms and Invaſion, he plainly deſerts his Office, and forfeits his Claim to Regard. Things ſtanding thus, unleſs Eccleſiaſtical Affairs are put into the Hands of Princes, there's little Proſpect of a Settlement.

“But 'tis objected, that if the Pope's Authority is ſuppreſs'd, Religion muſt ſuffer with it. To this I anſwer, That if Religion ſtood on no firmer Ground, 'twou'd be worſe founded than any other Science. For are not the Rules of Life ſtamp'd naturally upon the Mind? And had we any other Religion to bring us to Heaven but what Nature furniſh'd us with? Had we any other Aſſiſtance for the firſt two thouſand Years? And what was afterwards the meaning of the Decalogue? Was it not to explain and refreſh thoſe innate Inſtructions? Beſides, have we not a Creed to inform us farther, and furniſh us with Fundamentals? This Syſtem has been all along look'd on as an unalterable Standard by the Church; Why therefore muſt our Faith be ſtretch'd beyond the Canon of the Old and New Teſtament? To explain or illuſtrate ſome Points, may be a ſerviceable Undertaking: But to throw in ſupplimental Principles, and enlarge the Foundation, is by no means to be allow'd. Neither in Prudence can the Church of Rome attempt any thing of this Nature. For the Force and Majeſty of Religion is beſt preſerv'd by Uniformity of Belief, and by keeping cloſe to the Doctrine of the Firſt Ages: But if the Court of Rome declines theſe Methods of Charity and Temper; if they miſ-mark the Characters of Things; if they confound the certain with the uncertain, and tye People to an equal Belief, where the Motives of Credibility are unequal, ought not Princes to interpoſe with a Remedy? Ought they not to ſuppreſs Uſurpations in Religion, and clear it from Error and Neglect?

“Farther, neither ought we to be afraid our Princes ſhou'd grow too abſolute by ſuch an Acceſſion of Privilege: For the beſt Means to unite the Minds of the People, and provide for all Emergencies, ought not to be rejected for improbable Fancies. If 'tis ſaid, this Authority may happen to be abus'd and fall into the Hands of arbitrary Princes, this is no Argument. For are we not in Danger of having ill Popes as well as ill Princes?

“And thus, Sir, all Innovation may be prevented, and all Defects ſupply'd by your Highneſs in your Dominions, without running into any Extreme. Thus the ancient Doctrines of Chriſtianity may be taught without any Mixtures of novel Fancies, or falſe Reaſoning. And within the Compaſs of this Scheme, the Hierarchy of your Kingdom may be maintain'd in their ancient Dignity and Privilege. And ſince your Highneſs does not pretend to make any new Articles of Faith, What ſhou'd hinder the Clergy from expounding the Old Ones? They may go on in their Function, without Diſturbance, diſentangle the Difficulties in Scripture, read Divine Service, adminiſter the Sacraments, and form their Charge to all the Parts of Piety, and good Conduct.

“Now if the Pope ſhall pleaſe to countenance theſe Proceedings, to leſſen his Pretenſions, and not preſs upon your Highneſs's Prerogative, it might not be amiſs to make him ſome Acknowledgement, and return a reciprocal Regard. Under ſuch moderate Claims, ſome Caſes not ſo eaſily manageable by your Clergy, might be reſerved to his Cogniſance. His Dignity might likewiſe be ſo far conſidered as to allow him a Primacy or patriarchal Right. But then this Privilege muſt paſs with a Limitation, not to interfere with your Highneſs's being Supreme Head of the Church of England.

“To come now to the Queſtion before us, relating to the Divorce. And here I can't imagine why the Pope ſhou'd be diſguſted: For has the Archbiſhop done any thing more than what not only the moſt famous Univerſities, but even his Holyneſs himſelf has own'd to be lawful? Since therefore after the Cauſe has been ſo long depending, we have decided the Point juſt as the Pope has declared he wou'd have done it himſelf; Since I ſay, he has confeſs'd he wou'd have given Judgment of the ſame ſide, had it not been for fear of the Emperor, Why ſhou'd he be angry with us for pronouncing by his own Sentiment? Does he complain that he is not in a Condition to do us Juſtice? And is he diſturb'd at the ſame time, to ſee it done by our ſelves? Shall the executing of what he thought reaſonable, be eſteem'd a Fault, when in all Conſtruction of Equity, the Omiſſion muſt have been unpardonable? Let us therefore ſend to him, and requeſt his Conſent. It has been hinted to us already, that 'twou'd be more adviſeable to move for a Pardon afterwards, than ſollicite for a Licenſe beforehand. If this Intimation comes from good Hands, we have Reaſon to hope he will confirm the Archbiſhop's Sentence. And thus the Differences between the Crown and the Court of Rome, being compromiz'd in ſome meaſure, we need not be apprehenſive of any foreign Invaſion; eſpecially ſince we have the general Concurrence of the Kingdom to ſupport our Proceedings (p).

Decemb. 2. 1533. Reſolutions at the Council-Board.

The King inclin'd to govern himſelf by this laſt Speech. The Pope it ſeems, had given him a new Provocation, by publiſhing the Cenſures abovemention'd at Dunkirk. And to prevent farther Inconveniencies, theſe Meaſures were reſolv'd at the Council Board. Firſt, 'twas thought adviſeable to acquaint the Nation with his Highneſs's Appeal to a General Council, and the Reaſonableneſs of ſuch an Application. Secondly, The Unlawfulneſs of the Dowager's (as they call'd her) Appeal to Rome, was to be publiſh'd. And to make this Expedient of hers more unjuſtiſiable, the late Statute againſt Appeals to the Pope, was to be fix'd to the Church Door of every Pariſh. Thirdly, the Pariſh-prieſts were order'd to ſet forth in their Sermons, that a General Council is above the Pope; and that his Holyneſs has no more Authority in England, by the Laws of God, than any other foreign Biſhop. Laſtly, 'twas reſolv'd to diſpatch Ambaſſadors to ſeveral Princes Courts; and to endeavour the Forming a Confederacy with the Kings of Poland and Hungary, with the Dukes of Saxony, Bavaria, and the Landgrave of Heſſe, with the Hanſtowns of Lubeck, Norenberg, Dantzick, &c. Id. p. 368.

But this Matter being more fully related in the Cotton Library, I ſhall refer the Reader to the Record. See Records N. 35.

The King endeavours to prevent a Rupture with the Pope.

Notwithſtanding the projecting theſe Meaſures, the King was not unwilling to accommodate Matters with the Court of Rome. To this Purpoſe he deſired the Biſhop of Paris to acquaint the French King, that if the Pope wou'd ſuſpend his Cenſures, aſſign him fair Judges, and exclude the Imperial Party, he wou'd likewiſe recal his own Reſolutions of diſowning the Authority of that See. The Biſhop thought this Propoſal ſomewhat ſhort, and deſir'd a Character of his Highneſs to negotiate this Affair at Rome. The King approv'd the Suggeſtion and promis'd to make the Offer good; but refus'd to ſend any Submiſſions under his hand, till he knew how the Motion was receiv'd.

Decemb. 26. The Biſhop of Paris employed at Rome in this Affair.

The Biſhop of Paris apprehending this Affair wou'd not admit of Delay, poſted to Rome, thro' the Rigor of the Seaſon. Upon his Arrival, he had a publick Audience in the Conſiſtory, where he reported the King's Overture, and with a great deal of Elocution, ſet forth how ſerviceable it wou'd be to the whole Church to accept the Terms. The Majority of the Cardinals were (p) Lord Herbert, p 363.

---

ſatisfy'd with this Declaration, and ſet a Day for the King to tranſmit his Promiſe in Form. Thus an Expreſs was diſpatch'd to the Engliſh Court for a farther Reſolution. But no Anſwer being return'd within the Time prefix'd, the Pope reſolv'd to proceed to a definitive Sentence. Upon which Bellay did his utmoſt to ſtop the Fulmination. He ſuggeſted, 'twas probable the Expedition of the Expreſs might be check'd by contrary Winds, or other Accidents: He deſir'd, ſince their Patience had held out Six Years in the Cauſe, they wou'd only prolong it to Six Days Reſpite. This Motion being put to the Queſtion, 'twas carry'd by a Majority againſt the King. It ſeems the Conſiſtory were put out of Humour, and hurried to this Reſolution by ſome News they had receiv'd from England. They heard the King had publiſh'd a Book againſt the Pope's Authority. Tho' by the way, they were miſ-inform'd as to the Printing, which was not done till afterwards. 'Tis true, there was a Book written upon this Subject, which it ſeems was not altogether a Secret, for a Copy of it was now come to the Pope's Hands. Beſides, they were inform'd a Comedy had been repreſented at the Engliſh Court to the Diſhonour of the Conclave: And that the Pope and moſt of the Cardinals had been pointed at, and particularly expos'd. This Treatment enrag'd the Court of Rome, made 'em proceed with Precipitation, and over-look the cuſtomary Methods: So that the Buſineſs which cou'd not regularly have paſſed under Three Conſiſtories, was diſpatch'd in One (q). And thus by their laſt Deciſion, the Marriage with Queen Catharine was pronounc'd valid, and the King commanded to live with her; and in Caſe of Refuſal, an Excommunication was decreed againſt him (r). About Two Days after this remarkable Management, the Expreſs arriv'd with an Aſſurance in Form, that the King was ready to ratifie whatever had been offer'd by the Biſhop of Paris; That is, the King was willing to appear by Proxy at the Court of Rome, and ſtand to the Award of the Conſiſtory, upon the Conditions already mention'd; with this Proviſo, that ſome indifferent Perſons ſhou'd be ſent to Cambray for a true Information in the Cauſe.

(q) Father Paul's Hiſt. Council of Trent, lib. 1.

(r) Lord Herbert, p. 368, 369.

March 24, 1533.

The Conſiſtory diſpleas'd with ſome proceedings in England give Sentence againſt the King.

The moderate Part of the Cardinals being extremely deſirous to cloſe with this Offer, addreſſed the Pope to depart from the Cenſure, and revive the Cauſe. But tho' the Motion was well receiv'd, and the Pope not unwilling to diſentangle himſelf, yet upon a farther Debate of the Matter, the Emperor's Party prevail'd. They pretended the Submiſſion came too late, and that the recalling the Sentence was wholly impracticable. Thus the Sentence was affirm'd, and the executing of it put upon the Emperor.

The Biſhop of Paris in his Return to France, met Sir Edward Karne, who was ſent to Rome from the King to negotiate this Affair. But when he underſtood how the Matter had been carry'd, he thought it to no purpoſe to travel farther. When the King was inform'd of the Iſſue and Circumſtances of this Buſineſs, he reſolv'd to diſengage with the Pope without making any farther Application.

Ibid.

There had been already ſome Steps taken to lead the way to ſo great an Alteration. Of this kind we may reckon the conditional extinguiſhing the Payment of Annates, and prohibiting Appeals to Rome by Act of Parliament. Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, there had been many publick Debates about this Matter; that ſeveral Tracts had been already written upon this Subject: But this learned Prelate is miſtaken in the Time; for none of the Books mentioned by him, were publiſhed till after this Year. For the Purpoſe: The Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man, was printed in 1537, Gardiner's Book de vera obedientia, with Bonner's Preface, in 1536; Sir Richard Moriſin's Apomaxis, in 1537; the Erudition of a Chriſtian Man, in 1543; and the Book de differentia Regiæ & Eccleſiaſticæ poteſtatis, no ſooner than the Year 1535.

Some Arguments for the Regale conſider'd.

The learned Hiſtoriau makes a brief Report of what was urg'd upon this Occaſion. The Arguments againſt the Papal Supremacy, are countenanc'd by Antiquity, drawn from good Authorities, and carry up to the Point. But on the other hand, the Reaſons alledg'd for the Extent of the Regale, ſeem either to go upon a wrong Suppoſition, or fail in the Proof. They are moſt of 'em fetch'd from miſtaken Paſſages in the Old and New Teſtament, from Miſcitations of Engliſh Hiſtory, from wrong Inferences of Law, and Miſapplications of the Power of the Roman Emperors. For the Purpoſe: To prove the King's Supremacy in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes "they reaſon "from the Authority of the Moſaick Inſtitution: "But then the Inſtances are foreign to the "Caſe. For Example, Aaron, is ſaid to have "ſubmitted to Moſes. To this it may be an"ſwered, that Moſes acted by immediate Di"rection from Heaven, conſecrated Aaron, and "was a Prophet no leſs than a Civil Magiſtrate. "Farther, 'tis ſaid, Samuel, though he had been "Judge, yet acknowledged Saul's Authority (s). But "to this it may be eaſily return'd, that Samuel "was no High Prieſt; and if he had been veſted "with that Character, he ought to have been "at the Prince's Command in all Temporal Con"cerns. 'Tis likewiſe urg'd, that Solomon turn'd "out Abiather, and that this High-Prieſt ac"quieſc'd under the Sentence. This Inſtance, "ſeeming to carry ſome Force, I ſhall conſider "it a little. Firſt therefore, it may be obſerv'd, "that Solomon had an extraordinary Commiſſion "from God: He wrote inſpired Books, and "conſecrated the Temple, and therefore the "ordinary Juriſdiction of the Jewiſh Kings can"not be meaſured by his Practice. Beſides, Abia"ther was not depriv'd by Solomon, properly "ſpeaking, as appears by the Sentence. And "unto Abiather the Prieſt, ſaid the King, get thee "to Anathoth unto thine own Fields, for thou art "worthy of Death: But I will not at this time put "thee to Death, becauſe thou beareſt the Ark of the "Lord God before David my Father, and becauſe "thou haſt been afflicted in all wherein my Father "was afflicted. Here we ſee Solomon was giving "Judgment upon ſeveral Traitors, who had "been in a Plot againſt him; and thus the Sen"tence appears altogether Civil, and not an "Eccleſiaſtical Penalty. 'Twas Baniſhment from "Jeruſalem to Anathoth: 'Twas a Reprieve as "to his Life, which he had forfeited, but not "a full Pardon: I will not, ſays he, at this Time "put thee to Death; ſo that it ſeems he kept him "upon his good Behaviour.

(s) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 140.

The Caſe of Abiather not ſerviceable to the Regale.

1 Kings 2.26.

"However, it may be urg'd on the other ſide, "this Sentence affected his Sacerdotal Character, "and amounted to a Deprivation: For in the "27th Verſe of the Chapter abovemention'd, 'tis "ſaid, That Solomon thruſt out Abiather from "being Prieſt unto the Lord. To this 'tis reply'd, "that the Incapacity of officiating, was the ne"ceſſary Conſequence of his Baniſhment: That "the Functions of the Prieſthood were confin'd "to the Temple of Jeruſalem: From whence it "appears, that Abiather's Baniſhment from that “City, muſt ſtop the Execution of his Office. But in caſe the King had thought fit to remit the Sentence of Baniſhment, the Powers of the High-Prieſthood had revived, and Abiathar been no leſs qualified for his Function than before. Thus we ſee, notwithſtanding the Sentence, he was ſtill reckon'd a Prieſt.

“It may be urg'd farther, that Solomon did not only thruſt out Abiathar, but ſubſtituted another in his place. For the Text tells us expreſly, Zadock the Prieſt did the King put in the room of Abiathar. To this 'tis anſwered, That Abiathar was Chief, or High Prieſt of the ſecond Sacerdotal Order: And under this Diſtinction the Eight Families of the Houſe of Ithamar, Second Son to Aaron, were rang'd. Now Abiathar was deſcended from this Branch. On the other hand, Zadoc of the Line of Eleazar, was chief, or ſupreme Metropolitan over the Sixteen Families within this Diviſion. The Diſtribution of the Courſes is mentioned in the Chronicles. For this Reaſon Zadoc is all along, even in David's Time, ſet before Abiathar, wherever they are named together: And the Succeſſion of the High-Prieſthood properly ſo call'd, was reckon'd only in the Sons of Eleazar, as we may learn from the Chronicles and Ezra: In which places none of the Family of Ithamar are mention'd. To this we may add, that where the Chiefs of the Twelve Tribes are ſet down in David's Reign, Zadoc, and not Abiathar, is reckon'd Prince or Ruler of the Aaronites. And Zadoc only, and not Abiathar was anointed with Solomon, when King David was living. He was anointed; I ſay, to be Prieſt; that is, chief or ſupreme High-Prieſt, or as Joſephus expreſſes it, High-Prieſt of all the People (t). Thus when Abiathar was baniſh'd, and diſabled from the Execution of his Office, the Eight Families of the Houſe of Ithamar, were all put under the Juriſdiction of Zadoc. And thus the putting Zadoc in the room of Abiathar, was not giving him any new Superiority over Abiathar, for he was always above him: 'Twas no more therefore than enlarging the Extent of his Juriſdiction, and giving him, as it were, a new Province during the Baniſhment of Abiathar. From whence it follows, that Abiathar ſuffer'd no farther than a Civil Incapacity: There was no Deſtruction of his Character: For he is ſtill reckon'd Second High-Prieſt after Zadoc, in the Liſt of Solomon's Court, notwithſtanding the Sentence of Baniſhment paſs'd againſt him.

1 Kings, 4. 4.
1 Kings, 2. 35.
1 Chron. 24.
1 Chron. 6, to ver. 15. and ver. 50. to 54.
Ezra 7, to ver. 6
1 Chr. 27. 17.
1 Chron. 29. 22.
1 Kings 4. 4.

“Farther, after the new Eſtabliſhment of the Temple Service, the Succeſſion of the High-Prieſthood was reckon'd from Zadoc, as formerly it was from Aaron: And inſtead of the Sons of Aaron, the Prieſts were afterwards call'd the Sons of Zadoc: And inſtead of the Houſe of Aaron, the Stile ran, the Houſe of Zadoc.

Ezek. 43, 19.
—44. 15.
—48. 11.
2 Chron. 31. 10.

“'Tis likewiſe obſervable, the Temple Oeconomy was wholly Divine, expreſly order'd by God himſelf, and not left to the Diſcretion of any humane Authority. From whence it follows, that tho' the Sentence of Solomon againſt Abiathar had been of an Eccleſiaſtical Nature; tho' it had amounted not only to Deprivation, but Degradation, it cou'd not however have been urg'd as a Precedent for the Prerogative of ſucceeding Princes. For this ought to be look'd on as an exempt and privileg'd Caſe: It ought to have been reckon'd a principal Part of the new Regulation of the Courſes of the Prieſts; which Diſtribution was particularly commanded by God to David: And accordingly the Scripture informs us that Solomon put this Order in Execution. The Words run thus: And he appointed according to the Order of David his Father, the Courſes of the Prieſts to their Service: For ſo had David the Man of God commanded.

“Laſtly, If Abiathar, or Eli before him, of the Houſe of Ithamar, had uſurp'd the ſupreme High-Prieſthood from Zadoc, and his Predeceſſors, of the Houſe of Eleazar, as Joſephus ſeems to ſuppoſe (u). If the Caſe ſtood thus, Solomon's removing Abiathar, and putting Zadoc in his Place, was no more than reſtoring the right Line. Now this being only a civil Controverſie, the Caſe was to be determin'd by examining Records, and inſpecting Genealogies: All which belongs to a Court of Juſtice, and lies within the ordinary Juriſdiction of Princes.

2 Chr. 8. 14.

The Authorities from the New Teſtament and the Fathers ſeem inconcluſive.

“To proceed, there are ſeveral Texts in the New Teſtament alledg'd in proof of the Regale. For inſtance, Chriſt himſelf was obedient to Civil Government, paid Taxes, declar'd he pretended to no earthly Kingdom, charg'd the People to render to Cæſar the Things that were Cæſar's, and forbad his Diſciples the affecting Temporal Dominion. Thus the Apoſtles wrote to the Churches to obey Magiſtrates: And tho' the Government was then Pagan, they call the King Supreme, pronounce him God's Miniſter, and charge every Soul to be ſubject to the Higher Powers. And to this purpoſe ſeveral of the Fathers are cited.

But theſe Texts and Authorities prove no farther than the King's Supremacy over all Perſons; now this, as has been already obſerved the Engliſh Clergy did not deny. Beſides, thoſe who argue in this manner, ſeem to conſider the Church only as a Sect, and not as a Society. They ſuppoſe it a Member of the State, and as it were abſorb'd in it. Whereas by divine Appointment, the Church and State are Two Bodies perfectly diſtinct. They are rais'd upon different Charters: They have Powers independent of each other: The Government is convey'd thro' different Channels, and the Views in the Inſtitution are not the ſame (w).

King Henry ſeems to be apprehenſive of the Hierarchy's being independent in Matters purely ſpiritual. He was ſomewhat ſenſible the twentieth of the Acts, and the thirteenth to the Hebrews, lay heavy upon the Regale; and therefore he deſired if it were poſſible, to be diſentangl'd from thoſe Texts. But what Satisfaction he met with, I cou'd not diſcover *.

As to the Precedents taken from the Roman Emperors, and particularly from the Juſtinian Code, I ſhall ſpeak to that Point afterwards (x). To conclude, the Articles of Clarendon, the Conteſts between King Henry the Second, and Archbiſhop Becket; the Royal Exemptions of Abbeys from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, and the Laws of the Saxon Princes, fall ſhort of the purpoſe for which they are brought (y).

(t) Antiquit. lib. 7. cap. 11.

(u) Antiq. lib. 8. cap. 1.

(w) Mat. 16. 19. Joh. 20. 22, 23. Acts 20. 28. Heb. 13. 7. 17.

* Libr. Cotton.

(x) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 141.

(y) See my Eccleſiaſt. Hiſt pt. 1.

AN
Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory
OF GREAT BRITAIN,
CHIEFLY OF ENGLAND.

PART II. BOOK II.

THE diſcharging the Papal Supremacy carried a new face, and was ſomething of an Eccleſiaſtical Revolution. However, many of the Biſhops, who had conſulted the Records, and examined the Practice of the earlieſt Ages, were not diſinclin'd to this Change. Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter ſeem'd the moſt averſe to theſe Meaſures. Now this Prelate being a Perſon of Character both for Learning and Regularity, 'twas thought adviſable to omit nothing towards his Satisfaction. To bring this about, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury made a Propoſal: The Terms were theſe: The Biſhop of London, Stokeſly, was to chuſe five Doctors, and Fiſher as many: Theſe Twelve were to meet; and at this Conference the Queſtion was to be diſcuſs'd, and the Authorities examin'd: That by this means they might be brought to an Uniformity of Opinion, and prevent the Scandal which might be taken at their Diſagreement. Fiſher accepting this Expedient, Stokeſly wrote to him that he was ready; deſired Him to name Time and Place: And in caſe they ſhou'd not be ſucceſsful enough to ſettle the Matter, he propos'd the referring it to two learned Men choſen by themſelves. How far this Offer went is not certain; 'tis poſſible Fiſher's Sickneſs might make it miſcarry (z).

Endeavours us'd to ſatisfy Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter.

Jan. 6. 1533.

(z) Biblioth. Cotton. Otho C. 10.

On the ſifteenth of January the Parliament ſat: And here of the Lords Spiritual none but the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of London, Wincheſter, Lincoln, Bath and Wells, Landaff, Carliſle, and twelve mitred Abbots, were preſent (a). How the reſt excuſed their Abſence is ſomewhat uncertain. 'Tis poſſible they thought their being paſſive under the Buſineſs in hand was Complyance enough. During this Seſſion a Biſhop preach'd every Sunday at Paul's-Croſs againſt the Pope's Supremacy. This was done to open the Underſtandings of the People, and prepare 'em to acquieſce in the Proceedings of the Parliament. And now the Pulpits began to claſh in ſeveral Places of the Kingdom. For the Purpoſe: At Briſtol, Latimer afterwards Biſhop of Worceſter, preach'd to the Doctrine of Paul's-Croſs, and was contradicted by one Hobberton and Dr. Powel. Theſe Conteſts amongſt the Clergy broke the Laity into Parties (b).

(a) Journal Procer.

Biſhops preach againſt the Pope's Supremacy at St. Paul's-Croſs.

(b) Stow Annal, p. 571.

I ſhall now proceed to a brief Recital of the Statutes relating to the Church. In the firſt Place, This Parliament ſent up a Complaint preferr'd by one Thomas Philips againſt the Biſhop of London: The Complainant ſet forth, he had been impriſon'd, and treated with Rigour upon ſuſpicion of Hereſy. This Application being overlook'd, as not material, by the Lords, the Commons

March 1. 153$^{3}_{4}$.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

The Biſhops Peerage own'd by the Houſe of Lords.

mons ſent ſome of their Members to the Biſhop, requiring his Anſwer to the Complaint: The Biſhop acquainting the Houſe of Lords with it the next Day, they unanimouſly reſolv'd, that it was not fit for any of the Peers to appear or anſwer at the Bar of the Houſe of Commons *.

* Journal Procer.

A Repeal of 2H.4. cap.15. concerning Hereſy.

The Commons conceiving the Biſhops Courts were too far empower'd by the Conſtitution for the puniſhing of Hereticks, drew a Bill for the Repeal of 2 H. 4. cap. 15. which paſs'd both Houſes. The Preamble ſets forth, that by Authority of Parliament holden in the Year and Reign above mention'd, it was Enacted, That it ſhould be lawful for every Ordinary to convent, arreſt, and impriſon any Perſon or Perſons whom they thought defam'd or ſuſpect of Hereſy, and them to keep in their Priſons till they were purg'd thereof or abjur'd, or committed to Lay-Power to be burnt, after the Determination of the holy Church and Canonical Sanctions. ——— But foraſmuch as the ſaid Act does not in any Part of it declare any certain Caſes of Hereſy contrary to the Determination of holy Scripture, or the Canonical Sanctions therein expreſs'd, whereby your moſt loving and obedient Subjects might be learned to eſchew the Dangers and Pains in the ſaid Act compriz'd, and to abhor and deteſt that foul and deteſtable Crime of Hereſy. And alſo becauſe thoſe Words Canonical Sanctions, and ſuch other contain'd in the ſaid Act, are ſo general that unneth the moſt expert and beſt learned Man of this your Realm, diligently lying in wait upon himſelf, can eſchew and avoid the Penalty of the ſame Act and Canonical Sanctions; if he ſhou'd be examin'd upon ſuch captious Interrogatories as is, and hath been accuſtomed to be miniſter'd by the Ordinaries of this Realm, in Caſes where they will ſuſpect any Perſon or Perſons of Hereſy. And over this foraſmuch as it ſtandeth not with the right Order of Juſtice and good Equity, that any Perſon ſhou'd be convict, or put to the Loſs of his good Name, or Goods unleſs it were by due Accuſation and Witneſs, or by Preſentment, Verdict, Confeſſion or Proceſs of Outlawry: And alſo by the Laws of your Realm for Treaſons committted to the Peril of your moſt Royal Majeſty, upon whoſe Surety depends the whole of this Realm, no Perſon can, ne may be put to death but by Preſentment, Verdict, Confeſſion or Proceſs of Outlawry as is aforeſaid. Wherefore 'tis not reaſonable that any Ordinary by any Suſpicion conceiv'd of his own Fantaſie without due Accuſation or Preſentment ſhou'd put any Subject of this Realm in the Infamy and Slander of Hereſy, to the Peril of Life, Loſs of Name and Goods. And that alſo there be many Hereſies and Pains and Puniſhments for Hereſies declared and ordained in and by the Canonical Sanctions, and by the Laws and Ordinances made by the Popes or Biſhops of Rome, or by their Authorities for holding, doing, ſpeaking or preaching of things contrary to the ſaid Canonical Sanctions, Laws and Ordinances which be but human, being repugnant and contrarious to the Prerogative of your Imperial Crown, Regal Juriſdiction, Laws, Statutes, Ordinances of this your Realm.

Upon theſe Conſiderations 2 H. 4. cap. 15. is repeal'd. But notwithſtanding the Subject is thus reliev'd, People are not left at Liberty to deſert the then Church, and publiſh what Doctrines they pleaſe. For the Statute continues the old capital Puniſhment; only there's ſome Benefit allow'd in the Form of the Tryal, and the Writ de Heretico Comburendo is made neceſſary to the Execution. I ſhall tranſcribe two Paragraphs by which the Meaning and Advantage of the Act may ſufficiently appear.

And be it farther Enacted, &c. that every Perſon or Perſons being preſented or indicted of any Hereſy, or duly accuſed or detected thereof by two lawful Witneſſes at the leaſt to any Ordinaries of this Realm having Power to examine Hereſies, ſhall and may after ſuch Accuſation or Preſentment and none otherwiſe, nor by any other means be cited, convented, arreſted or apprehended by any of the ſaid Ordinaries or any other the King's Miniſters and Subjects whoſoever. And after they ſhall be ſo taken and apprehended ſhall be committed to the Ordinaries to anſwer in open Court, and in an open Place to their ſuch Accuſation and Preſentments. And if they happen to be lawfully convicted, and then abjur'd, their Penance was remitted to the Diſcretion of their Ordinaries: But if they refuſed to abjure or relaps'd after the Abjuration, they were then to be burn'd in Terrorem.

The next Paragraph runs thus:

And where the great Number of the King's Subjects having little or no Learning, or Knowledge of Letters, have been put in Opinion that by divers Laws, Decrees, Ordinances, and Conſtitutions, heretofore made by the Biſhop of Rome, call'd the Pope, and his Predeceſſors, or by their Authorities for the Advancement of their worldly Glory and Ambition, every Man that in any thing doeth or ſpeaketh againſt the ſaid pretenſed Power or Authority of the ſaid Biſhop of Rome, or any the ſaid Laws, Decrees, Ordinances and Conſtitutions ſtands in danger, and is impeachable of Hereſy, which Effect or Matter, nor any ſuch Laws, Decrees, Ordinances and Conſtitutions, not approved and confirmed by holy Scripture, was never commonly accepted nor confirm'd to be any Law of God or Man within this Realm. Wherefore be it Enacted and Ordained by Authority of this preſent Parliament, that no manner ſpeaking, doing, communication or holding againſt the ſaid Biſhop of Rome, or his pretenſed Power or Authority made or given by human Laws or Policies, and not by holy Scripture: Nor any ſpeaking, doing, communication or holding againſt any Laws call'd Spiritual Laws made by Authority of the See of Rome by the Policy of Men, which be repugnant or contrarious to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, or the King's Prerogative Royal ſhall be deem'd, reputed, accepted or taken to be Hereſy. Nor any Subject or Reſiant of this Realm ſhall be impeach'd or troubled for the ſame.

By this Act 5 R. 2. cap. 5. and 2 H. 5. cap. 7. are expreſly continued *.

* 25 H. 8. cap. 14. Statutes at large. See my Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 614, 615.

To proceed: the next Act of this kind ties up the Clergy from making any Conſtitutions againſt the Royal Aſſent (d). The Preamble runs thus:

(d) 25 H. 8. cap. 19.

Where the King's humble and obedient Subjects the Clergy of this Realm, have not only knowledg'd according to the Truth, that the Convocations of the ſame Clergy is, always has been, and ought to be aſſembled only by the King's Writ, but alſo ſubmitting to the King's Majeſty, have promis'd in Verbo Sacerdotii that they will never from henceforth preſume, to attempt, alledge, claim or put in ure, enact, promulge or execute any new Canons, Conſtitutions, Ordinance Provincial, or other; or by whatſoever other Name they ſhall be call'd in the Convocation, unleſs the King's moſt Royal Aſſent and Licenſe may to them be had, to make, promulge and execute the ſame: And that his Majeſty do give his moſt Royal Aſſent in that Behalf. This Submiſſion is paſs'd into an Act.

A Remark upon this Preamble.

Before I go farther, 'twill not be improper to take notice of one Paſſage in this Preamble, where 'tis ſaid, The Clergy of this Realm of England have have knowledged according to the Truth, that the Convocations always have been, and ought to be aſſembled only by the King's Writ. And here it may be ſaid the Penner of this Act did not conſult the ancient Practice. For nothing is more certain, than that the Convocation met frequently by the ſole Authority of the Archbiſhop: And that the Clergy inſiſted upon this Method of Summons, as one Branch of the Liberties of holy Church: And that they were thus ſummon'd we have two Inſtances in this Reign. They were once conven'd without the King's Writ under Archbiſhop Warham; and afterwards they met by Virtue of Cardinal Wolſey's Legantine Authority (e).

(e) A. D. 1509, 1523. Bp. Wake, State of the Church, &c. p. 9, 10. See my Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1. Biſhop Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 20.

'Tis certain the Clergy in Convocation had acknowledg'd what the Preamble ſets forth: But then that this Acknowledgment was according to the Truth, is more than what appears. Now with all due Submiſſion to the Legiſlative Authority, I hope 'tis no Diſregard to ſay, that thoſe who draw a Bill may be ſomewhat unacquainted with Hiſtory, and miſtaken in matter of Fact. Neither need we wonder a Miſ-recital of this kind ſhou'd paſs the Two Houſes. I ſay, we need not wonder at this, ſince the Clergy had led 'em into this Error in their Submiſſion to the Crown. For who cou'd have imagin'd the Clergy ſhou'd have fallen into ſuch an Over-ſight, wanted Skill or Courage to maintain their Privilege, and contradicted undoubted Records to their own Diſadvantage.

The Clergy not to meet in Convocation, nor to make any Canons without the King's Licenſe.

To go on with the Act: “ Several of the old Canons and Conſtitutions being complain'd of as prejudicial to the Prerogative Royal, burthenſome to the People, and contrary to the Statutes of the Realm, 'tis therefore enacted, that the King ſhall have Power and Authority to aſſign two and thirty Perſons, ſixteen of the Clergy, and ſixteen of the Laity, to examine, abrogate or confirm the Canons as they thought fit. 'Till ſuch a Review was made, all thoſe Canons which were not contrary to the Laws or Prerogative were to remain in Force. By the way, the executing this Commiſſion was limited to no Time, neither was it ever put in Practice.

Farther, “ All Appeals to Rome of what kind ſoever were prohibited. And that the Methods of Juſtice might not be defective, the Parties griev'd had the Liberty to appeal to the King in Chancery. In which Caſes a Commiſſion was to be directed under the Great Seal to ſuch Perſons as the King ſhou'd nominate, who were empower'd to determine and give final Judgment, as in Caſes of Appeal from the Admiral's Court. And here all Applications for Redreſs at the Court of Rome are forbidden under Præmunire.

The Monaſteries put under the Juriſdiction of the Crown.

“ And as for Abbots, Priors, and all Places exempt, and formerly under the immediate Juriſdiction of the Pope, theſe Religious Fraternities were to make their Appeal immediately to the Court of Chancery; neither were any Archbiſhops or Biſhops to diſturb their Applications to the King, or intermeddle with ſuch Matters.

By this laſt Clauſe, all the Religious inſtead of being return'd to the Juriſdiction of their Dioceſans, and Metropolitan, were put under the Regale, and the King is enacted their Ordinary. This Proviſion, we may imagine, was contriv'd to bring on the Diſſolution of the Abbies. For now the King was impower'd to viſit the Monaſteries, to inſpect their Behaviour, and proportion the Correction at his Pleaſure.

Payment of Annates wholly extinguiſh'd.

(f) 25 H. 8. cap. 20.

The next Act, (f) “ Advances to farther Diſengagements from the Pope; and extinguiſhes the Payment of Annates without any Reſerve. 'Tis likewiſe enacted, that from henceforth no Perſons ſhall be preſented, nominated or commended to the Pope or See of Rome, for any Archbiſhoprick, or Biſhoprick within this Realm. Neither ſhall any Perſon procure any Bulls, Briefs or Palls from the See of Rome, or pay any Annates or Sums of Money there.

From hence the Statute proceeds to ſettle the Elections of Biſhops.

“ The King upon the Vacancy of the See, was to ſend his Conge d'eſlire to the Dean and Chapter, or Prior or Convent, and in caſe they delay'd their Election above twelve Days, the Crown was impowered to nominate the Perſon by Letters Patents.

The Election of Biſhops ſettled.

“ And after the Biſhop or Archbiſhop thus elected and nominated had taken an Oath of Fealty to the King, his Majeſty by his Letters Patents under the Broad Seal ſignified the Election to the Archbiſhop, with Orders to confirm it, and conſecrate the Elect.

“ And laſtly, If the Perſons aſſign'd to elect and conſecrate, defer the performing their reſpective Offices for twenty Days, they were to fall under the Penalty of a Præmunire.

25 H. 8. cap. 21.

The Statute immediately following, takes notice what great Sums of Money had been carried out of the Kingdom, and how much the Subjects had been impoveriſh'd by the Exactions of the Biſhop of Rome. In the Recital of the Particulars there is mention made of Penſions, Cenſes, Peter-Pence, Procurations, Fruits, Suits for Proviſions, Expeditions of Bulls for Archbiſhopricks, and Biſhopricks, and for Delegacies and Reſcripts in Cauſes of Contentions and Appeals, Juriſdictions Legantine, and alſo for Diſpenſations, Licenſes, Faculties, Grants, Relaxations, Writs call'd perinde valere, Rehabilitations, Abolitions, and other infinite ſorts of Bulls, Briefs, and Inſtruments of ſundry Natures, &c.

All Payments for Faculties, &c. formerly made to the See of Rome prohibited.

The Parliament claims an Authority to abrogate all Humane Laws.

In this Preamble, the Parliament is ſaid to have an Authority to abrogate, null, amplify, diminiſh or diſpenſe with all humane Laws of this Realm. Under this Compaſs of Expreſſion, all Eccleſiaſtical Laws and Conſtitutions, as well as others, ſeem to be comprehended.

In the Body of the Statute, 'tis Enacted, “ That neither the King, his Succeſſors, nor his Subjects, ſhall for the future apply to the See of Rome, for any Diſpenſation, Faculty, Delegacy, &c. And becauſe it may be ſometimes neceſſary, that ſome ſuch Powers and Relaxations, &c. ſhou'd be lodg'd elſewhere, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury is impower'd to grant the King and his Subjects ſuch Faculties, &c. as had been formerly procured from the See of Rome. And here all Licenſes, &c. which were rated at Four Pounds and upwards, were not to be executed till confirm'd under the Broad Seal, and inroll'd in Chancery. And for all Faculties under this Sum, the Archbiſhop's Seal was ſufficient, unleſs the Parties deſir'd an Inrollment in Chancery.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury impower'd to grant Diſpenſations, &c.

The King impowered to commiſſionate Two Biſhops for this purpoſe, in caſe of the Archbiſhop's Refuſal.

“ In the Vacancy of the Arehbiſhoprick of Canterbury, the Guardian of the Spiritualties, is au-

" thoriz'd to grant ſuch Diſpenſations, &c. And " in caſe the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, or the " Guardian of the Spiritualties for the time be- " ing, ſhou'd refuſe the granting ſuch Faculties, " &c. the King is impower'd to direct a Com- " miſſion to Two ſuch Prelates as he thought fit, " to perform this Buſineſs, and anſwer the In- " tention of the Act.

And to prevent Miſconſtruction, 'tis provided that nothing in this Act ſhall be interpreted, as if the King and his Subjects intended to decline, or vary from the Congregation of Chriſt's Church in any things concerning the very Articles of the Catholick Faith of Chriſtendom, or any in other things declared by Holy Scripture and the Word of God, neceſſary for their Salvation.

" Tis provided, That neither the Arch-Biſhop " of Canterbury, or any other Perſon, ſhall have " any Power to viſit Religious Houſes: But that " all Redreſs, Viſitation, and Confirmation, " with Reference to ſuch Places, ſhall come from " the Crown by way of Commiſſion under the Broad " Seal.

The Subjects prohibited the going to General Councils.

" And under this Proviſo the Subjects are for- " bidden going out of the Realm to any Councils " whatever. And that all Religious Aſſemblies " ſhould be held within the King's Dominions. " The Penalty for ſuing to the See of Rome for " any Licenſe, Diſpenſation, &c. is Præmunire.

" And laſtly, the King by the Advice of his " Privy-Council, is impowered to alter the Con- " dition of Papal Indulgences, and to reform ſuch " Abuſes in 'em, as ſhou'd be diſcover'd; and " that all Perſons were bound to abide by his " Majeſty's Regulation, under the Forfeitures " above mentioned.

I muſt not omit the Saving in this Act, by which it is provided " That nothing in it ſhall be " prejudicial to the Archbiſhop of York, or to any " other Biſhop or Prelate of this Realm: But " that they may lawfully diſpenſe in all Caſes " in which they were wont to diſpenſe by the " Common Law or Cuſtom of this Realm.

25 H. 8. c. 22.

I ſhall juſt mention the Act of Succeſſion, becauſe the Clergy are concern'd in it.

" By this Act, the King's Marriage with the " Lady Catharine, who is now to be ſtil'd only " Princeſs Dowager, is declared void. The Mar- " riage with Queen Anne affirm'd, and her Iſſue " made inheritable to the Crown.

An Act for ſwearing the Subjects to the Succeſſion of the Iſſue of the Queen.

" And for the Eſtabliſhment of the Succeſſion " thus ſettled, all Perſons of full Age, as well " Spiritual as Temporal, are bound to ſwear " to maintain the Act. And the refuſing this " Oath is made Miſpriſion of Treaſon.

There are ſeveral Degrees of Conſanguinity and Affinity prohibited to marry by this Act: Upon which Occaſion, there is this remarkable Paſſage, which I ſhall cite in the Words of the Statute.

The Laws of God not diſpenſable by the Pope.

Which Marriages albeit they be plainly prohibited and deteſted by the Laws of God, yet nevertheleſs at ſome Times they have proceeded under Colours of Diſpenſations, by Man's Power, which is but uſurped, and of right ought not to be granted ne allow'd. For no Man of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he be, hath Power to diſpenſe with God's Laws, as all the Clergy of this Realm in Convocation, and the moſt part of all the famous Univerſities of Chriſtendom, and we alſo do affirm and think.

This Parliament there paſs'd a private Act, for depriving the Biſhops of Salisbury and Worceſter: They were Cardinal Campegio, and Hieromi de Ghinucci, both Italians. The former had diſoblig'd the King in the Management of the Divorce; but the latter was the King's Agent in Italy, and ſeems to have acquitted himſelf to Satisfaction, as may be collected from the King's Letter in which he ſolicits for a Cardinal's Hat for this Prelate.

The Preamble of the Act ſets forth that Perſons promoted to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, ought to reſide in the Kingdom, for the keeping Hoſpitality, providing for their Charge, and anſwering their Character in every reſpect. That the Biſhops of Sarum and Worceſter, living at the Court of Rome, exporting the Revenues of their Sees, amounting to Three Thouſand Pounds per Annum, to the impoveriſhing the Kingdom, and failing in the Requiſites abovemention'd: For theſe Reaſons their Sees are declar'd deſtitute of any Incumbent, and void in Law *.

This depriving of Biſhops by an Act of State, was unprecedented in this Kingdom. And this is the firſt Inſtance. William the Conqueror, who went fartheſt in the Exerciſe of the Regale, diſplac'd no Biſhops without Synodical Deprivation †.

Upon the riſing of the Parliament, Commiſſioners were appointed to require the Oath of Succeſſion in their reſpective Counties. They met with a General Compliance: But when it was tender'd to Biſhop Fiſher, and Sir Thomas More, late Lord Chancellor, they refus'd to go the whole Length of what was demanded. They were ready to ſwear to the Succeſſion, but not to the whole Act. The offenſive Paſſages in this Statute, ſeem to be theſe: viz. The Parliaments pronouncing againſt the Diſpenſation, with the firſt Marriage. Secondly, Their declaring for the Legality of Cranmer's Proceedings in the Divorce. And Thirdly, There were ſome pretty broad ſatyrical Expreſſions againſt the Pope's Supremacy. But which of theſe Particulars, or whether all of 'em, ſhock'd Fiſher and More, they wou'd not diſcover.

Fiſher Bp. of Rocheſter and Sir Thomas More, refuſe ſwearing to the whole Act.

Cranmer adviſ'd the admitting them to ſwear upon their own Terms, as appears by his Letter to Cromwell (g). Where he puts him in Mind, " That the Biſhop " of Rocheſter and Sir Thomas More, were willing " to ſwear to the Act, but ſcrupled the Pre- " amble. As for himſelf, he was at a Loſs about " the Grounds of their Exception. However, " he thought it would be ſerviceable to the King " and Kingdom, to receive the Oath upon thoſe " Terms. For by ſwearing to the Body of the " Act, they wou'd give a fair Occaſion to ſatiſ- " fie the Princeſs Dowager and the Lady Mary, " that they are not bound to inſiſt upon their " Titles and Pretenſions: That the Character " of theſe two Men, wou'd go a great way in " the ſilencing the Emperor, and other Foreign " Princes, and quiet the Conſcience of many " unſatisfied Perſons at home.

Apr. 17, 1534.

This was prudent and good-natured Advice. But the Court being not diſpos'd to make any Abatements, they were both committed to the Tower, where they continued till their Trial and Execution.

Frier Peto and Elſtow preach againſt the King's Second Marriage.

Some of the Religious went farther in their Oppoſition to the Second Marriage. For the purpoſe: One Frier Peto an Obſervant made a ſtrong

---

* 25 H. 8. c. 5. Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Records, p. 121.

† See my Ecclef. Hiſt. pt. 1.

(g) Biblioth. R. Harley, Armig.

Invective before the King upon this Subject. It was in the Chapel Royal at Greenwich. His Text was, the Prophet Elijah's Reproof of Ahab, where the Fate of that Prince is denounc'd in theſe Words, "In the Place where Dogs lick'd the Blood of Naboth, ſhall Dogs lick thy Blood, even thine. Peto quickly diſcover'd his meaning in taking this Text, and drove the Application ſtrong upon the King. He told him, "notwithſtanding the Countenance and Opinions of learned Men, his ſecond Marriage was altogether unlawful. As for himſelf, he was reſolv'd, like Micajah, to deliver ſome unacceptable Truths, tho' he was ſenſible he ſhou'd ſuffer for his plain dealing. He expected the Bread of Affliction, and the Water of Affliction, but pretended a Divine Commiſſion for his Freedom. Upon the Preſumption of this Warrant, he told the King, his Highneſs was furniſh'd with a great many Preachers to juſtifie his Marriage with Mrs. Boleyn: But that theſe were Men of no Sincerity: That they courted the King's Fancy, and apply'd to his Inclinations, for Wealth, and Promotion in the Church: That theſe were the Four Hundred Prophets poſſeſs'd by the Spirit of Lying: That their Buſineſs was to Deceive and make their Intereſt out of his Highneſs's Misfortunes. But he conjur'd the King not to be ſway'd by their Encouragement; letting him know withal, that lying expos'd to Flattery was the greateſt Unhappineſs in a Prince's Station.

1 King's 21, 19.

Theſe were extraordinary Sallies; however, the King bore the Reprimand with great Temper, and ſuffer'd Peto to go off without Trouble. But to prevent an ill Impreſſion upon the Audience; he ordered one Dr. Curwyn to Preach off the Malignity of Peto's Sermon. He came up in the ſame Place the next Sunday, and executed his Commiſſion with Vehemence enough; "He call'd Peto Dog, and ſeveral other Coarſe Names. And after having harangued in Commendation of the King's late Marriage; he call'd out for Peto, and challeng'd him to defend his intemperate Diſcourſe; and not being anſwer'd, he charg'd him with Cowardice, and Conſciouſneſs of Miſbehaviour. But Peto was not within hearing; he was gone to Canterbury to a Council. However, one Elſtow a Fryer of the ſame Order, excus'd his Abſence and appeared for him. This Elſtow undertook Curwyn's Sermon; proceeded upon the ſame Topicks with Peto, and rather exceeded in his Boldneſs and Reſolution. Neither was there any ſtopping him, 'till the King commanded him to hold his Peace; the next Day this Fryer and Peto were brought before the Privy-Council, and reprimanded there: Particularly, the Earl of Eſſex told 'em, they deſerv'd to be put in a Sack, and thrown into the Thames. At this Elſtow ſmiling, replyed; my Lord, ſays he, be pleas'd to frighten your Court-Epicures with ſuch Sentences as theſe: Men that have loſt their Courage in their Palate, and ſoften'd their Minds with Pomp and Pleaſure. Such People who are tied by their Senſes thus cloſe to the World; are more likely to yield to any thing. As for us, ſuch Menacing makes no Impreſſion; we count it an Honour to ſuffer for our Duty, and bleſs God for keeping us firm under Tryal. And as for your Thames, the Road to Heaven lies as near by Water, as by Land; and therefore 'tis indifferent to us which way we go thither.

Elſtow's Reſolution. Stow. Annal. p. 6. 562.

Theſe bold Remonſtrances were made the laſt Year, ſome little time before the Marriage with Queen Anne was publickly own'd: 'Tis probable therefore the Fryers might think their Diſcourſes were not too late, and that the King was not paſt retrieving.

Ibid.

A Meſſage to Queen Catharine to relinquiſh her Claim, but without Succeſs.

To come forward; After the Succeſſion Act was paſs'd, the King ſent another Meſſage to Queen Catharine then at Bugden; 'twas carried by Edward Lee, Archbiſhop of York, and Cuthbert Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham. They acquainted her Highneſs, that the holding up her Title of Queen, and inſiſting upon her Marriage, was ill taken by the King. Theſe Biſhops preſs'd the Objections home; and did their utmoſt to perſuade her to relinquiſh her Claim, but without Effect; as appears by their Letter to the King upon this Occaſion (h).

(h) See Records, N. 25.

The Impoſture of the Maid of Kent.

The King reſented the Queen's refuſal no farther than to retrench her Family; and remove thoſe Servants which appear'd moſt reſolved in maintaining her Pretenſions. However ſome others who were tampering with the People; counterfeited Revelations, and preſag'd Misfortune to the King, were ſeverely puniſh'd. One Elizabeth Barton, call'd the holy Maid of Kent, carried on an Impoſture for this Purpoſe. This Woman had for ſome time been troubled with Fits, which diſtorted her Limbs; and threw her Body into ſuch unuſual Agitations, that ſeveral People thought there was ſomething more than mere Diſeaſe in the Paroxyſm. This Diſtemper having held her for ſome time, put her in a Condition to practice the Poſtures. Perceiving herſelf thus qualified to ſurprize People, ſhe reſolv'd to make uſe of her Talent. She acquainted the Pariſh Prieſt with this Secret; who advis'd her to pretend to Prophecy and ſupernatural Impulſe. Thus when ſhe had brought the Fit upon her, ſhe wou'd lie as it were in a Trance, then break out into devout Ejaculations; declaim againſt the Wickedneſs of the Times, particularly againſt Hereſy and Innovation: Denounce Judgments with Glances and Innuendo's; pretend that when ſhe was in a Trance, ſhe was honoured by God Almighty with ſtrange Viſions. This Impoſture being artificially manag'd, made the common People look upon her as a Perſon inſpir'd: Nay, 'tis ſaid, the Underſtandings of ſome Perſons of great Character were ſurpriz'd by her: And that ſhe gain'd ſomewhat upon the Belief of two learned Biſhops, Warham and Fiſher. And now being grown bolder by Succeſs, ſhe gave out that ſuch a Day ſhe ſhould be perfectly recover'd, provided ſhe went in Pilgrimage to ſuch an Image of the Bleſſed Virgin. She was carried thither accordingly, and attended with abundance of People to ſee the Event. Upon ſaying her Devotions at the Image, the Paroxyſm went off, and ſhe appear'd perfectly cur'd. And now ſhe told the Company, ſhe was order'd by God Almighty to turn Nun, and to make one Dr. Bocking then preſent her Confeſſor. This Bocking a Monk of Canterbury undertook the Charge, and made her frequent Viſits. This Bocking and ſome others being apprehenſive the King's Marriage with Queen Anne might prove unſerviceable to the Religion Eſtabliſh'd, perſuaded this Nun to menace the King with Death, or the loſs of his Crown: She was hardy enough to be governed by this Advice, and made no Scruple to declare publickly; that in Caſe the King married another Wife living Queen Catharine, his Reign wou'd be at an end within a Month.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

She and her Accomplices confeſs the cheat, and are executed.

(i) 25. H. 8. cap. 12.

When the King was inform'd of theſe Treaſonable Prognoſtications; he order'd this pretended Propheteſs and her Accomplices to be Impriſon'd. Thus the Plot being laid before the Parliament, they were Attainted of High Treaſon. (i) The reſt of the Criminals beſides Elizabeth Barton, viz. Maſters, a Pariſh Prieſt, Bocking above mention'd, Deering and Riſby, Monks, and Gold Prieſt; and ſome others, as Addiſon Chaplain to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, Ably, Prieſt, Laurence, Regiſter to the Archdeacon of Canterbury, and Thomas Gold Gentleman, were found guilty of Miſpriſion of Treaſon; for concealing the Impoſture, and not diſcovering it to the Government (k). Barton with thoſe concern'd in the Impoſture were ſome time before brought into the Star-Chamber, where they confeſs'd the Cheat: They were order'd to ſtand the next Sunday at Paul's-Croſs; and each of 'em to deliver a Paper of their Confeſſion to the Preacher, which was accordingly put into the Biſhop of Bangor's Hand, who Preach'd there that Day; and gave an Account of their Treaſonable Practice to the Audience. From hence they were committed to the Tower, and attainted in Parliament, as has been already obſerv'd.

(k) Godwyn Annal. p. 53.

November 1533.

1534. Her Speech at the Place of Execution.

On the Twentieth of April, This Elizabeth Barton, with the reſt attainted of High Treaſon, were executed at Tyburn, and their Heads ſet on the Gates of the City. “The Nun own'd her Crime at the Place of execution, and told the Company, ſhe ſuffer'd juſtly; and lamented her being the occaſion of bringing others to the ſame Misfortune. However, as to this particular, ſhe endeavour'd to extenuate her Crime, upon the Score of her Ignorance. She ſaid thoſe Learned Men that ſuffered with her, might eaſily have look'd thro' the Deluſion; and diſcover'd her a Counterfeit: But becauſe I gave out acceptable Predictions, and humour'd their Intereſt, they cryed me up for a Propheteſs; and made me believe, I ſpoke by ſupernatural Direction. And thus being intoxicated with their Commendation, I fancied my Character wou'd bare me out in any Lengths of foul Practice. After this Confeſſion, ſhe beg'd God, and the King's Pardon, and deſir'd the Company to pray for her, and the other Criminals (l).

Hall. (l) Hollingſhead. p. 937.

Sanders makes a Martyr of this Maid of Kent, and the reſt that were executed with her. This is ſtrange, when they confeſs'd the Impoſture; but to fail both in Truth and Temper is too Common with this Hiſtorian (m).

(m) Sanders de Schiſm. Anglic p. 117.

It ſeems Biſhop Fiſher and Sir Thomas Moor had held ſome Correſpondence with this Maid of Kent; but there appearing no Malignity in this Commerce, the King accepted their Submiſſions, and prevented the paſſing the Bills againſt 'em. Sir Thomas Moor's Letter to the King upon this Occaſion, is to this Effect.

Sir Thomas Moor's Letter to the King.

(n) Biblioth Cotton. Cleop. E 6. fol. 181.

“He clears himſelf of having any Communication with the Maid of Kent to the King's diſſervice (n). And for this he refers his Majeſty to his Letter lately written to Secretary Cromwell: He takes the Freedom to tell the King, that if he ſhou'd miſcarry, and fall under the Forfeiture of the Law; either by Bill of Attainder, or otherwiſe; he ſhou'd have the Satisfaction, after his own ſhort Life, and the King's long one, (as he wiſhes it) was over: After this he ſaid, he ſhou'd have the Satisfaction to meet his Highneſs once again, and be merry with him in Heaven; where amongſt other Pleaſures this wou'd be one, that his Majeſty wou'd clearly ſee there, what ever his Opinion might be now; that he had always been his faithful Subject. In the cloſe of the Letter he deſires the King, that no Bill of Attainder may paſs againſt him; becauſe it muſt be drawn upon untrue Suggeſtions, miſreport him to the World, and ſtick a Blemiſh upon his Memory.

To this I ſhall ſubjoin Biſhop Fiſher's Letter to the Houſe of Lords. 'Tis an Original, and I ſhall lay it before the Reader in his own Words (o).

(o) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 166.

My LORDS!

“After my moſt humble Commendations unto all your good Lordſhips, that ſit in this moſt high Court of Parliament; I beſeech in like manner to hear and to tender this my Suit which by Neceſſity I am now driven to make unto all your Lordſhips in Writing, becauſe I may not by reaſon of Diſeaſe and Weakneſs at this time be preſent my ſelf before you; without Peril of Deſtruction of my Body, as heretofore I have written to Mr. Cromwell; which gave me no Comfort to obtain of the King's Grace, Reſpite for my Abſence till I be recover'd. If I might have been preſent my ſelf, I doubt not but the great Weakneſs of my Body, with other manifold Infirmities, wou'd have mov'd you much rather to have Pity of my Cauſe and Matter; whereby I am put under this grievous Trouble.

“So it is my good Lords, That I am inform'd of a certain Bill that is put into this high Court againſt me and others concerning the matter of the Nun of Canterbury; which thing is to me no little Heavineſs, and moſt ſpecially in this piteous Condition that I am in.

“Neverthelefs, I truſt in your Honour's Wiſdoms and Conſciences, that you will not in this high Court, ſuffer any Act or Condemnation to paſs againſt me; till my Cauſe may be well and duly heard. And therefore in my moſt humble wiſe, I beſeech all you my Lords in the way of Charity, and for the Love of Chriſt; and for the mean ſeaſon, it may pleaſe you to conſider that I ſought not for this Woman's coming unto me; nor thought in her any manner of Deceit. She was the Perſon that by many probable and likely Conjectures, I then reputed to be right honeſt, religious, and very good and vertuous. I verily ſuppos'd, that ſuch Feigning and Craft, compaſſing of any Guile or Fraud had been far from her: And what Default was this in me, ſo to think, when I had ſo many probable Teſtimonies of her Virtue?

“Firſt, The Bruit of the Country which generally call'd her the Holy Maid.

“Secondly, Her Entrance into Religion upon certain Viſions which was commonly ſaid that ſhe had.

“Thirdly, For the good Religion and Learning that was thought to be in her ghoſtly Father, and in other virtuous and well learned Prieſts that then teſtified of her Holineſs, as it was commonly reported.

“Finally, My Lord of Canterbury, that then was both her Ordinary and a Man reputed of high Wiſdom and Learning, told me that ſhe had many great Viſions. And of him I learn'd greater things than ever I heard of the Nun herſelf.

“Your Wiſdoms, I doubt not, here ſee plainly that in me there was no default to believe this Woman to be honeſt, religious, and of good Credence.

“For ſith then I am bounden by the Law of God, to believe the beſt of every Perſon, until the contrary be prov'd; much rather I ought ſo to believe of this Woman, that had then ſo many probable Teſtimonies of her Goodneſs and Virtue.

“But here 'twill be ſaid, that ſhe told me ſuch Words as was to the Peril of the Prince, and of the Realm. Surely I am right ſorry to make any Rehearſal of her Words, but only that Neceſſity ſo compels me now to do.

“The Words that ſhe told me concerning the Peril of the King's Highneſs were theſe: She ſaid that ſhe had her Revelation from God, that if the King went forth with the Purpoſe that he intended, he ſhou'd not be King of England ſeven Months after; and ſhe told me alſo, that ſhe had been with the King and ſhew'd unto his Grace the ſame Revelation.

“Tho' this was forg'd by her or any other, what Default is mine, that knew nothing of that Forgery? If I had given her any Counſel to the Forging this Revelation, or had any Knowledge that it was feigned, I had been worthy great Blame and Puniſhment. But whereas I never gave her any Counſel to this Matter, nor knew of any forging or feighning thereof, I truſt in your great Wiſdoms that you will not think any Default in me touching this Point.

“And as I will anſwer before the Throne of Chriſt, I knew not of any Malice or Evil that was intended by her, or by any other earthly Creature unto the King's Highneſs: Neither her Words did ſo ſound that by any temporal or worldly Power, ſuch thing was intended, but only by the Power of God, of whom, as ſhe then ſaid, ſhe had this Revelation to ſhew unto the King.

“But here it will be ſaid, that I ſhou'd have ſhew'd the Words unto the King's Highneſs. Verily if I had not undoubtedly thought that ſhe had ſhew'd the ſame Words unto his Grace, my Duty had been ſo to have done. But when ſhe her ſelf, which pretended to have had this Revelation from God, had ſhew'd the ſame; I ſaw no Neceſſity why that I ſhou'd renew it again to his Grace. For her eſteemed Honeſty, qualified, as I ſaid before, with ſo many probable Teſtimonies, affirming unto me that ſhe had told the ſame unto the King, made me right aſſuredly to think, that ſhe had ſhew'd the ſame Words to his Grace.

“And not only her own Saying thus perſuaded me, but her Prioreſs's Words confirm'd the ſame, and their Servants alſo reported to my Servants that ſhe had been with the King. And yet beſides all this, I knew it, not long after by ſome others that ſo it was indeed. I thought therefore that it was not for me to rehearſe the Nun's Words to the King again, when his Grace knew them already, and ſhe her ſelf had told him before. And ſurely divers other Cauſes diſſuaded me ſo to do, which are not here openly to be rehears'd. Nevertheleſs when they ſhall be heard, I doubt not but they will altogether clearly excuſe me as concerning this Matter.

“My Suit therefore unto all you, my honourable Lords, at this time is, that no Act of Condemnation concerning this Matter be ſuffer'd to paſs againſt me in this high Court before that I be heard, or elſe ſome other for me; how that I can declare my ſelf to be guiltleſs herein.

“And this I moſt humbly beſeech you all, on your charitable Goodneſſes, and alſo if that peradventure in the mean time there ſhall be thought any Negligence in me for not revealing this Matter unto the King's Highneſs, you for the Puniſhment thereof which is now paſt, ordain no new Law; but let me ſtand unto the Laws which have been heretofore made, unto the which I muſt and will obey.

“Beſeeching always the King's moſt noble Grace, that the ſame his Laws may be miniſter'd unto me with Favour and Equity, and not with the ſtrickeſt Rigour. I need not here to adviſe your moſt high Wiſdoms to look up to God, and upon your own Souls in ordaining ſuch Laws for the Puniſhment of Negligences, or of other Deeds which are already paſt, nor yet to look upon your own Perils which may happen to you in like Caſes. For there ſits not one Lord here but the ſame, or other like may chance unto himſelf that now is imputed unto me.

“And therefore eftſoons I beſeech all your benign Charities to tender this my moſt humble Suit as you wou'd be tender'd if you were in the ſame Danger your ſelves: And this to do for the Reverence of Chriſt, for the Diſcharge of your own Souls, and for the Honour of this moſt high Court: And finally for your own Sureties, and others that hereafter ſhall ſucceed you. For I verily truſt in Almighty God that by the Succour of his Grace, and your charitable Supportations, I ſhall ſo declare my ſelf, that every Nobleman that ſits here, ſhall have good Reaſon to be therewith ſatisfied. Thus our Lord have you all, this moſt honourable Court, in his Protection. Amen.

The Death of Pope Clement the Seventh.

This Year, in September, Clement the Seventh departed this Life. Father Paul gives him a mix'd Character: He commends him for his Gravity and Reſervedneſs, but loads him with the Imputation of Covetouſneſs and Cruelty. He was ſucceeded by Cardinal Farneſe, who took the Name of Paul the Third (p).

About this time the King reſolving to feel the People's Pulſe touching the Diſſolution of Religious Houſes, made a gentle Attempt that way. Now the Obſervant Fryers having been the moſt clamarous againſt the Court Meaſures, he ſupprefs'd thoſe Fraternities at Greenwich, Canterbury, Richmond and elſewhere; and fill'd their Places with the Auguſtinians (q).

In November following the Parliament ſat after Prorogation. The firſt Act in this Seſſion relating to Church Matters, and being very remarkable, I ſhall lay it before the Reader. It gives a farther Eſtabliſhment to the King's Supremacy in theſe Words.

The King empower'd to viſit and reform all Hereſies, &c.

Albeit the King's Majeſty juſtly and rightfully is, and ought to be Supreme Head of the Church of England, and is ſo recogniz'd by the Clergy of this Realm in their Convocations, yet nevertheleſs for Corroboration and Confirmation thereof, and for Increaſe of Virtue in Chriſt's Religion within this Realm of England, and to repreſs and extirp all Errors, Hereſies, and other Enormities and Abuſes heretofore us'd in the ſame: Be it enacted by the Authority of this preſent Parliament, that the King our Sovereign Lord, his Heirs and Succeſſors, Kings of this Realm, ſhall be taken, accepted and reputed, the only Supreme Head in Earth of the Church of England, call'd Anglicana Eccleſia, and ſhall have and enjoy annex'd and united to the Imperial Crown of this Realm, as well the Title and Stile thereof, as all Honours, Dignities, Immu-

(p) Father Paul, Hiſt. of Council of Trent, p. 71.

(q) Lord Herbert, p. 379.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

Immunities, Profits, and Commodities to the ſaid Dignity of Supreme Head of the ſaid Church belonging and appertaining. And that our ſaid Sovereign Lord, his Heirs and Succeſſors, Kings of this Realm, ſhall have full Power and Authority from time to time, to viſit, repreſs, redreſs, reform, order, correct, reſtrain, and amend all ſuch Errors, Hereſies, Abuſes, Contempts, and Enormities whatſoever they be, which by any manner of Spiritual Authority or Juriſdiction, ought or may lawfully be reform'd, repreſs'd, order'd, redreſs'd, corrected, reſtrain'd, or amended, moſt to the Pleaſure of Almighty God, the Increaſe of Virtue in Chriſt's Religion, and for the Conſervation of the Peace, Unity and Tranquillity of this Realm, any Uſuage, Cuſtom Foreign Laws, Foreign Authority, Preſcription, or any Thing or Things to the contrary hereof notwithſtanding (r).

This Act grants the King full Power and Authority to viſit, order, and reform all Hereſies, Abuſes, &c. which by any manner of Spiritual Authority or Juriſdiction may lawfully be order'd or reform'd. This Clauſe declares the King ſupreme Ordinary, makes his Majeſty, and by conſequence thoſe commiſſion'd by him, Judges of Hereſy, and puts the Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline in their hands: And yet by the twentieth Article of our Reformation, the Church is ſaid to have a Power to Decree Rites or Ceremonies, and Authority in Controverſies of Faith (s). This Article pronounces the Church the Judge in Matters of Faith, and ſeems to contradict the Statute before us. But notwithſtanding this inconſiſtency, the Thirty nine Articles are not only confirm'd by the Ratification of two Kings; but likewiſe by an Act of Parliament in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth (t).

James I. Charles I.

Remarks upon the Statute.

Farther, It may be objected that Decius and Diocleſian were as abſolute in the Roman Empire, as the King and Parliament are in England; and that the Grand Seignior has now the ſame extent of Authority in Turky. The queſtion therefore is, whether by the grounds of this Act, (as it is ſometimes interpreted) theſe Princes might not be Judges in Matters of Faith, and manage the Government of the Church at Pleaſure? The next Queſtion is, whether upon this Scheme the Being of the Chriſtian Religion, does not lie at the Mercy of the Civil Government? And then the laſt Interrogatory will be, whether the Biſhops are not bound in ſome Caſes, to make a ſtand upon the Regale; to break thro' an Act of this nature in defence of their Creed; to run the laſt Hazards rather than throw up their Commiſſion, and deſert the Intereſt of Chriſtianity? If I had maintain'd the Affirmative of this laſt Queſtion, I ſhou'd have been ſupported by the Authority of the learned Biſhop Wake (u).

Now tho' I pretend to offer nothing deciſive upon this grand Queſtion, yet I hope it may not be an unacceptable Digreſſion, to enlarge a little upon the Subject, and give the Reader a ſhort View of both ſides of the Argument.

And here I ſhall begin with a Diſcourſe which I tranſcrib'd in the Paper Office. 'Tis drawn up with Advantage by a learned Hand: And argues for the utmoſt Extent of the Regale. 'Twas written, 'tis moſt probable, in the Reign of King Charles the Second, and is Entituled,

A Diſcourſe concerning his Majeſty's Supreme Power Eccleſiaſtical, eſtabliſh'd by the Laws of this Kingdom, at this preſent Time in their full Force and Vigour.

A Diſcourſe concerning the King's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy.

Hen. VIII. K. A. 25. Regni ſui.

“ WHereas in the Title of a Petition of the Clergy, for the Releaſe of the Præmunire, King Henry the Eighth was ſtiled the Protector and Supreme Head of the Church and Clergy of England, quantum per Legem Chriſti licet, as far as it was lawful by the Law of Chriſt, that doubtful Mitigation being offenſive to the King, the Clergy in their Synod unanimouſly, and without Ambiguity, declared him Supreme Head of the Engliſh Church. Omnium Sententiis ſine ulla Ambiguitate Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ Supremum Caput declaratus eſt. See Archbiſhop Parker's Antiquitates Britan. p. 326.

“ Shortly after upon a Paper ſent them from the King that no Conſtitution in their Synods, or Convocations ſhould be made, enacted, promulged, or exerciſed unleſs the King firſt give his Aſſent to their Deliberation and making; and afterwards approve the ſame under his Broad Seal, the Clergy made their abſolute Submiſſion. See the Act of Parliament, and King James his Declaration before the Conſtitutions, 1603; and King Charles the Firſt before the Canons, 1640.

25 H. 8. c. 19.

25 H. 8. c. 19.

“ In the aforeſaid Act, a Power is given the King, with the Advice of the major Part of thirty two Perſons whereof ſixteen to be Laymen, to reform all the old Canons and Decrees of the Church; which thirty two Perſons are to be choſen, and appointed by his Majeſty to annul ſuch Laws as ſhall be thought by the more part of them, worthy to be annulled; and to appoint and confirm ſuch others as ſhall be judged by them to ſtand with the Laws of God. See the Statutes whence this Power is given him during his Life, and the ſame was given to King Edward the Sixth. It is true that theſe Statutes were but temporary: Yet the Effect of them is now in Force, which is the Body of Eccleſiaſtical Laws, compiled by them, Entituled, Reformatio Legum Eccleſiaſticarum, printed ſeveral Times, with the Declarations of King Henry the Eighth, and King Edward the Sixth before them: And one of thoſe Laws, very remarkable and particularly belonging to his Majeſty's Supreme Authority in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, is this: Rex tàm in Archiepiſcopos, Epiſcopos, Clericos, & alios Miniſtros, quàm in Laicos, infra ſua Regna & Dominia, pleniſſimam Juriſdictionem tàm Civilem, quàm Eccleſiaſticam habet & exercere poteſt; cùm omnis Juriſdictio, & Eccleſiaſtica & Secularis ab eo tanquam ex uno & eodem fonte derivatur. All Juriſdictions Eccleſiaſtical, as well as Secular, is derived from him, as from the ſame and only Fountain of both.

27 H. 8. c. 15. & 35. H. 8. c. 16.

A. 3. & 4. E. 6. c. 11.

A. 1571, 1940, 1661.

“ And this great and fundamental Maxim for Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction in the Church of England, is founded upon the expreſs Words of ſeveral Statutes, giving all manner of Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Authority to the King, and taking it away from the Biſhops, except it be by Dependence and Delegacy from him, explained, and more particularly ſet down, in 1 Eliz. cap. 1. Where it is enacted, that ſuch Juriſdictions, Privileges, and Preheminencies Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical, as by any Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Power, hath heretofore been, or may lawfully be, exercis'd or us'd for the Viſitation of Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate and Perſons, and for Reformation of all manner of Errors, Hereſies, Schiſms, Crimes, Vices, &c. be for ever united to the Imperial Crown of the Realm. And 37 Hen. 8. cap. 17. Whereas the Royal Majeſty is juſtly Supreme Head in Earth of the Church of England, and hath full Authority to correct and puniſh all manner of Hereſies, Schiſms, Errors, Vices, and to exerciſe all other manner of Juriſdictions, commonly called Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction. It is added, That the

26 H. 8. c. 1.

(r) 26 H. 8. cap. 1.

(s) Sparrow's Collection, &c.

(t) 13 Eliz. cap. 12.

(u) The Authority of Chriſtian Princes over Eccleſiaſtical Synods.

Archbiſhop and Biſhops have no manner of Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical, but by, under, and from the Royal Majeſty.---- See alſo 1 Edw. 6. cap. 2. All Authority of Juriſdiction, Spiritual and Temporal, is derived and deducted from the King's Majeſty as Supreme Head of theſe Churches and Realms of England and Ireland, and ſo juſtly acknowledged by the Clergy of the ſaid Realms, and that all Courts Eccleſiaſtical within the ſaid two Realms, be kept by no other Power or Authority, either foreign or within the Realm, but by the Authority of his moſt excellent Majeſty.

" Amongſt theſe Juriſdictions, it is evident, that Excommunications, Suſpenſions, and Deprivations, ab Officio, and all manner of Diſpenſations belonging to the Church, are to be underſtood annex'd to the King: Not that it is affirm'd, that the King did ever exerciſe himſelf the Power of the Keys, but that this Right was annex'd to the Imperial Crown, That no Clergyman being a Member of the Church of England and Ireland, ſhou'd exerciſe it in his Dominions in any Cauſe, or any Perſon, without the Leave and Appointment of him the Supream Head of the Church, nor any forbear to exerciſe where he the Head commanded it. As before the Reformation, the inferior Clergy might not exerciſe any Church Cenſure, contrary to the Commands of their lawful Superiors, which Juriſdictions of their former ſpiritual Superiors, was now enſtated on the King: Not as one ſubordinate to any Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction herein, but as one by God primarily inveſted with the Diſpoſal thereof, from whom the Eccleſiaſtical Governours within his Dominions derive their Authority, as it is in the Preface of the forecited Statutes, and conſequently we find the King and Parliament authorizing Archbiſhops and Biſhops, &c. by vertue of their Act, to take Informations concerning the not uſing of the Form of Common-Prayer, and to puniſh the ſame by Excommunication. And in Statute 5 and 6 of Edw. 6. cap. 1. concerning the New Common-Prayer Book, it is enacted, that by vertue of that Act, the Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops ſhould puniſh by Cenſures of the Church, all Perſons who ſhall offend; which Clauſe, by vertue of that Act, implies that the Biſhops might not excommunicate and uſe the Church Cenſures for that Matter, without the King and Parliament's Licenſe, and ought to excommunicate in all Matters wherein the King and Parliament commands it: Whereby it is more clearly to be underſtood, that the Juriſdiction Spiritual aſcribed to the King or Queen, in the Acts aforementioned, involves the Juriſdiction of Excommunication, as well as others, if not exercis'd by himſelf and his Vicegerents, and other Commiſſioners, Lay-Perſons; (which Practice, notwithſtanding in King Henry the Eighth's Days, ſeems to be recorded and farther confirmed, by allowing them to be married Perſons in the Act 37 H. 8. cap. 17. See the Statute) yet ſo eſtabliſhed in the King, as to appoint when, and for what Matters the Clergy within his Realms ſhall execute, or not execute it; and indeed this is but ſuitable to the Act of Submiſſion: For if the Clergy may not make nor enjoin any new or old Spiritual Laws; if they may not correct what they judge Hereſies (as appears by the Statutes repealing the ancient Ways of Judging and Puniſhing of Hereticks) without the King's Conſent had thereto, it is but reaſonable they ſhould not excommunicate his Subjects, without his Conſent, for not obeying ſuch Laws, or for being thought guilty of ſuch Crimes.

2 E. 6. c. 1.

26 H. 8. c. 1. & 1 Eliz. c. 1.

Concerning the determining what are Hereſies. See 25 H. 8. c. 14. 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 1. 32 H. 8. c. 26. See 1 E. 6. c. 12. & 1 Eliz. c. 1. repealing the ancient Laws of H. 4. & 5. concerning Hereticks.

" As the Power of all Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures is enſtated in the King, ſo is that alſo of giving all manner of Licenſes, Diſpenſations, Faculties, Grants, &c. For all Laws and Conſtitutions merely Eccleſiaſtical, and in all Cauſes not being contrary to the Scriptures, and the Laws of God, it is not only taken from the Pope, but from the Clergy of this Church, and is committed to the King after the manner enacted, 25 H. 8. cap. 21. where the Archbiſhop is conſtituted the King's Inſtrument in giving the ſaid Licenſes, &c. But if he ſhall refuſe or deny to grant them, that then upon Examination had in the Court of Chancery, that ſuch Licenſes, Faculties, Diſpenſations, &c. as may be granted without offending againſt the Scriptures, the King ſhall command the Archbiſhop to grant them by a new Injunction, under a Penalty; and if he refuſe ſtill to do it, the King may appoint by his Commiſſion two ſuch ſpiritual Prelates, or Perſons, as will grant them.

" And for Appeals in Cauſes Spiritual, it is enacted, 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. Firſt, That no manner of Appeals ſhall be made out of the Kingdom. Secondly, That for lack of Juſtice in the Court of the Archbiſhops, Commiſſioners appointed by the King, ſhall have full Power and Authority to hear, and definitively to determine every ſuch Appeal, with the Cauſes and all Circumſtances concerning the ſame; and no farther Appeals to be made.

" Now for the Exerciſe of this Supreme Juriſdiction, it was enacted both in Henry the Eighth's Reign, and Queen Elizabeth's, Anno 1 Eliz. cap. 1. & Anno 8 Eliz. cap. 1. That the King ſhall have full Power and Authority, to name and authorize by Commiſſion under his Broad Seal, ſuch Perſon or Perſons, as his Majeſty ſhall think meet, ſo they be born Subjects of England, (Note, that King Henry was limitted to chuſe half of them Clergymen, which the preſent King is not) to execute and exerciſe under his Majeſty, all manner of Juriſdictions, &c. to viſit, reform, and amend all ſuch Errors, Hereſies, Schiſms, &c. which by any manner of Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Power, may lawfully be reform'd, &c. See the Statutes with the Proviſo, concerning the Judgment of Hereſie, according to the Canonical Scriptures, the Four firſt General Councils, or any other General Councils wherein the ſame is declared Hereſie, by the expreſs and plain Words of the ſaid Canonical Scriptures, the Judgment whereof belongs to the ſaid King's Vicegerent and Commiſſioners, or ultimately to the King himſelf, or ſuch as ſhall hereafter be judged and determined to be Hereſie by the High-Court of Parliament, with the Aſſent of the Clergy in their Convocation. In the ſame Statute of Queen Elizabeth it is added, that the Branches, Sentences, and Words of the ſeveral Acts made in King Henry the Eighth's time, touching Supremacy, and every one of them ſhall be deemed and taken to extend to her Highneſs, her Heirs and Succeſſors, as fully and largely as ever the ſaid Acts did extend to the late King Henry the Eighth. Whereby it appears, that tho' the Title Head was left off, yet the Supream Authority Eccleſiaſtical was united and annex'd to the Imperial Crown of England in Queen Elizabeth's Time, as fully “and largely as ever King Henry enjoy'd it, in ſome reſpect more advantageouſly.

“By Virtue of this Supremacy Eccleſiaſtical, Henry the Eighth commited the former Canons and Laws of the Church, to the Arbitrement of thirty two Perſons nominated by him, to be abrogated, corrected, reformed, as they with his Confirmation ſhould think meet; and ſo may his Majeſty now reigning do the like in regard of any Canons, Conſtitutions or Articles, ſo they be not ratified by Act of Parliament, with this Advantage above Henry the Eighth, that his Majeſty is not limited to any number of Perſons, nor obliged to nominate half of them Clergymen, but any Perſon or Perſons being natural born Subjects to his Majeſty, 1 Eliz. cap. 1. And by Virtue of this Supremacy, King Henry the Eighth did conſtitute the Lord Cromwell his Vicar-General in Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, to viſit, reform, and cenſure all manner of Perſons; and together with him and under him, were ſeveral other Officers and Judges, authoriſed with the King's Commiſſion (Lay-Perſons) to exerciſe and execute his Majeſty's Eccleſiaſtical Authority; and ſo may his Majeſty now reigning by force of the two forementioned Acts of the 1. and 8. of Elizabeth; which Vicegerent or Vicar-General is in Parliament to take Place of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. 31 Hen. 8. cap. and in the Synods, or Convocations of the Clergy, ſubſcribes his Name before the ſaid Archbiſhop, and according to the Commiſſion his Majeſty ſhall be pleas'd to give him, ſends out his Injunctions in the King's Name, viſits, reforms, corrects all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and in all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, uſing and exerciſing the Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures as he ſhall judge meet; and all this, tho' the ſaid Vicar-General be a Lay and Married Perſon. By virtue of this Supremacy Eccleſiaſtical, the King's Majeſty is made the ultimate Judge of Hereſie, and the Determinor of what is agreeable or repugnant to God's Law. And all his Subjects are obliged to receive, obſerve, and ſubmit unto the godly Inſtructions and Determinations ſet forth by his Majeſty. And if any Spiritual Perſon or Perſons ſhall preach or teach contrary to the Determinations which are or ſhall be ſet forth by his Majeſty, that then every ſuch Offender offending the third Time, ſhall be deemed and judged an Heretick, and ſhall ſuffer Pains of Death by burning. See the Statute, 34 & 35 Hen. 8. cap. 1. which tho' it be not in force in regard of the particular Matters therein contain'd, viz. Tyndal's Tranſlation of the Scripture, and the Confirmation of the Six Articles, yet the Ground-Work of the Statute, the King's Supremacy to all Intents and Purpoſes of the Determination of what is true or falſe, what is godly or ungodly, and what is conformable or repugnant to the Word of God, is ſtill in force, revived in Queen Elizabeth, and annexed to the Crown for ever. And his Majeſty may exerciſe this Power of determining what ought to be held and believ'd, by ſetting forth Books, and by his Proclamations as is expreſs'd in that Statute, by his Judgments in his Court of Chancery, and by his Determinations upon Appeals from the Sentence in the Archbiſhop's Court.

8 Eliz. c. 1.

37 H. 8. c. 17.

The Title of that Statute is, An Act for the Advancement of the true Religion, and for the Aboliſhment of the contrary.

25 H. 8. c. 21.

25 H. 8. c. 19.

“Since ſome Cauſes and Controverſies may happily come before him not determin'd by former Councils; How can Appeals be admitted to him from the Judgment of his Clergy, if he be to follow the Judgment of the Clergy in the things appealed in? It is true, that in the forementioned Act, the Printers are obliged to put the Superſcription and Subſcription, By the King and his Clergy: But the Meaning was not that the Clergy in Convocation had aſſented to it; but either that the King had communicated his Writing to ſome of his Clergy, as he did his famous Book call'd, A neceſſary Doctrine for all ſorts of People, which Book occaſioned this very Statute, as Dr. Heylin relates *; or that it was the Reſult of the major Part of the Thirty Two Perſons whereof Sixteen were Lay-Men †; or of Eight Perſons in King Edward the Sixth's Reign; or of Six Clergy, and Six Lay Men in the ſame King Edward's Time; according to whoſe Determinations, the Reformatio Legum Eccleſiaſticarum, (See the Preface) and the Ordinals for Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons come to be publiſhed by the Regal Juriſdiction in Spiritual Affairs. This great Prerogative of his Majeſty's Supremacy may be farther manifeſted by King Henry the Eighth's laſt Speech made in Parliament not long before his Death. And thoſe Words in Cromwell's Speech, (when he preſided as the King's Vicar-General over the Clergy aſſembled to ſtate ſomething in the Controverſies of Faith). That his Majeſty wou'd not ſuffer the Scripture to be wreſted and defaced by any Gloſſes or any Authority of Doctors or Councils.

3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 11.

See Ld: Herbert's Hiſt. p. 506

Fox Acts and Monuments, p. 1078.

“By virtue of this Supremacy, King Henry the Eighth put forth certain Injunctions concerning Matters of Faith and Diſcipline, intitled, Articles deviſed by the King's Highneſs to ſtable Chriſtian Quietneſs and Unity amongſt the People. In like manner, other Injunctions, Two Years after by his Vicegerent Cromwell, and others in the Year One Thouſand Five Hundred Thirty Nine; amongſt which it was ordered that Engliſh Bibles ſhould be provided and put in every Church, &c. And this laſt thing he did without any Conſent of his Clergy. King Edward the Sixth alſo by his Council, ſet forth his Injunctions; (nothing being defer'd herein becauſe of his Nonage, tho' this was much ſued for by ſome Biſhops) and in the Beginning of his ſecond Year by Proclamation, inhibited any to preach that had not the Licenſe either of his Unkle the Protector, or Archbiſhop Cranmer: And about the ſame time reſtrain'd the Biſhops themſelves (thought too actively buſie in divers places of their Dioceſſes) not to preach but in their own Cathedrals. At laſt by a Proclamation put forth September 23, he inhibited the whole Clergy throughout the Kingdom to preach in open Audience, in the Pulpit or otherwiſe, becauſe that his Majeſty minded to ſettle very ſhortly one uniform Order throughout this his Realm, and to put an End to all Controverſies in Religion; for which Cauſe at that Time, certain Biſhops and notable learned Men by his Highneſs's Command were congregated. Queen Elizabeth likewiſe ſent forth her Injunctions, A. D. 1559. before ſhe had any Clergy to ſit in Convocation, as ſhe did afterward Articles under Title of the Queen's Articles of Viſitation, and her Admonition: All which are lately printed in one Volume, with the Reformatio Legum Eccleſiaſticarum, and other things which concern'd the Reformation: By R. Norton. 1661. All which makes it evident, that his Majeſty by his Regal Juriſdiction, may deviſe, publiſh and conſtrain to be obſerved, ſuch Injunctions as may ſtable Chriſtian Quietneſs and

A. D. 1536.

Fuller's Ch. Hiſt. & Fox, p. 388.

---

* Hiſt. Ref. pag. 23.

† 32 H. 8. c. 26.

“Unity amongſt his People, and rectifie their Judgments in things that they ought to Believe and Practice, according to the Examples of his Royal Predeceſſors the Supreme Heads and Governours of this Church.

25 H. 8. cap. 20.

“By Virtue of this Supremacy, the Clergy are bound to admit and conſecrate, what Perſon ſoever the King ſhall preſent to any Biſhoprick, upon Penalty of incurring Præmunire; and the Conſecration is to be performed by ſuch, and ſo many as the King ſhall appoint; which Perſons are to do this Work not by virtue of any Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction in them: But as the King's Delegates, who by his Letters Patents Commands them to conſecrate the Elect Biſhop; and in them if there be any Canonical Defect or Impediment, the King by his Royal Supreme Spiritual Juriſdiction diſpences with it. Both which things are evident by the Patent for the Conſecration of Archbiſhop Parker in Queen Elizabeth: By the Inſtrument of the ſaid Archbiſhop's Confirmation, and by the Practice ever ſince.

25 H. 8. cap. 19.

“By Virtue of this Supremacy, as the Biſhops and Clergy of the Chruch of England and Ireland, cannot meet in any Aſſembly, Synod or Convocation, but by his Majeſty's Writ: So being convened, they cannot open their Mouths to deliberate or make any Conſtitutions touching Doctrine or Diſcipline; without the King's Aſſent firſt had under his Signet: And having made any Conſtitution they cannot enact, promulgate, publiſh, or put in uſe the ſame, before it be confirmed under his Majeſty's Broad-Seal.

See the Declaration of King James before the Canons, 1603. & King Charles I. before the Canons, 1640.

“By Virtue of this Supremacy his Majeſty may iſſue out a Commiſſion, to ſuch Perſon or Perſons as he ſhall think fit, to viſit, and enquire after the Management of the Church Revenues, and may correct and reform the Perſons, that do not expend them, according to the pious Uſes, for which they were beſtowed on the Church; and where thoſe Revenues are ill employed, his Majeſty may tranſlate them to pious Uſes; King Henry the Eighth, in the thirtyeth Year of his Reign, by his Letters Patents under the Great Seal; tranſlated the Prior and Convent of the Cathedral Church of Norwich, into the Dean and Chapter; and diſcharged them of their ſpecial Names which was in theſe Words.

“Authoritate ſuâ Regiâ, ac authoritate ſua in terra ſupremi Capitis, Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ, de gratia ſua ſpeciali &c. Cœnobium de Priore & Conventu Eccleſiæ Cathedralis, Sanctæ Trinitatis Norwici in Decanum & Capitulum Eccleſiæ Cathedralis Sanctæ Trinitatis Norwici, tranſpoſuit & mutavit; & ulterius conceſſit quod Decanus & Capitulum & Succeſſores ſui omnia & ſingula Dominia & Maneria, Terras &c. quæ ad prædictos nuper Priorem & Conventum &c. ſpectabant, habere, tenere, gaudere, & poſſidere ſibi & Succeſſoribus valeant. In this Caſe ſays Cook the Attorney General, the ſaid Tranſlation was good in Law by reaſon of the King's Supremacy as Head of the Church; and by Virtue of the Statute, 25 Hen. 8. and others, extinguiſhing the Pope's Juriſdiction; becauſe the Pope having anciently had that Power of the Oeconomy of the Church Revenues; and the ſame Authority that the Pope had, being given to the King by the ſame Statutes, ſuch Tranſlation of Church Revenue muſt needs be Legal.

Vid. Dean & Chapter of Norwich, Caſe, Cook's Reports, pt. 3. *fol.*73.

“Many more inſtances might be given of the Exerciſe of this Regal, Supream Eccleſiaſtical Authority and Juriſdiction; conſiſting with the other Laws of this Kingdom: But it may ſuffice to add this only concerning Penalties and Cenſures Eccleſiaſtical; That whatſoever the Biſhop of Rome cou'd lawfully do in the time preceding the Statute, 25 H. 8. either in Relaxation of the Penalty, or ſuſpencion of the inferior Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction; All that is now legally inſtated in the King, as is evident from theſe two Maxims univerſally acknowledged by Lawyers, and in the Statutes ſince that Time. Firſt, That all manner of Spiritual Juriſdiction, formerly lawfully exerciſed in England and Ireland, does now belong to the King. Secondly, That all Spiritual Juriſdiction exerciſed by any Subject in the ſaid Kingdoms, is held and exerciſed from, by, and under the King.

“And concerning Temporal Penalties, the Reſolution is to be grounded on this Maxim touching his Majeſty's Royal Prerogative: Every Offence or Crime, made Crime by Act of Parliament which is not Malum in ſe, the King before the Fact committed, may diſpenſe with the Act of Parliament, and give Power to commit the Fact; and all manner of Offences whatſoever, whether evil in themſelves, or not, the King after the Offence committed may pardon them.

Whether the Common Lawyers are proper Judges concerning the King's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy.

As to this Argument, my buſineſs being moſtly to report, I ſhall return nothing. But becauſe in the cloſe of the Diſcourſe, the Author lays the main ſtreſs of the Cauſe upon the Opinion of the Common Lawyers; I ſhall endeavour to prove, that the learned of this Profeſſion, are generally unqualified to determine in the Queſtion of the King's Spiritual Supremacy: Firſt becauſe they are unfurniſh'd with skill in Divinity, and unacquainted with the Sentiments and Practice of the Primitive Church.

Secondly, becauſe they go upon a wrong Ground.

Firſt, That the learned of the long Robe, are unfurniſh'd with skill in Divinity, and unacquainted with the Hiſtory of the Church, beſides common Experience, we have a famous inſtance in Croke's Reports (w). The Caſe was this: Sir Edward Coke late Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench, after having been diſcharg'd from that Place, was made Sheriff of Buckinghamſhire; and had a Dedimus Poteſtatem, to take the Sheriffs Oath. Sir Edward excepted againſt this Oath upon the ſcore of ſeveral Additions; he mentions four which were not in the ancient Oath of the Regiſter, afterwards confirm'd by the 18 of Edw. 3. Upon this account he conceived theſe Additions illegal, unleſs warranted by Parliament: The firſt Addition which I ſhall only mention was this. That, He ſhou'd ſeek to ſuppreſs all Errors and Hereſies commonly call'd Lollardies; and ſhou'd be aſſiſtant to the Commiſſaries and Ordinary in Church Matters: To which he certified, that the Statutes (x) upon which thoſe Clauſes againſt the Lollards were grounded, were repeal'd (y). Upon his refuſal of the Oath, the Lord Keeper ſent for all the Judges for their Opinion. Upon debating the Caſe, they came to this Reſolution: That this Clauſe in the Oath was fit to be omitted for two Reaſons. Firſt, Becauſe the Statutes which enjoyn it are repeal'd. Secondly, Becauſe theſe Statutes were intended againſt the Religion now profeſs'd and eſtabliſh'd; which before was condemn'd for Hereſy, and is now held for the true Religion.

But with due regard to the Memory of theſe Reverend Judges, this Reſolution of theirs goes upon a great miſtake. For Lollardiſm is widely different from the Doctrine and Conſtitution of

---

(w) fol. 18.

(x) 5 R. 2. c. 2. 2 H. 4. c. 15.

(y) 1 Eliz. c. 1.

the Church of England: 'Tis true, they declar'd againſt ſome Errors in the Church of Rome; but then they maintain'd very dangerous Tenents. And their Caſe was much like that of Diogenes, who trampled upon Plato's Pride, with a greater of his own. The Reader may ſee ſome of their Heterodoxies in the firſt Part of my Church Hiſtory: And in this ſecond Part, I have added a farther Collection; 'tis drawn out of their Books by a Committee of both Univerſities, and enter'd upon Warham's Regiſter. I ſhall only mention two of their Errors of the firſt Magnitude. First, They maintain taking away any Man's Life either in War or Courts of Juſtice, upon what account ſoever, is expreſly contrary to the New Teſtament (z). And in their Remonſtrance to the Parliament they pretended a Commiſſion from Heaven to preach this Doctrine.

See above.

Secondly, They held every Man was a Prieſt; and we need no other Prieſt, to be a mean for us unto God (a).

Now theſe two aſſertions are not only ſubverſive of all Government Eccleſiaſtical and Civil; but likewiſe directly contrary to the 23d, and 37th Articles of the Church of England. 'Tis evident therefore theſe Reverend Judges were unacquainted with the Lollards Tenents: They ſeem to have been miſled in their Reſolution by taking Fox upon Content. But this Martyrologiſt is plainly partial in his Report, abets ſome Errors, and is ſhort in the Lollards Defence (b).

Secondly, The learned of the Long Robe generally go upon a wrong ground: They lay the whole ſtreſs of the Argument upon the Opinions of Men of their Profeſſion; upon Precedents in Temporal Courts, and Proviſions in Parliament: Now granting all theſe Authorities ſhou'd declare in their Favour, this aſſiſtance can never ſettle the Point; this Foundation will never bare the weight they lay upon it. To diſcuſs the matter a little.

That God is the Fountain of all Juriſdiction both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, is beyond all Queſtion. This Aſſertion cannot be deny'd without renouncing Revealed Religion. The Caſe to be reſolv'd is this: Whether God has given the Clergy a Commiſſion independent of the State; whether our Saviour has intruſted the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors with the Government of the Church; or lodg'd it with the Laity and Civil Magiſtrate? And ſince the whole matter depends on the Pleaſure of God Almighty, which way can his Mind be known but by conſulting his Word? To clear this Doubt, we muſt inſpect the inſpir'd Writings, and have recourſe to the Uſage of the ancient Church: I ſay the ancient Church, who were neareſt the Divine Inſtitutions; who were ſo remarkable for Diſintereſt and Piety, and who had Miracles to recommend their Authority. Now to overlook the Scriptures, and the Primitive Practice which is the beſt Comment, is without doubt an odd way of managing the Controverſy! To reſt the Proof altogether upon Year Books, Reports, or even upon Acts of Parliament, is to argue upon a dangerous Topick. To throw the Scriptures out of the Diſpute, and cite the Statutes for a ſovereign Deciſion, does by inevitable Conſequence infer one of theſe two Things.

Either First, That the Laws of God may be ſet aſide at the Pleaſure of the Civil Power; that the Inſtitutions of our Saviour may be over-ruled by the State, and the New Teſtament repealed by an Act of Parliament! And if this Abſurdity is too rank not to be diſclaim'd: If they will allow God Almighty the Supreme Legiſlator, and own his Juriſdiction paramount to the Civil Government; Then from the Lawyers way of arguing in this Argument it follows in the, Second Place, that the Creed means nothing better than Prieſt-Craft, or State Policy: That Chriſtianity is an Impoſture; and the Old and New Teſtament a Collection of forg'd Records.

For if the Chriſtian Syſtem is a Revelation from Heaven; If the Scriptures are a Body of Divine Laws, and the authentick Declarations of our Bleſſed Saviour; why don't we apply thither for a Reſolution of the Caſe? Why don't we look upon them as deciſive Evidence, and appeal to them as the higheſt Authority? What makes us leave 'em out of the Queſtion, caſt the Cauſe upon a foreign Iſſue; and rely altogether upon Judicial Precedents, and Proviſions of Parliament? Can a Reſolution of the Bench, defeat a Goſpel-Settlement, or cancel a Charter from our Saviour? Can a human Law vacate a Divine Comiſſion, or recal an Authority from Heaven?

I hope I have a juſt regard for the Engliſh Conſtitution; could I have ſet aſide the Statute-Book, I might have oblig'd my Intereſt in ſome meaſure, and gone on with an eaſier Motion. Where Property or Civil Juriſdiction is concern'd, the Crown and the Three Eſtates have without Queſtion a Power to extinguiſh Title, and transfer Right; and the Conſcience of the Subject is bound to Acquieſcence. But I humbly conceive, we may ſafely ſay there's no Omnipotency in a Parliament. To affirm God Almighty's Prerogative, is above the reach of the Conſtitution; that his Judgments are not to be revers'd, nor his Grants ſet aſide by his Creatures; to affirm this, can be no diſregard to any Government.

From what has been obſerv'd it evidently follows, That the Independency of the Church upon the State in matters purely Spiritual, is a Queſtion which cannot be decided by the Municipal Law.

The next Conſequence is, that Common Lawyers in this Caſe, are no better Authority, than Men of any other Employment. 'Tis true if a Lawyer will ſtudy Divinity, examine the Scripture, read over the Fathers and Councils, and other Records of the earlieſt Centuries: If he will make himſelf Maſter of this part of Learning, and argue from Authorities of this kind; he ought to be believ'd as far as the intrinſick will bear, and the Proofs carry him; and ſo ought any Body elſe. But a Lawyer quatenus Lawyer, can have no Preference: He has no Commiſſion to give Sentence, nor any Privilege to pronounce upon the Matter. The point is quite foreign to his Character; and to caſt the Cauſe upon Authorities within his Profeſſion, is not to argue like a Perſon Baptiz'd. And which is ſomewhat harder, to rely upon ſuch Principles is to fall ſhort of the Heathen Religion. For all People on this ſide Atheiſm, will readily confeſs the Empire of the Supreme Being, is above Comptroll: And that no Human Law can operate againſt a decree of the Court in Heaven. I wou'd willingly believe Sir Edward Coke (c) and thoſe that follow him in defence of the Regale, were not aware of the Conſequences of their reaſoning. Men of Eminence eſpecially, ſhou'd keep their Conſcience awake when they treat this Subject. For without due Care, Arguments upon this head ſerve only to miſlead the Government; to fix the Church in a State of Oppreſſion, and draw a Perſecution upon the Creed. For in what Countries ſoever the Church cannot exerciſe the Powers given her by Chriſt, without running great Hazard, without forfeiture or Impriſonment; there it muſt be ſaid, the Profeſſion of Chriſtianity is made Penal in ſome Meaſure. The famous Gamaliel, tho' a Jew, was afraid of checking the Apoſtles in the diſcharge of their Office: He adviſ'd the Sanhedrim to let 'em alone, leſt haply they might be found to fight againſt God (d). But no more of this matter.

(z) Spelman Council Vol. 2. p. 646. &c.

(a) Fox Vol 2. p. 593.

(b) Fox, Vol. 1. p. 692. to 707. Vol. 2. p. 589. to 601.

(c) Reports pt. 5.

(d) Acts 5. 34, 38, 39.

The Act concerning the Supremacy abovemention'd having ſomething of a new Face, the King conſulted the Univerſities, the Clergy in Convocation, and ſeveral Religious Houſes before it was paſs'd. The Book likewiſe de vera differentia inter Regiam & Eccleſiaſticam Poteſtatem was publiſh'd upon this Occaſion. Theſe were thought proper Expedients to make way for the Regale, to take off the Charge of Novelty, and reconcile the Subject to the Act.

June 1. 1534. The Convocation of York, &c. declare againſt the Pope's Supremacy being Jure Divino.

To mention ſome of the Reſolutions of the Clergy upon this Point. In June laſt, Lee Archbiſhop of York ſent the King a ſort of an Addreſs from the Convocation of his Province: Here they renounce the Pope's Authority, and expreſly declare, that by the Word of God he has no more Juriſdiction in England than any other Biſhop (e). The ſame Proteſtation was made by the Biſhops of Litchfield and Coventry, St. David's, and Bath and Wells; by the Dean and Chapter of the See laſt mention'd, by the Prior and Chapter of St. David's, by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's St. Aſaph, Lincoln, and Landaff, together with four and thirty Abbots of the moſt conſiderable Monaſteries, with a great many Monks of their reſpective Houſes.

(e) See Records, N. 26.

The ſame done by the Convocation of Canterbury.

The Convocation of the Province of Canterbury ſeem to have led the way: For on the laſt of March this Year the Queſtion being put by Archbiſhop Cranmer, both Houſes came to a Reſolution againſt the Pope's Supremacy in the Senſe abovemention'd. In the Lower Houſe four voted for the Pope's Authority and one demurr'd. At the ſame time an Inſtrument or Declaration of the Senſe of the Prelates and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, was drawn, and ſign'd with this Title, Quod Romanus Epiſcopus non habet majorem Juriſdictionem ſibi a Deo collatam in hoc Regno quam alius quivis externus Epiſcopus *.

* Journal of Convoc. fol. 59.

And in November following Cranmer order'd an Alteration in the Archiepiſcopal Stile, ſtruck out Apoſtolicæ Sedis Legatus, and put Metropolitanus inſtead of it.

Ibid.

By this publick Declaration of the Clergy, of the Univerſities and Religious, that the Pope had no more Juriſdiction given him in Scripture over the Church of England than any other foreign Biſhop; by this Declaration, I ſay, they clearly denied all divine Right to a Supremacy, and cut off his Claim from St. Peter. But then by inſerting this Clauſe in Scripture, or by the Word of God, they ſeem at preſent to fence againſt renouncing any Privilege he might make out by Authority of Councils or Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions.

July 7.

The Dean and Chapter of Paul's is ſomewhat more full in the Inſtrument of their Submiſſion: "They make a ſtrong Declaration of their Loyalty to the King, and to his Iſſue by Queen Anne: They profeſs they ſhall always acknowledge him for Head of the Church of England: And that for the future they'll ſink the Pope's Title in their publick Prayers, and only mention him as Biſhop of Rome. They likewiſe renounce every thing in the Canon Law, which ſhall be found contrary to the holy Scriptures, or to the Uſages and Cuſtoms of this Realm. And in the cloſe of all, they ſwear themſelves to a Performance of the Premiſes (f).

(f) Wharton de Epiſc. & Decan. Londin. p. 286. Conventiones, Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 493.

The learned Mr. Wharton obſerves that the Renunciation of the Pope by the Clergy and Religious was general: That the Originals are ſtill remaining in the Exchequer: That he had in his Cuſtody no leſs than a hundred ſeventy and five ſuch authentick Inſtruments, tranſcrib'd from thence: That theſe Tranſcripts contain'd the Subſcriptions of all the Biſhops, Chapters, Monaſteries, Colleges, Hoſpitals, &c. of thirteen Dioceſes. That to his certain Knowledge, the Original Subſcriptions of the remaining Dioceſes were lodg'd elſewhere. And here he obſerves from the Dates, that the Church of Canterbury did not begin the Subſcriptions *.

* Wharton's Obſervations on Strype's Memorials of Abp. Cranmer. p. 254. vid. Conventiones, Acta Publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 487 to p. 537.

Firſt Fruits granted to the King by Act of Parliament.

To return to the Parliament: "Annates, or the Firſt Fruits of all Benefices, Offices, Dignities, &c. Spiritual were granted to the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors together with the yearly Revenue of the Tenth Part of all ſuch Livings. The Biſhops of each reſpective Dioceſs are charg'd with the Collection of the Tenths, and anſwerable for Non-Payment. Parſonages and Vicaridges not exceeding the yearly Value of eight Marks, are exempted from this Impoſition, unleſs the Incumbent lives three Years after Inſtitution or Collation (g).

(g) 26 H. 8. c. 3.

What theſe Firſt Fruits were, when, and why demanded by the Popes, has been elſewhere related. And now this Revenue, as the Preamble ſets forth, was granted the King partly in conſequence of his being Supreme Head of the Church.

See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 503.

Before this Statute the Biſhop of Norwich uſed to receive the Firſt Fruits of Benefices within his Dioceſe: And the Archdeacon of Richmond had the ſame Privilege within his Archdeaconry: But now all Payments of this Kind were to be made to the Crown.

Words made Treaſon.

To proceed: There was an Act paſs'd in this Seſſion, by which it was made High Treaſon for any Perſon, maliciouſly to wiſh, will, or deſire by Words or Writing, or by Craft imagine, invent, practiſe or attempt any Harm to be done or committed to the King's moſt Royal Perſon, the Queen, or her Heirs apparent, or deprive them or any of them of their Dignity, Title or Name, of their Royal Eſtates, or ſlanderouſly and maliciouſly publiſh and pronounce by expreſs Writing or Words, that the King our Sovereign Lord ſhou'd be Heretick, Schiſmatick, Tyrant, Infidel, &c. (h).

(h) 26 H. 8. c. 13. Statutes at large.

I mention this Act becauſe Biſhop Fiſher apprehended himſelf in ſome Danger by it, as will appear afterwards.

The Election and Authority of Suffragans.

The next Statute I ſhall mention, "ſettles the Election and Powers of Suffragans, and appoints the Towns in which they ſhou'd be plac'd (i). Every Archbiſhop or Biſhop diſpos'd to have any Suffragan, was to preſent two Perſons to the King, who was to make choice of one of them. Theſe Suffragans were to have the Stile of Biſhops; they were to be preſented by the King's Letters Patents under the Broad Seal, to either of the Archbiſhops, in whoſe Province they were to reſide; and by one of theſe Metropolitans to receive Epiſcopal Conſecration, according to the Form and Ceremonial then in uſe. Theſe Suffragans are barr'd from receiving any Profits, or exerciſing any Juriſdiction, any farther than they ſhall be licens'd or commiſſion'd by the Biſhop for that Purpoſe. Their Authority likewiſe was to continue no longer than they were empower'd by their Commiſſion.

(i) 26 H. 8. c. 14.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves that Suffragan Biſhops were put down by Degrees from the ninth Century: But this Remark won't hold *. For not to mention that Petrus Corbarienſis was Suffragan to the Biſhop of London in the Reign of Edward the Third, it appears by the Preamble of this Act, that the Office of Suffragans was cuſtomary in this Kingdom: And that there was actually ſuch Prelates at the making this Statute, is evident by one of the Proviſo's, by which the Biſhop is enjoin'd to provide two Biſhops or Suffragans, who in Conjunction with the Archbiſhop, were to conſecrate his Suffragan for the future.

* Biſhop Burnet, pt. 1. p. 158. See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 531.

This Parliament, Biſhop Fiſher and Sir Thomas Moor were attainted of Miſpriſion of Treaſon for refuſing to ſwear the Act of Succeſſion.

Dec. 19. 1534.

Towards the latter end of this Year, the Convocation agreed to addreſs the King for an Engliſh Tranſlation of the Bible, and that Diſputes concerning Religion might not be allowed the Laity *.

* Journal Convoc. fol. 60.

January 153 4/5.

The next Month the King for the augmenting his Revenue, and that the Firſt Fruits and Tenths might be paid to their juſt value, order'd Inſtructions to be drawn up to make an exact Inquiry into the Eſtates of all the Clergy both Secular and Regular. I ſhall lay part of the Original before the Reader (k).

(k) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 167. Inſtructions for the Inquiry into the Eſtates of the Religious and Clergy.

“ Inſtructions deviſed by the King's Highneſs by the Advice of his Council, for Knowledge to be had of the whole true and juſt yearly Values of all the Poſſeſſions, Mannors, Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments and Profits, as well Spiritual as Temporal appertaining to any manner of Dignity, Monaſtery, Priory, Church Collegiate, Church Conventual, Parſonage, Vicaridge, Chantery, Free Chapel, or other Dignity, Office or Promotion Spiritual within this Realm, Wales, Calais, Berwick, and Marches of the ſame, as well in Places exempt as not exempt, which his Pleaſure is that ſuch as ſhall have charge by his Commiſſion to ſurvey the ſame, ſhall effectually with all Uprightneſs and Dexterity follow and enſue, as they will anſwer unto his Majeſty at their Peril.

The Contents of the Inſtructions may be underſtood by the laſt Article which runs thus.

“ Item, Finally, After the true and juſt yearly Value of all the Dignities, Benefices, Offices, Cures and other Promotions Spiritual afore rehears'd, examin'd and known, then the ſaid Commiſſioners, to whom the Commiſſion ſhall be directed, ſhall cauſe to be made a fair Book after the Auditor's Faſhion, putting firſt in the Head thereof, the Name of the Archbiſhoprick or Biſhoprick where the Commiſſion is directed, if the See be within the Limits of their Commiſſion: And the whole and entire Value thereof, like as is aforemention'd in the Article concerning the ſame; with the Deductions to be reſolute that are mention'd in the ſaid Article and none other. And then next to put the Name of the Cathedral Church or Monaſtery, where the See of the Archbiſhoprick or Biſhoprick is. And the Number and Names of all ſuch Dignities, Prebends, Offices, Cures, Chanteries and Promotions Spiritual which be in Succeſſion in the ſaid Cathedral Church or Monaſtery: And as well the whole and entire yearly Value of the ſaid Cathedral Church or Monaſtery as the particular yearly Profit that belongs to every the ſaid Dignities, Prebends, Offices, &c. with the Deductions to be reſolute out of the ſame, as is mention'd in the Article above ſpecified concerning the ſame: And then next after that to put the Number and Name of every Archdeaconry and Deanry Rural, within the Limits of their Commiſſion, and in whoſe Dioceſs and Juriſdiction they be; and their ſeveral and particular yearly Value and Deductions like as is mention'd in the Article concerning the ſame: And next after that to put every College, Church Collegiate, Hoſpital, Abbey, Monaſtery, Priory, Houſe Religious, Parſonage, Vicaridge, Chantery, Free Chapel and all other Promotions Spiritual, under the Title and Name of the Deanry Rural, where ſuch Colleges, Churches Collegiate, Hoſpitals, Abbey, &c. lyen and byn founded: And their ſeveral and diſtinct yearly Values. —— And the Number and Names of ſuch Prebends, Dignities, Offices, Cures, Chanteries, Free Chapels, &c. and their diſtinct and ſeveral yearly Values, as is before declared in the ſaid Articles: So that always under the Title of every Deanry Rural, there be contain'd all ſuch Dignities, Abbeys, Monaſteries, &c. whereſoever they lyen and byn in the Deanry where they be founded and edified: And if any of them be out of the Limits of all Deanries, then to put 'em by themſelves, rehearſing their Names and the Places where they lyen, and in whoſe Dioceſs and Juriſdiction with their whole Values, &c. added to every of 'em diſtinct by themſelves; foreſeeing always, that in the making of the yearly Values of every manner Dignities, Monaſteries, &c. abovemention'd, there be made a whole and entire Value of every of 'em by themſelves, and nothing to be allow'd or deducted out thereof, for Reparations, Fees, ſerving of Cures, or any other Cauſes or Things whatſoever it be, except only ſuch annual and perpetual Rents, Penſions, Alms, Synods, Proxies and Fees for Offices as be before eſpecially mention'd in the Articles aforewritten. And after the ſaid Book be made, then the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall certify the ſame unto the King's Exchequer under their Seals according as is limited by the Tenor of their Commiſſion, as they will anſwer unto the King's Highneſs at their utmoſt Peril; to the intent that the Tenth of the Premiſes may be tax'd, and ſet to be levied to the King's Uſe according to the Statute made and provided of the Grant thereof.

Theſe Inſtructions had in all Likelyhood a farther Reach than the ſecuring the full Payment of the Tenths: The Deſign ſeems to have been to draw Envy upon the Spirituality from the Greatneſs of the Revenues: 'Twas to give the King an inviting Proſpect upon the Abbies: To awaken his Fancy towards a Diſſolution: And ſollicit him to make Prize of the Church.

There were Commiſſions immediately granted perſuant to theſe Inſtructions; one of which relating to the City and Liberties of London, I ſhall tranſcribe for the Reader (l).

(l) See Records, N. 29.

About this time, if Fox's Chronology holds, the Biſhops took an Oath to the King, by Virtue of which they acknowledged him Supreme Head of the Church of England, promis'd to maintain him and his Succeſſors in this Branch of the Prerogative, renounc'd paying any Obedience to the Pope, or holding any Correſpondence with that See. Fox ſets down this Oath at length, mentions its being taken by Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, Stokeſly Biſhop of London, and Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham *. This was a voluntary Engagement, there being no Act of Parliament requiring any ſuch Oath. And tho' Fox mentions the Forms of Swearing in no other Biſhops than thoſe above recited, yet that this Submiſſion was follow'd by the reſt of that Character appears by an Order of Council for regulating the Pulpits, which the Reader will meet with in its proper Place. Farther, by this general Renunciation of the Pope's Supremacy by the Univerſities, Clergy, and Religious already mention'd, it appears they are miſrepreſented by our learned Church Hiſtorian, and wrongfully charg'd with conſtant Oppoſition to the Reformation.

Bp. Fiſher's Tryal. A. D. 1535.

The King not enduring any Oppoſition to his new Title, reſolv'd to proceed to Extremities againſt Fiſher and Moor. He began with the Biſhop; who after he had lain in the Tower about a Year, was brought to his Tryal. During his Impriſonment he was examin'd upon the Contents of ſome Letters that paſs'd between him and Sir Thomas Moor, who was alſo then a Priſoner in the ſame Place. The Purport of the Biſhop's Letters to Moor was chiefly concerning a Bill by which Words againſt the King were made Treaſon (m). This Bill ſtuck in the Houſe of Commons who inſiſted that the Term maliciouſly might be added. The Act was paſs'd with this Amendment: Sir Thomas Moor, who anſwer'd the Letter while the Bill was depending, told the Biſhop, that provided the Act was thus qualified he wou'd be in no Danger by anſwering the Queſtion, concerning ſome Words charg'd upon him.

Farther, one Article againſt him was, that a Servant of the Lieutenant's, had heard Mrs. Roper, his Daughter, ſay, that Biſhop Fiſher was made a Cardinal. To which he anſwer'd, the ſaid Servant and one Wilſon being preſent, that if the Cardinal's Hat was laid at his Feet, he wou'd not ſtoop to take it up (n).

'Tis true Pope Paul had lately declar'd him a Cardinal. This unſeaſonable Reſpect precipitated his Death: For the King thought this Promotion might be of ill Conſequence, and encourage his Subjects to contemn his Authority. For Fiſher had refus'd to ſwear the Preamble to the Act of Succeſſion, and cou'd by no means be prevail'd with to own the King's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy in the Forms preſcrib'd. The King, as Saunders reports, ſent ſome of the Judges to examine him, whether he had made any Application for the Cardinal's Cap (o). His Anſwer was, that he never ſolicited either for that, or any other Honour: And that this Time eſpecially, was very unlikely to draw his Fancy: That Old Age, Confinement, and Expectations of Death, were Preſervatives againſt Ambition.

As to the Letters which paſs'd between Moor and this Biſhop, the Subject of 'em was moſtly to encourage each other to Fortitude and Reſignation, to implore the Divine Aſſiſtance, and pray for their Enemies: Neither did any thing paſs, as far as I can diſcover, which might be conſtru'd to a harſh, or uncharitable Wiſh to any Perſon living (p).

There is a Letter of one Bedel which bears ſomewhat hard upon the Biſhop: it mentions a Book of Fiſher's, written in Defence of the King's Marriage with Catharine of Spain, and againſt his ſecond Marriage with Anne Boleyn. Theſe Books were deliver'd by this Bedel to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Bedel adds, that he was inform'd by the Confeſſor of Syon, that the Biſhop aſſur'd the King, he had never ſhew'd certain Letters relating (I ſuppoſe) to the Divorce, to any Perſon but his Majeſty, and promis'd to keep 'em private. This Confeſſor, however, as Bedel continues, affirm'd that Fiſher ſent him and Two other Friers, a Copy of his Letters directed to the King, together with the King's Anſwer (q).

The Biſhop was brought to his Trial on the Seventh of May, as the Lord Herbert relates. The Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, and ſome other Lords, together with the Judges, ſate upon him by a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer (r). He is indicted by the Addition of Dominus Johannes Fiſher, Nuper Roffenſis Epiſcopus; which it may be might be the Reaſon of his not being try'd by his Peers. Why he is ſtyl'd the late Biſhop of Rocheſter, is ſomewhat myſterious: For I don't find he had been depriv'd by any Authority either of Church or State. The Charge of High-Treaſon in the Indictment runs thus:

Quod Anno Viceſſimo Septimo Regis Henrici Octavi apud Turrem London. in Comitatu Middleſex contra Ligeantiæ ſuæ debitum, hæc verba Anglicana ſequentia diverſis dicti Domini Regis veris Subditis, falſè, malitioſè, & proditoriè loquebatur & propalabat: viz. The King our Sovereign Lord, is not Supream Head in Earth of the Church of England (s). The Biſhop was found guilty. But,

How theſe Words cou'd be mounted to High-Treaſon, is ſomewhat difficult to underſtand. For the late Acts of Parliament leading towards the Supremacy, in the Twenty Fifth Year of this Reign (t), carry the Forfeitures no higher than Præmunire and Miſpriſion of Treaſon. And the Act of this preſent Year, which brings the Regale to the higheſt Pitch, has no Penalty annex'd (u). If therefore the Biſhop was found guilty upon any Statute, it muſt be upon that which makes it Treaſon, to maliciouſly wiſh or deſire by Words, or Writing to deprive the King of his Dignity or Title (w). But whether this Act was ſtrain'd upon the Biſhop or not, I ſhall leave to the Reader.

Fiſher was hardly us'd during his Impriſonment. In a Letter of his to Cromwell, he acquaints this Miniſter with his wanting Neceſſaries, and that he had neither Cloaths, Fire, nor proper Diet allow'd him (x). He likewiſe complain'd of the ill Uſage of ſome Perſons ſent by the King to diſcourſe him in Priſon. Theſe Men, as he expoſtulates, preſs'd him to give 'em his Reaſons againſt the King's Supremacy, with an Aſſurance that he ſhould receive no Damage by diſcovering his Mind. Under this Confidence, the Biſhop declared his Opinion, with the Grounds upon which he went. But as appear'd by the Event, he truſted them too far: For theſe Men, (who I ſuppoſe were Bedel and Layton) two Clerks of the Council, broke thro' the Secret, and turn'd Evidence againſt him (y).

He was executed upon the 22d of June, in the 77th Year of his Age. The Morning before the Execution, the Lieutenant of the Tower came to his Chamber, and acquainted him, he was to ſuffer that Forenoon. The Biſhop told him, he had expected that Meſſage a long while, and was not at all ſurpriz'd at it: He humbly thank'd the King for putting an End to his Fatigues, and giving him a Paſſage into the other World.

He ſuffers with great Fortitude.

The Lieutenant told him, the King wou'd have him be ſhort in his Speech, not to break out into Reflection, arraign his Government, or give the People an ill Impreſſion. The Biſhop reply'd, he hop'd by God's Aſſiſtance, to be very inoffenſive, and neither give the King nor any other Perſon any Reaſon for Complaint. Upon his Dreſſing himſelf with more Care and Exactneſs than uſual, his Servant aſk'd him, why he took all that Pains about his Habit, not having above two Hours to wear it? That's no matter, ſays the Biſhop, 'tis my Wedding-day, and therefore out of reſpect to the Occaſion, I ought to appear ſomething finer than ordinary. Being very infirm, he was carried in a Chair to the Tower-Gate, where they made a Hault till the Sheriff receiv'd him. During this Interval, he open'd the New Teſtament, and deſir'd God, ſome place proper to his Circumſtances, might come up. Upon looking into the Book, he found theſe Words, This is Life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. I have glorified Thee on the Earth, I have finiſhed the Work which Thou gaveſt me to do. Upon this he ſhut the Book, and ſaid, here's Learning enough for me to my Life's End.

---

* Fox, Vol. 2. p. 377, 378.

Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 83.

(m) 26 H. 8. c. 13.

(n) Cotton. Libr. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 169.

(o) De Schiſ. Anglic. p. 135.

(p) Cotton. Libr. ibid.

(q) Cotton. Libr. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 168.

(r) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 353.

(s) Cotton. Libr. ibid. fol. 178.

(t) 25 H. 8. c. 19. & c. 22.

(u) 26 H. 8. cap. 1.

(w) 26 H. 8. cap 13. Statutes at large.

(x) Fuller's Church Hiſtory, book 5. p. 190. from Cotton. Libr.

(y) Harmer, p. 60.

Joh. 17. 3, 4.

When he came to the Scaffold, they offer'd to help him up; but he deſir'd 'em to let him alone, and that they ſhould ſee him ſhift well enough for himſelf. He went up the Stairs with unuſual Livelineſs and Strength: So that thoſe who knew his Age, and the Weakneſs of his Conſtitution, were very much ſurpriz'd.

He obſerv'd the King's Orders ſo far as to be very ſhort in his Speech.

His Speech.

“ He told the People, he came to die for the “ Faith of Chriſt's Holy Catholick Church: He “ gave God Thanks for ſupporting him, with Re-
“ ſolution for the Occaſion; and that the Fear
“ of Death had hitherto made no Impreſſion up-
“ on him. He deſir'd their Prayers, that he “ might continue his Adherence to every Point
“ of the Catholick Faith, and ſtand firm and “ unſhaken at the laſt Moment. And laſtly, he “ begg'd Almighty God to preſerve the King
“ and Kingdom, and bleſs his Majeſty with a “ good Council.

Theſe Words were deliver'd with an Air of Chearfulneſs and Gravity. He gave all imaginable Marks of Unconcernedneſs and Courage: He preſs'd as it were, into the other World, and expired in Conſtancy and Greatneſs (z).

(z) Fuller's Church Hiſtory, Book 5. p. 203. & deinc.

His Character.

As to his Character: He was a Perſon of Learning and exemplary Life, but ſtuck cloſe to the Papal Pretenſions. As for Covetouſneſs and Luxury, he is much miſreported by Bale (a); thoſe Blemiſhes being altogether foreign to his Character. He could never be brought to a Tranſlation to a wealthier See: He us'd to ſay, his Church was his Wife, and that he wou'd never part with her, becauſe ſhe was poor (b). He was much eſteem'd by the King, 'till the Buſineſs of the Divorce and the Pope s Supremacy, came to be diſcuſs'd. He wrote againſt Luther in Defence of King Henry the Eighth. Oecolampadius and other German Reformers, were undertaken by him.

(a) Godwyn. de Præſul. Anglic. in Fiſher.

(b) Bp. Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 1. p. 354. Fox Vol. 2. p. 353.

His Book, in which he attempts a Confutation of Luther's Defence of the Propoſitions cenſur'd by Leo the Tenth's Bull, is his moſt conſiderable Performance. Before he engages in the Controverſy with Luther, he endeavours to prove theſe ten Principles, and ſettle them as Grounds or Poſtulata for his Diſcourſe.

Firſt, That the greateſt part of thoſe who have relied on the Guidance of their private Spirit, for the Senſe of the Scriptures, have fail'd in their Interpretations, and miſcarry'd into Error and Hereſie.

His Second Principle is, that ſince the ancient Hereticks were loſt by this Liberty, thoſe who are govern'd by the ſame Directions, have no Reaſon to expect any better Succeſs.

His Third is, That in all Controverſies concerning the Meaning of Holy Scripture, or any other Point relating to the Catholick Church, there ought to be a Judge to give Sentence, and ſettle the Matter: And that the Pope as Head of the Church, has always had a principal Share in Deciſions of this Nature.

Fourth, That all Controverſies can't always be determin'd by the Holy Scriptures excluſively of other Aſſiſtance.

Fifth, That the Holy Ghoſt is promis'd by our Saviour to be always preſent with the Church, to inform her in all neceſſary Truth, and enable her for the Diſcovery of Error.

His Sixth is, That the Holy Ghoſt has always made uſe of the Fathers for the confuting Hereſies, and teaching true Doctrine. From hence he infers in the Seventh place, That all thoſe who reject the Doctrine of the Fathers, deſpiſe the Inſtruction of the Holy Ghoſt.

Eighth, That if every ſingle Father was the Organ of the Holy Ghoſt, for the Benefit of the Church, we have ſtill more Reaſon to believe his Divine Aſſiſtance is not wanting in General Councils.

Ninth, That Apoſtolical Traditions, tho' unmention'd in the inſpired Writings, ought to be obſerved.

Laſtly, That we ought not only to receive the Doctrines handed down by Tradition, but the Cuſtoms likewiſe approv'd by the Univerſal Church.

Having premiſs'd theſe general Principles, and ſuppos'd them well prov'd, he proceeds to the Articles condemn'd by Pope Leo the Tenth, and replies to Luther's Defence Paragraph by Paragraph.

This Biſhop ſate Three and Thirty Years at Rocheſter. And how ſerviceable he was in the Founding of St. John's and Chriſt's-College in Cambridge, has been already related (c).

To deſcribe him a little farther: He was born at Beverley in Yorkſhire. His Father was a wealthy Merchant: He was educated at Cambridge, of which Univerſity he was afterwards Chancellor. He was Confeſſor in the laſt Reign to the Lady Margaret Counteſs of Richmond, and prevail'd with her for the founding the two Colleges abovementioned.

(c) See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. under King Henry VII. Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 5. p. 202.

To ſay nothing of Fiſher's Belief, which held up to the Claims of the Court of Rome, the moſt exceptionable part of his Management ſeems to have been his hearkening too much to the Viſions of the Maid of Kent.

He ſeem'd too forward in giving Credit to the Maid of Kent.

Cromwell expoſtulates ſharply with him upon this Head: Tells him, his Defence was ſhort: That he ought not to have reſign'd himſelf ſo implicitely to Report: That he ſhould have examin'd the Circumſtances more narrowly, and brought her pretended Inſpirations to a ſtricter Teſt: And ſince the King was ſo far concern'd in her Propheſies, 'twas his Duty to have acquainted his Majeſty with what had paſs'd. He charges the Biſhop with a Partiality for the Princeſs Dowager and the Biſhop of Rome. And that if this Nun had propheſied for the Divorce, and approv'd the Marriage of Queen Anne, he wou'd not have gone ſo eaſily into the Belief of her Revelations (d).

(d) Cleop. E. IV. See Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Records, p. 123.

Fox's Charge againſt him diſprov'd.

Fox charges Fiſher with the Death of Fryth, Teuxsbury, and Bayfield (e). But this is more than appears: For theſe Men were tried before

(e) Fox, vol. 2. p. 351.

Stokeſly Biſhop of London, neither was Fiſher one of the Aſſeſſors (f).

(f) See Stokeſley's Regiſter, and Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 164. & deinc.

The Extremities againſt Fiſher, and the ſetting his Head upon London Bridge, drew a Cenſure upon the King, eſpecially from thoſe beyond Sea. The Pope immediately fulminated in a Bull: In this Inſtrument “ he gives Biſhop Fiſher a great Character, and ſtiles him a Cardinal. He admoniſhes the King to relinquiſh his Errors, and repent his Crimes: Summons his Highneſs to appear within Ninety Days at Rome, either in Perſon or by Proxy, and ſtand to the Judgment of that Court. And in Caſe of Refuſal, he was after the Term prefix'd, to be excommunicated, and the Kingdom put under an Interdict. And upon Non-performance of the Conditions abovementioned, the Subjects are commanded to withdraw their Allegiance; all other Chriſtian Countries are forbidden the Liberties of Intercourſe and Commerce with the Engliſh: The Eccleſiaſticks are order'd to depart the Kingdom with all Expedition: The Temporal Nobility and Gentry to form themſelves into an Army, and drive the King out of his Domions. And as for foreign Kings and Princes, they are exhorted in the Lord, as Sanders tranſcribes it, to treat Henry and his Abettors, as Rebels to the Church, and undertake a Holy War againſt them, till they have brought them to Recollection and Submiſſion to the Apoſtolick See: And to diſentangle their Conſciences, and encourage them the better, all their Alliances, Treaties, and Engagements of what kind ſoever with the King of England, are declared null and void.

Pope Paul the Third's extravagant Bull againſt the King.

“ And for the more effectual apprehending of thoſe who ſtood firm for the King, his Holyneſs grants Letters of Reprizal to Chriſtendom in general: And thus any Body that cou'd ſeize 'em, might make Slaves of their Perſons, and take their Effects for their own Uſe.

“ Farther, there's an Order directed to all the Prelates, to excommunicate the King, and his Abettors publickly in their Churches. And laſtly, all Perſons are laid under the like Cenſure that ſhall hinder this Bull from being either publiſh'd or executed. And that the King and his Friends might not pretend themſelves unacquainted with the Pope's Reſolution, this Inſtrument was order'd to be fix'd on the Doors of the Principal Churches of Tournay, Bruges and Dunkirk (g).

(g) Sanders de Schiſm. Anglic. p. 148. & deinc.

There was an Anſwer given to this extraordinary Bull, by Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, as 'tis ſuppos'd. This Apologiſt juſtified the King's Conduct both as to Fiſher and other Matters; and return'd ſome of the Pope's rough Language upon him (h). The Pope's menacing the King in this manner, did Sir Thomas Moor no Kindneſs. Being thus chaff'd with ill Uſage, he was reſolv'd to purſue his Point, to aſſert his Eccleſiaſtical Authority to the utmoſt, and come to no Abatements with his Subjects. Sanders fancies the King thought the Terror of Fiſher's Execution, might have made an Impreſſion upon Moor. But the Event proving otherwiſe, there was an Order to examine him farther upon the Point of the Supremacy, as now ſettled by Act of Parliament. When this Queſtion was put to Fiſher and Moor, their Reply was much the ſame. They compar'd the Act of Supremacy to a two edged Sword; and that there was no avoiding on't. For if a Man anſwer'd one way 'twou'd deſtroy his Body, and if t'other way, his Soul. 'Twas Rich, the King's Solicitor who was ſent upon this Buſineſs. Sir Thomas Moor being aware of the Danger, avoided the giving any direct Anſwers, and fenc'd for his Life as far as his Conſcience wou'd give him leave. Rich made him another Viſit, and having firſt proteſted he had no Commiſſion to diſcourſe upon the Subject abovementioned, asked him by way of Converſation, whether if Richard Rich was made King by Act of Parliament, with a Clauſe that it ſhou'd be Treaſon to deny his Title; If this Suppoſition was matter of Fact, he deſir'd to know, what Crime it would be to diſobey the Statute? Sir Thomas Moor anſwer'd frankly, that he thought the Subject wou'd be bound by ſuch a Statute, and by Conſequence the Breach of it muſt be a Fault. But that this Caſe did not come up to the Matter in hand. To mention therefore a Parallel Inſtance: Suppoſe, ſays Sir Thomas Moor, the Parliament ſhou'd enact that God ſhall not be God, and fortified the Act with the Penalty of Treaſon; Whether it would be a Crime or not to ſtand by the Act? The Solicitor Rich anſwer'd yes: But added withal, the Caſe was put too high, and therefore he wou'd propoſe another of a Size better proportion'd. The King is conſtituted Supream Head of the Church by Act of Parliament, Why therefore can't you own him under that Character, ſince you wou'd acknowledge me King, provided I had a Title for that Dignity by Statute? Sir Thomas Moor anſwered, the Parliament had Power to make a King, becauſe the whole Nation concurr'd to the Bill, either in Perſon or by Repreſentation, for which Reaſon the Subject was bound to acquieſce: But then there was a Diſparity in the Inſtance: For the King had not the Vote of all Chriſtendom to ſettle his Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy: For tho' he was receiv'd under this Diſtinction in England, yet foreign Nations had not agreed to his Privilege. His ſaying that Rex per Parliamentum fieri poteſt, & per Parliamentum deprivari, is ſomewhat crudely expreſs'd, and looks at firſt ſight as if Sir Thomas was more a Philoſopher than a Lawyer. For by the Engliſh Conſtitution, there can be no Parliament without a King or Queen at the Head on't. For as Sir Edward Coke ſpeaks, Rex eſt Caput Principium & Finis Parliamenti (i). But he complains himſelf miſreported by the Solicitor, as we ſhall ſee by and by. Beſides, his Meaning might be no more than that a Bill of Excluſion might paſs againſt the right Heir, and the lineal Succeſſion be over-rul'd by Act of Parliament.

An Apology publiſhed in Latin for the King.

(h) Ld. Herbert, p 392.

Sir Thomas Moor farther examin'd about the Supremacy.

The Diſcourſe between the Solicitor and Sir Thomas Moor.

Id. pag. 393.

(i) Coke's Inſtitutes, pt. 4. fol. 3.

To return, theſe evaſive Anſwers together with his Refuſal of the Oath of Succeſſion, prov'd mortal to him. He was brought to his Trial ſoon after. In the Indictment he was charged with oppoſing the King's Second Marriage, out of Obſtinacy and Humour. To this he confeſs'd, that he had always frankly declar'd his Opinion to the King upon that Matter. But then he humbly conceiv'd, ſuch Freedoms cou'd not be conſtru'd to High-Treaſon: Beſides, he thought if this was a Fault, the Loſs of his Goods, and perpetual Impriſonment was a ſufficient Puniſhment. Another Article in the Indictment was, that he being a Priſoner, and twice examin'd by the Lords of the Council, declin'd anſwering the Queſtion, whether the King was Supream Head of the Church or not *? For all they could draw from him was, that he was not concerned in the Law which gave the King this Title: That he was not bound to declare, either for, or againſt the Juſtice of the Statute; becauſe he had no ſpiritual Preferment. However, he proteſted he had never ſaid or done any thing againſt that Act, neither cou'd any Evidence be produc'd produc'd to make him guilty. For the future, he ſhou'd only employ his Thoughts upon the Paſſion of his Saviour: That he was not conſcious of breaking any Law; and that neither this Statute, nor any Law in the World, can puniſh a Man for holding his Peace. Governours can't look into Peoples Hearts: And therefore human Laws puniſh no farther than Words or Actions. By another Branch of the Indictment, he was charg'd with Maliciouſly, Traiterouſly, &c. Practiſing againſt the Statute above mention'd, by writing eight Packets of Letters, whilſt a Priſoner, to Biſhop Fiſher. That by theſe Letters, he exhorted the Biſhop to diſconform to this Statute, and preſs'd him to the ſame Obſtinacy with himſelf. Sir Thomas in his anſwer deſir'd the Letters might be produc'd: But to this 'twas reply'd, the Biſhop had burnt 'em. Upon this Sir Thomas confeſs'd the Contents; that ſome of the Letters were only upon the ſubject of Friendſhip and private Affairs. 'Tis true, the Biſhop in one Letter, deſired to know how he had anſwer'd in his Examination, with reſpect to the Supremacy. Moor wrote him Word, that his Conſcience was ſettled already, and that the Biſhop might ſettle his own as he thought beſt. And here he appeal'd to God, that this was all the anſwer he return'd the Biſhop to that Queſtion. He likewiſe affirm'd, he never ſpoke or wrote a Word againſt this Law to any Man living, tho' the King perhaps might have been told the contrary (k). To conclude, he utterly deny'd the Paſſage between the Solicitor and himſelf, in the Senſe above related. From whence it appears that the Solicitor Rich had reported Sir Thomas Moor's Converſation, and alledg'd it as Evidence againſt him. Thus 'tis plain this great Man was not weary of Living, but endeavour'd to preſerve himſelf with all the caution he could make uſe of: And which way the Jury reach'd him is not eaſie to account for. However, they brought him in guilty of High Treaſon. The Indictment and their Verdict being grounded upon the 26 H. 8. cap. 13.

July 1. 1535. His Trial.

* Malitioſe ſilebat.

(k) Life of Sir Thomas Moor by T. M. Ld. Herbert, p. 393.

His Death and Character.

He received the Sentence with an equality of Temper, anſwerable to his Cuſtom. And having prepar'd himſelf for the Scaffold with Seriouſneſs and Devotion, he return'd at laſt to his uſual Pleaſantneſs of Humour. Some think he indulged his Levities too far, and that his Jeſts were ſomewhat unſeaſonable. But on the other ſide it may be ſaid, the Divertingneſs of ſome Expreſſions might reſult from the Fortitude and Serenity of his Mind. That his frequent Contemplation of Death had preſerv'd him from the leaſt Surprize: And that the neareſt Proſpect cou'd not diſconcert his Humour, or make the leaſt alteration upon him.

As to the reſt of his Character, he was a Perſon of Learning, and of a ſtrong Genius: He had a very lively and beautiful manner in his Writing: He was for ſome time much in the King's Favour, and had his Temper been mercenary and ambitious, might have made his Fortune to what Degree he had pleas'd. But he was altogether above the conſideration of Money: His Conſcience was not flexible enough for this Purpoſe. And thus he loſt his Life, and left his Family but ſlenderly provided. When he wrote his Vtopia, he ſeems to have had ſome Latitude in his Principles; and that he was willing to give allowance for difference in Belief. But this Moderation went off in a great meaſure afterwards: For it muſt be ſaid he was no gentle Adverſary to the Lutherans and Lollards: He argues againſt Tindal, Fryth, &c. with Eagerneſs enough; and when he was Lord Chancellor, ſome of that Perſwaſion felt the weight of his Character. But then we have reaſon to believe this Treatment did not proceed from ſavage and ſanguinary Humour. 'Twas as 'tis moſt probable the Inſurrection under Sir John Oldcaſtle, the Civil Diſtractions in Bohemia, and the late Diſorders of the Anabaptiſts in Germany, which gave him an Averſion to Innovations in the Church. He ſuffer'd upon Tower-hill, on the 6th of July, in the Fifty Third Year of his Age.

Having already obſerv'd this Gentleman's Principles had a larger Compaſs when he wrote his Vtopia; it may not be improper to give an inſtance of it. In this Book, where he ſeems to borrow the Diſguiſe of a Romance only to declare his Mind with greater Freedom; in this Book I ſay, he tells us the Vtopians allow Liberty of Conſcience, and force their Religion upon no Body. That they hinder none from a ſober enquiry into Truth, nor uſe any Violence upon the ſcore of a different Belief.

Fiſher and Moor are reported by ſeveral of the Church of Rome, to have made the Book which goes under King Henry's Name againſt Luther: But the Lord Herbert is not of this Opinion. He only thinks they might look it over at the King's Inſtance, and interpoſe their Judgment in ſome Paſſages. (l) But that the King after all was govern'd by his own Sentiment; and that Moor had no hand in the Compoſition, appears pretty plainly from this Gentleman's Letter to Cromwell, dated March, 1533 (m). He acquaints this Miniſter 'twas formerly his Opinion that the Pope's Primacy ſtood only upon Councils and Preſcription, and was not Jure Divino: That when the King ſhew'd him his Book againſt Martin Luther, he deſir'd his Highneſs either to omit the Point of the Papal Supremacy, or touch it more ſlenderly at leaſt. For the aſſerting the Privilege of the Pope's See to that height, might afterwards prove unſerviceable, in Caſe any Diſputes ſhou'd happen between the Court of Rome and his Highneſs: That the ſtretch of the Pope's Pretenſions had been unfortunate to ſome Princes; and that it was not impoſſible the ſame occaſions might be reviv'd.

(l) Ld. Herbert, p. 392.

Sir Thomas Moor's Opinion as to the Pope's Supremacy.

(m) Moor's Works, p. 1427.

To this the King anſwer'd, He was reſolv'd not to alter any thing upon that Head, and gave Sir Thomas a Reaſon which was altogether new. This Book of the King's it ſeems, and his farther Reading upon the Controverſy, made him change his Opinion in ſome Meaſure; and rather conclude the Pope held his Primacy by Divine Right: However, as he continues, he ſtill thought the Pope under the Juriſdiction of a general Council; and that he might be depos'd, and another ſet up, at the Pleaſure of ſuch an Aſſembly. By this Letter it appears, Moor had no ſhare in the Book againſt Luther: And that he believ'd the King the Author of that Tract.

The King the Author of the Book againſt Luther.

To proceed, ſome little Time before the Execution of Fiſher and Moor, ſeveral People of different Perſuaſions ſuffer'd upon the ſcore of Religion. Nineteen Dutchmen and Six Women were examin'd at St. Paul's London. Their Opinions, as Stow reports 'em, were moſt of them very lamentable. For the purpoſe, they deny'd like Eutiches the two Natures of Chriſt. They affirm'd he aſſum'd neither Fleſh nor Blood of the Bleſſed Virgin. Thirdly, That the Children of Infidels will be ſav'd. Fourthly, That the Baptiſm of Children is wholy inſignificant. Fifthly, That the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body is nothing but Bread. Laſtly, That he that ſins wilfully after Baptiſm, ſins mortally, and can't be ſav'd.

May. 25. A. D. 1535.

Several Anabaptiſts burnt.

Fourteen of theſe (n) were convicted of Hereſy, and burnt in London and other Towns.

(n) Stow's Annals, p. 571.
Ibid.
June 18.

About a Month after Thomas Exmew, Humphry Midlemore, and Sebaſtian Newdigate, three Monks of the Chartreux London, were hang'd drawn and quarter'd for denying the King's Supremacy. This look'd like Impartial Severity, or it may be Cruelty on both ſides. However, the People being not ſufficiently frightned by theſe Rigours, the King reſolv'd to try the Experiment upon ſome great Perſons, as we have ſeen in Moor and Fiſher.

The King having had the Concurrence of the Clergy and Univerſities againſt the Supremacy of the See of Rome, ſent Letters to the Lord Lieutenants, as 'tis moſt probable, to hinder the Preaching up the Pope's Authority (o). The Tenor of 'em is as follows.

(o) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 214. Biblioth. Rob Harley, Armig. June 25. A. D. 1535.
The King's Letter againſt Preaching up the Pope's Supremacy.

HENRY REX.

“ Truſty and right well belov'd, we greet you well. And whereas heretofore as ye know, both upon moſt juſt and vertuous Foundations, grounded upon the Laws of Almighty God and Holy Scripture; and alſo by the deliberate Advice, Conſultation, Conſent and Agreement, as well of the Biſhops and Clergy, as by the Nobles and Commons Temporal of this our Realm, aſſembled in our High Court of Parliament, and by Authority of the ſame, the Abuſes of the Biſhop of Rome, his Authority and Juriſdiction of long time uſurped againſt us, have been not only utterly extirp'd, aboliſh'd, and ſecluded; But alſo the ſame our Nobles and Commons both of the Clergy and Temporalty, by another ſeveral Act, and upon like Foundations for the Publick Weal of this our Realm, have united, knit, and annex'd to us, and the Crown Imperial of this our Realm, the Title, Dignity, and Style of Supream Head in Earth, immediately under God of the Church of England, as undoubtedly evermore we have been; which Things alſo the ſaid Biſhops and Clergy particularly in their Convocations, have wholly and intirely conſented, recogniz'd, ratified, confirm'd and approv'd authentickly in Writing, both by their ſpecial Oaths, Profeſſion, and Writing under their Signs and Seals, utterly renouncing all other Oaths, Obedience and Juriſdiction either of the ſaid Biſhop of Rome, or of any other Potentate.——— In the Remainder of this Letter, the King informs 'em of his having charg'd the Biſhops and Clergy to ſtrike the Pope's Name out of the Offices of the Church, and to Preach up the Regal Supremacy; and that Orders had been given to the ſeveral Juſtices of the Peace, to enquire whether the Clergy had done their Duty in the Premiſſes. The Perſons to whom this Order is directed, are commanded to ſet forth the Regale at the Aſſizes and Seſſions. This Letter likewiſe complains of the Treaſons committed by the late Biſhop of Rocheſter and Sir Thomas Moor: And that theſe Perſons were in a Practice to miſlead the People into dangerous Opinions with reſpect to the Supremacy.

About this time the Archbiſhop preach'd againſt the Pope's Supremacy at Canterbury. Some of the Religious were diſguſted at his Sermon. And not long after, the Prior of the Black Friers in that Town, preach'd counter Doctrine. His Diſcourſe was pointed againſt three Things maintain'd by the Archbiſhop. He aſſerted the Church never err'd: That the Biſhop of Rome was to be honourably treated; and that the Conſtitutions of the Church were equally binding with the Laws of God Almighty.

This bold Attack upon the Archbiſhop was not to be paſs'd over. The Prior being convented, deny'd his Sermon, and juſtified the Archbiſhop: But being diſcharg'd upon this modeſt Behaviour, and encourag'd by a Party of the Religious, he retracted his Confeſſion, and run Riot no leſs than formerly. The King being inform'd of his Relapſe, advis'd the Archbiſhop to proceed to Cenſure.

Upon this occaſion the Archbiſhop wrote to the King; ſent him an Abſtract of what had been preach'd both by himſelf and the Prior; declin'd being a Judge in his own Cauſe, and intreated the Matter might either be referr'd to the Lord Vicegerent Cromwell, or elſe ſome Perſons aſſign'd by his Majeſty to ſit upon the Bench with himſelf. What end this Buſineſs had is not related; but 'tis likely, this Misbehaviour of the Prior, and his appearing againſt the King's Supremacy, did the reſt of the Religious no Service *.

* Strype's Memorials of Archbiſhop Cranmer, Book 1. p. 31.

About this Time, and it may be a little before, an Order for regulating the Pulpits with reference to preaching and bidding of Prayers, was ſet forth by the King and Council. It runs thus.

Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 232.
Orders for regulating the Pulpit, & bidding of Beads.

“ Firſt, Whoſoever ſhall preach in the Preſence of the King's Highneſs, and Queen's Grace; ſhall in the bidding of the Beads pray for the Catholick Church of Chriſt, as well quick as dead, and eſpecially for the Catholick Church of this Realm. And firſt as we are moſt bounden, for our Sovereign Lord King Henry the Eighth, being immediately next unto God the only and ſupreme Head of this our Catholick Church of England, and for the moſt Gracious Lady Queen Anne his Wife, and for the Lady Elizabeth Daughter and Heir to them both, our Princeſs, and no farther (p).

(p) Cotton. lib. Cleop. E 5. N. 286.

“ Item. The Preacher in all other Places of this Realm, except in the Preſence of the King's Highneſs and the Queen's Grace, ſhall in the bidding of the Beads, pray firſt in Manner and Form, and Word for Word, as is above ordain'd and limitted. Adding in the ſecond Part, for all Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and for all the whole Clergy of this Realm; and ſpecially for ſuch, as it ſhall pleaſe the Preacher to name of his Devotion. And Thirdly, for all Dukes, Marquiſſes and Earls, and for all the whole Temporalty of this Realm; and ſpecially for ſuch as the Preacher ſhall name of his Devotion. And finally, for the Souls of all them that be dead, and ſpecially of ſuch, as it ſhall pleaſe the Preacher to name.

“ Item, It is ordain'd that every Preacher ſhall preach once, in his greateſt Audience againſt the uſurp'd Power of the Biſhop of Rome, and ſo after at his Liberty. And that no Man ſhall be ſuffer'd to defend or maintain the aforeſaid uſurp'd Power.

“ Farthermore, to keep Unity and Quietneſs in this Realm, it is ordain'd no Preacher ſhall contend openly in Pulpit one againſt another, nor uncharitably deprave one another in open Audience; but if any of 'em be griev'd one with another, let 'em complain to the King's Highneſs, or to the Archbiſhop or Biſhop of the Dioceſe; and there to be remedied, if there be Cauſe why: And if the complaint be not true, the Complainant to be puniſh'd.

“ Item, Alſo to forefend that no Preacher for a Year ſhall preach neither for, nor againſt Purgatory, honouring of Saints, that Prieſts

“ may have Wives, that Faith only juſtifies, to go in Pilgrimages, to forge Miracles; conſidering that theſe things have cauſ'd Diſſention among the Subjects of this Realm, which, Thanks be to God! are now well pacified.

“ Item, That from henceforth all Preachers ſhall purely, ſincerely and juſtly preach the Scripture and Word of Chriſt, and not mix them with Man's Inſtitutions, nor make Men believe that the Force of God's Law and Man's Law is like; or that any Man is able, or hath Power to diſpenſe with God's Law.

“ Item, 'Tis alſo ordain'd that the Declaration of the Sentence which has been us'd in the Church four times in the Year, ſhall not from henceforth be publiſh'd, nor eſteem'd in any Point contrary to the Preheminence and Juriſdiction Royal of our King and his Realm, or Laws and Liberties of the ſame; and any ſo doing ſhall be competently puniſh'd by the Biſhop of the Dioceſs. And this throughout the Realm and Dominions of our Sovereign.

“ Item, 'Tis alſo ordain'd that the Collects for the King and Queen, be commonly and uſually ſaid, in every Religious Houſe and Pariſh Church, in all their High Maſſes throughout all the Realms and Dominions of our King and Sovereign.

“ Item, It is farther ordain'd, that whereſoever the King's juſt Cauſe of Matrimony has either been detracted, and the inceſtuous and unjuſt ſet forth, or in Places where it has not been dilated, that in all thoſe Places till the People be fully ſatisfied and juſtly inſtruct, all manner of Preachers whatſoever they be, happening to come into any ſuch part of the Realm, ſhall from henceforth open and declare the mere Verity and Juſtneſs of this latter Matrimony, as nigh as their Learning can ſerve them, and according to the true Determinations of a great Number of the moſt famous and eſteemed Univerſities of Chriſtendom, according alſo to the juſt Reſolution and Definition of both the Convocations of this Realm, concurring alſo in the ſame Opinion, by the whole Aſſent of Parliament, our Prince, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons of this Realm. Wherefore now they muſt declare this Matter neither doubtful nor diſputable, but to be a thing of mere Verity and ſo to be allowed in all Men's Opinions.

“ Item, It is farther ordained, that the aforeſaid Preachers ſhall alſo declare the falſe and unjuſt handling of the Biſhop of Rome pretending to have Juriſdiction to judge this Cauſe at Rome, which, in the firſt hearing thereof, did both declare and confeſs in Word and Writing the Juſtneſs thereof to be upon our Sovereign's Side, inſomuch as by a Decretal deliver'd to the Legate here then ſitting for the ſame Cauſe, he did clearly determine, that if Prince Arthur was our Prince's Brother, and then of competent Age allow'd in the Law, when he married the Lady Catharine, ſhe being ſo likewiſe, and that as far as Preſumptions can prove, carnal Copulation enſued between them, that theſe prov'd before the ſaid Cardinals and Legates (which indeed were according to the Laws juſtly prov'd) that then the unjuſt Copulation between our Sovereign and the ſaid Lady, that herein was neither lawful, nor longer to be ſuffer'd. And ſo eo facto pronounc'd in the foreſaid Decretal, the Nullity, Invalidity and Unlawfulneſs of their pretenſed Matrimony, which was by his Law ſufficient Judgment of the Cauſe; which Decretal, by his Commandment after, and becauſe he wou'd not have the Effect thereof to enſue, was after the ſight thereof embezled by the foreſaid Cardinals, and one, which then was here his Cubicular, contrary to all Juſtneſs and Equity wherein he has done our Sovereign moſt extreme wrong.

“ Secondly, Contrary to all Equity and Determinations of General Councils, he hath call'd the Cauſe (which ought to be determined here) to Rome, where our Sovereign is neither bound to appear nor ſend Proctors: And yet hath he detain'd wrongfully the Cauſe there theſe three or four Years at the Inſtance of the other Party which ſued to have it there, becauſe they know he durſt not diſpleaſe the Emperor who makes himſelf a Party in it, as by the Sequel it doth evidently appear. And ſo cou'd our Prince get no Juſtice at his Hands, but was wrongfully delay'd to no ſmall Hinderance both to his Succeſſion, and this his Realm's eminent Danger.

“ Thirdly, Whereas it is a natural Defence, that the Subject may and ought to defend his natural Sovereign or Maſter both in Word and Deed, and ought thereto to be admitted, this foreſaid Biſhop of Rome, contrary to this Equity in Nature, hath rejected our Sovereign's Excuſator, contrary both to his own Laws (which he moſt ſetteth by) and alſo God's Law which he ought to prefer. Upon which Cauſe and other great Injuries our Sovereign did appeal to a General Council: Notwithſtanding the which he has, contrary to all Juſtice, proceeded ad ulteriora, wherein by a General Council he is damn'd as an Heretick, yet thus injuriouſly from the beginning hitherto he has handled other Prince's Cauſe and Matter there.

“ Fourthly, The ſaid Biſhop of Rome, ſince our Prince's Appeal, hearing of the Laws and Acts of Parliament, which we then went about, and that our King having juſt Ground (the Premiſſes conſider'd) would provide, according to his bounden Duty, both for the Surety of his Succeſſion and the Realm, gave out a Sentence in manner of Excommunication and Interdiction of him and his Realm: In which, when he was ſpoken to for the Iniquity and Unjuſtneſs thereof by our Prince's Agents, he and his Council cou'd, nor did otherwiſe excuſe them (the Fact being ſo contrary to all Laws and Right) but that the Fault was in a new Officer lately come to the Court, who for his lewd doing ſhould grievouſly be puniſh'd, and the Proceſs to ceaſe. This they promis'd our Prince's Agents, which notwithſtanding was ſet up in Flanders, to the great Injury of our Prince, and for Partiality to the other Part, as it may well appear by the foreſaid Sentence.

“ Fifthly, The ſaid Biſhop of Rome ſought all the ways poſſible with fair Words and Promiſes, both by his Ambaſſadors and our Sovereign's own (which by any means cou'd be invented) to have abuſed our Prince and Sovereign, which when he ſaw that by none of his Craft our Prince wou'd be no longer abuſed with them, then ſued he to the French King to be a Mediator between our Sovereign and him; declaring to him and his Council that he wou'd gladly do for our Soverign, allowing the Juſtice of his Cauſe, ſo that they wou'd find the Means that our Sovereign wou'd not proceed in his Acts and Laws till that were prov'd. And that he wou'd meet him at Marſeilles for

“ the finiſhing thereof, for at Rome he durſt not do it for fear of the Emperor. The good French King admoniſh'd our Prince hereof, offering him to do all the Pleaſure and Kindneſs that lay in him in this Cauſe, truſting that if the Biſhop of Rome came once to Marſeilles he ſhou'd give Sentence for our Sovereign in his juſt Cauſe, and therefore pray'd our Prince to be content with that Meeting in which he wou'd labour for it effectuouſly, and ſo he did. To the which our Prince anſwered, that touching the Meeting he was content, but touching the forbearing the making Laws, he pray'd his good Brother to hold him excuſed; for he knew well enough both the Craft and Delays of the Biſhop of Rome, by which from henceforth he wou'd never be abuſed, and that likewiſe he fear'd he wou'd abuſe his good Brother, which ſo indeed after follow'd: For after he had gotten the Marriage of the Duke of Orleans, he then promiſ'd the French King to give Judgment for our Maſter, provided he wou'd ſend a Proxy; which the ſaid Biſhop of Rome knew well before that he neither wou'd nor was bound to do: Yet, notwithſtanding his ſubtile Imagination, his Promiſe was to the French King that our Prince ſending a Proctor ſhou'd there, before his Departure, have Judgment for him in the principal Cauſe: For he openly confeſs'd farther that our Maſter had the Right. But becauſe our Prince and Maſter wou'd not prejudicate Princes Juriſdiction, and uphold his uſurp'd Power by ſending a Proctor, ye may evidently here ſee that this was only the Cauſe, why the Judgment of the Biſhop of Rome was not given in his Favour: Whereby it may appear that there lack not any Juſtneſs in our Prince's Cauſe, but that Ambition, Vain-Glory and too much Mundanity were the Letts thereof. Wherefore, good People, I exhort you to ſtick to the Truth and our Prince, according to our bounden Duties, and deſpiſe theſe naughty Doings of this Biſhop of Rome, and charitably pray that he and all other Abuſers of Chriſt's Word and Works may have Grace to amend.

By this Order, we may perceive there were ſome Advances made in the Reformation, and that the Pulpits had claſh'd upon this Occaſion.

An Overture to cloſe with the Pope.

To go back a little: Upon the Death of Clement the Seventh, the King was willing to make another Tryal of the Juſtice of that See. To this Purpoſe new Inſtructions were diſpatch'd to Sir Gregory Caſaley to ſolicit the Pope for better Treatment: To conſult farther upon the Caſe, and take the Opinion of ſome learned French Men. The Pope ſeem'd pleas'd with this Application, and 'tis likely might have clos'd with the Overture. But the King's executing ſeveral Monks, and afterwards Moor and Fiſher, for denying the Supremacy, diſoblig'd that Court, and brought 'em to Extremities. And thus upon the Arrival of this News, the Pope proceeded to the the Excommunication already mention'd (q).

Aug. 30. 1535.
(q) Lord Herbert, p. 394.

The King endeavours to ſtrengthen himſelf by Foreign Alliances.

The King being advertis'd of this Sentence, endeavour'd to ſtrengthen himſelf with foreign Alliances. And here in the firſt Place, he diſpatch'd his Agents to the Proteſtant Princes of Germany. The Reaſon of ſo forward an Application was becauſe he had been inform'd, the Pope had threaten'd to diſpoſe of his Kingdom to ſome Roman Catholick Prince of the Empire. His Holyneſs it ſeems was unwilling to throw ſo great an Addition upon the Crowns of France or Spain, for fear of breaking the Balance. I don't mention this as if the King were apprehenſive of the Succeſs of ſuch an Attempt; for ſtanding upon good Terms with his Subjects he was prepar'd to repel the Attack. However by fortifying his Intereſt in Germany, he wou'd be in the better Condition to chaſtize the Preſumption of ſuch an Enterprize.

Id.

And becauſe Scotland might confederate with the Enemies of England, and ſtrike in with an unlucky Juncture; the King endeavour'd to ſecure that Quarter. To this intent, he ſent his Agents to James the Fourth to draw him into his own Meaſures, and perſuade the throwing off the Pope's Authority. They deſir'd that Prince to peruſe the Arguments which brought their Maſter to his preſent Reſolution. The King of Scots referring the Conſideration of this Matter to the Clergy, the Propoſal miſcarried. The King not deſpairing of Succeſs, ſent the Lord William Howard, and the Biſhop of St. Aſaph, to re-inforce the Overture, to make a farther Invitation with more tempting Propoſals, and ſolicit that Prince to an Interview. King James, who had no fancy to meet his Uncle out of his own Dominions, threw in Excuſes: And as 'tis ſaid, procur'd a Brief under-hand from the Pope to forbid his Journey into England. But notwithſtanding the King of Scots could not be prevail'd with to go King Henry's Lengths, yet it ſeems there was ſo far an Underſtanding between them, that the latter had no Reaſon to be apprehenſive of any unfriendly Practice.

Id. p. 395.

The King conſults about the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries.

Our King being now determin'd againſt all Accommodation with the Pope, projected the weakening his Intereſt at Home as well as Abroad. Now 'twas thought the Monaſteries might give him moſt Diſturbance in his Deſigns; the Privileges of Exemption made ſeveral of 'em more obnoxious to the See of Rome. They were look'd on by ſome People as a Body of Reſerve for the Pope, and always ready to appear in his Quarrel, and ſupport his Claims. Beſides, there were a great many Men of Figure in theſe Houſes, who might prove troubleſome with their Learning and Parts. Theſe 'tis likely might be ſome of the Motives, which brought the King to a Thought for diſſolving the Abbies. This great Point being under Deliberation, there were Speeches made at the Board on both ſides of the Queſtion.

Id. p. 396.

The Firſt, after ſome introductive Expreſſions of Reſpect, deliver'd himſelf to this Effect:

A Speech againſt the Suppreſſion of Religious Houſes.

SIR,

“ If the founding of Monaſteries was now propos'd, I ſhou'd neither allow the preſent Number, nor poſſibly approve all the Regulations in thoſe Societies. But on the other hand, to diſappoint People unfit for the World, from ſo ſerviceable a Retirement, is in my Opinion no commendable Project. For is not this the way to leave the moſt pious unprovided, and cut off the Succours of a comfortable Living from thoſe who are beſt qualified for Devotion? Therefore in my humble Opinion, Monaſteries ought to be maintain'd for the Benefit of a retir'd and contemplative Diſpoſition. However, when they exceed their juſt Proportion in a State, or ſerve only for a Shelter to Idleneſs and Inſignificancy, ſome Remedy ſhou'd be thought on. But, Sir, who muſt be applied to for this Purpoſe? If the Expedient is referr'd to the Pope, what Reformation can be expected? For tho' his Holyneſs does not pay 'em, are they not, as it were, ſo ma-

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

"ny Auxiliaries in his Service? And if your Highneſs, upon the Strength of your Supremacy ſhou'd proceed to a Diſſolution, what Scandal wou'd be given to the World? For who, either at Home or Abroad, wou'd underſtand your Highneſs? Who wou'd think, Sir, you purſued your Authority, or manag'd your New Charge as was generally expected? And farther, Sir, how wou'd the Founders of theſe Houſes be injur'd by ſuch an Expedient: The Founders, who had as much Right to diſpoſe of part of their Eſtates to ſuch Uſes, as their Heirs have to enjoy the reſt? Wou'd not this be conſtrued an Encroachment upon publick Right, and defeating a Title which hath both human and divine Law for its Eſtabliſhment? Be pleas'd therefore, Sir, not to think of ruining, but reforming theſe Societies. Or if the Exceſſiveneſs of their Numbers calls for a Suppreſſion of ſome of 'em, be pleas'd to remember the Foundations were dedicated to God Almighty: And let this Conſideration prevail with your Majeſty to transfer the Eſtates to ſome pious Uſe: And that even here the Matter ſhould be managed with Reſervation: And a ſufficient Number of theſe Religious Houſes be ſtill maintain'd for both Sexes in every County. And thus, by this Temper, your Highneſs will be ſkreen'd from Cenſure, and ſhew your Regard to Antiquity and Devotion.

To this another Gentleman, who was better acquainted with the King's Mind, return'd the following Anſwer.

Another for it.

SIR,

"If 'tis true, that the reducing all Reaſons of State under the Regulation of Moral and Religious Principles, is a ſtraight-lac'd and croſs-humour'd Direction; ſo on the other hand, to exclude Morality and Faith from having any Sway in Politick Meaſures, is a prophane Latitude. The Publick has Occaſion for all theſe Aſſiſtances: But then where the Body requires a Symetry, nothing muſt exceed Proportion. Thus all Profeſſions, both Sacred and Civil, ſhou'd be well balanc'd: And neither the Magiſtracy or Clergy, the Soldiery or Merchants, the Men of Trade or Huſbandry ſhou'd run out into Excreſcence, or grow too numerous for the other Diviſions. To come towards an Application: The Government muſt have People to work and fight, as well as to pray and to preach for it. If there was nothing of this Neceſſity, who wou'd not change the Temporal into the Spiritual Militia? At this rate our Generals and Captains ſhou'd be made Biſhops and Deans, and our Men of War and Forts be turn'd to Chapels and Religious Houſes. But ſince this Scheme is too viſionary, we are to conſider what Proportion the Clergy hold to the reſt of the Subjects. Now unleſs I am miſinform'd, the Revenues of the fourth Part of the Kingdom are in their Hands. However, Sir, I am not for a general Suppreſſion of Religious Houſes: I own the pious Deſign of their Inſtitution, and more than that, I believe the leaving two or three of 'em in a County may be uſeful enough. I am by no means for any unneceſſary Steps this way; and humbly conceive, the Money accruing from thence ſhou'd be employ'd only upon your Highneſs's moſt urgent Occaſions. The ſupernumerary Part of theſe Houſes and your Foreſts being in my Opinion of the ſame Serviceableneſs: I look upon 'em as the Jewels of your Kingdom: 'Tis granted they have neither the Metal nor the Impreſſion of current Money, but notwithſtanding that they may be turn'd to Coin, whenever your Majeſty pleaſes. For this Reaſon, if there was no other, I ſhou'd adviſe the preſerving 'em as much as 'tis poſſible. But, Sir, on the other ſide, when I conſider how the Pope, or the Biſhop of Rome (as your Highneſs has order'd him to be call'd,) when I conſider how this Prelate has menac'd your Highneſs; how he makes it his Buſineſs to draw all the Princes of Chriſtendom upon you; how deep theſe Monaſteries are in his Intereſt, and how factiouſly they conteſt your Supremacy: When I conſider the Diſaffection of theſe Seminaries, and how inſtrumental they may prove in diſturbing the Government, promoting a Revolt, and ſtriking in with a Foreign Invaſion, I can't help wiſhing ſome Method might be taken by way of Prevention. To this Purpoſe, I humbly conceive a Viſitation wou'd be a proper Remedy: And that thoſe who viſit ſhou'd be authoriz'd to diſcharge thoſe Religious, who find their Vows too much for 'em; to open the Cloiſter, to ſuit their Tempers better, and give 'em the Freedom of the World. That the Immoralities of others who want this Excuſe ſhou'd be put under Diſcipline: And that for the future, thoſe who arraign the Government may be under Correction, and kept upon their Good Behaviour. And thus far your Highneſs may fairly make uſe of your Supremacy. But as for the Suppreſſing any Monaſteries, I dare not ſuggeſt any ſuch Advice: Nothing but ſome very ſtrong and apparent Neceſſity can juſtify ſuch Meaſures. If your Highneſs can ſtand your Ground, and defend your ſelf againſt foreign Inſults, I ſhall never recommend a Diſſolution. And if ſuch a thing ſhou'd be attempted by the Extremity of the Juncture, I humbly conceive your Majeſty ſhou'd go no farther in the Expedient than to proportion the fortunes of the Spiritualty and Temporalty, and bring your Kingdom to an evener Balance.

The King orders a Viſitation of the Monaſteries. Id. p. 398.

The King having weigh'd the Reaſons of both theſe Privy Counſellors, declar'd he wou'd give Order for a ſtrict Viſitation: That there ſhould be no Commutations allow'd, but that thoſe who had misbehav'd themſelves to any remarkable degree, ſhou'd be ſeverely puniſh'd, and that Rules ſhou'd be ſet for Reformation; proteſting withal, that none of 'em ſhou'd be ſuppreſs'd without the Conſent of the Parliament. This Proteſtation was, as the Lord Herbert obſerves, politickly made: The King foreſaw his Reputation wou'd not be risk'd, nor his Hands tied by ſuch a conditional Promiſe. As things ſtood, he had little Reaſon to queſtion the Concurrence of the Parliament: He was ſenſible the Doctrines of the Court of Rome were much diſreliſh'd. And beſides, if the Storm ſhou'd break over 'em, and the Kingdom be forc'd upon a War, the Parliament wou'd ſooner chuſe to lay the whole Charge upon the Monaſteries, than take Part of it themſelves.

Cromwell made Viſitor General.

And ſince the Reports from the Viſitation were likely either to promote or obſtruct the Diſſolution, the Succeſs of the Affair depended very much upon proper Inſtruments. Now the King thought no Perſon better qualified than Secretary Cromwell: He was look'd on as diſaffected to the Monaſteries, and ſomewhat inclin'd to the Lutheran Perſuaſion. This Miniſter to qualify him for his Function, was made Vicar General. In virtue of this Commiſſion, he was conſtituted General Viſitor of all the Monaſteries; not to mention his Superintendency over the Biſhops and ſecular Clergy.

Vicar General and Lord Vice-gerent the ſame Office.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian takes notice of a Miſtake in confounding this Vicar Generalſhip with his following Dignity of Lord Vice-gerent in Eccleſiaſtical Matters; but they were two different Places, and held by two different Commiſſions. By the one he had no Authority over the Biſhops, nor had he any Precedence; but the other as it gave him the Precedence next the Royal Family, ſo it cloath'd him with a compleat Delegation of the King's whole Power in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs (r). Thus far this learned Prelate. But then he is not pleas'd to give us any Proof of this Diſtinction, or the Enlargement of Power in the latter Office. He owns neither of the Commiſſions were inroll'd, and charges this Defect of Evidence upon a ſuppos'd Raſure of Records in the Reign of Queen Mary. But as it happens, this Commiſſion of Cromwell's is ſtill extant (s). Now by inſpecting this Inſtrument, it appears that Cromwell by being made Vicar General had an entire Delegation of the King s Supremacy; that he had an Authority to viſit all the Biſhops and Archbiſhops in the Kingdom: And that Vicar General and Vice gerent, were only two Names for the ſame thing. When this learned Hiſtorian wrote his Second Part, he met with Cromwell's Commiſſion for Vicar General: But then he was not ſo fortunate as to recollect himſelf, and acquaint the Reader with his former Miſtake (t).

Cromwell authoriz'd to conſtitute Deputies for a general Viſitation.

To proceed: Cromwell being authoriz'd by the King's Letters Patents under the Broad Seal, to conſtitute Deputies for a Viſitation, made choice of Richard Layton, Thomas Legh, William Petre, Doctors of the Law; Doctor John London Dean of Wallingford, &c. for this Purpoſe.

This Viſitation was ſuggeſted by Doctor Leighton, or Layton, who had been in the Cardinal's Service with Cromwell, who knew him to be a Perſon well qualified for ſuch an Employment. This Layton in a Letter to Cromwell acquaints him, that he had diſcours'd the Dean of the Arches upon this Buſineſs: That the Dean thought the Country was not yet prepar'd for a Viſitation in the King's Name: That they ought to wait two or three Years, till the Supremacy was better underſtood: And that he was afraid ſo early an Exerciſe of Diſcipline might make the Clergy more averſe to the King's Power. But Layton was of a different Sentiment: He thought nothing wou'd ſo much reconcile the People to the Supremacy as the Proof of its Serviceableneſs, which wou'd eaſily appear upon a ſtrict Viſitation: He pretended the Religious were now grown remarkable for their Misbehaviour; and that the Reformation of Abuſes wou'd be a Popular Thing (u). He added, there had been no Viſitation in the North ſince the Cardinal's Time. This Layton in another Letter to Cromwell requeſted that himſelf and Doctor Legh might be appointed Viſitors of all the Monaſteries from the Dioceſs of Lincoln, Northward.

Layton and Legh ſolicit to be made Viſitors.

And here to recommend himſelf to this Miniſter he acknowledges that Doctor Legh's and his being preferr'd to the King's Service was wholly owing to Cromwell: That this Vicar General had been their Patron all along, and that they reſolv'd to have no other. He proceeds to ſuggeſt, how well qualified Doctor Legh and himſelf were for this Buſineſs, upon the ſcore of their own Knowledge, their Acquaintance and Relations in the Northern Counties. He intimates the Partiality of former Viſitors, and that thoſe Houſes wou'd need a very careful and particular Inſpection. In ſhort, both by recommending himſelf and Legh, and declaiming againſt the Diſorders of the Monks; he ſeems very forward for this Employment: But this, by the way, is none of the beſt Circumſtances to conclude him a diſintereſted Perſon.

The Archbiſhop takes a Licenſe from the King for his Viſitation.

About this time, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury made his Metropolitical Viſitation: He did not venture upon this Branch of Juriſdiction without the King's Licenſe; for now the Biſhops cou'd do little without an Authority from the Crown (w). And notwithſtanding the Archbiſhop took wary Steps, and made but a few new Demands, yet Stokeſly Biſhop of London conteſted his Viſitation; and refus'd to ſubmit till he had enter'd three Proteſtations for preſerving of Privileges (x).

But this was not all, for he made a formal Appeal to the King for Relief againſt the Encroachments of the Archbiſhop.

Cotton. Libr. Cleop. 6. F. 2. fol. 124.

Bp. Stokeſly's Appeal againſt the Archbiſhop's Viſitation.

This Appeal drawn up in the Name of the Biſhop, Dean, and Chapter, ſets forth, firſt, “ That the Archbiſhop of Canterbury in all his Monitions and Writings ſent to the Biſhop, Abbots, &c. call'd himſelf Apoſtolicæ ſedis Legatus. That the Biſhop of London, with the Chapter, remonſtrated and proteſted in Form againſt this Stile, and that they wou'd not receive him as Legate, nor obey his Viſitation under that Character; the claiming ſuch an Authority being contrary to the Prerogative Royal and the Statutes of this Realm.

“ Secondly, That the Archbiſhop in the ſaid Monition to the Biſhop, ſignified his Intention of ſuſpending all the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop, the Dean and Archdeacons, during the whole Time of his Viſitation, which he pretended, he had Power to continue as long as he pleas'd: That by ſo great a Stretch of Metropolitical Privilege, the Provincial Biſhops wou'd be leſſen'd to Titulars, and ſignifie nothing: That this wou'd be an intolerable Inconvenience, and ſuch as never was claim'd by any Metropolitan or Legate, when the Uſurpations of the Court of Rome, were at the greateſt Height.

“ Thirdly, 'Tis urg'd in the Appeal, that the puſhing the Metropolitical Juriſdiction thus far, is to go counter to the Authority of all the Learned in the Canon Law: That ſuch a Suſpenſion put upon the Biſhops, ſeems to claſh with the Holy Scriptures, and to recal the Authority given 'em by God Almighty.

“ That if there were a Precedent of any ſuch Strain of the Archi-Epiſcopal Character upon Record, 'twas ſupported upon a Pretence foreign to their ordinary Authority, and put in ure upon the ſcore either of their being Legates, or Lord Chancellors of England. The Appeal is drawn out into a farther length, but this is the Subſtance.

A Regal Inhibition to ſuſpend the Juriſdiction of the Biſhops.

And now the Time for the other Viſitation drawing on, the King iſſued out Letters of Inhibition to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, charging him and his Suffragans not to viſit the Clergy or Religious, till the Regal Viſitation was over; meaning that which was to be manag'd under the Vicar-General Cromwell. And thus all Epiſcopal Juriſdiction was laid aſleep, and almoſt ſtruck dead by the Regale, during the King's Pleaſure. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury directed his Mandate to the Biſhop of London, who was to tranſmit Copies of the Inhibition to the reſt of the Provincial Biſhops (y).

(r) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 181.

(s) See Records, N. 30.

(t) Bp. Burnet, Hiſt. Ref. pt. 2. p. 341.

(u) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. Id. fol. June 4.

(w) Rot. Pat. Regn. 27. pt 1.

(x) Regiſt. Stokeſly, fol. 44.

(y) See Records, N. 31.

October. The Extent of Layton, Legh, &c. Commiſſion.

The next Month Layton, Legh, London, Souwell, Price, Gage, Bellaſis, &c. began their General Viſitation under Cromwell: They were furniſh'd, at leaſt ſome of thoſe firſt named, with a Plenitude of Power to viſit all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and the reſt of the inferior Clergy, and to correct and reform, and exerciſe all manner of Diſcipline which belong'd to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction; they had likewiſe an Authority to confirm or null the Elections of Prelates, to order Inſtalments, to give Inſtitutions and Inductions, to ſequeſter the Fruits of Livings, to deprive or ſuſpend Archbiſhops, Biſhops, &c. to convene Synods and preſide in 'em, and to make ſuch Reformations and Orders as they ſhou'd think expedient. They had likewiſe an Authority for trying all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, and exerting the Cenſures of the Church, upon thoſe who either refus'd to appear or abide by the Sentence. And as to Monaſteries, they had, as it were, an unlimited Authority, and were impower'd to allow Penſions, to ſuch as were diſpoſed to quit that way of living (z).

(z) See Records, N. 30.

Legh and John Apprice being apprehenſive the Biſhops would uſe their Intereſt to get the Inhibition of their Juriſdiction taken off, wrote to the Vicegerent Cromwell to diſappoint them in their Attempt. In the Letter they ſuggeſt ſeveral Reaſons why the Inhibitions ſhould continue.

Biblioth. Cot. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 255.

“ Firſt, That the King always look'd upon himſelf as Supreme Head of the Church, notwithſtanding it had been but lately added to the Regal Stile: 'Tis our Opinion therefore that if the King made a temporary Seiſure of all ſpiritual Juriſdiction it would confirm the Subject in the Belief of his Right and prove a ſerviceable Precedent.

“ Secondly, That in caſe the Biſhops had always enjoy'd this Juriſdiction without any Interruption, they wou'd (as they now do upon the Matter) have preſum'd they had receiv'd their Authority from ſome other Fountain than the King's Highneſs. Theſe Viſitors therefore look upon it as a prudential Expedient to ſuſpend their Juriſdiction for ſome time, that by this means they may be forc'd to confeſs their Authority flows from the King. They proceed and argue farther upon Eraſtian Principles. If (ſay they) the Biſhops have any Juriſdiction they muſt receive it either by virtue of the Law of God, or by the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, or by the King's Permiſſion. If they ſay by the Law of God, let them produce their Proofs from Scripture, but we think them not ſo impudent as to ſay ſo.

“ If they ſay by the Biſhop of Rome's Authority, let them exerciſe it ſtill, if they think it convenient.

“ If they ſay by the King's Permiſſion, why ſhould they be diſturb'd at the Inhibition? Why ſhould they be diſſatisfied at the King's reſuming that Authority which was no more than a voluntary Grant and proceeded originally from him? They proceed in their Argument, and object that poſſibly the Biſhops will argue upon the Topick of Preſcription and immemorial Cuſtom: To this they anſwer, that tho' this Aſſertion contradicts the Language of the Law, yet, in the Opinion of theſe Viſitors, the Biſhops might in time have preſcrib'd, if the Exerciſe of their Authority had continued; and therefore to cut them off from this Plea, they thought it beſt to put a ſtop to this Juriſdiction, and that this may ſerve to juſtify the Inhibition. For had not their Authority been laid aſleep, during the King's Viſitation, their Succeſſors might pretend the King was only a Titular and Nominal Head of the Church, but had no Right to put his Claim in Execution.

“ They urge farther, if the Biſhops claim Authority by divine Right, let them ſhew their Evidence; but if they pretend only to hold it of the King's Favour, let them addreſs his Majeſty that they may have it return'd, that by ſo doing both themſelves and all others may declare the King to be the Fountain of all Power within the Realm, and that all kind of Juriſdiction is deriv'd from him; and that during the Regal Viſitation they may execute only the neceſſary Branches of their Function, (if they can ſhew any to be ſuch) as the King's Commiſſaries and Cromwell's.

To proceed: For the Viſitors better Direction in this new Office, they were furniſh'd with Inſtructions to make their Inquiry; theſe were drawn up in eighty ſix Articles: The Subſtance of 'em was to examine (a),

(a) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4.

Inſtructions or Articles of Inquiry for viſiting the Monaſteries.

“ Whether Divine Service was kept up Day and Night at the right Hours? How many were commonly preſent, and who were frequently abſent?

“ Whether every Religious Houſe was furniſh'd with a full Number, perſuant to the Statutes of the Foundation? Who were the Founders? Whether the original Settlement has been enlarg'd ſince the Foundation, and to what Degree? What were the Revenues of the Houſe? Whether 'twas ever chang'd from one Order to another? By whom? And upon what Account?

“ What Mortmains they had? And whether their Founders were legally authoriz'd to convey ſuch Eſtates?

“ Upon what Suggeſtions, and for what Cauſes their Exemptions from their Dioceſans were procur'd?

“ Their local Statutes were alſo to be examin'd.

“ The Election of their reſpective Heads, whether Abbots or Priors, Abbeſſes or Prioreſſes, was to be inquir'd into, and the Rule of every Houſe inſpected. And here the Inſtructions directed a View of how many were Profeſs'd? How many Novices were in the Houſe? And whether the Novices were Profeſs'd within due time?

“ Whether they were acquainted with their Rule and kept it, eſpecially in the three principal Branches of Poverty, Chaſtity, and Obedience? Whether any of 'em made uſe of any Money or Plate without the Maſter's Knowledge or Leave?

“ Whether they convers'd with Women, either within the Monaſtery or elſewhere? And whether the Head, or any Brother, be ſuſpected for Incontinency, and blemiſh'd in his Reputation upon that ſcore? Whether Women came into the Monaſtery by any Back-ways, or otherwiſe, or whether they were lodg'd within the Precinct of the ſame? Whether the Maſter, or any of the Convent had any Boys lying with 'em?

“ Whether they kept Silence in the Church, Cloiſter and Dormitory at the Hours appointed? Whether they obſerv'd the Diſcipline of Faſting and Abſtinence, purſuant to the Orders

“ and Cuſtoms of the Houſe? And particularly whether they abſtain'd from Fleſh, in Advent, and other times preſcrib'd by their Rule? Whether they made uſe of woollen Shirts and Sheets? Or had any Conſtitution or Diſpenſation for Liberty in theſe Matters? Whether any of the Brothers quitted the Houſe, and remov'd to another of the ſame Order, without Letters of Leave from the Abbot or Prior? And where any have been receiv'd without ſuch Recommendation? Whether any of the Brothers have deſerted the Cloiſter, and rambled about the Country? And whether the Cruelty or Negligence of the Maſter occaſion'd this Diſorder? Whether the Maſter was guilty of Partiality or Diſaffection to any of the Convent? And whether he was not exceſſive in his Diſcipline and Corrections?

“ Whether the Brothers wore their proper Habits, without running out towards Expence and Equipage?

“ Whether any of the Religious were incorrigible? Whether the Maſter treated his Brethren fairly under Sickneſs and Infirmity, and provided Phyſitians, and other Neceſſaries for 'em? Whether the Maſter paſs'd his Accounts fully once a Year? Whether all the other Officers gave the ſame Proof of their Conduct and Integrity? And whether the Revenues of the Houſe were ſpent as the Founder intended?

“ Whether the Monaſtery, and all the Granges, Farms, and Tenements were kept in ſufficient Repair?

“ Whether they had an Inventory of the Jewels, Relicts, Ornaments, Money, Plate, Furniture, and all other Goods and Chattels belonging to the Houſe?

“ Whether the Monaſtery was indebted? To whom? And upon what Account?

“ Whether any of the Lands were ſold, mortgag'd, and for how much Money?

“ What Leaſes were made to Farmers? And for what Term? And whether the annual Rent was leſſen'd to increaſe the Fines?

“ Whether the Maſter compell'd the Convent to conſent to the ſealing of any Leaſes, Annuities, Corrodies, or other Alienations?

“ Whether the Plate, Jewels, or any other Goods belonging to the Houſe were pawn'd or ſold, or otherwiſe embezell'd? And for what Cauſe? And to whom?

“ Whether the Maſter convey'd any Farms, Corrodies, &c. to his Friends and Relations? Whether he paſs'd any Grant, or made uſe of the Convent Seal, without the Conſent of his Brethren?

“ Whether the Convent Seal was kept under three Keys, one in the Cuſtody of the Maſter, and the other two in the Hands of two of the Seniors?

“ Whether the Charters, Evidences and Records of the Houſe are well laid up, and preſerv'd from Decay?

“ Whether the Maſter maintains the cuſtomary Hoſpitality, in porportion to the Revenues of the Houſe? Whether he has taken Bribes for receiving Novices? And whether he has refus'd any for want of a Gratification? Whether the Novices are furniſh'd with a Maſter to teach 'em Grammar and other Parts of Learning? And whether any Senior of the Houſe be particularly appointed to inform 'em in their Rule and Behaviour? Whether any of 'em have undertaken the Profeſſion out of an ambitious View, and in Hopes of being Head of the Houſe?

“ Whether the Maſter has charg'd the Preſentee to any Benefice with any Penſion, or brought him to a Simoniacal Contract? How many Benefices the Maſter keeps in his own Hands? And whether they are appropriated, and annex'd to the Houſe by ſufficient Authority? Whether the Maſter diſtributes his Charity amongſt the Pariſhioners of the Appropriations, and performs the Conditions mention'd in that Settlement?

And here they were to exhibit the Deeds of the Appropriations, together with the Erection and Endowments of the Vicaridges.

Farther, They were to enquire, “ Whether the Maſter preſented ſuch Clerks to the Benefices of the Houſe, as were well qualified with reſpect to Learning, Probity and Diſcretion?

“ Whether any Brother of the Houſe ſupplied the Cure of any of their appropriated Churches? And how many of the Convent were thus employ'd?

“ Whether the Maſter of the Houſe holds any Benefice with Cure, or other Dignity with his Abby? If he did he was to ſhew his Diſpenſation. Whether any Perſon ſince his being Maſter, was conſcious of his lying under the Cenſures of Suſpenſion or Excommunication? If he did, whether he preſum'd to ſing Maſs before Abſolution?

Inſtructions for the Nunneries.

The Remainder of the Inſtructions relates to the Nuns. Here the Viſitor was order'd to walk round the Monaſtery, to examine the Buildings of the Houſe, and ſee whether there are any back Paſſages, or private Ways of getting in: And for better Information, he was to take the Abbeſs and two or three of the eldeſt Nuns along with him: Theſe were to be aſk'd, “ Whether the Gates of the Monaſtery were lock'd every Night? Whether the Abbeſs or any of the elder Siſters kept the Keys? It not being ſafe to truſt them with the younger.

“ Whether Strangers both Men and Women converſe frequently with the Siſters of the Houſe, without Leave from the Abbeſs or Prioreſs.

“ Whether this is done in private when none of the Siſters are in Company?

“ Whether any Siſter of the Houſe was compell'd to take the Veil by the Abbeſs, or her own Relations?

“ Whether any of the Siſters walk beyond the Precinct of the Houſe, without ſpecial Leave from the Abbeſs or Prioreſs?

“ Whether any Siſter when out of her Cell appears always in her Habit?

“ How they employ their Time, out of the Hours of Divine Service?

“ Whether any Siſter converſes familiarly with Monks, ſecular Prieſts or Laymen, not nearly related to her? Whether any Siſter has been diſcover'd to entertain any ſuch ſuſpicious Commerce, without any reaſonable Cauſe for ſo doing?

“ Whether any Love-Letters are written or receiv'd, or any private Meſſages or Preſents, are conveyed to the Siſters from any ſecular Perſon or others?

“ Whether any of the Siſters makes it a Cuſtom to talk with any Perſon by Night or Day, at Grates or back Windows, without Leave from her Superior?

“ Whether the Confeſſor of the Houſe, be a Perſon of Learning, Probity and Diſcretion? And whether he has always had the Reputation of being thus qualified?

“ How often in a Year the Siſters of the Houſe us'd to confeſs and receive the Holy Euchariſt?

“ And laſtly, to put the Viſitors in a Condition to diſcharge their Commiſſion more effectually, they were requir'd to produce all their Charters, Evidences, Inventories, and Writings of what kind ſoever.

The Method us'd in Elections of Abbots, &c.

By theſe Inſtructions the Government of the Religious Houſes may be in a great meaſure collected, and their Diſcipline and Manner diſcovered. Now becauſe one Article concerns the Election of their Superior, I ſhall inſert ſomething extracted from the Biſhop's Regiſter upon this Subject.

To begin: Upon the Vacancy of an Abbey or Hoſpital, Application was made to the Founder to proceed to a new Election: After the Election was made by the Houſe, the Patron conſented to it, and then wrote to the Biſhop to confirm the whole Proceedings (b).

At the Confirmation of the Elect, the Abbot or Prior took an Oath of Canonical Obedience to the Biſhop of the Dioceſs (c).

To be ſomewhat more particular: When the Elect was preſented to the Dioceſan, the Biſhop order'd the Apparitor to ſummon thoſe who had any thing to object againſt the Election, affixing a Paper to the Church-Door of the Priory for that purpoſe: If no Body appear'd within ſo many Days, the Biſhop proceeded to confirm the Election, and put the Government of the Houſe into the Hands of the Superior. Upon which the Abbot or other Head, took the Oath to the Biſhop above mentioned. The Oath taken by Iſabel Sackville, the laſt Prioreſs of Clerkenwell, is entred in Engliſh, and runs in this Form.

A Prioreſſes Oath of Canonical Obedience to the Biſhop.

“ In the Name of God. Amen. I Dame Iſabel Sakeſeld, elect and confirm'd Prioreſs of the Houſe and Priory of our bleſſed Lady of Clerkenwell, of the Dioceſs and Juriſdiction of London (d), Promit and Swear upon this Holy Evangeliſts here bodily touch'd by me, before you Mr. Jeoffry Wharton Doctor of Decrees, and Vicar-General to the Reverend Father in God, Lord Cuthbert Biſhop of London, Founder and Patron of the ſaid Priory, and mine Ordinary and Dioceſan, that from henceforth as long as I ſhall be Prioreſs of the ſaid Houſe and Priory, I ſhall give due Reverence, Obedience, and Subjection to the ſaid Reverend Father Lord Cuthbert Biſhop of London now being. And alſo to his Succeſſors lawfully ſucceeding, and their ſpiritual Officers, in all lawful Things and Commandments. And alſo that I ſhall ſave and keep the Goods of the ſaid Houſe or Priory, and defend, maintain, and recover the Rights thereto belonging, to the beſt Profit of the ſame, as far forth as I can, or ſhall be able to do. And that I ſhall not grant no Fees, nor Corrodies, nor make none Alienations or Dilapidations thereof, or Goods belonging to the ſame Houſe or Priory, to the great Hurt or Damage thereof. So God me help, and this Book, and the holy Contents of the ſame, ------ &c.

After the taking this Oath, ſhe was inſtall'd by the Chaplain of the Houſe, purſuant to the Biſhop's Mandate.

See Records, Numb. 34.

In the Ordo Romanus, there is an Office for the Conſecration and Inſtalment of an Abbeſs, which, in regard it was compos'd by Theodore, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, we may conclude 'twas us'd in England, and therefore I ſhall tranſcribe it for the Reader. To this I ſhall ſubjoin the Form for conſecrating a Nun.

And here it may not be improper to obſerve, That the Engliſh Nunneries choſe their general or ordinary Confeſſor, which Election was confirmed by the Biſhop (e).

I have mention'd the Original of the Monaſtick Inſtitution elſewhere, and given an Account of the ſeveral Orders in England (f). I have likewiſe related the Reformations in theſe Societies; for this Reaſon I ſhall wave the Repetition. But the Rule of the Benedictines having not been already obſerv'd, I ſhall give it the Reader. For this Order being the ancienteſt ſince the Saxons, and the later Fraternities going moſtly upon their Plan, a brief Recital may not be unacceptable.

The Benedictine Rule.

Firſt, As to the Hours of Prayer in the Chapel: They were oblig'd to perform their Devotion Seven Times within the Four and Twenty Hours. They are commonly rang'd under theſe Diſtinctions.

Firſt, At Cock-crowing, or the Nocturnal; this Service was perform'd at Two a Clock in the Morning: The Ground for pitching upon this Hour, is taken partly from David's ſaying, At Midnight I will praiſe the Lord. And partly from a Tradition of our Saviour's riſing from the Dead about that time. Pſ. 119. 62.

Secondly, Mattins: Theſe were ſaid at the firſt Hour, or according to our Computation, at Six a Clock. At this Time the Jewiſh Morning Sacrifice was offer'd. The Angels likewiſe are ſuppos'd to have acquainted the Women with our Saviour's Reſurrection at this Hour.

Thirdly, The Tierce: which was at Nine in the Morning, when our Saviour was condemn'd and ſcourg'd by Pilate.

Fourthly, The Sexte, or Twelve at Noon, when our Saviour was crucified and the Sun eclipſed to a total Darkneſs.

Fifthly, The None, or Three in the Afternoon; at this Hour our Saviour expir'd, and beſides 'twas a Time for Publick Prayer in the Temple. Acts 3. 1.

Sixthly, Veſpers: Theſe were ſaid at Six in the Afternoon: The Reaſon for the Time is, becauſe the Evening Sacrifice was then offer'd in the Jewiſh Temple, and our bleſſed Saviour is ſuppos'd to have been taken down from the Croſs at this Hour.

Seventhly, The Compline: This Service was perform'd after Seven, when our Saviour's Agony in the Garden was believed to begin.

The Monks going to Bed at Night, had ſix Hours to ſleep before the Nocturnal began: Neither if they went to Bed afterwards, was it reckoned a Fault, as far as I can diſcover: But after Mattins, they were not allowed that Liberty (g).

To proceed: At the Tolling of the Bell for Prayers, the Monks were immediately to leave off their Buſineſs: And here the Canon it ſeems, was ſo ſtrict, that thoſe who copied Books, or were Clerks in any Buſineſs, and had begun a Text Letter, were not allow'd to finiſh it. Thoſe who were abſent and employ'd in the Buſineſs of the Houſe, were reckon'd preſent as to Excuſe and Duty: And that they might not ſuffer by being elſewhere, they were particularly recommended to the Divine Protection.

The Monks were oblig'd to go always Two together: This was done to guard their Conduct, to prompt 'em to good Thoughts, and furniſh

(b) Regiſt. Fitz-James, fol. 66 114. See Records, Numb. 32.

(c) Tonſtal. Regiſt. fol. 57. See Records, Numb. 33.

(d) Tunſtal. Regiſt. fol. 46.

(e) Regiſt. Fitz-James, fol. 40.

(f) See my Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1. Morery's Dictionary. The Supplement to Morery, Article Religious.

(g) Concord. Regular. Collected by St. Benedict, *and publiſhed with a Comment, by Frier Æ*nard, 1638. Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 6. p. 287. & deinc.

them with a Witneſs to defend their Behaviour.

From Eaſter to Whitſontide, they din'd at Twelve and ſupp'd at Six. In this Interval, the Primitive Church obſerv'd no Faſts (h).

At other Times the Religious were bound to faſt till Three a Clock on Wedneſdays and Fridays. The Twelve Days in Chriſtmas were excepted in this Canon.

Every Day in Lent, they were enjoin'd to faſt till Six in the Evening. During this Solemnity, they retrench'd their Refreſhment, and came to Abatements in Sleep and Eating, and ſpent more Time in their Devotions. However, they were not to go into any voluntary Auſterities, without Leave from the Abbot.

They were not allow'd to talk in the Refectory at Meals.

They were likewiſe to hearken to the Scriptures read to 'em at that Time.

The Septimarians were to dine by themſelves after the reſt. Theſe Septimarians were ſo call'd, becauſe their Office continued but a Week. Such as the Reader, Waiters, Cook, &c.

Thoſe who were abſent about Buſineſs, had the ſame Hours of Prayer preſcrib'd 'em, tho' it may be not oblig'd to the ſame Length of Devotions.

Thoſe ſent abroad, and expecting to return at Night, are forbidden to eat till they came home. But this Canon was ſometimes diſpens'd with.

The Compline was to be ſolemnly ſung about Seven at Night. The Service concluded with this Verſe. Pſ. 141. v. 3. Set a Watch, O Lord, before my Mouth, and keep the Door of my Lips. After the Compline, they were not allow'd to talk, but go to Bed immediately. They were all to Sleep in the ſame Dormitory, but not Two in a Bed. They lay in their Cloaths. Small Faults, only put them from the Table; but for greater, they were barr'd Religious Commerce, or excluded the Chapel; and here none was to converſe with any Perſon excommunicated, under the Penalty of the ſame Cenſure. Incorrigible Criminals were expelled the Monaſteries.

When a Brother was received after Expulſion, he loſt his Seniority, and was plac'd the laſt in the Convent.

Every Monk was to have two Coats and two Cowles: And when they had new Cloaths, their Old ones were given to the Poor.

Every Monk was to have a Table Book, a Knife, a Needle, and a Handkerchief. The Furniture of their Bed was a Mat, a Blanket, a Rug, and a Pillow.

As to the Abbot, he was to be choſen upon the Qualifications of Regularity and Learning: But in more modern Times, the Senior Brother was generally choſen by a Majority. This Superior was never to dine alone, but when there were no Strangers, he was to invite ſome of the Brothers to his Table.

Theſe are the ſubſtantial Parts of the Benedictine Rule. The reſt being leſs ſignificant, ſhall be omitted.

To proceed: The Viſitors at their Return, gave in a tragical Relation of the Immorality of the Monaſteries. But whether their Report was fair, and their Teſtimony unexceptionable, I ſhall conſider afterwards.

At preſent I ſhall only examine ſome of the Remarks of a late Church Hiſtorian (i). This learned Gentleman taxes 'em with Encroachment upon the Church, upon the Score of their Exemptions. And that their exceſſive Wealth and licentious Behaviour, made 'em a Nuſance to the State.

The Exemptions of the Monks not ſo early nor ſo numerous as has been affirmed.

That their Exemptions from their Ordinary, were unprimitive Privileges, and prejudicial to Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, cannot be deny'd: And for this Innovation the Court of Rome muſt account, who were too forward to gratifie Princes and other Sollicitors in ſuch Requeſts. Our Biſhops ſometimes complained of theſe Encroachments, and made bold Remonſtrances to the Pope himſelf. Thus in the Reign of Henry the Second, Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury conteſted the Exemption of the Abby of St. Auguſtine's, prov'd it a Forgery, and had the Authority of our beſt Hiſtorians to ſupport him in the Diſpute. And becauſe the Abbot of St. Auguſtine's Canterbury was countenanc'd by the See of Rome, the Archbiſhop wrote a long Letter to Pope Alexander the Third, and declaims againſt Invaſions of this kind with great Freedom and Strength of Argument (k). And as the Exemptions were not ſo early, ſo neither were they ſo many as is commonly pretended. However, the learned Harmer who makes Battle-Abby the firſt Inſtance of an Exemption, is miſtaken: For not to mention the Abbies of Glaſſenbury and Malmsbury, thoſe of Bury St. Edmond's and Weſtminſter were undoubtedly exempted before the Conqueſt (l).

The Revenues of the Monks magnified beyond Matter of Fact.

Farther, the Monks are charged with poſſeſſing themſelves of the greateſt Part of the Riches of the Nation: And that this was done about the End of the Eighth Century. Now the beſt part of the Soil of England being in ſuch ill Hands, 'twas the Intereſt of the whole Kingdom to have it put to better Uſes (m). But firſt, the Period for their Wealth is ſet much too high: For at the End of the Eighth Century, there were but few Monaſteries in England. 'Tis true, in the Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Centuries, their Number and Eſtates were mightily increas'd. Now if we take 'em in the higheſt of their Fortune, they will not be found to exceed the Proportion of a fifth Part: But then even upon this Calculation, a great Abatement muſt be diſcounted: For the Religious were far from making the moſt of their Property, and ſtraining their Farms to Rack-Rents. On the contrary, they granted Leaſes to Laymen upon ſmall Rents, and gentle Fines; ſo that upon a juſt Computation, it may be truly affirm'd, their Revenues did not exceed the Tenth Part of the Nation.

And as their being generous Landlords cannot be deny'd, ſo the other Branch of their Charge which reflects upon their Management, falls ſhort of Proof. For the Monks are known to have made the moſt of their Farms which they kept in their own Hands: Neither were they at all Defective in the Serviceableneſs of Buildings, or other Improvements (n).

A heavy Imputation upon the Monaſteries, without Proof.

To proceed: There is another heavier Imputation laid upon the Monks: They are charg'd with a Crime of the moſt flagrant Nature: That they were ſo far from any Reſerve or Diſcretion in their Licentiouſneſs, that ſome of their Farms were let for bringing in a yearly Tribute to their Luſts (o). This Charge is reported in ſuch deciſive Language, that one wou'd think the Fact was beyond Queſtion: But Fuller, from whom the Paſſage is taken, believes the Story altogether improbable: He produces but a ſingle Inſtance, and has but an ill Vouchee for the Report. His Evidence was only Stephen Marſhal, the Smectymnian Divine. This Man pretended to ſee an Abby-Leaſe with ſuch a Proviſion. But then all things conſider'd, his Teſtimony deſerves but little Credit in ſuch Depoſitions (p).

(h) Tertul. de Coron. Milit.

(i) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 186. & deinc.

(k) See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 387, 388. Harmer, p. 40.

(l) See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. under the Reigns of Knute and Edward the Confeſſor, and p. 286.

(m) Bp. Burnet. Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 187. Id pt. 2. in Pref. p. 9.

(n) Harmar, p. 41.

(o) Bp. Burnet. Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 189.

(p) Fuller. Church Hiſtory p. 317, 318.

The Scriptures tranſlated by ſeveral Engliſh Monks.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, the Tranſlation of the Scriptures in the Vulgar Tongue, continued till the State of Monkery roſe: But when they engroſs'd the Riches, 'twas not conſiſtent with their Deſigns, nor with the Arts uſ'd to promote 'em, to let the Scriptures be much known (q). In diſproving the Severity of this Accuſation, I ſhall confine my Remarks to our own Nation. And here as the learned Harmer obſerves, we have the Names of Seven Engliſh Monks who tranſlated the Scriptures, or ſome part, into the Saxon Language. Theſe all of 'em lived before the Conqueſt, as by the Verſion we may eaſily imagine. Particularly, the Venerable Bede expired in tranſlating St. John's Goſpel: And even after the Norman Conqueſt, the Monks had no leſs a ſhare in Performances of this kind, than the Secular Clergy (r).

(q) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 194.

(r) Harmer, p. 43, 44. See my Church Hiſtory, pt. 1. p. 126.

The Motives which govern'd, the K. in the Diſſolution.

The motives which puſh'd the King upon theſe extraordinary meaſures of a Diſſolution, are ſaid to have been partly the incompliance of ſome of the Religious in the Caſes of his Supremacy and Divorce. But this Oppoſition was not general: For the greateſt part of 'em went a long with the Current, and ſubmitted to the Orders of the Government.

Another Reaſon which ſway'd the King in this Matter, was the Proſpect of a War with the Emperour. This Prince was then the moſt conſiderable at Sea; he was poſſeſs'd of the Seventeen Provinces: Some of which were remarkable for Naval Preparations. The Emperour had likewiſe conſiderable Fleets to Convoy the Wealth of the Indies to his European Dominions: Now the King perceiving the Intereſt of Trade extreamly advanc'd upon the diſcovery of America, was willing to project a ſhare for his own Subjects. And thus for Commerce and Defence, he deſign'd to fortifie his Ports, and make a great many new ones. This Charge was too big for the Revenues of the Crown: and as for his Subjects, he was loth to burthen 'em with a Tax proportion'd to ſo great an occaſion. In ſhort, the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries, was thought the eaſieſt way of furniſhing the Exchequer for this purpoſe. He had likewiſe a deſign of Founding many more Biſhopricks: By ſuch a new Erection, the exceſſive largeneſs of ſome Dioceſſes, would be reduc'd to a reaſonable Compaſs. Thus the Biſhops inſpection wou'd be more practicable, and the Primitive Plan better follow'd. Now to endow theſe Biſhopricks with a competent Revenue, he intended to ſettle the Eſtates of ſome of the Monaſteries upon 'em. But this noble Scheme was but lamely executed, as will appear upon the courſe of this Work.

Now to leſſen the Reputation of the religious Houſes, and make 'em fall unpitied, the King ſent his Viſitors in the manner above mention'd, to bring 'em to a ſtrict account, and expoſe their Misbehaviour.

The Proviſion for thoſe diſcharg'd the Monaſteries.

The Commiſſioners exerted their Powers to the utmoſt ſtretch, and were far from Partiality in the Inquiry. And thus ſeveral Monaſteries ſunk under the Teſt. Some Monks declar'd themſelves weary of their Habit, and beg'd for Enlargement: They pretended themſelves driven into Retirement, and that they were Profeſs'd before they underſtood their own Inclinations, or arrived at the Years of Diſcretion: Others complain'd there was no living upon the Viſitors Inſtructions (s). And thus when the Houſes were ſeiz'd, the King order'd ſuch to be diſcharg'd who were Profeſs'd under four and twenty Years of Age; and that thoſe who had liv'd longer when they turn'd Religious, might have the liberty either to quit their Profeſſion, or remove to a larger Houſe: That is, to one above the Value of Two Hundred Pounds per Annum. They who choſe to go into the World, if they were Prieſts, had a Habit allow'd 'em, and Forty Shillings for a Maintenance: As for the Nuns, they were only furniſh'd with a Gown, but had the choice of going where they pleas'd. Some of 'em, by ſubmitting to a ſurrender got better Conditions, and were allow'd ſmall Penſions during their Lives.

(s) Ld. Herbert, p. 399.

Id.

Dr. Lee had a ſole Commiſſion from Cromwell the Vicar General, for a Viſitation at Cambridge; he brought with him ſome Injunctions of his own for the Government of the Univerſity. Theſe Regulations were ſupplemental to the Injunctions lately ſet forth by the King.

By the firſt Clauſe, the Members of the Univerſity were bound to obſerve the Statutes of that Society, and of the reſpective Colleges, provided they were not repugnat to theſe Injunctions, nor to the Common and Statute Laws of the Realm.

No Maſter or Fellow was to receive any Money or acknowledgment for the Admiſſion of any Student.

The Vice-Chancellor, the Proctors, and Maſters of Colleges, were to bring in an Inventoty of the Goods belonging to the Univerſity; a Rental and Survey of their Eſtates; the Charters and Deeds of their Privileges and Endowments, together with the Pope's Bulls; all theſe Records and Inſtruments they were to bring in to the Honourable Thomas Cromwell, or to his Deputy; ipſius bene Placitum in eâ parte expectaturi.

They were likewiſe enjoin'd to furniſh a Greek or Hebrew Lecture at the Expence of the Univerſity.

They were oblig'd to ſay publick Maſs for the Proſperity of the King and his Queen Anne: And that this Service was to be perform'd in Great St. Mary's within a Month next enſuing. Theſe Injunctions were to be read every Month to the Scholars of each College.

And Laſtly, if any Member of the Univerſity ſhould be guilty of acting contrary to the King's Injunctions, or theſe annex'd to them; that then the Univerſity was to give the Court immediate notice of the Offence: And make their report of ſuch Misbehaviour either to the King, the Vicar General, or his Deputy. Theſe Injunctions were to be inlarg'd or mended as Cromwell thought fit. The Inſtrument is dated October 22d, A. D. 1535. 27 H. 8.

Theſe regulations being additional Proviſions, it may not be improper to mention ſome Heads of the King's Injunctions to which they relate.

His Majeſty begins with lamenting the Ignorance and Uncultivated Condition to which the Univerſity was lately ſunk. Secondly, He exhorts all the Members to recover the Chriſtian Religion to its original Purity and Truth: And here he recommends their Chancellor Cromwell, for their Viſitor. Thirdly, He commands them to renounce the Pope intirely, and to ſubmit to the Regale as the higheſt Authority under God Almighty. Fourthly, He encourages them to the Study of Languages, becauſe things are not to be gain'd without the Conveyance of Words. Or as the Inſtrument ſpeaks, ſenſum alicujus rei non poteſt ille aſſequi, qui rudis eſt idiomatis quo traditur. Fifthly, They are injoin'd to found two Lectures, one for the Latin, and another for the Greek Language: And that the Salary for the Readers ſhould be furniſh'd by a joint Contribution of the Colleges. Sixthly, That no Commentators upon the Maſter of the Sentences ſhould be publickly Read; but that all Lectures ſhould be made on ſome parts of the Scripture. Seventhly, That all Perſons ſhould have the liberty to read the Scriptures in their Studies. Eightly, That for the future, no Member in the Univerſity ſhould take any Degree in the Canon Law. Ninthly, 'Twas Order'd, that the Young Students ſhould read Ariſtotle, Rodolphus Agricola, Melancthon, Trapezuntius, &c. and that the ſtudying Scotus, Burlæus, Anthony Trombet, Bricot, Bruliferius, &c. ſhould be forborn. Tenthly, All Maſters of Colleges were to be ſworn to theſe Injunctions, with the Reſervation of a Latitude, notwithſtanding to Cromwell, or his Deputy, to add or alter at Diſcretion.

Three Days after Dr. Lee publiſh'd his Injunctions, the Colleges made their reſpective Submiſſions; the Maſters and Fellows ſigning an Inſtrument to that purpoſe, The Clauſe in which they renounce the Pope, ſpeaks to this Senſe: We declare the Roman Papacy has no Foundation in holy Writ, but ſtands purely upon human Conſtitution; and that we will never conſent that the Pope of Rome ſhall exerciſe any Authority or Juriſdiction amongſt us: And that we ſhall not treat him with the Pompous Titles uſually given. We likewiſe promiſe to keep all the Statutes of the Realm, either made or to be made for extinguiſhing his Authority, with a great deal more to the ſame purpoſe.

To conclude, purſuant to theſe Injunctions, the Univerſity ſurrendred all their Charters, Bulls, Rentalls, &c. to the King: The Vice-Chancellor and Senior Proctor took a Journey to London, and put all their Records in the Hands of their Chancellor Cromwell *.

*Fuller's Hiſt. of the Univerſitie of Cambridge, p. 109. & deinc.

Having related the King's ſuſpending the Juriſdiction of all the Biſhops; it may be expected I ſhould mention the taking off this reſtraint. 'Twas recall'd about this time: The reaſon aſſign'd in the Inſtrument for this Relaxation is ſomewhat ſurprizing. 'Twas done it ſeems becauſe Cromwell was employ'd about matters of State. Had this Miniſter not been buſie, he might have been ſole Ordinary for the Kingdom; and the Epiſcopal Character in both Provinces, had, it may be, been diſabled to inſignificancy for this whole Reign.

See Records N. 41.

Dember 6. 1535. The Bp. of Hereford's Speech to the Proteſtant Princes.

The King having now fill'd his Exchequer, and put himſelf in a better condition to conteſt with the Emperour, endeavour'd farther to prevent the ſtorm, and keep that Monarch from having any leiſure to diſturb his Dominions. To this purpoſe, he diſpatch'd Fox Biſhop of Hereford to the Proteſtant Princes in Germany. “This Prelate finding them at Smalcalde, preſs'd them to a unity of Doctrine with the Engliſh Church: That this wou'd be the moſt ſolid ground for a laſting Peace. That difference of Opinions is often times the occaſion of Confuſions in the State: And of this the Anabaptiſts had lately been a lamentable Inſtance. That the preſent juncture call'd loudly for the putting an end to all religious Diſputes, for now the Pope pretended to call a Council; but unleſs his Maſter and the German Princes were ſo happy as to agree in religious Matters, the expedient of a Council might prove very unfortunate. For diverſity of Sentiments wou'd prevent a mutual Confidence, occaſion claſhing, and nothing wou'd be done by common concert. That 'twas the Pope's buſineſs to keep theſe Controverſies a foot, and hinder the Princes of Chriſtendom from coming to a right underſtanding with each other: And that he diſpair'd of ſupporting his Exorbitant Pretenſions any other Way. That the King was ſenſible a fair and publick debating the Points in Queſtion might be ſerviceable to the Church: But then all imaginable care was to be taken that matters might be argued with freedom, and prevent the Pope's being Maſter of the Diſpute. And therefore, 'twas the King's Opinion a Council ſhould not be agreed to, till the Peace of Europe was better ſettled. That his Majeſty was deſirous the true Worſhip of God might be reſtor'd, and was willing to join his endeavours with 'em for that purpoſe. And to make the matter more practicable, the Biſhop deſir'd they wou'd appoint a Committee for a Conference with him (t).

(t) Sleidan. Comment. l. 9. December 21 The Princes Anſwer.

“The Proteſtant Princes after ſome introductive Commendation of the King, told the Ambaſſadour, that their chief aim was to propagate the Doctrine of the Goſpel. That notwithſtanding how much they had been miſrepreſented, they had no other View but the doing their Duty. That the King's clearing his Dominions of the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, was very acceptable News: That they were much oblig'd to his Highneſs, for putting 'em in mind of the miſchiefs ariſing from diverſities of Opinion: But as for themſelves, they were diſturb'd with no difference in Belief; and were reſolv'd to adhere to the Doctrine of the Auguſtane Confeſſion. And as to the Anabaptiſts, they puniſh'd the incorrigible of that Sect ſeverely enough: Beſides, they were moſt numerous in thoſe Places, where the Reformation could not make its way. As to the Pope's intreaguing about a Council, they were extreamly glad, his Majeſty was ſo well appriz'd of his Deſign. 'Tis true the Pope's Nuncio (u) was now in Germany, and promis'd a Council at Mantua: That he had treated with the Elector of Saxony upon this ſubject: That he diſcours'd as if it was the Pope's Privilege to convene this Council; but they were of Opinion, the Kings, and States of Europe wou'd not allow him this Claim; nor agree to his calling a Council without their Privity, to decide in matters of Faith, and of the laſt Importance. They return the King thanks for offering his Concurrence, and profeſs themſelves ready to run the utmoſt hazards, rather than give over ſo glorious an Undertaking. And laſtly, purſuant to the Biſhop's Requeſt, they order a Committee to treat with him: But of the Iſſue of this Conference afterwards. This Year there was a Primer Printed in Engliſh: 'Twas drawn up as appears in the Admonition to the Reader, by a ſingle Hand; and Printed with a Patent of Privilege. The Admonition complains of ſeveral Books that miſlead the People in their Application to the Saints, made them believe their Addreſſes before ſome Images would be more particularly ſignificant; that they would deliver a certain number of Souls out of Purgatory, bring wicked Men to Reformation, and keep others in a ſtate of Grace. The ſaying the Maſs before the five Wounds has this promiſe annex'd.

(u) Vergerius.

“Boniface Byſhop of Rome lay ſycke and lyke to dye, to whome our Lord ſent the Arc-angel Raphael with the Office of the Maſſe of the five Wounds, ſayeng: Ryſe and write this Office, and ſaye it fyve tymes, and thou ſhalt be reſtored to thy Health immediately. And what Preeſte ſoever ſhall ſay this Office for himſelf, or for any other that is ſycke fyve tymes, the Perſon for whome it is ſayde, ſhall obteyne Helthe and Grace, and in the Worlde to “ come (if he continue in Vertue) everlaſtinge Lyfe. And in whatſoever Tribulation a Man ſhall be in this Lyfe, that he procure this Office to be ſayd fyve tymes for hym of a Preeſte without doubt he ſhall be delyvered: And that it be ſay'd for the Soule of the Deade, anone as it ſhall be ſay'd and ended fyve tymes, his Soul ſhall be ryd from Paynes. This Hearynge the Biſhop, he dyd erecte hymſelf up in his Bedde, conjuryng the Angell, by the name of Almighti God, to tell hym what he was, and wherefore he came, and that he ſhoulde departe without doing hym harm, who anſwered, that he was Raphael the Arc-angell, ſent unto hym of God, and that all the Premiſſes were undoubtedly true. Then the ſayde Boniface confirmed the ſayde Office of the fyve Wounds, by the Apoſtolique Auctoritie.

Here the Author beſtows ſome tragical Expreſſions on the Fondneſs and Superſtition of this Fancy, and laments the ill grounded and dangerous Reliance upon ſuch Performances as theſe; that ſeveral Books of the Lives of the Saints, as the Golden Legends, and others publiſhed by Eccrus Coctrus, and ſuch High-flyers had given the People a wrong Idea of the Chriſtian Religion, carried them to an exceſſive Regard for the Saints, and ſet God and his Creatures too much upon the ſame Level. Notwithſtanding theſe Divines made a diſtinction between Latria and Dulia, and appropriated the firſt to God Almighty, yet when they come to practiſe upon this Doctrine in their Prayers, they miſmanage to that degree as if they had quite forgotten the Diſtinction. Thus far the Admonition.

The Preface takes notice that 'twas cuſtomary for all Chriſtians to learn the Ten Commandments, Creed, and Lord's Prayer by heart. That the ſettling this Cuſtom was a wiſe and providential Appointment: For a thorough Underſtanding of theſe Comprehenſive Abſtracts takes in all the neceſſary Part of Chriſtian Knowledge; and ſince the Compaſs of a Man's Duty lies in ſo few Words no body has any reaſon to complain that the way to Happineſs is tedious in the length, or hard to find.

The Primer begins with an Expoſition upon the Ten Commandments, and from thence proceeds to the Creed. Upon the Article of our Saviour's Deſcent into Hell, Hell is taken for the Place of the damn'd. Upon the Article of the Catholick Church, the Power of the Keys are ſaid to be given to the Church in the Perſon of St. Peter. Then follows a general Confeſſion in which every Perſon is directed to examine his Practice by the Ten Commandments, to lament his Failure in Duty, and addreſs to God for his Pardon. Then are general Inſtructions given how, and in what manner, we ought to pray. And here the following Qualifications are requir'd: Firſt, To prevail in our Addreſſes, we muſt forgive thoſe who have done us any Injury. Secondly, We muſt pray with an humble Confidence of Succeſs. Thirdly, The Matter of our Petition muſt be agreeable to the Will of God. Fourthly, We muſt perſevere in our Applications, and not deſpond or grow weary. Fifthly, We muſt petition in the Name of Chriſt, and reſt upon his Paſſion and Merits. The Book proceeds to a very pious and uſeful Expoſition on the Lord's Prayer: The Petition of give us our daily Bread is wholly expounded to a Spiritual Senſe, the Bread, as the Book ſpeaks, is our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which nouriſheth and comforts the Soul. In the Salutation of the bleſſed Virgin by the Angel Gabriel, the Primer obſerves, the Words import only a Regard and honourable Mention, and do not go ſo far as Prayer; however the Book ſuppoſes the bleſſed Virgin had ſome diſtinguiſhing Privileges; that ſhe was full of all Goodneſs, and void of all Evil, and deliver'd without any of the cuſtomary Pains of Childbirth. From hence the Book proceeds to deſcribe the Duties of publick and domeſtick Relations; then follow ſeveral Pſalms, Leſſons, and ſhort Prayers; for inſtance, the Te Deum, the Song of the three Children, of Zacharias, &c. the Prime, and Hours, &c. the Veſpers, and Compline; the ſeven Penitential Pſalms are next, and then the Litany, which being ſomewhat uncommon I ſhall tranſcribe it for the Reader.

“ Be mercifull to us, and ſpare us, Lorde.

“ Be mercifull to us, and delyver us, Lorde. Propitius eſto.

“ From all Synne, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From all Errour, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From all Yvell, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Crafty Traynes of the Divell, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the imminent Peryll of Synne, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Poſſeſſion of Devylls, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Spirite of Fornication, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Deſire of Vain-glory, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Uncleanneſſe of Mynde and Body, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From uncleneThoughts, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From the Blindneſſe of the Herte, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From Sodeyn and unprovided Dethe, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From Peſtilence and Famine, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From all mortal Warre, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From Lyghtnynge and Tempeſtious Wethers, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From Seditions and Schiſmies, delyver us, Lorde.

“ From Everlaſtinge Dethe, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By the privie Myſtery of thy holy Incarnation, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By thy holy Nativity, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By thy Baptiſme, Faſtyngs, and Temptations, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By thy painful Agony in ſweating Blood and Water, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By the Paynes and Paſſions, on thy Croſſe, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By thy Dethe and Buryenge, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By thy Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, delyver us, Lorde.

“ By the Comynge of the Holy Ghoſte, delyver us, Lorde.

“ In Tyme of our Tribulations, delyver us, Lorde.

“ In the Tyme of our Felicite, defend us, Lorde.

“ In the Hour of Dethe, delyver us, Lorde.

“ In the Day of Judgement, delyver us, Lorde.

“ We Synners pray thee to hear us, Lorde.

“ That it mought pleaſe the Lorde to governe and leade thy holy Catholyke Churche. We beſeeche thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe that our Byſhops, Paſtors, and Miniſters of thy Churche, may in holy Lyfe, and in thy ſound and holy Worde “ ſede thy People. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe that all perverſe Sects and Sclaunders may be avoided. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe that all which doe erre, and be deceyved, may be reduced into the Way of Verite. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe that we may the Devyl with all his Pomps, fruſhe and treade under foote, we pray.

“ That thou vouchſafe to ſend us Plentie of faythful Workmen in thy Harveſt. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe Lord, to gyve the Herers of thy Worde, lyvely Grace to underſtand it, and to worke thereafter, by the Vertue of the Holy Ghoſt, we pray thee.

“ That all extreme Povertie thou pleaſe Lord to reconforte. We pray thee to here us.

“ That they which are weyke in Vertue, and ſoon overcome in Temptation, thou of thy Mercye wilt helpe and ſtrengthen them. We pray thee to here us.

“ That you vouchſafe to give univerſal Peace amonges all Kings and other Rulers. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou vouchſafe to preſerve our moſte gracious Soveraign Lorde and Kynge, Henry the Eyghte, his moſte gracious Quene Anne, all their Poſterite, Ayders, Helpers, and true Subjects. We pray thee to here us.

“ That our Miniſters and Governours may vertuouſly rule thy People. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thy People in Affliction or in Peryl, and Daunger by Fyre, Water, or Lande, thou wilte vouchſafe to defende and preſerve. We pray thee to here us.

“ That Temyng Women may have joyful Spede in their Labour. We pray thee to here us.

“ That all yonge Orphantes and Sycke People, you pleaſe Lorde to noryſhe and provide for. We pray thee to here us.

“ That all being Captive or in Priſons, thou wilte ſend Delyveraunce. We pray thee to here us.

“ That unto all People, Lorde, thou wilte ſhewe thy ineſtimable Mercy. We pray thee to here us.

“ That thou wilte forgyve all Warryars, Percutors, and Oppreſſours of thy People, and to convert them to Grace. We pray thee here us.

“ That the Frutes, Lord, on the Earth may give good Encreaſe, and that thou wilt conſerve them. We pray thee.

“ That thou Lord wilt here our Prayer. We pray thee.

“ O the very Son of God. We pray thee to here us.

“ O Lambe of God, which takeſte away the Synne of the World: Have Mercy on us.

“ O Lambe of God which takeſte away the Synne of the World: Have Mercy on us.

“ O Lambe of God which takeſt away the Synne of this World; gyve Peace and Reſt unto us.

The Verſicle.

“ O Lord here thou my Prayer.

Th'aunſwer.

“ That my Callynge may come to thyne Ears.

The Coletts or Prayers.

“ O omnipotent and mercyful God, the Father Eternal, which doſt not deſpiſe us Synners, bewaylyng with contrite Herte, for offending thy hye Majeſtie, we pray thee by thy Grace and Mercy to draw us nere to thee, to here our Prayers, to forgive us our Offences, and conforte us in our Afflictions. And forgyve Lord them that oppreſs us. And that our ghoſtly Enemy have no Power to devoure us (as he deſyreth) but that we may ſtrongly withſtand his Fraudes and Snares, to our Confort, that we may die in the very true Catholyke Faythe, and reſte with thee eternally, our Lorde Jeſu Chriſt. So be it.

The Verſicle.

“ We have ſynned with our Forſfathers.

Th'aunſwere.

“ Iniquite have we wrought with unjuſte Lyvingye.

“ Lord God, which doſte not ſuffre Synners to peryſhe and die in their Works, but rather wilt that they ſhall convert and lyve, we humbly pray thee to forgive us nowe, while we have Time and Space. And give us Grace that we do not abound in Synne, nor in Iniquite no more, leſt thou Lord be wrathe with us. And mekely we pray the Lord to open the Verite of our true Catholike Faith, and deſtroy all Antichriſts with all their Jugelynges and crafty Sciſmes which doth ſo ſore oppreſs and daunger thy People to Dampnation (ſeace this Sciſme Lorde) and that thy moſte holy Wordes of thy Goſpelles may plentuouſly be preached, without Crafte or Diſſimulation: which beareth with it thy holy Spirit and Lyfe, to conforte all that hunger or thyrſte to drynke thereof, by the Vertue of our Lorde Jeſu Chriſt. So be it.

“ O moſt hye and mightie Lord God, and Kynge of Peace, which whan thou tokeſt thy moſt holy Humanite upon the, in the Woombe of the mooſte holy Virgin Mary, than by the hye Proviſion of thy Fathers devyne Power, all the univerſal World was in Peace and Concord. Wherefore bounteful Lorde God, we pray thee to preſerve our Kynge, his Ayders and Counſellers, and all Governours, and the whole univerſal Commons of this Realm in Peace and Concorde, and not only us Lord, but all the Realmes in the World, that we may keep one God, one Faythe, and one Lawe, by the Ordinaunce of our Lord Jeſu Chriſte, which reighneth in the Worlde of Worldes. So be it.

After this follows a long Expoſition upon the One and Fiftieth Pſalm. Next is a Prayer to our Saviour, which is followed with a long practical Diſcourſe upon his Paſſion. There is likewiſe an Inſtruction for Children: A Dialogue between Father and Son, by way of Catechiſm: A Prayer for removing Hardneſs of Heart. A Prayer taken out of the Sixty Third and Sixty Fourth of Iſaiah: Hannah's Thankſgiving, the Firſt of Samuel and the Second; and the Prophet Daniel's Prayer in his Ninth Chapter. Then follows a Collection of Pſalms, ſeveral of which relate to the Paſſion of our Saviour. There is likewiſe an Admonition prefix'd to the Dirige: And here the Words of Job to move his Friends to Compaſſion, are ſaid to be miſapply'd: The Text is this (Job 19 and 21.) Have Pity upon me, have Pity upon me, O ye my Friends, for the Hand of God hath touched me. “ Job ſpake theſe Words, ſays the Primer, than being in lyve, and being in the great Rage of his intolerable Affliction. And muſt “they now ſerve for the Souls that be departed, and in the Pains of I cannot tell what? Finally, there is nothing in the Dirige, taken out of Scripture, that makes any more mention of the Soul departed, than doth the Tale of Robinhood.

This Book was printed by John Biddyl, June 16, 1535, in the 34th Year of this Reign: When the Bible was prohibited to all under Gentlemen, this Primer, and ſeveral other Devotional Books in Engliſh, were excepted from the Prohibition.

There were other Primers afterwards printed in this King's time, but the Matter and Manner being much the ſame with this, I ſhall take no farther notice of them.

Queen Catharine's Death.

Queen Catharine's Affairs moved ſlowly with the Pope and the Emperour; neither of 'em being in a Condition to relieve her ſo ſoon as ſhe expected. This Diſappointment, together with the Succeſs of her Rival, ſat hard upon her Spirits, and haſten'd her End. She fell into her laſt Sickneſs at Kimbolton in the fiftieth Year of her Age: During this Illneſs, ſhe receiv'd ſome Meſſages of Ceremony from the King, and had the Countenance of the Emperour's Ambaſſador at her Court: But theſe were but weak Cordials. When ſhe found her Death drawing near, ſhe order'd one of her Maids of Honour to write to the King to this Effect.

Her laſt Letter to the King.

“She told him, that now at the Approach of Death, ſhe cou'd not forbear, out of the Love ſhe had for him, to ſuggeſt ſome Thoughts for the good of his Soul: That this Buſineſs ought to be preferr'd to all Conſiderations of Intereſt or Pleaſure: She let him know, he had involv'd her in a great many Misfortunes, and embarraſs'd his own Affairs over and above: but that ſhe heartily forgave him, and prayed he might likewiſe have God's Forgiveneſs. She recommended the Princeſs Mary to his Care and Affection. She entreated him, to have regard to her Maids, and diſpoſe of 'em in Marriage with the uſual Advantage. And for the reſt of her Servants, ſhe requeſted a Years Salary, beſides what was due already. She takes her leave by declaring, her Eyes deſired him above all Things In the Top of the Letter, ſhe ſalutes him with, My moſt dear Lord, King, and Husband (w).

(w) Lord Herbert, p. 403.

She dictated another Letter to Euſtachius the Emperor's Ambaſſador, requeſting him to put his Maſter in Mind, of taking her Daughter into his Protection. The King received her Letter with ſome Tenderneſs and Regret. And when the News of her Death was brought him, he order'd her to be buried in the Monaſtery of Peterborough, with decent Solemnity. The Furniture of her Houſe was partly laid out upon her Funeral, and the Remainder diſpoſed of among her Servants. The Abby of Peterborough was afterwards turn'd to a Biſhop's See, in honour as it is ſuppos'd, of her Memory.

Id.

Her Character.

She was remarkable for Regularity and Devotion. Before her Misfortunes, ſhe uſed to divert herſelf with Buſineſs, and kept thoſe about her from miſemploying their Time. Thus when the Cardinals Wolſey and Campegio came to wait on her, they found her with a Skein of Silk about her Neck, and at Work with her Women *. 'Tis true, the King is ſaid to have ſometimes complain'd of her Temper: But whether the Fault lay there, or in the Treatment ſhe receiv'd, I ſhall leave with the Reader. It ſeems Queen Anne did not manage herſelf exactly upon this Occaſion: She appear'd too much pleas'd with the Death of this Princeſs, both in her Dreſs and Converſation (x).

* Cavendiſh.

(x) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 192.

The Emperor who had a great Regard for his Aunt, was much concerned at the hearing of her Death. He conſider'd notwithſtanding, that now the Grounds of Hoſtility between himſelf and the King of England, were taken away: And having Occaſion to employ his Forces againſt the Turk, was rather diſpos'd to cloſe with the King, than purſue the Execution of the Pope's Ban. However, he thought himſelf bound in Honour, not to lie open to a Refuſal: He took Care therefore to handle the King's Pulſe, before the Diſcovery of his own Inclination. Thus when he found his Propoſals would be receiv'd, he offer'd the Revival of their ancient Friendſhip. But then 'twas upon the Conditions the King wou'd be reconcil'd to the Pope, and aſſiſt his Imperial Majeſty againſt the Turk, and the French King. To this the King of England anſwer'd, That the Rupture was begun by the Emperor: However, if this was acknowledged, the King was willing to renew their Correſpondence, but then it muſt not be clogg'd with any Conditions. For to mention only that which relates to the See of Rome, where the Emperor promis'd to uſe his Intereſt for a Reconciliation: The King told his Imperial Majeſty, his Proceedings againſt the Biſhop of Rome, had been ſo unexceptionably manag'd, that there was no reverſing them, eſpecially ſince they had been confirm'd by Parliament. For theſe Reaſons he had been already oblig'd to refuſe ſome Overtures from that Prelate (y).

The Emperor propoſes an Accommodation with the King.

His Terms are refus'd.

(y) Lord Herbert, p. 404, 406.

In the next Seſſion of Parliament, there were ſeveral Acts paſs'd relating to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: The moſt remarkable of this kind, was that for the Diſſolution of the leſſer Abbies. The Preamble runs thus.

The Preamble of the Statute for the Diſſolution of the leſſer Abbies.

Foraſmuch as manifeſt Sin, vicious, carnal, and abominable Living (z), is daily uſed and committed commonly in ſuch littel and ſmall Abbayes and Priories of Monks, Chanons, and Nonns, where the Congregation of ſuch Religious Perſons is under the Number of Twelve Perſons, whereby the Governours of ſuch Religious Houſes, and their Convents, ſpoil, deſtroy, conſume, and utterly waſte as well theſe Churches, Monaſteries, Priories, Principal Houſes, Ferms, Granges, Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, as the Ornament of their Churches, as their Goods and Cattalls, to the high Diſpleaſure of Almighty God, Slander of good Religion, and the great Infamy of the King's Highneſs, and the Realm, if Redreſs ſhould not be had thereof. And albeit that many continual Viſitations have been heretofore had, by the Space of Two hundred Years and more, for an honeſt and charitable Reformation of ſuch unthrifty, carnal, and abominable Living; yet nevertheleſs, lyttel or Non-Amendment ys hitherto hadde; but their vycious Livings ſhameleſly increaſeth and augmenteth: And by a curſed Cuſtom ſo grone and infeſted, that a great Multitude of the Religious Perſons in ſuch ſmall Houſes do rather chuſe to rome abroad in Apoſtacy, than to conform themſelves to the Obſervation of good Religion. So that without ſuch ſmall Houſes be utterly ſuppreſs'd, and the Religious Perſons therein commytted to great and honourable Mo-naſteries of Religion in this Realm, where they may be compelled to Lyve religiouſly, for Reformation of their Lyves, there can elſe be no Redreſs nor Reformation in that behalfe. In conſideration whereof the King's moſt Royal Majeſty, being Supream Hede in Earth under God, of the Church of England, daily ſtudying and deviſing the Increaſe, Advancement, and Exaltation of true Doctrine and Vertue in the ſaid Church, to the only Glory and Honour of God, and the total extirping and Deſtruction of Vyce and Sin, having Knowledge that the Premiſes be true, as well by the Complaints of the late Viſitations, as by ſundery credible Informations.

(z) 27 H. 8. c. 28. Dugdale's Monaſticon, vol. 1. fol. 1048.

The Behaviour of the greater Abbies own'd unexceptionable.

Conſidering alſo that divers and great ſolemn Monaſteries of this Realm, wherein Thanks be to God, Religion is well kept and obſerv'd, be deſtitute of ſuch full Numbers of Religious Perſons as they might, and may keep, have thought good that a plain Declaration ſhould be made of the Premiſſes as well to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, as to others his loving Subjects the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled. Whereupon the ſaid Lords and Commons by a great Deliberation, finally be reſolved, That it is and ſhall be much more to the Pleaſure of Almighty, and for the Honour of this Realm, that the Poſſeſſions of ſuch ſmall Religious Houſes being now ſpent, ſpoiled, and waſted for increaſe and Maintenance of Sin, ſhall be uſed and converted to better Uſes, and the unthrifty religious Perſons ſo ſpending the ſame, to be compelled to reform their Lives; and thereupon moſt humbly deſire the King's Highneſs, that it may be enacted by Authority of this preſent Parliament, that his Majeſty ſhall have and enjoy to Him and his Heirs, all and ſingular ſuch Monaſteries,---- &c.

In the Body of the Statute, " All Religious
" Houſes, not above the clear yearly Value of " Two Hundred Pounds, with all their Man-
" nors, Lands, Tythes, Advowſons, &c. are " granted to the Crown, together with all the " Ornaments, Jewels, Goods, Chattels, and " Debts thereunto belonging.

A Clauſe for ſaving the Intereſt of the Founders.

" This Act did not paſs without a Clauſe for " ſaving the Right and Intereſt of the Patrons
" and Founders: Such as Rents, Annuities, " Fees, Offices, Leaſes, Commons, &c.

And for maintaining Hoſpitality.

There's another Proviſion for the maintaining the uſual Hoſpitality of thoſe Places. The Grantees or Purchaſers of theſe Religious Houſes being bound to keep an honeſt continual Houſe in the ſame Site or Precinct, " and to plow as much of the Ground as " the Abbots or Priors had done within Twen" ty Years laſt paſs'd. The Forfeiture was Six " Pounds Thirteen Shillings and Four Pence per " Month, to be recover'd to the King's Uſe. The " Juſtices of the Peace, were impower'd to inquire of
" the Premiſſes, to try the Cauſe, and aſſeſs the Fine.

In the Preamble of this Act, there's a high Charge of Immorality laid againſt the leſſer Abbies: This is grounded upon the Report of the Viſitors, and reſts chiefly upon their Credit. And here the larger Abbies have the Commendation of a regular Behaviour. The Preamble takes notice farther that there's a Neceſſity of tranſplanting the Monks of theſe little Societies: And without removing them to more numerous Convents, their Reformation was impracticable.

Now 'tis ſomewhat ſtrange, Diſcipline ſhould be moſt inſignificant where there are feweſt to be govern'd, and infect the reſt. And that no Regulation cou'd be of Force enough to keep a few People within Compaſs. Had it not been for the Authority of this Preamble, one wou'd have thought the greater Monaſteries wou'd have been more difficultly manag'd. But theſe, the Act tells us were regular enough, and anſwer'd the Ends of their Inſtitution. Fuller takes the Freedom to fancy there was ſomething of Fineſs in this Commendation. The leſſer Abbies he believes cou'd not be ſuppreſs'd without the Votes of the Greater. And of theſe latter there were no leſs than Twenty Six mitred Barons who ſate in the Houſe of Lords (a). 'Twas Prudence therefore to lay the Apprehenſions of theſe Abbots aſleep, and prevent their Suſpicion of falling under the ſame Fate.

(a) Fuller. Church Hiſtory p. 312.

The Revenue and Riches of the Abbies diſſolv'd.

And thus Three Hundred Seventy Six of theſe ancient Monuments of Devotion (as the Lord Herbert calls 'em) (b) were diſincorporated and diſſolv'd: A yearly Revenue of Two and Thirty Thouſand Pounds accrued to the Exchequer: And the Goods and Chattels at a low Valuation, amounted to a Hundred Thouſand Pounds.

(b) Lord Herbert, p. 377.

However, the enriching the Crown this way, did not give general Satisfaction. For no leſs than Ten Thouſand Perſons were ſent into the World unfurniſhed, and in a manner undone by this Expedient (c).

(c) Stow's Annal.

The ſlender Proviſion made for the religious and thoſe who belong'd to 'em.

The ſeeing the Monks and Nuns ſtrole about the Country for their Bread, and the Churches pull'd down, prophan'd, and turn'd to Barns and Pidgeon-Houſes, was no agreeable Spectacle. Beſides, ſince the Statute gave the King all Sums of Money due to the Monaſteries, 'twas thought reaſonable the Debts owing by thoſe Houſes ſhou'd have been diſcharg'd. This was accordingly done for the moſt part, at the Surrender, by the King's Commiſſioners. But when Relicks happen'd to be pawn'd, it ſeems they refuſed to redeem 'em: Thus one Man loſt Fourty Pound upon St. Andrew's Finger, excepting One Ounce of Silver with which it was cover'd (d.

(d) Ld. Herbert, p. 377.

And here we are to obſerve, that ſome few of theſe Religious, in hopes 'tis likely of better Entertainment, ſurrender'd their Houſes before the paſſing this Statute *.

* Biſhop Burnet, p. 1. p. 191.

This Diſſolution of the Abbies made the Princes of Germany more forward to enter into Alliance with England. This unexpected Step, they took for an Indication of the King's Averſion for any Correſpondence with Rome: They had likewiſe Reaſon to conclude Queen Anne in the ſame Diſpoſition. This was no more than a plain Inference from the Intereſt of her Marriage. This Complexion of Affairs, invited 'em to make Propoſals of a Treaty to the King's Ambaſſadors *. The Articles were theſe.

* At Smalcalde.

The Propoſals of the Princes of Germany.

Firſt, That the King ſhou'd receive the Auguſtane Confeſſion, only with this Latitude; that ſome Alterations might be made in that Syſtem by common Conſent.

Secondly, The King was to be oblig'd to join with 'em in the defence of a free Council.

Thirdly, That neither of the Parties ſhou'd allow of the Intimation of a Council, or agree to the Place without a mutual Concurrence: And that if ſuch a Council was conven'd as was now promis'd by the Pope's Legate Vergerius, it ſhou'd not be refus'd.

Fourthly, That if the Pope did not ſtand to his Legate's Propoſals, they ſhou'd oppoſe his Proceedings, and proteſt publickly againſt him.

Fifthly, That the King ſhou'd unite with 'em in their League, as well as in their Religion, and accept the Title of Defender of it.

Sixthly, That the common Belief of the Pope's Primacy ſhou'd be totally renounc'd.

Seventhly, That if either of the Parties happen to be invaded for Religion, the other ſhall ſend no Forces againſt 'em.

Eightly, That the King ſhall pay a Hundred Thouſand Crowns towards ſupporting the Confederacy: And if the War happen'd to be drawn out into length, this Sum was to be doubled; upon Condition however, that when a Peace was made, the remainder ſhou'd be return'd.

Laſtly, When the King had declar'd his Mind upon theſe Points, they promis'd to ſend him ſome Men of Learning with a publick Character.

Theſe Overtures being tranſmitted by Cromwell to Gardiner, then Ambaſſador in France; the Biſhop returned him this Advice.

A. D. 153$\frac{5}{6}$.
* Cotton. Libr. Cleop. 5. fol. 213.
The Bp. of Winchester's Opinion upon the Overture.

“ The granting the firſt Article, he ſaid wou'd * bind the King to the Senſe of the Church of Germany. And thus he wou'd be under an obligation, not to make uſe of the Permiſſions of Revelation, without the Concurrence of common Conſent.

“ Now if ſuch a ſtipulation ſhou'd be defenſible, the Biſhop of Rome wou'd take the advantage of this Inference; That the Word of God might be brought under Conditions, and limitted to a common Aſſent. Such an Article therefore wou'd be unwarrantable: For the word of God leaves both Parties at liberty to Reform as far as Truth and the Intereſt of Religion directs: Neither can they barr themſelves from proceeding in this manner by any Treaty whatſoever.

“ He ſuggeſted another Difficulty drawn from the Diſparity of Authority between the King and the Proteſtant Princes. The King, ſays he, is a Sovereign Magiſtrate, veſted with imperial Juriſdiction; and in Conſequence of that Prerogative Head of the Church of England: But the Princes of Germany are but Dukes at the higheſt: They are no more than Subordinate Governours, and ſuch as make no ſcruple to own their Emperor for their chief Lord. Now ſince we prove the King Head of the Church of England, from his Civil Supremacy, 'twill follow by Parity of Reaſon, that the Emperor is Head of the Churches in Germany. Things ſtanding thus, which way can theſe Princes be in a Condition to perfect a Treaty, or ſettle an Agreement of Religion between us? Which way can this be done, without the Conſent of his Imperial Majeſty the Head of their Church? Or how can we Stipulate upon Points of Religion, with thoſe who confeſs themſelves Subjects, without Prejudice to the King's Authority? For if we muſt be govern'd in theſe matters by our Head the King's Highneſs, the Emperor will expect theſe Princes ſhou'd treat him with the ſame deference. And that his Imperial Majeſty ſhou'd direct religious Affairs within the Limitations of the word of God. If this reaſoning is not allow'd by the Princes at Smalcalde, we ſhall diſagree in a matter of Importance. For then, they muſt either deny the Emperor's being their Supream, which contradicts their publick acknowledgements: Or elſe they muſt fall into our Opinion, and confeſs him the Head of their Church. And if ſo, 'twill not be in their Power to conclude any thing without his Concurrence: For what ever is done in this Caſe, may be alter'd by his Imperial Majeſty; the word of God being made the Rule for his Proceedings.

“ Farther, The King may ſtipulate to abide by a Settlement concluded by common Conſent, provided the Scriptures are made the Standard, and govern the Diſpute. But then which way their Promiſe can bind without their Sovereign's Conſent, was paſt the Biſhop's Comprehenſion.

“ As concerning the Council, he thought their Propoſal very much embaraſs'd. For ſince the King has no Correſpondence with the Emperour, or Dependence upon him, why ſhou'd his Highneſs be oblig'd to admit of any Council conven'd by that Prince's direction? And yet, this conſent follows from one of the Articles, for the Proteſtants inſiſt upon the accepting ſuch a Council as had lately been offer'd by the Pope's Legate: Thus much for the Second and Third Articles.

“ As for the Fourth Article, the King may do his Part, and proteſt againſt an exceptionable Council; but how the Princes his Allies ſhou'd perform their's, is ſomewhat unintelligible. For in Caſe the Emperour agrees to the calling a Council, by what defenſible Authority can they hinder it?

“ Farther, the Biſhop adviſes the preſſing theſe Princes to own the King's Stile; he means that of his being Head of the Church: That ſuch an Acknowledgement wou'd be ſerviceable to his Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, and make the Divorce look the better: And that in this latter Cauſe, he thought Providence had in a great meaſure decided for the King, by the Death of the Princeſs Dowager. The reſt of the Letter relates to the State: However, ſince it gives a farther diſcovery of Gardiner's Abilities, and ſhews him a Perſon of no ordinary reach, I ſhall inſert it among the Records (e).

(e) See Records, N. 34.

To proceed to ſome other Acts paſs'd in this Parliament, with relation to the Church.

No Tenths to be paid by the Incumbent for the firſt Year.

The firſt I ſhall mention refers to an Act paſs'd in the laſt Parliament, touching Firſt Fruits and Tenths, then granted to the Crown. This Statute takes off ſome little of the weight of that Burthen, and Enacts that no Tenths ſhall be demanded for the firſt Year, in which the Firſt Fruits were due (f). The Privilege of this Abatement extended to the Religious Houſes, as well as to the Secular Clergy.

(f) 27. H. 8. c. 8.

The Regulation of Sanctuaries.

There was a Proviſion made, for the better government of Sanctuaries. Thoſe under this Protection were oblig'd to wear Badges, to appear with no Weapons about 'em, not to walk abroad before Sun riſing, or after Sun ſetting; not to reſiſt their Governours, &c. who were impower'd to determine any Debt under Forty Shillings, &c. (g).

(g) 27 H. 8. c. 19.

27 H. 8. c. 20.

“ In another Act, for the better recovery of Tythes, the Preamble complains, that many of the People had been more outragiouſly fraudulent in detaining their Tythes, and diſregard the Decrees of the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, with more Contempt than had ever been known.

A Court of Augmentation erected.

“ For the better regulation of the Revenues of the Crown ariſing from the Diſſolution of the leſſer Monaſteries, a Court of Augmentation was erected: And all Lands, Mannors, and Rents of religious Houſes, which are or ſhall come to the King's Hands, are put in the Order, Survey and Governance of the ſaid Court. Farther, by this Statute, in all Grants of Abby Lands made by the King; a Tenure by

Cranmer Th. Abp of Cant.

“ Knights Service in Capite and a yearly Rent of the tenth part of the yearly value of ſuch Lands, were reſerv'd to the Crown. The Officers of this Court were a Chancellor, Treaſurer, an Attorney, Sollicitor, Ten Auditors, Seventeen Receivers, beſides a Clark, Uſher and Meſſenger. By the ſettling ſo many Officers, the Diſſolution of the greater Abbies ſeems to have been concerted; otherwiſe, one wou'd have thought Seventeen Receivers had been more than neceſſary.

27 H. 8. c. 27.

c. 19.

The Act made in the twenty fifth of this Reign, concerning the impowering the King to nominate Sixteen of the Spiritualty, and Sixteen of the Layety to examine the Canons, is confirm'd in this Parliament. And here the King is authoriz'd to ſupply the Number of thoſe who ſhall happen to deceaſe after his firſt Nomination. The Act has a Proviſo, that no Canons or Conſtitutions repugnant to the Prerogative Royal, or the Laws of the Realm, ſhall be made or put in execution. The King's Authority for the Nomination of the ſaid Two and Thirty Perſons is limited to three Years after the Diſſolution of this Parliament. By the way, his Majeſty never made any uſe of this Privilege.

27 H. 8. c. 15.

The King's Ambaſſadours Anſwer to the Proteſtant Princes at Wittenburgh.

How far Gardiner's advice, concerning the German Alliance, govern'd the Ambaſſadors private Inſtructions is uncertain. However, the following anſwer was return'd to the Proteſtant Princes. “ The Ambaſſadours acquainted 'em, the King was ſatisfied with the main of their Propoſals; but expected they ſhould yield to an Amendment in ſome Particulars. And notwithſtanding the repoſe of his own Dominions, and that he had no reaſon to fear any foreign Attack; yet he was willing to part with the Money they deſired, provided the Confederacy was ſettled: That he deſired to diſcourſe their Ambaſſadours farther upon that Head: That he thank'd 'em for the Honour of offering him to be head Guarantee of the League: That notwithſtanding, he was not inſenſible, how invidious a diſtinction this was, yet for the ſake of the Publick Intereſt, he ſhou'd not decline it, provided the firſt and ſecond Articles were adjuſted. For unleſs they cou'd come to a Harmony in Doctrine, he conceived the undertaking ſuch a Function might diſoblige his Character. He was deſirous therefore in the firſt Place, that the learned both of his own, and their Dominions, might be brought to the ſame Sentiment: That this was impracticable, unleſs ſome Articles in their Confeſſion were ſoften'd, and farther explain'd: That private Conferences were the beſt expedient for ſuch a Temper. He requeſted 'em therefore to diſpatch their Agents to him, and to join ſome Perſon of eminent learning in the Embaſſy: That thus furniſh'd, they might argue the Caſe; and go through the Controverſy with ſome of his Subjects. And when the Doctrine and Ceremonies of the Church, were thoroughly debated; 'twas to be hoped they might cloſe and underſtand each other (h).

March. 12 $153\frac{5}{6}$.

Melancthon and ſome others ſent from the Proteſtant Princes into England. Ibid.

To this and ſome Points of State inſiſted on by the Ambaſſadours, the Duke of Saxony replied, he wou'd conſult the Confederates. Theſe meeting ſoon after at Frankford, 'twas agreed to ſend an Embaſſy into England, but with this Proviſo, that nothing ſhou'd be done to the Prejudice of their Allegiance to the Emperour. Sturmius was the Ambaſſadour for the Confederate Cities: The Divines join'd with him, were Melancthon Bucer, and Draco. But the Misfortune of Queen Anne intervening, diſconcerted the juncture, and retarded the affair for ſome time.

Hen. VIII. K.

After the Death of Queen Catharine, Queen Anne 'tis likely thought herſelf ſecure: And thus relying too much on the Eſtabliſhment of her Greatneſs, manag'd with leſs Caution and Reſerve, than was required to preſerve her in the King's Eſteem. But this, it may be was not the intire Cauſe of her Ruine: For 'tis certain the King had already remov'd his Affection to Jane Seymour, Daughter to Sir John Seymour. This Lady being a finer Woman, and a Novelty to the King's Fancy, might probably make his Jealouſie run higher againſt the Queen, and proceed to the utmoſt Rigours of Law againſt her. However, how far the King was govern'd by his ſuſpicions is altogether uncertain (i).

May 1. The Fall of Q. Anne.

To come to the Narrative: There was a ſolemn Tilting at Greenwich on May-day; at this Diverſion 'tis ſaid by ſome, the Queen dropt her Handkerchief, which was taken up by a ſuppos'd Favourite, who wiped his Face with it. The King taking notice of this Paſſage, immediately withdrew, to the great ſurprize of the Queen and Court. The King went immediately to Weſtminſter; and the next Morning George Lord Rochford the Queen's Brother, and Henry Norreys were committed to the Tower (k). The ſame Day the Queen coming to London, was apprehended in her Barge by the Duke of Norfolk, Lord Chancellor Audley, Cromwell Principal Secretary, and Sir William Kingſton Lieutenant of the Tower: When theſe Lords acquainted her with the reaſon of the King's diſſatisfaction, ſhe declared ſtrongly againſt the Imputation; and made a ſolemn Appeal to God for her Innocency. She requeſted the Favour of ſeeing the King before her Commitment; but they told her, they had no Commiſſion to gratifie her. Thus ſhe was convey'd to the Tower, where a great deal of diſcourſe paſs'd between her and Sir William Kingſtone, upon the ſubject of her reſtraint. Her Language was broken and diſturb'd: She ſeem'd to diſcover a mixture of Aſſurance and Confuſion: For ſhe laugh'd one Minute and wept another. Beſides her Brother and Norreys, William Breerton Eſq; Sir Francis Weſton, a Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber, and one Mark Smeton a Muſician, were committed on the ſame occaſion. The Queen, tho' ſhe always defended her Honour, and deny'd the height of the Charge, yet ſhe confeſs'd enough to prove ſhe had been Airy to Indiſcretion, taken improper Freedoms, and convers'd out of guard (l).

May 2.

May 3. The Archbiſhop's Letter in her Behalf.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury was much afflicted at her Misfortune, and did his utmoſt to preſerve her. He wrote a conſolatory Letter to the King: In which after having ſuggeſted equality of Temper, and Reſignation to Providence, he puts the King gently in mind of the good Opinion he always entertain'd of the Queen, and the great Obligations he had received from her, and how much afflicted he was to hear her Virtue call'd in queſtion. And here to prevent ſhocking the King, as if he had gone too far in his Jealouſie, he tells him, that unleſs the Queen had been to blame, he conceives his Highneſs wou'd not have proceeded in that manner againſt her. He deſires therefore, he may have the Liberty to wiſh her well, and that ſhe may wipe off the Blemiſhes caſt upon her Honour. In ſhort, he endeavours to diſpoſe the King to Clemency and good Nature, with a Reſerve notwithſtanding, that in Caſe ſhe was found guilty, neither himſelf, nor any of his Friends wou'd ſollicite for her. But let the Iſſue of this Matter prove never ſo unfortunate, he begs

the

(h) Sleidan Comment. Lib 10. April 24. 1536.

(i) Ld. Herbert, p. 381.

(k) Heylin. Hiſt. Ref. under Q. Eliz. p. 92.

(l) Ld. Herbet, p. 382.

the King wou'd ſtill continue his Regards to Religion; inſinuating withal, that if his Highneſs ſhou'd vary in his Conduct, it might be thought 'twas not ſo much Truth, as Inclination which gover'd him in this Affair.

A Letter ſuppoſed hers to the King.

But neither this Letter of the Archbiſhop's, nor another, ſaid to be written by her ſelf, made any Impreſſion upon the King. The Queen's Letter, mention'd by the Lord Herbert and others, is ſaid to be found among Secretary Cromwell's Papers; but 'tis no Original: 'Tis written with a great deal of Genius and Elocution, and not at all reſembling her Manner, either in her two Letters to Wolſey, or her Speech upon the Scaffold. 'Tis poſſible ſhe might dictate the Minutes, and ſome Attendant of hers might draw it into Length, and give it a rais'd Turn. In this Letter ſhe expoſtulates with the King, charges him with hard Uſage, and vindicates her Innocency to the heighth. She lets him know, ſhe expected ſome Inconſtancy in her Fortune, and that his Highneſs wou'd be apt to diſingage and float in his Affection. She deſires ſhe may be brought to a Tryal, but excepts againſt the Prepoſſeſſion of her Judges. And if his Majeſty has determin'd her Fate, and ſhe muſt be ruin'd by dint of Calumny, ſhe deſires God to forgive him ſo great an Injuſtice; appeals to the laſt Judgment, where ſhe does not queſtion her own Conduct in this Matter will be ſufficiently approv'd.

Her laſt Requeſt is, that his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure may reſt only upon herſelf, and not deſtroy thoſe innocent Gentlemen committed on her account (m).

On the twelfth of May, Norreys, Weſton, Breerton, and Smeton were tryed by a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer at Weſtminſter Hall. Smeton, as Biſhop Burnet relates, confeſs'd the Fact (n). But the Lord Herbert's Silence in this matter, ſeems to import him of another Opinion: To which we may add, that Cromwell's Letter to the King takes notice that only ſome Circumſtances were confeſs'd by this Smeton (o).

They were all four brought in guilty, and executed on the ſeventeenth of May.

The Queen and the Lord Rochford her Brother were arraign'd and tried by their Peers in the Tower, and found guilty. This it ſeems did not give the King full Satisfaction without proceeding to a Divorce. To make way for this Proceſs a Præ-contract between her and the Lord Piercy, now Earl of Northumberland, was ſuggeſted. The Earl to clear this Matter wrote a Letter to Cromwell; he acquaints this Miniſter, that he had formerly been examin'd upon this Subject before the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York: That he took his Oath before theſe two Prelates, there had never been any Contract or Promiſe of Marriage between that Lady and himſelf. That he had taken the bleſſed Sacrament before the Duke of Norfolk and others, and wiſh'd it might be his Damnation if there was any ſuch Engagement between them (p). But notwithſtanding the Earl of Northumberland's Evidence, ſome other Reaſons were diſcover'd for the Ground of a Divorce. Our learned Church Hiſtorian affirms ſhe confeſs'd a Præ-contract to prevent the Severity of the Execution: And that the Sentence of being burnt, might be mitigated to beheading (q). But it does not appear ſhe was particular in this Confeſſion. She only acknowledg'd there were ſome juſt and lawful Impediments againſt her Marriage with the King. And therefore the Inſtrument under Cranmer's Archiepiſcopal Seal, only takes notice that the Marriage was null and void for good and valuable Reaſons, without mentioning what they were (r).

May 13. The Earl of Northumberland denies a Pre-contract with her.

She confeſſes ſome Impediment againſt the Lawfulneſs of her Marriage with the King.

* The Sentence of Divorce was ſolemnly pronounc'd at Lambeth, before the Lord Chancellor Audley, Charles Duke of Suffolk, John Earl of Oxford, Robert Earl of Suſſex, William Lord Sandys, Thomas Cromwell Maſter of the Rolls, and Principal Secretary, with others of the Privy Council: to which we may add the Queen's Proctors, and ſeveral dignified Clergy. This Sentence of Divorce was confirm'd in Convocation *, and afterwards in Parliament.

May 17.

June 9.

The Statute touching the Succeſſion of the Crown (s), ſets forth, That till now of late the Marriage between his Majeſty and the Lady Anne was reputed by the Nobles and Commons to have been good and unexceptionable. But that now God had brought to light and open Knowledge certain juſt, true and lawful Impediments unknown at the making of ſome former Acts: And that by the Lady Anne's Confeſſion before Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury it plainly appear'd that the ſaid Marriage between his Grace and the ſaid Lady Anne, was never good, nor conſonant to the Laws, but utterly void and of none effect. Farther, by this Act, The Lady Elizabeth, Daughter to Queen Anne, is declared illegitimate, and diſabled from inheriting the Crown.

Her Divorce confirm'd by Convocation and Parliament, and her Daughter declared illigitimate.

I obſerve the Record of this Divorce, at Lambeth, tho' paſſing thro' all the Forms, and thus publickly atteſted, is not enter'd upon the Regiſter. This is ſomewhat remarkable, eſpecially ſince that of Anne of Cleve, which happen'd ſome few Years after, is inſerted at length.

To go backward a little: The Queen was allow'd but a ſhort time after Judgment againſt her: For on the ninteenth of May ſhe was brought to a Scaffold within the Tower, where ſhe ſpoke to this Effect.

Her Speech at her Death. May 19.

“ She told the People, ſhe was condemn'd by “ Law, and therefore ſhou'd offer nothing againſt
“ the Sentence. 'Twas not her Intention to ac-
“ cuſe any Perſon, nor deliver any thing concern“ ing the Matter wherewith ſhe was charged.
“ She pray'd God to preſerve the King, to bleſs “ him with a long Reign, and then ſpeaks very “ full in Commendation of his Clemency and “ good Nature. And if any Perſon was diſpo-
“ ſed to examine the Proceedings, and interpoſe
“ their Opinion in her Cauſe, ſhe requir'd 'em to “ make the beſt Conſtruction.

This Queen's Memory was differently treated: Some cenſur'd her Silence upon the Scaffold with reſpect to the Vindication of her Innocence. She was not, they thought, explicite enough in juſtifying her Behaviour. Others interpreted this Reſervedneſs to a Tenderneſs for her Daughter, and that the taxing the King with Injuſtice at her Death, might have proved unſerviceable to the Lady Elizabeth. Others make her Death judicial, and that it was a providential Puniſhment upon her, for ſupplanting Queen Catharine (t). She is reported to have been a very charitable Lady; and that ſhe expended above fourteen thouſand Pounds this way in leſs than a Year. She had likewiſe a Deſign of raiſing a Stock to employ poor Tradeſmen. This Queen was a Favourer of the Reformation, but not to the length of Fox's Opinion: For ſhe was altogether averſe to the Suppreſſion of Religious Houſes; and put Hugh Latimer upon preaching againſt it before the King. She likewiſe caution'd others of the Clergy not to declaim againſt the Monaſteries, and preach down the Inſtitution *. As to her Deſcent, ſhe was eldeſt

Her Extraction.

(m) Id. p. 382.

(n) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 202.

(o) Heylin, Hiſt. Ref. p. 92.

(p) Ld. Herbert, p. 384.

(q) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 203.

(r) Heylin, Hiſt Ref. p. 94.

* MS. Johan. Anſtey Armig.

* Fuller from the Acts of the Convocation, p. 207.

(s) 28 H 8. c. 7.

(t) Saunders de Schiſm. Anglicano, p. 169.

* Mr. Harbin's MSS

eldeſt Daughter to Sir Thomas Boleyn afterward Earl of Wiltſhire. Her Mother was Elizabeth Daughter of Thomas Duke of Norfolk. Her Father's Family had intermarried with the Houſe of Ormond, and was related to ſeveral of the chief Gentry in Norfolk. It ſeems the King parted with her without the leaſt Regret: For the next Day after her Execution he was married to Mrs. Seymour (u).

(u) Id. and Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 207.

The Princeſs Mary's Submiſſion to the King her Father.

The Fall of this Queen, and the Illegitimation of the Lady Elizabeth, gave the Princeſs Mary ſome Hopes of a favourable Juncture. About this time therefore ſhe wrote ſeveral Letters to the King, to improve her Intereſt, and recover his Affection. She had loſt ground it ſeems by adhering to her Mother's Cauſe, and not being ſo flexible as the King expected. Upon her making a General Submiſſion, for this Incomplyance, the Duke of Norfolk was ſent to her, with Orders from the King, to put her hand to certain Articles: The Purport of 'em in ſhort was, to acknowledge the King Supreme Head of the Church of England; to ſubmit to the Laws of the Kingdom; to renounce the Biſhop of Rome's pretended Power, and diſclaim all manner of Intereſt from that Quarter; to acknowledge the Marriage between his Majeſty and her Mother to be wholly unlawful; to declare for what Reaſon, and at whoſe Suggeſtion, ſhe had ſo long continued obſtinate; and laſtly, upon what Motive, and by whoſe Advice, ſhe made her Submiſſion now. She demurr'd to the two laſt Queſtions, being not willing to diſcover her Friends. As to the other Articles ſhe return'd the following Subſcription.

"The Confeſſion of me the Lady Mary made upon certain Points and Articles (w) underwritten, in the which, as I do now plainly and with all my Heart confeſs and declare mine inward Sentence, Belief and Judgment with a due Conformity of Obedience to the Laws of this Realm: So minding for ever to continue and perſiſt in this Determination without Change, Alteration or Variance: I do moſt humbly beſeech the King's Highneſs, my Father, whom I have obſtinately and inobediently offended in the Denial of the ſame heretofore, to forgive mine Offences therein, and to take me to his moſt gracious Mercy.

(w) Ex Biblioth. R. Harley, Armig.

"Firſt, I confeſs and knowledge the King's Majeſty to be my Sovereign Lord and King in the Imperial Crown of this Realm of England, and do ſubmit my ſelf to his Highneſs, and to all and ſingular Laws and Statutes of this Realm as becomes a true and faithful Subject to do, which I ſhall alſo obey, keep, obſerve, advance and maintain according to my bounden Duty, with all my Power, Force and Qualities that God has endued me with, during my Life.

"Item, I do recognize, accept, take, repute and knowledge the King's Highneſs to be ſupreme Head in Earth under Chriſt of the Church of England, and do utterly refuſe the Biſhop of Rome's pretended Authority, Power and Juriſdiction within this Realm heretofore uſurped, according to the Laws and Statutes made in that Behalf, and of all the King's true Subjects humbly received, admitted and obey'd, kept and obſerv'd, and alſo do utterly renounce and forſake all manner of Remedy, Intereſt and Advantage which I may by any means claim by the Biſhop of Rome's Laws, Proceſs, Juriſdiction, or Sentence at this preſent time, or in any ways hereafter, by any Manner, Title, Colour, Mean or Caſe that is, ſhall, or can be devis'd for that Purpoſe.

MARY.

"Item, I do freely, frankly and for the Diſcharge of my Duty towards God, the King's Highneſs and his Laws, without other reſpect, recognize and knowledge that the Marriage, heretofore had between his Majeſty and my Mother, the late Princeſs Dowager, was by God's Law, and Man's Law inceſtuous and unlawful.

MARY.

The Pope offers at an Accommodation with the King.

Notwithſtanding the ſeveral Acts of Parliament for diſclaiming the Juriſdiction of the See of Rome; notwithſtanding the Proteſtation of the Clergy, Univerſities and Religious to the ſame Purpoſe, the Pope did not utterly deſpair of retrieving his Affairs in England. He ſent for the King's Agent Sir Gregory Caſſaley, told him he was glad to hear the King was diſingag'd from his laſt unfortunate Marriage: That now his Highneſs had an Opportunity of procuring a Peace between the Emperour and the French King: That he wou'd be in a Condition to ſucceed in this honourable Undertaking by renewing his Correſpondence with the Apoſtolick See. As for himſelf he always endeavour'd to do his Highneſs good Offices: That when he was Cardinal, he ſolicited Clement the Seventh to do him Juſtice in his Divorce; and uſed his Intereſt with the Emperour to acquieſce. As for Fiſher Biſhop of Rocheſter, he ſent him a Cardinal's Hat only to make him more ſerviceable at the General Council. 'Tis true, when the News of that Prelate's Death was brought to Rome, he was preſſed to ſhew his Reſentment. At this Juncture he could not avoid doing ſome things which carried a rough Appearance, tho' he never deſign'd to drive 'em to the Head *. He intended therefore to diſpatch a Nuncio into England, after which a Council might be expected, and a War concerted againſt the Turk. All this he deſir'd Sir Gregory to advertize the King of, without taking notice 'twas done at his Holyneſs's Inſtance (x).

* Quæ tamen nunquam in animo habuit ad Exitum perducere.

May 27.

(x) Ld. Herbert, p. 387.

Soon after Cardinal Campegio ſent his Brother Marco Antonio into England to ſolicit the regaining his Biſhoprick of Salisbury: This and ſome other Buſineſs was given out; but the main of his Journey was in all Likelihood to work the King to a Reconciliation. But the Terms propos'd, not giving Satisfaction, the Pope concluded an Accommodation impracticable. And now being reſolv'd to treat the King as an Heretick, he endeavour'd to form a Confederacy againſt him. He gain'd the Emperour by intimating a Council at Mantua for the next Summer. And to bring James the Fifth of Scotland into the Alliance, he careſs'd him with Preſents, and ſent him a rich conſecrated Sword. Upon Tryal made at the French Court, he found that Prince not in the Diſpoſition expected. But as the French King diſappointed the Pope, ſo neither did he come up to King Henry's Inclination. He choſe rather to hold a middle Courſe, and neither wholly ſatisfy, nor break with either. For when the Engliſh Ambaſſador, Gardiner, laid his Maſter's Proceedings before him, he did not think fit to oblige with his Approbation. He told the Ambaſſador, that notwithſtanding all the King's Subjects ſhou'd be never ſo unanimous touching the Legitimacy of his Iſſue by his ſecond Marriage, yet if foreign Countries were of a different Sentiment it might prove a troubleſome Affair.

But fails of Succeſs.

Id. p. 388.

The French King declares againſt King Henry's Marriage with Catharine of Spain, notwithſtanding Pope Julius's Diſpenſation.

(y) See Records, N. 36.

But tho' the French King thought fit to return this cool Anſwer at preſent, he had formerly ſign'd a ſolemn Inſtrument in which he declares againſt the Lawfulneſs of King Henry's Marriage with Catharine of Spain, approves that with Queen Anne, and engages to ſtand by the King of England in Defence of it againſt all Perſons and Authorities whatever (y). This Declaration tho' without a Date muſt have been ſign'd before this Time, becauſe the Parliament now ſitting had pronounc'd the Iſſue by Queen Anne illegitimate.

This Seſſion began June the eighth, and held no longer than the eighteenth of July following.

The Statutes relating to the Church are as follow.

Statutes relating to the Church.

'Twas Enacted that all thoſe, who maintain'd either by writing, printing, preaching or teaching, that the Biſhop of Rome had any Juriſdiction within this Realm, ſhou'd incur the Penalty of Præmunire. And to fortifie this Statute, 'twas ordain'd that all Officers Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, all Religious Perſons when they were profeſs'd, and all the Clergy at their taking Orders, and Scholars of the Univerſity when promoted to any Degree in Learning, ſhou'd be oblig'd to ſwear a Renunciation of the Pope's Authority, and an Acknowledgment of the King's being the only ſupreme Head in Earth of the Church of England. This ſolemn Engagement runs in the Stile of So help me God, all Saints and the holy Evangeliſts (z).

(z) 28 H. 8. c. 10. Statutes at large.

The Refuſal of this Oath was high Treaſon.

There was a Clauſe for the Saving the Ceremonies, Service, and Diſcipline of the Church; together with the cuſtomary Juriſdiction of the Clergy.

To go on: There was an Act paſs'd for the ſecuring the Profits ariſing in Benefices and other Spiritual Promotions and Dignities to the next Incumbent. This Statute was made to prevent the Ordinaries laying their Hands upon the Profits abovemention'd, during a Vacancy. By this Act the Incumbent has the Liberty of bequeathing the Corn upon the Glebe Lands, by his laſt Will and Teſtament. There is likewiſe Proviſion made for Leſſees of a Parſonage, &c. and for the Payment of the Curate.

(a) 28 H. 8. c. 13.

There's another Act touching Non-reſidence (a) with ſome Clauſes ſupplemental to the 21 H. 8. cap. 13.

*28 H. 8. c. 16.

There was likewiſe an Act to diſcharge the Licenſes and Diſpenſations granted by the See of Rome *. It ſets forth, "That the Popes, out of an ambitious Intent to advance and enrich their See, had uſurp'd ſeveral Powers and Juriſdictions, in virtue of which, they had granted ſundry Immunities, Faculties, Licenſes, &c. to the King's Subjects. 'Tis therefore Enacted that all Bulls, Briefs, Faculties and Diſpenſations of what Natures or Qualities ſoever obtain'd of the Biſhop of Rome, or any of his Predeceſſors, are declared void and of no Force, and never to be us'd, allow'd or pleaded in any Courts of the Realm, under the Penalty of a Præmunire. And here by way of Remedy, and to prevent Inconveniencies, all Marriages ſolemniz'd before the twenty third of November in the twenty ſixth Year of this Reign, not prohibited by the Law of God, and where no Divorce had paſs'd upon 'em in the Spiritual Courts, are declared good in Law. All Conſecrations of Biſhops, Promotions of Abbots, and other Heads of Religion, &c. by virtue of ſuch Bulls are confirm'd. And for the future, all who enjoy'd any Privileges or Intereſts upon the ſcore of ſuch Papal Authorities, were to bring their Faculties to the Maſters of Chancery, or to ſuch Perſons as the King ſhould nominate. And if the Perſons appointed for this Purpoſe ſhall judge their Faculties ſuch, as may be lawfully granted by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, that then they were to make Application to the Lord Chancellor, who was to paſs the Subſtance of their Faculties under the Great Seal.

This Act ſtruck at the Privileges of exempted Abbies; and unleſs they cou'd get their Privileges renew'd in Chancery, brought 'em under the Juriſdiction of their Ordinaries: But the Juncture was touchy, and they were glad to acquieſce for fear of a greater Misfortune.

1536.

The Convocation Journal ſtiles Cromwell only Honorandus Magiſter Thomas Cromwell Vicarius Generalis. June 16. fol. 63.

(b) Deformi ſatis ſpectaculo, &c. Godwyn Annal. p. 59.

On the ninth of June this Year the Convocation met. And now Cromwell, lately made a Baron and Lord Privy Seal, appear'd among the Prelates, and by the Strength of his Vicar-Generalſhip took Place of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. The Figure that Cromwell made in this Aſſembly was ſomewhat ſingular, eſpecially ſince he had neither Birth, Learning, nor Character to bear him out. For an ignorant Layman, ſays Biſhop Godwyn, to preſide in a Synod of the moſt learned Biſhops that ever were in England, was but a ſcandalous Sight (b). If this Function cou'd have been executed by one of the Laity, the King wou'd have done much better in Perſon, than by ſuch a Proxy. However Cromwell had Courage enough to ſupport his Commiſſion: And repreſented the King up to all the Points of State and Ceremony. He appear'd firſt in the Upper Houſe by his Proxy Doctor Petre, who claim'd Precedency, and had it, upon the ſcore of his Deputation. About a Week after Cromwell came thither himſelf, exhibited the Divorce between the King and Anne Boleyn, to be ſign'd by the Convocation. This Inſtrument paſs'd and was ſubſcrib'd by both Houſes *.

June 16.

* June 28. Journal Convoc. fol. 63, 64.

On Friday following, Mr. Gwent, the Prolocutor, laid a Book of erroneous Opinions before the Biſhops: 'Twas deliver'd with a Proteſtation of the Lower Houſe againſt the Heterodoxies publickly preach'd and printed, requeſting that Order might be taken to check the Progreſs of ſuch dangerous Tenents. The Proteſtation ſtands at the Head of the Liſt; and runs thus.

A Remonſtrance of the Lower Houſe of Convocation againſt ſeveral erroneous Tenents.

"In very humble and reverend Manner, with Proteſtation that we, the Clergy of the Lower Houſe, in the Province of Canterbury, neither in Word, Deed or otherwiſe, directly or indirectly intend any thing to ſpeak, attempt, or do which in any manner of wiſe may be diſpleaſant unto the King's Highneſs our moſt dread Sovereign Lord and ſupreme Head of the Church of England; but in all things according to the Command of God to be moſt obedient to his Grace, to whom accordingly we ſubmit ourſelves, minding in no wiſe by any colourable Faſhion, to recognize privily or apertly the Biſhop of Rome, or his uſurp'd Authority, or in any wiſe to bring in, defend or maintain the ſame into this noble Realm, or the Dominions of the ſame. But that the ſame Biſhop of Rome, with his uſurp'd Authority utterly for ever with his Inventions, Rites, Abuſes, Ordinances and Faſhions to be renounced, forſaken, extinguiſh'd and aboliſh'd: And that we ſincerely addict ourſelves to Almighty God and his Laws, and to our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King our Supreme Head in Earth, and his Laws, Statutes, Proviſions, and Ordinances made here within his Grace's Realm.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

" We think in our Conſciences and Opinions " theſe Errors and abuſes following to have " been, and now to be within this Realm, Cau- " ſes of Diſſention, worthy ſpecial Reforma- " tion.

Now follows a Recital of the Errors.

1. That 'tis commonly preach'd and diſcours'd to the Slander of this noble Realm, the Diſquiet of the People, and to the Hinderance of their Salvation, that the Sacrament of the Altar is not to be regarded: For ſeveral profane and ſcandalous Perſons are neither aſham'd nor afraid to ſay, why ſhou'd I ſee the Sacring of the high Maſs? Is it any thing elſe but a piece of Bread, or a little pretty round Robin?

2. Item, They deny extreme Unction's being a Sacrament.

3. Item, They affirm that Prieſts have no more Authority to adminiſter the Sacraments than the Laity.

4. That Children ought not to be confirm'd by the Biſhop till they came to Years of Diſcretion.

5. Item, That all Church Ceremonies not expreſly warranted in Scripture, are humane Inventions, and for that Reaſon to be laid aſide.

6. That all thoſe deſerve the Character of Antichriſt, who refuſe to communicate the Laity under both kinds.

7. That all who are preſent at the Maſs, and do not receive with the Prieſt, have no Benefit by that Office.

8. That the Church in the common Acceptation of the Word is the Old Synagogue; and that properly ſpeaking the Church conſiſts only of good People.

9. That it was never merry in England ſince the Litany was brought into the Service, and Sancta Maria, Sancta Catharina, &c. ſung and repeated.

10. That a Man has no ſuch Faculty as Freedom of Will.

11. That God never gave Grace or Underſtanding in the Scriptures to Men of Quality or Fortune: And that ſuch Perſons never govern themſelves by ſuch Directions.

12. That all Monaſtick Diſtinctions are a plain Contradiction to the Chriſtian Religion.

13. That all things ought to be common: And that Prieſts ſhou'd marry. The Convocation complains,

14. That Preachers will not conform themſelves to the Catholick Church, nor be govern'd by unexceptionable Authorities, but reſign themſelves to the Liberty of their own Imaginations. The following Heterodoxies are,

15. That no Reverence ought to be paid to the Images of the Saints: And that 'tis downright Idolatry to light Lamps or Tapers before an Image, or to have any Lights at divine Service 'till after Sunſet.

16. That it is Idolatry to make any Oblations.

17. That it is as lawful to chriſten a Child in a Tub at Home, or in a Ditch in the Field, as in a Church Font.

18. That the Font is only furniſh'd with conjur'd Water.

19. That the holy Oyl is no better than the Greaſe or Butter in the Pope's Kitchin.

20. That the Tonſure of Prieſts is a Mark of the Whore of Babylon.

21. That the Stole about the Prieſts Neck is the Biſhop of Rome's Rope, and nothing better.

Hen. VIII. K.

22. That it is a Breach of God's Command for Chriſtians to make a Reverence or Curteſy to our Saviour's Picture.

23. That it is no Fault to eat Meats prohibited by the Church in Lent.

24. That it is as lawful to eat Fleſh upon Good-Fryday as upon Eaſter-Day, or any other time.

25. That a Sin committed in Lent, or at any other ſolemn Seaſon, deſerves nothing of extraordinary Puniſhment.

26. That Auricular Confeſſion, Abſolution and Penance are neither neceſſary, nor beneficial.

27. That Auricular Confeſſion is only a Practice to unlock a Man's Breaſt, and rob him of his Thoughts and Money.

28. That a Ghoſtly Father has no Authority to enjoin Penance.

29. That Confeſſion to God alone is ſufficient for any Body.

30. That we may as well confeſs to a Layman as to a Prieſt.

31. That Confeſſion is nothing but whiſpering in a Prieſt's Ear, and may be done as well before Company as privately.

32. That in this Caſe 'tis ſufficient for the Penitent to ſay, he owns himſelf a Sinner.

33. That Biſhops, Ordinaries and Eccleſiaſtical Judges have no Authority to excommunicate or abſolve.

34. That 'tis neither neceſſary nor ſerviceable to have Churches or Chapels for divine Service.

35. That burying People in Churches and Church-yards is inſignificant, and to no Purpoſe.

36. That rich Ornaments in Churches are rather diſpleaſing, than acceptable to God Almighty.

37. That 'tis pity Maſs, Mattins, Veſpers or any other part of Divine Service was ever made, or ſuffer'd to be read or ſung in a Church: Their Reaſon is becauſe they tend only to impoſe upon the People.

38. That the Saints are not to be honour'd with Invocation: That they underſtand nothing of our Prayers, nor are in a Condition to mediate between God and us.

39. That our Lady the bleſſed Virgin was no better than another Woman, and that ſhe can prevail with our Saviour no more than another ſinful Perſon of her Sex.

40. That 'tis to no more Purpoſe to pray to the Saints than to throw a Stone againſt the Wind.

41. That all recommending Prayers and Offices ſuch as Diriges, Maſſes, Diſtributions of Charity, &c. for the Souls of thoſe departed, ſignify nothing.

42. That at the Commencement of the State of Separation the Soul goes immediately either to Heaven or to Hell.

43. That there's no third Place, diſtinct from Heaven or Hell, for the Puniſhment of departed Spirits.

44. That if there be ſuch a Place as Purgatory our Saviour was never incarnate.

45. That Prayers, Suffrages, Faſting and Alms have no Efficacy to diſpoſe God to Forgiveneſs.

46. That Venial and Mortal, with reſpect to Sins, is a Chimerical Diſtinction.

47. That after the Converſion of a Sinner all Sins are by the Merits of Chriſt's Paſſion made Venial, that is are wholly forgiven.

48. That Almighty God does not require Faſting or Alms of a Sinner, but only that he ſhou'd be ſorry for what's paſt, and reform his Practice.

49. That holy Water, holy Bread, hallowing of Candles, Aſhes, Branches of Palm, and ſuch Ceremonies, are altogether inſignificant, and uſed only as Amuſements to delude the People.

50. That Holy-days of Eccleſiaſtical Inſtitution are not to be regarded: For all Days are alike, and a Man may go to Plough and Cart on thoſe ſolemn Feſtivals as well as at any other Time.

51. That the ſaying or ſinging of Maſs, Mattins or Veſpers is no better than roaring and whiſtling, maſquerading and Leger de main: And the playing on the Organs nothing but Levity and Folly.

52. That going on Pilgrimages, Faſting and giving of Alms are not to be uſed; and that a Man is not bound to come to Church excepting to hear the Sermon.

53. That Believing is ſufficient to bring a Man to Heaven without the Condition of a virtuous Practice.

54. That ſome Noveliſts are not content to preach againſt the Exceſſes and Irregularities in Pilgrimages, Faſting, Invocation of Saints, Worſhipping of Images, and giving of Alms, but will needs declare againſt the Thing, and ſweep off the Practice: For the Reformation of Abuſes is not enough to ſatisfy theſe People.

55. That by ſome Preachers the People are perſuaded to believe nothing without expreſs Proof from Scripture.

56. That ſince our Saviour has redeem'd us by ſhedding his Blood, we need do nothing but believe, and repent our paſt Miſcarriages.

57. That there's a new Form of Confeſſion lately made.

58. That the Canon of the Maſs is the Comment of ſome illiterate fooliſh Prieſt, and that the Names of the Saints there mention'd are not to be rehears'd.

59. That no human Laws or Conſtitutions are binding to any Chriſtian, excepting thoſe of the New Teſtament.

After a Recital of theſe erroneous Opinions (as they are call'd;) and indeed moſt of 'em are no better, the Lower Houſe complains at the end of their Remonſtrance, that certain Books having been examin'd by a Committee of the Convocation, and declared full of Hereſy and Heterodoxy; have notwithſtanding this Cenſure not been expreſly condemn'd by the Biſhops, but ſuffer'd to remain in the Hands of unlearned People: That by this Connivance, the Vulgar were furniſh'd with Arguments to diſpute againſt the Church, and diſturb the Kingdom: That thoſe who had deſerted from the receiv'd Doctrine, and were under an ill Character, both for Belief and Manners, take leave to preach their Singularities without any Authority either from the King or the Ordinary.

This Cenſure at the End of the Remonſtrance ſeems pretty plainly levell'd againſt Archbiſhop Cranmer, Latimer Biſhop of Worceſter, and Shaxton of Sarum. Theſe Prelates were ſuſpected for the Countenance of ſome of the beſt (as we have Reaſon to account 'em) of theſe Opinions. However their Conduct was not uniform and equally unexceptionable: For, as our learned Church Hiſtorian expreſſes it, The Firſt managed prudently and ſolidly: The Second zealouſly and ſimply: And the Third with much indiſcreet Pride and Vanity *.

But Queen Anne being taken off with Diſgrace, the Intereſt of theſe Biſhops was thought to decline at Court, and that this was the proper time to make good a Charge againſt 'em. But it ſeems their Enemies miſcalculated in this Matter; for Cranmer had the King's Favour no leſs than formerly: And Cromwell being partly in the Archbiſhop's Sentiment endeavour'd to attempt ſomething farther againſt the other Party. To this Purpoſe he brought one Alexander Aleſſe, a Scotch Divine, with him into the Convocation. This Aleſſe having the Liberty to declare his Opinion concerning the Sacraments, endeavour'd to prove that only Baptiſm and the holy Euchariſt were of divine Inſtitution. Stokeſly Biſhop of London argued againſt this Aſſertion out of Gratian's Decretum, and diſputed with ſome Vehemence for the receiv'd Number, Seven: He was ſeconded by the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhops of Lincoln, Bath and Wells, and Chicheſter. Cranmer having diſcover'd the Opinions of theſe Prelates, made a learned Diſcourſe concerning the Sufficiency of the Scriptures, and the Efficacy of the Sacraments. He likewiſe diſcours'd upon the Subject of Traditions, Monaſtick Vows, Cœlebacy of the Clergy, and ſeveral other Uſages unſupported, by Revelation. He ſaid, to determine any thing, eſpecially in a Synod without Warrant from the Scriptures was not becoming the Character of a Biſhop. That the Nicety and Jargon of the School Divines was more proper for Boys in the Univerſity, than Divines in ſuch a ſolemn Aſſembly. Fox Biſhop of Hereford abetted Cranmer's Diſcourſe: He told the Houſe that for the Prelates to miſtake in Religion, and miſs their way wou'd be more unreputable than formerly: For now the Goſpel appear'd in ſo diſtinguiſh'd a manner, that even the common People were enlighten'd. That in Germany, where this Biſhop was Ambaſſador, they had recourſe to the original Greek and Hebrew, and tranſlated the holy Scriptures into their own Language. That by theſe Aſſiſtances the People had little Occaſion for Commentaries and Gloſſes, but were able to inſtruct themſelves in a great meaſure. That this Precedent of theirs was very commendable, and ought to be follow'd, and that now we ought not to be wholly govern'd by Interpreters, but have Recourſe to the holy Scriptures themſelves *.

To return: The fifty nine Propoſitions in the cenſur'd Liſt, Fuller calls the Proteſtant Religion in Ore (c). But to make uſe of his Allegory, unleſs we had found a richer Vein, it may very well be queſtion'd, whether the Mine had been worth the working. However, here we have another Repreſentation of the Lollards Tenents, which confirms the Truth of what has been already related concerning 'em.

What Succeſs this Remonſtrance met with in the Upper Houſe is not related. 'Tis likely a Unanimity in all Points was not to be expected: For the Biſhops were in a manner broke into two Parties. Thoſe who lean'd towards a Reformation were Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Thomas Goodrich Biſhop of Ely, Nicholas Shaxton Biſhop of Sarum, Hugh Latimer Biſhop of Worceſter, Edward Fox Biſhop of Hereford, John Hillſey Biſhop of Rocheſter, William Barlow Biſhop of St. David's. The other Diviſion which adher'd to the receiv'd Doctrines, excepting the Pope's Supremacy, were Edward Lee Archbiſhop of York, John Stokeſly Biſhop of London, Cuthbert Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham, Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, Robert Sherburne Biſhop of Chicheſter, Richard

---

* Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 214.

* Antiquit. Brittan. p. 333.

(c) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 5. p. 208.

chard Nix Biſhop of Norwich, John Kite Biſhop of Carliſle. Theſe Prelates 'tis probable after ſome Conteſts, made reciprocal Conceſſions, and came to a Temper. For now it was that certain Heads of the Doctrine of the Church of England in Matters of Faith, Sacraments and Ceremonies were ſubſcribed by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, with many other Biſhops and Abbots.

Articles ſubſcrib'd by the Biſhops and Clergy in Convocation.

Theſe Articles, as the Lord Herbert obſerves, were drawn by the King's Order, brought into the Upper Houſe of Convocation by Cromwell, where tho' this Syſtem did not paſs the whole Houſe, 'twas ſubſcrib'd by a Majority of the Biſhops. 'Twas afterwards ſigned by the King, and runs in his Name. The Royal Declaration at the Head of it, ſets forth the Occaſion of this Form, and the Authority upon which it ſtood (d). It begins thus.

" Henry the Eighth, by the Grace of God,
" King of England and France, Defenſor of the " Faith, Lord of Ireland, and in Earth, Su" preme Head of the Church of England, to all
" and ſingular our moſt loving, faithful and o" bedient Subjects, greeting,

The King's Declaration relating to Religion.

Amongſt other Cures appertaining unto this our Princely Office, whereunto it has pleaſed Almighty God of his infinite Mercy and Goodneſs to call Us, We have always eſteemed and thought, like as We alſo yet eſteem and think, that it moſt chiefly belongs unto our ſaid Charge, diligently to foreſee and cauſe, that not only the moſt Holy Word and Commandments of God ſhould moſt ſincerely be believed and moſt reverently be obſerved and kept of our Subjects; but alſo that Unity and Concord in Opinions; namely, in ſuch Things as do concern our Religion, may increaſe and go forward, and all Occaſion of Diſſent and Diſcord touching the ſame be repreſs'd and utterly extinguiſh'd.

For the which Cauſe, we being of late to Our great Regret, credibly advertized of ſuch Diverſity in Opinions as have grown and ſprungen in this Our Realm, as well concerning certain Articles neceſſary to our Salvation, as alſo touching certain other honeſt and commendable Ceremonies, Rites and Uſages now a long time uſed and accuſtomed in our Churches, for Conſervation of an honeſt Politie, and decent and ſeemly Order to be had therein: Minding to have that Unity and Agreement eſtabliſhed through Our ſaid Church concerning the Premiſes. And being very deſirous to eſchew not only the Danger of Souls, but alſo the outward Unquietneſs, which by the Occaſion of the ſaid Diverſity of Opinions (if Remedy were not provided) might perchance have enſued; have not only in Our own Perſon at many times taken great Pain, Study, Labours, and Travels, but have alſo cauſed Our Biſhops, and other of the moſt diſcreet and learned of Our Clergy of this Our whole Realm, to be aſſembled in Our Convocation for the full Debatement and quiet Determination of the ſame. Where after long and mature Deliberation had of, and upon the Premiſes, finally they have concluded and agreed upon the moſt ſpecial Points and Articles; as well ſuch as be commanded of God, and are neceſſary to our Salvation, as alſo divers other Matters touching the honeſt Ceremonies, and good and politick Orders as is aforeſaid; which their Determination, Debatement and Agreement, forſomuch as We think to have proceeded of a good Right, and true Judgment, and to be agreeable to the Laws and Ordinances of God, and much profitable for the Eſtabliſhment of that charitable Concord and Unity in Our Church of England, which We moſt deſire, We have cauſed the ſame to be publiſhed, willing, requiring, and commanding to accept, repute, and take 'em accordingly. And farther, We moſt heartily deſire and pray Almighty God, that it may pleaſe him ſo to illuminate your Hearts, that you, and every of you may have no leſs Deſire, Zeal, and Love to the ſaid Unity and Concord, in reading, divulging, and following the ſame, than We have had and have in cauſing 'em to be thus deviſ'd, ſet forth and publiſhed.

And, for becauſe We would the ſaid Articles and every of them ſhould be taken and underſtanden of you, after ſuch Sort, Order, and Degree as appertaineth accordingly; We have cauſed by the Aſſent and Agreement of our ſaid Biſhops, and other learned Men, the ſaid Articles to be divided into two Sorts, whereof the one Part contains ſuch as be expreſly commanded by God, and be neceſſary to our Salvation; and the other contains ſuch Things as have been of a long Continuance, for a decent Order and honeſt Polity, prudently inſtituted and uſed in the Church of Our Realm, and be for that ſame Purpoſe and End, to be obſerved, and kept accordingly, although they be not expreſly commanded of God, nor neceſſary to our Salvation. Wherefore We will and require you to accept the ſame, after ſuch ſort as We have here preſcrib'd them unto you, and to conform your ſelves obediently unto the ſame: Whereby you ſhall not only obtain that moſt charitable Unity and loving Concord, whereof ſhall enſue your incomparable Commodity, Profit and Lucre, as well ſpiritual as other: But alſo you ſhall not a little encourage Us to take farther Travels, Pains, and Labours for your Commodities in all ſuch other Matters as in time to come may happen to occur, and as it ſhall be moſt to the Honour of God, the Profit, Tranquility, and Quietneſs of all you Our moſt loving Subjects.

The Articles of our Faith.

Paper Office.

Firſt, " As touching the chief and principal Ar" ticles of our Faith. Since it is thus agreed, as " hereafter followeth, by the whole Clergy of this Our
" Realm. We woll that all Biſhops and Preach-
" ers, ſhall inſtruct and teach our People by Us
" committed to their ſpiritual Charge, that they " ought and muſt, mooſt conſtantly believe and " defend all thoſe Things to be true, which be " comprehended in the whole Body and Canon
" of the Bible, and alſo in the Creed and Sym-
" boles; whereof one was made by the Apo-
" ſtles, and is the commune Creed which every " Man uſeth. The Second was made in the holy
" Council of Nice, and is ſaid daily in the Maſſe,
" and the Third was made by Athanaſius, and is " comprehended in the Pſalm, Quicunque Vult;
" and that they ought and muſt take and inter-
" pret all the ſame Things according to the " ſelf ſame Sentence and Interpretation, which
" the Words of the ſaid Creed, or Symboles, do
" purporte, and the holy approved Doctors of " the Church do entreat and defend the ſame.

2. " Item, That they ought, and muſt repute,
" hold, and take all the ſame Things for the " moſt holy, moſt ſure, and moſt certain, and " infallible Words of God, and ſuch as neither
" ought ne can be altered or convelled, by any " contrary Opinion or Authority.

3. " Item, That they ought and muſt be" lieve, repute, and take all the Articles of our " Faith, conteyned in the ſaid Creeds, to be ſo
" neceſſary to be believed for Man's Salvati-
" on, that whoſoever (being taught) woll not " believe them as is aforeſaid, or will obſtinate-
" ly affirm the contrary of them, or any of " them, he or they cannot be the very Mem" bers of Chriſt, and his Eſpouſe the Church,
" but be very Infidels or Heretiques, and Members of the Devil, with whom they ſhall perpetually be damned.

(d) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 5. p. 213. from the Convocation Records.

4. “ Item, That they ought, and muſt moſt reverently and religiouſly obſerve and kepe the ſelf ſame Wordes according to the very ſame Form and Manner of Speaking, as the Articles of our Faith be already conceaved, and expreſſed in the ſaid Creeds, without altering in any wiſe, or varying from the ſame.

5. “ Item, That they ought and muſt utterly refuſe and condemne all thoſe Opinions, contrary to the ſaid Articles, which were of a long time paſt condemned in the four holy Counſayles, that is to ſay, in the Council of Nice, Conſtantinople, Epheſie, and Chalcedonenſe, and all others ſithe that Time in any Point conſonant to the ſame.

The Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Seconde, “ As touching the holy Sacrament of Baptiſm, We will that all Biſhopps, and Preachers, ſhall inſtruct and teach our People, committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That they ought and muſt of neceſſity believe certainly all thoſe Things which hath been already alway by th'ole Conſent of the Church approved, received, and uſed in the Sacrament of Baptiſme; that is to ſay, That the Sacrament of Baptiſme was inſtituted and ordayned in the New Teſtament by our Saviour Jeſu Chriſt, as a thing neceſſary for th'attayning of everlaſting Lief, according to the ſaying of Chriſt, Niſi quis renatus fuerit ex aqua & Spiritu Sancto, non poteſt intrare in regnum cœlorum.

2. “ Item, That it is offered unto all Men, as well Infants as ſuch as have the Uſe of Reaſon, that by Baptiſme they ſhall have Remiſſion of Synnes, and the Grace and Favour of God, according to the Saying of John, Qui crediderit, & baptizatus fuerit, ſalvus erit.

3. “ Item, That the Promiſe of Grace and everlaſting Lief, which Promiſe is adjoyned unto this Sacrament of Baptiſme, perteyneth not only unto ſuch as have the Uſe of Reaſon, but alſo unto Infants, Innocents and Children, and that they ought therefore and muſt needs be baptized: And that by the Sacrament of Baptiſme, they do alſo obteine Remiſſion of their Sinn, the Grace and Favour of God, and be made thereby the very Sonns and Children of God; inſomuch that Infants and Children dying in their Infancy, ſhall undoubtedly be ſalved thereby, or elſe not.

4. “ Item, That Infants muſt needs be Chriſtened, becauſe they be born in Original Synne, which Synne muſt needs be remitted, which cannot be done but by the Sacrament of Baptiſme, whereby they receave the Holy Ghoſt, which exerciſeth his Grace and Efficacye in them, and purifyeth them from Synne, by his moſt ſecret Vertue and Operation.

5. “ Item, That Children or Men, once baptized, can, ne ought ever to be baptized again.

6. “ Item, That they ought to repute and take all the Anabaptiſts and the Pelagians Opinions, contrary to the Premiſes, and every other Mann's Opinion agreeable unto the ſaid Anabaptiſts or the Pelagians Opinions in this behalf, for deteſtable Hereſies, and utterly to be condemn'd.

7. “ Item, That Men or Children having the Uſe of Reaſon, and willing and deſiring to be baptized, ſhall, by Vertue of that holy Sacrament, obteyne the Grace and Remiſſion of all their Synnes, if they ſhall come thereunto perfectly and truely repentant, and contrite of all their Synnes before committed, and alſo perfectly and conſtantly confeſſing and believing all the Articles of our Faith, according as it was mentioned in the Article here before, or elſe not.

8. “ And finally, if they ſhall alſo have firme Credance and Truſt in the Promiſe of God, adjoyned to the ſaid Sacrament; that is to ſay, that in and by this ſaid Sacrament which they ſhall receive, God the Father giveth unto them, for his Son Jeſu Chriſt's ſake, Remiſſion of all their Synnes, and the Grace of the Holy Ghoſt; whereby they be newly regenerate, and made the very Children of God, according to the Saying of Chriſt, and his Apoſtle Saint Petre: Penitentiam agite & baptizetur unuſquiſque veſtrûm in Nomine Jeſu Chriſti in remiſſionem peccatorum, & accipietis donum Spiritûs Sancti: And according alſo to the ſaying of St. Paul ad Titum 3. Non ex operibus juſtitiæ quæ fecimus nos, ſed ſecundum ſuam miſericordiam ſalvos nos fecit per lavacrum regenerationis & renovationis Spiritûs Sancti, quem effudit in nos opulentè, per Jeſum Chriſtum Servatorem noſtrum, ut juſtificati illius gratia hæredes efficeremur juxta ſpem vitæ æternæ.

The Sacrament of Pennance.

Third, “ Concerning the Sacrament of Pennance: We woll that all Biſhoppes and Preachers ſhall inſtruct and teach our People committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That they ought and muſt moſt conſtantly believe, That that Sacrament was inſtitute of Chriſt in the New Teſtament, as a thing ſo neceſſary for Man's Salvation, that no Man which after his Baptiſme, is fallen againe, and hath committed deadly Sinne, can without the ſame be ſalved, or atteyne everlaſting Life.

2. “ Item, That like as ſuch Men, which after Baptiſme do fall againe into Synne, if they do not Pennance in this Life, ſhall undoubtedly be damned: Even ſo whenſoever the ſame Men ſhall converte themſelves from their ſaid naughty Life, and do ſuch Pennance for the ſame, as Chriſt requireth of them, the Declaration whereof followeth, they ſhall without doubt atteyne Remiſſion of their Synnes, and ſhall be ſalved.

3. “ Item, That this Sacrament of perfite Pennance which Chriſt requireth of ſuch manner of Perſons, conſiſteth of three Parts; that is to ſay, Contrition, Confeſſion, with Amendment of the former Life, and a new obedient Reconciliation to the Lawes and Will of God; that is to ſay, exterior Actes, in Works of Charitie, according as they be commanded of God, which be called in Scripture, fructus digni pœnitentiæ.

“ Furthermore, as touching Contrition which is the firſt Parte, We woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers ſhall inſtruct and teach our People, committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That the ſaid Contrition conſiſteth in Two ſpecial Parts, which muſt always be conjoyned together, and cannot be diſſevered; that is to ſay, the penitent and contrite Man muſt firſt acknowledge the Filthineſs and Abomination of his own Synnes, (whereunto he is brought by the hearing and conſidering of the Will of God, declared in his Lawes) and feeling and perceiving in his own Conſcience, that God is angry and diſpleaſed with him for the ſame, he muſt alſo conceive not only great Sorrow and inward Shame, that he hath ſo greviouſly offended God, but alſo great Fear of God's Diſpleaſure towards him; conſidering that he hath no Works or Merritts of his owne, which he may worthily lay before God as ſufficient Satisfaction for his Synns; which done, then afterwards with this Fear, Shame and Sorrow muſt needs ſucceed, and be conjoyned the ſecond Parte, viz. a certain Faith, Truſt, and Confidence of the Mercy and Goodneſs of God, whereby the Penitent muſt conceave certain Hope and Faith, that God woll forgive him his Synnes, and repute him juſtifyed and of the Number of his elect Children, not for the Worthyneſs of any Merrit or Worke done by the Penitent, but for the only Merritts of the Blood and Paſſion of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

“ Item, That this certain Faith and Hope, is gotten and alſo confirmed, and made more ſtronge by th'applying of Chriſt's Words and Promiſes of his Grace and Favour conteyned in his Goſpel, and the Sacraments inſtituted by him in the New Teſtament; and therefore t'attayne this certain Faith, the ſecond Part of Pennance is neceſſary; that is to ſay, Confeſſion to a Prieſt, if it may be had, for the Abſolution given by the Prieſt, was inſtitute of Chriſt, to apply the Promiſe of God's Favour and Grace to the Penitent.

3. “ Wherefore as touching Confeſſion, We woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers, ſhall inſtructe and teach our People committed by Us unto their ſpiritual Charge, That they ought and muſt certainly believe, that the Words of Abſolution pronounced by the Prieſt, be ſpoken by the Authoritie given unto him by Chriſt in the Goſpel.

4. “ Item, That they ought and muſt give no leſs Faith and Credance to the ſame Wordes of Abſolution ſo pronounced by the Miniſters of the Church, than they would give unto the very Wordes and Voice of God himſelf, if he ſhould ſpeak unto us out of Heaven, according to the Saying of Chriſt, Quorum remiſeritis peccata, &c. & qui vos audit me audit.

5. “ Item, That in no wiſe they do contemne this Auricular Confeſſion which is made unto the Miniſters of the Church, but that they ought to repute the ſame as a very expedient and neceſſary Meane, whereby they may require and ask this Abſolution at the Prieſtes Hands, at ſuch Time as they ſhall find their Conſcience grieved with mortal Synnes, and have occaſion ſo to do, to th'intent they may thereby attayne certain Comfort and Conſolation of their Conſciences.

6. “ As touching the Third Part of Pennance, We woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers, ſhall inſtructe and teach our People committed by Us to their ſpiritual Charge, That although Chriſt and his Death be the only ſufficient Oblation, Sacrifice, Satisfaction and Recompence, for the which God the Father forgiveth and remitteth to all Synners, not only their Synnes, but alſo eternal Pain due for the ſame; yet all Men truely penitent, contrite and confeſſed, muſt needs alſo bring forth the Fruits of Pennance; that is to ſay, Prayer, Faſting, Almes-Deeds, and all other good Workes, and expreſſe their obedient Will in the executing and fulfilling of Godds Commandments outwardly, when Time, Power, and Occaſion ſhall be miniſtred unto them, or els they ſhall never be ſaved; for this is the expreſſe Precept and Commandement of God, Agite fructus dignos pœnitentiæ: And Saynt Paul ſaith, Debitores ſumus: And in another Place he ſayth, Quemadmodum exhibuiſtis, &c. And in another Place alſo he ſayth, Caſtigo corpus meum & in ſervitutem redigo.

Hen.VIII.R

“ Item, That theſe Precepts and Works of Charity be neceſſary Works to our Salvation, and God neceſſarily requireth that every penitent Man ſhall performe the ſame, whenſoever Time, Power, and Occaſion ſhall be miniſtered unto him ſo to do.

“ Item, That by Pennance and ſuch good Works of the ſame, we ſhall not only obteine everlaſting Life, but alſo we ſhall deſerve Remiſſion or Mittigation of theſe preſent Pains and Afflictions in this World, according to the ſaying of St. Paul, Si nos ipſi judicaremus, non judicaremur à Domino. Et Zacharias, Convertimini ad me, & ego convertar ad vos. Et Eſa 58. Frange eſurienti panem tuum, &c. tunc eris velut hortus irriguus. Et Deus remiſit pœnam Ninivitis propter ipſorum pœnitentiam; hæc ſunt inculcanda Eccleſiis, & ut excitentur ad bene operandum, & in hiis ipſis operibus exerceant, & confirment fidem petentes & expectantes a Deo mitigationem præſentium calamitatum.

The Sacrament of the Altar.

“ Fourth, As touching the Sacrament of the Altare, wee will, that all Biſhops and Preachers ſhall inſtructe and teach our People, committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That they ought and muſt conſtantly believe, that under the Form and Figure of Bread and Wine, which wee there preſently do ſee, and perceave by outward Senſes, is verily ſubſtantially and really conteyned and comprehended, the very ſelf ſame Body and Blood, of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, which was born of the Virgin Mary, and ſuffered upon the Croſs for our Redemption. And that under the ſame Forme and Figure, of Bread and Wine, the very ſelf ſame Body and Blood of Chriſt, is corporally, really and in very Subſtance exhibited, diſtributed and receaved of all them, which receave the ſaid Sacrament: And that therefore the ſaid Sacrament is to be uſed with all due Reverence and Honour, and that every Man ought firſt to prove and examin himſelf, and religiouſly to trye and ſearch his own Conſcience before he ſhall receive the ſame, according to the Saying of Saint Paul: Quiſquis ederit panem hunc, aut biberit de poculo Domini indignè, reus erit corporis & ſanguinis Domini; probet autem ſeipſum homo, & ſic de pane illo edat, & de poculo illo bibat; nam qui edit, aut bibit indignè, judicium ſibi ipſi manducat & bibit, non dijudicans corpus Domini.

Juſtification.

“ Fifth, As touching the Order and Cauſe of our Juſtification, We woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers ſhall inſtructe and teach our People committed by Us unto their ſpiritual Charge, That this Word Juſtification ſignifieth Remiſſion of our Synnes, and our Acceptation or Reconciliation into the Grace and Favour of God, that is to ſay, our perfite Renovation in Chriſte.

“ Item, That Synners attaine this Juſtification, by Contrition and Faith, joyned with Charitie, after ſuch Faſhion, and manner, as wee before mention'd and declared; not as though our Contrition or Faith or any Works proceeding thereof, can worthyly merit or deſerve; to attayne the ſaid Juſtification for the only Mercy and Grace of the Father, promiſed freely unto us, for his Sonns ſake Jeſus Chriſt, and the Meritts of his Blood, and his Paſſion, be the only ſufficient and worthy cauſe thereof; And yet that notwithſtanding, to th'attaining of the ſaid Juſtification, God requireth to be in us, not only inward Contrition, perfect Faith and Charitie, certaine Hope and Confidence, with all other ſpiritual Graces, and Motions, which as wee ſaid before, muſt neceſſarily concure, in Remiſſion of our Sinnes, that is to ſay our Juſtification; but alſo he requireth and commandeth us, that after wee be juſtified, we muſt alſo have good Works of Charitie, and Obedience towards God, in the obſerving and fullfilling outwardly of his Lawes, and Commandments; for although acceptations to everlaſting Life be conjoyned with Juſtification, yet our good Works be neceſſarily required, to the attayning of everlaſting Life; and wee being Juſtified, be neceſſarily bound, and it is our neceſſary Duty to do good Works, according to the ſaying of St. Paul, Debitores ſumus non carni, ut ſecundum carnem vivamus; nam ſi ſecundum carnem vixerimus moriemur; ſin autem Spiritu, facta corporis mortificaverimus, vivemus; etenim quicunque Spiritu Dei ducuntur, hii ſunt filii Dei. And Chriſt ſaith, Si vis ad vitam ingredi, ſerva mandata. And St. Paul, De malis operibus ſayeth, Qui talia agunt, regnum Dei non poſſidebunt. Wherefore wee woll that all Buſhopps and Preachers, ſhall inſtruct and teach our People committed by Us to their ſpiritual Charge; That God neceſſarily requireth of us to do good Works, commanded by him; and that not only outward and Civil Works, but alſo the inward ſpiritual Motions and Graces of the Holy Ghoſt: That is to ſay, to dread and fear God, to have ſure Confidence and Truſt in God, to invocate and call upon God, to Love God, to have Patience in all our Adverſities; to hate Synne, and to have certain purpoſe and Will, not to ſynne again, and ſuch other like Motions and Vertues. For Chriſt ſayeth, Niſi abundaverit juſticia veſtra pluſquam Scribarum & Phariſeorum, non intrabitis in regnum cœlorum; that is to ſay, wee muſt not only do outward Civil good Works, but alſo we muſt have theſe aforeſaid inward ſpiritual Motions conſenting and agreeable to the Law of God.

Of Images.

“ As touching Images, Truth it is, that the ſame hath been ſaid in the Old Teſtament, for the great Abuſes of them to have been ſometime deſtroyed and put down; and in the New Teſtament they have been alſo allowed as good Authors do declare; wherefore wee woll, that all Biſhopps and Preachers ſhall inſtruct and teach our People committed by Us unto their ſpiritual Charge, how they ought and may uſe them; and firſt, That there may be attributed unto them, that they be repreſenters of Virtue and good Example; and that they alſo be by occaſion the Kindlers and Sterrers of Mens Minds, and make Men oft to remember and lament their Synnes and Offences; eſpecially the Images of Chriſt and our Lady, and that therefore it is meet they ſhould ſtand in the Churches, and none otherwiſe to be eſteemed: And to th'intent the rude People ſhould not from henceforth take ſuch Superſtition, as in time paſt it is thought that the ſame hath uſed to do; We woll that our Biſhopps and Preachers, dilligently ſhall teach them, and according to this Doctrine reforme their Abuſes, for elſe there might fortune Idollatrie to inſue, which God forbid: And as for Cenſeing of them, and Kneeling and Offering unto them, with other like Worſhippings; although the ſame hath entered by Devotion, and fallen into Cuſtome, yet the People ought to be dilligently taught, that they in no wiſe do it, nor think it meet to be done, to the ſame Images, but only to be done to God and his Honour: Although it be done before the Images, whither it be of Chriſt, of the Croſſe, or of our Ladye, or of any other Saint beſide.

Of Honouring of Saints.

“ As touching the Honouring of Saints, wee woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers, that inſtruct and teach our People commited by Us unto their ſpiritual Charge, That Saints now being with Chriſt in Heaven, to be honoured of Chriſtian People in Earth, but not with that Confidence and Honour, which are only due to God; truſting to attaine at their hands, which muſt be had only of God: But that they be thus to be honoured, becauſe they be known th'elect Perſons of Chriſt, becauſe they be paſſed in godly Life out of this tranſitory Worlde, becauſe they already do reign in Glory with Chriſt; and moſt ſpecially to laud and praiſe Chriſt in them, for their excellent Vertues, which he planted in them, for Example of and by them, to ſuch as are yet in this World, to live in Vertue and Goodneſs: And alſo not to fear to die, for Chriſt and his Cauſe, as ſome of them did, and finallye to take them, in that they may, to be the advancers of our Prayers, and demands unto Chriſt. By theſe ways and ſuch like, be Saints to be had in Reverence and Honour, and by none other.

Of Praying to Saints.

“ As touching Praying to Saints, wee woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers ſhall inſtruct and teach our People committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That albeit, Grace, Remiſſion of Synnes, and Salvation cannot be obteined but of God only, by the Mediation of our Saviour Chriſt; which is only ſufficient Mediator for all our Synnes, yet it is very laudable, to pray to Saints in Heaven everlaſtingly lyveing, whoſe Charity is ever permanent to be Interceſſors, and to pray for us, and with us to Almighty God, after this manner.

“ All holy Angels and Saints in Heaven pray for us, and with us unto the Father, that for his deare Son Jeſus Chriſt's Sake, wee may have Grace of him, and Remiſſion of our Synnes, with an earneſt purpoſe, not wanting ghoſtly Strength, to obſerve and keep his holy Commandments, and never to decline from the ſame againe unto our Lives end. And in this manner wee may pray unto our bleſſed Lady, to Saint John Baptiſt, to all and “ every of the Apoſtles, or any other Saint particularly, as our Devotion doth ſerve us; ſo that it be done without any vain Superſtition, as to think that any Saint is more mercifull, or woll here us ſooner than Chriſt, or that any Saint doth ſerve for one thing more than other, or is Patron of the ſame: And likewiſe we muſt keep Holy Dayes, unto God in memory of him, and his Saints, upon ſuch Dayes as the Church hath ordained their Memories to be celebrate, except they be mittigated or moderated, by the Aſſent or Commandment of the ſupreme Head to the Ordinaryes, and then the Subjects ought to obey it.

Of Rites and Ceremonies.

“ As concerning the Rites and Ceremonies of Chriſt's Church, as to have ſuch Veſtments in doing God's Service, as be and have been moſt part uſed: As ſprinkling of holy Water, to put us in remembrance of our Baptiſm, and of the Blood of Chriſt ſprinkled for our Redemption upon the Croſs: Giving of holy Bread, to put us in remembrance of the Sacrament of the Altar; that all chriſten'd Men be one Body myſtical of Chriſt, as the Bread is made of many Graines, and yet but one Loafe; and to put us in remembrance of our receiving of the holy Sacrament and Body of Chriſt, the which we ought to receive in right Charity; which in the beginning of Chriſt's Church Men did more often receive than they uſe now a days to do: Bearing of Candles on Candlemas-day, in Memory of Chriſt, the Spiritual Light; of whom Simeon did propheſie, as is read in the Church that day: Giving of Aſhes on Aſh-Wedneſday, to put in remembrance every Chriſtian Man, in the beginning of Lent and Pennance, that he is but Earth and Aſhes, and thereto ſhall return; which is right neceſſary to be uttered from henceforth in our Mother Tongue, always on the ſame Day: Bearing of Palmes on Palm-Sunday, in Memory of receiving of Chriſt into Hieruſalem a little before his Death, that we have the ſame deſire to receive him in our Hearts: Creeping to the Croſs, and humbling our ſelves to Chriſt on Good-Fryday, before the Croſs; and Offering there unto Chriſt before the ſame, and kiſſing of it in Memory of our Redemption, by Chriſt made upon the the Croſs: Setting up of the Sepulchre of Chriſt, whoſe Body after his Death was buried: The hallowing of the Font, and other like Benedictions by the Miniſters of Chriſt's Church; and all other like laudable Cuſtoms, Rites and Ceremonies, be not to be condemned and caſt away, but to be uſed and continued as things good and laudable, to put us in remembrance of thoſe Spiritual things, that they do ſignifie; not ſuffering them to be forgotten, or to be put in Oblivion: But renuing them in our Memories, from time to time: But none of theſe Ceremonies hath Power to remit Sins, but only to ſter and lift up our Minds unto God, by whom only our Sins be forgiven.

Of Purgatory.

“ For as much as due Order of Charity requireth, and the Book of Maccabees and divers ancient Doctors plainly ſhew, that it is a very good and charitable Deed to pray for Souls departed; and for as much alſo, as ſuch uſage hath continued in the Church ſo many Years, even from the beginning, Wee woll that all Biſhopps and Preachers ſhall inſtruct and teach, our People committed by Us unto their Spiritual Charge, That no Man ought to be grieved with the Continuance of the ſame. And that it ſtandeth with the very due Order of Charity, a Criſtian Man to pray for Souls departed, and to commit them in our Prayers to God's Mercy; and alſo to cauſe other to pray for them in Maſſes and Exequies, and to give Almes to other to pray for them; whereby they may the ſooner obtain the Mercy of God and the Fruition of his Glory: But for as much as the place where they be, the name thereof, and kind of Paines there alſo, be to us uncertain by Scripture; therefore this with all other ſuch things we remit to God Almighty, unto whoſe Mercy 'tis meet and convenient for us to commend 'em, truſting that God accepteth our Prayers for them, referring the reſt wholly to God, to whom is known their Eſtate and Condition.

“ Wherefore 'tis much neceſſary that ſuch Abuſes be clearly put away, which under the name of Purgatory hath been advanc'd: As to make Men believe that thro' the Biſhop of Rome's Pardons, Souls might be clearly delivered out of Purgatory, and all the Pains of it; or that Maſſes ſaid at Scala Cæli, or otherwiſe in any Place, or before any Image, might likewiſe deliver 'em from all their Pains, and ſend 'em ſtrait to Heaven: And other like Abuſes.

A Liſt of thoſe who ſubſcrib'd the Articles.

Sign'd,

Thomas Cromwell.
T. Cantuarienſ.
Johannes London.
Johannes Exon.
Johannes Lincoln.
Johannes Bathonienſ.
Thomas Elienſ.
Johannes Bangor.
Johannes Lincoln. nomine procuratorio pro Domino Roland. Coven. & Litchfield.
Nicolaus Sarum.
Edvardus Hereford.
Hugo Wygorn.
Johannes Roffen.
Willielmus Norwicen.
Ricardus Ciceſtren.
Willielmus Meneven.
Robertus Aſſaphen.
Willielmus Abbas Weſtm.
Johannes Abbas de Bury.
Ricardus Abbas de Glaſton.
Thomas de Abbingdon.
Willielmus Abbas de Illceſtre.
Clemens Abbas de Eveſham.
Clemens Abbas de Burton, Sti. Petri.
Hugo Abbas de Redyng.
Robertus Abbas de Malmesbury.
Johannes Abbas Croylandie,
Robertus Abbas Sti. Albani.
Johannes Abbas de Bello.
Ricardus Abbas de Winchellcomb.
Thomas Prior de Covent.
Johannes Abbas de Oſney.
Robertus Abbas de Waltham.
Johannes Abbas Cirenceſtr.
Robertus Abbas de Thame.
Henricus Abbas de Gratiis.
Grabriel Abbas de Buckfeſtria.
Henricus Abbas de Wardona.
Robertus Prior ſive Magiſter Ordinis de Sempringham.

Johannes Prior de Newbery.
Thomas Abbas de Stanley.
Ricardus Abbas de Bruera.
Robertus Prior Elienſ.
Radulphus Prior de Lynn.
Willielmus Abbas de Vale Dei.
Ricardus Prior de Lanthony.
Willielmus Prior de Bergaven.
Johannes Teoxber. Abbas.
Robertus de Thorney Abbas.
Ricardus de Notley Abbas.
Willielmus de Stratford Abbas.
Johannes Prior de Merton.
Bartholomeus de Overrey.

There is a larger Liſt of Subſcriptions in an Inſtrument in the Cotton Library, ingroſs'd in Vellum; and which carries the Face of an original (e).

This Inſtrument which 'tis probable was drawn by the Convocation, recites the Members who ſubſcribed in the Upper Houſe. It ſtands thus,

Sign'd,

Thomas Cromwell.
T. Cantuarienſ.
Edovardus Ebor.
Johannes London.
Cuthbertus Dunelmenſ.
Johannes Lincoln. nomine procuratorio pro Dommino Johanne Exon.
Jo. Bathonienſ.
Thomas Elienſ.
Johannes Lincoln. nomine procuratorio pro Domino Roland Covent. & Litchfield.
Johannes Bangor.
Nicolaus Sarisburien.
Edovardus Herefordén.
Hugo Wygorn.
Johannes Roffen.
Ricard. Ciceſt.
Willielmus Norwicenſ.
Willielmus Meneven.
Robert Aſſaphen.
Robertus Sti. Albani Abbas.
Willielmus Weſtmonaſter. Abbas.
Johannes Burienſ. Abbas.
Ricardus Glaſtoniæ Abbas.
Hugo Abbas de Redyng.
Robertus Malmesber. Abbas.
Clemens Eviſhamenſ. Abbas.
Johannes de Bello Abbas.
Willielmus Sti. Petri Gloceſtr. Abbas.
Ricardus Winchellcombenſ. Abbas.
Johannes de Croyland Abbas.
Robertus de Thorney Abbas.
Robertus de Waltham Abbas.
Johannes Cirenceſtr. Abbas.
Johannes Teoxber Abbas.
Thomas Prior Covent.
Johannes de Oſney Abbas.
Henricus de Gratiis Abbas.
Antonius de Eynſham Abbas.
Robertus Prior Elten.
Hugo Prior de Huntingdon.
Robertus Prior ſive Magiſter Ordinis Sempringham.
Ricardus de Notley Abbas.
Willielmus de Stratford Abbas.
Gabriel Abbas de Bucſeſtria.
Henricus Abbas de Wordona.
Johannes Prior de Merton.
Ricardus Prior de Walſhingham
Thomas Abbas de Gerendon.
Thomas de Stanly Abbas.
Ricardus de Bitleſden Abbas.
Ricardus Prior de Lanthony.
Robertus Abbas de Thame.
Johannes Prior de Newhenham.
Radulphus Prior de Kyme.
Ricardus de Bruera Abbas.
Robertus de Welhoe Abbas.
Bartholomeus de Overrey Prior.
Wilielmus de Bergaveny Prior.
Thomas de Abindon Abbas.

By this larger Liſt of the Biſhops, it appears that ſome of the Northern Prelates concurr'd in the Articles with thoſe of Canterbury. Whereas the Inſtrument in the Paper Office was drawn up only to ſhew the Agreement of this latter Province.

To proceed, the Cotton Library affords a Liſt of Subſcriptions of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, but this only relates to the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury: The Order ſtands thus,

R. Gwent Archidiaconus.
London & Breck.
Roberus Alridge Archid. Colceſt.
Thomas Bedel Archid. Cornub.
Ricardus Street Archid. Derbie.
David Pole Archid. Salop. & Proc. Cleri Coven. & Litchf.
Ricardus Doke Archid. Sarum.
Edmondus Bonner Archid. Leyceſtr.
Thomas Baghe Archid. Sur.
Ricardus Rawſon Archid. Eſſex.
Edmundus Cranmer Archid. Cantuar.
Polydorus Virgilius Archid. Wellenſ.
Ricardus Coren Archid. Oxon.
Henricus Morgan Procurator Cleri Lincoln.
Milo Spencer Procurator Cleri Norwicenſ.
Gulielmus Knight Archid. Ceſtrie.
Gamaliel Clyſton, Dec. Eccleſ. Heref. & Proc. Capit.
Johannes London. Decanus Wallingford.
Nicolaus Medcalfe Archid. Roffen.
Gulielmus Hedge Procurator Cleri Norwicenſ.
Adam Traves Archid. Exon.
Ricardus Woleman Dec. Wellen.
Thomas Brereword Archidiac. Har. Procur. Capit. & Cleri Exon.
Georgius Carew, Archid. Toten. Proc. Capit. & Cleri Oxon.
Thomas Bennet Proc. Cleri & Capituli Sarum.
Ricardus Arche Proc. Cleri. & Capit. Sarum.
Petrus Lighman Proc. Cleri Cant.
Edmundus Steward Proc. Cleri Winton.
Johannes Rayne Proc. Cleri Lincoln.
Leonardus Savile Proc. Cleri Archid. Lewen.
Symon Matthew Proc. Cleri London.
Humphrid Ogle Archid. Salop.
Ricardus Layton Archid. Bucks.
Gulielmus Maye Proc. Cleri Elien.
Rolandus Phillips Proc. Capit. Eccleſ. Cathedralis Divi Pauli.
Johannes Bell Archid. Gloceſtriæ.
Hugo Coren. Proc. Cleri Hereford.
Ricardus Sparkeford Proc. Cleri Hereford.
Georgius Heneage Decanus Lincoln.
Petrus Vannes Archid. Wigorn.
Mauritius Griffyth Proc. Cleri Roffen.
Gulielmus Bukmaiſtre Proc. Cleri London.
Ricardus Shelton Mag. Colleg. de Metyngham, per me Gulielmum Glyn Archid. Angleſ.
Robertus Evans Decan. Bangoren.
Gualterius Gretygn Archid. Bathonenſ.
Thomas Bagard Procurator Cleri Wigornen.
Johannes Naſe Proc. Cleri Bathen. & Wellen.
Georgius Wyndham Archid. Norwicen.
Johannes Chambers Decanus Divi Stephani & Archid. Bedford.
Nicolaus Wilſon

In

(e) Biblioth. Cot Cleop. E. 5. fol. 59.

In this Liſt of Subſcriptions in the Cotton Library there are eighteen Biſhops, fourty Abbots and Priors. And in the Lower Houſe of Convocation the Articles are ſubſcrib'd by fifty: Of theſe, there are four Deans of Cathedrals, twenty five Archdeacons, three Deans of Collegiate Churches, ſeventeen Proctors for the Clergy, or Convocation Men for the Dioceſſes as they are call'd, and one Maſter of a College.

Some of the Doctrines of the Church of Rome reform'd in the Articles.

By peruſing theſe Articles the Reader may perceive ſeveral of the moſt ſhocking Doctrines of the Roman Communion were ſoften'd and explain'd to a more inoffenſive Senſe; and ſeveral ſuperſtitious Uſages diſcharg'd. And being come thus forward towards an Accommodation, the Lord Herbert ſeems to wonder they cou'd not agree. He complains of the Heat and Obſtinacy of both Parties, thinks they contended more for Victory than Truth: And that ſome of the Preachers and Schoolmen wou'd rather have imbroil'd the whole World, than riſque their Reputation with their Audience by retracting in the leaſt Circumſtance. He takes notice farther, that the Reformers being the weaker Side, ſuffer'd moſt by their Stiffneſs, and were ſeveral of 'em burnt in the Controverſy. Amongſt theſe William Tyndal loſt his Life at the Stake near Bruſſels in the Low Countries. He lived regularly and had no ſlender ſhare of Parts and Learning; but he did not always manage a Diſpute with Decency and Temper. However, theſe Barbarities againſt the Goſpellers, as they were call'd, inflam'd the Difference, and drew an Odium upon the Roman Catholicks (f).

The King and Clergy having proceeded thus far in the Reformation of the Church, endeavour'd to guard againſt foreign Oppoſition. His Highneſs had Reaſon to believe the approaching Council at Mantua wou'd cenſure our late Proceedings in Religion. To weaken the Authority of this Council therefore, and make it more inoffenſive, 'twas thought proper the Biſhops and Clergy ſhou'd come to a Reſolution concerning the Force of ſuch an Aſſembly, and by whom it ought to be conven'd. The Inſtrument drawn up and ſign'd upon this Occaſion, runs thus.

The Senſe of the Convocation with reſpect to General Councils.

“As concerning General Councils like as we (taught by long Experience) do perfectly know that there never was, ne is any thing deviſed, invented or inſtituted by our Fore-fathers more expedient, or more neceſſary for the Eſtabliſhment of our Faith, for the Extirpation of Hereſies, and the aboliſhing of Sects and Schiſms, and finally for the reducing of Chriſt's People unto one perfect Unity and Concord in his Religion, than by the having of General Councils, ſo that the ſame be had and congregated in Spiritu Sancto, and be alſo conform and agreeable as well concerning the Surety, and Indifference of the Places, as all other Points requiſite and neceſſary for the ſame; unto that wholſome and godly Inſtitution and Uſage, for the which they were at firſt deviſed and uſed in the Primitive Church: Even ſo on the contrary ſide, taught by the like Experience, we eſteem, repute and judge, that there is, ne can be, any thing in the World more peſtilent and pernicious to the Common Weale of Chriſtendom, or whereby the Truth of God's Word as in times paſt, or hereafter may be ſooner defaced and ſubverted, or whereof has, and may enſue more Contention, more Diſcord and other develiſh Effects, than when ſuch General Councils have or ſhall be aſſembled nor chriſtendly nor charitably; but for and upon private Malice, and Ambition, or other worldly and carnal Reſpects or Conſiderations, according to the Saying of Gregory Nazianzenus in his Epiſtle to one Procopius, wherein he writes this Sentence following: Sic ſentio ſi verum ſcribendum eſt, omnes Conventus Epiſcoporum fugiendos eſſe, quia nullius Synodi finem vidi bonum, neque habentem magis ſolutionem malorum, quam incrementum. Nam cupiditates contentionum & gloriæ (ſed ne putes me odioſum iſta ſcribentem) vincunt rationem.

“Wherefore we think that Chriſtian Princes eſpecially and above all things, ought and muſt with all their Wills, Power, and Diligence, foreſee and provide, ne ſanctiſſima hac in parte Majorum inſtituta ad improbiſſimos ambitionis aut malitiæ effectus explendos, diverſiſſimo ſuo fine, & ſceleratiſſimo pervertantur, neve ad alium prætextum poſſint valere & longè diverſum effectum orbi producere, quam ſanctiſſima rei facies præ ſe ferat. That is to ſay, Leſt the moſt noble, wholſome Inſtitutions of our Elders in this behalf, be perverted to a moſt contrary and wicked End and Effect. That is to ſay, to fulfil and ſatisfy the wicked Affections of Mens Ambition and Malice; or leſt they might prevail for any other Colour or bring forth any other Effect than their moſt virtuous and laudable Countenance doth outwardly ſhew unto the World or pretend. And firſt of all, we think that they ought principally to conſider, who has the Authority to call together a General Council. Secondly, whether the Cauſes alledged be ſo weighty and ſo urgent, that neceſſarily they require a General Council, nor can otherwiſe be remedied. Thirdly, who ought to be Judges in the General Council. Fourthly, what Order of Proceeding is to be obſerv'd in the ſame: And how the Opinions or Judgments of the Fathers are to be conſulted or ask'd. Fifthly, what Doctrines are to be allow'd or defended, with divers other things, which in General Councils ought of Reaſon and Equity to be obſerv'd. And as unto the firſt Point we think, that neither the Biſhop of Rome, ne any one Prince of what Eſtate, Degree, or Preheminence ſoever he be, may by his own Authority call, indict, or ſummon any General Council without the expreſs Conſent, Aſſent and Agreement of the Reſidue of Chriſtian Princes; and eſpecially ſuch as have within their own Realms and Signiories Imperium merum; that is to ſay, of ſuch as have the whole, intire and ſupreme Government and Authority over all their Subjects, without knowledging or recognizing of any other ſupreme Power or Authority. And this to be true, we be induced to think by many and ſundry as well Examples as great Reaſons and Authority. The which, foraſmuch as it ſhou'd be over long and tedious to expreſs here particularly, we have thought good to omit the ſame for this preſent. And in Witneſs that this is our plain and determinate Sentence, Opinion and Judgment touching the Premiſes, we the Prelates and Clergy underwritten being congregate together in the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, and repreſenting the whole Clergy of the ſame, have to theſe Preſents ſubſcribed our Names the twentieth of July, in the Year of our Lord 1536, 28 H. VIII.

Thomas Cromwell.
Thomas Cantuar.
Johannes London. with thirteen Biſhops more.

The Abbots, Priors, Archdeacons, Deans and other Convocation Men, were fourty nine (g).

(f) Ld. Herbert, p. 406.

(g) Ld. Herbert, p. 406. from Records. Journal of Convocation, fol. 64.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

Several of the Biſhops had formerly been conſulted by the King upon this Argument; to tell the preciſe time is ſomewhat difficult: But it was certainly after April 1534, as appears from the Subſcription of Thomas Goodrick Biſhop of Ely, who was not till then promoted to that See. The Record is conſiderably larger and ſubſcribed by more Biſhops, &c. than that mention'd by Biſhop Burnet (h): For this Reaſon I ſhall tranſcribe it for the Reader (i). In the latter part of this Inſtrument the twentieth Chapter of St. John the twenty ſecond and twenty third Verſes, and Acts the twentieth, Verſe the twenty eighth are cited to prove the Independency of the Sacerdotal Function on the Civil Magiſtrate. And by Cranmer's ſubſcribing with the reſt 'tis plain his Sentiment concerning the Seat of Church Government was not unorthodox at preſent.

To proceed: The King was now fortified with a Declaration of the Clergy relating to a General Council; in which amongſt other Things, they maintain, it neither belong'd to the Pope, nor any one Prince whatſoever, to convene an Oecumenical Synod: His Highneſs, I ſay, being thus ſupported by this ſolemn Concurrence, publiſh'd a Proteſtation againſt the Council indicted at Mantua (k).

The King's Proteſtation againſt the Council ſummon'd to Mantua.

Father Paul (l) takes notice of this Remonſtrance. It goes upon theſe Grounds, “That the Pope had no Power to convene a General Council: That the Juncture was unſeaſonable, upon the ſcore of the War in Italy; and farther, that no Freedom of Debates could be expected at that Place. The King continues that he was very deſirous of a fair, well qualified Council, but at this of the Pope's ſummoning, he was reſolved neither to appear in Perſon, nor by his Ambaſſadors. The Bulls of the Biſhop of Rome ſignifying no more, in his Highneſs's Judgment, than the Summons of any other Biſhop. That the ancient Councils were call'd by the Authority of Princes: That this Cuſtom ought to be reviv'd: For now the Pope's Pretenſions and Conduct are one of the Grievances of Chriſtendom, and the Miſmanagement of his Court particularly complain'd of: That it was not unuſual with Popes to break their Word: That himſelf had more Reaſon than other Princes to ſuſpect the Fair-dealing of that Prelate; he having ſufficiently diſcover'd his Diſaffection ſince his Authority was renounced, and his Peter-Pence ſtopp'd in England. That if the Pope had the Choice of the Place, it would be either within his own Territories, or in the Dominion of ſome Prince dependent on him. In ſhort, a Council rightly conſtituted being impracticable, his Highneſs thought it the beſt way for every Prince to Reform at Home. In the cloſe of the Proteſtation, he decares himſelf reſolv'd never to give way to any Exceſs of Innovation, or depart from the Doctrine of the Catholick Church.

About this time the King ſet forth his Injunctions to retrench the Number of Holydays. The Inſtrument complains theſe Feſtivals were grown ſo numerous, that there was ſcarce time to gather in the Harveſt. That ſuch frequent Relaxations from Labour brought on a Habit of Idleneſs, and were oftentimes abus'd to Intemperance and Riot. The Injunctions run in the King's Name, with the Aſſent of the Prelates and Clergy in Convocation.

Hen. VIII. K.

Injunctions for the abrogating ſeveral Holydays, &c.

To proceed: The Feaſts of the Dedication of Churches is order'd to be kept upon the firſt Sunday in October, and upon no other Day.

The Feaſt of the Patron of every Church commonly call'd the Church Holyday, is thrown up, and laid open to Buſineſs.

All thoſe Feaſts likewiſe which fall either in Harveſt or Term Time, are diſcharg'd, and every Man left at liberty to work in 'em.

The Feaſts of the Apoſtles, of the bleſſed Virgin, and all thoſe Feſtivals in which the Judges don't uſually ſit at Weſtminſter are excepted. However, all Prieſts and Clerks both Secular and Regular were allow'd to perform their accuſtomed Service in their Churches, provided they did not do it in a ſolemn manner, nor enjoyn the ſame Duty upon others (m).

This Year Cromwell ſet forth Injunctions of the Tenour following.

Cromwell's Injunctions.

In the Name of God, Amen. “In the Year of our Lord one thouſand five hundred thirty ſix, and of the moſt noble Reign of our Sovereign Lord Henry VIII. King of England and of France the twenty eighth, and the Day of I Thomas Cromwell Knight, Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy Seal of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, and Vicegerent unto the ſame: For and concerning all his Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical within this Realm, viſiting by the King's Highneſs ſupreme Authority Eccleſiaſtical the People and Clergy of this Deanry of by my truſty Commiſſary lawfully deputed and conſtituted for this Part, have, to the Glory of Almighty God, to the King's Highneſs Honour, the Publick Weal of this his Realm and Increaſe of Virtue within the ſame, appointed and aſſigned theſe Injunctions enſuing to be kept and obſerv'd by the Dean, Parſons, Vicars, Curates, and Stipendiaries, reſiant or having Cure of Souls, or any other Spiritual Adminiſtration within this Deanry, under the Pains hereafter limited and appointed (n).

“Firſt, In all Pariſhes and Places of Preaching, the King's Supremacy was to be ſet forth and maintain'd once every Sunday, for a quarter of a Year together; and afterwards twice a Year at leaſt. They were likewiſe to inſtruct the People, that the Biſhop of Rome's Authority being unſupported by the Laws of God, was juſtly diſclaim'd.

“Secondly, That in the Articles lately ſet forth by the King's Highneſs, and agreed to by the Prelates and Clergy in Convocation, ſome Things are Points of Faith, and neceſſary to be believ'd; whereas others are of a lower Claſs, and relate to certain commendable Rites and Ceremonies, inſtituted only for the ſake of Decency and Order, and for the more ſolemn Performance of divine Service: The ſaid Dean, Parſons, &c. are to range theſe Articles under their proper Diſtinctions, and inſtruct their Audience in the reſpective Neceſſity, Quality, and Uſefulneſs of 'em.

“Thirdly, That the late Order concerning the Diſcharging certain ſuperſtitious Holydays ſhou'd be read to the People with Exhortations to govern themſelves accordingly.

“Fourthly, That they ſhou'd not lay out their Rhetorick in flouriſhing upon Images, Relicks, or Miracles upon any Motion of Superſtition or Covetouſneſs: That they ought not to perſuade their People to Pilgrimages, contrary to the Intendment of the late Articles, but rather exhort 'em to ſerve God and make Proviſion for their Families. And if they have any thing to ſpare, they are to inform 'em, that the be-

---

(h) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1 p. 174.

(i) See Records, N. 37.

(k) See Records, N. 38.

(l) Father Paul, Hiſt. Council of Trent, Lib. 1.

(m) Fox, Vol. 2. p. 386.

(n) Regiſt. Cranmer, fol. 97.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

ſtowing it on the Poor, will be more acceptable to God Almighty, than making a Preſent to Images and Relicks.

“Fifthly, That in their Sermons and other religious Exerciſes, they put Parents and other Directors of Youth in mind to teach their Children the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments in their Mother Tongue; that theſe Summaries of Belief, Devotion, and Manners, ſhou'd be repeated by the young People 'till they are perfect in 'em: And to prevent the Miſchief and Temptations of Idleneſs and Poverty, they ought to be bred to Learning, or ſome other honeſt Buſineſs.

“Sixthly, That Sacraments and Sacramentals be duly and reverently adminiſter'd by the Parſons, Vicars, &c. And if any happen to be non-reſident upon the Privilege of Royal Licenſe or Act of Parliament, that then they take Care to leave learned and ſufficient Curates in their Place.

“Seventhly, That every Parſon or Proprietary of a Church, ſhou'd provide a Bible in Latin and Engliſh to be laid in the Choir for every one to read at their Pleaſure. But here they were to precaution the People againſt falling into Controverſy about difficult Paſſages. They were to exhort 'em to Modeſty and Sobriety in the uſe of this Liberty: And where they found themſelves entangled, to apply to Perſons of Learning and Character.

“Eighthly, That the ſaid Deans, Parſons, Vicars, &c. ſhou'd not go to publick Houſes, excepting upon neceſſary Occaſions. That they are to avoid Intemperance and unlawful Diverſions, ſuch as Tables, Cards, &c. and on the contrary employ their leiſure Hours in reading the Scriptures: Always remembring that they ought to be particularly unexceptionable in their Behaviour, and live for the Example of others.

“Ninthly, Becauſe the Eſtates of the Church are call'd the Patrimony of the Poor, and yet not employ'd for that purpoſe in liberal Proportions; therefore all Parſons, Vicars, Prebendaries and other benefic'd Men, which can ſpend twenty Pounds a Year or more, are enjoyn'd to diſtribute the fortieth part of their Spiritual Revenue amongſt their poor Pariſhioners, the Church Wardens being preſent at ſuch Diſtributions.

“Tenthly, That every Parſon, Vicar, or benefic'd Man, who has a hundred Pounds a Year or more in Church Promotions, ſhall for every ſuch hundred Pounds a Year, allow a competent Exhibition to maintain a Scholar either in Grammar Schools, or in one of the Univerſities: That theſe Scholars when they had made a Proficiency in Learning might aſſiſt their Patrons in the Functions of their Cure, or elſe prove ſerviceable to the Publick in ſome other diſtinguiſh'd Station.

“Eleventhly, That all Parſons, Vicars and Clerks having Churches, Chapels or Houſes belonging to their Livings, ſhall expend the fifth Part of their Benefices, till ſuch Places are ſufficiently repair'd.

“Laſtly, All theſe Injunctions were to be obſerv'd under the Penalties of Suſpenſion and Sequeſtration.

Theſe Injunctions, we may obſerve, were only directed to the Deans and downwards. Thus the Lord Cromwell had ſomething of Modeſty in his wonderful Office, and forbore the brandiſhing his Vicegerency over the Biſhops.

Hen. VIII. K.

Auguſt 21. Shirburne Biſhop of Chicheſter his Death and Character.

About this Time, Robert Shirburne Biſhop of Chicheſter, departed this Life. He was Ninety Six Years of Age, and for this Reaſon, 'tis probable he reſign'd his See a little before his Death. Biſhop Godwyn reports him a Perſon of great Prudence and Capacity for Buſineſs; that he manag'd ſeveral Embaſſies to Commendation, under King Henry the Seventh. He was likewiſe remarkable for Largeneſs of Mind, kept an hoſpitable Table, and was charitable to the Poor. He left ſeveral Ornaments of Value to his Church, and had this for his Motto, Dilexi decorem domus tui, Domine. He was ſucceeded by Richard Samſon Dr. of Law, who was conſecrated no longer ſince than June the Ninth (o).

Nix Biſhop of Norwich his Death with the Reaſon of his being proſecuted.

To this Shirburne I ſhall ſubjoyn Richard Nix Biſhop of Norwich, who died in January laſt. He is ſaid to have offended the King ſignally by ſome Correſpondence with Rome, and was kept long in the Marſhalſea and convicted, and found in a Præmunire (p). But this Relation goes only upon Conjecture, and looks improbable even from Nix's Age and Behaviour: For he was a very old Man, and had been blind for many Years: And as he cou'd have no Proſpect of Advantage from ſuch a Correſpondence, ſo neither did he manage like one that wou'd riſque his Fortune for any Religion. For as to Regularity, he was a Perſon of a very ſlender Character (q). The true Cauſe of his Conviction and Impriſonment was this. The Town of Thetford in Norfolk made a Preſentment upon Oath, before the King's Judges in Proof of their Liberties. The Matter alledg'd was, that none of the ſaid Town ought to be cited into any ſpiritual Conſiſtory, but only into the Court of the Dean of Thetford: And that whoſoever cited any Inhabitant of that Town into another Spiritual Court, ſhould forfeit Six and Eight Pence, toties quoties (r). The Biſhop taking this as a Check upon his Juriſdiction, cited Richard Cokarel Mayor of Thetford, and ſome others into his Court, and enjoyned them under the Penalty of Excommunication, to ſummon a Jury of their Town, and cancel the former Preſentment. For this the Biſhop was proſecuted in the King's Bench, caſt in a Præmunire, and had Judgment executed upon his Perſon and Eſtate, purſuant to the Statute. This was done in the Beginning of the Year 1534 (s). The King afterwards upon his Submiſſion, diſcharged him out of Priſon; however, he was not pardon'd without a Fine, with Part of which 'tis ſaid the Glaſs Windows of King's College-Chapel in Cambridge were purchas'd.

The King ſeiz'd the Mannors of the Biſhoprick of Norwich and return'd a ſlender Exchange.

During the Vacancy of the See, the King nominated William Abbot of St. Bennet's; but took into his own Hands, all the Mannors of the Biſhoprick. For the ſeizing this large Endowment, there was nothing given in Exchange but the Abby of St. Bennet's in the Holm, the Priory of Hickling in Norfolk, and a Prebend in the Collegiate Church of St. Stephen's Weſtminſter. This Exchange was confirm'd in the Parliament begun February the Fourth, and diſſolv'd April the Fourteenth this Year (t).

Cranmer's Reſolution of a Caſe concerning Marriage.

Notwithſtanding a late Act of Parliament had mentioned the prohibited Degrees of Conſanguinity and Affinity, and drawn a ſhort Table to diſentangle the Diſputes about Marriage, yet this Proviſion being ſomewhat ſhort, the Matter continued perplex'd, and gave a Colour to Unjuſtifiable Liberty. To give an Inſtance; one Maſſey a Courtier, contracted himſelf to his Wife's Niece. This Engagement wou'd not paſs without the Archbiſhop's Diſpenſation. The Lord

---

(o) Godwyn de Præſul. Angl.

(p) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 215.

(q) Godwyn de Præſul. Angl.

(r) Term Hilary, 25 H. 8. coram Rege Rot. 15.

(s) Harmer, p. 44. & deinc.

(t) Harmer, p. 46. Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 215.

Lord Cromwell being ſolicited, wrote to Cranmer in Maſſey's Behalf. 'Twas mention'd in the Letter, that Maſſey's Wife was dead, and that the Caſe was not within the Prohibition of the Statute.

The Archbiſhop having too much Probity to be ſway'd by Cromwell's Greatneſs, return'd him an Anſwer to this Effect *.

*Cotton Lib. Cleop. E. 5.

Cranmer's Reſolution of a Caſe concerning Marriage.

“He acquaints him, that by the Law of God, many Perſons are prohibited Marriage without particular and expreſs pointing upon the Caſe. That here the Prohibition is to be collected by Conſequence and Parity of Reaſoning. Thus St. Ambroſe tells us, a matrimonial Relation with a Niece, is forbidden by the Law of God; tho' we don't read in Leviticus in ſo many Words, that the Uncle and the Niece ſhan't marry. But ſince ſuch a Relation between the Nephew and the Aunt is there declar'd unlawful, we may fairly conclude, the Niece and the Uncle are barr'd the ſame Engagement. Thus, tho' the Caſe of the Daughter marrying her Father is paſs'd over in Leviticus, yet ſince the Son's marrying his Mother is expreſly forbidden, 'tis eaſie to come to a Reſolution of the Point, with reſpect to the Daughter. To come to the preſent Caſe; ſince by the Levitical Prohibition the Nephew is prohibited marrying the Uncle's Wife, we muſt infer from the Equi-diſtance of the Degrees, that 'tis not lawful for the Niece to be marry'd to the Aunt's Husband. The Archbiſhop adds, “He cou'd have fortified his Opinion with more Reaſon and Authorities; but what he had ſaid already, he thought was altogether ſufficient.

“When the late Bill for ſtating the prohibited Degrees of Marriage was read in the Houſe of Lords, Cranmer mov'd for ſome Amendments; and that the Caſes of Mother and Mother-in-Law, Daughter and Daughter-in-Law, and ſo forwards to a farther length in the right Line, might have been expreſs'd. He wou'd likewiſe have had the ſupplemental Proviſion been carry'd on to Siſter and Siſter-in-Law, Aunt and Aunt-in-Law, Niece and Niece-in-Law. Had the Act been penn'd with this Compaſs, all the prohibited Degrees expreſs'd, and not expreſs'd in the Holy Scriptures would have been comprehended †.

† Fox Acts and Monuments, p. 960. Strype's Memor. Cranmer, p. 46.

To proceed: The Seiſure of the Eſtates of the leſſer Abbies were not generally acceptable to the People; they found Hoſpitality decay, the Farmers Rents were rais'd, and the Poor increaſed upon the Country. 'Tis true, the King, to make theſe Diſſolutions go down the better, had by his Letters Patents, return'd about Ten of 'em, and founded them anew. This Number was within half a Year increas'd to One and Thirty *. But this Inſtance of Royal Bounty was not ſufficient, it ſeems, to quiet the People. For beſides their Grievances in the Loſs of the Abbies, the Fifteens granted by Act of Parliament, were look'd on as unſeaſonable Burthens, and too heavy for the Condition of their Fortune. And here the prime Miniſter Cromwell was thought to miſmanage. For, to project a Reformation, and load the Subject with Taxes at the ſame Time, was reckoned a dangerous Experiment; and indeed it prov'd ſo in the Event. For now the People began to grow loud in their Mutinies, and fly to Arms in ſeveral Places. 'Tis true, they did not all agree in their Remonſtrance, nor break out in their Revolt at once.

* Bp. Burnet pt. 1. p. 204. and Collect. of Records, Book 3. Numb. 3. ſect. 2.

An Inſurrection in Lincolnſhire.

The Lincolnſhire Men took the Field firſt: They were headed by one Dr. Mackerel Prior of Barlings, who ſtiled himſelf Captain Cobler. Theſe Men, as they were the earlieſt in the Rebellion, ſo they were the moſt moderate in their Demands. “They petition'd the King in very ſubmiſſive Language, Their Grievances were the late Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, and the Act concerning Uſes (u). This Statute they pretended reſtrain'd the Subjects Liberty in the Declaration of their Wills. As to the Fifteenths, they only pleaded Poverty againſt that Burthen. To go on with their Remonſtrance, they complain'd his Grace had Perſons diſaffected to the publick Intereſt, at the Council Board: That he employ'd Men of mean Birth in the Miniſtry, and here Cromwell was particularly named. They ſuggeſt farther, that ſeveral Biſhops had made a Change in the fundamental Doctrines; and that they had Reaſon to apprehend, the Jewels and Plate of their Pariſh Churches wou'd be ſeis'd, and fall under the ſame Calamity with the Religious Houſes. To deliver his poor loyal Subjects from ſuch Apprehenſions, and for Redreſs of the Grievances abovemention'd, they humbly deſire his Majeſty would make uſe of the Nobility in the Adminiſtration, and give ſuch effectual Directions as might put his Subjects in a Condition to ſubmit to his Grace's Government, and pay their Duty to him as Supream Head of the Church of England; which Title they own'd belong'd to his Highneſs by hereditary Right. And in the cloſe, they promiſe his Majeſty the Tenth and Firſt Fruits of ſpiritual Promotions of the yearly Value of Twenty Pounds and upwards: And of all others under the ſaid Value, where the Incumbents fail'd in Reſidence and Hoſpitality (w).

The Rebels Petition.

(u) 27 H. 8. c. 15.

(w) Ld. Herbet, p. 410, &c.

The publiſhing theſe Articles increas'd their Numbers to a conſiderable Body: And to give the Inſurrection the better Colour, they ſwore to be true to God, the King, and the Commonwealth. And thus ſince they were their own Caſuiſts, and interpreted the Oath to what Latitude they pleas'd, they were ſafe enough.

Their plauſible Oath.

The King being advertis'd of their Motions, and that they began to have a formidable Countenance, ſent Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, againſt them: He had a Commiſſion to raiſe Forces at Diſcretion. At the ſame Time, the King wrote to the Rebels: The Letter was couch'd in Terms ſomewhat ambiguous. He ſeem'd to promiſe 'em Juſtice, as they call'd it: But then this Condeſcenſion was clogg'd with ſeveral Demands: And particularly he requir'd, that Two of the principal Rebels ſhould be put into his Hands. This Anſwer of the King's was ill received by the Rebels, who ordered their Forces to march, and threatn'd to deſtroy ſome Perſons of Condition, unleſs they wou'd acquieſce and go along with them. Theſe Gentlemen who pretended themſelves dragg'd and menac'd into the Service, acquainted the Duke of Suffolk with the Obſtinacy of the Revolters; that unleſs they had manag'd 'em with ſome Art, prevail'd with them to ſlacken their March, and petition the King, they had been advanc'd as far as Huntington; and that nothing but a General Pardon wou'd make 'em disband.

Octob. 10.

The Duke of Suffolk perceiving an Indemnity wou'd quiet 'em, ſolicited in their Behalf; he likewiſe perſuaded them not to march till they received the King's Anſwer. His Majeſty being inform'd, that the People in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, and eſpecially in Yorkſhire, began to run into Diſorder, thought it the beſt way to apply to ſtrong Remedies, and exert the Force of the Government. And finding no Time was to be loſt, he ordered the Earls of Shrewſbury, Rutland, and Huntington, to command the Lincolnſhire Men to diſperſe immediately, and lay down their Arms at their utmoſt Peril. The Terror of this Proclamation, made a great many quit the Service, and go home. However, thoſe who had moſt Obſtinacy, and leaſt to loſe, retreated to the Yorkſhire Inſurrection. The Remainder were at laſt perſuaded by their Leaders, to make the Submiſſion requir'd: That is, they own'd their Fault, deliver'd up their Arms, and promis'd to be govern'd by all the Statutes made in this Reign.

They diſperſe upon the King's Proclamation.

Another Rebellion in the North.

While the Lincolnſhire Revolt was unſuppreſſed, the Yorkſhire Men appeared in Arms, under the Command of one Robert Aſke. They call'd the Inſurrection a Pilgrimage of Grace. And to make this Pretence paſs upon the Unwary, ſeveral Prieſts march'd before the Rebels, with Croſſes erected; and the Troops had the Crucifix, the Five Wounds, and the Chalice in their Colours. And being deſirous to engage Perſons of Quality, they ſolicited William Lord Dacres of Gilliſland, in the firſt place. This Lord had been lately try'd for holding Correſpondence with the Scots, but was acquitted by his Peers. This Uſage they thought might have given him a Diſguſt againſt the Government, and made him pliant to their Purpoſe: But he refus'd to join them. This Diſappointment did not diſcourage them from tampering with others: And thus where Courting wou'd not do, they made uſe of rougher Methods, haled in ſeveral Men of Quality, and made 'em ſwear to the Cauſe. This Revolt was blanched like the other, and carried a very plauſible Appearance: For they pretended to engage only for the Good of the King and Common-wealth, for the Intereſt of Religion, and the Suppreſſion of Hereſie.

The Rebels reſtore the ejected Monks.

As this numerous Body march'd Southward, they were frequently addreſs'd by the Monks of the diſſolv'd Monaſteries. Aſke put ſeveral of 'em in Poſſeſſion as Opportunity ſerv'd, adviſ'd 'em to pray for the King, and to take up Proviſion of their Farmers upon Bills till their Houſes were reſtor'd. The King receiving Advice of this Rebellion, and that the Commons of Richmond, Lancaſhire, Durham, Weſtmorland, &c. had fired the Beacons againſt the Government, was not a little alarm'd. He order'd the Earl of Shrewſbury to march with a conſiderable Body againſt the Northern Men: He wrote alſo to the Earl of Darby to raiſe what Forces he cou'd. At this dangerous Juncture Courtney Marquis of Exeter, the King's Couſin German, and the Earls of Huntington and Rutland, offer'd the Crown their Service. And to frighten the Monks from applying to the Rebels, and returning to their old Seats, his Highneſs order'd that the Religious of Sally, Wally, Norton, and Hexham, ſhould be dragged out of the Monaſteries, and executed by martial Law. And receiving Intelligence of the Inſurrection's growing ſtronger, he diſpatch'd Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk with Troops to reinforce the Earl of Shrewſbury.

Pomfret Caſtle ſurrendered to them.

In the mean time Aſke and his Army coming up to Pomfret Caſtle, obliged Lee Archbiſhop of York, and Thomas Lord Darcy to ſurrender the Caſtle, and take the aſſociating Oath. The Contents of this Engagement, beſides what has been already mention'd, was the Preſervation of the King and the Royal Family, the purging the Nobility, and diſcharging all evil Counſellors and Perſons of mean Extraction from the Adminiſtration. The Archbiſhop and Lord Darcy pretended want of Ammunition and Proviſion; but the Strength of the Caſtle made ſome People ſuſpect their Integrity. This Succeſs made way for a farther Progreſs: For ſoon after, the Rebels were Maſters of York and Hull, and either careſs'd or frighten'd moſt of the Quality into their Intereſt. Beſides the Colour of Religion, they ſpred ſeveral Calumnies which increas'd their Party. They gave out, that all the Gold of England was to be touch'd at the Tower. That the King claim'd all the Cattle unmarked, and the Furniture and Ornaments of Pariſh Churches. That a Tax wou'd be laid upon Chriſtenings, Weddings, and Buryings; and that they muſt pay for Licenſes to eat white Bread, and the better ſort of Diet.

Octob. 20.

To proceed: The Earl of Shrewſbury ſent a Herald to Pomfret with a Proclamation: The Herald was brought before Aſke who ſat in State between the Archbiſhop and the Lord Darcy. This General, being inform'd of the Contents, refus'd the reading of the Proclamation. However he was ſo civil as to grant the Herald a ſafe Conduct as long as he wore his Coat.

The King, now at Windſor, prepar'd to take the Field, and order'd the Nobility to join him at Northampton. 'Twas time to make the beſt Proviſion, for now the Rebels were thirty thouſand ſtrong. They ranged themſelves in three Diviſions, and appear'd before Doncaſter. The Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Shrewſbury, and the Marquiſs of Exeter cover'd the Town with a Body but of five thouſand Men, tho' better appointed than the Enemy. They endeavour'd to make good the two Paſſes to the Town, the Bridge and the River Don. This River was fordable, and had it not been for the falling of a great Rain that Night, the Enemy in all Likelyhood wou'd have paſs'd it the next Day. The Duke of Norfolk being ſenſible how neceſſary it was to gain Time till the King's Forces were drawn together, entertain'd the Rebels with a Treaty, and prevailed with them ſo far as to ſend a Petition to the King: 'Twas carried by Sir Ralph Elesker and Robert Bowes. The Duke promis'd to go with 'em, upon Condition of a Ceſſation of Arms, which was granted. When they came to Court, the Duke having pre-acquainted the King with the Poſture of Affairs, the Commiſſioners were introduced with their Petition. The King being informed by the Duke, that the Rebels began to diſperſe, took ſome Time to return an Anſwer. The ſetting a Treaty on Foot, had created Miſunderſtandings among the Rebels, and made 'em diſtruſt each other. Beſides, the King's Friends took Care to ſpread a Report, that the principal Revolters wou'd deſert the Aſſociation, make Terms for themſelves, and leave the reſt to Juſtice. And now the Danger growing leſs, the King countermanded the Rendezvous at Northampton. At laſt, to clear all Suſpicion of myſterious Dealing, he diſmiſs'd Elesker and Bowes, and return'd the Rebels an Anſwer by the Duke of Norfolk. He likewiſe ſent a ſafe Conduct for Three Hundred Perſons to meet at Doncaſter for adjuſting Matters. The King's Anſwer penn'd by himſelf, was to this Effect (x).

Octob. 26. The Duke of Norfolk treats with them at Doncaſter.

(x) Ld. Herbert, p. 417. From Records.

The King's Anſwer to their Petition.

“ Firſt, Concerning the Maintenance of the “ Faith, the Terms are ſo generally laid down,
“ that it is very hard to reach the Meaning,
“ and return an Anſwer: But if they under“ ſtand the Faith of Chriſt, We proteſt it is,
“ and always has been our Intention to live
“ and die in the Belief and Defence of it. We are

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

“are ſtrangely ſurpriz'd therefore, to find ignorant People have the aſſurance to inſtruct us in the Doctrines of Faith; eſpecially ſince we have ſome Reputation for Letters, and have had the Concurrence of our whole Clergy in Convocation, for the ſetling theſe Points. We can't therefore but wonder, at the ingratitude, and unnatural Behaviour of theſe Men, to their rightful King and Sovereign; that without any ground on our Part, they ſhou'd give Credit to Rumours and falſe Reports, and ſuſpect us of unſound Belief, when all our Reign is a Proof of the contrary.

“Secondly, As to the Maintenanee and Liberties of the Church; the Propoſition is ſo perplex'd, that without diſtinguiſhing, there's no dealing with it; either with reſpect to the Laws of God, or the Conſtitution. For Firſt, They muſt tell us, what Church they mean: Secondly, Whether the Liberties they inſiſt on are either lawful or ſerviceable to the King and Kingdom? Let the Affirmative of both theſe Points be made out, and we ſhan't ſcruple the giving them Satisfaction. But let 'em involve their meaning as much as they pleaſe; this we dare affirm, that we have done nothing unſerviceable to the Publick Intereſt, or which will not ſtand the Teſt of both Human and Divine Laws: And as to our Church of England, of which we are the Supream Head on Earth; our Predeceſſors have loaded that Body with heavier Burthens upon leſs occaſions. Since therefore our Commons are nothing concern'd in the pretended Grievance of this Article, we can't but take it very unkindly, that they had rather a Churl or two ſhou'd ſpend the Revenues of their Monaſteries upon Luxury and Licenciouſneſs, than that their Prince ſhou'd have 'em to enable him to ſupport the Government, and protect his Subjects.

“The Third Article conſiſts of Three Branches: The Firſt concerns the Laws; The Second thoſe who execute them by our Commiſſion: The Third relates to the Commonwealth in a more general manner. Touching the Laws; as the Blind are no Judges of Colours, ſo we dare boldly affirm, as a thing that may eaſily be made good, that in no one Reign of our Predeceſſors, there have been ſo many beneficial Acts made, as in our Time. And as to the Condition of the Commonwealth, what Prince has maintain'd his Dominions in Peace and Wealth, ſo long as we have done? And that without doing or receiving any Injury: What Prince has adminiſter'd Juſtice more impartially to all Degrees of his Subjects? When have they been better defended from foreign Invaſion? Who has been at greater Expence in fortifying his Frontiers, and guarding the Intereſt and Repoſe of his People? Theſe things being all ſo apparent and beyond Diſpute, 'tis ſtrange Preſumption in you our Subjects to fancy the contrary. And whereas, 'tis pretended our Council Board was furniſh'd with a great many of the Nobility in the beginning of our Reign, and from hence a Compariſon of diſadvantage is drawn upon our preſent Adminiſtration; to this we ſhall condeſcend to anſwer; That at our Acceſſion to the Throne, there were but two of the Temporalty, the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord High Steward, who deſerv'd to be call'd Noblemen; and of the Spiritualty, none but the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and the Biſhop of Wincheſter: For as for the Lords Marny and Darcy, they were only Gentlemen of private Extraction, and ſlender Fortunes, till rais'd to Wealth and Honour by us. If therefore our Subjects were ſatisfied then with this ſmall Appearance of the Nobility, why ſhou'd they not be better pleas'd now, when we have thrice the number of Quality in our Privy Council *? And becauſe 'tis neceſſary we ſhou'd have ſome at the Board learned both in the Conſtitution of our Realm, and the Law of Nations; we have thought fit to make uſe of ſome Perſons thus qualified. And now we muſt put you in mind, that both we, and all our Council think it very ſtrange, that you who are but Brutes upon the Matter, and People of no Talent or Experience, ſhou'd take the freedom to pronounce upon the Merit of the Miniſtry, preſcribe us our Council, and inſtruct us in the Meaſures, of Government. By what we have obſerv'd to you, you may perceive how much you have been abus'd by the reports of ſome Incendiaries. But tho' out of our great Clemency and Condeſcenſion, we are willing to diſentangle our People, and reſcue 'em from thoſe miſtakes they have been led into by Malcontents; yet we wou'd have 'em all know, that it does not belong to any Subject to preſume ſo far, as to tell his Prince, how, and by whoſe Aſſiſtances he muſt govern. We expect therefore, that for the future, our Subjects ſhou'd recollect themſelves better; manage within their Duty, and not interpoſe where they have nothing to do.

Hen. VIII. K.

* Here the King mentions four Spiritual Lords and eight Temporal.

“To the Fourth Article, where the Commons complain by name of certain of our Council, as Subverters of the Laws of God, and thoſe of the Realm; we look upon this as an unjuſt imputation, and that the Perſons charg'd with Miſbehaviour have executed their Commiſſions unexceptionably enough. However, if the contrary can fairly be prov'd, we ſhall diſmiſs them our Service, and give them up to Juſtice. But then if all this Remonſtrance is nothing but Clamour and Calumny, we conceive thoſe who raiſe theſe injurious Reports, ſhou'd ſuffer the ſame Puniſhment, they wou'd draw upon others. As for your Complaints, as if ſome of the Prelates preach'd againſt the Doctrines of the Church, you know nothing of theſe matters but by the report of others: For your diſtance from the Biſhops complain'd of is ſuch, that you can charge nothing from your own hearing. We conjure you therefore, not to be ſo forward to arraign our Government, and believe ill of us.

“We are fully perſuaded, that the reſt of our Commons, to whom you are but a handful in Compariſon, will ſcorn you for your Preſumption, and never endure your ſetting down Rules for them, and their Sovereign. And whereas you being Rebels, wou'd bring them into the Revolt, and put them upon demanding a Pardon; we verily believe they were not in the Concert of the Inſurrection; their Actions declare the contrary: For immediately upon our Orders, they have like loyal Subjects appear'd in the Field both in Defence of us, and themſelves.

“As to your Demands, we muſt let you know, that the Pardon for ſuch things as you inſiſt on, is mere Favour, and perfectly at the Pleaſure of the Prince. But it ſeems by your lew'd Proclamations, and Safe-Conducts, you have Kings and Counſellors among your ſelves. But we can't remember that we have reſign'd our Station, or put them in any ſuch Poſt. What Inſolence therefore is it in thoſe Wretches to “raiſe our Subjects without, and againſt our Authority? To raiſe our Subjects in our Name without any Commiſſion, and upon our Government? To colour their Rebellion with the pretence of Publick Good, and for the Redreſs of your Greivances? Whereas, were we not more merciful, theſe Commotions wou'd end in your utter Confuſion: Wherefore we muſt once more put you in mind, that did we not believe this ſhameful and unnatural Rebellion, proceeded more from Levity and want of Thought, than from malicious Diſloyalty, we ſhou'd have puniſh'd the Criminals in another manner than we now intend; provided you humbly acknowledge your Fault, and ſubmit to our Mercy.

The Pardon the Duke of Norfolk brought down to Doncaſter, excepted ſix by name, and four unmention'd. But every body looking upon themſelves affected with the laſt Exception, refus'd the Conditions.

The King had lately ſent down the Articles of Religion already mention'd: Theſe it ſeems were ill received in the Northern Parts, and reckon'd Innovations. To remove this Miſconſtruction, an Order was directed to the Biſhops, not to neglect the uſual Ceremonies of the Church (y).

(y) See Records, N. 39. A Reprimanding Letter directed to ſome of the Biſhops againſt Innovations in the Church.

It ſeems ſome Perſons of Diſtinction amongſt the Clergy, were too much affected with the German Model: This made them overrun the Juncture, and reform too faſt, if not too far in ſome things. Thus the King complains, ſome of 'em had omitted reading the Articles, ſpoke with diſregard of the Ceremonies, and gone too far in novel Opinion and Practice. Theſe Singularities, as he conceives, had occaſioned the Commotions in the North: He therefore commands them to read the Articles in their Cathedrals, to recommend the cuſtomary Ceremonies, not as Eſſentials, but only as Circumſtances of Solemnity, and ſubſervient to Devotion. They are likewiſe commanded not to entertain any Clergyman that miſbehaves himſelf in theſe matters.

About this time the Clergy of the North met at Pomfret, and agreed upon certain Articles of Religion to be propos'd at the Treaty. It ſeems ſome thing of this kind had been lately offer'd them, which they refus'd to ſubſcribe: Their Exceptions are as follow (z).

(z) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 380. A Remonſtrance of the Northern Clergy againſt ſeveral Statutes in this Reign relating to Religion.

“To the Firſt Article, we think that preaching againſt Purgatory, Worſhipping of Saints, Pilgrimages, Images, and all Books ſet forth againſt the ſame; or againſt the Sacraments or Sacramentals of the Church, be worthy to be reprov'd or condemn'd by Convocation, and the Pain to be executed, that is deviſ'd for the Doers to the contrary; and Proceſs to be made hereafter in Hereſy, as was in the days of King Henry the Fourth; and the new Statutes whereby Hereſies have now lately been nouriſh'd, to be null'd and abrogated. And that the Holydays may be obſerv'd according to the Laws and laudable Cuſtoms: And that the Bidding of Beads, and Preaching, may be obſerv'd as has been us'd by old Cuſtom.

“To the Second, we think the King's Highneſs, nor any Temporal Man may not be Supream Head of the Church by the Laws of God, to have or exerciſe any Juriſdiction or Power ſpiritual in the ſame; and all Acts of Parliament made to the contrary to be revok'd.

“To the Third, we ſay we be not ſufficiently inſtructed in the Fact, ne in the Proceſs therein made; but we refer it to the Determination of the Church, to whom it was appeal'd *.

“To the Fourth, we think that no Clerk ought to be put to Death, without Degradation by the Laws of the Church.

“To the Fifth, we think that no Man ought to be drawn out of Sanctuary, but in certain Caſes expreſs'd in the Laws of the Church.

“To the Sixth, we ſay that the Clergy of the North Parts, have not granted nor conſented to the Payment of the Tenths or Firſt Fruits of Benefices, in the Convocation. And alſo we may make no ſuch perſonal Grant by the Laws of the Church; and we think that no temporal Man, by the Laws of God, has Authority to claim any ſuch Tenths or Firſt Fruits of any Benefice or ſpiritual Promotion.

“To the Seventh, we think that the Lands given to God, the Church and Religious Men, may not be taken away, and put to prophane Uſages, by the Laws of God.

“To the Eighth, we think that Diſpenſations upon juſt Cauſes, lawfully granted by the Pope of Rome, to be good, and to be accepted. And Pardons have been allow'd by the General Councils of Lateran and Vienna, and by the Laws of the Church.

“To the Ninth, we think that by the Laws of the Church, General Councils, Interpretation of approv'd Doctors, and by Conſent of Chriſtian People, the Pope of Rome has been taken for the Head of the Church, and Vicar of Chriſt, and ſo ought to be taken.

“To the Tenth, we think that the Examination and Correction of deadly ſin belongs to the Miniſters of the Church by the Laws of the ſame, which be conſonant to God's Laws. Farther, we think it convenient, that the Laws of the Church may openly be read in Univerſities, as has been us'd heretofore. And that ſuch Clerks as be in Priſon, or fled out of the Realm, for withſtanding the King's Superiority in the Church, may be ſet at Liberty, and reſtor'd without Danger. And that ſuch Books and Works as do intreat of the Primacy of the Church of Rome, may be freely read and kept, notwithſtanding any Prohibition to the contrary; and that the Articles of Præmunire may be declared by Acts of Parliament, to the intent no Man may be in danger thereof, without a Prohibition firſt awarded. And that ſuch Apoſtates who be gone from Religion without Diſpenſation from the See of Rome, may be compell'd to return to their Houſes. And that all Sums of Money, as Tenths, Firſt Fruits, and other Arrearages granted unto the King by Parliament or Convocation, and due to be paid before the firſt Day of the next Parliament, may be remitted and forgiven, for the Cauſes and Reaſons above expreſs'd.

“And we the ſaid Clergy ſay, that for lack of Time Inſtruction in theſe Articles, and want of Books, we declare this our Opinion for this time; referring our Determination of the Premiſes to the next Convocation. Alſo we deſire that the Statute commanding the Clergy to exhibit their Diſpenſations granted by the Pope before the Feaſt of Michaelmaſs next coming, may be revoked at the next Parliament.

This laſt Clauſe concerning the exhibiting their Diſpenſations, refers to the 28 H. VIII. cap. 16. From whence we may conclude theſe Demands of the Northern Clergy were made this Year ſince the Diſſolution of the laſt Parliament: And had we no other Circumſtance to ſtate the Chronology, the Freedom of their Remonſtrance wou'd point out the time: For we may reaſonably infer,

* Meaning in all likelihood, the Divorce between the King and Queen Catherine.

fer, they durſt not have inſiſted upon theſe Terms without a ſtrong Inſurrection to ſupport them.

The military Appearance of the Northern Men diſlik'd by the Archbiſhop of York.

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 416.

The Archbiſhop of York was preſent at this Aſſembly, but ſeems not to have gone the ſame length with the reſt. He told 'em, the manner of their Appearance was unwarrantable, and that an arm'd Pilgrimage cou'd not be lawful (a). After this there was a Day appointed for a meeting at Doncaſter: And here John Lord Scroope, the Lord Latimer, John Lord Lumley, and Thomas Lord Darcy, Sir Thomas Piercy, Robert Aske and about three hundred more were to treat with the Duke of Norfolk, Admiral Fitz Williams, and the reſt of the King's Commiſſioners. The Conditions the Rebels inſiſted on were theſe: A General Pardon; A Parliament to be held in thoſe Parts, and a Seat of Juſtice erected; And that none North of Trent might be ſummon'd to the Courts at Weſtminſter. They likewiſe moved for a Repeal of the Act of Parliament for the laſt Subſidy: Of the Statutes concerning Uſes, Miſpriſion of Treaſon for Words, Tenths, and Firſt Fruits: That the Lady Mary might be declar'd legitimate, the Pope reſtored to his cuſtomary Juriſdiction, and the Monks to their Houſes: That the Lutherans might be puniſh'd, and the Lord Privy Seal, and the Lord Chancellor not permitted to ſit in the next Parliament: And that the Doctors Lee and Layton might be impriſon'd for Bribery and Extortion. Theſe Demands were thought too inſolent, and rejected at firſt: But the Duke of Norfolk ſending the King Advice of his Army being in no good Condition to hazard a Battle, his Highneſs ſent the Rebels a General Pardon: This giving Satiſfaction, they disbanded, and went Home.

December 6.

The Demands of the Rebels.

December 9.

Notwithſtanding the Rebels had left the Field, and accepted their Pardon, the King thought fit to take ſome farther Meaſures to prevent Diſturbance from that Quarter. The Duke of Norfolk therefore was order'd to keep his Forces together, and take a farther Submiſſion of the Commons: And now they engage to revoke all Promiſes and Oaths made in the former Inſurrection; to be true to the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors; to be governed by all Acts of Parliament paſs'd in this Reign: Not to take Arms without the King's Authority: To apprehend all ſeditious Perſons: And laſtly, To remove all Monks, Fryers, and Nuns they had ſettled in the Monaſteries lately diſſolv'd.

Febr. 153$\frac{6}{7}$.

Aske was brought up to the King, and upon his Submiſſion above mention'd well received, and permitted to go where he pleas'd.

The Rebellion breaks out again, and is cruſh'd.

A Parliament not being ſummon'd to York as ſoon as was expected; and the People being apprehenſive ſome of the chief Revolters wou'd be call'd to account, took the Field again under the Conduct of Nicholas Muſgrave, Thomas Tilby and ſome others. This Body, conſiſting of eight thouſand, beſieg'd Carliſle, but were beaten off by the Garriſon, and afterwards defeated by the Duke of Norfolk. Sir Francis Bigot, and one Haylam, attempted the ſurprizing of Hull about the ſame time, but miſcarried in the Enterprize, and were both taken, and executed. This ſecond Inſurrection being quickly cruſh'd, the Lord Darcy, Robert Aske, Sir Robert Conſtable, Sir John Bulmer, Sir Thomas Piercy, Sir Stephen Hamilton, Nicholas Tempeſt, and William Lumley were apprehended for high Treaſon, and brought up to London. Not long after the Lord Huſſey, and the Lord Darcy were beheaded; and ſeveral Religious and others were executed at Hull, York, and elſewhere. The Duke of Norfolk diſcharg'd his Commiſſion with great Diſcipline and Vigour, and diſpatch'd no ſmall Numbers by Martial Law. But now the King ſaid he wou'd cloſe the Tragedy, and ſtop the Iſſue of Blood. Thus he ſent down another general Pardon, which was extremely welcome; for the People were pretty much frighten'd by the Duke's Management (b).

Aske hanged, afterwards in Chains at York.

(b) Ld. Herbert, p. 428.

Nov. 19. 1536.

I obſerv'd the Northern Rebels charg'd ſome of the Biſhops with innovating in Religion. 'Tis probable they had ſome reaſon for their Complaint, for Barlow Biſhop of St. David's was inform'd againſt for delivering the following Paſſages in a Sermon.

An Information againſt Barlow Biſhop of St. David's.

" Imprimis, He affirm'd and ſaid, That whereſoever two or three ſimple Perſons, as two Coblers or Weavers, were in Company, and elected in the Name of God, that there was the true Church of God.

" Item, That it is not expedient for Man to confeſs himſelf, but only unto God, for he will at all times accept and take any penitent Man or Woman to his Mercy, if he cannot expediently have a Prieſt.

" Item, That there neither is, nor was any Purgatory; but 'tis only a Thing invented and imagin'd by the Biſhop of Rome, and our Prieſts to have Trentals and other mundane Lucre thereby.

" Item, That if the King's Grace, being Supreme Head of the Church of England, did chuſe, denominate and elect any Layman (being learned) to be a Biſhop; that he, ſo choſen, (without mention made of any Orders) ſhou'd be as good a Biſhop as he is, or the beſt in England (c).

(c) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 383.

One Talley preach'd before the Biſhop of St. David's this Doctrine amongſt other Things; viz. " That in times paſt, there was none that did preach or declare the Word of God truly, nor the Truth was never known till now of late.

Theſe Articles were exhibited to the right Reverend Father in God the Lord Preſident of the King's Council in the Marches of Wales, by one Roger Lewis Batchelor of Law.

Jan. 11. 1536.

Ibid.

Pole made a Cardinal.

This Year Reginald Pole had a Cardinal's Hat given him by Paul the Third. He was of the Blood Royal, and Couſen German to the King, by both the Houſes of York, and Lancaſter. The King deſign'd to breed him for the higheſt Preferments in the Church, and make him no leſs eminent in Learning, than he was for his Extraction. He had the Deanry of Exeter with ſome other Preferments, to furniſh him for Study and Travelling. He loſt the King's Favour at Paris, for refuſing to ſubſcribe for the Divorce with the reſt of the French Univerſities. From France he travell'd to Padua, where he ſettled a conſiderable Time. Here he was courted to the Acquaintance of ſeveral Perſons of Character for the Belles Lettres. Among theſe were Contareno, Bembo, Caraffa, Sadoletti, and others. Rhetorick and the old Roman Authors were the Inclination of theſe Men. In this Study Pole made a great Proficiency, and was much celebrated for his Elocution (d).

(d) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 221.

He refuſes to return into England at the King's Inſtance.

The King had given him ſeveral Invitations to return, and aſſiſt him in his Affairs: But Pole declin'd the Offers. At laſt, being farther preſs'd, and thrown out of his Excuſes, he diſcover'd his Mind, told the King he cou'd not approve his Proceedings: That he neither underſtood his Divorce from Queen Catharine, nor his diſengaging from the Apoſtolick See. The King in his Anſwer deſired the Reaſons of his Diſagreement, and ſent him Doctor Sampſon's Book in Defence of

He writes his Book de Unione Eccleſiaſtica againſt the Proceedings in England.

of what had been done. This Diſcourſe occaſion'd the Writing of Pole's Book de Unione Eccleſiaſtica; which was penn'd with ſomething of Acrimony, and made the Cardinal appear a plain Dealer with the King.

(e) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 385.

July 13. 1536. The Biſhop of Durham's Letter to the Cardinal in Anſwer to his Book.

Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham wrote to Pole upon the Subject of this Controverſie. “ His Letter endeavours at a Confutation of the Cardinal's Performance. He takes the Freedom to acquaint Pole, that he was neither ſatisfied with the Manner, nor the Matter of his Eminency's Book (e). As to the Manner, he thought his Sincerity went too far, and that his Zeal had carried him to an Invective. As to the Matter, he blames the Cardinal for charging the King with a Defection from the Catholick Church, with encroaching on the Privilege of the Prieſthood, invading the holy Function, and pretending an Authority to preach and adminiſter the Sacraments. To this Biſhop Tunſtal replies, that Pole was much miſtaken in Matter of Fact: That the King had a great Eſteem for the Sacerdotal Character, provided due Qualifications were not wanting, and the Management of the Perſon anſwer'd up to the Office. And to the Charge of his departing from Catholick Communion, his Highneſs was much injur'd by ſuch an Imputation. For it had all along been his Practice to adhere to the Unity of the Catholick Church, to maintain the ancient Doctrine, and conform to the Worſhip and Eccleſiaſtical Government of the Reſt of Chriſtendom. 'Tis true, as the Biſhop continues, he had reſcued the Engliſh Church from the Encroachments of the Court of Rome: And if this be a Singularity, he deſerves Commendation: For the King has only reduc'd Matters to their original State, and help'd the Engliſh Church to her ancient Freedom. And why ſhou'd his Majeſty be blam'd for hindering the Exporting the publick Treaſure, and putting a ſtop to the arbitrary Meaſures of the Biſhop of Rome?

“ The Biſhop proceeds, and puts Pole in mind, That the Popes at their coming to the Chair, make a ſolemn Profeſſion to obſerve the Canons of the eight General Councils. That by the Regulations in theſe Councils, there is no ſuch Monarchy ſettled on the See of Rome as is now pretended. The Ancient Fathers knew nothing of the Right of governing the univerſal Church, to which the modern Popes have put up their Claim.

It appears by what follows in the Biſhop's Letter, that Pole had argued for the Pope's Supremacy from the New Teſtament, and urg'd our Saviour's Promiſe to St. Peter.

“ Now, ſays the Biſhop, if theſe Texts prove the Papal Supremacy, Pole muſt grant that the Fathers at the firſt Council of Nice, and other Oecumenical Synods were altogether miſtaken: And which is more, the Apoſtles in their Canons decree counter to the Goſpels written by themſelves.

By the way, he ſuppoſes the Apoſtles Canons, penn'd by the Authors whoſe Names they bear.

To return: “ He inſtances in ſome Particulars: For the Purpoſe; That the Apoſtles Canons and the Councils above mention'd decreed that Conſecrations of Biſhops, Ordinations of Prieſts, together with ſuch Conteſts as might happen amongſt the Clergy, ſhou'd be perform'd and determin'd within the Dioceſs, or at leaſt within the Province. Now, continues the Biſhop, 'tis unimaginable to conceive, that the firſt four General Councils ſhou'd have proceeded in this Manner, and overlook the Pope's Supremacy, if that Privilege had been ſettled upon them in the New Teſtament.

“ And whereas Pole inſiſted upon Cuſtom and ancient Uſage, Tunſtal replies, that for the firſt thouſand Years the Belief and Practice of the Church was againſt him. That in the Primitive Times when the Blood of the Martyrs was freſh, and the Scriptures beſt underſtood; when Faith was ſtrongeſt and Virtue had the greateſt Aſcendant; when things were in this State of Advantage, the Cuſtoms of the Church muſt be better than thoſe of latter Ages; Of latter Ages; I ſay, when Ambition and Covetonſneſs had made an Impreſſion upon Chriſtendom. And who ever ſhall infer the Papal Authority now exerciſed, eſpecially in Temporal Matters, from St. Peter's Primacy, may by Parity of Reaſon make Light and Darkneſs the ſame thing. In Proof of this Point the Biſhop refers Pole to Cardinal Cuſanus, in his ſecond Book de Concordia Catholica.

“ As to Pole's Objection, that the King has croſs'd upon the Inclinations of his Subjects in diſcharging the Pope's Authority; he tells him this is ſo far a Miſtake, that on the contrary, if the King ſhou'd attempt the reviving the Pope's Power, he wou'd find it a very difficult Buſineſs to bring the Subject to this Sentiment, and get a Bill of this nature paſs in Parliament.

“ The Biſhop goes on, and takes notice, that Pole had reproach'd him with want of Reſolution in not adhering to the Apoſtolick See, and that the Terrors of Death over-aw'd him in this Matter. To this he anſwers, that he did not think the Cauſe wou'd bear the loſing an Ounce of Blood. And that the Court of Rome had no reaſon to take it ill, that People refus'd to run any Riſques upon their Account: For he was well ſatisfied themſelves wou'd venture nothing for any Body elſe.

“ He conjures Pole not to be ſwayed by any Opinions deliver'd in his Book; nor conclude the Extent of the Pope's Authority from any Submiſſions in Italy, or other Parts of Europe: For the modern Practice is no infallible Interpreter of the New Teſtament: 'Tis much ſafer to govern ourſelves by the Deciſions of the earlier Ages. Now 'tis evident from the Councils above mention'd, that no particular See has ſo extenſive and monarchical a Privilege. And that the Preferences given to the Biſhop of Rome in thoſe General Councils were granted upon the ſcore of the imperial City, and the Sees being the Capital of the Empire. 'Twas for this Reaſon that the Pope had the Precedence, and not becauſe St. Peter and St. Paul exerciſ'd the Apoſtolical Function, and were buried in that City. In ſhort, this Prerogative was not drawn from any Claim in the Goſpel, but granted in Honour to the Capital, and in Conformity to the Civil Government. Thus the ſecond Rank or Diſtinction was aſſign'd the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople, becauſe that City was call'd New Rome, and made the Reſidence of the Emperors: And in conſequence of this Civil Privilege, the See of Conſtantinople was preferr'd to that of Antioch, notwithſtanding the Name of Chriſtendom began there, and St. Peter was the firſt Biſhop. And upon the ſame Conſideration the See of Conſtantinople had the Precedence of Alexandria where St. Peter's Diſciple St. Mark ſat; and of Jeruſalem, where our Saviour himſelf preach'd, where the Apo-

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

“ ſtolical College was ſettled, and where James the Brother of our Lord was firſt Biſhop: Which Church, till the City was deſtroy'd, was call'd the Mother of all Churches. And notwithſtanding theſe three Churches had extraordinary Pleas for Regard, Conſtantinople was preferr'd to 'em all upon the Ground above mention'd. This, by the modern Doctrine, being ſo great a Partiality, and Violation of divine Right, theſe holy Councils, and particularly the General one of Chalcedon, wou'd never have agreed to it, if the Goſpel had determin'd the Matter otherwiſe.

*Paris Honoris ac Poteſtatis. De Unitat. Eccleſ.

“ From the Councils the Biſhop refers Pole to the Fathers, and tells him if he will give himſelf the Trouble to read St. Baſil, St. Nazienzen, St. Chryſoſtom, and St. Damaſcene, he'll meet with no ſuch Claims of Spiritual Empire, as the Pope pretends to. And to go ſomewhat higher; St. Cyprian ſpeaks home to the point, and affirms that the Apoſtles were all equal by their Commiſſion *. In the Cloſe, beſides theſe Topicks from Antiquity and Religion, he puts Pole in mind, the Intereſt of his Family, the King's former Kindneſs, and the regaining his Favour, were no deſpicable Motives.

Cardinal Pole's Anſwer to Biſhop Tunſtal.

'Twas not long before Tunſtal received an Anſwer from the Cardinal: “ He complains in his Letter, the Biſhop had not carefully peruſed his Book: That otherwiſe the Objections which were ſatisfied, wou'd not have been urg'd without mentioning the Anſwers. From hence he proceeds to reply to ſome of the Biſhop's Arguments. And as to Tunſtal's Endeavour to clear the King from invading the Sacerdotal Office, becauſe he did not pretend to preach, or adminiſter the Sacraments; to this Pole rejoins that his taking the Title of Supreme Head of the Church, ſuppoſed him the Fountain of Spiritual Juriſdiction: And in caſe he had Authority to delegate others, and commiſſionate them for ſuch Offices, does it not follow that he might execute the ſame whenever he pleas'd? Farther, if the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments is the higheſt Spiritual Office, muſt it not belong to the ſupreme Ordinary, and be annex'd to the Head of the Church? He obſerves in the next Place, That thoſe Authors who write in Defence of the King's Supremacy, proceed upon this falſe Ground, that the Church and the State are one Society. Now this is a capital Miſtake: For theſe two Bodies are inſtituted for different Ends, and govern'd by independent Authorities. He blames the Biſhop for citing the Councils againſt him in general, and not alledging particular Canons to diſprove his Principles. From hence he goes on to prove St. Peter's Primacy from the Text in St. John, Feed my Sheep, &c. And whereas the Biſhop had urged the Learning of the Engliſh Clergy as a Counter-balance to thoſe on the other Side; Pole puts him in mind, that Fiſher and Moore who died for the contrary Perſuaſion, were not inferior to the reſt in any Branch of a great Character. The Cardinal ſeems ſurpriz'd, the Subject of his Book ſhou'd be ſo unacceptable: He wonders thoſe who argued to the King's Diſhonour, ſtuck a Blemiſh upon his Father's Conduct, and charg'd his preſent Majeſty with living in Inceſt one and twenty Years together, ſhou'd be reckon'd his Highneſs's Friends: And that thoſe on the other ſide, who endeavour'd to wipe off the Calumny, and juſtify the King's firſt Marriage, ſhould be treated as Enemies and Traytors (f). This is all which is neceſſary to be obſerv'd in this Letter.

John 21. 17.

Hen. VIII. K.

(f) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 6. fol. 343.

Pole made Legate and ſent to the Low Countries.

About this time the Cardinal was made the Pope's Legate, and diſpatch'd to Flanders for a nearer Correſpondence with England. Our King being inform'd of his Character and Journey, wrote to the French King either to deny him Paſſage thro' his Dominions, or deliver him up as a Rebel; or at leaſt, not to treat him with the Ceremony of a Legate. The laſt Requeſt was granted, and Pole order'd to withdraw out of France at a very ſmall Warning. From hence he retir'd to the Low Countries; but the Queen Regent refus'd to afford him her Protection. Hutton the King's Agent had remonſtrated to this Princeſs againſt her receiving the Cardinal: And declar'd it a Breach of Treaty in caſe he was entertain'd. Thus the Cardinal was diſappointed of a Reſidence in the Low Countries, and his Communication with his Friends in England in a manner cut off. He complain'd loudly of this Uſage, charg'd the Regent with Diſobedience to the Apoſtolick See, but all to no purpoſe: Before he return'd to Rome, he ſent a Letter to the Lord Cromwell; the Purport of it was to purge himſelf from the Imputation of Diſloyalty, and to proteſt he had no Intention of Diſſervice to the King (g).

He is refus'd Entrance by the Queen Regent.

(g) Lord Herbert, p. 424.

Iriſh Acts of Parliament relating to the Church.

In May laſt, this Year, a Parliament began in Ireland, and made ſeveral Statutes relating to the Church. For inſtance: An Act was paſs'd for conſtituting the King and his Succeſſors Supreme Head of the Church of Ireland (h). Appeals to Rome are prohibited. The Firſt Fruits of Biſhopricks, Livings and Religious Houſes are granted to the Crown. There was likewiſe a Statute made, That no Proctors of the Clergy ſhall be reputed Members of Parliament. The Preamble ſets forth, That Two Proctors of every Dioceſs, were of Cuſtom ſummon'd to Parliament: But that by Law, they had no Right of voting, but only aſſiſted as Counſellors in that Aſſemhly. Their Buſineſs being to declare their Opinions when any Controverſy touching Religion or Learning, happen'd to ariſe. And that moſt commonly, they were made acquainted with all the Buſineſs of Parliaments, and their Advice ask'd concerning all Bills before they paſs'd. That now theſe Proctors temerariouſly preſum'd to claim a Share in the Legiſlature, and pretended themſelves Members of Parliament. 'Tis therefore enacted and ordained, That for the future, none of theſe Proctors, tho' ſummon'd to Parliament, ſhall be held any part of the legiſlative Body, or their Vote or Aſſent reckon'd neceſſary to any Act.

(h) Iriſh Statutes.

28 H. 8. c. 5.

28 H. 8. c. 6.

28 H. 8. c. 8, 26.

By this Statute we may perceive the inferiour Clergy had their Repreſentatives in the Iriſh Parliaments: And that they inſiſted on a Right of Voting with the Temporal Commons.

To proceed: The Pope's Authority is diſown'd under the Penalty of a Præmunire, and 'tis made High-Treaſon to refuſe the Oath of Supremacy. By this Act, all Canons and Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions not repugnant to the Statutes and Cuſtoms of the Country, nor prejudicial to the Prerogative Royal, are continued till ſuch Time as the King or Parliament ſhall make other Proviſion (i). The leſſer Abbies are ſuppreſs'd with a Clauſe that the King and Patentees ſhou'd enjoy them in as large and beneficial a manner as they were held by the Abbots. The Grantees are oblig'd to keep Hoſpitality, under the Forfeiture of Twenty Pounds per Annum. The Act for granting Faculties is much of the ſame Nature with that made at Weſtminſter in this Reign, and (i) 28 H. 8. c. 13.

28 H. 8. c. 16.

28 H. 8. c. 19.

and in ſhort, moſt of theſe Iriſh Bills are drawn upon the Engliſh Model.

I obſerved, that ſeveral of the Religious were executed for the Northern and Lincolnſhire Rebellions: To be ſomewhat more particular, there were ſix Abbots, and the Prior of Burlington, five Lincolnſhire Prieſts, and ſeveral Monks, who ſuffer'd for the Inſurrection (k).

(k) Godwyn. Annal. Saunders de Schiſm. Anglic.

The northern Rebellion not without a colourable Pretence.

Now tho' riſing upon the Government, is Defiance of the Laws, and not to be endured upon any Pretence whatſoever; however, if Reſiſtance of the chief Magiſtrate had been juſtifyable in any Caſe, thoſe who appear'd in Arms upon the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, had a ſtrong Colour for their Undertaking. For were not the old Land Marks ſet aſide, and the Conſtitution new model'd? For do not the Liberties and Immunities of the Church ſtand in the Front of Magna Charta? And are they not particularly ſecur'd in the firſt place? Was not the King's Coronation Oath lamentably ſtrain'd, when he ſign'd the Diſſolution Act? For had he not ſworn to guard the Property of his Subjects, to protect the Religious, and maintain them in their legal Eſtabliſhment? The ancient Nobility were thrown out of the Patronage of their Monaſteries, loſt their Corrodies and the Privilege of their Anceſtors Benefactions. The Rents were rais'd, and the Poor forgotten as they complained by the new Proprietors. Beſides, they were afraid their Friends in the other World might ſuffer by theſe Alienations, and the Dead fare the worſe for want of the Prayers of the Living. Granting therefore the Matter of Fact, that the Proſecutions were legal, which way are the Abbots more to be blam'd than the Barons, who took up Arms in Defence of Liberty and Property, and appear'd in the Field againſt King John and Henry the Third? The Abbies without queſtion, had all the Security the Civil Magiſtrate cou'd give 'em: No Eſtate could be better guarded by the Laws. Magna Charta, as I obſerved, was made particularly in Eavour of theſe Foundations, and confirm'd at the Beginning of every Parliament, for many ſucceeding Reigns. Theſe Things conſidered, we muſt of neceſſity either condemn the Barons, or acquit the Monks, and juſtify the Northern Rebellion.

By the way, the ſpecious Pretences for this Commotion made the King very uneaſy. His Thoughts were ſo far embarraſs'd, that he had once reſolv'd to quit his Title of Head of the Church, and return the Pope his Supremacy *. But being apprehenſive his reſigning in ſo great a Point, might be conſtrued to Fear, he ſtood his Ground and drop'd that Reſolution.

* Gardiner's Sermon before King Philip and Cardinal Pole. Fox p. 1479. Edit. Second.

A brief Abſtract of Gardiner's Book de Obedientia.

This Year, Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, publiſhed his Book de vera obedientia, againſt the Pope's Supremacy. This Book, treating a remarkable Subject, and being in a very few Hands, I ſhall give the Reader a brief Account of the Argument. “ This Prelate at firſt ſeems only to contend for the King's Civil Supremacy: Maintains, that Allegiance is due from all his Subjects; that no Privilege of Religion can plead an Exemption, and that a Prince ought not to ſuffer in his Prerogative by turning Chriſtian. He endeavours to reconcile the Texts which injoin Obedience to Church Governours: And here he grants teaching and adminiſtring the Sacraments belongs to the Clergy. But afterwards, he diſallows the Diſtinction of making the King Head in Temporal Cauſes, and aſſigning the Juriſdiction of ſpiritual Matters to the Church. And yet by giving the Clergy the Function of Preaching, he ſeems to make 'em Judges in Points of Doctrine, and by granting them intruſted by our Saviour with the Diſpenſation of the Sacraments, he muſt grant by conſequence, that they are authoriz'd to admit or exclude Communion as they ſhall think fit. To go on with him, “ he endeavours to prove the Civil Supremacy from Inſtances in the Old Teſtament: he mentions a Saying of Conſtantine to the Biſhops, but does not anſwer it. The Emperor's Sentence is this, I ought to be judged by you, and therefore will not pronounce Sentence upon you. He allows the calling the King Head of the Church, was an uncuſtomary Stile: But that it was neceſſary to make uſe of a new Term for the Revival of an old Truth. That Princes being Sovereigns of all their Subjects, are to command their Buſineſs, and aſſign every one their Station. He goes on, and alledges ſeveral Laws relating to the Church, made by the Emperor Juſtinian; and obſerves that the ancient Kings of England, exerciſed Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, made Regulations concerning Hereſy, and gave the Biſhops an Enlargement of Power. But here he miſtakes Matter of Fact, and argues looſly. “ He obſerves rightly, the Pope's Supremacy own'd by ſome of our Kings, but that it was not Jure Divino: And that Precedents and cuſtomary Submiſſion to the See of Rome, are not ſufficient to carry the Cauſe.

Heb. 13. 7, & 17. Acts 20. 28.

P. 14. & 15.

p. 16.

p. 17.

p. 18.

p. 19.

p. 20.

“ He endeavours to reinforce his Reaſoning farther from the Old Teſtament, and urges the Pope to prove his Juriſdiction from Scripture. He affirms our Saviour did not inſiſt on Civil Juriſdiction, but liv'd ſubject to the Emperor, and reprimanded his Diſciples for their Expectation of a Temporal Kingdom. But this can do Gardiner no Service. What he ſays next is more to the Point; that is, “ there is not a Syllable for the Biſhop of Rome's Primacy in Holy Scripture. He takes notice from Euſebius, that after our Saviour's Aſcenſion, the Three chief Apoſtles St. Peter, St. John, and St. James the Great, had no Conteſts about Superiority, but yielded the See of Jeruſalem to the other St. James, call'd our Lord's Brother (l). This Teſtimony is very much to the purpoſe. But the Biſhop's reaſoning is not uniformly ſtrong, “ for now he ſinks the Authority of the Church, and makes the Biſhops no more than Officers conſtituted by Princes. He complains, the Popes don't anſwer their Character, nor live up to their Pretenſions. This Miſbehaviour, he ſeems to conclude, affects their Juriſdiction. St. Peter, as he continues, had no Authority over the reſt of the Apoſtles. His Primacy was founded on his Confeſſion, on his extraordinary Courage and Zeal in the Diſcharge of his Commiſſion. And that this Privilege is intail'd on his Succeſſors only, upon Condition of their being qualified as St. Peter was. That to be ſtiled the Chief, with reſpect to others in the ſame Buſineſs, implies perſonal Excellency, but not Dominion and Command. Thus to ſay, a Man is a Phyſician, or a Painter of the Firſt Rank, does not ſuppoſe him in a Poſt of Juriſdiction, and that he is to govern the reſt of his Fraternity. Farther, he urges the Conſent of the Engliſh Nation, for the King's Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy: That now they had all taken their Leave of the Pope; and that ſince Paul the Third had no Apoſtolical Vertues, he muſt not pretend to Apoſtolical Regard. However, he wiſhes his Holineſs well. In the cloſe of the Argument, he puts an Objection againſt himſelf.

p. 22.

(l) Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. lib. 2. cap. 1.

p. 23, 29.

“ ſelf. It might be ſaid there was no Agreement between his Book and his Practice. He had undertaken to preſs Obedience, and fail'd notoriouſly in that Branch of his Duty. He had engaged his Subjection to the Court of Rome, ſworn a Submiſſion to the Pope and his Succeſſors, and ſolemnly oblig'd himſelf to defend the Privileges and Juriſdiction of the Apoſtolick See. He receiv'd his Epiſcopal Character by the Pope's Conſent, and was conſecrated by his Mandate, and yet after all theſe Ties and Aſſurances, he has ventur'd to write againſt his Supremacy, and renounce him in the moſt publick manner. To take off the Imputation of Falſhood and Perjury, he obſerves very well, that an Engagement againſt Right, is by no means binding. For an Oath was never intended a Bond of Iniquity, and a Bar againſt Repentance. He illuſtrates his Caſe with a Husband's marrying a ſecond Wife, living the former: Living the former, I ſay, whom after the beſt Enquiry, he concluded dead. Thus he continued undiſturbed in his ſecond Marriage: And when his firſt Wife returned from a foreign Country, and challeng'd him for her Husband, he deny'd the Relation. But after ſhe had made out her Claim by legal Proof, he liv'd with her again, and diſmiſs'd the Second. This Inſtance the Biſhop applys to his own Caſe: He thought the Pope's Authority unqueſtionable at firſt, and ſubmitted accordingly. But when Truth appeared, he found himſelf miſtaken, and therefore ought not to be charged with Breach of Faith for altering his Meaſures.

Page 31.

Bonner, afterwards Biſhop of London, wrote a Preface to Gardiner's Book. “ He treats the Pope with rough Language, and complains the Traditions were for the moſt part repugnant to the Law of God. He commends the King for his Piety, and Care of Religion; excuſes Gardiner for diſ-entangling himſelf no ſooner; and takes notice, this Prelate was not the firſt that detected the Pope of Miſbehaviour. This Preface, as appears by the firſt Page, was made, tho' not publiſhed, before the Miſfortune of Queen Anne. As to Gardiner, he ſeems to have been a better Stateſman, than controverſial Divine. For tho' his Topicks are ſometimes good, yet generally ſpeaking, his Reaſoning is either foreign or faint. He floats in the Diſpute, flies off from Conſiſtency, and wants either Force or Direction.

Page 33, 34. Bonner's Preface.

The King having ſuppreſs'd the Inſurrections above mentioned, was under no Apprehenſion of farther Diſturbance. Being thus at Eaſe in his Government, he reſolved to purſue his Diſſolution Scheme, and go farther with the Religious. Thus there was a new Viſitation appointed for all the Monaſteries. The Viſitors had Inſtructions to make a nice Inquiry both into their Loyalty and private Behaviour. They were to examine how far they were ſunk in Superſtition, and how affected to the King's Supremacy. 'Twas their Buſineſs likewiſe to diſcover whether they had enrich'd themſelves by Impoſture, deluded the People by counterfeit Miracles, and miſled 'em in their Veneration for Images and Relicks. This Viſitation brought on Three Surrenders this Year. But of theſe Things more afterwards (m).

A ſecond Viſitation of the Monaſteries.

A. D. 1537.

(m) Bp. Burnet, pt. p. 235.

This Year the Pope order'd the Cardinals Contarino, Theatino, Sadolet and Pole, to inſpect the State of the Church, and make ſome Regulations in his own Court. They drew up a Liſt of ſeveral Abuſes in Diſcipline and Government: But as to Matters of Doctrine, they wou'd not allow any thing was amiſs (n). This Remonſtrance gave occaſion to the rectifying ſeveral Diſorders in that Communion. Had this Eſſay towards a Reformation, been well received by the Proteſtants, 'tis not improbable the other ſide might have gone farther in their Conceſſions, and relax'd in ſome points of Belief. But Luther and Sturmius were ſtiff in their Temper, and had too good an Opinion of their Plan. They made a publick Jeſt of the Cardinal's Buſineſs, and wou'd endure no Reformations but their own. Thus all Hopes of Accommodation vaniſh'd, and the Breaches in the Church were kept open. The Court of Rome being thus treated with Contempt, were diſcourag'd in the Union-Project, and thought it to no purpoſe to make any Offers of farther Satisfaction (o).

The delegated Cardinals remonſtrate againſt ſeveral Abuſes in the Church.

(n) Sleidan. Comment. lib. 12.

Luther and Sturmius ridicule this Eſſay towards a Reformation.

(o) Ld. Herbert, p. 426, 427.

The Time for the Council, promis'd by the Pope, drawing near, our King privately diſpatched William Paget and Chriſtopher Mount to Smalcalde: Their Inſtructions were to diſſuade the German Princes from agreeing with the Emperor, or accepting the Council. The King was apprehenſive ſuch an Aſſembly of the Biſhops would paſs no favourable Cenſure upon what he had done: The French King and the Emperor too had promis'd his Proceedings ſhou'd not be queſtioned, but he thought it not prudent to depend on ſuch an Aſſurance; and therefore after the Proteſtant Princes had concurr'd with him in refuſing the Mantuan Council, he publiſh'd a Proteſtation againſt it: And to this Year, upon Recollection, I perceive the Record above mention'd, muſt be referr'd (p).

The King's Proteſtation againſt the Council at Mantua.

(p) See Records, Numb. 38.

This Year Prince Edward was born at Hampton-Court; but this Satisfaction receiv'd an Abatement by the Queen's Death, which happened Two Days after. The King was extremely diſconſolate at the Loſs of this Princeſs, and continued a Widdower for more than Two Years (q).

Octob. 12. The Birth of Prince Edward.

(q) Ld. Herbert, p. 429.

About this Time, a Form of bidding the Beads, or publick Prayers, was drawn up, and ſent into Ireland. It differs ſomething from that already mention'd, and therefore I ſhall inſert it for the Reader (r).

The Form of bidding Beads in Ireland.

(r) See Records, Numb. 40.

This Year a very remarkable Book call'd the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man was publiſh'd *. This Book was compoſed in Convocation Three Years before: 'Twas drawn up for a Direction for the Biſhops and Clergy.

A. D. 1537.

* 'Twas printed by Berthelet the King's Printer, cum privilegio.

They were to govern themſelves in the Inſtruction of their Flocks by this Rule. 'Twas an authoritative Explanation of the Doctrines of Faith and Manners, and a ſort of Standard for the Desk and Pulpit. For theſe Reaſons, and becauſe the Book is in a very few Hands, I ſhall abridge ſome part of it for the Reader. 'Tis rang'd under theſe Diviſions; The Creed, the Seven Sacraments, the Ten Commandments, the Lord's-Prayer, the Ave-Maria, Juſtification, and Purgatory. I ſhall only abſtract thoſe Places which are moſt uncommon.

The Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man abſtracted.

To begin with the Fifth Article of the Creed: “ This Article maintains a local Deſcent of our Saviour into Hell. And here Hell is taken for the Place of the damn'd. The End of our Saviour's coming hither in his ſtate of Separation was to ſpoil Principalities and Powers, to triumph over the Kingdom of Darkneſs, and to reſcue all thoſe righteous Souls which died in the Favour of God, and the Belief of a Meſſiah to come. That by this Deſcent of our Saviour into Hell, the Sentence of eternal Condemnation pronounc'd upon Adam and his Poſterity, was revers'd: The Puniſhment conſe-quent upon original or actual Sin diſcharg'd, and the Dominion thence accruing to the Devil over Mankind determin'd.

Our Saviour's Deſcent into Hell, how underſtood.

The Catholick Church.

“ The Article concerning the Catholick Church, makes this Body conſiſt in the Unity of Faith, Hope and Charity, and in the right Uſe and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; and that all the good Works, Gifts and Graces perform'd or conferr'd on any particular Member, will be univerſally ſerviceable, and applied to the Benefit of the whole Body.

“ That all particular Churches are Parts of the Church Univerſal; and that there are no Diſtinctions of Superiority or Authority in any one of them excluſively of the reſt. But they are all equal in Dignity and Power, built upon the ſame Foundation, govern'd by the ſame Spirit, and entitul'd to the ſame glorious Immortality. The Church of Rome therefore can't properly be call'd any more than a Part of the Catholick Church: Neither can the Biſhop of that See make out any Claim by the Word of God, to Univerſal Paſtorſhip, or to exerciſe any Juriſdiction in the Churches of England, France, Spain, or any other foreign Realm.

“ In the Article of the Communion of Saints, the Operations of the Holy Ghoſt, Remiſſion of Sin, and eternal Salvation, are wholly confin'd to the Catholick Church, and a very ſevere Sentence pronounc'd upon all Hereticks, Heathens, Jews, and Infidels of what Age or Diſtinction ſoever.

“ In the Notes upon the twelve Articles, 'tis declared, all thoſe Heterodoxies condemn'd by the firſt four General Councils muſt be renounced, and the Creed interpreted agreeably to the Senſe of Scripture and Antiquity.

“ From the Creed the Book proceeds to the Seven Sacraments.

Matrimony.

“ And here Matrimony is ſaid to conſiſt of an outward viſible Sign, and an inward Grace, and affirm'd to be inſtituted in Paradiſe, and no new Sacrament of the Goſpel. And after all, there is a Preference given to Cælibacy.

Baptiſm.

“ Under Baptiſm, they inſiſt on the Neceſſity of this Sacrament, for the Remiſſion of Sin, the Recovery of the Divine Favour, and the Infuſion of Grace, and pronounce that all baptized Children dying in their Infancy, ſhall undoubtedly be ſaved, and elſe not: And here they condemn Re-baptization, and all Pelagian and Anabaptiſtical Doctrines, as deteſtable Hereſies.

Pelagianiſm and Anabaptiſm condemn'd.

Confirmation.

“ The next Advance is, to Confirmation: And after having premiſed the Sufficiency of Baptiſm, for the Purpoſes above mention'd, they maintain, that Confirmation was inſtituted by the Apoſtles, and continued in the primitive Church, to recover the Perſon from any Failings he had been guilty of ſince Baptiſm, and to furniſh him with new Strength to combate the World, the Fleſh, and the Devil. And here the Biſhop is made the Miniſter of Confirmation.

Acts 8. 19.

“ The Sacrament of Penance is divided into Contrition, Confeſſion, and Reformation.

Penance.

“ As to Confeſſion, all Biſhops and Preachers are to inſtruct their People that the Words of Abſolution pronounc'd by the Prieſt, are within his Commiſſion, and warranted by our Saviour's Authority. And that the Words of Abſolution pronounc'd by the Miniſters of the Church, ought to be depended on as much as if they were proclaimed from the Sky, and ſpoken viſibly by God himſelf. This Aſſertion is proved from St. Luke and St. John.

St. John 20. 23.
Luke 10. 16.

The Sacrament of the Altar.
It ſeems to reach no farther than Conſubſtantiation.

“ In the Sacrament of the Altar, the Corporal Preſence is maintain'd, and the very ſelf-ſame Body and Blood of our Saviour, which was born of the Bleſſed Virgin, and ſuffer'd upon the Croſs, is affirm'd to be preſent under the form of Bread and Wine. But here there is nothing ſaid of the Deſtruction of the Subſtance of the Bread and Wine: And therefore the whole ſeems to come no farther than Conſubſtantiation. 'Tis probable the Article was couch'd in this Latitude with a reconciling Deſign, and to prevent breaking off into Parties: This healing Temper ſeems farther purſued, where 'tis ſaid this Sacrament is to be us'd with all due Reverence and Honour, without injoyning Extremities, or making any mention of Adoration.

Orders.

“ The Sacrament of Orders follows next: And here the Sacerdotal Office is ſaid to include Inſtruction and Government. But then 'tis no Arbitrary or Tyrannical Power, but given with Limitations, and reſtrain'd to certain ends and purpoſes. 'Tis call'd the Power of the Keys, and implies a right of Adminiſtring the Sacraments, excluſive of the Laity.

“ This Office of teaching and governing the Church was committed to Biſhops and Prieſts by our Saviour and his Apoſtles, and is to continue by Succeſſion in the Sacerdotal Order.

“ Orders may properly be called a Sacrament both upon the Score of being inſtituted by Chriſt, and in regard of the Eſſentials of other Sacraments, The Outward viſible Sign, and the Inward Spiritual Grace. The Outward Sign is the Prayer and Impoſition of the Biſhop's Hands. And the Inward and Spiritual Grace, is the Power and Authority convey'd with the Character.

1 Tim. 3.
Tit. 1.

The Authority of Biſhops and Prieſts.

“ They proceed to a more particular Explanation of the Authority of the Clergy, and divide it into two Branches; Poteſtas Ordinis & Poteſtas Juriſdictionis. Concerning the firſt, not being conteſted, they ſay nothing: The latter touching Juriſdiction committed by God to the Hierarchy, they throw into three ſubdiviſions. By the firſt, they are impower'd to reprove Immorality and Misbelief, and excommunicate the Obſtinate and Ungovernable. 'Tis likewiſe within their Commiſſion to moderate their Cenſures, and relax in the Diſcipline of the Church. But then by Virtue of their Character they have no Authority upon Property or Perſon, or any right to inflict Corporal Puniſhment, and carry their Cenſures to Death or Impriſonment. By the ſecond Branch of Juriſdiction, Biſhops are authoriz'd by our Saviour to continue the Succeſſion, and perpetuate the Hierarchy. They are the Judges of the Qualifications for Prieſthood, and may admit or refuſe as they think fit. And here the Rights of Patronage, ſettled by the Conſtitution are allowed, provided there's no juſt exception againſt the Perſon preſented.

“ A Third Branch of Juriſdiction belonging to Biſhops and Prieſts, comprehends the Power of making Canons for the Diſcipline and Service of the Church. And here the Book inſtances in ſeveral Regulations made by the Apoſtles: 'Tis farther obſerv'd, that the Diſcipline and Ceremonies of the Church were ſettled by Biſhops and Councils, during the firſt three Centuries: And that the conſent of the People was likewiſe concurrent upon ſuch occaſions. That after the Converſion of Kings and Princes, the Biſhops had recourſe to the Aſſiſtance of the Secular Magiſtrate. This

1 Cor. 5.
1 Cor. 12.
1 Cor. 14.
1 Cor. 16.
1 Tim. 1.

was done to reinforce the Juriſdiction of the Church by the Civil Sanction: For the Church as was obſerv'd before, has no Authority to inflict pecuniary or corporal Puniſhment. 'Twas upon this View that Princes confirm'd the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions, and ſometimes made Regulations in theſe matters with Penalties annex'd.

Superſtitious Notions and Practices complain'd of.

“ Under this Head, the Biſhops and Clergy take notice the People had been entangled with ſuperſtitious Notions, with reſpect to the Ceremonies and Canons of the Church. That tho' moſt of theſe things were but indifferent in their own Nature, yet many People were more afraid of living counter to theſe Uſages and Regulations, than of tranſgreſſing the plain Laws of God. Thus for inſtance, not a few in this Kingdom thought the eating an Egg upon Friday, tho' done upon a fair Motive, and without any Contempt of the Canons, was a greater Sin than either Theft or Fornication: and that the Abſtaining from ſo ſlender a Liberty, was more meritorious than the diſcharging of any human or charitable Office. Upon the progreſs of this Sacrament, they declare againſt the Pope's Supremacy, and obſerve, that for ſeveral of the firſt Centuries, his pretended Primacy was unknown, and his Juriſdiction confin'd to the Province of Italy. That his Power was ſomewhat enlarg'd by Imperial Grants, and the conſent of General Councils: But that the preſent enormous Greatneſs was owing to foul Practice. That by the modern Claims of Supremacy, theſe Prelates revolted from the Doctrine of the Fathers, from the Conſtitutions of the Primitive Church, and even from their own Proteſtations when admitted to the Popedome. For all the Biſhops of Rome, when conſecrated to that See, make a ſolemn Profeſſion to govern by the firſt Eight General Councils, without the leaſt Stretch or Violation. And yet by ſome of theſe 'tis particularly provided, that all Cauſes ſhall be determin'd by the Provincial Biſhops where the Proceſs began: And that no Biſhop ſhall exert his Character beyond his Dioceſs or Province. They mention other Authorities to the ſame purpoſe.

Con. 3. Carthag. c. 26. Gregor. lib 4. Epiſt. 23.

No Diſparity among the Apoſtles mention'd in Scripture.

“ For farther Confirmation, they lay it down for a certain Truth, that neither the Scripture, nor any Father of the Apoſtolical Age mention our Saviour's making any Diſtinction or Diſparity in the Apoſtolical or Epiſcopal Character. But that all the Apoſtles and Biſhops were ſettled upon a Foot of Equality, with reſpect to Authority and Juriſdiction. And that Metropolitical Pre-eminence and larger Diſtricts were poſterior Proviſions, contriv'd for the advantage of Order and Unity, and only of Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution.

“ They add farther, That no Biſhops ought to interpoſe in Civil Affairs, upon the ſtrength of their Commiſſion, nor pretend to any Temporal Juriſdiction independently of Princes. And in the cloſe they add, 'tis part of the Regal Office to defend the Chriſtian Religion, to ſupport the Orthodox Clergy, to exterminate Hereſy and Idolatry, and to ſuperintend the Biſhops in the execution of their Office.

Extream Unction intended for the Recovery, and not to be given at the Point of Death.

“ Extream Unction is the next; this they endeavour to raiſe to the force of a Sacrament from the precedent of the Apoſtles, who recover'd the Sick by anointing them with Oyl *. They reinforce their proof from St. James's commanding thoſe that were ſick, to call for the Elders of the Church, who were to pray over him, and anoint him with Oyl in the name of the Lord: That by theſe Applications, God wou'd reſtore the ſick Man to his Health, and forgive him his Sins.

St. James 5. 14, 15.

“ The Doctrine the Biſhops and Clergy were to teach the People upon this Sacrament, was, “ Firſt, That no Man ought to think his Life ſhorten'd by receiving Extream Unction; on the contrary, this Sacrament was inſtituted for the recovery both of Soul and Body.

“ Secondly, That 'tis an ill Cuſtom to defer the Adminiſtration of this Sacrament 'till the ſick Perſon is paſt hopes of Recovery: And therefore, “ Thirdly, 'Tis proper to apply this Remedy in any dangerous Sickneſs. For the ancient Fathers did not call the Sacrament Extream Unction, becauſe it ought to be the laſt; neither did they appoint the giving it only to Perſons at the point of Death. But they call'd this Unction Extream, becauſe it was poſterior to the Sacraments of Baptiſm and Confirmation, in both which anointing was us'd. For this reaſon, they recommend the receiving the Holy Euchariſt after Extream Unction; adding withall, that the communicating in this Sacrament of our Saviour's Body, gives a force to all the reſt. And as a Conſequence from what has been ſaid, They adviſe the uſe of Extream Unction, while the ſick Perſon's Memory and Judgment continues, and before he is paſt underſtanding a Chriſtian's Duty.

The Holy Euchariſt to be received after Extream Unction.

The Sacraments of Baptiſm, the Holy Euchariſt and Penance of greater Dignity than the reſt.

“ From hence the Book proceeds to make a diſtinction between the Seven Sacraments, both as to Inſtitution and Dignity. The Sacraments of Baptiſm, Penance, and the Altar are plac'd in the firſt Rank: And the Benefits convey'd by them declar'd greater than thoſe from the other. The reaſons of the Preference are becauſe theſe Three Sacraments are inſtituted by our Saviour, and made neceſſary to our Salvation. Secondly, Becauſe the receiving of 'em in the Outward viſible Signs is commanded by Chriſt. Thirdly, Becauſe Remiſſion of Sins, ſupernatural Aſſiſtance, and the being incorporated into Chriſt's myſtical Body, are annex'd to theſe viſible Signs, provided the Receivers are duly qualified. The other Four Sacraments of Matrimony, Confirmation, Orders and Extream Unction, tho' by the conſent of the Catholick Church, they have been honour'd with the name of Sacraments, which is no more than they deſerve; tho' they have been adminiſter'd in the Church a long time as ſuch; tho' by the Prayer of the Prieſt, ſome ſpecial Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt are convey'd, neceſſary for Chriſtians, in ſome Conditions and Stations; yet after all they are declared to be of inferior conſideration to the Firſt Three, for the Reaſons above mention'd.

“ The Ten Commandments which follow next, are mention'd in the ſame Order they are with Us, and rang'd under the ſame Diviſion: There are four of the Firſt, and ſix of the Second Table.

“ Under the Second Commandment, they recommend the uſe of Images in Churches for Memory and Inſtruction; but pronounce poſitively againſt bowing down to 'em, or giving them any Worſhip.

Reſtrictions upon the Invocation of Saints.

“ Under the Third, The Invocation of Saints is reſtrain'd to Interceſſion, and the People are to be inſtructed that health of Body or Mind, Forgiveneſs of Sin, Grace, and future Happineſs are above the diſpoſal of created Beings: And therefore we are to apply to none but

“ God

* St. Mark 6. 13.

God Almighty for theſe Bleſſings. To Invocate the Saints upon ſuch an Expectation, is to injure the Majeſty of God, and transfer his Prerogative upon his Creatures: This Levelling the Creature with the Creator, is expreſly declared againſt in Scripture *.

* Iſaiah, c. 42.

Churches Conſecrated to none but God.

“ Farther, No Church or Altar ought to be conſecrated to any Being but God: For according to St. Auguſtin, to whomſoever we may appropriate any Church or Altar, to him we may Sacrifice; but we are to offer Sacrifice to none but God. The Biſhops and Preachers are therefore to inſtruct the People, that when we call the Churches or Altars by the name of any Saint, we fall ſhort of Propriety in the Expreſſion. For to ſpeak properly, in the meaning of this Language; they are only to preſerve the Memories, and refreſh the Virtues of theſe Saints upon the Minds of the People: For in ſtrict and orthodox Conſtruction, theſe holy places are dedicated to none but the Honour of the Bleſſed Trinity.

A Precaution againſt Superſtitious Obſervance of Holydays.

“ After having dilated upon the religious Obſervation of the Seventh Day, and mention'd the removing this Feſtival from Saturday to Sunday, recommended the other Holydays, and laid down Directions for the Peoples Behaviour at Church; after theſe things premis'd, they lay in Caution againſt ſuperſtitious Exceſſes: And here they give a Liberty to work upon Holydays in caſes of Neceſſity, and when the Fruits of the Earth are otherwiſe in danger of being ſpoyl'd. In ſuch Caſes to lie by, and loſe the Bleſſings of Providence, is carrying our ſcruples too far. At the cloſe of the Expoſition on this Fourth Commandment; they give a ſhort Rationale of the Ceremonies of the Church, and explain the meaning of 'em. But this I ſhall paſs over, and give a larger Recital upon this Head afterwards.

“ In treating the Fifth Commandment, the Clergy were to inſtruct their Charge, that all Chriſtians are bound to pay the ſame regard to their ſpiritual, as to their natural Fathers. That theſe ſpiritual Parents are appointed by God to adminiſter the Sacraments to the People, to direct their Conſcience, to inſpect their Conduct, to govern and guide them in their way to Heaven.

“ They proceed to ſtate the Subjects Duty to their Prince or the Father of their Country. And here 'tis declared, as the Senſe of this Commandment, that the Subjects are never to fail in their Obedience, nor withdraw their Allegiance from their Prince upon any Pretence whatſoever.

The Duty of Subjects to Civil Magiſtrates.

“ And if the Subject happens to be privy to any Plot againſt the Perſon or Government of his Sovereign, he is bound by this Commandment to diſcover his Knowledge with all Expedition, to the Prince or his Council. For by the Law of Nature, every part of a Body ought to exert it ſelf in Defence of the Head. For Conſpiracy and Treaſon never ends in any Good, but brings a train of Miſchief, and common Calamity along with it. And to put this Doctrine beyond all Doubt, they cite the Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul, together with a terrible example of Vengance upon the Rebels againſt Moſes and Aaron.

1 Pet. 2.
Rom. 13.
Numb. 16.

Paſſive Obedience aſſerted without Reſerve.

“ In expounding the Sixth Commandment, They pronounce categorically, and lay it down for unconteſted Doctrine, That no Subjects have any Authority to draw the Sword without their Prince's Leave, excepting in the Caſe of lawful Defence againſt Aſſaſſines: And that 'tis their Duty to appear in Arms in Defence of their Prince and Country, whenever the Prince ſhall think fit to command them. That 'tis not lawful for any Cauſe whatſoever, for the Subjects to draw their Swords againſt their Sovereign: For tho' King's may miſtake in their Conduct, and fall into Maladminiſtration, yet God has not made their Subjects their Judges, nor allow'd them any Commiſſion to try their Prince. No, he has made the Supream Magiſtrate, unaccountable to the People, reſerv'd Kings to his own Tribunal, and will puniſh 'em when his Providence ſhall think fit: What Remedy then is there againſt Oppreſſion and Tyranny? Nothing but praying to God, that he wou'd turn the Hearts of their Governours, bring 'em to Recollection, and diſpoſe 'em to a right uſe of their Power.

“ After their Expoſition upon the Ten Commandments, and the Lord's-Prayer, they proceed to the Ave Maria; that is, the Angel's Salutation mention'd in the firſt of St. Luke. And here they enlarge upon the Honour done to the bleſſed Virgin, and affirm her dignify'd above the reſt of Mankind. Before they part with this Article, the People were to be precaution'd againſt Miſtakes, and Miſapplications in ſaying this Form. To prevent this, the Ave Maria is declared to be no Prayer properly ſpeaking, becauſe there's nothing of Petition or Supplication in it. However, the Church has ſubjoyn'd it to the Lord's-Prayer, in the nature of a Hymn.

v. 28.

The Ave Maria, no Prayer.

Juſtification how underſtood.

“ In the Article of Juſtification, they declare this Bleſſing is granted for the Merits and Satisfaction of our bleſſed Saviour: That our Pardon ſtands upon this Ground, and that no good Works on our Part could reconcile us unto God, procure his Favour, and prevail for our Juſtification. However, this Benefit is ſuſpended upon Conditions; ſuch as Reliance upon the Divine Goodneſs, obſerving our Saviour's Commands, and performing the Offices of Juſtice and Charity.

Purgatory.

“ The Book concludes, with the Article of Purgatory: Upon this Head, 'tis ſaid that by the Book of Maccabees, and the Authority of the Ancients, Praying for the Dead is recommended as a Charitable Office: That this Uſage has continued in the Church from the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity. Therefore all Biſhops and Preachers are to put the People in mind, that they have no reaſon to be ſhocked with the continuance of this Practice. That Charity and common regard requires Chriſtians not to forget their Friends in the ſtate of Separation; but to commit them to the Mercy of God in their Prayers, to prevail with others to aſſiſt them in their Maſſes, and to diſtribute Alms upon their account. That by ſuch Aſſiſtances their Sufferings might be abated, and their ſtate made more comfortable. But ſince we have no Certainty or Revelation concerning the Place where they are, or the Nature and Degree of their Puniſhment, we think fit, as the Book ſpeaks, to determine nothing upon theſe Points, but refer departed Souls wholly to the Mercy of God Almighty. And here the Convocation declares againſt the Significancy of the Pope's Pardons for the delivering of Souls out of Purgatory: Or that ſaying Maſſes at Scala Cœli, at any other celebrated Place, or before particular Images, are any ways available for this Purpoſe.

Some Abuſes condemn'd with reſpect to this Article.

The anſwer to Dr. Martin's Book againſt the Marriage of Prieſts, written in the time of Queen

'Tis ſuppos'd to be written by Poynet Bp. of Winchester.

A Liſt of the Biſhops &c. Subſcriptions.

Queen Mary * tells us, this Book was ſet forth by the joynt Authority of the Biſhops. The Liſt of their Subſcriptions to this Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man tranſcrib'd by Dr. Samuel Ward, are as follow. Thomas Cant. Jo. London. Stephen Winton. Jo. Exon. Jo. Lincoln. Jo. Bathon. Roland Coven. & Litch. Tho. Elien. Nic. Sarum. Jo. Bang. Edward Hereſ. Hugo Wigorn. Jo. Roſſen. Ric. Ciceſt. Gulielm. Norv. Gulielm. Meneveнſ. Rob. Aſſav. Rob. Landav. Edoard. Ebor. Cuthb. Dunelm. Rob. Carliolen.

The Divines of the Lower-Houſe of Convocation are theſe, Richard. Woolman, Archidiac. Sudbur. Guliel. Knight, Archid. Richmond. Jo. Bell, Archid. Gloc. Edmund Bonner, Archid. Liceſt. John Skip, Archid. Dorſet. Nic. Heath, Archid. Stafford. Cuth. Marſhal, Archid. Nottingham. Rich. Curren, Archid. Oxon.

Gulielm. Cliff, Galfridus Downes, Robertus Oaking, Radul. Bradſord, Ricardus Smith, Simon Matthew, Johannes Pryne, Gulielm. Buckmaiſtre, Gulielm. May, Nic. Wotton, Ric. Coxe, Johannes Edmunds, Thomas Robertſon, Johannes Baker, Thomas Barret, Johannes Haſey, Johannes Tyſon, Sacræ Theologiæ, Juris Eccleſiaſtici & Civilis Profeſſores *.

*Strype's Memorials of Archbp. Cranmer, Book 1. p. 54.

The Liſt of the Biſhops is compleat thro' both Provinces: But whether that of the Lower-Houſe was all tranſcrib'd by Dr. Ward, may be a Queſtion.

This Book, in the Sacrament of Orders, declares the Clergy have their Commiſſion from God Almighty, and by Conſequence, that their Authority is no Grant of the Crown, nor the exerciſe of it dependent on the Civil Magiſtrate. Notwithſtanding this frank Declaration, it paſs'd the Teſt of the Court, and was publiſh'd by the King's Printer.

However, the King went on with the exerciſe of his Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy: To give an inſtance, becauſe of the Unuſualneſs of it, of a lower kind: 'Tis a Licence to Preach, granted to Roland Taylor Dr. of Law: It runs thus †.

†Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 42.

Henricus Octavus Dei Gratia Angliæ & Franciæ Rex, Fidei Defenſor, Dominus Hiberniæ & in terris ſupremum Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ ſub Chriſto Caput, fideli noſtro Subdito Rolando Tayler, Legum Doctori & in Diaconali ordine conſtituto, ſalutem. Cum nihil ſit quod ad Chriſtianæ religionis corruptelam eradicandam, ſinceramque Chriſti fidem reſtaurandam plus habeat momenti, quam aſſidua Sacroſanctæ Scripturæ explicatio, cujus Fructum quo magis ſubditi noſtri imbibant, eos Deo Optimo Maximo acceptiores, & noſtro Imperiali Regimini Obedientiores futuros eſſe neutiquam dubitamus. Tibi igitur de cujus erga Chriſti Evangelium zelo, (etiam ſecundùm ſcientiam) vitæ & integritate morum, conſcientiæ puritate & circumſpectionis induſtria, plurimùm confidimus; in omnibus Eccleſiis & aliis locis ad hoc congruis, ubicunque intra Regnum noſtrum Angliæ ſituatis, prædicandi verbum Dei Licentiam impartimur, & plenam concedimus Poſteſtatem. In cujus rei Teſtimonium Sigillum noſtrum, &c. dat. Martij 24. die. Anno Regni noſtri. 29.

In May the next Year, the Proteſtant Princes ſent Francis Burgrat, and two other learned Men with a publick Character into England. Their Buſineſs was to argue with the Engliſh Divines, and preſs the King to a farther Reformation. They had Archbiſhop Cranmer's Intereſt in this Affair: At their going off, they drew up their Arguments againſt Communion in one kind; Private Maſſes, and the Cælibacy of the Clergy. I ſhall tranſlate what they offer upon the two firſt Heads, and for the laſt, refer the Reader to my former Part (s).

Auguſt 5. A. D. 1538.

(s) p. 191. & deinc.

The German Ambaſſadors Letter to the King for a farther Reformation.

“ After ſome introductive Ceremony, theſe Ambaſſadors acquaint the King, they had ſpent near Two Months in Conferences with the Engliſh Biſhops and others of the eminent Clergy: That they had brought the Matter to a very promiſing Iſſue; and that they hop'd his Majeſty, and the Princes of Germany wou'd come to a perfect Underſtanding in points of Religion. From hence they proceed to treat the Pope very coarſly. I ſhall endeavour to give the Reader their Reaſoning, and omit moſt of their hard Language.

They argue againſt Communion in one kind.

“ Their Argument againſt Communion in one kind ſtands thus. They take it for granted, his Highneſs won't deny that the Doctrine and Commands of our Saviour, are to be preferr'd to all humane Conſtitutions, Traditions and Ceremonies whatſoever. For our Saviour is the Life and the Truth, he is infallible in whatever he pronounces. But all humane Deciſions, eſpecially in matters of Faith and religious Worſhip, are liable to miſtake. Now 'tis certain our Saviour inſtituted the Holy Euchariſt under both kinds. This is evident from his ſaying, Drink ye all of this. And for this we have a farther Proof from St. Paul: Let a Man examine himſelf, ſays the Apoſtle, and ſo let him eat of that Bread and drink of that Cup. Now both theſe Places direct the Practice of the whole Church, and not the Clergy only. For to aſſert, that our Saviour ſpoke theſe words only to the Apoſtles, and therefore the Communicating under both kinds, can bind no farther than the Hierarchy; to aſſert this, is an inconſequent way of Arguing: For from hence it will follow, that the Laity are not to receive ſo much as under one kind: For neither do we read in any other Place, our Saviour commanded that only his Body ſhou'd be given to the Laity; or that both the Bread and the Cup ſhou'd be reſerv'd as a Privilege to the Sacerdotal Order. From hence we muſt neceſſarily infer, that our Saviour's Command for receiving the Holy Euchariſt equally concerns the Laity and Clergy without any Abatement; or elſe that the Laity are altogether to be refus'd the Sacrament of our Lord's Body, ſince we don't find any Inſtitution of the Sacrament for the Laity in any part of the Goſpels, excepting at our Saviour's laſt Supper. To affirm, that half Communion was ſettled by the Church upon ſeveral weighty Conſiderations, is not to talk much to the Point: For the Queſtion is here concerning our Saviour's Inſtitution, which every Chriſtian muſt grant ought to over-rule all Eccleſiaſtical Authority. For the Church does not preſume upon the Liberty of making an indifferent thing of our Saviour's Command: And as for the Plea of difference in Degree, Dignity of Prieſthood, fear of ſpilling the Cup aud ſuch like; theſe Pretences can never have force enough to overbear or ſet aſide a divine Inſtitution. For 'tis confeſs'd even in the Canon Law, that no Cuſtom can preſcribe againſt the Laws of God. Beſides, the advantage of Cuſtom lies on the other ſide; for the receiving under both kinds, has not only the warrant of our Saviour's Precept, but the Authority of the Ancients, and the Practice of the Primitive Church to ſupport it. Thus St. Jerome tells us, the Prieſts adminiſter the Holy Euchariſt, and diſtribute Chriſt's Blood to the People: Thus Pope Gelaſius declares againſt dividing the Body and Blood of our Lord, that is, keeping back part of it, and calls it a great Sacrilege.

1 Cor. 11. 28.

“ From

Their Reaſoning againſt private Maſſes.

“ From hence they go on to alledge the Practice of the Greek Church: That this part of Chriſtendome as they have maintain'd the Liberties againſt the Encroachments of the Court of Rome, ſo they have always communicated the Laity under both kinds.

“ The other Point in which they deſire the Engliſh wou'd reform, is the Cuſtom of Private Maſſes. This Part of divine Service, as 'twas then eſteem'd, they declaim againſt with great Vehemence. They affirm, the Chriſtian Religion is in a manner loſt, both as to Notion and Benefit, by this Practice. Thus the propitiatory Sacrifice upon the Croſs is made ineffectual; an idolatrous Worſhip, and a chimerical Satisfaction for Sin, brought into the Church. For the Maſs implies nothing leſs than Communion, and ſo 'tis call'd by the Apoſtle St. Paul (t). Thus the holy Exchariſt was celebrated in the times of the Apoſtles, and the Primitive Church: And for this we have the concurrent Teſtimony of the Fathers. But now the Maſs is made quite another Thing, turn'd to a different Uſe, and Communion ſtruck off in the Adminiſtration. They'd teach us now to reſt upon the opus operatum for the procuring of Grace, and for pardoning the Sins both of the Living and Dead.

“ The Ambaſſadors argue farther againſt this Doctrine, and affirm, that if the Maſs is thus ſerviceable to thoſe who don't receive, then Juſtification does not reſult from Faith, but from the opus operatum of the Maſſes. But to maintain this is a plain Contradiction to Scripture, where we are told, that we are freely juſtified by Faith, thro' the Merits of our Saviour: That our Sins are pardon'd, and the divine Favour procur'd, not by Proxy, or foreign Performance, but by a Perſonal Relyance upon Chriſt. And as to the Benefits of the Sacraments, we can't expect they ſhou'd reach us, without actual partaking in the Inſtitution. But theſe Men of the Roman Church pretend to receive for the Congregation, which is juſt to as much purpoſe, as if they ſhou'd undertake to be baptiz'd for 'em. This is direct croſſing upon the Scripture, and the End of the Inſtitution. For this Sacrament was intended to awaken the Acknowledgment of the Receiver, and refreſh the Bleſſing of our Redemption upon his Mind; to ſupport a dejected Penitent, and relieve us under the Conſciouſneſs of Sin. And thus, as St. Ambroſe ſpeaks, becauſe we are always ſinning, we ſhould always apply to the Remedy. Thus, as they go on, from the Age of the Apoſtles, to Gregory the Great's time, there was no ſuch thing as private Maſſes heard of in the Church. To begin with the Teſtimonies; St. Chryſoſtom tells us, the Prieſt was plac'd at the Altar, to invite thoſe prepar'd to the Communion, and refuſe the reſt. And by the antient Canons it appears that one of the Clergy was appointed to conſecrate the holy Euchariſt, from whom the other Prieſts and Deacons were to receive the Body of our Lord. The Words of the Canon of the Council of Nice are theſe. Let the Deacons receive the Holy Communion after the Prieſts, from the Biſhops Hands, or from ſome of the Second Order. And Epiphanius informs us, that in Aſia the Synaxis or Communion was celebrated thrice every Week, and that this Cuſtom ſtood on Apoſtolical Tradition. From whence it appears that daily Maſſes were not the Practice. This Uſuage contiues ſtill in the Greek Church: There is only publick Maſs on Sundays and Holydays. As for private Celebrations without communicating the Laity, they know nothing on't. That which principally ſecur'd the Greeks from this Innovation, was becauſe of their refuſing to ſubmit to the Pope's Supremacy, and own him in his Pretenſions of univerſal Paſtor.

“ But ſome People don't ſtretch the Virtue of private Maſſes to this extravagant Exceſs. They are willing to give up a great Part of the opus operatum, and ſink it to a Sacrifice of Thankſgiving: And this they ſay may be done either ſingly by the Prieſt, or in Conjunction with the Congregation, as the Church thinks fit. This Opinion has ſome Colour, and may ſerve to varniſh over a bad Cauſe. But to argue thus, is to ſoften and palliate without Warrant; for 'tis plain, the Maſs was principally deſign'd for a Sacrament: And that by receiving this Sacrament Faith might be increas'd, and Grace and Pardon conveyed. This being allow'd to be the principal Intention of the Inſtitution, the giving of Thanks can be no more than a conſequential Duty, and of inferiour Conſideration. From hence the Inference is, that we have no Liberty to diſpenſe with our Saviour's Precept, to alter the Form of his Inſtitution, and go off from the Practice of the Primitive Church. The Sacraments are Things that will admit of no Innovation: In Performances of this Importance we muſt keep cloſe to the Pattern in the Mount, to the Rule of the Goſpel, and the Uſuages of the antient Church.

“ Farther, They urge that private Maſſes have prov'd very deſtructive to the Intereſt of the Church in other Reſpects: That the Pope's Uſurpations ſtand moſtly upon this Bottom. Without theſe the Trade of Indulgences wou'd fall off, and it wou'd not be in his Power to draw ſo much of the Treaſure of Chriſtendom into his Coffers.

“ To diſcharge theſe Abuſes therefore, our illuſtrious Princes have ſtruck off private Maſſes, and recover'd the Sacrament to the Benefit of the Inſtitution, and the Practice of the Primitive Church. And as for the cuſtomary Ceremonies they are almoſt all continued; ſome Alteration, we confeſs, is made; the Hymns are in High Dutch; for 'tis the Apoſtle's Injunction, that a Language underſtood by the People ſhou'd be ſpoken in the Church: And becauſe the Maſs was inſtituted for a Communion, the People after Examination are admitted to the Lord's Table. The Congregation are likewiſe inſtructed from the Pulpit, in the Meaning and Dignity of this Sacrament. And in ſhort, the whole Service is perform'd with all the Solemnity and Devotion imaginable.

“ 'Tis therefore mere Calumny in our Adverſaries to charge us with throwing off the Ceremonies, weakening the Majeſty of Religion, and making the Service of God look homely and contemptible. For Order, Decency and Regard is no where ſeen to more Advantage than in our Churches.

“ Farther, That the Maſs is no Sacrifice, they endeavour to prove from theſe Words of our Saviour, This is my Body which is given for you. Theſe Words, as they continue, ſuppoſe a Promiſe on God's Part, and on ours only Faith to believe it: To believe that Grace and Remiſſion of Sin is offer'd us in the Promiſe: Therefore it can be nothing of a Sacrifice, that is, it can't be offer'd to God for the Re-

(t) 1 Cor. 10.

"miſſion of our Faults. Thus St. Paul teaches us, that in this Sacrament, we ſhew the Lord's Death. But to ſhew or declare is not ſacrificing: That is making an Oblation to God Almighty for the Forgiveneſs of Sin. Beſides, we read in the Goſpel, that he broke, and gave the Bread to his Diſciples, ſaying, Take, and Eat, &c. Likewiſe, Drink ye all of This: But to Receive, to Eat, and to Drink, can by no means be ſtrain'd to a Sacrifice; becauſe the bare Performance of this Action can never relieve us againſt Guilt, nor diſcharge our Tranſgreſſions.

"Neither are we commanded by theſe Words of the Inſtitution, to offer any thing to God Almighty, but rather to receive ſomething from him. For we read, which is given for you, meaning his Body; and afterwards, the Blood which is ſhed for you: From which Expreſſion we may plainly collect, that thoſe who partake of the holy Euchariſt, are only Receivers, and offer nothing to God Almighty. Beſides, when the Laity receive this holy Sacrament, a Sacrifice on their part is not ſo much as pretended. And yet our Saviour has put no Difference between the Clergy and Laity, as to the Uſe and Deſign of the holy Euchariſt.

"Theſe things conſider'd, all palliating Explanations of private Maſſes ſignify nothing: For the groſſer and moſt exceptionable Senſe is ſupported by the beſt Authorities in the Church of Rome. Thus Thomas putting the Queſtion, why the Maſs was inſtituted, makes this Anſwer. The Body of our Lord as it was once offer'd upon the Croſs for Original Sin; ſo it ought to be continually repeated upon the Altar for our daily Tranſgreſſions; that by this means, the Church may be furniſh'd with a Preſent to propitiate the divine Majeſty, much more acceptable than all the Sacrifices under the Moſaic Law. Thus Pope Alexander affirms, that this Sacrifice of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, is to be preferr'd to all other Oblations. That our Saviour himſelf has taught us to offer the Bread and the Cup in the holy Sacrament, by commanding us to take and eat: And that our Sins are forgiven in Virtue of ſuch Sacrifices. Thus Gabriel informs us, that the Euchariſt is offer'd in the nature of a Sacrifice to God the Father: That by this Performance both venial and mortal Sins are diſcharg'd: That not only thoſe who receive, but others for whom 'tis offer'd are benefited by this Sacrament, in proportion to the Preparations they are under. In conſequence of this Doctrine, Aquinas maintains, that the Euchariſt, upon the ſcore of its being a Sacrifice, reaches to the Advantage of thoſe who are abſent, provided 'tis offer'd in their Behalf: And that it requires only Potential, and not Actual Qualifications of a holy Life in them. And therefore, if they are under a Diſpoſition for Virtue and Duty, the Aſſiſtances of Grace are procur'd for 'em in this Sacrament: And thus by Conſequence it diſcharges the Debt of mortal Sin, not by way of immediate Cauſality, but by procuring the Grace of Contrition.

Aquinas in Opuſc. de Sacrament. Altaris. Pro Debito originali.

De Canon. Miſſæ.

In Quarto, Diſt. 1, 2. Q. 2.

"The Writings of the Schoolmen are full of ſuch Sentences as theſe: Nothing is more common with them than their Aſſertion of the Maſs's being a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead. That the Aſſiſtances of Grace flow naturally as it were, from the opus operatum, and that a Man may receive the Advantage without having any part in the Solemnity. That all reconciling Attempts, extenuating Gloſſes, and Senſes of Accommodation, are to no purpoſe, while private Maſſes are kept on, and the Significancy of them maintain'd. To ſoften the Terms, and let down the Expreſſion a little, by calling it a Sacrifice of Thankſgiving, is ſhort of the Buſineſs; for under this Notion, it cannot riſe up to any ſatisfactory Expiation for thoſe who officiate; neither can it be made applicable for the Benefit of others. By this way of arguing, the Nativity, and other Feſtivals kept in Honour of our Saviour, may be call'd Euchariſtick, or Memorial Sacrifices. And to come nearer Truth and Propriety, preaching the Goſpel, Faith, Prayer, and other Inſtances of Piety in holy Men, may rather be call'd Sacrifices; and yet none of theſe Performances can be call'd Satisfactions, or extend to the Benefit of others. From hence they proceed to argue for the Marriage of the Clergy.

The reſt of the Letter is moſtly Addreſs, Complement, and Declamation. 'Tis ſign'd by Francis Burgrat, and George Boyneburg Ambaſſadours, and Myconius a Pariſh Prieſt (u).

The King gave the Ambaſſadours an Anſwer, as they deſir'd: 'Twas drawn by Biſhop Tunſtal (w). After ſome Length of Commendation, and Return of Ceremony, the King enters upon the Controverſy. He begins with Communion in one kind.

The King's Anſwer to the Ambaſſadours Letter. Corporal Preſence and Concomitancy maintain'd to the laſt Degree of Wonder and Incomprehenſibleneſs.

"That this Sacrament, ſays the King, was commanded to be given the People under both Kinds, and never under one, is an Aſſertion we are ſurpriz'd at: Neither can we imagine your Excellencies are in earneſt, but that you have only a mind to ſound our Opinion, and try our Strength upon the Argument. And therefore, notwithſtanding what you have advanc'd, we can't help thinking your Perſuaſion the ſame with ours: And that you believe under the Form of Bread, the natural and living Body of Chriſt is really and ſubſtantially contain'd, together with the true and real Blood; otherwiſe we muſt confeſs, that the Body is diſfurniſh'd of Blood *, which wou'd be an impious Affirmation: Since this Fleſh of our Saviour is not only alive, but productive of Life in others. And thus under the Form of Wine, there is not only the natural and real Blood of our Saviour, but likewiſe, together with his Blood, the real and natural Fleſh of his Body is contain'd †. The Article of Orthodox Belief ſtanding thus, the Conſequence is, that thoſe who communicate in either Kind, communicate in both, as to Effect and Benefit; becauſe our Saviour's Body and Blood is entirely in each. And to ſupport this Doctrine of Concomitancy, we are not unprovided with Authority and Inſtances from the New Teſtament. Thus our bleſſed Saviour adminiſter'd the Sacrament in one Kind to the Diſciples going to Emmaus. For 'tis written, As he ſat at Meat with 'em, he took Bread and bleſſed it, and brake, and gave to 'em: And their Eyes were open'd, and they knew him, by the breaking of Bread. This Place, the Ancients St. Chryſoſtom, St. Auſtin, and Theophylact, interpret to the holy Euchariſt, and yet here's not the leaſt Mention of giving the Wine. Thus our Saviour by adminiſtring in one Kind, ſeems to have left the ſame Liberty to his Spouſe the Church. For Chriſt,

Luke 24. 30.

(u) Cotton. Libr. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 173.

(w) Ld. Herbert, p. 431.

* Corpus ibi exſangue eſſe.

† Cum vero ſanguine viva & vera etiam Corporis ſit Caro.

who gave Inſtructions at his laſt Supper for Communion in both Kinds, has left us his Precedent for communicating under one: But no Man was ever ſo bold, as to charge our Saviour with Inconſiſtency between Precept and Example.

“Thus after the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, and the Converſion of three thouſand People at St. Peter's Sermon, 'tis ſaid, They continued ſtedfaſtly in the Apoſtle's Doctrine and Fellowſhip, and in breaking of Bread and in Prayers. This Text the Ancients likewiſe underſtand of adminiſtring the holy Sacrament: But neither is here any thing ſaid of the Cup. Now if Communion under one Kind is warranted both by our Saviour's and the Apoſtles Example, we are not to charge this Uſuage with Contradiction to the Goſpel: For the Apoſtles who were led into all Truth by the Holy Spirit, wou'd never have communicated the People only in the Bread, if our Saviour's Command had oblig'd them to adminiſter under both Kinds: For ſuch a Latitude wou'd have look'd like Forgetfulneſs of their Maſter's Command, and changing his Inſtitution.

Acts 2. 42.

“Farther, From our Saviour's Inſtructions for this Solemnity, recited by St. Paul, we find the two Kinds ſeparately and independently mention'd. The Apoſtle's Words which he received from our Saviour are theſe: The Lord Jeſus in the ſame Night in which he was betray'd, took Bread; and when he had given Thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, Eat, This is my Body which is broken for you: This do in Remembrance of me. Here we ſee our bleſſed Saviour, in the Words Do This, ſpeaks ſeparately, and by its ſelf, of his Body under the Appearance of Bread, before he proceeds to any Mention of the Cup. Afterwards, the Apoſtle informs us, that after the ſame manner alſo he took the Cup when he had ſupp'd, ſaying, This Cup is the New Teſtament in my Blood: This do ye, as oft as ye ſhall drink it in Remembrance of me. Here we are to obſerve the Abſoluteneſs of the Command is alter'd; for 'tis not ſaid without Limitation, as it was was in the breaking of the Bread, This do in Remembrance of me; but there's a Clauſe of Latitude added, that is, Do This as oft as ye ſhall drink it in Remembrance of me. By which we are to underſtand, that we are under no Neceſſity of always receiving the Cup; but that as often as we are communicated with the Blood of our Saviour in the Form of Wine, we are bound to do This in Remembrance of Him.

“Farther, Our bleſſed Saviour, when Supper was over, at which he had given them his Body under the Form of Bread: After this he gave his Blood ſeparately under the Appearance of Wine, ſaying, Do This as oft as ye ſhall drink it in Remembrance of me: Letting us know, that ſometimes the Adminiſtration might be perform'd under one Kind; and yet, notwithſtanding, the Force and Significancy of both received by the People: For otherwiſe there had been no Neceſſity of pronouncing the Words, Do This, more than once, neither wou'd they have been repeated diſtinctly upon the Bread and Cup. We have Reaſon to conclude therefore, that our Saviour, at the giving of the Cup, wou'd not have added, Do This, as oft as ye ſhall drink it, having ſaid the ſame before of the Bread, unleſs he had allow'd the receiving of either of theſe without the other.

“Neither can it be denied, that the Diſciples receiv'd the Body of our Lord upon his giving them the Bread, ſaying, This is my Body: For tho' the Cup was not given till after ſome Interval, when Supper was ended, no Perſon we conceive is ſo ſtupid, as to think the Body of Chriſt was not received by the Diſciples under the Form of Bread, till after Supper when the Cup was given them: To ſuppoſe this wou'd be extremely abſurd, becauſe it makes the former Words of our Saviour (This is my Body,) (pronounc'd over the Bread,) ſignify nothing; and that the giving the Bread to the Diſciples, had no ſupernatural Efficacy, till they had all drank of the Cup after Supper. Now this wou'd be a wicked Sentiment, becauſe it throws both what our Saviour ſaid and did, out all Force and Signification. Laſtly, St. Paul himſelf, after he had made a joint Mention of both kinds, concludes with a diſjunctive Inference upon the whole, ſaying, whoſoever ſhall Eat this Bread, ἢ πίνη τὸ ποτήριον, &c. and OR ſhall Drink this Cup of the Lord unworthily, &c. Which Text is thus tranſlated by Eraſmus, Itaque quiſquis ederit Panem hunc, aut de Calice biberit indignè, reus erit Corporis & Sanguinis Domini.

The Streſs of the Argument laid upon the Word or.

“From theſe Words of the Apoſtle it appears plainly, that whoſoever receives this Bread unworthily, is guilty of the Body and Blood of our Lord; or whoſoever ſhall drink this Cup unworthily, is likewiſe guilty of the Body and Blood of our Lord. Which Crime cou'd never be charg'd upon the Communicant, unleſs the Body and Blood of Chriſt was ſeparately contain'd under the Form of Bread, and likewiſe in the ſame Integrity and Extent of Nature, under the Form of Wine: Neither wou'd the Apoſtle have ſpoken disjunctively of the Species of Bread, if it was never to have been received but in Conjunction with the Cup: Neither on the other ſide, wou'd he have ſpoken of the Cup in Terms of Separation, if it had never been lawful to receive it without the Bread. For why ſhou'd he disjoin thoſe Things which were never to be parted? Now the leaſt Portion of Inſpiration has its Weight, and every Word ought to be regarded. For thus we are commanded by the Prophet, incline your Ear to the Words of my Mouth. And in Deuteronomy 'tis ſaid, Theſe Words which I command thee this Day, ſhall be in thine Heart; and elſewhere in the ſame Book, we read, thou ſhalt not add thereto, or diminiſh therefrom.

“We grant no Command of our Saviour's can be over-rul'd by any human Conſtitution: For Men can have no Authority to reverſe a divine Eſtabliſhment. We are likewiſe perſuaded, that no Cuſtom ought to prevail againſt the Word of God, or be pleaded in Derogation of our Saviour's Inſtitution.

“But then we affirm our Saviour has left us at liberty to receive him three Ways in a Corporal, and the fourth in a Spiritual Manner: That is, Firſt, in both Kinds: Secondly, under the Form of Bread only: Thirdly, under that of Wine: And, Fourthly, in Affection and Deſire only, when by the Diſadvantage of Circumſtances we can receive no otherwiſe.

“As to the Firſt Way, 'tis our Opinion, That if any of the faithful, out of Ardency of Devotion ſhall earneſtly deſire to receive in both Kinds, provided there's no Impediment of Weakneſs or Diſtemper, the Communion may be given him under both Kinds; provided farther, that neither the Perſon receiving, nor the Prieſt does this, in Contempt of the Diſcipline of the Church, and the Cuſtom of the Country.

“As to the Second and Third Manner of receiving, our Opinion is this, That in caſe a Man lies under Diſadvantage of Nature or Accident: For inſtance, if he has the Palſy, or an Antipathy againſt eating Bread or drinking Wine, ſo that he can't conveniently receive under both Kinds; in this Caſe, if he deſires the holy Communion, it ought to be given under one.

“As to the Fourth, If a Man's Stomach is diſturb'd with nauſeating to that Degree that he can keep nothing; under ſuch a Diſtemper the ſhewing the Sacrament upon his Deſire, is a virtual Communion: This will help him to recollect the Death of his Redeemer, bring him to Compunction, and convey the Benefits of actually receiving.

“We can't but wonder therefore, that thoſe who appear ſo zealous in maintaining their Chriſtian Liberty ſhou'd reſtrain it in ſo valuable an Inſtance; that they ſhou'd put us under an unneceſſary Incapacity, and deny us the ineſtimable Privilege of our Saviour's Body and Blood, under ſeveral Emergencies! What pious Chriſtian wou'd not rather die than be thrown out of ſo great a Privilege?

“Beſides, upon theſe Principles of Reſtraint, what muſt become of the Northern Nations, and thoſe of Affrick within the Tropick? What muſt become of 'em, I ſay, where Wine is not imported, nor the Growth of their Country? Are theſe People to be barr'd the Sacrament, and receive under neither Kind, becauſe they can't have it under both? Or can we ſuppoſe the Integrity of our Saviour's Body, or the intire Sacrament, is not convey'd under one Kind?

“When the People began firſt to leave off the Primitive Uſuage, and communicate in the Bread only, is to us uncertain: But 'tis probable our Anceſtors went upon the Authority of Scripture in the Change of this Cuſtom: Upon the Authority of Scripture, I ſay, which mentions the Communion ſometimes given under one Kind, by our Saviour and his Apoſtles: Being ſupported by ſuch infallible Precedents, 'tis our Opinion, Chriſtians of former Ages declin'd the receiving the Cup, for fear the precious Blood of our Saviour might be ſpilt. Neither can we believe our Lord, who has promis'd to be with his Church to the End of the World, wou'd have withdrawn his Direction for ſo many Ages, ſuffer'd it to fall into ſo great an Error: And yet this muſt have been the Caſe, if there had been a plain Precept for every one to receive always under both Kinds.

“The Practice of the Greek Church in this Matter is not clear to us: However 'tis certain thoſe Chriſtians are almoſt Slaves to the Turks, and under ſeveral Reſtraints as to their Religion. For they are neither allow'd to preach publickly, to have Bells in their Churches, to carry the Croſs, nor go in publick Proceſſion.

“Laſtly, It ought to be particularly obſerv'd, that thro' all Chriſtendom upon Good Fryday both the Prieſt and the People communicate only in the Bread, and not in the Wine: The Reaſon is, becauſe on that Day the Death of Chriſt is more eminently repreſented: On that Day his precious Blood was ſhed for our Salvation, and ſeparated from his Body. To repreſent the Memory of this with more Force and Advantage, 'tis the Cuſtom of the whole Congregation, both Prieſt and People, to receive under one Kind: Which Uſuage wou'd never have been brought upon the univerſal Church, unleſs Chriſt had been entirely contain'd under one Kind, and the giving the Communion to the Laity in that Manner, had been believ'd lawful.

Of Private Maſſes.

Of Private Maſſes.

“Under this Head you complain of a great many Abuſes; that it is, as it were, the Baſis and Support of the Papacy: That it has led the way to Indulgences, pick'd People's Pockets, made a Gain of Godlineſs, increas'd the Monks to a troubleſome Number, and made the Word of God of none Effect. That for theſe Reaſons the Princes of Germany have reſtor'd the primitive Practice, tranſlated the Service into the vulgar Language, and guarded the Celebration with Solemnity and Reverence: But as for private Maſſes, which open'd a Paſſage to ſo many ill Conſequences, you have wholly ſuppreſs'd them. Now we having ſpent no little time upon this Subject, muſt remind you in the firſt Place, that our Saviour never inſtituted any thing in his Church, which the Devil has not endeavour'd to draw towards Abuſe and Diſappointment: But things well and wiſely eſtabliſh'd are not to be ſet aſide becauſe they paſs thro' the Hands of People liable to Miſcarriage: Upon this Reaſoning all the Sacraments ought to be diſus'd. But in our Opinion, 'tis a much better way to remove the Abuſes, and retain ſuch Cuſtoms as were firſt begun upon Motives of Piety and Service.

“Your Argument for ſuppreſſing private Maſſes, becauſe Aquinas, Gabriel, and other Schoolmen, have launch'd out into impious Doctrine, and flouriſh'd extravagantly upon the opus operatum, won't do: For whatever Heterodoxies they may be guilty of, affects Maſſes in general, and not private ones only. If private Maſſes therefore were to be laid aſide, to prevent the keeping up their Doctrine; for the ſame Reaſon, we muſt have no publick Maſs neither, which is more than you will allow. But if things are cloſely examined, private Maſs will amount to a ſort of private Communion; where if Circumſtances are duly manag'd; if the Laity there preſent are under Diſpoſitions for Repentance; if they are heartily ſorry for their Sins, and addreſs to God for his Pardon; if they preſent themſelves a living Sacrifice acceptable to God, there is no queſtion, but that they communicate with the Prieſt in a Spiritual Manner, tho' their Number is ſmall, and they abſtain from a Corporal Receiving *. For this Reaſon private Maſſes are ſo far from diſſerving the Church, that they are conſiderably inſtrumental for the Correction of Manners, and the ſtrengthening of Faith. Thus Chriſtians are

Rom. 12.

---

* A corporali ſacramenti ſumptione,

“brought to a daily Acknowledgment of their Faults, apply conſtantly for Pardon, riſe by Repentance upon every Slip: And by this frequent Recovery of their Ground, and Conqueſt upon the Enemy, they are better animated for a farther Encounter.

“Farther, At the beginning of every private Maſs, there is a general Confeſſion of Sin, God is addreſs'd for Pardon, and the Sacerdotal Abſolution given, no leſs than when the Service is publick.

“And ſuppoſing this Service never ſo publick and ſolemn, yet if none of the Congregation is diſpoſed to communicate with the Prieſt, what Difference is there between this and a private Maſs? Or is the Prieſt oblig'd not to celebrate publick Maſs, becauſe none of the People will communicate with him? And even among the Chriſtians of the Greek Church, where you own there is publick Maſs every Sunday, the People very ſeldom communicate with the Prieſt, as we have been told by credible Perſons, who have been at their Service.

“As to your Teſtimony from Epiphanius, that the Communion was receiv'd thrice a Week in Aſia, in his Time; and that this Cuſtom ſtood upon Apoſtolical Authority: To this we anſwer, That ſince by your own Confeſſion, this thrice a Week, is brought to once every Sunday in the Greek Church; we deſire to know, that if an Apoſtolical Uſuage may be thus alter'd to the ſeldom-ſide; why may it not be chang'd as well upon the Degrees of Frequency? Why mayn't the Intervals of Devotion be leſſen'd, ſince by this Practice, the Memory of Chriſt's Death is more ſerviceably refreſh'd? Now this is the Buſineſs and Deſign of private Maſſes.

“For if our Saviour inſtituted this Sacrament to preſerve the Memory of his Death, as 'tis ſaid, Do This in Remembrance of me, then the Frequency of the Performance beſt anſwers the Command: For Frequency and Repetition are the beſt Security againſt Forgetfulneſs; and from hence we may conclude the Uſefulneſs of private Maſſes.

“The Apoſtle St. Paul calls private Families of Believers by the Name of the Church: Now I deſire to know whether the Church, under any Denomination, may be refus'd the Communion of our Lord's Body? For our Saviour, at the Inſtitution of this Sacrament has ſaid, As often as ye do this, do it in Remembrance of me. Thus we ſee there is no Reſtraint upon the Performance either for Time or Place. How then can we refuſe any Perſon the Benefit of private Maſſes, and remit him to Holydays and publick Communion? How can he be thus refus'd, when our Saviour has left him at Liberty as to Time, provided Solemnity and other due Circumſtances are not wanting? For had we been tied to Regards of Time, our Saviour, who was the Wiſdom of the Father, wou'd not have expreſs'd himſelf in ſo indefinite a manner.

“In the firſt Beginnings of Chriſtianity, the Communion was celebrated every Day in private Houſes, as St. Luke informs us; And they continued daily with one Accord in the Temple, and breaking Bread from Houſe to Houſe: Which breaking of Bread, according to the Fathers, was receiving the Communion. Luke 2. 46.

“And as to your Citation from St. Chryſoſtom, where the Prieſt is repreſented ſtanding at the Altar to invite ſome, and refuſe others; here the Father deſcribes the Cuſtom at publick Communions, which in the Primitive Ages were more frequent than afterwards. However, this Cuſtom of the Prieſt's ſtanding at the Altar for the Purpoſes abovemention'd, is ſtill obſerv'd at Eaſter, when all the People communicate. But then St. Chryſoſtom's expoſtulating with the Congregation, for not communicating to the Frequency of the Cuſtom, does not amount to a Diſallowance of private Maſſes.

“We grant the Canon of the Council of Nice, which you mention, orders the Deacons ſhall be plac'd behind the Prieſts at a publick Communion; but neither that Canon, nor any other, declares againſt private Maſſes.

“You think the Sacrament of the holy Euchariſt is no Sacrifice: Your Reaſon is, becauſe the Death of our Saviour is the only propitiatory Sacrifice; and ſince he was once offer'd for us, and Death hath no more Dominion over him, your Inference is, there's no other Sacrifice under Chriſtianity, excepting that of ſpiritual Worſhip: That is, the Righteouſneſs of Faith, and the Fruits of Faith. What the Righteouſneſs which is by Faith means, we underſtand very well from St. Paul, who oppoſes it to the Righteouſneſs of the Moſaick Law. And tho' the Scripture is not clear in ſetting down the Fruits or Effects of Faith; yet that Faith it ſelf, Charity, and many other Vertues, are the Fruits of the Spirit, is beyond Queſtion. But to come cloſer, we can't but wonder any Perſon ſhou'd ſcruple calling the Maſs a Sacrifice, ſince 'tis cuſtomary to all the Latin and Greek Fathers to give it this Name: Their Reaſon is, becauſe the Elements are there conſecrated into the Body and Blood of our Saviour, in Remembrance of his Death; who, as St. Paul ſpeaks, having offer'd himſelf a Sacrifice for Sin, for ever ſate down at the Right-Hand of God: For by one Offering he has perfected for ever them that are ſanctified. Heb. 10. 12, 14. Therefore, if our Saviour is both Prieſt, Sacrifice, and Propitiation, it follows, wherever our Saviour is preſent, our Sacrifice muſt be there alſo. Now if the Body and Blood of Chriſt are really preſent in the Sacrament of the Altar, how can it be deny'd we have there no Sacrifice?

“Farther, in regard Chriſt our Sacrifice is preſent in the Maſs, ſince we who are his Body, offer up our ſelves a living Sacrifice in Conjunction with our Head; the Greek Fathers call the holy Action, ἀναίμακτον θυσίαν an unbloody Sacrifice. Thus for Inſtance, 'tis call'd by St. Baſil, St. Chryſoſtom, St. Jerom, and St. Auſtin. Now if we ſhould ſtand off from an Expreſſion ſo recommended by Antiquity, may we not be juſtly ſuſpected to draw towards the Opinion of the Sacramentaries and Anabaptiſts? Now as we declare our ſelves very different in our Belief from theſe Noveliſts, ſo we deſire to give no Occaſion to Calumny and Miſreport.

“Now ſince both Prieſt and People approach this Solemnity with Contrition, and purſuant to the Apoſtle's Exhortation, preſent themſelves a living Sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God. Rom. 12. 1. Since the holy Performance conſiſts in Praiſe and Thankſgiving, why mayn't the Maſs be defenſibly call'd a Sacrifice upon this Reaſon? Does not the Prophet mention a Sacrifice of “ Praiſe ? And does not St. Paul exhort all the Faithful to preſent themſelves a living Sacrifice ?

“ Laſtly, The Prophet Malachi deſcribing the Advantage of the Chriſtian Diſpenſation, tells us in the Perſon of God, from the riſing of the Sun, even to the going down of the ſame, my Name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place Incenſe ſhall be offer'd unto my Name, and a pure Offering : For my Name ſhall be great among the Heathen, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. Now we wou'd gladly know, what other pure Oblation is every where offer'd among the Gentiles, excepting that of our bleſſed Saviour ? Or what other Sacrifice is in uſe among the Chriſtians, excepting that of the Maſs, where the Death of Chriſt is commemorated ? Now there muſt either be ſome Sacrifice kept up among the Chriſtians, or the Prophet has fail'd in this Prediction. But what pure Oblation can be pretended, excepting Chriſt our Paſſover, who is preſent in the Sacrament of the Altar, under the Species of Bread and Wine ? For whatever elſe we can offer unto God, does by no means deſerve the Name of a pure Offering. For all our Righteouſneſs as the Prophet ſpeaks, is ſtain'd with Blemiſh, and full of Defects *.

Mal. 1. 11.

By this Anſwer of the King's, we may perceive Tunſtal was a Prelate of no ordinary Learning and Capacity: Where he maintains the wrong ſide of the Queſtion, he gives ſtrong Colours, and makes the moſt of the Argument. When I ſay this, I inſinuate nothing againſt his Sincerity: I am willing to believe, he thought his Expoſition of Scripture good, his Inferences well drawn, and his Proofs ſatisfactory. For Prejudices of Education, and Doctrines generally received for ſome Length of Time, are apt to give an inſenſible Biaſs, affect a good Head, and ſurprize an honeſt Underſtanding.

Images and Relicks expoſed, and the Religious charged with Impoſture.

The King having the Diſſolution of the remaining Monaſteries in view, thought it neceſſary to leſſen their Reputation, to lay open the Superſtition of their Worſhip, and draw a Charge of Impoſture upon ſome of them: And here it muſt be ſaid, he was not without a Colour for his Proceedings. For Relicks had been for ſome time too much magnified, and many of 'em were counterfeited; Images were ſuppoſed to be more ſignificant in one place than another; and in ſhort, the People were drawn to tedious Pilgrimages, to viſionary Hopes, and Miſapplication in their Devotions. To mention ſome of theſe religious Curioſities : The bleſſed Virgin's Girdle was ſhewn in Seven different Places, and her Milk in Eight. The Bell of St. Guthlac, and the Felt of St. Thomas of Lancaſter, were counted ſovereign Remedies for the Head-Ach. By the way, this Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, was one of the Rebellious Barons in Edward the Second's Time, and executed for High Treaſon (w).

To proceed : The Penknife and Boots of Arch-biſhop Becket, and a Piece of his Shirt was much valued by Women with Child. The Coals that roaſted St. Laurence, two or three Heads of St. Urſula, Malchus's Ear, and the Paring of St. Edmund's Nails, were of ſuperſtitious Regard. To theſe we may add the Figure of an Angel with one Wing, which brought over the Spear's Head which pierc'd our Saviour's Side : An Image of our Lady, with a Taper in her Hand, which burnt nine Years together without waſting, till at laſt 'twas put out by Perjury. This upon Examination was diſcovered to be nothing but a piece of Wood. Our Lady of Worceſter was another Piece of Impoſture : For after her Habit and Dreſs was taken off, the Figure was quite of another kind, and repreſented a Biſhop ten Foot high. Beſides theſe and ſome others, there were two remarkable Rarities which muſt not be forgotten. One of 'em was the Rood of Grace at Boxley in Kent. There was ſo much of a Machine in this Figure, that the Eyes wou'd turn, and the Lips move upon Occaſion. 'Twas publickly expoſed at Paul's-Croſs, by Hilſley Biſhop of Rocheſter, and there knock'd in Pieces. The other was a Relick at Hales in Glouceſterſhire. Here 'twas pretended the Blood of our Saviour brought from Jeruſalem had been kept for ſeveral Ages. 'Twas ſaid, if a Man was in mortal Sin, and had not received Abſolution, he cou'd not ſee the Relick, which otherwiſe, to a Perſon under pious Qualifications, was viſible enough. To prepare therefore for the Sight of the Miracle, 'twas the Cuſtom to confeſs to a Prieſt, and offer at the Altar, before the Relick was ſhewn. This pretended Blood of our Saviour, was kept in a Chryſtal, very thick on one ſide, but very thin and tranſparent on the other. If a wealthy Perſon appear'd, they turn'd the thick ſide, where the Eye cou'd reach nothing: This, as 'tis ſaid, was done to open his Heart and his Pocket. For when he had bought as many Maſſes, and preſented as far as they thought fit, they turn'd the thin ſide, and then the Blood appear'd. And this, as William Thomas Clerk, of the Council to Edward the Sixth, ſays, was no better than the Blood of a Duck renew'd every Week.

Beſides theſe, the Figures of our Lady of Walſingham, Ipſwich, Penrice, Iſlington, St. John Oſulſton, and ſome others, were publickly burnt. There was alſo a gigantick Image call'd Darvel-Catharine, brought out of North-Wales, where there was an old Propheſy, That a whole Wood ſhou'd be burnt down by it. It happen'd at that time, that one Forreſt, a Franciſcan, was condemn'd for Hereſie and High-Treaſon. Tho' by what Law they cou'd ſtretch his Crime to Hereſie, is hard to diſcover. For he was try'd only for diſſuading his Penitents in Confeſſion, from owning the King's Supremacy. However, this Reign governing ſomething at Diſcretion, Forreſt was hang'd, and the Statue kindled under him ; and by this rigorous Execution, the Propheſie was fulfilled in a Jingle (x).

The miſtaken Reliance and ſuperſtitious Practice, with reſpect to Images and Relicks, is not to be deny'd : But whether the Impoſtures abovemention'd are Matter of Fact will be a Queſtion : For William Thomas cited by the Lord Herbert, is ſomewhat an exceptionable Authority. He wrote the Book call'd Il pelerine Ingleſe, in Juſtification of King Henry's Proceedings; but by the Account which he gives of Arch-biſhop Becket, 'tis plain he was either biaſs'd, or groſsly miſtaken. This will be ſhewn by and by.

To proceed : As the Intereſt of the Monaſteries ſunk, the King's Project grew more feaſible. He went on therefore againſt the Abuſes of Pilgrimages, and the Offering at the Shrines of the Saints. And here Biſhop Godwyn obſerves, the King was ſtrongly diſpoſed to promote a Reformation that wou'd turn the Penny, and furniſh the Exchequer. Now, at ſome of the moſt celebrated Tombs, there were very rich Preſents Godwyn, Annal.

---

*Cotton. Lib. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 215.

(w) Sir Thomas de la More, in vit. Ed. 2.

(x) Godwyn Annal. A. D. 1538. Ld. Herbert, p. 431, 432.

Archbiſhop Becket's Tomb defac'd and the Treaſure ſeiz'd by the King.

ſents made; many of which were kept in Honour both of the Saint and his Votaries. Among theſe, Archbiſhop Becket's Tomb was one of the moſt famous in England: 'Twas a ſtately Mauſoleum, and ornamented with Gold and Jewels of a prodigious Value. The King order'd this Monument to be defac'd. The Treaſure was not his only Motive: He was willing, 'tis likely, to ſtrike at the Reputation of this Prelate, and bring a Diſgrace upon his Memory. For Becket's Character, 'tis plain, muſt be ſomewhat unſerviceable to the Regal Supremacy; and tho' this Claim was not ſet up by the Crown at that time of Day, yet the Archbiſhop conteſted very warmly for the Privileges of the Church with Henry the Second. And tho' his Conduct in this Diſpute was not altogether defenſible, he was far however from being guilty of that groſs Miſmanagement with which he is charg'd. William Thomas affirms, “That upon his retiring to the Pope, the King and Kingdom was excommunicated, and put under an Interdict upon his Account (y). And that for four Years together, both Maſs, and other publick Service was wholly diſcontinued (z). But this Relation is altogether Miſtake: For there was no Excommunication, or any other Cenſure diſcharg'd by the Pope, either againſt the King or Kingdom. On the contrary, the Pope being apprehenſive of loſing the Engliſh Nation, applied to Lenitives, avoided exaſperating the King, and endeavour'd to put an End to the Conteſt (a).

Becket miſreported.

(y) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 243.

(z) Ld. Herbert, p. 438.

(a) See my Church Hiſtory, vol. 1. from p. 365, to p. 375.

The King order'd Becket's Bones to be burnt, and ſeiz'd the vaſt Treaſure offer'd at his Shrine. We need not wonder the Wealth of this Tomb ſhou'd encreaſe to ſo vaſt a Bulk, if we conſider, that ſince the Reign of King Henry II. few Perſons of Condition went to Canterbury without viſiting Becket's Tomb, and making Preſents of Value. Among others, there was one almoſt ineſtimable Stone offer'd by Lewis the Seventh of “France. This our King had ſet in a Ring, and wore it on his Thumb. Biſhop Godwyn reports, there were two large Cheſts full of Gold and Jewels ſecur'd for the King; each of which were ſo heavy, that they had eight Men to carry them out of the Church.

The Monaſtery of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, ſeiz'd.

About this time the King ſeiz'd the rich Monaſtery of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, frighted away the Monks, kept ſome part of their Eſtates, and gave away the reſt among his Courtiers. As to Archbiſhop Becket, beſides burning his Bones, carrying off the Treaſure, and defacing his Monument, he order'd his Name to be raz'd out of the Calendar, and forbad the keeping his Holyday (b).

(b) Godwyn. Annal. Ld. Herbert, p. 437.

A Tranſlation of the Bible publiſhed for general uſe.

The King, tho' not giving Satisfaction to the German Divines, went on with the Reformation his own way: And having been often ſolicited for a Tranſlation of the Bible, referred the Direction of that Affair to Cromwell. When the Verſion was finiſh'd, it was put into the Hands of Richard Grafton (c); and for want of good Paper in England, the Copy was ſent to Paris, and printed there in Latin and Engliſh. To make way for the Uſe of this Tranſlation, and govern the Curioſity of the People, the King publiſhed a Proclamation, by which he gave them to underſtand, that the Permiſſion of this Tranſlation was more than his Duty required; that the Subjects were to look upon this Liberty as an Inſtance of Favour and royal Bounty; that therefore they were to manage themſelves in reading with Temper and Diſcretion; to conſult the holy Text for the Improvement of their Morals, and the Increaſe of their Faith, and not for Diſputes and Wrangling. That no Perſon ſhould read aloud to diſturb the Prieſt at Divine Service, nor preſume to expound difficult Places, without Aſſiſtance from the Learned.

(c) Ld. Herbert, p. 431.

Ibid.

Cromwell's Injunctions in the King's Name, were likewiſe publiſh'd for the ſame Purpoſe (d). By this Order a Bible of the largeſt Volume, was to be provided for every Pariſh-Church, at the joint Charge of the Parſon and Pariſhoners. No Perſon was to be diſcouraged from reading, or hearing the Scriptures; but on the contrary, exhorted to improve themſelves from thence. Every Sunday and Holiday, the Parſon was to repeat a Sentence out of the Lord's-Prayer or Creed, in Engliſh, till the People had learned the whole by heart; and at the Confeſſion of Penitence in Lent, they were to examine them upon theſe Heads, and not admit them to the Holy Communion till they came up to Expectation. The Clergy were likewiſe ordered to remove ſuch Images as had been ſuperſtitiouſly applied to Pilgrimages and Offerings, or treated with over-proportioned Regard. To this purpoſe they were not to ſuffer any Candles or Tapers to be ſet before any Image, but only the Light by the Roodloft, the Light before the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Light about the Sepulchre: Theſe were allowed to ſtand for the ornamenting the Church, and the Solemnity of Divine Service. However, to guard the People from miſtaking theſe Matters, the Curates were to inſtruct them, that the Uſe of Images was only to inform the unlearned in the Hiſtory of the Saints, and to refreſh their Memory for Imitation. That to go farther in their Addreſs and Veneration, was to fall into Idolatry, to the Hazard of their Salvation. That they were to let no Man have the uſe of their Pulpits, unleſs he had the King's, the Archbiſhop's, the Vicegerent's, or the Dioceſan's Licenſe. That every Parſon, Vicar, or Curate, was to furniſh a Book to regiſter Weddings, Burials, and Chriſtenings. That no Parſon ſhould take upon him to change any Faſt-day as to the manner of keeping it, the Vigils of ſuch Holydays, now abrogated, excepted. The knolling of the Aves after Service, and certain other times introduced by the Pretence of the Biſhop of Rome's Pardon, are from henceforth to be omitted, leſt the People ſhould depend upon their Pardon for ſaying their Aves as they had formerly done. And whereas in times paſt, it hath been cuſtomary at Proceſſions in ſeveral Places, to ſing Ora pro nobis to ſo many Saints, that they had no time to make immediate Application to God Almighty, in the Suffrages, Parce nobis, Domine, & Libera nos, Domine: The People were therefore to be inſtructed, 'twere better for them to omit the Ora pro nobis, and repeat the other. The reſt of Cromwell's Injunctions having been touched upon other Occaſions, or are not ſo material, ſhall be omitted.

(d) Regiſt. Cranmer. Cromwell's Injunctions.

A. D. 1538.

Theſe Changes in Religion, tho' commendable, excepting in Cromwell's Office, were diſreliſhed abroad: By ſaying this, I do not undertake a defence of every thing. The latter part eſpecially of this Reign was not without an exceptionable mixture. The diſſolving the leſſer Monaſteries, and ſome rigorous Executions had weakned the King's Correſpondence with the Courts of France and Spain. His Highneſs not being willing to break

Bonner diſobligeth the French King.

He is recalled from his Embaſſy.

break off with the French King, recalled Bonner Biſhop of Hereford from his Embaſſy with the Emperour, and employed him in France in Gardiner's room. For this Prelate it ſeems had a ſecret Inclination for the Emperour, and did his Maſter little Service with that Prince. Bonner, tho' coldly received by the French King, procured a Licenſe for Printing the Engliſh Bible at Paris. This Favour being afterwards complained of by the French Clergy, gave ſome Interruption to the Work (e). Bonner, as it happen'd, was unſucceſsful in his Character at the French Court. He had Inſtructions to demand a Penſion due to the King, and which had been unpaid by the French for four Years. This was unacceptable Buſineſs, and required nice Management: But Bonner being of a warm Temper, failed in the decency of Behaviour, and made his Demands with a ſurprizing and haughty Air. This unexpected Management tranſported Francis to ſomething of Reſentment, and made him treat the Ambaſſadour and the King with rough Language. However, to prevent a War, he ſent an Expreſs to England to mollifie the King, and explain himſelf, deſiring at the ſame time that Bonner might be recalled. Our King believing that Prelate would make nothing of his Character in France, ordered his Return. However, that he was not diſſatisfied with Bonner's Conduct, appears by his preferring him afterwards to the See of London, and employing him at the Emperour's Court.

Lambert proſecuted for Hereſie, and tried before the King.

In November this Year, one John Lambert, alias Nicolſon, a Perſon of Learning, was proſecuted for Hereſy. He had been queſtioned for unſound Opinions by Archbiſhop Warrham; but upon the Death of that Prelate, and the changing of Counſels at Court, he procured a Diſcharge. He kept School at London, and hearing Dr. Taylor, afterwards Biſhop of Lincoln, preach for the Corporal Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, he came to him, declared his Diſſent from that Doctrine, and drew up his Exceptions in ten Arguments. This Paper was ſhewed by Taylor to Dr. Barnes; Barnes who was bred among the Lutherans, was, it ſeems, made a Proſelyte to their Warmth, as well as their Opinions. He thought their falling lower than Conſubſtantiation, would check the Progreſs of the Reformation in England: Theſe Doctors therefore, Barnes and Taylor, carrried Lambert's Papers to Cranmer and Latimer: When Lambert was brought before them, they endeavoured to work him to a Recantation, but all to no purpoſe; he reſolved to ſtand by his Paper, and appeal'd to the King (f).

It is ſaid Cranmer at that time was of Luther's Opinion, which he had drunk in from his Friend Oſiander: Our Hiſtorian affirms that Latimer was of the ſame Belief. Firſt as to Latimer, he miſreports his Opinion: For at the Diſputation at Oxford in Queen Mary's Reign, when Dr. Weſton reproach'd him, that he agreed with the Lutherans in the Doctrine of the Euchariſt, Latimer anſwer'd no: “ I was a Papiſt, for I could never perceive “ how Luther could defend his Opinion without “ Tranſubſtantiation *. Then as to Cranmer, he cannot be ſuppoſed to be of Luther's Opinion at this time, with reſpect to the Sacrament of the Altar, without a Mark of Inſincerity. For as this Hiſtorian obſerves in the Book called the Neceſſary Erudition, &c. Publiſh'd by the King in the Year 1543, Tranſubſtantiation was fully aſſerted †: And yet this Book was ſubſcrib'd by Cranmer ‖. If therefore Cranmer believ'd Conſubſtantiation, when he ſubſcrib'd Tranſubſtantiation, he muſt have been a Perſon of a ſcandalous Conſcience, which is too hard a Reflection upon him.

The King received the Appeal, and, it may be, was not unpleaſed with the Opportunity for ſhewing his Zeal and Learning. The Biſhops and Temporal Nobility had notice given them of the Solemnity of this Tryal, that the King intended to appear, and manage ſome part of the Argument. At the day prefix'd, beſides the Quality juſt mentioned, the Judges, the King's Counſel, with great numbers of Spectators came to Weſtminſter-Hall, where Scaffolds were erected for the convenience of hearing; the Biſhops were ſeated on the King's right Hand, and behind them the Judges, and the moſt eminent of the Profeſſion of the Law: The Temporal Nobility ſat on his Highneſs's left Hand, and after them the Gentlemen of the Court.

The Trial open'd by Day Bp. of Chicheſter.

When the Priſoner was brought to the Bar, Day Biſhop of Chicheſter being commanded by the King to open the Tryal, ſet forth, “ That Lambert “ being charged with Heretical Pravity, had ap“ pealed from his Biſhop to the King, as if he “ expected more Favour from this Application, “ and that the King would protect an Heretick: “ From whence it appeared, that the Report of “ the Priſoner's being infected with the Lutheran “ Novelties, had too much Truth in it; then “ ſpeaking directly, as in the King's Perſon, he “ dilates upon the Progreſs already made in the “ Reformation. That he had thrown off the U“ ſurpations of the See of Rome, diſcharged and “ diſincorporated ſome idle Monks, who lived on“ ly like Drones in a Beehive: That he had re“ moved the idolatrous Regard for Images, pub“ liſhed the Bible in Engliſh for the Inſtruction of “ all his Subjects, and made ſome leſſer Alterati“ ons in the Church, which no body could deny “ were for the publick Intereſt. But as for other “ things, he was reſolved to keep conſtant to “ the Catholick Faith and Cuſtoms: That he “ was very deſirous the Priſoner would retract “ his Errors, and return to the Catholick “ Communion. That for this purpoſe, and to “ prevent the Extremities which would other“ wiſe follow, he had ordered the Appearance of “ thoſe grave and learned Men (meaning the “ Biſhops) hoping, that by the advantage of “ their Character, and force of their Reaſoning, “ they would recover him to the Church, and “ wreſt his unfortunate Opinion from him. “ But in caſe he was not to be removed from his “ Obſtinacy, but continued proof againſt Con“ viction, he was reſolved to make him an Ex“ ample; and by a Precedent of his own ſetting, “ acquaint his Judges and the Magiſtracy, how “ they ought to manage Hereſie, and behave them“ ſelves upon ſuch occaſions (g).

When Biſhop Day had delivered his Majeſty's Senſe to this effect, the King himſelf asked Lambert what his Opinion was concerning Chriſt's Preſence in the Sacrament of the Altar? Lambert not returning an acceptable Anſwer, they began to argue the Point, and oppoſe the Priſoner in the forms of Logick. To be ſomewhat more particular, Lambert enter'd upon his Defence with ſome introductive Reſpect, acknowledged the King's Goodneſs for condeſcending to appear perſonally at the Tryal; and here he threw in ſome commending Expreſſions of his Highneſs's, Learning and Judgment. The King interrupting him, told him in Latin, that he did not come thither to hear any Panegyrick upon himſelf;

(e) Ld. Herbert, p. 433.

(f) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 252.

* Fox 1877.

† Bp. Burnet pt. 1. p. 290.

‖ Id. p. 299.

(g) Godwyn. Annal. An. 1538.

ſents made; many of which were kept in Honour both of the Saint and his Votaries. Among theſe, Archbiſhop Becket's Tomb was one of the moſt famous in England: 'Twas a ſtately Mauſoleum, and ornamented with Gold and Jewels of a prodigious Value. The King order'd this Monument to be defac'd. The Treaſure was not his only Motive: He was willing, 'tis likely, to ſtrike at the Reputation of this Prelate, and bring a Diſgrace upon his Memory. For Becket's Character, 'tis plain, muſt be ſomewhat unſerviceable to the Regal Supremacy; and tho' this Claim was not ſet up by the Crown at that time of Day, yet the Archbiſhop conteſted very warmly for the Privileges of the Church with Henry the Second. And tho' his Conduct in this Diſpute was not altogether defenſible, he was far however from being guilty of that groſs Miſmanagement with which he is charg'd. William Thomas affirms, "That upon "his retiring to the Pope, the King and Kingdom was excommunicated, and put under an "Interdict upon his Account (y). And that for "four Years together, both Maſs, and other "publick Service was wholly diſcontinued (z). But this Relation is altogether Miſtake: For there was no Excommunication, or any other Cenſure diſcharg'd by the Pope, either againſt the King or Kingdom. On the contrary, the Pope being apprehenſive of loſing the Engliſh Nation, applied to Lenitives, avoided exaſperating the King, and endeavour'd to put an End to the Conteſt (a).

Archbiſhop Becket's Tomb defac'd and the Treaſure ſeiz'd by the King.

Becket miſreported.

The King order'd Becket's Bones to be burnt, and ſeiz'd the vaſt Treaſure offer'd at his Shrine. We need not wonder the Wealth of this Tomb ſhou'd encreaſe to ſo vaſt a Bulk, if we conſider, that ſince the Reign of King Henry II. few Perſons of Condition went to Canterbury without viſiting Becket's Tomb, and making Preſents of Value. Among others, there was one almoſt ineſtimable Stone offer'd by Lewis the Seventh of "France. This our King had ſet in a Ring, and wore it on his Thumb. Biſhop Godwyn reports, there were two large Cheſts full of Gold and Jewels ſecur'd for the King; each of which were ſo heavy, that they had eight Men to carry them out of the Church.

The Monaſtery of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, ſeiz'd.

About this time the King ſeiz'd the rich Monaſtery of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, frighted away the Monks, kept ſome part of their Eſtates, and gave away the reſt among his Courtiers. As to Archbiſhop Becket, beſides burning his Bones, carrying off the Treaſure, and defacing his Monument, he order'd his Name to be raz'd out of the Calendar, and forbad the keeping his Holyday (b).

A Tranſlation of the Bible publiſhed for general uſe.

The King, tho' not giving Satisfaction to the German Divines, went on with the Reformation his own way: And having been often ſolicited for a Tranſlation of the Bible, referred the Direction of that Affair to Cromwell. When the Verſion was finiſh'd, it was put into the Hands of Richard Grafton (c); and for want of good Paper in England, the Copy was ſent to Paris, and printed there in Latin and Engliſh. To make way for the Uſe of this Tranſlation, and govern the Curioſity of the People, the King publiſhed a Proclamation, by which he gave them to underſtand, that the Permiſſion of this Tranſlation was more than his Duty required; that the Subjects were to look upon this Liberty as an Inſtance of Favour and royal Bounty; that therefore they were to manage themſelves in reading with Temper and Diſcretion; to conſult the holy Text for the Improvement of their Morals, and the Increaſe of their Faith, and not for Diſputes and Wrangling. That no Perſon ſhould read aloud to diſturb the Prieſt at Divine Service, nor preſume to expound difficult Places, without Aſſiſtance from the Learned.

Ibid.

Cromwell's Injunctions.

Cromwell's Injunctions in the King's Name, were likewiſe publiſh'd for the ſame Purpoſe (d). By this Order a Bible of the largeſt Volume, was to be provided for every Pariſh-Church, at the joint Charge of the Parſon and Pariſhoners. No Perſon was to be diſcouraged from reading, or hearing the Scriptures; but on the contrary, exhorted to improve themſelves from thence. Every Sunday and Holiday, the Parſon was to repeat a Sentence out of the Lord's-Prayer or Creed, in Engliſh, till the People had learned the whole by heart; and at the Confeſſion of Penitence in Lent, they were to examine them upon theſe Heads, and not admit them to the Holy Communion till they came up to Expectation. The Clergy were likewiſe ordered to remove ſuch Images as had been ſuperſtitiouſly applied to Pilgrimages and Offerings, or treated with over-proportioned Regard. To this purpoſe they were not to ſuffer any Candles or Tapers to be ſet before any Image, but only the Light by the Roodloft, the Light before the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Light about the Sepulchre: Theſe were allowed to ſtand for the ornamenting the Church, and the Solemnity of Divine Service. However, to guard the People from miſtaking theſe Matters, the Curates were to inſtruct them, that the Uſe of Images was only to inform the unlearned in the Hiſtory of the Saints, and to refreſh their Memory for Imitation. That to go farther in their Addreſs and Veneration, was to fall into Idolatry, to the Hazard of their Salvation. That they were to let no Man have the uſe of their Pulpits, unleſs he had the King's, the Archbiſhop's, the Vicegerent's, or the Dioceſan's Licenſe. That every Parſon, Vicar, or Curate, was to furniſh a Book to regiſter Weddings, Burials, and Chriſtenings. That no Parſon ſhould take upon him to change any Faſt-day as to the manner of keeping it, the Vigils of ſuch Holydays, now abrogated, excepted. The knolling of the Aves after Service, and certain other times introduced by the Pretence of the Biſhop of Rome's Pardon, are from henceforth to be omitted, leſt the People ſhould depend upon their Pardon for ſaying their Aves as they had formerly done. And whereas in times paſt, it hath been cuſtomary at Proceſſions in ſeveral Places, to ſing Ora pro nobis to ſo many Saints, that they had no time to make immediate Application to God Almighty, in the Suffrages, Parce nobis, Domine, & Libera nos, Domine: The People were therefore to be inſtructed, 'twere better for them to omit the Ora pro nobis, and repeat the other. The reſt of Cromwell's Injunctions having been touched upon other Occaſions, or are not ſo material, ſhall be omitted.

A. D. 1538.

Theſe Changes in Religion, tho' commendable, excepting in Cromwell's Office, were diſreliſhed abroad: By ſaying this, I do not undertake a defence of every thing. The latter part eſpecially of this Reign was not without an exceptionable mixture. The diſſolving the leſſer Monaſteries, and ſome rigorous Executions had weakned the King's Correſpondence with the Courts of France and Spain. His Highneſs not being willing to break off with the French King, recalled Bonner Biſhop of Hereford from his Embaſſy with the Emperour, and employed him in France in Gardiner's room. For this Prelate it ſeems had a ſecret Inclination for the Emperour, and did his Maſter little Service with that Prince. Bonner, tho' coldly received by the French King, procured a Licenſe for Printing the Engliſh Bible at Paris. This Favour being afterwards complained of by the French Clergy, gave ſome Interruption to the Work (e). Bonner, as it happen'd, was unſucceſsful in his Character at the French Court. He had Inſtructions to demand a Penſion due to the King, and which had been unpaid by the French for four Years. This was unacceptable Buſineſs, and required nice Management: But Bonner being of a warm Temper, failed in the decency of Behaviour, and made his Demands with a ſurprizing and haughty Air. This unexpected Management tranſported Francis to ſomething of Reſentment, and made him treat the Ambaſſadour and the King with rough Language. However, to prevent a War, he ſent an Expreſs to England to mollifie the King, and explain himſelf, deſiring at the ſame time that Bonner might be recalled. Our King believing that Prelate would make nothing of his Character in France, ordered his Return. However, that he was not diſſatisfied with Bonner's Conduct, appears by his preferring him afterwards to the See of London, and employing him at the Emperour's Court.

(y) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 243.

(z) Ld. Herbert, p. 438.

(a) See my Church Hiſtory, vol. 1. from p. 365, to p. 375.

(b) Godwyn. Annal. Ld. Herbert, p. 437.

(c) Ld. Herbert, p. 431.

(d) Regiſt. Cranmer.

Bonner diſobligeth the French King.

He is recalled from his Embaſſy.

In November this Year, one John Lambert, alias Nicolſon, a Perſon of Learning, was proſecuted for Hereſy. He had been queſtioned for unſound Opinions by Archbiſhop Warham; but upon the Death of that Prelate, and the changing of Counſels at Court, he procured a Diſcharge. He kept School at London, and hearing Dr. Taylor, afterwards Biſhop of Lincoln, preach for the Corporal Preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, he came to him, declared his Diſſent from that Doctrine, and drew up his Exceptions in ten Arguments. This Paper was ſhewed by Taylor to Dr. Barnes; Barnes who was bred among the Lutherans, was, it ſeems, made a Proſelyte to their Warmth, as well as their Opinions. He thought their falling lower than Conſubſtantiation, would check the Progreſs of the Reformation in England: Theſe Doctors therefore, Barnes and Taylor, carrried Lambert's Papers to Cranmer and Latimer: When Lambert was brought before them, they endeavoured to work him to a Recantation, but all to no purpoſe; he reſolved to ſtand by his Paper, and appeal'd to the King (f).

Lambert proſecuted for Hereſie, and tried before the King.

It is ſaid Cranmer at that time was of Luther's Opinion, which he had drunk in from his Friend Oſiander: Our Hiſtorian affirms that Latimer was of the ſame Belief. Firſt as to Latimer, he miſreports his Opinion: For at the Diſputation at Oxford in Queen Mary's Reign, when Dr. Weſton reproach'd him, that he agreed with the Lutherans in the Doctrine of the Euchariſt, Latimer anſwer'd no: “I was a Papiſt, for I could never perceive how Luther could defend his Opinion without Tranſubſtantiation *. Then as to Cranmer, he cannot be ſuppoſed to be of Luther's Opinion at this time, with reſpect to the Sacrament of the Altar, without a Mark of Inſincerity. For as this Hiſtorian obſerves in the Book called the Neceſſary Erudition, &c. Publiſh'd by the King in the Year 1543, Tranſubſtantiation was fully aſſerted †: And yet this Book was ſubſcrib'd by Cranmer ‖. If therefore Cranmer believ'd Conſubſtantiation, when he ſubſcrib'd Tranſubſtantiation, he muſt have been a Perſon of a ſcandalous Conſcience, which is too hard a Reflection upon him.

The King received the Appeal, and, it may be, was not unpleaſed with the Opportunity for ſhewing his Zeal and Learning. The Biſhops and Temporal Nobility had notice given them of the Solemnity of this Tryal, that the King intended to appear, and manage ſome part of the Argument. At the day prefix'd, beſides the Quality juſt mentioned, the Judges, the King's Counſel, with great numbers of Spectators came to Weſtminſter-Hall, where Scaffolds were erected for the convenience of hearing; the Biſhops were ſeated on the King's right Hand, and behind them the Judges, and the moſt eminent of the Profeſſion of the Law: The Temporal Nobility ſat on his Highneſs's left Hand, and after them the Gentlemen of the Court.

The Trial open'd by Day Bp. of Chicheſter.

When the Priſoner was brought to the Bar, Day Biſhop of Chicheſter being commanded by the King to open the Tryal, ſet forth, “That Lambert being charged with Heretical Pravity, had appealed from his Biſhop to the King, as if he expected more Favour from this Application, and that the King would protect an Heretick: From whence it appeared, that the Report of the Priſoner's being infected with the Lutheran Novelties, had too much Truth in it; then ſpeaking directly, as in the King's Perſon, he dilates upon the Progreſs already made in the Reformation. That he had thrown off the Uſurpations of the See of Rome, diſcharged and diſincorporated ſome idle Monks, who lived only like Drones in a Beehive: That he had removed the idolatrous Regard for Images, publiſhed the Bible in Engliſh for the Inſtruction of all his Subjects, and made ſome leſſer Alterations in the Church, which no body could deny were for the publick Intereſt. But as for other things, he was reſolved to keep conſtant to the Catholick Faith and Cuſtoms: That he was very deſirous the Priſoner would retract his Errors, and return to the Catholick Communion. That for this purpoſe, and to prevent the Extremities which would otherwiſe follow, he had ordered the Appearance of thoſe grave and learned Men (meaning the Biſhops) hoping, that by the advantage of their Character, and force of their Reaſoning, they would recover him to the Church, and wreſt his unfortunate Opinion from him. But in caſe he was not to be removed from his Obſtinacy, but continued proof againſt Conviction, he was reſolved to make him an Example; and by a Precedent of his own ſetting, acquaint his Judges and the Magiſtracy, how they ought to manage Hereſie, and behave themſelves upon ſuch occaſions (g).

When Biſhop Day had delivered his Majeſty's Senſe to this effect, the King himſelf asked Lambert what his Opinion was concerning Chriſt's Preſence in the Sacrament of the Altar? Lambert not returning an acceptable Anſwer, they began to argue the Point, and oppoſe the Priſoner in the forms of Logick. To be ſomewhat more particular, Lambert enter'd upon his Defence with ſome introductive Reſpect, acknowledged the King's Goodneſs for condeſcending to appear perſonally at the Tryal; and here he threw in ſome commending Expreſſions of his Highneſs's, Learning and Judgment. The King interrupting him, told him in Latin, that he did not come thither to hear any Panegyrick upon himſelf;

(e) Ld. Herbert, p. 433.

(f) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 252.

* Fox 1877.

† Bp. Burnet pt. 1. p. 290.

‖ Id. p. 299.

(g) Godwyn, Annal. An. 1538.

ſelf; and therefore ordered him to come cloſe to the matter. This being pronounced with no friendly Countenance, diſconcerted Lambert, and overſet him in ſome meaſure. The King aſked him again whether Chriſt's Body was in the Sacrament or not? He replied in St. Auſtin's words, that it was his Body in a certain manner. The King bid him anſwer directly without Obſcurity or Evaſion; upon which he diſcovered his Opinion, and anſwered, that it was not his Body: Upon this the King preſſed him with the Text in the Evangeliſt, This is my Body. After ſome Eſſay upon the Controverſy, the King diſengaged, and ordered the Archbiſhop to confute him. Cranmer only ſpoke to that part of Lambert's Objection, which maintained the impoſſibility of a Body's being in two Places at once. This Aſſertion the Archbiſhop endeavoured to diſprove from Chriſt's appearing to St. Paul: For tho' the Scripture aſſures us our Saviour is always in Heaven, yet he was ſeen by St. Paul in the Air; to this Lambert returned, That our Saviour was then only in Heaven, and that the human Appearance, and the Voice, was a Viſion, but not the natural Body of Chriſt. This Diſpute laſted for ſome time, and then Cranmer gave over.

Cranmer argues againſt Lambert.

Act 9.

Gardiner and Tonſtal argue.
1 Cor. v. 1.
c. 1. v. 5.

Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter thought Cranmer did not drive the Argument home, and therefore endeavoured to reinforce him: He cited two Texts of St. Paul, have I not ſeen Jeſus, and elſewhere he was ſeen of Cephas, then of the Twelve. After that he was ſeen of James, then of all the Apoſtles. And laſt of all, he was ſeen by me alſo: To this Lambert, anſwered, He did not queſtion the Appearance of our Saviour, but denied his Body being in two Places could be infer'd from thence.

Tonſtal came after Gardiner; he argued from God's Omnipotency, That our Apprehenſion of Poſſibilities was ſhort: That things which ſeem'd Contradictons to us, were not ſo in themſelves, nor out of the Reach of the Divine Power. That therefore, ſince our Saviour had called the Bread his Body, we ought to believe he ſaid no more than he intended to perform. To this Lambert anſwered, Our Saviour hath no where declared in Scripture that he would change the Bread into his Body: That it was a figurative Speech frequently uſed in the inſpired Writings. Thus Circumciſion is called the Covenant, the Lamb, the Paſſover; beſides many other Inſtances.

Stokeſly's Sophiſm.

Stokeſly Biſhop of London came after Tonſtal: He thought, as it is ſuppoſed, he had found out a way to remove the Contradiction, and reconcile the Myſtery to other Appearances of Nature: He inſtanced in Water's being boiled till it evaporates into Air: From hence he inferred, that one Subſtance might be chang'd into another, the Accidents ſtill remaining: For the moiſture which was the Accident of the Water, remains, when rarefied into Air. But to argue from an accidental Converſion, where the Subſtance is ſtill the ſame, to a ſubſtantial Change, where one Subſtance is annihilated, and a new one brought in its Place, was looked on as no better than a Fallacy. Lambert, when diſengaged from Stokeſly, had the Fatigue of defending himſelf againſt ſix Biſhops more: Inſomuch that at laſt, either by the Greatneſs of the Preſence, the Learning of the Oppoſers, or the Length of the Argument, he ſeem'd very much embaraſſed, and almoſt driven to Silence. At the cloſe of the Day, the King aſked him if he was not ſatiſfied, and whether he was reſolved to live or die? Lambert anſwer'd, he caſt himſelf wholly upon his Majeſty's Clemency. The King told him he would be no Patron to Hereticks; and therefore, if that was the fartheſt of his Anſwer, he muſt die. The Lord Cromwell read the Burning Sentence by the King's Order (h). Fox ſaith, Cromwell was a great Favourer of the Goſpellers at this time; and pretends he was put upon this ill Office by Gardiner's Policy. But this is bare Affirmation without Proof; for Cromwell being Eccleſiaſtical Vicegerent, it was part of his Buſineſs. Beſides, he was too much a Courtier to diſpute the Commands of ſo arbitrary a Prince: But more than this, he ſeems to have been ſatisfied with Lambert's Execution, as appears by one of his Letters written to Sir Thomas Wyat, the King's Ambaſſadour in Germany: In this Letter he magnifies the King's Performance at the Tryal, and propoſes him as a Preſident to other Princes: The words are theſe, Cromwell reads the Burning Sentence.

(h) Fox V. 2. p. 425, 426.

Nov. 28. 1538.

> ——“ The King's Majeſty, for the Reverence of the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, did ſit openly in his Hall, and there preſided at the Diſputation, Proceſs, and Judgment, of a miſerable Heretick Sacramentary, who was burnt the 20th of November. It was a wonder to ſee how Princely, with how excellent Gravity, and ineſtimable Majeſty, his Highneſs exerciſed there, the very Office of Supream Head of the Church of England. How benignly his Grace eſſay'd to convert the miſerable Man: How ſtrong and manifeſt Reaſons his Highneſs alledg'd againſt him. I wiſh the Princes and Potentates of Chriſtendom to have had a meet Place to have ſeen it. Undoubtedly they ſhould have much marvell'd at his Majeſty's moſt high Wiſdom and Judgment; and reputed him no otherwiſe after the ſame, than in manner the Mirrour and Light of all other Kings and Princes in Chriſtendom. The ſame was openly done with great Solemnity, whereby I doubt not but ſome of your Friends that have good leiſure, ſhall by their Letters advertiſe you of the Diſcourſe thereof (g).

(g) Biblioth. R. Harley, Armig.

This Account of Lambert was perfectly voluntary; from whence we may conclude, that Cromwell read the Sentence without regret, for we ſee he calls Lambert a miſerable Heretick, and commends the King highly for his Part at the Tryal. As to Lambert, he refuſed to live upon the Terms of a Recantation, ſuffered with great Fortitude; and as Fox reports the Matter, was barbarouſly uſed by the Sheriff's Men.

Stow's Annal. p. 556.

Some few Days before, four Dutch Anabaptiſts, three Men and a Woman, had Fagots tied to their Backs at Paul's Croſs; and one Man and a Woman, of the ſame Sect and Country, were burnt in Smithfield. Cranmer, upon the firſt of October, with ſome others, had a Commiſſion from the King to try ſome Anabaptiſts; which by comparing the Dates of the Commiſſion, with that of the Execution, we may conclude the Tryal paſſed upon the Perſons abovemention'd *.

* See Records, Numb. 46.

Godwin. de Præſul. Angliæ.

In May laſt, this Year Edward Fox Biſhop of Hereford departed this Life. He was educated in King's-College at Cambridge, where he was made Provoſt in the Year 1528. He ſerved the King in ſeveral Embaſſies, and was promoted to the See the Year 1535. He was a Perſon of conſiderable Learning; and beſide other things, wrote the famous Book entituled, De vera Differentia inter Regiam & Eccleſiaſticam Poteſtatem. He was a Favourer of the Reformation, at leaſt to the length of the Eſtabliſhment in the Reign of King Henry VIII. Bonner who was nominated to ſucceed him, was remov'd to London before his Conſecration.

To proceed: The King's Severities did not run altogether againſt one Party; Wherever he found Incompliance, or ſuſpected Diſaffection, he let looſe the rigour of the Law. Henry Marquiſs of Exeter, Henry Lord Montacute, and Sir Edward Nevil, were looked on as Malecontents, and too far in the Intereſt of the Court of Rome. They were committed to the Tower, and afterwards indicted for High-Treaſon. They were charged with correſponding with Reginald Pool, late Dean of Exeter, the King's Enemy; and that they had concerted to depoſe the King. They were tryed before Thomas Lord Audley, ſitting as High-Steward, and found guilty. Sir Jeffery Pool, two Prieſts and a Mariner, were likewiſe indicted, and caſt upon the ſame Score. They were all executed, excepting Sir Jeffery Pool, who was pardoned for turning Evidence. Sir Nicholas Carew, was likewiſe beheaded for being concerned with the Marquiſs of Exeter (k).

Dec. 31. Several great Men and others executed.

(k) Godwyn, Annal. Ld. Herbert, p. 439.

The rough Treatment of Archbiſhop Becket's Memory was highly reſented at Rome: The Pope was now reſolved to bear the King's Uſage no longer; he therefore withdraws the Suſpenſion, and orders the Excommunication to take Place. I have given the Reader an Abſtract of this Bull from Sanders; it was Publiſh'd at Bruges, Tournay, Dunkirk, in Flanders; at Bouloign, and Diepe in France; and St. Andrews in Scotland.

De Schiſm. Anglic. The Pope lets looſe his Excommunication againſt the King.

At the latter end of the Inſtrument, the Pope ſets forth, that when he deſign'd to exert the Cenſure againſt the King, the Mediation of ſome Princes, and other Perſons of eminent Quality, prevailed with him to hold his Hand, in hopes the King might recal himſelf, and recover. "That his Holyneſs being willing to believe the beſt, ſtopp'd the Execution of the Sentence. He hoped Time, and gentle Uſage, would not have produced ſuch unfortunate Effects, and brought the King to a greater Obſtinacy. But now, after having waited three Years, he was lamentably diſappointed; for Henry, as he calls him, grew worſe and worſe under the Cure, broke out into new Inſtances of Preſumption and Savageneſs, was not contented with the Murder of Prieſts and Prelates, but exerciſed his Rage upon the Dead, and ſtruck at the Honour of the Saints. Thus, ſays he, Saint Thomas of Canterbury, Archbiſhop and Martyr, famous for Miracles wrought at his Tomb, canonized by one of our Predeceſſors, and treated by almoſt all Chriſtendom with the higheſt Regard, has been barbarouſly inſulted by this Prince. To make his Contempt of Religion more remarkable, he ordered a Mock Tryal: The Saint was ſummon'd into Court, condemn'd for Contumacy, and had Judgment given againſt him for High-Treaſon: In ſhort the Body was taken up and burnt, and the Aſhes ſcattered in the Air. This was an unprecedented Barbarity, and exceeds the Revenge of a conquering Enemy, who don't uſe to extend their Reſentment beyond Death, nor fight with Graves and Carcaſes.

"From hence he proceeds to recount the rifling Becket's Shrine, and the ſeizure of the Monaſtery of St. Auſtin's Canterbury, and driving out the Monks, with all the arbitrary Injuſtice, and Fury imaginable. That theſe were Violations of the moſt flaming Nature, and things ſcarce heard of among Turks and Heathens. Since therefore the Diſtemper was above all Remedy, and evidently incurable, there was no other way but to come to Amputation, and cut off the gangren'd Limb, for fear the Infection ſhould reach farther upon the whole Body. He proceeds therefore to declare the Suſpenſion determined, and that the Excommunication was immediately to take Place (l).

The Pope wrote to the Emperour and other Princes, drove his Satyr ſtrongly againſt the King, and made a tragical Repreſentation of his Proceedings in England (m). but all this Thunder carried but little Terror with it, as appears by the Correſpondence in Treaties and Commerce, between the King and other Catholick Princes (n).

(l) Sanders de Schiſm. Angl. p. 190. Jan. 1. A. D. 1538.

(m) Morriſin's Apomaxis &c.

(n) Father Paul, Council of Trent.

The King underſtood the Proteſtants in Germany had enter'd upon a Treaty with the Emperour without his Knowledge. He complain'd of this Reſervedneſs by his Ambaſſadours: The Princes in Germany excuſed themſelves, by alledging, that there had been very little Progreſs in this Matter, the Terms being as yet not fully propoſed: And here they take notice of a late Proclamation ſet forth by the King, in which the Belief of Tranſubſtantiation, and ſome other conteſted Points, were injoin'd under ſevere Penalties. They intreated the King theſe Rigours may be recalled; neither were they inclined, as far as it appears, to compromiſe the Matter, nor make any Receſſion from the Auguſtane Confeſſion. Now this Syſtem of the German Belief differed in ſeveral material Points from King Henry's Reformation, as we may ſee by comparing it with the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man. To give ſome few Inſtances, and here not to mention the Difference between Tranſubſtantiation and Conſubſtantiation, the Auguſtane Confeſſion declares againſt the Neceſſity of Penance, preſcribed by the Canons (o). Their Article of Juſtification doth not altogether agree with the Doctrine of the Inſtitution, &c. They inſiſt on imputative Righteouſneſs, lay a great ſtreſs upon the bare Act of Believing; and tho' they do not deny the Neceſſity of good Works, they ſeem, notwithſtanding, to range them under a lower Conſideration. They reject Invocation of Saints and Angels, affirm nothing of Praying for the Dead, maintain the three Points already mentioned for Communion under both Kinds, ſuppreſſing private Maſſes, and all owing the Marriage of Prieſts. They diſpute againſt the Biſhops Authority for the Inſtitution of Ceremonies, and making Canons for the Regulation of Diet, and the ſettling of Feſtivals and Faſts: But then it muſt be ſaid their chief Objection againſt this Branch of the Church's Power, is levelled againſt the Opinion of the Merit of theſe Obſervances. They likewiſe declare againſt the Obligation of Monaſtick Vows. But no more of this.

The Auguſtane Confeſſion much different from the Religious profeſs'd by King Henry.

(o) Syntagma Confeſſionum. Auguſt. Artic. 11. See Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 255.

Artic. 20.
Artic. 21.

Melancthon's Letter to the King.

"About this time Melancthon wrote a Letter to perſuade the King to a farther Reformation. This Divine touches upon the King's Proclamation abovementioned, and is much troubled, that the cuſtomary Ceremonies of the Church are commanded to be obſerved. He pretends the continuing theſe Uſages would perpetuate the Abuſes in the Maſs, takes the Freedom to call ſome of them ſuperſtitious Fooleries, and makes Saint Auſtin com“ plain the Church was overlaid with Ceremonies “ in his time, and almoſt brought back to the “ Servitude of the Moſaic Law. He acquaints “ the King, Contareni, Sadolet, and Cardinal Pool “ were the great Patrons of this Superſtition: “ That without great Prudence in the Gover- “ nours of the Church, Truth would be ſtifled un- “ der this Rubbiſh. But here he doth not ſeem “ to underſtand the State of Religion in England: For his main Argument againſt the Continuance of theſe Externals, is levelled againſt the Belief of their Neceſſity; but this was fighting without an Adverſary. For the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man declares for the Uſe of Ceremonies, but only under the nature of Circumſtantials; and that no more than Convenience and Solemnity are deſign'd by them. “ Melancthon goes “ on to diſpute againſt the Cœlibacy of the Clergy, “ and preſſeth the King to a farther diſtance “ from the Church of Rome, from the Examples “ of Hezekiah. And being, not without reaſon, “ ſenſible he had taken ſome unuſual Liberty, he “ deſires the King would give him a favourable “ Conſtruction (p).

April 1. 1539.

(p) Cotton. Libr. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 244.

AN
Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory
OF GREAT BRITAIN,
CHIEFLY OF ENGLAND.

PART II. BOOK III.

A Diſſolution of the greater Monaſteries.

THERE were ſeveral Surrenders of the greater Monaſteries made the laſt Year. This Affair was carried on with all the Application imaginable; inſomuch that by the Beginning of this Year, almoſt all the religious Houſes were reſigned to the Crown. This being a very extraordinary Revolution both in Church and State, it will not be amiſs to open the Scene, to enlarge upon the Circumſtances, and acquaint the Reader with the Detail of this ſurprizing Emergency. To aſſiſt this Project, and make it go down the better with the People, the Monaſteries had a heavy Charge of Diſorder and Immorality brought in againſt them, that the Narratives of this kind were ſwelled beyond Truth and Proportion, may well be ſuſpected from the mercenary Temper of ſome of the Viſitors, who begged for this Employment, as hath been obſerved already; beſides, that ſeveral of the Religious Houſes had a fair Reputation, appears from authentick Records, ſome of which I ſhall give the Reader.

The Charge of Immoralities too generally laid, and carried too far.

To begin: John Apprice, upon his Viſitation of the Abby of Saint Edmonsbury in Suffolk, acquaints Cromwell (q), “That the Viſitors had nothing to except againſt the Abbot's Regularity: But it was reported he diverted himſelf too much at Cards and Dice, was too expenſive in Building, and turn'd ſeveral Farms into Copyholds, and ſpent too much time in his Country Houſes. The Viſitors charg'd him farther with being addicted to ſuperſtitious Ceremonies; that is, he practis'd the Religion then eſtabliſh'd. As for the Convent, Apprice declares they could draw little or nothing from them. But this Silence he interprets to Pre-inſtruction and Concert. It is true, he adds that ſome of the Monks confeſs'd great Numbers of Women frequented the Abby; but mentions no Diſorder amongſt them. The Relicks, viz. Coals that roaſted Saint Lawrence, the Parings of Saint Edmund's Nails, Archbiſhop Becket's Boots, &c. ſeemed the heavieſt Part of the Charge.

The Commiſſioners Letter to Cromwell in behalf of the Priory of Cateſby.

“In this Letter they make a Report of the pious and inoffenſive Behaviour of the Prioreſs and Nuns: That the Houſe was very diſcreetly managed, and very ſerviceable to the Poor of the Neighbourhood. They deſire Cromwell, that the King may be addreſſed to

(q) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 120.

“preſerve the Houſe. This Letter is ſubſcribed by three Commiſſioners, Edmund Knightly, John Lane, and George Gifford. Ibid. fol. 209.

A Letter from the King's Commiſſioners in behalf of the Nunnery of Polſworth in Warwickſhire: July the 28*th*, 1537.

“In this Letter ſubſcribed by ſix Commiſſioners, Cromwell is ſtrongly ſolicited, that the Abby might ſtand. To prevail with him, they give a great Character of the Abbeſs and Nuns. That both by general Fame, and Enquiry into the Houſe, they found the Rule of the Inſtitution exactly obſerved. That in caſe the Nunnery ſhould be ſuppreſſed, the Town would be ruined, and ſix or ſeven ſcore Perſons thrown out of their Livelihood. Ibid. fol. 210.

Commiſſioner Gifford's Letter to Cromwell in behalf of the Priory of Woolſtrop in Northamptonſhire: June the 19*th*, 1537.

“Gifford takes notice, that himſelf and ſome of thoſe joined in Commiſſion with him, had formerly written to the Chancelour of the Augmentations, in behalf of the Abbey of Saint James, and Priory of Catesby in Northamptonſhire; that the King was diſpleaſed with this Solicitation, and charged them with receiving Money for interpoſing in this Affair. And here after a Proteſtation of his Integrity, he proceeds to beg Cromwell's Favour for the Priory of Woolſtrop. He acquaints him that the Prior was an unexceptionable Perſon, managed the Revenues of the Houſe to Advantage, and was remarkable for Hoſpitality and relieving the poor. That the Prieſts of the Convent lived up to their Character, and ſpent their leiſure Hours in embroidering, tranſcribing, making their own Cloaths, carving, painting, &c. He added, the Charity of the Houſe was ſuch, that it would be a very gracious and meritorious Act in the King to let it ſtand. And that for this good Office Cromwell would not only have the Prayers of the Convent, but the Benefit of the Devotions of the People four or five Miles round. At the Cloſe of the Letter, he calls God to witneſs the Truth of this Report. Ibid. fol. 214.

By this Letter it appears the Fate of the Abbeys was irrevocably fix'd: The King's Paſſions ran ſo ſtrong for a Diſſolution, that he would ſcarce endure the Report of a fair Character given the Religious. Tho', after all, the learned Sir William Dugdale is of Opinion, that the Ruin of the Abbeys was no original Thought of the King's. It is more reaſonable to believe it was the Suggeſtion of ſome ambitious Men, who projected vaſt Advantages to themſelves. And if Wealth and Titles are ſuch, without regard to the manner of coming by them, they were not miſtaken in their Aim. To mention ſome more Applications in Favour of the Monaſteries.

A Letter from Mr. Arundell, a Corniſh Gentleman, to Cromwell, to preſerve the Abbey of Cliffe in that County.

“He informs the Vicar General, there were ſeventeen Prieſts, all of them remarkable for their Hoſpitality and regular Behaviour. They offer the King a thouſand Mark to compound againſt Diſſolution. Ibid. fol. 257.

Thomas Bedyle's Letter to Cromwell: January the 15*th*, 27 H. 8.

“Here this Viſitor gives Cromwell an Account of the Condition of the Abbey of Ramſey. He informs him the Abbot and Convent were remarkable for their Loyalty, and all other Parts of a regular Life. He mentions their Exemption from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction by King Edgar's Charter, and ſuggeſts from thence an Advantage for the King's Supremacy. At taking Leave, he deſires a Commiſſion from Cromwell to viſit the unexamin'd Houſes in the Dioceſs of Lincoln: This he is ſo frank as to ſay would be very much for his Commodity. Ibid. fol. 294.

A Letter of Thomas Lord Lawarr to Cromwell.

“He deſires Cromwell to uſe his Intereſt with the King, that the Priory of Boxgrave might not be ſuppreſſed. And if this Requeſt could not be granted, that he might be Tenant to the Land, in regard the Houſe was founded by his Anceſtors. He concludes with a Promiſe of giving Cromwell Satisfaction. Ibid. fol. 234.

The Abbeſs of Godſtowe's Letter to Cromwell: Nov. the 5*th*, 1537.

“She complains of the menacing and ill Treatment of Dr. London, one of the Viſitors: That he had miſreported her to the King, and charged her with embezling the Goods, and committing Waſt upon the Nunnery. She deſires to be called to an Account, denies the Charge, and offers to juſtify her Conduct in every particular. Ibid. fol. 238.

A Letter of the Abbot of Rewly in Oxfordſhire, to Cromwell, in behalf of his Abbey. I ſhall give it the Reader in his own Words.

“Right honourable, and my ſingular good Maſter, my Duty remembred, I humbly commend to you, glad to hear of your Health, Wealth, and Proſperity, the which I pray Jeſu long to continue to your Heart and Deſire, &c. thanking your Maſterſhip for your great Kindneſs ſhewed to me at all times: Whereas it pleaſed you that ſo ſoon I ſhould come to your Speech, with ſo little Expence in lying at London, and alſo for your good and gentle Words, kind and loving Friendſhip, not having for the ſame Pleaſure or Commodity of me as yet, truſting by ſome ſpecial Gift of Grace to acquit it tenfold: And whereas I had a Letter ſent me, that our Monaſtery ſhould be given to Mr. Archard your Servant, and that it was alſo in the Commiſſion, I ſubmit my ſelf full and whole to your Maſterſhip, as all my Refuge, Help and Succour is in you; glad of my voluntary Mind to be bound in an Obligation of an hundred Pounds to be paid to your Maſterſhip, ſo that our Houſe may be ſaved; altho' it be converted into the Uſe of a College, to have both Learning, and learned Men go forward therein. I was loath to attempt your Maſterſhip any farther, ſince I had ſuch gentle “ tle Anſwers; unleſs the great Rumour of the Town and Univerſity compulſed me, becauſe of the aforeſaid Gift to the aforeſaid Mr. Archard, beſeeching your Maſterſhip's kind Letter againſt the Surveyors Letter coming to diſcharge them; that it may be as a Shield or Buckler to defend me; that you may get you a Memorial to be pray'd for for ever. And thus Almighty Jeſu ſend your Maſterſhip long Life and much Honour.

Ibid. fol. 269.

Nicholas, by the Grace of God, Abbot of Roy Alleyn.

Upon this Occaſion it may not be improper to take notice, that, at the beginning of theſe Alterations, Cromwell had written circular Letters to the Abbots of the greater Abbies, aſſuring them againſt the Apprehenſion of a Diſſolution. And here, amongſt other things, he acquaints them from the King, that except the leſſer religious Houſes had made a free and voluntary Surrender to his Majeſty, his Grace would never have received the ſame.

Ibid. fol. 68.

A Letter of the Abbot of Hewlim, in Vindication of himſelf and his Convent: Febr. the 10*th*, 1533.

“ He takes notice the Perſon to whom he writes was ſomewhat ſurpriz'd at the Incompliance of his Houſe: But to juſtify his Behaviour in not ſurrendring, he puts them in mind the Abbey was dedicated to God Almighty's Service, and to be ſpent in Diſtributions of Charity, and that theſe Ends were honeſtly anſwer'd. That ſince they had given no Occaſion for a Diſſolution, they thought themſelves not obliged to reſign. But underſtanding the King and the Lord Privy Seal Cromwell were diſpleaſed with this part of their Conduct, he promiſes his utmoſt to bring his Brothers to Conformity.

Ibid. fol. 270.

A Letter from the Prioreſs and Siſters of Legburne to the Founder, to intercede with the King that the Houſe might not be ſuppreſſed: 29 H. 8. 1537.

“ To move the King to continue the Nunnery, ſhe acquaints the Founder they were ready to ſtand the Teſt of an Examination: That they did not fear the Viſitors could find any Ground of Complaint againſt them, either with reſpect to their Hoſpitality, or Behaviour.

Ibid.

There are ſeveral other fair Teſtimonials of the Regularity of the Religious Houſes to be ſeen upon Record in the Augmentation Office, but what I have mentioned may be ſufficient.

The Abbots of Croiland, Leiceſter, and the Prior of Burlington, endeavoured to preſerve themſelves from the Storm, as Mariners do, by throwing part of their Goods overboard: That is, they endeavour'd to ſweeten the Court with Preſents. The Prior of Canterbury, and the Abbey of Saint Edmondsbury, to mention no more, try'd this Expedient with Cromwell. By the Prior of Canterbury's Letter to Cromwell, it appears that Houſe paid an annual Gratuity of ten Pounds to Cromwell, which they now augment to twenty, by a new Inſtrument, to him and his Son. The Houſe likewiſe promiſes the Reverſion of two Farms to two of Cromwell's Servants, to be nominated by himſelf.

Ibid. fol. 34, 57, & alibi.

The Abbot of Bury ſettled an Annuity of ten Pounds upon Cromwell, and another of the ſame Value upon his Son, as appears by an Inſtrument under the Seal of the Convent (r).

We ſee here were ſtrong Applications made to Cromwell: He was looked upon as a Perſon of the greateſt Aſcendant; as the Motion of this new Machine. They endeavoured to work him upon the Topicks of Juſtice and Honour, of Regard to the Country, and Pity to the Poor. They plied him with Teſtimonials, with Preſents and Promiſes, but all to no Purpoſe: He had more prevalent Motives, more tempting Views on the other Side. In ſhort, no Rhetorick, either in Language or Acknowledgments, could make an Impreſſion: He was like the deaf Adder, that refuſeth to hear the Voice of the Charmer, charm he never ſo wiſely.

Cromwell applied to to ſave the Abbeys, but without Succeſs.

Beſides the Charge of Immorality, there were ſeveral other Fineſſes made uſe of to carry on the Ruin of the Abbeys. To mention ſome of them: In the Vacancy of the greater Houſes, ſuch Perſons were elected, as were diſpoſed to comply with the Court Meaſures: Theſe Abbots had Inſtructions to perſuade the Monks to ſurrender. And here, it ſeems, they were ſo active and ſucceſsful in their Poſt, that within two Years they brought the Monks in ſeveral Convents to their Bent, and prevail'd for a Reſignation. Things being thus ripe for the King's Purpoſe, Commiſſioners were ſent down to take the Surrenders. The Liſt of them, beſides thoſe already mentioned, is as follows: Robert Earl of Suſſex, Sir John Saint Clere, Sir William Pirton, Sir Henry Farrington, Knights; and Richard Devereux late Frier; Anthony Fitzherbert, afterwards one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas; John Gage, William Leyland, John Williams, Thomas Mildmay, ——— Jobſon, Richard Cromwell, Robert Southwell, William Parr, Henry Polſted, John Antony, John Grevil, Simon Mountfort, Thomas Holt, Roger Wigſton, Robert Burgoin, Richard Pollard, Philip Parys, John Smith, Edward Carne, Richard Gweent, William Berners, John Arnold, and Richard Pawlet: Theſe Gentlemen were great Managers, and well qualified for their Employment: They left no Stone unturned to drive on their Projects, and bring their Buſineſs to a Point (s). When they found the Abbots indiſpoſed for their Purpoſe, they tempted them with the Promiſe of large Penſions during Life. This Bait ſucceeded with the Abbot of Hales in Glouceſterſhire, with the Abbot of Ramſey, and the Priors of Ely and Gisborn. To make the Precedent work upon others, the Pliancy of theſe Men was highly commended to the Lord Cromwell; and the Obſequiouſneſs of ſome was ſo far encouraged, as to be honoured with a Commiſſion to deſtroy the reſt. This, for inſtance, was part of the Prior of Gisborn's Preferment.

A Liſt of the Commiſſioners for viſiting the Abbeys.

The Methods made uſe of to ſuppreſs Religious Houſes.

Dugdale, Ibid. & p. 802.

On the other hand, when they proved untractable upon Motives of Conſcience or Honour (t), they were highly complain'd of for their Diſobedience to the Lord Comwell. Thus Bedyle in his Letter concerning the Nunnery of Sion, has nothing to charge the Ladies or Siſters with, excepting their Obſtinacy and Incompliance: And that they endeavoured to make a Party in the Houſe againſt a Surrender: And refuſed to fortify the King's Title with the Convent's Seal (u).

This Bedyle in another Letter concerning the Priory of Charterhouſe, London, acquaints Cromwell with the traitorous Behaviour (as he calls it) of

June 14. 1537.

The Monks of Charterhouſe hardly uſed.

(r) See Records, N. 12.

(s) Dugdale's Warwickſhire, fol. 801.

(t) Godwyn, Annal. An. 1539.

(u) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 109.

of ſeveral of the Monks: For which, as the Letter goes on, they were committed to Newgate. This traitorous Behaviour, as far as it appears, means no more than their Obſtinacy againſt a Surrender. Five of them, whoſe Names are mentioned, died of the Hardſhip of their Uſage. The ſame Severity in the Priſon, as Bedyle continues, had brought Five more to the Point of Death. This Commiſſioner commends the Prior for his Honeſty, becauſe he was willing to give up the Houſe. He concludes with a politick Wiſh, that the Revenues of the Monaſtery might be popularly and unexceptionably employed: Becauſe by its lying in the Capital of the Kingdom, it might occaſion an unſerviceable Report, if it was either kept in the King's Hands, or granted to a foreign Uſe. Many of theſe Carthuſians, as our learned Church Hiſtorian relates, were executed for their open denying the King's Supremacy. Now after having own'd this, I'm ſomewhat ſurprized to find the reverend Author charging thoſe who wrote before him with Miſrepreſentation. His Words are theſe.

Ibid. fol. 217.

Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 241.

There's one Calumny that runs in a Thread through all the Hiſtorians of the popiſh ſide, which not a few of our own have ignorantly taken up; that many were put to Death for not ſwearing the King's Supremacy. 'Tis an impudent Falſhood; for not ſo much as one Perſon ſuffer'd on that Account. With Submiſſion, How does this appear? Was there not an Act which made it High-Treaſon to refuſe the Oath of Supremacy * ? This Gentleman is ſenſible of it †. Now when the Monks were complained of as diſaffected to the Government, when ſuch a ſtrong Perſecution was drawn upon them; when the King and the chief Miniſters were ſo warm upon the Diſſolution-Project; when the Caſe ſtood thus, is it not highly probable the Oath was tendered to thoſe Religious who appeared refractory to the King's Pleaſure? Now if ſome of them refuſed to comply, as we find they did, we may believe they were proſecuted for High-Treaſon. And if they choſe rather to fall under the heavieſt Penalties, than ſwear this new Supremacy, might they not fairly be ſaid to deny it? To deny it, I ſay, when they choſe to ſuffer Death rather than own it? And then we may eaſily imagine the Indictment ran that they had renounced the King's Supremacy. But what made them diſcover ſo dangerous a Sentiment? In all likelihood, nothing but the Teſt of the Oath put to them. For we don't find the Monks over-hardy in expoſing themſelves, or that they either printed or preached againſt the Regal Supremacy. From hence we may pretty reaſonably infer, 'twas their Refuſal of the Oath which prov'd fatal to them. To return to the Viſitors.

Id. p. 351.

*28 H. 8. c. 10.

† Bp. Burnet, Ibid.

Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 217.

The Abbot of St. Albans incompliant.

Dr. Lee and William Peters acquaint Cromwell with their Diſappointment at the Abby of St. Albans; they inform him of their ſummoning the Abbot before them; they complain of him for breaking the King's Injunctions, for Dilapidations, and other Inſtances of Negligence and exceptionable Management. Then they open his grand Crime, and proceed to mention his Obſtinacy, notwithſtanding the higheſt Threatning. One Argument they uſed to preſs him to a Surrender, was the great Debts contracted upon the Houſe. That for this Reaſon, either no Perſon would accept the Preferment, or elſe the next Succeſſor would take it only upon the View of putting it into the King's Hands. But it ſeems, the Abbot was not of their Opinion. And therefore, laſtly, they deſire ſuch Directions from Cromwell, that their Proceedings may be manag'd in ſuch a manner as may make leaſt Noiſe, and be moſt inoffenſive to the Country. However, to make ſure Work, they think it moſt adviſeable to proceed to Extremities: That this Method may probably ſhake the Abbot's Conſtancy, and work him to compliance in hopes of a Penſion.

Ibid. fol. 43.

Penſions, it ſeems, were Batteries which play'd with Succeſs upon the mercenary Tempers of ſome of the Religious. This Expedient was not forgotten by the Courtiers. The Lord Chancellor Audley, managed this way: He employed an Agent to treat with the Abbot of Athelny: The Offer was an Hundred Marks per Annum Penſion. But the Abbot thought the Terms too low, and refuſed to ſurrender. This Lord had tamper'd with the Abbot of St. Oſithes in Eſſex, and brought him to his Expectation (w). And to make way for a Grant of the Abby of Walden in the County laſt mentioned; beſides giving in a ſlender Valuation of the Eſtate, he takes Care it might be remembred, that he had diſobliged his Reputation, and brought a great deal of Infamy upon himſelf in ſerving the King, and ſeems to think the Abby no more than a fair Conſideration for Damages ſuſtained (y).

The Lord Chancellor Audley treats with the Abbot of Athelny.

Ibid. fol. 113.

To proceed, the Abbot of Feverſham, to preſerve himſelf from Diſſolution, inſiſted on the Antiquity of the Monaſtery; That it was founded by King Stephen; That the Bodies of this Prince, his Queen and his Son, were there interred; That the Deſign of the Foundation was to pray for the Souls of theſe Royal Benefactors. But neither thoſe in this World, nor thoſe in the other, had Intereſt enough to prevail. Where the Difficulties ſtuck upon Principle, and were not eaſily removed, the Commiſſioners took Care to gain the Superiors of the Religious, and thoſe who were moſt likely to ſway their Practice. Thus the Nuns of Sion were ſolicited to Compliance by the Biſhop of London, and their Confeſſor. Theſe ſpiritual Directors, after ſeveral other Perſuaſives, told them plainly, that they were bound in Conſcience to ſubmit to the King's Pleaſure (x).

Dugdale, p. 802.

Large Penſions offered for Reſignation.

When large Penſions which were ſometimes given, and well paid too (z), failed of Succeſs, they applied to Menacing and Rigor. Thus ſome Religious were frightned, by being charged with Dilapidations and other Particulars of Miſmanagement: For whether the Articles were true or not, they had not always the Courage to ſtand the ſhock, and bear up againſt the Viſitors. The late Injunctions were likewiſe contrived pretty ſevere; this made ſome of the Monks tired with the Cloyſter, and afforded Exceptions to the Conduct of the Houſe. Thus ſome Abbots were deprived, and others more managable put in their room (a).

Convent Seals taken away from ſome Abbeys.

Farther, the Commiſſioners took the Convents Seals from ſome Houſes: This was in a manner laying cloſe Siege to them. Thus their Communication and Proviſion was in a great manner cut off; they could neither make Leaſes, or ſell their Jewels: By this means the paying their Debts, and ſupplying their Occaſions, was oftentimes impracticable. And thus the Garriſon was reduc'd, at laſt, and ſtarv'd to a Surrender. The Canons of Leiceſter were threatned to be proſecuted for Adultery and Sodomy: But their Submiſſion, it ſeems, wiped off the Blemiſh, or at leaſt compounded for the Puniſhment (b). Dr. London made no Scruple to tell the Nuns of Godſtow, That ſince he found them obſtinate, he would

Ibid.

(w) Ibid fol. 231.

(y) Ibid. fol. 197.

(x) Id. p. 802.

(z) Augmentation Office.

(a) Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 802.

(b) Biblioth. Cotton, E. 4. fol. 131.

would diſſolve the Houſe in ſpite of their Teeth; and yet the whole Matter was ſo managed, as if nothing rough or compulſive had been offered, but that the King had been courted to accept the Monaſteries. And if any Religious gave out their Surrenders were involuntary, a Mark of Diſlike was ſet upon them (c).

When by this Management the Reſolution of no ſmall Number of Abbeys was ſhaken, they ſerved for a Precedent to the reſt. That the Caſe was thus, appears by the Date of their Surrenders: For the Treatment they foreſaw from the Viſitors, and the unexpected Compliance of ſo many of the Fraternity, embarraſs'd their Motions, and put them to a Stand. They were amazed to the laſt Degree, and perfectly at a loſs which way to diſentangle themſelves. Some of them, as hath been obſerv'd, made Tryal of the Prevalence of Money, and offered to compound upon no ſlender Propoſals. Thus the Abbot of Peterborough offered the King Two Thouſand Five Hundred Marks, and the Viſitor-General, Cromwell, Three Hundred Pounds for the purchaſing his Favour (d). Thoſe Abbots who appeared with a more ſtubborn Honeſty, who refuſed to break their Oath, and betray their Truſt, by a Reſignation, were handled very roughly. Thus the Stiffneſs of the Abbot of Fountains in Yorkſhire is ſaid to have brought the Storm upon him. The Commiſſioners drew up a Charge againſt him, for taking ſome Jewels belonging to the Monaſtery into his Cuſtody. This, by an unuſual Rigour of Expreſſion, was called Theft and Sacrilege. In ſhort, he was pronounc'd perjured, depoſed, and had a private Reſignation wreſted from him. Theſe Inſtances of Hardſhip will run higher by and by; in the mean time, no Intereſt or Interceſſion ſignified any thing. Biſhop Latimer moved ſtrongly, that two or three of theſe Religious Houſes might be left in every County for pious Uſes. But Cromwell, as my Lord Herbert ſpeaks, (by the King's Permiſſion) invaded all. This Miniſter, as the noble Hiſtorian goes on, play'd all the Engines that were likely to do Execution. And thus, by Menacing and Preſents, by Promiſes and Perſuaſions, and by all the Artifices which were like to batter the Conſtancy, and prevail upon the Paſſions of Mankind, he brought the Abbots to a Surrender, and made himſelf Maſter of his Project. If they proved untractable, and ſtood upon their Right, they were terribly hamper'd, either with the Injunctions, or ſome Act of Parliament (e). Saunders pretends, the Form of the Surrenders was preſcribed, and proper Agents pitch'd upon to bring the Houſes to a Compliance. I ſhall tranſcribe one or two of theſe Inſtruments for the Reader.

The Surrender of the Warden and Friers of St. Francis in Stanford *.

“For as moche as we the Warden and Freers, of the Howſe of Saynt Frances in Standforde, comenly call'd the Gray-Freers in Standforde, in the County of Lincolne, do profoundly conſider that the Perfeccion of Chriſtian Lyving dothe not conciſte in the dome Ceremonies, weryng of the grey Cootte, diſgeaſing our ſelfe after ſtrange Faſhions, doking and beckyng, in gurding our ſelffes with Gurdle full of Knots, and other like Papiſtical Ceremonies, where we have byn mooſt principally practyſed, and miſſelyd in Times; but the very tru waye to pleaſe God, and to live a true Chriſtian Man, wytheout all Ypocraſie, and fayned Diſſimulation, is ſinceerly declaryd unto us by our Maſter Chriſte, his Evangeliſts and Apoſtles. Being mindyd hereafter to folowe the ſame, conformyng our ſelffe unto the Will and Pleaſure of owr Supreme Hedde under God in Erthe, the Kinges Majeſtye; and not to follow henceforth the Superſtitious Tradicions of any forincycall Potentate, or Poore, with the mutual Aſſent and Conſent, doe ſubmyt owr ſelffes unto the Mercye of owr ſaide Soveraygne Lorde. And withe like mutuall Aſſent and Conſent, doe ſurrender, and yelde upe unto the Hands of the ſame, all owr ſaide Howſe of Saynte Frances in Standforde, comenly callyd the Greye Freers in Standforde, withe all Lands, Tenements, Gardens, Medowes, Waters, Pondyards, Feedings, Paſtures, Comens, Rents, Reverſions, and all other our Intereſt, Ryghtes or Tythes, apperteyning unto the ſame; mooſte humbly beſeechyng his mooſte noble Grace, to diſpoſe of us, and of the ſame, as beſt ſchall ſtonde wythe his mooſte graciouſe Pleaſure. And farther, freely to graunt unto every one of us his Licens undre Wretyng and Seall, to change our Abites into ſecular Faſſion, and to receive ſuch maner of Livynges, as other ſecular Prieſtes comenly be preferryd unto. And we all faythfully ſchall pray unto Almighty God, long to preſerve his mooſte noble Grace wyth Encreaſe of moche Felicitie and Honor.

“And in Witneſs of all and ſingular the Premiſſes, we the ſaid Warden and Covent of the Grey Freers in Standforde, to theſe Preſents have put owr Covent Sceall the yeght Day of Octobre, in the thyrtythe Yere of the Raygne of owr mooſte Soverayne King Henry the yeght.

Factum Johannis Schemy, Gardian.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Robards.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Chadwhort.
Per me Fratrem Ricardum Pye.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Clarke.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Quoyte.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Garman.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Tong.
Per me Fratrem Johannem Lovell.
Per me Fratrem Willielmum Tomſon.

The Surrender of the Abby of Betleſden in Bedfordſhire is much to the ſame Tenor, and therefore ſhall be omitted. But the Form ſign'd by the Prior and Convent of St. Andrews Northampton is couch'd in a more renouncing and mortifying Strain *. I ſhall tranſcribe part of it.

“But as well we as others our Predeceſſors, called religiouſe Perſons within yowr ſaid Monaſtery, taking on us the Habite of outward Veſture of the ſaid Rule, onley to the Intent to lead owr Liffes in the ydle Quyetneſſe, and not in the vertuoſe Exercyſe, in a ſtately Eſtimation, and not in obedient Humylyte, have undre the Shadowe or Color of the ſaide Rule and Habite, vaynely, deteſtably, and alſo ungodly, employed, yea, rather devowered the yerely Revenues yſſuing and comyng of the ſaid Poſſeſſions, in continual Ingurgitations and Farcynges of our carayne Bodyes, and of others, the Supportares of owr voluptuoſe and carnal Appetyte, with other vayne

(c) Dugdale's Warwickſhire, p. 802.

(d) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. 4. fol. 205.

Ibid. fol. 114. Dugdale, ut ſupra.

(e) Ld. Herbert, p. 442. Saunders de Schiſm. Anglic. p. 195.

* Augmentation Office.

See Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Records, Book 3. p. 150.

* Augmentation-Office. Fuller, Book 6. p. 320.

“ and ungodly Expenſys; to the manyfeſt Subvertion of Devocion, and Clenneſs of Lyvyng, “ and to the mooſte notable Slaunder of Chriſt's “ holy Evangely, which in the Form of owr Profeſſyon, we did oſtentate, and openly devaunt “ to kepe mooſt exactly; withdrawyng thereby “ from the ſymple and pure Minds of yowr “ Grace's Subjects, the onely Truth and Comfort which they oughte to have by the true “ Faith of Chriſt, and alſo the devyne Honor “ and Glory, only due to the glorious Majeſty “ of God Almighty, ſteryng them with all Perſwaſions, Ingynes, and Polyce, to dedd Images, “ and counterfett Reliques, for our dampnable “ Lucre: Which owr mooſte horryble Abominations and execrable Perſuacions of yowr Grace's “ People to deteſtable Errours, and our long “ coveted Ypocriſie, cloked with fayned Sanctity; we revolving dayly, and continually “ ponderyng in owr ſorrowfull Harts, and “ thereby perſeyving the botomlas Gulf of everlaſting Fyre redye to devowre us, if perſyſting in this State of Lyvyng, we ſhulde depart from this uncertyn and tranſitory Liffe, “ conſtrayned by the intollerable Anguyſh of owr “ Conſcience, call'd as we truſt by the Grace “ of God, who wold have no Man to peryſh in “ Synne, with Harts mooſt contrited and repentante, proſtrate at the noble Feet of yowr “ mooſt royal Majeſtye, mooſt lamentably doe “ crave of yowr Highneſs, of yowr abundant “ Mercy, to grant unto us mooſt greivous againſt God, and yowr Highneſs, your moſt “ gracious Pardon, for owr ſaide ſondry Offences, Omyſſions, and Negligences, comytted “ as before by us is confeſſed, againſt yowr Highneſs, and yowr moſt noble Progenitors. And “ where your Highneſs, being ſupreme Hedd, “ immediately after Chriſt, of his Church, in “ this yowr Roialme of England, ſo conſequently generall and onely Reformator of all religiouſe Perſons there, have full Authority to “ correct or dyſſolve at yowr Grace's Pleaſure, “ and Liberty, all Covents and religious Companyes abuſing the Rewles of their Profeſſion. “ And moreover to your Highneſs, being owr “ Soveraygn Lord, and undoubted Fownder of “ yowr ſaid Monaſtery, by Diſſolution whereof “ apperteyneth only the Oryginal Title, and “ propre Inherytance, as well of all other Goods “ moveable and unmoveable, to the ſaid Monaſtery in any wyſe apperteyning or belonging, “ to be diſpoſed and imploy'd, as to yowr Grace's “ moſt excellent Wyſedeme ſhall ſeme expedyent and neceſſary.

Per me Franciſcum Priorem.
Per me Johannem Sub-priorem.
Per me Johannem Pette.
Per me Jo. Harrold.
Per me Tho. Smith.
Per me Tho. Golſton.
Per me Rob. Martin.
Per me Jacob. Hopkins.
Per me Ric. Bunberry.
Per me Tho. Barly.
Per me Will. Ward.
Per me Tho. Atterbury.
Per me Will. Fowler.

27 H. 8. c. 28. Dugdale's Monaſt. Vol. 1. fol. 1048.

It is ſomewhat ſtrange the Charge of Immorality ſhould run ſo high againſt the Religious in general, ſince no longer than four Years agone, the greater Monaſteries had ſo fair a Teſtimony of their Behaviour from the Parliament it ſelf. Amongſt other Inſtances of Diſorder, the Abbots are ſome of them charg'd with Coining: But this upon Conſideration, will be found no Fault; for not only the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but ſome of the great Abbeys had the Privilege of a Mint. The Abby of Reading in Berkſhire particularly, had the Grant of Coinage inſerted in their Charter, by their Founder King Henry the Firſt. The Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhop of Durham, and the Dean of St. Martins-le-Grand, had the ſame Privilege *.

Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 190.

Dugdale. Monaſt. Vol. p. 417. Spelm. Concil. Vol.

*14 H. 8. c 12. 17 Ed. 4. c. 1. See Davis's Reports. Le Caſe de mixt Moneyes.

The Lord Herbert is of Opinion, the King's Title to the Religious Houſes, was not founded either upon Statute, or Claim of Right: He choſe rather to inſiſt on voluntary Surrender, or Forfeiture: However, the Proceedings, as hath been obſerved, having been ſomewhat ſingular, it was thought proper to get them confirm'd by Act of Parliament. To this purpoſe he iſſued out his Writ of Summons: The Seſſion began April 28, One Thouſand, Five Hundred, and Thirty Nine.

In the mean time, there were very ſerviceable Reports ſpread throughout the Kingdom. It was ſaid Cardinal Pool was ſoliciting ſeveral Princes to draw a kind of Cruiſade upon King Henry. The late Truce between the Emperor and the French King, made this News not altogether impoſſible. The Credibility improv'd by the King's diſpatching ſeveral People of Quality to viſit the Ports, and by his own Progreſs ſoon after for that purpoſe. Upon general Alarms and Advices of Danger, Forts were erected, the Fleet equipped, and Muſters taken all over the Kingdom. It is true, the Lord Herbert who relates all this, does not point upon the place of any formidable Preparation, or diſcover the Enemy either by Sea or Land. However, the Scene look'd buſy and black upon the People, threw in an Amuſement, and made them drop their Concern at the Suppreſſion of the Abbeys. They hop'd the Charge of the War would be ſupported by the Crown, and their own Pockets ſpared by ſuch an Expedient. But all this Noiſe of an Invaſion was look'd on as no better than Management and Myſtery, by a great many: It was a Strain, they ſaid, of a Party, to colour the Practice, and carry on the Deſign. There was a melancholly Account of the Ruine of Religious Houſes tranſmitted beyond Sea. The Methods for bringing this Matter about, the raizing ſtately Buildings, laying Churches and Chapels in Rubbiſh, the prophane Scrambling of ſome of the Viſitors, and the lamentable Diſappointment of the Country, made a tragical Relation. The reſt of Chriſtendom ſtood at gaze at the Engliſh Court, and were ſurpriz'd to Aſtoniſhment. The King's Neceſſities were too faint a Colour to diſcharge the Imputation. The Cenſure went deep, and the Scandal ſpread, notwithſtanding this Allegation.

Id. p. 443.

Reports of War and publick Danger, made the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, leſs regretted.

The Parliament was now ſitting, and the Bill paſs'd for regulating the Precedency of the Lords of Parliament: And here we meet with a Recital of the King's being Supreme Head of the Church of England: And that for the good Exerciſe of the ſaid moſt Royal Dignity and Office, his Highneſs hath made Thomas Lord Cromwell, and Lord Privy Seal, his Vicegerent for good and due Miniſtration of Juſtice, to be had in all Cauſes and Caſes touching the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and for the godly Reformation and Redreſs of all Hereſies and Abuſes in the ſaid Church (f). And in conſequence of this Delega-

An Act for regulating Precedency.

(f) 31 H. 8. c. 10. Statutes at large.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

Delegation, the Act gives Cromwell place of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The next Act relating to the Church, conveys all the Religious Houſes, Colleges, and Hoſpitals, diſſolv'd, or to be diſſolv'd hereafter, to the King, his Heirs and Succeſſours for ever. The Preamble ſets forth, that ſundry Abbots, Priors, Abbeſſes, and Prioreſſes, &c. have given the King their Mannours, Lands, &c. of their own free and voluntary Minds, good Wills, and Aſſent, without Conſtraint, or Compulſion of any manner of Perſon or Perſons, &c. (g).

(g) 31 H. 8. c. 13.

An Act for Settling all the Abbey Lands upon the Crown.

This Bill, we may obſerve, was drawn with great Care to prevent the Suſpicion of hard Uſage, and forc'd Surrenders. To make it paſs the better, a Proſpect of vaſt Advantage was opened to the Subject, the Reader ſhall have the Detail in Sir Edward Coke's Words.

Sir Edward Coke's Remark of the Diſappointment of the Kingdom, in what was promis'd by the Court.

“On the King's behalf, ſaith this learned Gentleman, the Members of both Houſes were informed in Parliament, that no King or Kingdom were ſafe, but where the King had three Abilities. Firſt, To live of his own, and able to defend his Kingdoms upon any ſudden Invaſion or Inſurrection. Secondly, To aid his Confederates, otherwiſe they would never aſſiſt him. Thirdly, To reward his well-deſerving Servants. Now the Project was, if the Parliament would give unto him all the Abbeys, Priories, Frieries, Nunneries, and other Monaſteries, that, for ever, in time then to come, he would take Order, that the ſame ſhould not be converted to private Uſe. But Firſt, That his Exchequer, for the Purpoſes aforeſaid, ſhould be enriched. Secondly, The Kingdom be ſtrengthened by the Maintenance of Forty Thouſand well train'd Soldiers, with ſkilful Captains and Commanders. Thirdly, For the Benefit and Eaſe of the Subject, who never afterwards (as was projected) in any time to come, ſhould be charg'd with Subſidies, Fifteenths, Loans, or other common Aids. Fourthly, Leſt the Honour of the Realm ſhould receive any Diminution of Honour, by the Diſſolution of the ſaid Monaſteries, there being twenty nine Lords of Parliament of the Abbots and Priors (that held of the King per Baroniam) that the King would create a Number of Nobles. The ſaid Monaſteries were given to the King by the Authority of divers Acts of Parliament; (h) but no Proviſion was therein made for the ſaid Project, or any part thereof; only ad faciendum populum, theſe Poſſeſſions were given to the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors, to do and uſe therewith his, and their own Wills, to the Pleaſure of Almighty God, the Honour and Profit of the Realm.

(h) 27 H. 8. c. 28.
31 H. 8. c. 13.
32 H. 8. c. 14.
32 H. 8. c. 23.
34 H. 8. c. 16.
37 H. 8. c. 34.

“Now obſerve the Cataſtrophe. In the ſame Parliament of 32 H. 8. when the great and opulent Priory of St. John's of Jeruſalem was given to the King, he demanded, and had a Subſidy both of the Laity and Clergy, and the like he had in 34 H. 8. and in 37 H. 8. he had another Subſidy. And ſince the Diſſolution of the aforeſaid Monaſteries, he exacted great Loans, and againſt Law receiv'd the ſame (i). Thus far Sir Edward Coke.

(i) Coke inſtit. pt. 4. fol. 44.

To bring the Houſes to a farther Diſpoſition for paſſing the Bill, the Nobility were promiſed large Shares in the Spoils, as Sir William Dugdale phraſeth it (k). They had the Proſpect either of free Gifts, eaſie Purchaſe, or very advantageous Exchanges. The Lay-Gentry were likewiſe promiſed a conſiderable Riſe, both in Honour and Eſtate. Neither were they diſappointed in their Expectation: For no ſmall part of the Abbey-Lands were granted to the Laity, before the ſitting of this Parliament (l). This was done by the Advice of the Viſitor-General Cromwell: The parcelling theſe Lands out amongſt a great many Proprietors was the only way, as he told the King, to clinch the Buſineſs, and make the Settlement irrevocable (m). Fox makes this Suppreſſion of Abbies, a principal Part of Cromwell's Commendation (n). But by the Favour of this Martyrologiſt, Cromwell's adviſing the King to part with the Abbey-Lands, is not altogether cover'd from Exception. For by conveying theſe Lands into a great many Hands, the Crown was diſfurniſh'd, and the Promiſe of maintaining a great Army out of theſe Revenues made impracticable: In ſhort, the Publick was quite diſappointed by this Expedient, and the Neceſſity of Taxes continued as great as ever. Beſides Fox might have conſider'd, that the Monaſtick Life is no part of Popery: For Popery, to take it rightly, means nothing more than the Encroachments and Innovations of the Court of Rome. But it is well known, there were Monks both in the Eaſt and Weſt, before theſe Grievances appear'd. And now, to ſay nothing more, there are Monaſteries in the Greek Church, where the Pope is diſown'd. However, it muſt be ſaid, Cromwell's Thought was politick enough for his Purpoſe. The pulling down the Buildings, likewiſe of the Religious Houſes, was not ill contrived for the new Eſtabliſhment. This was carefully done in moſt Places: To give an Inſtance (o). When the Abbey of Leiceſter was ſurrendred, Cave, one of the Commiſſioners, informs Cromwell, that himſelf, and the other Viſitors, had made Sale of the Ornaments of the Church, amounting to Two hundred, Twenty Eight Pounds, beſides the Plate, Lead, Bells, &c. From hence he proceeds to deſire this Vicar-General's Order for defacing the Church, and other Superſtitious Buildings (p).

(k) Dugdale's Warwickſhire p. 802.

Hen. VIII. K.

The Nobility have large Promiſes made them of the Grants of Abbey Lands.

(l) Rot. Pat. Ann. 30 H. 8.

(m) Ld. Herbert, p. 376.

(n) Fox, V. 2. p. 513.

Cromwell's Advice.

Dugdale, p. 803.

(o) Dugdale Warwick. p. 803.

The Religious Houſes pull'd down.

(p) Biblioth. Cotton Cleop. E. 4. fol. 215.

The Ruin of the Monaſteries giving a new Face to the Kingdom, and appearing ſo very extraordinary, it may not be improper to make a few Remarks upon ſo great an Alteration.

Remarks upon the Diſſolution of the Abbies.

By what hath been related already, it is pretty plain the Lives of the Religious were not ſo irregular as ſome Authors repreſent them. But granting this Charge had been true, it would have been no ſufficient Reaſon to have ſeiz'd their Eſtates: If Inſobriety and Miſbehaviour were ſufficient Grounds for Forfeiture; if Ill Living, and not anſwering the Ends of an Eſtate, would juſtifie the Diſpoſſeſſing the Owner; Property would be very precarious, and the Engliſh Tenures ſlenderly guarded.

For if we conſider the Matter cloſely, all Chriſtians are bound to ſtrict Living, to Diſcipline, to large Diſtributions of Charity, little leſs than the Monks. They are falſe to the Engagement of Baptiſm if they manage otherwiſe. The Monaſtick Inſtitutions were principally deſign'd to revive the Piety of the Ancient Chriſtians, and bring up Practice to the Rule of the Goſpel.

Farther, if Degeneracy and Miſbehaviour were the grand Motive for Diſſolution, why were they not put under a better Management? Why had they not ſome Tryal for Reformation? If unneceſſary Expence, and Omiſſion of Kindneſs to the Poor; if Luxury and Licence are good Fleury Manners of the Chriſtians.

Reaſons to change the Owner, and determine the Eſtate; if this will hold, we ſhould have ſtrange Transferring of Titles: At this rate, 'tis to be feared, ſome People would have a very ſlender Claim to their Abbey-Lands.

But if Immorality, or Miſpending of Revenue, is no ſufficient Reaſon for defeating of Titles, why did the Monaſteries ſuffer? Why muſt the Church be diſpoſſeſs'd upon this Score? Why were thoſe Monaſteries, which were unexceptionable in their Management, which were charitable to the Poor, and hoſpitable to the Rich; Why were theſe involv'd in the common Fate, and condemn'd to Diſſolution with the reſt? By the Evidence of Records, there were many more Righteous Monaſteries in England, than Righteous Men in Sodom. However, this Over-balance of Merit could not divert the Calamity, nor preſerve them from Ruin. Thus we ſee how much the Mercies of God are greater then thoſe of Men! Juſtice below is ſometimes blind upon myſterious Motives, ſtrikes without Diſtinction, and ſweeps away the Innocent with the Guilty!

If the Monks were tied to greater Strictneſs than others, are not the Owners of Abbey-Lands bound to take their Eſtates with the Conditions annex'd? I do not ſay they are bound to the whole Compaſs of their Inſtitution; their Tonſure, or their Habit, their Cælibacy or Retirement, can't reaſonably be expected. But are they not oblig'd to the more ſignificant Duties, for which theſe Houſes were firſt endow'd? Are not theſe ſecular Grantees bound to the moſt ſubſtanſtantial part of the Founder's Will? Are they not under the Tie of being more frequent in their Devotions, more guarding in their Conduct, more remarkable in their Charity than other People? That the Parliament in Henry the VIII's. Time was ſome what of this Opinion, is plain: Why elſe did they oblige the Proprietors of Abbey Lands to extraordinary Degrees of Hoſpitality? (q) If ſtrict Living, ſober Hoſpitality, and Serviceableneſs to the Poor, are accounted Incumbrances, the Abbey Lands ſeem chargeable with them. For tho' Princes Charters, and Acts of Parliament, may convey a legal Title; yet, that they can deſtroy the force of Conſecrations, diſpenſe with the Meaning of the Founders, and defeat the Deſign of the original Grant, is farther than I can diſcover. Acts of Parliament have, without Queſtion, Authority to over-rule Claims, and extinguiſh Titles, and govern the Courts of of Juſtice. But are not ſome things above the reach of the Legiſlature? Can a Statute unconſecrate a Church, enact Sunday no Holy-day, or Sacrilege no Sin? Is not God Almighty capable of Property? If we muſt anſwer in the Affirmative; how can an Eſtate dedicated to his Service, and veſted in him, be taken away without his Conſent? Which way can the Intention of the Donor, and the main Deſign of the Conveyance, be overlooked and defeated? Regularity and Largeneſs of Mind, therefore, are the leaſt that can be expected from the Abbey Proprietors. Theſe, it may be, are the loweſt Requiſites to make ſuch Alienations inoffenſive to them.

And therefore, when thoſe who enjoy theſe Religious Eſtates, rack their Tenants, or overlook the Poor: When they exhauſt themſelves in Figure or Licentiouſneſs: When any thing of this happens, the Intention of the pious Settlement is lamentably diſappointed: The Miſapplication is doubly criminal: And without Reformation, it is much to be fear'd, the Curſe of the Founders will light upon them. To be better enabled to ridicule Virtue, to browbeat Religion, or ſet a faſhion in Vice, is wide of the Deſign of a Religious Fondation. Thoſe therefore, who are poſſeſs'd of theſe Lands, ſhould be particularly careful in theſe Matters.

It 'tis ſaid, the Monaſteries, Colleges, &c. were of a Royal Foundation; and therefore the taking them away, was only a Reſumption of Grants from the Crown. To this it will be anſwer'd, The Aſſertion is wide of matter of Fact; and that many of the Abbeys &c. were founded by Biſhops and Temporal Lords, and ſome by Subjects of leſſer Quality.

Beſides, all the Eſtates in the Kingdom were Grants from the Crown, as appears from the Tenures: And yet it would have been look'd upon as an abitrary Attempt, to have taken them away. For a Gift is a Tranſlation of Right, extinguiſhes the Title of the Donor, and veſts the Property in another.

But this Alienation of Abbey Lands was made by Act of Parliament: That is true; and therefore it was a legal Ouſting. But then 'twill be asked, if a great part of the Temporal Lords and others of the rich Laity, had been thrown out of their Eſtates by a Statute, if this had happen'd, the Queſtion is, Whether ſuch Proceedings would not have been thought an Inſtance of Rigour, and a myſterious Exerciſe of Authority? Had they been thus impoveriſh'd without Treaſon or Felony to deſerve it, it may be, the Legality of the Form, and the Pleaſure of the Legiſlators, would hardly have reconciled them to ſuch Uſage. They could not have argued againſt the Force of the Law, but the Friendſhip of thoſe that made it would not have been ſo clear.

Farther, The Endowments of the Church, were ſettled upon important Conſiderations: For the Honour of God; for the Advancement of Learning; for the Intereſt of Eternity: And therefore, in Acts of Reſumption, the Church hath been particularly excepted (r).

Laſtly, The Rights and Liberties of the Church had been confirm'd in thirty Parliaments: This made ſome People think it ſtrange, that King Henry the VIII's. Parliaments ſhould be of ſo very different a Sentiment from thoſe in former Reigns. It hath been obſerv'd, theſe Methods of Proceeding were no ſtrong Recommendation of what was well done in Eccleſiaſtical Matters. Had the Engliſh Laity not enrich'd themſelves with the Spoils of the Church, the Reformation would have had a clearer Complexion, and been better underſtood by the reſt of Chriſtendom: But when Proteſtancy had ſuch a Face of Intereſt: When Men got Mannors and Townſhips by renouncing the Pope: When People of ſlender Pretenſions made Eſtates out of their Orthodoxy, and ſhot up into Title and Figure: When the Church was ſtripp'd of her Revenues, and maim'd in her Juriſdiction: When Changes in Religion were carried on by Revolt and Civil Commotion, as it happen'd in France, Scotland, and the Low-Countries: When they ſaw Diſcipline laid aſleep, Learning decay, and Liberty encreaſe; theſe were diſcouraging Circumſtances. This made the moderate Papiſts ſtand off from the Preſident: They choſe rather to ſubmit to the Encroachments, and bear with the Innovations of the Court of Rome, than adventure the Enfranchizing themſelves. And tho' I do not commend them for their Caution, yet I believe the Motives to their Acquieſcence are not ill gueſs'd: And thus the exceſſive Claims of the Court of Rome, the indefenſible Doctrines

---

(q) 27 H 8. c. 28.

(r) Rot. Parl. E. 4. & lib. See the Book concerning the Rights and Privileges of the Clergy, &c. Tranſcribed from the Parliament Rolls by Archbiſhop Laud, and remaining in the Library at Lambeth.

and Practice of that Communion, which probably might have been clear'd in moſt Places of the Latin Church, are by ſuch Methods as theſe, it may be more fix'd and eſtabliſh'd then ever.

'Twas ſomewhat unhappy, the Laity ſeem'd to ſtand ſo much to the Point of Intereſt, made a Gain of their Godlineſs, and built ſo many Fortunes out of the Ruins of the Church. This, how well ſoever it might be meant, carried an Appearance of Deſign, and gave a diſcouraging Proſpect to other Countries. Whereas, had they planted their Zeal againſt the Superſtition in the Monaſteries, and let the Revenues alone: Had the Ruſt been rubb'd off, and the Metal left behind: Had theſe Religious been brought back to the Primitive Standard: Had they been mended in their Manners and Belief, without forfeiting their Eſtates; the Conduct of the whole Buſineſs would have been more intelligible. Nay, had the number been retrench'd, and the Revenues tranſlated to publick and pious Uſes: Had there been more Biſhopricks erected, and better endow'd: Had the Abbeys diſſolv'd been turn'd into Publick Schools, and Seminaries of Learning, into Hoſpitals and Invalides; into Proviſions, for diſabled Souldiers and Seamen; for the Poor worn up with Labour and Age; for Orphans and Widows; for Gentlemen and Tradeſmen unfortunate without their own Fault: Had half the Monaſteries been thus diſpos'd of, the loſs of them would not have been regretted; the Community would have found their Account in it, and the Purity of the Intention been more viſible.

I do not deny, but that there might be Sincerity at the bottom; and that the Courtiers might be govern'd by good Meaning, and Publick Regards. All that I ſay is, the Diſintereſtedneſs of the Matter doth not lie ſo open to common View: But then we are to conſider, that the inſide of things are ſometimes moſt valuable. Some Peoples Actions, like rich Mines, are leſs promiſing upon the Surface: And when it happens thus, every Body hath not force enough to dig down to the Treaſure, and reach the Honeſty of their Neighbour.

However, it muſt be confeſs'd, there were ſeveral ſhocking Circumſtances in the Reign of Henry VIII. and his Childrens. For to ſee Churches pull'd down, or rifled; the Plate ſwept off the Altar, and the holy Furniture converted to common Uſe, had no great Air of Devotion. To ſee the Choir undreſs'd, to make the Drawing Room, and Bed-Chamber fine, was not very Primitive at firſt View. The forc'd Surrender of Abbeys, the maiming of Biſhopricks, and lopping the beſt Branches of their Revenues; the ſtopping impropriated Tithes from paſſing in the ancient Channel; theſe things are apt to puzzle a vulgar Capacity: Unleſs a Man's Underſtanding is more then ordinarily improv'd, he'll be at a loſs to reconcile theſe Meaſures with Chriſtian Maxims, and make them fall in with Conſcience and Reformation!

The Abbeys granted to the Crown, with their Privilege of being diſcharg'd from the Payment of Tythes.

To proceed, By the Act of Diſſolution abovemention'd, where the Abbeys were diſcharg'd of the Payment of Tythes, the King, and all the Grantees or Purchaſers of the Crown, are likewiſe to enjoy thoſe Lands without Paying Tythes. The impropriated Parſonages are alſo convey'd to the King, his Grantees, and Purchaſers, by this Act. By the drawing of the Bill, it appears, the King deſign'd to alienate the Abbey-Lands from the Crown; and that the Courtiers and others, had a clear Proſpect of enriching themſelves by the Diſſolution. The penning the Statute in this manner, I ſuppoſe, made Sir Edward Coke take the Freedom to ſay, that the furniſhing the Exchequer, the maintaining a great Army upon the King's Revenue, and diſcharging the Subjects forever from the burthen of Taxes, were only ſpecious Pretences thrown out, ad faciendum Populum.

The transferring the Privilege of not paying Tythes from the Convents to the Lay Proprietors, and not returning the Impropriations to the Pariſhes on which they were firſt ſettled, was no ſmall Hardſhip on the Church. The diſmembring the Tythes and Glebes from the Parochial Prieſts, and annexing them to Monaſteries, was a modern Encroachment, defeated the original Settlement, and was no better then downright Popery; for it was the Popes who made theſe Appropriations, and broke in upon the ancient Practice. However, the religious Character of the Monks, and their having ſeveral Prieſts to ſupply the Cure, gave ſome Pretence for theſe Alienations: But the Laity have no Character for a Plea of this Nature; they are in no Condition to perform the Sacerdotal Office, nor diſcharge any of thoſe Duties for which the Church was endow'd. What a lamentable Maintenance is reſerv'd for the Vicars in many Places, is too well known: The Queſtion is, whether thoſe of the Laity, who detain the impropriated Tythes, and ſtarve the Benefice, are not to anſwer for the conſequent Miſchief; that is, for the Defects which are like to happen in the Qualifications of the Pariſh-Prieſt; for the Inſignificancy of his Intereſt and Character; for the Diſadvantages in Conduct, Diſcipline, and Learning; for the Ignorance and Immorality of the People under his Cure? The Expoſtulation in Malachi is very remarkable: And how far the Application will hold, ought ſeriouſly to be conſider'd (s). Will a Man rob God? Yet ye have robb'd me: But ye ſay, wherein have ye robb'd me? In Tythes and Offerings. Ye are curs'd with a Curſe: For ye have robb'd me, even this whole Nation. Bring all the Tythes into the Storehouſe, that there may be meat in my Houſe, &c. Farther,

The Pope's granting Appropriations, a great Miſfortune to the Church.

All Abbey-Lands are, by this Statute, put within the Survey of the Court of Augmentations, excepting ſuch as come to the Crown by Attainder.

Laſtly, All the Abbeys, &c. which before the Diſſolution were exempted from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, are by this Act return'd to the Inſpection and Government of the Ordinary. This, as is very worthily obſerv'd, (t) had been a great Happineſs to the Church, had not it been for this Clauſe: That the King might appoint others to viſit them: Thus the Benefit was partly loſt, and the old Miſfortune return'd in a great Meaſure: For as the learned Hiſtorian continues, many of the Purchaſers of theſe Lands, had the Privilege of viſiting the Churches and Chapels formerly exemted, thrown into the Conveyance, from whence great Diſorders have follow'd. For thus the Biſhops are barr'd the Exerciſe of their Juriſdiction over theſe Churches: And thus both Prieſt and People, have oftentimes made an ill Uſe of their Legal Diſcharge: For not being liable to the Diſcipline of their Dioceſan, they are apt to ſtrike out into Licence and Diſorder. Thus thoſe who were diſaffected to the Hierarchy, ſometimes cenſure the Prelates for overlooking thoſe Inſtances of Scandal, which they cannot puniſh without running againſt the Statute. This Abuſe, which began upon Papal Exemptions, continues ſtill unprovided with an effectual Remedy.

Exempted Abbeys return'd to the Juriſdiction of the Ordinary, but not without a Clauſe of Exception.

(s) Mal. 3. v. 8, 9, 10.

(t) Bp. Burnet pt. 1. p. 261.

Had it not been for this Statute, the Surrenders might very well have been queſtioned: For the Abbots and Convents were but Truſtees and Tenants for Life: What Right cou'd they then have to convey away all their Lands, and diſſolve their Corporation? Beſides, ſome of them are ſaid to be uſed with Dureſs, and frighted into Compliance (t). The Abbey of Wooburn ſeems to have fallen under this Diſadvantage, as appears by their Submiſſion to the King. In this Inſtrument they mention a Charge of High-Treaſon, and other Crimes, from which they endeavour to purge themſelves. However, rather than conteſt any farther with the King, they ſubmit to a Surrender, having before acknowledg'd his Supremacy. In the Cloſe of their Submiſſion, they come towards a Petition they may be continued, and their Abbey re-granted to them (u).

The Abbots of Reading, Colcheſter, and Glaſſenbury, executed for Incompliance.

The learned Biſhop Godwin obſerves, there were but three Abbots who had Courage enough to maintain their Conſcience, and run the laſt Extremity: Theſe were the Abbot of Colcheſter, Hugh Farringdon of Reading, and Richard Whiting of Glaſſenbury. It ſeems neither Bribery nor Terror, nor any other diſhonourable Motives, could prevail upon theſe Men. To reach them therefore another way, the Oath of Supremacy was offer'd them, and upon their Refuſal, they were condemn'd for High-Treaſon. Thus Beach Abbot of Colcheſter was executed at that Town, and Faringdon at Reading, with two Prieſts, Rug and Oinion: Whiting of Glaſſenbury, an old Man, was try'd at Wells, diſmiſs'd the Court, and ſuffer'd to go at large: And thus being upon his Return to his Monaſtery, and not ſuſpecting any farther Misfortune, he is ſaid to be ſeiz'd, dragg'd to a Hill call'd Tor, near Glaſſenbury, and hurried out of the World, without being allow'd the Liberty of taking leave of his Convent, which he earneſtly deſired. Two Monks, Roger Jacob, and John Thorn, were executed with him: They were charg'd with giving him ill Advice, and bringing him to ſuch an obſtinate Inflexibleneſs (w).

Saunders makes a more tragical Relation of this Matter, that Whiting was ſent for up to London, that upon declining to ſign a Surrender, his Papers were ſearch'd, and a Tract againſt the King's Divorce found amongſt them; that when he came to Wells, he was ſo far from the Apprehenſion of a Trial, that he went voluntarily into the Court, and offer'd to take his Place upon the Bench (y.) But Saunders being an Hiſtorian of ſlender Credit, I ſhall go on with him no farther. Theſe three Abbots were not executed till December this Year; but I have mention'd them now for the Reſemblance of the Matter.

The Suppreſſion of the Abbeys cenſured.

To proceed, This Suppreſſion of Abbeys, was generally diſliked. Beſides, the manner of diſpoſing the Eſtates, was not clear in Point of Equity to every Body. Some People were of Opinion, the Lands belonging to religious Houſes, ſhould have reverted to the Founders, or fallen to the Lords of whom the Lands were held, by way of Eſcheat. But this laſt Title cou'd have no Pretenſion, becauſe the Anceſtors of theſe ſuperior Lords, had confirm'd the Endowments of the Abbeys: But the Heirs of the Founders, 'tis thought, might have recover'd the Lands notwithſtanding the Surrenders, had their Claim not been barr'd by Act of Parliament (x). The King was diſpleas'd with Cranmer, and the other Biſhops of his Party, for not falling altogether into his Meaſures. Theſe Prelates could not be brought to a thorough Complaiſance in Parliament. They were willing the Abbeys of Royal Foundations ſhould return to the Crown: But for the reſt, they inſiſted upon their being turn'd into Hoſpitals, Schools, and ſuch other Eſtabliſhments of publick Service. 'Twas thought the King's Reſentment of this Incompliance brought him to the Thought of the Six Articles, of which more afterwards (z).

Pretended Preſidents for Diſſolution.

To make this general Diſſolution leſs ſurprizing, there were ſome Preſidents which ſmoothed the Way, and look'd towards the preſent Buſineſs. Of this kind, were the Pope's ſuppreſſing the Order of the Templars, the Diſſolution of the Priors Aliens in the Reign of Henry the Fifth (a). To which we may add, the Religious Houſes lately ſuppreſs'd by Cardinal Wolſey. Though none of theſe Inſtances came fully up to the point; for great part of the Templars Eſtates in England, were ſettled on the Knights Hoſpitalers. The Prior Aliens Lands were diſpoſed of, as Selden informs us, to Eccleſiaſtical Corporations *, and thoſe diſſolved by Cardinal Wolſey, converted to a reſembling Uſe: As to the Priories Alien, none of them were diſſolved by Henry the Fifth's Parliament, excepting thoſe Cells which were not Conventual, but depended on foreign Monaſteries. Theſe Monks having their main Intereſt in another Country, beſides the Suſpicion of a dangerous Correſpondence, convey'd a great part of the Profit of their Houſes to their Convents beyond Sea, and for this reaſon were reckoned a kind of Nuiſance to the Commonwealth.

Before I take leave of this part of the Hiſtory, it may be expected I ſhould give ſome Account of the Mitred Abbies, of the Revenues, of the Serviceableneſs of theſe Religious Houſes to the State, and of ſome Inconveniencies conſequent upon the Diſſolution.

And firſt of the Mitred Abbots: Theſe ſate all in the Houſe of Lords, and voted there. They held of the King in capite per Baroniam. Their Endowment being at leaſt an entire Barony, which conſiſted of thirteen Knights Fees. Thus they were advanced to the State and Honour of Spiritual Lords, as appears by the Abbot of Taviſtock's Patent who was made a Mitred Abbot in the Beginning of this Reign (b).

Mitred Abbots

The Number of the Mitred Abbots, are reckoned twenty ſeven by Fuller, twenty eight by the Lord Herbert, and twenty nine by Sir Edward Coke (c). The Lord Herbet's Liſt is as follows; St. Albans, St. Peter's Weſtminſter, St. Edmondsbury, St. Bennet's of Holm, Berdſey, Shrewsbury, Crowland, Abingdon, Eveſham, Glouceſter, Ramſey, St. Mary's in York, Tewxbury, Reading, Battail, Winchcombe, Hide by Wincheſter, Cirenceſter, Waltham, Malmesbury, Thorney, St. Auguſtine in Canterbury, Selby, Peterborough, St. John's in Colcheſter, Coventry, Taveſtock; St. John's of Jeruſalem and Glaſſenbury are omitted. The Valuation extracted from Speed, may be ſeen in the Records (d).

Beſides theſe, there were four Nunneries, Shaftsberry, Barkin in Eſſex, St. Mary's Wincheſter, and Wilton, which held of the King by an entire Barony, but the Abbeſſes were not ſummon'd to Parliament upon the Score of their Sex. However, they had Writs directed to them, ad habendum ſervitium ſuum, that is to ſend their Quota of Soldiers into the Field, in proportion to their Knights Fees (e).

(t) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 238.

(u) Cotton. Lib. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 89.

(w) Godwin. Annal. Ann. 1539.

(y) Saunders de Schiſm. Angl. p. 199.

(x) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. fol. 261.

(z) Stripe. Cranmer's Life from Foxe's MSS. p. 72.

(a) 4 H. 5. Rot. Parl. Raſtal. Tit. Monaſteries.

* Selden's Hiſt. of Tythes, c. 13. p. 396.

(b) See Records, Numb. 43.

(c) Coke 4. Inſtit. fol. 44.

(d) Records, Numb. 44.

(e) Rot. Pat. 5. E. 1. Dorſ. in 11. Rot. Scutag. ejus Ann. M. 7. Fuller, p. 294.

There were other Abbies, though of leſſer Quality, yet of wealthier Endowments than ſeveral of the Parliamentary Abbots. I ſhall mention Six.

The old Valuation of their Abbeys.

	l.	s.	d.	ob.	q.
1. Fountaines, Richmondſhire,	1173	00	7	1	0
2. Lewes, Suſſex,	1691	09	6	0	1
3. St. Werburgh's Cheſhire	1073	17	7	1	0
4. Leiceſter,	1062	00	4	1	1
5. Merton, Surrey,	1039	05	3	0	0
6. Furnace, Richmondſhire,	969	7	1	0	0

To theſe we may add the Nunnery of Shaftsbury, valued at 1329 l. 12 s. 3 d. Barking in Eſſex, and Sion in Middleſex, fell not much ſhort of the Revenues of Shaftsbury, the Rents of either of them amounting to more than 1000 l. per Annum. The Abbies ſuppreſſed in England and Wales, were Six Hundred Forty Five, as Cambden reports: But the Liſt of them taken out of the Court of Firſt Fruits and Tenths, mounts the Number to Seven Hundred Fifty Four. And therefore it is likely the Hundred and Ten Hoſpitals diſſolved, were thrown into the Catalogue. The yearly Revenue is computed at a Hundred Thirty Five Thouſand, Five Hundred Twenty Two Pounds, Eighteen Shillings and Ten Pence (f). Beſides this, the Money raiſ'd out of the Stock of Cattle and Corn, out of the Timber, Lead and Bells, out of the Furniture, Plate, and Church Ornaments, amounted to a vaſt Sum, as may be collected from what was brought off from the Monaſtery of St. Edmundsbury. From hence, as appears from Records, Five Thouſand Marks of Gold and Silver, beſides ſeveral Jewels of great Value, were ſeis'd by the Viſitors. All which, ſaith the Lord Herbert, being by ſome openly called Rapine and Sacrilege, I will no way excuſe (g). And here this noble Hiſtorian can't help lamenting the Ruine of ſo many pious Foundations: Eſtabliſhments which afforded ſo handſome a Proviſion to Perſons of a contemplative, devout, and retired Temper. As to the Revenues of the Abbies, they were ſometimes undervalued by the Viſitors, in hopes it may be of an eaſier Grant or Purchaſe (h): And therefore in all likelihood, upon Rack-Rents, and modern Computation, the Lands would riſe to near twenty times as much.

Fuller's Ch. Hiſt.

Cambd. Brit.

(b) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 381.

The Ld. Herbert's Reflection upon their Diſſolution.

(g) Ld. Herbert, p. 444.

(b) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 6. *p.*295

The Advantages accruing to the Publick from theſe religious Houſes, were conſiderable, upon ſeveral Accounts. To mention ſome of them: The Temporal Nobility and Gentry had a creditable Way of providing for their younger Children. Thoſe who were diſpoſed to withdraw from the World, or not likely to make their Fortunes in it, had a handſome Retreat to the Cloyſter. Here they were furniſh'd with Conveniences for Life and Study, with Opportunities for Thought and Recollection, and over and above paſs'd their Time in a Condition not unbecoming their Quality. The Charge of the Family being thus leſſen'd, there was no Temptation for racking of Tenants; no occaſion for breaking the Bulk of the Eſtate to provide for the younger Children. Thus Figure and good Houſe-keeping was maintain'd with greater Eaſe, the Entireneſs of the Eſtate, and by conſequence, the laſting of the Family better ſecur'd. 'Tis true, there were ſometimes ſmall Sums given to the Monaſteries for admitting Perſons to be profeſs'd; but generally ſpeaking, they received them gratis. This they thought moſt adviſable, to cultivate an Intereſt with Perſons of Condition. By this means, they engag'd great Families to appear for them, upon Occaſion, both at Court and in Parliament.

The Abbeys ſerviceable to the Publick, upon ſeveral Accounts.

The Abbies were very ſerviceable Places for the Education of young People: Every Convent had one Perſon or more aſſign'd for this Buſineſs. Thus the Children of the Neighbourhood were taught Grammar and Muſick without any Charge to their Parents. And in the Nunneries, thoſe of the other Sex learned to work, and read Engliſh, with ſome Advances into Latin, and particularly the Nunnery at Godſtow in Oxfordſhire, was famous upon this Account, and for breeding young Gentlewomen and others to Improvements proper to their Condition.

Farther, it is to the Abbies we are oblig'd, for moſt of our Hiſtorians both of Church and State: Theſe Places of Retirement had both moſt Learning and Leiſure for ſuch Undertakings: Neither did they want Information for ſuch Employment. For not to mention ſeveral Epiſcopal Sees were founded for the Cloyſter, the Mitred Abbots, as we have ſeen ſate in Parliament, and not a few of the Religious had a Share in the Convocation. It is not deny'd, but that they were ſome of the beſt Landlords. Their reſerv'd Rents were low, and their Fines eaſy: And ſometimes the Product of the Farms, without paying Money, diſcharged the Tenants in a great meaſure. They were particularly remarkable for their Hoſpitality. The Monaſteries were, as it were, Houſes of publick Entertainment for the Gentry that travell'd: And as for their Diſtributions of Charity, it may be gueſs'd from one Inſtance. While the Religious Houſes were ſtanding, there were no Proviſions of Parliament to relieve the Poor: No Aſſeſsment upon the Pariſh for that purpoſe. But now this Charge upon the Kingdom amounts, at a modeſt Computation, to Eight Hundred Thouſand Pounds per Annum.

Hiſtories moſtly written by the Monks.

Beſides this Rent-Charge, as it were, drawn upon the whole Nation by the Diſſolution, the ancient Nobility ſuffer'd conſiderably. For the Seiſure and Surrender of the Abbeys, being confirm'd to the Crown by Act of Parliament, the Services reſerv'd by the Founders were extinguiſh'd of Courſe. To mention ſome of them, the Abbeys that held by Knight's Service, were bound to provide ſuch a Number of Soldiers as their Eſtates requir'd, and to furniſh them for the Field at their own Charges: Thus their Men were to appear at the Muſters, and attend the Heirs of their Founders, or ſuch Benefactors who had ſettled a Knights Fee upon them.

The Founders of Abbeys ſuffered by Diſſolution.

Secondly, Where they held by Knight-Service, they were bound to contribute towards a Fortune for marrying their Lord's eldeſt Daughter. And thirdly, To pay a Sum of Money to defray the Expence of Knighthood, when that Diſtinction was conferr'd upon the Founder's eldeſt Son.

Laſtly, The Founders had the Benefit of Corrodies: That is, they had the Privilege of quartering a certain Number of poor Servants upon the Abbeys. Thus People that were worn up with Age and Labour, and in no Condition to ſupport themſelves, were not thrown up to ſtarving, or Pariſh Collections, but had a comfortable Retreat to the Abbeys, where they were maintain'd without Hardſhip or Marks of Indigence, during Life. It is granted, where theſe Corrodies were alter'd into Payment, and diſcharg'd for an annual Sum of Money, there the Intereſt continued, after the Diſſolution, and the Money was paid by the Exchequer. But the Corrodies continued in kind, fell with the Abbeys. For in the Clauſe for ſaving the Rights, Titles, and Intereſt of the Founders and Patrons of Abbeys, their Heirs and Succeſſors, Rents, Services, Rent Secke, and all other Services and Suits are only excepted (h).

(b) 31 H. 8. c. 13.

The ſcandalous Deſtruction of Abbey Libraries.

Another Misfortune conſequent upon the Suppreſſion of the Abbeys, was an ignorant Deſtruction of a great many valuable Books; moſt of the learned Records of that Age were lodged in the Monaſteries. Printing was then but a late Invention, and had ſecur'd but a few Books in compariſon of the reſt. The Main of Learning lay in Manuſcripts, and the moſt conſiderable of theſe, both for Number and Quality, were in the Monks Poſſeſſion. But the Abbeys, at their Diſſolution, falling oftentimes into Hands who underſtood no farther than the Eſtates, the Libraries were miſerably diſpos'd of. The Books, inſtead of being remov'd to royal Libraries, to thoſe of Cathedrals, or the Univerſities, were frequently thrown in to the Grantees, as things of ſlender Conſideration. Now theſe Men oftentimes prov'd a very ill Protection for Learning and Antiquity. Their Avarice was ſometimes ſo mean, and their Ignorance ſo undiſtinguiſhing, that when the Covers were ſomewhat rich, and would yield a little, they pull'd them off, threw away the Books, or turned them to Waſte-paper.* Thus many noble Manuſcripts were deſtroy'd, to a publick Scandal, and an irreparable Loſs of Learning.

John Bale the Centuriſt, a Man remarkably averſe to Popery, and the Monaſtick Inſtitution, remonſtrates againſt this Barbarity, in pretty ſtrong Language, to King Edward the Sixth (i). The Reader ſhall have it in his own Words.

(i) Bales's Declaration upon Leland's Journal, An. 1549. Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 6. *p.*335.

> Covetouſneſs was at that time ſo buſie about private Commodity, that publick Wealth in that moſt neceſſary, and of reſpect, was not any where regarded. A Number of them which purchas'd thoſe ſuperſtitious Manſions, reſerved of thoſe Library Books, ſome to ſerve their Jakes, ſome to ſcoure their Candleſticks, and ſome to rub their Boots, and ſome they ſold to the Grocers and Soap ſellers, and ſome they ſent over Sea to the Book-binders, not in ſmall Numbers, but at times, whole Ships full. Yea, the Univerſities of this Realm are not all clear in this deteſtable Fact: But curſed is the Belly which ſeeketh to be fed with ſo ungodly Gains, and ſo deeply ſhameth his natural Country. I know a Merchant Man (which ſhall at this time be nameleſs) that bought the Contents of two noble Libraries for Forty Shillings Price; a Shame it is to be ſpoken. This Stuff hath he occupied inſtead of gray Paper, by the Space of more than theſe ten Years, and yet he hath Store enough for as many Years to come. A prodigious Example is this, and to be abhorred of all Men which love their Nation as they ſhould do. Yea, What may bring our Realm to more Shame and Rebuke, than to have it noiſed abroad, that we are Deſpiſers of Learning? I judge this to be true, and utter it with Heavineſs, that neither the Britains, under the Romans and Saxons, nor yet the Engliſh People under the Danes and Normans, had ever ſuch Damage of their learned Monuments, as we have ſeen in our Time. Our Poſterity may well curſe this wicked Fact of our Age, this unreaſonable Spoil of England's moſt noble Antiquities.

Fuller breaks out into a paſſionate Declamation upon this Occaſion, complains that all Arts and Sciences fell under this common Calamity. How many admirable Manuſcripts of the Fathers, Schoolmen, and Commentators were deſtroyed by this means? What Number of Hiſtorians of all Ages and Countries? The Holy Scriptures themſelves, as much as theſe Goſpellers pretended to regard them, underwent the Fate of the reſt. If a Book had a Croſs on't, it was condemn'd for Popery, and thoſe with Lines and Circles were interpreted the Black Art, and deſtroy'd for Conjuring. And thus, as Fuller goes on, Divinity was prophaned, Mathematicks ſuffer'd for Correſpondence with evil Spirits, Phyſick was maim'd, and a Riot committed on the Law it ſelf.

The King was very bountiful, not to ſay profuſe, in parting with theſe Abbey Lands, of which Fuller gives ſeveral Inſtances. To mention one or two: He tells us, he made a Grant to a Gentlewoman of a Religious Houſe, for preſenting him with a Diſh of Puddings which happen'd to oblige his Palate. This Hiſtorian adds, he play'd away many a Thouſand a Year belonging to the Monaſteries: And particularly, that Jeſus Bells hanging in a Steeple not far from St. Paul's, London, very remarkable both for their Size and Muſick, were loſt at one Throw to Sir Miles Partridge (k). And thoſe Monaſteries which paſs'd from the Crown by Sale or Exchange, were granted upon very unequal and ſlender Conſiderations: But of this more hereafter.

(k) Stow's Survey of London in Faringdon Ward within, &c. Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 6. *p.*336, 337. Ibid. p. 341.

And that the Reader may make a fuller Judgment of theſe and other reſembling Proceedings, I ſhall ſubjoin this King's Coronation Oath. It is as follows.

The King's Coronation from a Copy taken by Selden from the Cotton Library, and interlined with the King's Hand.

> "The King ſhall ſwear, that he ſhall keep
> "and maintain the lawful Right, and the Liberties of Old Time granted by the righteous Chriſtian Kings of England, to the holy Church of England, not prejudicial to his Juriſdiction and Dignity Royal: And that he ſhall keep all the Lands, Honours, and Dignities and Freedoms of the Crown of England, in all manner whole, without any manner of Miniſhment, and the Rights of the Crown hurt, decay'd, or loſt, to his Power ſhall call again into the ancient Eſtate: And that he ſhall endeavour himſelf to keep Unity in his Clergy and temporal Subjects, he ſhall according to his Conſcience, in all his Judgments, miniſter Equity, and Right, and Juſtice, and ſhewing, where is to be ſhew'd, Mercy: And that he ſhall grant to hold the Laws and approved Cuſtoms of the Realm, lawful, and not prejudicial to his Crown or Imperial Juriſdiction, and to his Power keep them, and affirm them which the Nobles and People have made and choſen with his Conſent; and the evil Laws and Cuſtoms wholly to put out, and ſtedfaſt and ſtable Peace to the People of his Realm keep, and cauſe to be kept, to his Power, in that which Honour and Equity doth require.

Penſions allowed the Religious, but with ſome Exceptions.

To return: As to the Religious diſlodg'd, and thrown out of their Eſtates by the Diſſolution, the King didnot ſend them altogether unprovided into the World. They had Penſions during Life allow'd for their Maintenance. Theſe Penſions were ſecured to them by Patents under the Broad Seal, and regiſtered in the Court of Augmentations. This Clauſe of tempore diſſolutionis illius, & diu antea, was inſerted in the Patent. And thus a great many young People, who were lately profeſſed, were left to ſhift for themſelves, and excluded the Benefit of this Proviſion. Thoſe likewiſe who were preferr'd to any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity or Benefice, at the Diſſolution of their Houſe, had no Penſion: Which Maintenance was likewiſe to determine with thoſe that had it, upon their Promotion to any Church Preferment of equal Value. This, as Fuller obſerves, was a Temptation to the King and Chancellour, to prefer Monks of mean Qualifications, to good Livings: For by ſuch a Proviſion, the Exchequer was diſcharg'd of taking any farther Care of them. The Patents for theſe Penſions were all drawn in the ſame Form, as to Subſtance; I ſhall tranſcribe one of them for the Reader (l).

(l) See Records, Num. 45.

Beſides theſe Penſions, which were well paid, the Monks had ſome Advance Money to equip them for the World, and ſupply their Neceſſities, till their Penſions became due. This Bounty Money generally held the Proportion of a fourth Part to their Annuity. The Nuns Maintenance ſeldom roſe to more than four Pounds per Annum Penſion, and forty Shillings in hand, when they quitted the Cloyſter (m). What Share of the Abbey Lands was ſettled on the Endowments of Biſhops Sees newly erected, and other publick Benefactions, ſhall be related afterwards *.

(m) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 6. p. 343. 346,

About this Time Archbiſhop Cranmer addreſs'd the King for a farther Reformation.

He intreats the King would graciouſly pleaſe to conſider the following Conſiderations.

“ Firſt, That no important Buſineſs, eſpecially Matters of Religion, ought to be concluded without mature Deliberation *.

* Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 50.

“ Secondly, How ill both Provincial, and even General Councils have ſucceeded, when Men have attempted to decree any thing as of Divine Authority, without a clear Warrant from the Holy Scriptures, or from Conſequences evidently inferr'd from thence.

“ Thirdly, That all Chriſtendom is now furniſh'd with learned Men, who are competent Judges in this Controverſy, and able to pronounce what Doctrines are agreeable to Scripture, and what not.

“ Fourthly, To what Pitch of Boldneſs Men are now arriv'd? What intemperate Freedoms they take in writing againſt great Princes? With what Diſreſpect they treat a Sovereign Character? How they argue upon the Level? and mind only the Cauſe, without taking notice of the Quality of the Perſon †.

† This Reflection ſeems levell'd againſt Luther.

“ Fifthly, That both Men of the New Learning, as they are called, and thoſe who adhere to the Papacy, agree that Prieſts are not forbid to marry by the Word of God: This both Parties allow, tho' they are well aware many Expoſitors of Scripture have written otherwiſe.

“ Sixthly, That 'tis not poſſible all learned Men ſhould be of one Mind, as long as the Cockle and the Wheat, the Godly and the Ungodly are mix'd together.

“ Seventhly, That variety of Opinions have ſometimes occaſion'd uſeful Diſcoveries, and Truth hath been ſtruck out of Claſhing and Oppoſition. Thus for the Purpoſe, the uſurp'd Authority of the Biſhop of Rome has been brought into view.

“ Laſtly, There are other unmention'd Opinions, which are no leſs likely to obſtruct the Bleſſing of uniform Belief in your Grace's Dominions. That is, Whether the Holy Scriptures teach the Doctrine of Purgatory and Invocation of Saints? Whether any unwritten Verities, convey'd by Oral Tradition, are neceſſary to be believ'd? Whether theſe are to be look'd on as ſupplemental Articles? Or whether, on the other ſide, we are not bound to believe any farther than what is deliver'd in the inſpired Writings, or can be made good by direct Inference from ſome plain Text? Whether there is any other Satiſfaction beſides that of Chriſt? Whether the Will is furniſh'd with ſuch a Degree of Strength and Freedom, as to diſpoſe it ſelf to Grace de congruo? Whether the kiſſing our Saviour's Image, in honour of him, is forbidden in Scripture? And generally, Whether Images may be made uſe of in any other manner, than what is mention'd in your Grace's Injunctions?

“ Whether, in Conſideration of the Premiſſes, your Highneſs may pleaſe to ſuſpend your Judgment for ſome time? Not to pronounce the Marriage of Prieſts againſt Scripture, but rather to command Silence to both Parties under a Penalty.

“ And in caſe what I have offer'd does not prevail with your Highneſs to demur, that then your Majeſty would pleaſe to order, that the Queſtion touching the Marriage of Prieſts, may be openly diſputed before indifferent Judges, in both Univerſities. That the Arguments of thoſe who hold the Queſtion on the Negative ſide, may be deliver'd to the other Party twelve Days before the Diſpute begins: That by this means, thoſe who maintain the Affirmative may be the better prepar'd to anſwer the Objections. That theſe latter, in caſe they fail in the Conteſt, and have Judgment given againſt them, ſhall be oblig'd to loſe their Lives for their Miſcarriage. But if the other ſide, who argue againſt the Marriage of Prieſts, happen to ſink in the Controverſy, they ſhall forfeit nothing, only it will be then deſir'd, that your Highneſs will pleaſe to allow your Subjects the Liberty that God hath given them.

As to the preciſe Time when theſe Conſiderations were ſent to the King, 'tis hard to determine: However, by the Circumſtances we may come ſomething near in the Chronology. For by the Archbiſhop's mentioning the King's Injunctions, 'tis plain this Paper muſt be written after the Year 1536. And by his ſuggeſting a Diſputation touching the Lawfulneſs of Prieſts Marriage, we may conclude this Addreſs was made before the Year 1539, when the Six Articles were enacted.

May the 5*th*, 1539.

To return to the Buſineſs of the Parliament. The Lord Chancellor acquainted the Upper Houſe, that the King being moſt deſirous to put an end to all Controverſies about Religion, and bring his Subjects to an uniform Belief, had commanded him to move a Committee might be appointed for examining the Difference of Opinions, to draw up Articles for an Agreement, and make their Report to the Houſe. The Lords agreed to this Motion, and named Cromwell the Vicegerent, the two Archbiſhops, the Biſhops of Durham, Bath and Wells, Ely, Bangor, Carliſle, and Worceſter, for a Committee. Theſe Lords were ordered to finiſh this Union Scheme with all Expedition. The Sentiments of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, of Cromwell, of the Biſhops of Ely and Worceſter, being different from the other five, this Affair came to no Point. And thus, after eleven Days Debate, the Matter was taken out of their Hands.

A Committee of Religion aſſign'd to no effect.

For now the Duke of Norfolk acquainted the Lords, that the Committee had made no Progreſs, greſs, and that there was little proſpect of the Buſineſs ſucceeding this way: He offer'd therefore ſome Articles to their Lordſhips Conſideration; that theſe, after they had been examin'd by the Houſe, might be paſs'd into an Act. The Articles are as follow (n).

(n) Biſhop Burnet. Part firſt. p. 256.

The ſix Articles argued in Parliament.

"First, Whether in the Holy Euchariſt
"Chriſt's real Body is preſent without any Tran-
"ſubſtantiation * ?

* Abſque Tranſubſtantiatione. Journal procer.

It ſeems, provided the Corporal Preſence had been eſtabliſh'd, they would have left the Manner undetermin'd.

"Secondly, Whether the Laity are to communicate in this Sacrament under both Kinds?

"Thirdly, Whether the Vows of Chaſtity, made either by Men or Women, ought to be obſerv'd by the Law of God?

"Fourthly, Whether by the Law of God private Maſſes ought to be celebrated?

"Fifthly, Whether by the Law of God Prieſts are allow'd to marry?

Archbiſhop Cranmer argued boldly in the Houſe againſt theſe Articles, three Days together: But what Arguments he made uſe of does not appear. That they were not unbecoming a Perſon of his Learning and Character, may be conjectur'd by the King's ſending for a Copy of them. And notwithſtanding the Freedom taken by the Archbiſhop in this Debate, he did not loſe the King's Favour. His Majeſty look'd on him as a Man of Probity, and one that had Courage to deliver his Mind. Some, on the other ſide, thought him particularly intereſſed againſt the fifth Article, upon the ſcore of his being married (o).

(o) Lord Herbert, p. 448.

The Parliament, after a ſhort Prorogation, ſitting on the thirtieth of May, the Lord Chancellor acquainted the Houſe, that not only the Spiritual Lords, but the King himſelf had taken a great deal of Pains in the Articles above-mention'd: That now, at laſt, the Matter was brought to an Iſſue, and ſettled. He mov'd therefore, in the King's Name, that a Bill might be read for the puniſhing ſuch as ſhould offend againſt this Proviſion: The Lords appointed the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of Ely and St. Davids, and Dr. Petre, a Maſter of Chancery, and afterwards Secretary of State, to draw one Bill; and the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhops of Durham and Wincheſter, and Dr. Tregonnel, another Maſter of Chancery, to draw another. When both theſe Bills were ready, a Day was ſet to lay them before the King. The Draught made by the Archbiſhop of York, and thoſe join'd with him, was moſt approv'd: However, the Matter hung in Debate from the firſt until the ſeventh of June, when it was brought into the Houſe, and read the firſt time (p). It was carried thro' the Houſe of Lords with Diſpatch; for on the tenth it was engroſs'd, and read the third time. The King would have had the Archbiſhop of Canterbury quitted the Houſe, ſince he could not vote for it; but after a decent Excuſe, he told the King he thought himſelf bound in Conſcience to ſtay there, and ſhew his Diſſent. This Bill paſs'd ſmoothly with the Houſe of Commons; for on the fourteenth 'twas finiſh'd and ſent up to the Lords, and on the twenty eighth 'twas ſign'd by the King. The Preamble ſets forth, That whereas the King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty is by God's Law ſupreme Head immediately under him of this whole Church and Congregation of England, intending the Conſervation of the ſame Church and Congregation, in a true, ſincere and uniform Doctrine of Chriſt's Religion, calling alſo to his bleſſed and moſt gracious Remembrance, as well the great and quiet Aſſurance, proſperous Increaſe, and other innumerable Commodities, which have ever inſued, come and followed of Concord, Agreement and Unity in Opinions, as alſo the manifold Perils, Dangers and Inconveniencies, which have heretofore in many Places and Regions, eſpecially of Matters of Chriſtian Religion; and therefore deſiring, that ſuch an Unity might and ſhould be charitably eſtabliſh'd in all things touching and concerning the ſame, as the ſame, ſo being eſtabliſhed, might chiefly be to the Honour of Almighty God, the very Author and Fountain of all true Unity and ſincere Concord, and conſequently redound to the Commonwelth of this his Highneſſes moſt noble Realm, and of all his loving Subjects and other Reſidants and Inhabitants of or in the ſame: Hath therefore cauſed and commandad this his moſt High Court of Parliament, for ſundry and many urgent Cauſes and Conſiderations, to be at this time ſummoned, and alſo a Synod and Convocation, of all Archbiſhops, and Biſhops, and other learned Men of the Clergy of this Realm, to be in like manner aſſembled.

(p) Journal Procer.

The Act of the ſix Articles, with the Penalties.

The Preamble continues, That the ſix Articles were debated in Convocation as well as Parliament, in both which Places it was finally agreed and reſolv'd.

First, That in the moſt bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, by the Strength and Efficacy of Chriſt's mighty Word (it being ſpoken by the Prieſt) is preſent really under the Form of Bread and Wine, the natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſu Chriſt, conceived of the Virgin Mary: And that after the Conſecration, there remaineth no Subſtance of Bread or Wine, or any other Subſtance, but the Subſtance of Chriſt, God and Man.

Secondly, That the Communion in both Kinds is not neceſſary ad ſalutem by the Law of God, to all Perſons: And that it is to be believ'd and not doubted of, but that in the Fleſh, under the Form of Bread, is the very Blood, and with the Blood under the Form of Wine, is the very Fleſh, as well apart as though they were both together.

Thirdly, That Prieſts, after the Order of Prieſthood received, as afore, may not marry by the Law of God.

Fourthly, That Vows of Chaſtity, Widowhood, by Man or Woman, made to God adviſeadly, ought to be obſerv'd by the Law of God; and that it exempteth them from the Liberties of Chriſtian People, which without that they might enjoy.

Fifthly, That it is meet and neceſſary, that private Maſs be continued and admitted in this the King's Engliſh Church and Congregation, as whereby good Chriſtian People, ordering themſelves accordingly, do receive both godly and goodly Conſolations and Benefits: and it is agreeable alſo to God's Law.

Sixthly, That auricular Confeſſion is expedient and neceſſary to be retain'd and continued, tinued, uſed and frequented in the Church of God.

“ The Penalty for writing, preaching, or diſ“ puting againſt the firſt Article, is to ſuffer the “ Judgment and Execution of a Heretick Con“ vict, without the cuſtomary Allowance of Ab“ juration, and to forfeit all his Eſtate, real and “ perſonal, as in Caſes of High Treaſon.

“ And thoſe who declared againſt any of the “ five other Articles, either by writing or other“ wiſe, were for the firſt Offence, after legal “ Conviction, to forfeit all their Goods and “ Chattels to the King, and all other Branches
“ of their real Eſtate during Life, and to ſuffer “ Impriſonment at the King's Pleaſure. The “ ſecond Offence is enacted Felony, with the “ conſequent Pains and Forfeitures.

“ The Act proceeds to a Retroſpection, and “ pronounces the Marriages of Prieſts, and of “ thoſe Women who had vow'd either ſingle
“ Life or Widowhood, to be void and of none “ Effect: And that the Ordinaries, upon the “ Diſcovery of ſuch Engagements, were to proceed
“ to a Divorce. And that ſuch Prieſts and Wo“ men, who for the future ſhould cohabit, were,
“ upon Conviction, to ſuffer as Felons:

Farther, All Parſons, Vicars, and Curates, are enjoin'd to read this Act once a Quarter. And laſtly, There is a Proviſo, that the Vows of Chaſtity ſhould not be conſtrued to bind any Perſon, but ſuch as were one and twenty Years of Age when they entred into this Engagement; and that without being over-aw'd by any Force or Compulſion: But Prieſts are barr'd the Benefit of this Clauſe, which ſeems ſomewhat unneceſſary, becauſe their Age at their entring into theſe Orders, would have barr'd the Plea of the Proviſo (q).

This Act gave Satisfaction to thoſe who were apprehenſive of farther Innovations upon the receiv'd Doctrines, ſcreen'd the King from the Suſpicion of proceeding to Exceſſes of Reformation, and made the Diſſolution of the Abbeys leſs regretted: And here we are to obſerve, that the Perſons proſecuted for offending againſt any Branch of this Statute, were to be tried by a Jury, before ſuch Commiſſioners as the King ſhould nominate, of which the Archbiſhop or Biſhop, his Chancellor or Commiſſary, were to be one.

The King ſends the D. of Norfolk, &c. to Lambeth, to countenance the Archbiſhop.

The King, to relieve Cranmer under the Mortification of this Act, ſent for him, and gave him an aſſurance of his Favour. And to make him the more eaſie, he order'd the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, and the Lord Cromwell to dine with him at Lambeth.

Theſe Lords, according to their Inſtructions, acquainted him with the Regard the King had for him; commended him for the Learning, Elocution, and prudent Management, ſhewn in his Oppoſition againſt the Bill above-mention'd. That his Manner in this Debate was ſo unexceptionable and engaging, that he had no reaſon to be apprehenſive of ill Offices from thoſe of the contrary Opinion. That Cardinal Woolſey loſt even his Friends by his Haughtineſs and Self-conceit: But that this Archbiſhop, by his Piety and obliging Behaviour, gain'd the Eſteem of his Adverſaries, and that in Points of the niceſt Concern. And here Cromwell added, That Cranmer was particularly happy in the King's good Opinion: For let the Information againſt him have never ſuch ſtrong Colours, the King threw it off, without farther notice, at the firſt Hearing. Whereas, if either himſelf, or any other of the Privy Council was complain'd of, his Highneſs's Cuſtom was to enquire throughly into the Matter. Upon this, the Duke of Norfolk told Cromwell, that no body knew the Difference between the Humours of Cranmer and Woolſey, better than himſelf: For, my Lord, ſays he, you were for ſome time in the Cardinal's Service. Cromwell, reſenting this as a Reflection, anſwer'd with ſomething of warmth, that notwithſtanding he belong'd to Woolſey, he never lik'd his Management ſo well, as the Duke ſeems to have done: For, ſays he, my Lord, you promis'd to wait on him to Rome, and ſerve him in the Admiral's Poſt, in caſe he had been choſen Pope: And then mention'd how many Florens he was to receive for his Salary *. The Duke ſwore this was a Lie, and broke out into ſome other rough Expreſſions. And though Cranmer interpos'd, ſtopp'd the Progreſs of the Quarrel, and prevail'd with them to part like Friends, yet the Diſobligation was not forgotten, nor the Friendſhip heartily recover'd (r). This Story is miſrelated by Biſhop Burnet, to Cromwell's Advantage *. Cromwell fell into another Misfortune by miſcalculating upon Bonner's Diſpoſition. Cranmer and this Lord, it ſeems, took him for an Enemy to the old Superſtition; and upon this Confidence, lent him their Intereſt to promote him, firſt to the See of Hereford, and thence to London. At this time the King's Privy Council broke into two Diviſions: Cranmer; Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, and Cromwell were at the Head of one Party, and endeavour'd to check the Rigor, and ſtop the Proſecution upon the late Act. The Duke of Norfolk, and Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter were of a quite different Sentiment, and preſs'd the King to Severities againſt thoſe who could not come up to the eſtabliſh'd Belief. When Bonner perceiv'd the King's Inclinations ſway'd by the Duke of Norfolk and Gardner, he deſerted Cranmer, as ſome ſay, and Cromwell, and went over to the other ſide.

A Claſh between Cromwell and the D. of Norfolk.

Bp. Burnet.

Ibid.

“ Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, this “ Biſhop took a ſtrange Commiſſion from the “ King. Whether the other Biſhops, continues
“ this Author, took ſuch Commiſſions I know
“ not, but am certain there is none ſuch in Cran-
“ mer's Regiſter —— After Bonner had taken
“ this Commiſſion, he might well have been “ call'd one of the King's Biſhops *.

As this learned Hiſtorian obſerves, the Contents of Bonner's Commiſſion were extraordinary, for it begins thus. Quandoquidem omnis juriſdicendi autoritas, atque etiam juriſdictio omnimoda, tàm illa quæ eccleſiaſtica dicitur quàm ſæcularis, à regia poteſtate, velut a ſupremo Capite, & omnium infrà regnum noſtrum magiſtratuum fonte & ſaturigine, primitùs emanavit, ſanè illos qui juriſdictionem hujuſmodi antehac non niſi precariò fungebantur, beneficium hujuſmodi ſic eis ex liberalitate regiâ indultum, gratis animis agnoſcere, idque regiæ munificentiæ ſolummodo acceptum referre, eique quoties ejus Majeſtati videbitur, libenter concedere convenit.

“ That is, That the King is the Fountain of all “ manner of Juriſdiction and Authority, as well “ Eccleſiaſtical as Secular; and that thoſe who for“ merly exercis'd this Juriſdiction, did it only
“ in a precarious Manner, and upon royal Cour-
“ teſy; and that therefore it ought to be re-“ turn'd when ever his Majeſty ſhall pleaſe to “ call for it. And that ſince the Lord Cromwell, “ Knight of the Garter, Vicegerent and Vicar-“ General, to preſide, manage, and direct in

(q) 31. H. 8. Cap. 14. Statutes at large.

* Fox. Vol. 2. p. 513.

(r) Antiquit. Britann. p. 333.

* Hiſt. Ref. Part 1. p. 265.

* Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 267.

“all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, was ſo far employ'd in Matters concerning the State, that he was not at leiſure to diſcharge the Function of a Vicegerent, and manage the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, wholly delegated to him by the King, ſupreme Head of the Church of England, &c.

“Becauſe Cromwell was thus buſie, and could not be every where, nor execute the Office of an univerſal Superintendant; for this Reaſon the King, as the Inſtrument continues, gives Bonner a Commiſſion, to execute all the Branches of the Epiſcopal Authority under his Highneſs: For the Purpoſe, he has a royal Licenſe to ordain within the Dioceſe of London, to viſit the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and all other Colleges, Hoſpitals, Monaſteries, Clergy and Laity, within his Diſtrict, he has likewiſe a Power given him to hear Cauſes, and to give Sentence in the Spiritual Courts, to exerciſe Diſcipline, and inflict Cenſures according to the Directions of Law, and the Degrees of the Criminal's Offence: And in ſhort, to execute every thing belonging to the Authority and Juriſdiction of a Biſhop.”

And after the King has thus declar'd himſelf Patriarch in his Dominions, claim'd all manner of Spiritual Authority, and pronounc'd the Biſhops no more than his Delegates at pleaſure; After this, theſe Words are thrown into the Commiſſion, to give it the more paſſable Complexion, Præter & ultra ea quæ tibi ex ſacris literis divinitus commiſſa eſſe dignoſcuntur *.

* Regiſt. Bonner. fol. 1.

Now, with Submiſſion, this Clauſe ſeems to come in too late, and is utterly inconſiſtent with the former part of the Commiſſion. For if the King is the Fountain of all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction; if his Lay-Vicegerent might lawfully ſupply the room of all the Biſhops in England, provided he were at leiſure, and able to do it in Perſon; if the Biſhops, in the Execution of their Office, are only the King's Repreſentatives, and revocable at Pleaſure: If theſe Affirmations are all defenſible, as the Commiſſion ſets forth, then without queſtion, the Hierarchy can have no Juriſdiction aſſign'd in the New Teſtament, nor any Authority deriv'd from our Saviour.

But if the Church is a diſtinct and intire Society; if in pure Spirituals ſhe is conſtituted independent on all the Kings on the Earth; if ſhe is furniſh'd with Powers ſufficient to anſwer the Ends of her Charter; if theſe Powers were ſettled by our Saviour, upon the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors to the World's end; if the Hierarchy can make out this Title *, then I muſt crave leave to think thoſe who ſuggeſted the Draught of this Inſtrument, were no great Divines.

* See my Church Hiſtory, pt. 1. p. 257.

But how extraordinary ſoever this Commiſſion may ſeem, it was certainly complied with, and that by other Biſhops beſide Bonner. For the Purpoſe, Cranmer took out one of the ſame Tenor and Form, from King Edward VI *. Now if Bonner was ſo much to blame for complying to this Latitude, the ſame Imputation muſt fall upon Cranmer. To which we may add, That this was not the firſt Commiſſion of this Kind, taken out by Cranmer. For as our Hiſtorian obſerves, the Order of Council made in the Beginning of the Reign of King Edward VI. requires the Biſhops to take out new Commiſſions of the ſame Form with thoſe they had taken out in King Henry's time, only with this Difference, that there is no mention made of a Vicar-General in theſe Commiſſions, there being none, after Cromwell, advanced to that Dignity. If no ſuch Commiſſion, as this learned Gentleman remarks, taken by Cranmer from King Henry, be found in his Regiſter *; it doth not follow he took out no ſuch Inſtrument, for his Regiſter is imperfect in many Places. To ſpeak clearly, he took out ſuch a Commiſſion from King Henry ſome Years before Bonner. For from the Collections of Dr. Yale, the learned Harmer cites a Tranſcript of this Commiſſion, agreeing exactly with that of Bonner above mention'd; to which this Note is ſubjoin'd, Tales licentias acceperunt Thomas Archiepiſcopus Cantuarienſis, menſe Octobri 1535. Edwardus Archiep. Eborac. Johannes Epiſcopus Lincoln. 13. Octob. 1535. Johannes Epiſcopus London. 19. Octob. 1535. Stephanus Epiſcopus Winton. eodem Anno. Cuthbertus Epiſcopus Dunelm. 10. Novemb. 1535. &c. Now this Dr. Yale being an eminent Advocate in Doctors Commons, in Cranmer's time, and afterwards principal Regiſtrary and Vicar-General to Archbiſhop Parker, muſt be own'd an unexceptionable Evidence for this Point *. Farther, our learned Hiſtorian has miſreported Bonner, in ſaying, he was one of the Popiſh Party at this time, and took out his Commiſſion to ſerve that Intereſt: For Fox has given ſeveral Inſtances to prove, that Bonner, till the Fall of Cromwell, was a zealous Promoter of the Reformation, which is likewiſe afterwards confeſs'd by our Hiſtorian *.

Bp* Burnet's Hiſt Refor. pt. 2. p. 6. Id. Record. p. 90. Num. 2.

Bp.* Burnet's Hiſt. Ref. pt. 1. p. 267.

* Harmer, p. 52.

Bp.* Burnet, pt. 1. p. 299.

To proceed: Now Cranmer had a difficult Poſt to manage. His Aim was to puſh the Reformation to a farther Progreſs: But here, beſides the pretended Diſappointment in Bonner, he had reaſon to be diſcourag'd by thoſe who continued firm to the Cauſe: His Inſtruments were diſproportioned to the Work, and his Adherents, if they are rightly repreſented, unprepar'd to diſcharge their Part. For in the Words of our learned Hiſtorian (s), The other Biſhops, that adher'd to Cranmer, were rather Clogs than Helps to him. Latimer's Simplicity and Weakneſs made him be deſpiſ'd: Shaxton's proud and litigious Humour drew hatred on him: Barlow was not very diſcreet; and many of the the Preachers whom they had cheriſh'd, whether out of an unbridled Forwardneſs of Temper, that would not be managed by politick and prudent Meaſures, were flying at ſeveral things that were not yet aboliſhed. Many Complaints of this kind were brought to the King. Thus we ſee theſe Men wanted either Light or Diſcretion, and were either ill, or underqualified.

Cranmer ill ſupported by his Adherents.

(s) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 255.

To give check to this Miſmanagement, Cromwell wrote to ſome of the Biſhops by the King's Directions. In his Letter to Richard Biſhop of Chicheſter, “he puts this Prelate in mind of his being the King's principal Miniſter, in all Matters relating to the Clergy. Upon the Strength of this Commiſſion, he proceeds to preſs the Biſhop to execute the Purport of the King's Letters, for the avoiding of Contrarieties and Novelties in Doctrine: And on the other ſide, to ſtop the Liberty of thoſe who preach'd up the pretended Authority of the Biſhop of Rome (t).

His Letter to the Biſhop of Landaff is to the ſame effect (u).

(t) Cotton. Cleop. V. fol. 302.

(u) Bibl. Cotton. Cleop. E. 4. fol. 1.

In the beginning of this Year, Luther, Melancton, together with ſome Princes and States in their Communion, came to a Temper upon ſeveral Articles. By this Recollection, they ſeem'd to have been ſenſible of reforming too far from the Church of Rome. That they were willing to own the Neceſſity of Epiſcopal Government, to explain ſome conteſted Points, and relax in ſeveral Articles of the Auguſtane Confeſſion. This Draught, which I tranſcrib'd from the Cotton Library (w) runs thus;

(w) Cleop. 5. fol. 228.

A Copy of ſuch things as Marten Luther, Philip Melancton, with certain Cities and Princes of Germany, their Adherents, have admitted. March, Anno 1539.

Some accommodating Articles, aſſented to by Luther, Melancton, and ſome German Princes of their Communion. They allow the Papacy under certain Qualifications.

“ Firſt, We confeſs, that there ought to be a Policy in the Church, and a Regimen; in the which there muſt be Biſhops, who ſhall have the Power of the Examen and Ordination of the Miniſtrations of the ſame, for to exerciſe the Juriſdiction of the ſame; who ſhall diligently foreſee, that the Churches committed to them may be truly inſtructed with pure and ſincere Doctrine.

“ We admit that it is good and convenient, that in the Church there be a Biſhop of Rome, that may be above other Biſhops, who may gather them together, to ſee the Examination of the Doctrine, and the Concord of ſuch as do teach Diſcrepances in the Church. But we admit not the Pomp, Riches, and Pride of the Biſhop of Rome, who would make Realms ſubject unto him: The which things do neither help nor promote the Goſpel, becauſe the King who hath right thereto, may and ought to rule the ſame.

“ We confeſs, that, as concerning choice of Curates, Holydays, and Ceremonies, there might an Agreement be made eaſily, if there could be a Concord in the Doctrine of the Church, and not ſuch Diſcrepancy as there is. For if there were a Concord of Doctrine in the Church, we ſhould not think it reaſonable to divide us from the Church; ſeeing that it is not poſſible that the World might ſtand without Ceremonies, and Man's Conſtitutions: Whereby it ſhould not need to divide us from the other, and to bring up new and unaccuſtom'd Conſtitutions: Seeing that all Innovation without Neceſſity ought to be eſchew'd, and that there is no Peril to uſe a mean in the obſervation of the ſaid Ceremonies and Mens Conſtitutions, ſo that the Doctrines be purely handled.

“ We judge it to be profitable, that Confeſſion and Rehearſal of Sins be made in the Church: For taking the ſame away, the Doctrine of Remiſſion of Sins, and of the Power of the Keys, ſhould be offuſcate and taken away; ſeeing that in the Confeſſion, amongſt other things, the People ought to be taught whence comes the Remiſſion of Sins; provided that there be honeſt faſhion to inſtruct the Perſons that be ſhriven, and that the Conſciences be not overlaid with rigorous and exact Rehearſal of all Sins.

“ We believe that Juſtification is made by Faith, becauſe there be no Works whereby we may ſatisfie, or obtain Remiſſion of Sins: Yet nevertheleſs, the ſame Faith that juſtifieth us, ought not to be idle, but adorn'd with good and godly Deeds.

“ We confeſs that the free Will, holpen with the Holy Ghoſt, may do ſomewhat, whenſoever we will withdraw from Sin.

“ We confeſs, that after the Remiſſion of Sins, the Holy Ghoſt is given to the Man, from the which he departeth again as ſoon as he committeth any deadly Sin.

“ We uſe the faſhion accuſtom'd in the Office of the Maſſes; for what ſhall avail a Change of Ceremonies without Neceſſity? But we admit not the Privy Maſſes, becauſe they have occaſion of ſundry Abuſes, becauſe there is an open Fair or Market for Celebration of Maſſes.

“ We believe thus concerning the Supper of the Lord, that like as Chriſt in his laſt Supper did give unto his Diſciples his true Body to be eaten, and his Blood to be drank, for Spiritual Meat and Drink, ſo he gives daily to us his Diſciples and loyal Men, as often as we keep the Supper according to the Form commanded, accipite & comedite, his true Body and Blood to be eaten and drank. And this is the mind of the three Evangeliſts, and of St. Paul, and ſo their words do ſound clearly; wherefore away with all ſuch erroneous Interpretations as is made upon the ſame words.

“ We be taught that Chriſt did give unto his Diſciples his Body and Blood under both Species and Kinds; and that therefore we ought to obſerve the ſame as we do indeed. But becauſe the one Species has by Man's Conſtitutions been forbidden by the Biſhop of Rome, there might be a Remedy found without Peril or Danger; ſo that he that would, might have both Species, that and there ſhould be a Prohibition made, that the one ſhould not inſult againſt the other.

“ Seeing that it appears by the holy Doctors, that the Holy-days and Feaſts of Saints have been accuſtom'd to be obſerv'd, as we ſee as yet ſome holy Canons of that matter: But it appears not, that there is made in the ſame any mention of their Invocation. But it appears only by the ſame, that they be propoſed unto us for an Example to learn to follow their Life and Converſation. Yet nevertheleſs, ſeeing by ſome Cuſtom the Interceſſion of Saints ought to be admitted, then there ſhould be Prayers made unto God, that it might like him to hear them by the Interceſſion of ſome Saint: We affirm for a certainty, that the Saints do continually intercede for the Church; albeit the Chriſtian Man ought to be taught, that they ſhall not convert the ſame hope to the Saints, which they ought to have unto God.

“ We do not reject Images of Chriſt, and of Saints, but the Adoration made to them; whereof Idolatry is ſprung.

“ Alſo, we damn not the Monkery, or Life of ſuch as be cloſed in the Cloyſters; but only the Truſt that ſome Men have put in the Regular Obſervation. Alſo, we reject the Vows that have been made upon ſuch things as Men cannot obſerve: Yet nevertheleſs, we will not that Monaſteries ſhould be put down for the ſame, but that they may be turn'd into Schools, in the which, good Doctrine ſhould be taught; and that the Pope may diſpenſe with the Vows. So that it were free for every Man to keep, or not keep them; and ſo the ſame ſhould be much to the Quiet and Tranquillity of Mind, and the Vows ſhould not be the Snares of Malice.

“ That the Marriage of Prieſts ſhould be in the Pope's Hands, who might admit the ſame; and the Concubinate of many ſhould be forbidden, for we ſee few chaſt: But if the Law to not Contract ſhould have Place, then for to avoid Slander, there ſhould be none advanc'd to the Dignities Eccleſiaſtick, but grave Perſons, and of full Age.

“ We think it beſt to diſpute of Purgatory, and Pardons, in the Schools, rather than in the Pulpit, to diſpute the ſame publickly, without any Profit; ſo that the Markets and Bargains thereof ſhall be avoyded. For we do reject in thoſe things, and other, where we “ do not agree, rather the Abuſe, than the thing it ſelf; the which, nevertheleſs, may be diſcuſſed and amended by Councils lawfully aſſembled. At the cloſe of the Articles, theſe words follow. viz.

“ The Zuinglians, and OEcolampadians, have not yet receiv'd theſe Articles: But the ſimple People ſhall be eaſily reduced, and we truſt they ſhall ſhortly be conformable thereto.

“ Luther has revoked all his Books, wherein there be any things contrary to theſe Articles; and hath retracted them with his own Hand, and acknowledg'd his Faults.

Thus we ſee Luther, and a conſiderable Party of thoſe of his Sentiment came to a Recollection. They conſider'd their firſt Motions were ſomewhat too ſtrong, and that the Heat of Diſputation, and the Stiffneſs of the Court of Rome, had rais'd their Paſſion, and driven them towards the other Extreme. I grant theſe Articles are not in Sleidan: But their paſſing the Teſt of ſo great an Antiquary as Sir Robert Cotton, and being lodg'd in his Library, without any Mark of Diſadvantage, is a ſtrong Recommendation of their Authority. Beſides, the Engliſh ſpeaks them as old as the Date they pretend to: Whether they were drawn up here by ſome reconciling Hand, tranſmitted to Luther and Melancton, and agreed by them; or that they were form'd and concerted in Germany, and tranſlated into our Language, is uncertain. However, this accommodating Scheme fell ſhort of an Eſtabliſhment; from whence we may conclude there was a Majority, or at leaſt ſome powerful Intereſt againſt it.

The Six Articles complain'd of.

To return to the Parliament. The Act of the Six Articles was looked on as no ſmall Grievance. To be forced under the higheſt Penalties to follow a Parliamentary Reſolution in Matters of Faith, was complain'd of as a great Hardſhip upon Conſcience. Belief, is not in every Man's Power: Terror and Extremities are none of the moſt likely ways to make way for Proof, and form a new Perſwaſion. Men don't love to be dragg'd into Religion: To lie under a Neceſſity of being either a Martyr or an Hypocrite, they thought ſingular Uſage. To be menac'd with ſuch Severities, is apt to overrule the choice, fright a Man out of his Sentiment, and make him decline a thorough Examination of the Point. For if our Creed is preſcrib'd us under Pain of Death, how dangerous will it be to go thorough with our Enquiry? And on the other ſide, if we take our Religion upon Content, how can we be aſſur'd we are not miſtaken? Beſides, if Turks and Heathens ſhould force their Subjects to a Compliance with their Infidelity, upon the ſame Forfeitures, what a Diſcouragement would this be againſt turning Chriſtian? (x)

The Religious allow'd to purchaſe, but not to inherit.

There was an Act paſs'd this Parliament, That all Religious Perſons, now diſmiſs'd from the Monaſteries, might have the common Privilege of purchaſing or ſuing, they might alſo be ſued: But here they were not perfectly return'd to the Birthright of Perſons unprofeſs'd; for they are barr'd by a Proviſo from claiming any Eſtate of Inheritance: But ſince many of them were forc'd into the World, and turn'd out of a comfortable Maintenance, this Clauſe of diſabling them from inheriting, was thought ſomewhat ſevere (y).

May 23.
An Act enabling the King to erect new Biſhopricks.

Farther, a Bill was brought into the Houſe of Lords by Cromwell, for impowering the King to erect new Biſhopricks. 'Twas penn'd at Court, and therefore 'tis no wonder to find ſome hard Expreſſions beſtow'd on the Monaſteries. The Præamble ſets forth, “ That the Idleneſs and Immorality of the Religious was not unknown; that therefore their Houſes might be turn'd to a more ſerviceable Account, that the Scriptures might be better ſet forth, Children bred to Learning, and Scholars maintain'd in the Univerſities; old Servants diſabled, furniſh'd with a Support; Almes-Houſes better provided; Greek, Hebrew, and Latin Lectures encourag'd with good Salaries; Exhibitions given, &c. For theſe publick Reaſons the King thought it neceſſary that more Biſhopricks, Collegiate and Cathedral Churches, ſhould be erected in the room of the Monaſteries diſſolv'd.

“ By the Enacting Part of the Statute, the King is authoriz'd by his Letters Patent under the Great Seal, to erect what number of new Sees, to ſettle the Endowments, the Extent of the Diſtricts, to govern the Tranſlations, and to appoint ſuch other Regulations as to his moſt excellent Wiſdom ſhould be thought neceſſary (z).

There is a rough Draught under the King's Hand in the Cotton Library (a). In the ſame Paper, there is likewiſe a Liſt of the Sees he intended to Found, with the Abbeys where they were to ſtand. This Memoir is under the King's hand in the following Order,

A Liſt of the Sees the King intended to erect.

Eſſex.	Waltham.
Hartford	St. Albans.
Bedfordſhire and Buckinghamſhire.	Dunſtable. Newenham. Elveſton.
Oxford. and Berkſhire.	Oſnay and Tame.
Northampton and Huntington.	Peterborough.
Middleſex.	Weſtminſter.
Leiceſter and Rutland.	Leiceſter.
Glouceſterſhire.	St. Peters.
Lancaſhire.	Fountains, and the Archdeaconary of Richmond.
Suffolk.	Edmondsbury.
Stafford and Salop.	Shrewsbury.
Nottingham and Derby.	Welbeck. Werſop. Thurgarton.
Cornwall.	Lanceſton. Bodmynne. Wardreth.

Thus we ſee a noble Deſign was ſtruck out: If it be enquir'd how it came to miſcarry, it may be anſwer'd, The King was diſabled from executing this Project: He quickly exhauſted himſelf upon the Courtiers: The meaſure of his Bounty was no leſs extraordinary, than the manner of his Acquiſition; inſomuch that he may be almoſt ſaid, to have ſnatch'd with one Hand, only to throw away with t'other (b).

How the Scheme happen'd to fail.

Thus the beſt part of the Scheme died under Thought, and came to nothing.

About this time a Diſcourſe was drawn by ſome ſingle Hand, entitul'd a Declaration of the Faith, and a Juſtification of King Henry VIII. in matters of Religion; or a Summary Declaration of the Faith, Uſes, and Obſervations in England (c).

(x) Ld. Herbert, p. 447.

(y) 31 H. 8. c. 6. Statutes at large

(z) 31 H. 8. c. 9. Statutes at large.

(a) Cleop. E. 4.

(b) Ld. Herbert, p. 461. Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 268.

(c) See Records, N. 47. from Paper Office.

The Deſign of this Apology is to juſtifie the Engliſh Nation from the Charge of deſerting the Catholick Church. It is likewiſe a Defence of the Adminiſtration: The Author endeavours to prove the King had not given way to arbitrary Meaſures, or done any thing unwarrantable by Law or Equity. The Paper deſerves the Reader's View: However, it is not altogether without Miſtakes. For the Apologiſt affirms, Mortuaries were wholly taken away by Act of Parliament; whereas, they were only regulated. He argues faintly, for the Suppreſſion of religious Houſes, and contradicts Matter of Fact. He ſays, the King would not diſſolve ſome of the Monaſteries, which is another Miſtake. The Story about Becket's Death is falſe; and his Satyr upon that Arch-biſhop's Management, indefenſible. Biſhop Fiſher, and Sir Thomas More, are unhandſomly remember'd: The latter is call'd a Jeſter, and the other a glorious Hypocrite. If the Author is right in what I am going to mention, this Paper was publiſh'd before the Bills of Attainder paſs'd. For he affirms, that neither Peers, nor Commoners, were ever condemn'd in this Reign, without legal Proceſs.

A Declaration of the Faith, &c. of the Engliſh Nation.

This Parliament ſeveral Attainders paſs'd, without ſuffering the Parties to make their Defence. This our learned Church Hiſtorian complains of, as a Breach of the moſt ſacred and unalterable Rules of Juſtice: That it is a Blemiſh never to be waſh'd off, nor capable of any Excuſe (d). The Marchioneſs of Exeter, and the Counteſs of Sarum, fell under theſe Severities. The firſt is charg'd with abbetting Sir Nicholas Carew in his Treaſons: To which is added, that divers other abominable Treaſons had been committed by her. The latter is charged with entring into criminal Engagements with her Son the Cardinal. It does not appear by the Journal, that any Witneſſes were examined; but that after the third Reading, Cromwell produced a Coat of white Silk, found by the Lord Admiral amongſt the Counteſs of Salisbury's Cloaths (e): That upon this Coat the Arms of England were wrought on one ſide, and the Rebels Standard on the other. This was urg'd as preſumptive Evidence, that ſhe approv'd the Rebellion. Three Iriſh Prieſts were likewiſe attainted for conveying Letters out of Ireland, to the Pope and Cardinal Pool: Sir Adrian Forteſcue was attainted for endeavouring to raiſe Rebellion; and Thomas Dingly Knight of St. John's of Jeruſalem, and Robert Granſeter Merchant, for ſoliciting ſeveral foreign Princes to make War upon the King, and aſſiſt the Lord's Darcy and Huſſie in their Rebellion. Two Gentlemen, a Dominican Frier, and a Yeoman, were attainted for ſaying, That venomous Serpent, the Biſhop of Rome, was Supreme Head of the Church of England. And laſtly, two Prieſts, another Gentleman, and a Yeoman, were attainted for Treaſon in general, without the mention of any Crime in particular. Thus ſixteen Perſons fell under the Act, and if any Witneſſes were examin'd, in order to their Conviction, 'twas either in the Star Chamber, or before the Privy-Council; for the Journals mention no Evidence in the Parliament Houſe (f).

May 10. 1539.

Several Perſons attainted in Parliament without being heard.

As to the Counteſs of Salisbury's Caſe, the Lord Herbert relates from Records, that ſeveral Bulls were found at Cowdrey, which he ſuppoſes was then the Counteſs's Houſe. That the Parſon of Warblington convey'd Letters from her to the Cardinal her Son: And that ſhe forbad all her Tenants to have the New Teſtament in Engliſh, or any other new Book privileg'd by the King. However, as this noble Hiſtorian goes on, it appears this Lady was allow'd a Hearing, tho' he does not ſay where. For he adds, notwithſtanding ſhe was Seventy Years old, her Behaviour was full of Spirit and well ſupported; and that ſhe refus'd to make any Confeſſion: But notwithſtanding this Silence, the Proof brought againſt her was judg'd ſufficient (g). Forteſcue and Dingley ſuffer'd on the 10th of July. The Counteſs liv'd by Reprieves two Years, and was then executed: The Marchioneſs of Exeter had gentler Uſage, ſurviv'd the King, and died a natural Death. In November, the Abbots of Reading, Glaſſenbury, and Colcheſter, already mentioned, were attainted of Treaſon. What the Particulars were, our learned Church Hiſtorian confeſſes, he can't tell; for the Record of their Attainders is loſt. But, as he goes on, ſome of our own Writers deſerve a ſevere Cenſure, who write it was for denying the King's Supremacy. Whereas, if they had not undertaken to write the Hiſtory without any Information at all, they muſt have ſeen, that the whole Clergy, and eſpecially the Abbots, had over and above again acknowledg'd the King's Supremacy (h).

But how does it appear our Hiſtorians are miſtaken? Has this Gentleman ſeen the Abbot of Colcheſter's Indictment, or perus'd his Record of Attainder? He confeſſes no: How then is his Cenſure made good? He offers at no Argument beyond Conjecture: He concludes, the Abbot of Colcheſter had formerly acknowledg'd the King's Supremacy; and from thence infers, he could not ſuffer now for denying it. But do not Peoples Opinions alter ſometimes, and Conſcience and Courage improve? Did not Biſhop Fiſher and Cardinal Pool at leaſt, as this Author repreſents them, acknowledge the King's Supremacy at firſt? And yet 'tis certain, they afterwards ſhewed themſelves of another Mind, to a very remarkable degree. To give another Inſtance: Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter had ſolemnly renounc'd the Pope's Authority; but notwithſtanding all this diſclaiming, there were violent Preſumptions, that he had ſecretly reconcil'd himſelf to the Pope, and enter'd into a Correſpondence with him. To which we may add, that many of the Biſhops and Clergy, who had own'd the Regal Supremacy in this Reign, refus'd that length of Compliance to Queen Elizabeth. Beſides, the Abbot of Colcheſter, who ſubmitted to the Supremacy, and he that ſuffer'd for denying it, were not the ſame Perſon. For the firſt, in his Submiſſion, ſubſcribes himſelf Thomas Abbas (h); but the Name of him that is executed, was John Beach (i). Farther, Does not himſelf tell us, that many of the Carthuſians were executed for their open denying the King's Supremacy *. And why then might not ſome of the Abbots have the ſame Belief and Fortitude with others of their Fraternity?

An unproved Cenſure upon our Hiſtorians, by the Author of the Reformation of the Church of England.

Id. p. 251.

About this time, a Proclamation was publiſhed for the free Uſe of the Scriptures. 'Tis true, the Engliſh Bible had been ſet up in Churches a Year ſince; but now private Perſons had leave to buy and read it at home. This Liberty was probably granted at the Inſtance of Archbiſhop Cranmer. The Letters Patent inform us, the Management of this Affair was intruſted with the Lord Cromwell. The Inſtrument ſets forth; " The King was deſirous of his Subjects " Improvement in the Knowledge of their Duty to God and himſelf. That the moſt likely Means for attaining this End, was to allow them the free Uſe of the Bible in their Mother Tongue: That becauſe different Tranſlations may occaſion Diſpute and Error, eſpecially amongſt People of obſtinate and pre-

Free Uſe of the Scriptures allowed private Perſons.

Nov. 13. 1539.

(d) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 359.

(e) Journal. Procer.

(f) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 360.

(g) Ld. Herbert, p. 447.

(h) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 239.

(h) Wharton Hiſt. de Epiſ. & Decan. Londin. p. 292. in Append.

(i) Stow's Annal. p. 577.

* Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 241.

“ ſuming Tempers; therefore the Lord Cromwell was ordered to take Care that no Perſon, without his Authority, ſhould print any Bible in the Engliſh Tongue, during the ſpace of Five Years (k).

(k) Rot. pat. 31 H. 8.

Latimer and Shaxton reſign their Biſhopricks.

To proceed; Thoſe who were inclined to a Reformation, were apprehenſive of rough Uſage from the Six Articles: Tho' this Act was not preſſed cloſe till Cromwell's Death: However, Latimer and Shaxton, Biſhops of Worceſter and Saliſbury, are ſuppoſed to have reſigned their Biſhopricks upon this Score. They were not willing, it may be, to have a Share in the Execution of this Act, or countenance the Severity of it (l).

(l) Ld. Herbert, p. 49.

The Proſecutions in Scotland upon the Score of Religion.

To ſtrike off a little, and give a brief Account of the Church in Scotland. Laſt Year Hieronimus Ruſſel, a Gray Frier, and one Kenedy a young Man of Aire, were inform'd againſt for Hereſie at Glaſcow: And becauſe Dunbar the Archbiſhop was thought to exceed in Lenity and Moderation, two or three other Clergymen, of more bigotted Tempers, were ſent for from Edinburgh to manage at the Trial. Archbiſhop Spotſwood doth not tell us what the Articles were, only that Kenedy was willing at firſt to have denyed the Charge, and diſentangled himſelf. But being incouraged by Hieronimus's Behaviour, he recollected his Spirits, and reſign'd chearfully to the Event.

The Frier is ſaid to have made a learned Defence; but being anſwered with Railing and Reproach, he return'd ſome rough Language, and ſaluted the Court in their own way. The Archbiſhop of Glaſcow was very averſe to theſe Methods of Rigor; ſuch Extremities, he ſaid, were unſerviceable to Religion: He thought it therefore much the beſt way not to deſtroy Mens Lives, but to apply to ſome milder Expedient. The Aſſiſtants from Edingburgh told him, that if he ſet up any new Precedents of gentler Uſage, and refuſed to be govern'd by the Capital of the Kingdom, they could not eſteem him the Church's Friend. Thus it ſeems the Archbiſhop's Prudence and good Nature was overruled, and he gave way to the Burning-Sentence.

Ruſſel and Kenedy behav'd themſelves with great Piety and Reſolution at the Stake, and went thro' the Execution without any Signs of Surprize or Diſorder *.

*Spotſwood's Hiſt. of the Church of Scotland, p. 67.

About this time, George Buchanan was committed for ſome ſatyrical Verſes againſt the Franciſcans, but he made his Eſcape and got into France. This Buchanan was an extraordinary Genius, and a great Maſter of the Latin Tongue, as appears from his Poems and Hiſtory.

The Clergy and Temporaity in the Courts of Juſtice.

And now Proſecutions for Religion in Scotland were very frequent: for James Beaton Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, being diſabled with Age, had reſign'd, as it were, his Poſt, and put the Government of the Church into the Hands of his Nephew the Cardinal. Some few Years paſt, this Prelate and the Clergy had a Conteſt with the King: They complain'd of a Tax laid upon them for the Entertainment of the College of Juſtice. The Diſpute was carry'd on to an Appeal to Rome. But before they had gone far in that Court, the Matter was compromiſ'd: And here it was agreed, the Lords of the Seſſion ſhould conſiſt of Fourteen Ordinaries with a Preſident; Seven of the Spiritualty, and Seven of the Temporalty: But with this Advantage to the firſt Diviſion, That the Preſident was always to be a Prelate. This Accord was confirm'd by an Act of Parliament, Anno Dom. 1537. The Archbiſhop of St. Andrews died two Years after, and nominated the Succeſſors to his Preferments: He left the Archbiſhoprick of St. Andrews, and the Abbey of Aberbrothock, to the Cardinal his Nephew. The King who had a great Eſteem for the old Archbiſhop, allow'd this Diſpoſal.

Cardinal Beaton Archbiſhop of St. Andrews.

The Cardinal, ſoon after his Promotion, diſcover'd himſelf of a warm and proſecuting Temper. To ſtop the Progreſs of thoſe who oppos'd the eſtabliſh'd Religion, he brought a great Appearance of Quality, both Clergy and Laity, to St. Andrews. And here in the Cathedral, he made a Speech to acquaint them with the Increaſe of Hereſie, how the Catholick Faith was inſulted: That Heterodoxy was openly maintain'd, and too much encouraged in the King's Court; particularly he mentioned one Sir John Bothwick, who had been cited to St. Andrews for diſperſing heretical Books, and holding ſeveral Opinions contrary to the Doctrine of the Roman Church. The Articles were theſe:

Articles againſt Sir John Bothwick.

Firſt, “ He held, the Pope had no more Au“ thority than any other Biſhop.
Secondly, “ That Papal Indulgences and Par“ dons, were deſign'd only to abuſe ignorant
“ People, and ſignified nothing.
Thirdly, “ That it is lawful for Biſhops and “ Prieſts to marry.
Fourthly, “ That the Hereſies, commonly “ call'd the Hereſies of England, and their new “ Liturgy, were a commendable Reformation,
“ and ought to be followed by the reſt of Chri-“ ſtendom.
Fifthly, “ That the People of Scotland were “ miſled by the Clergy, out of the Profeſſion of “ the true Faith.
Sixthly, “ That Churchmen ought not to en“ joy any Temporalties.
Seventhly, “ That the King ought to ſeize the “ Eſtates of the Church, and convert them to “ other pious Uſes.
Eighthly, “ That the Church of Scotland ought “ to be govern'd by the Engliſh Model.
Ninthly, “ That the Canons and Conſtitutions
“ of the Church, were repugnant to the Law of “ God, and by conſequence of no force.
Tenthly, That the Monaſtick Orders ought “ to be ſuppreſs'd.
Eleventhly, “ That he took the Liberty of “ reading heretical Books written by Melancton, “ OEcolampadius and Eraſmus.

Sir John Bothwick appearing neither in Perſon nor Proxy, the Charge was taken for confeſſed. Upon this he was declared a Heretick, his Goods confiſcated, he was burnt in Effigy, and all Perſons prohibited to entertain or relieve him under the Penalty of Excommunication.

May 28, 1540.

Sir John being inform'd of theſe Proceedings, retir'd into England, where he was well receiv'd by King Henry, and honour'd with a publick Character to the Proteſtant Princes in Germany. Thus far Archbiſhop Spotſwood. But notwithſtanding, Sir John Bothwick did not think it ſafe to ſtand his Trial at St. Andrews, the Articles were tranſmitted to him by a Friend. By his Anſwer to the Charge related by Fox, it appears, he was much miſtaken in ſome Points; particularly, in aſſerting that the Clergy ought not to have any Property or temporal Juriſdiction. But the Weakneſs of this Pretence has been ſufficiently expos'd already *: Beſides, Sir John, as to the manner of his Defence, is extremely foreign to the Character of a Chriſtian.

* My Church Hiſtory, pt. 1. p. 661.

He is very coarſe and intemperate in his Satyr, and flies out into the laſt Exceſſes of Railing †.

To break thro' the Order of Chronology a little, and proceed ſomewhat farther with the Scottiſh Affairs. King Henry ſome Years ſince, ſent the Biſhop of St. David's into Scotland, to preſent his Nephew with ſome Engliſh Books, and particularly with the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man: But that Prince was not diſpos'd to make any Alteration in Religion. Some time after, the Lord William Howard was ſent to the Scotch Court to deſire an Interview between the two Kings at York. This Motion was agreed to, the Time ſet, and an Equipage prepar'd for the Journey. But the Cardinal and Clergy being apprehenſive of ill Conſequences, endeavoured to break the Appointment. They told the King, there was a great deal of Danger of putting himſelf in the King of England's Hands; that he would in all likelihood meet with the Miſfortune of King James the Firſt, and be kept Priſoner in England: That by taking this Step, his Friendſhip would be ſuſpected by the Emperor and the French King; and which was chiefly to be regarded, by entring into ſuch a Confidence with an excommunicated Prince, he muſt neceſſarily fall under the Pope's Diſpleaſure. Notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance, the King reſolved to keep his Word, and ſet forward for England. For not to appear at York, and diſappoint his Uncle upon ſo ſolemn an Occaſion, might draw a War upon him, which his Exchequer was in no Condition to deal with. The Clergy perceiving where the Matter pinch'd, beſides ſome Advances in Hand, made an Offer of Fifty Thouſand Crowns per Annum, in caſe any War ſhould happen, repreſenting withal, that by the Forfeiture of Hereticks Eſtates, a Hundred Thouſand Crowns more would accrue to his Majeſty. Upon the Strength of theſe Expectations, the King was prevail'd upon to decline the Interview, and ſend an Excuſe to his Uncle. From this time his Highneſs was intirely managed by the Cardinal and his Party, and ordered a ſtrict Proſecution of Perſons ſuſpected for Hereſie *.

The King of Scots refuſes an Interview with King Henry, and why.

A. D. 1540.

To return to England; the Lord Cromwell, who perceiv'd his Intereſt at a ſtand, and the other Party gaining upon the King, projected the Marriage between his Maſter and the Lady Anne, the Duke of Cleves's Siſter. This Miniſter obſerv'd, the King was much ſway'd by his Queens, as long as his Fancy continued. He thought therefore the moſt effectual Expedient to preſerve himſelf and his Friends, was to bring on an Alliance with ſome of the Princes of Germany. The Emperor had propos'd Chriſtiana Dutcheſs of Milan to the King; and King Francis had offer'd him the Choice of any French Lady: But both theſe Overtures came to nothing (m). This made the King hearken to Cromwell's Suggeſtion, and think of engaging with Anne of Cleve. The Treaty was begun with Duke John her Father, but ſome Difficulties intervening, it broke off. Upon her Father's Death the Treaty for a Match with England, was revived with Duke William her Brother. The Lady's Picture was drawn by Hans Holben, and ſent over hither. But this famous Painter was too ceremonious, and very much exceeded the Life. The King being pleas'd with the Pourtrait and Alliance, concluded the Match, and ſoon after, the Lady was ſent over with a ſplendid Equipage. His Majeſty upon the Sight of her at Rocheſter, was much diſappointed in her Perſon. He diſſembled his Diſguſt notwithſtanding, and treated her with the cuſtomary Regard. Having proceeded thus far, he thought it too late to diſengage, and therefore reſolved to marry when the Difficulty of the Precontract between this Lady and the Duke of Lorrain's Son, was diſentangled. The Lord Cromwell was charg'd with the clearing this Buſineſs. He told the King, that an Inſtrument for releaſing the Covenants of Marriage between the Lady Anne and the Duke of Lorrain's Son, was brought over. But whether Cromwell was guilty of an Omiſſion, or deceiv'd by the Duke of Cleve's Agents, is ſomewhat uncertain: For it ſeems the German Ambaſſadors could produce no ſuch Inſtrument. But to give the King what Satisfaction was in their Power, Oleſleger * offer'd to remain Priſoner until a Revocation of the Contract was ſent over. This Failure in what was expected, made the King complain of ill Uſage; however, the Matter was referred to the Council-Table. Here the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and the Biſhop of Durham, deliver'd their Opinion; That if nothing but a Contract had paſs'd between them, the Renunciation abovementioned, would void the Articles, and return them to their former Liberty. As to the manner of this Revocation, each of the Parties were to declare their Releaſe before Perſons of Quality, and publick Notaries. And that their proteſting the Articles void in this ſolemn manner, would be a ſufficient Diſcharge in Law. The Duke of Cleves's Commiſſioners undertook a Form of this kind in Writing, procur'd from their Maſter and the Duke of Lorrain's Son, ſhould be put in the King's Hand; and the ſame Declaration was made by the Lady, at his Majeſty's Inſtance. Things being thus far advanc'd, the King told Cromwell there was now no Remedy or Evaſion, and therefore he muſt of neceſſity put his Neck in the Yoke. Thus the next Day, he marry'd her with the uſual Solemnity at Greenwich, and reſolved to enter into a Confederacy with the Princes of Germany, provided Religion could be tolerably agreed. The latter end of this Year, Sir Ralph Sadler Secretary of State, was ſent Ambaſſador to James King of Scotland. After a Preſent of ſome Horſes for a Recommendation, his Inſtructions were to bring Beton, Cardinal and Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, into Diſ-favour with that Prince: To this purpoſe the Cardinal's Letters to the Pope, couch'd in Terms not ſerviceable to the Writer, being intercepted in England, were ſhewn at the Scottiſh Court: But this Deſign of leſſening the Cardinal's Intereſt, made little Impreſſion upon King James. The other Branch of the Ambaſſador's Charge, was, to perſuade the King of Scots to make Seiſure of the Abbeys: That this Expedient would be a great Addition to the Revenues of the Crown. The King generouſly reply'd, the Monaſteries were ready to anſwer any Intimations of his Pleaſure for a Supply; and therefore he had no Occaſion to deſtroy their Eſtabliſhment: He added, a great many of theſe Houſes manag'd to Commendation, and if there were any Abuſes in the reſt, they might be eaſily reform'd.

The King's Marriage with Anne Cleve.

Id. p. 453.

Jan. 6. 153$\frac{9}{40}$.

Id. p. 454.

The King of Scots Reaſon for not diſſolving the Monaſteries.

Ibid. p. 445.

'Tis poſſible this Prince might conſider farther, That if the Abbeys were diſſolved, it would be expected he ſhould follow King Henry's Precedent, and convey the greateſt Part of theſe Eſtates to his Courtiers, and other ſecular Men. That unleſs they were thus gratify'd, the Temporalty might think themſelves diſappointed, and Loſers by the Change. That being thus baulk'd, they might ſympathize too far with the unfortunate Religious, abett their Pretenſions, and occaſion a Commotion in the Government.

---

† Fox, vol. 2. p. 605. & deinc.

* Spotſwood, p. 71.

(m) Ld. Herbert, p. 434, 435.

* He was one of the Commiſſioners.

On the other hand, if the Lands of the Monaſteries were granted to his Lay-Subjects, he might foreſee the Senſe of the Benefaction would be quickly worn out. Such Bounty would be look'd on as the Reward of Service, and the Title laid in the Merit of the Grantee. 'Twould be very much a Queſtion whether the Heirs of the Abbey-Lands would be ſo compliant with the Crown, and part ſo eaſily with their Money as the Monks had uſually done. The ſending for Loans might probably be look'd on as arbitrary Demands, and Invaſions of Property: And tho' the ſqueezing a defenceleſs Order, would, it may be, go off in a Jeſt, or paſs for a publick Convenience; yet ſuch an Experiment upon Men of Title and Intereſt, of Steel and Stomach, might prove dangerous in the Operation: 'Twas upon this Proſpect, 'tis likely, in Concurrence with other Motives, that King James was not in a Diſpoſition to go into his Uncle's Meaſures. And thus when the Emperor Charles heard of the Fate of the Engliſh Abbeys, and into what Channels their Revenues were turned; he is reported to have ſaid, That now the King had kill'd the Hen which laid him the Golden Egg.

The King reſolves to part with his Queen. Cromwell's Fall.

To return to England: It ſeems the new Queen had neither Agreeableneſs of Perſon, or Converſation, to engage the King's Affections: For how well qualified ſoever ſhe might be for Diſcourſe in her own Country, that Advantage was loſt here, for ſhe underſtood no Language but Dutch: And as for Muſick, which was the King's Inclination, 'twas not any part of the Breeding of her Father's Court. Beſides, the Inſtrument for diſentangling the Pre-contract, was either not ſhewn the King, or came ſhort of giving Satisfaction. 'Tis granted it was tranſmitted hither, to Oleſleger, the Duke's Commiſſioner, but it was not lodg'd with the Records of State, but only found amongſt Cromwell's Papers after he was apprehended. In ſhort, the King was reſolv'd to part with his Queen, and deſtroy Cromwell, who adviſ'd the bringing them together. It was not long ſince the King had loaded him with Titles and Advancement in Office; made him Knight of the Garter, Earl of Eſſex, and Lord Chamberlain of England. But Cromwell having gone ſo deep in making this Match, and flouriſh'd, 'tis likely, too much upon the Lady's Perſon, his Fate was determin'd. This Miniſter was puſh'd from his Station with little Regret. The Nobility grudg'd ſo much Greatneſs to ſo mean a Birth. The Biſhop of Wincheſter, and thoſe of his Intereſt and Perſwaſion, hated him for projecting the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, and acting ſo vigorouſly in it. As for the Reformers, he ſign'd the Inſtrument for their Puniſhment, and had a Share in the Proſecution, and therefore could have no great Expectations from that Quarter: Beſides, his Counſels were thought oppreſſive, both to the Clergy and Laity: For notwithſtanding the prodigious Treaſure flowing into the Exchequer, from the Diſſolution of the Abbeys; or at leaſt might have run into that Channel, had the Courſe been well directed: Notwithſtanding this, and a Subſidy of four Shillings in the Pound, given by the Clergy, he had wreſted one Tenth, and four Fifteenths from the Laity, againſt the Grain of the Parliament. Theſe Circumſtances of his Condition, and Management, made him univerſally hated. The King therefore thought his Miniſtry no longer neceſſary, but gave way to the Complaint of his Enemies. Now it was no difficult Undertaking to form a Charge againſt a Perſon who had acted in ſo many Publick Poſts, and been concern'd in ſuch a Complication of Buſineſs.

June the 13th, A. D. 1540.

The King being furniſh'd with Articles and Evidence againſt Cromwell, order'd the Duke of Norfolk to arreſt him at the Council Table. Cromwell drew a Preſage of his Ruin from the Perſon employ'd: For this Duke was Uncle to the Lady Catherine Howard, who began now to draw the King's Inclination. When the News was ſpread of Cromwell's Commitment to the Tower for High Treaſon, the People gave publick and ill-natur'd Signs of their being pleas'd with his Miſfortune. The King perceiving the Guſt of the Generality, that the Hardſhips ſuffer'd, and the wrong Steps in the Adminiſtration, were thrown upon this Miniſter, he proceeded in the Divorce, and his Buſineſs in Parliament, without much Reſerve or Heſitation.

Cromwell ſent to the Tower for High-Treaſon.

Cromwell was attainted of High Treaſon in Parliament, without being brought to his Anſwer. This Method was thought Extremity of Juſtice, to ſpeak ſoftly; but the former Proceedings of this Kind, and moſt other Severities of the Government, being imputed to his Suggeſtions, he had little Compaſſion. Archbiſhop Cranmer ſhew'd his Friendſhip heartily on this Occaſion, and made a generous Effort to diſengage Cromwell, as appears by his Letter to the King on this Lord's Behalf.

> “He acquaints his Majeſty, how much he was ſurpriz'd at Cromwell's being put under an Arreſt for High Treaſon. That the Obligations of this Miniſter to his Majeſty being ſo extraordinary; his Security reſting wholly on the Crown, and his Inclination, upon all Occaſions, ſo apparent to ſerve his Maſter, his Miſbehaviour to ſuch a Degree was a moſt amazing Relation. The Archbiſhop continues, That he thought Cromwell lov'd his Majeſty no leſs than God Almighty; That he always made his Majeſty's Pleaſure the Rule of his Conduct, and valued no Man's Diſpleaſure to ſerve his Maſter; That, in his Opinion, no King of England ever had a Miniſter better qualified in Point of Prudence, Application, and Integrity, than Cromwell; That if King John, Henry the II. and Richard the II. had been furniſh'd with ſuch a Counſellour, he believes they would never have miſcarried, and been ſo traiterouſly deſerted. I lov'd him, ſays the Archbiſhop, as a Friend, but chiefly for the diſtinguiſhing Regard he always diſcover'd for your Highneſs; But now, if he is a Traitor, I am ſorry I miſplac'd my Affection, and took him into any Share of Confidence, and am very glad his Treaſon is detected. But then I am extreamly concern'd upon another Account; for who can your Highneſs truſt if he has deceiv'd you? Alas! I lament your Highneſs's Miſfortune, and am perfectly at a loſs in whom you may confide: But ſhall never ceaſe to beg of God Almighty, to ſend your Highneſs a Counſellour in his Place, ſo well qualified for your Service, both in Abilities and Inclination, as I ever thought this Perſon to have been.

June the 14th.

Ibid. p. 447.

This is the Subſtance of Cranmer's Letter, as 'twas copy'd, by Lord Herbert, from the Original. This Letter, tho' written in Time, and with great Frankneſs, was not prevalent enough to preſerve Cromwell. For three Days after, the Bill of Attainder was brought into the Houſe of Lords, where it paſt in two Days: It ſtuck longer with the Commons, but at laſt 'twas agreed to by both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent.

June the 17th.

Crimes charg'd upon Cromwell in the Bill of Attainder.

“The Act ſets forth, That Cromwell had preſum'd to diſcharge ſeveral Perſons committed for Miſpriſion of Treaſon: That he had receiv'd ſeveral Bribes, and for that Conſideration, granted Licences to carry Money, Corn, Horſes, and other things, out of the Kingdom, contrary to the King's Proclamation: That he had traiterouſly uſurp'd part of the King's Prerogative, and iſſued forth Commiſſions to ſeveral Perſons, upon urgent and weighty Affairs, without the King's Knowledge or Conſent: That he had procur'd many Heretical Books to be tranſlated into Engliſh: That he had openly maintain'd, that 'twas lawful for every Chriſtian Man to adminiſter the Sacrament of the Altar, as well as the Prieſt: That he had misbehaved himſelf in his Office of Vicegerent, ſcreen'd Hereticks from Puniſhment, obſtructed their Reformation, and written to the Sheriffs to ſet them at liberty, upon a falſe Suggeſtion of an Order from the King: That having ſtrengthen'd his Intereſt, by debauching his Majeſty's Subjects, and thinking himſelf in a Condition to maintain his Treaſons and Hereſies by plain Force, on the laſt of March, in the 30th Year of the King's Reign, when Complaint was made to him of Barnes, and ſome other new Preachers; amongſt other things, to the ſame Effect, he traiterouſly deliver'd himſelf in theſe Words; That if the King would turn from it, yet I would not turn: And if the King did turn, and all his People, I would fight in the Field in mine own Perſon, with my Sword in mine Hand, againſt him and all others: And then, and there, moſt traiterouſly pull'd out his Dagger, and held it up, with theſe Words; or elſe this Dagger thruſt me to the Heart, if I would not die in that Quarrel againſt them all. And I truſt, if I live one Year, or two, it ſhould not be in the King's Power, to let it if he would. And then, ſwearing a great Oath, and throwing up his Arm in a menacing Poſture, he ſaid, I will do ſo indeed. He is likewiſe charg'd with enriching himſelf by Oppreſſion, Bribery, Extortion, and deluſive Promiſes. And that having rais'd a great Fortune, by ſuch indirect and ſcandalous Practices, he had treated the Nobility with great Diſregard and Contempt. And being put in mind of the Condition to which the King had advanc'd him, the laſt Day of January, the 31ſt Year of the preſent Reign, in the Pariſh of St. Martin's in the Fields, in Middleſex, he publickly declar'd, That if the Lords would handle him ſo, he would give them ſuch a Breakfaſt as never was made in England, and that the proudeſt of them ſhould know. For all which Treaſons, and Hereſies, he was attainted to ſuffer the Pains of Death, and to forfeit all his Lands, Goods and Chattels to the King's Uſe, of which he had been poſſeſs'd the laſt Day of March, in the 30th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, or ſince. To this Bill there is a Proviſo added, That this Attainder ſhould work no Prejudice to the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, or to the Dean and Chapter of that Cathedral (n).

(n) Rot. Parl. 32. H. 8. See Biſhop Burnet's Records. Book 3. p. 187.

Cromwell Dean of Wells.

To underſtand this Proviſo, we are to take notice, That Cromwell, when Lord Privy Seal was his higheſt Title, was elected Dean of Wells. This was done by Biſhop Clerke's Intereſt, at the King's Recommendation. The Biſhop ſeems very much pleas'd, that Cromwell had this Dignity: Becauſe ſo great a Man's being Dean, he conceiv'd, would ſtrengthen the Intereſt, and protect the Privileges of that Church. But if this was Biſhop Clerke's Opinion, he miſcalculated upon the Iſſue; For Cromwell procur'd Exchanges of Land, and broke in upon the Endowments of that See and Chapter (o).

(o) Biblioth. R. Harley Armig.

To return: Upon this Attainder, Fox takes the Freedom to obſerve, That as General Councils have ſometimes been miſtaken, in Matters of Weight relating to Religion; ſo Princes and Parliaments may be ſometimes miſinform'd, by Men of Deſign, and malintention'd. And that to affirm this, is no Reflection upon the Government and Legiſlature (p).

(p) Fox. Vol. 2. p. 514.

The Lord Herbert is more reſerv'd in his Remarks, and won't pretend to juſtify where the Law condemns: However, he ſeems to believe, that thoſe dangerous Words, ſaid to be ſpoken by Cromwell, did not proceed from any treaſonable Meaning: But that, being ſome unguarded Expreſſions, they were miſreported, or miſapplied (q).

(q) Ld. Herbert, p. 457, 458.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian ventures farther in Cromwell's Juſtification, and makes no Difficulty to affirm, that from theſe Particulars in the Act, the Reader will clearly ſee, why he was not brought to make his Anſwer, moſt of them relating to Orders and Directions he had given, for which, it is very probable, he had the King's Warrant. But to ſay this, is to ſtick a remarkable Blemiſh upon the King, to make the Parliament flexible to a lamentable Degree, and arraign the Proceedings of the Higheſt Court of Juſtice; and all this, without ſufficient Proof to warrant the Cenſure (r).

(r) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 279.

The King breaks the Marriage with Anne of Cleve.

About this Time, John Clerke, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, was ſent Ambaſſadour to the Duke of Cleves, to acquaint him, that the Inſtrument for nulling the Pre-contract between Anne of Cleve and the Duke of Lorrain's Son, had been examin'd in Parliament, and declar'd inſufficient for the Purpoſe. That therefore his Majeſty was reſolv'd to break the Marriage. In the mean time, the King order'd the the Duke of Suffolk to acquaint the Queen with his Reſolution. She had been lately remov'd to Richmond, upon pretence of better Air (s). The Lady was extremely ſurpriz'd at the Delivery of this Meſſage: After ſome Recollection, and recovering her Spirits, ſhe diſcours'd this Lord, and was, at laſt, perſwaded to comply with the Terms propos'd; Firſt, To refer the Matter of the Pre-contract to the Deciſion of the Engliſh Clergy: Secondly, To drop her Title of Queen, and take that of the King's Adopted Siſter.

(s) Ld. Herbert, p. 458, 459.

Ibid.

On the ſeventh of July, the Caſe was brought before the Convocation, open'd by the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and a Committee appointed to conſider it. The Biſhops of Durham and Wincheſter, Thurlby, and Leighton Dean of York, were order'd to examine Witneſſes: The next Day they receiv'd the King's Depoſition, with a long Declaration of the whole Matter under Cromwell's Hand (t). It was likewiſe depos'd by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor Audley, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, “That when the Queen was brought to Greenwich, at her firſt Arrival, the King deſir'd to be inform'd, whether the Promiſes made by the Duke of Cleve, to clear the Eſpouſals between the Queen and the Duke of Lorrain's eldeſt Son, were perform'd (u). For Satiſfaction in this (t) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Records. Book 3. Num. 17, 18.

(u) Regiſt. Cranmer. fol. 141.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

“Matter the King deferr'd the Solemnizing his Marriage two Days: That upon the King's laying this Affair before the Council, they found this matter not diſentangled. That no writing was brought over to ſatisfie this Queſtion. That upon the ſcore of this Diſappointment, the Marriage had been declin'd, if the King's Inclination had not been overrul'd by the Solicitation of the Duke's Agents. Theſe Perſons promis'd, that their Maſter would ſhortly ſend over an authentick Inſtrument, and put the matter out of all doubt. But when the writing came to the King's Hand, it rather rais'd new Scruples, than remov'd the old ones. So that now the Eſpouſals between the Queen and the Duke of Lorrain's eldeſt Son, might be taken for a Contract, de Præſenti. The reſt of the Depoſitions turn'd chiefly upon the King's Diſaffection to the Queen's Perſon. The Evidence being laid before the Convocation, they came to an unanimous Vote for nulling the Marriage, and declar'd the King and the Lady Anne, perfectly diſcharg'd from the Engagement (w). One Argument, beſides thoſe already mention'd, was drawn from the want of Conſummation: But here, as it is well obſerv'd, the Convocation ſeems to have forgotten what was urg'd on the King's behalf ten Years before: That Conſent, without Conſummation, compleated a Marriage. But it is ſuppos'd, that many of the Members being Canoniſts, ſupported their Judgment by Precedents in the Canon Law; concluding, it may be, they might uſe the ſame liberty which had formerly been taken by the Court of Rome (x).

(w) See Records, N. 48.
July 9.
Extracts of Convoc.
The Convocation declares the Marriage void.

(x) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 281.

But after all, the Reaſons on which their Sentence is founded, are not very cogent; and therefore I can't help ſaying, they appear to have been too much govern'd by the Will of their Prince.

On the tenth of July, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury reported the Proceedings of the Convocation, in the Houſe of Lords: The Biſhop of Wincheſter deliver'd the Inſtrument of the Clergy's Deciſion in Writing, and dilated on the Reaſons upon which it was founded. The Lords being ſatisfied with this Repreſentation, ſent Cranmer and Gardner to acquaint the Commons with what had paſs'd. The next day, the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Southampton, and the Biſhop of Wincheſter, were diſpatch'd to the Queen: She appear'd not at all diſconcerted at the News; it may be the manner of this Diſengagement reconcil'd her more to it: For beſides the Privilege of being declar'd the King's adopted Siſter, theſe Lords aſſur'd her, his Highneſs would give her Precedence next to his Queen and Daughters, and ſettle her in an Eſtate of Three Thouſand Pound per Annum. And over and above, ſhe had the liberty either of living in England, or returning home when ſhe thought fit. She accepted the Terms, acquainted the King with her Compliance in a Letter, and ſign'd in the Stile ſuggeſted: She was farther prevail'd on to write to her Brother the Duke of Cleves. In this Letter, ſhe reports the Judgment of the Convocation, owns the Juſtice of the Proceſs, that her Honour was preſerv'd, that ſhe was well us'd in England, and deſir'd to remain there; in the cloſe, ſhe requeſts her Brother not to break off his Correſpondence, or maltreat the Engliſh Court; for that might prove unſerviceable to her (y). Laſtly, She promis'd theſe Lords, that all the Letters ſhe receiv'd from her Brother, or any other Perſon, ſhould be ſhewn to the King. The day following, a Bill was read for annulling the Marriage, and paſs'd both Houſes without any Difficulty; the Act recites the Judgment of the Convocation, and makes it High-Treaſon to maintain either by Writing or any other overt Act, that the pretenſed Marriage between the King and the Lady Anne of Cleve, is good and binding (z).

July 11.
Their Sentence confirm'd in Parliament.

The Lady Anne complies with the Proceedings.
Id.
Collections &c. Book 3. p. 200.
(y) Ld. Herbert, p. 459.

Hen. VIII. K.

(z) 32 H. 8. c. 25. Statutes at large.

To proceed to ſome other Statutes of this Parliament, relating to the Church. A Bill paſs'd for moderating the Rigour of the Six Articles, relating to the Marriage of Prieſts, or their cohabiting with other Women. And here the capital Puniſhment was mitigated to a Forfeiture of Goods, Chattels, and Lands, during Life (a).

An Act for moderating the Penalties of the Six Articles.

(a) 32 H. 8. c. 10.

Another Bill was paſs'd, touching the State or Declaration of the Chriſtian Religion, by whom it was to be drawn up, and who was to determine the meaning of any controverted Point. The Preamble ſets forth, “That his Highneſs, in virtue of his Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, had taken all imaginable Care to eſtabliſh the Proſperity of the Church of England, and to procure the Bleſſings of Union in that Society. His Highneſs likewiſe conſidering, that ſundry heretical, erroneous, and dangerous Opinions have been ſpread amongſt his Subjects, diſorder'd them in their Belief and Practice, diſpoſed them to Animoſities among themſelves, to the Damage of the Commonwealth, and the danger of their Souls, without timely Remedy. To prevent ſuch Miſchiefs, his Highneſs has order'd the Archbiſhops, and ſeveral Biſhops of both Provinces, together with a conſiderable number of Doctors in Divinity, of the beſt Reputation for Learning, and Diſcretion to draw up a Form of the principal Articles of our Faith; adding withal, an Explanation of ſuch other Points as by his Grace's Advice, Counſel and Conſent, ſhall be thought needful and expedient. They were likewiſe commiſſion'd to deliver in a Form of all the lawful Rights and Ceremonies for Divine Service, to be obſerv'd within this Realm. And becauſe the Matter was ſo important, and required the utmoſt Thought and Deliberation, they were not tied in the Performance to this Seſſion, but might take what length of time ſoever ſhould be allow'd them by the King, with the Advice of the Privy Council. By the enacting Part, all Determinations, Declarations, Definitions, Reſolutions, &c. made according to God's Word, and Chriſt's Goſpel, by the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Committee of Doctors, above mention'd, or by the whole Clergy of England, upon any Point of the Chriſtian Faith, or touching Rights and Ceremonies, when confirm'd by his Majeſty's Letters Patent under the Great-Seal, ſhall be in every Point and Circumſtance fully believ'd, obey'd, and perform'd to all Purpoſes, Intents, and Conſtructions, by all his Majeſty's Subjects, under the Penalties therein to be compriz'd, provided always, that nothing ſhall be done, ordain'd, defin'd, or provided by Authority of this Act, which ſhall be repugnant or contrariant to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm (b).

An Act concerning the Declaration of the Chriſtian Religion.

(b) 32 H. 8. c. 26. Statutes at large.

This Proviſo perplexes the Statute, ſeems to recal the Powers already granted; and upon any Diſpute, brings the laſt Reſolution of the Queſtion to the Temporal Courts. For as our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, 'twas one of the great Deſigns both of the Miniſtry and Lawyers at this Time, to draw all Eccleſiaſtical Matters to the Cognizance of the Secular Judge (c).

(c) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 233.

The Order of the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem ſuppreſs'd.

The famous Hoſpital of the Knights of St. John's of Jeruſalem, which had hitherto out-rid the ſtorm which fell upon the Abbeys, was now involv'd in the fate of the reſt. For the Diſſolution of this wealthy Society, theſe Reaſons, as Lord Herbert words it, were chiefly pretended, (d) “That the Knights of Rhodes or St. John's of Jeruſalem exported great Sums of Money yearly out of the Kingdom: That they abetted the Uſurpations of the Court of Rome, maintain'd the Pope's Supremacy: That they had defam'd the King and his Subjects, and endeavour'd to draw an Odium upon the publick Proceedings, for diſcharging the pretended Authority of the Court of Rome: That the Iſle of Rhodes, from whence theſe Religious Knights took their Name and Eſtabliſhment, was ſurpriz'd by the Turks: And laſtly, that the Revenues of the Houſe would be better ſpent in Defence of the Kingdom, than any longer enjoy'd by ſuch a diſaffected Fraternity.

By the Body of the Statute, all the Lands belonging to the Knights of St. John's of Jeruſalem, both in England and Ireland, are granted to the Crown; and put within the Survey and Juriſdiction of the Court of Augmentations. And here with the reſt of their Eſtates, all Parſonages, Tithes, and Penſions, belonging to their Houſe, are convey'd to the King. However, Sir William Weſton Prior, and ſeveral others of the Brothers, had conſiderable Penſions during their Lives ſettled by the Act. For Inſtance, Sir William Weſton had an Annuity of a Thouſand Pounds per Annum: Sir John Rawſon Knight, Prior of Kilmaynan in Ireland, had an Annuity of Five Hundred Mark, Clement Weſt's Annuity was Two Hundred Pounds: George Ailmer, another of the Brothers, had an annual Penſion of an Hundred Pounds during Life. There are ſeveral other Annuities of the ſame Value, but many of them were no more than Ten Pounds; beſides this annual Allowance, all the Brothers had an Aſſignment of part of the Goods belonging to the Houſe, proportion'd at the King's Pleaſure. Thus, ſays Lord Herbert, fell the ancient and pious Order, not without much Scandal abroad, both to the King and Government (e). The Endowment was vaſt, as may be concluded, only by conſidering the Penſions. However, the King was not long the richer by the Diſſolution; for his Majeſty being diverted with the Tilting, and Entertainment of ſeveral Noblemen, and other Perſons of Condition, rewarded them with a Grant of a great part of the Lands of this Priory.

An Act concerning Marriages and Degrees of Conſanguinity, &c. Id.

The Act concerning Marriages, and Degrees of Conſanguinity ſhall be next. The Preamble ſets forth, “That many Marriages had been null'd formerly by the Biſhop of Rome, upon pretence of Pre-contracts, or other Degrees of Kindred, not prohibited by the Law of God: It is therefore enacted, that after the Conſummation of the Marriage, no Allegation of a Pre-contract, or any Degrees of Kindred, but thoſe excepted in the Law of God, ſhould be pleaded to annul and void ſuch an Engagement. “For theſe Pretences, as the Act continues, had been often made uſe of, only when the Parties, or one of them at leaſt, grew weary, and were willing to diſengage (f).

This Act making Pre-contracts no good Reaſon for breaking a Marriage, drew a Cenſure upon the King, for parting with Queen Anne Bullen upon this Score. Some, it is poſſible, thought the King procur'd the paſſing this Bill, to wipe off the Blemiſh on the Lady Elizabeth's Birth, and to open a way to her Succeſſion to the Crown. For now the ground upon which ſhe was made illegitimate, was by Implication declared unwarrantable: Another branch of this Act, allowing all Marriages, excepting in the Degrees of Conſanguinity and Affinity prohibited in Scripture, was ſuppos'd a Proviſion for removing Impediments againſt the King's Marriage with Mrs. Catherine Howard: For this Lady being Couſin German to Anne Bullen, the nearneſs of the Alliance, would embaraſs the King's Deſign by the Canon Law.

“This Seſſion the Court of Firſt Fruits and Tenths was erected (g). There was likewiſe an Act for the Payment and Recovery of Tithes: The Act is charg'd with two Proviſo's. Firſt, That no Perſon ſhall be ſued, or otherwiſe compell'd to pay Tithes, for any Mannors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments, which by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm are diſcharg'd, or not chargeable with the Payment of any ſuch Tithes.

An Act concerning Tithes.

“It is farther Provided, That nothing in this Act ſhall bind the City of London and Suburbs, to pay their Tithes and Offering otherwiſe than they ought, or ſhould have done before the making this Act.

“The Preamble ſets forth, That many Perſons in few Years paſt, more contemptuouſly and commonly preſuming to break in upon the Laws of the Realm, have made no Scruple to refuſe the Payment of the lawful and accuſtom'd Tithes of Corn, Hay, Paſturage, Oblations, &c. That they have been the more encourag'd to this indirect Practice, becauſe divers Lay Perſons having Parſonages, Vicariges, and Tithes convey'd to them and their Heirs, cannot by the courſe of the Eccleſiaſtical Laws of the Realm, ſue in the Eccleſiaſtical Court for the wrongful detaining the ſaid Tithes or other Duties, nor can have any Remedy by the Common Laws of this Realm for this purpoſe.

“It is therefore enacted, That every Perſon ſhall ſet out, and pay his Tithes according to the Cuſtom of the Pariſh where they are due. That Offenders ſhall be convented before the Ordinary, and the Cauſe try'd in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts; that in Caſe any of the Parties ſhall appeal from the Judgment of the Spiritual Courts, the Appellants ſhall pay Coſts to the other Party; and that thoſe Perſons who ſhall refuſe to pay their Tithes, purſuant to the Award abovemention'd, ſhall be bound by two Juſtices of the Peace, to obey the Ordinary's Sentence (h).

Upon this Statute, Fuller takes the freedom to remark, that ſince the King had lately ſet ſo ſingular a Precedent in ſuppreſſing Abbeys, and alienating Tithes from the Primitive Intendment; it was no wonder to find the Subjects ſtrike out into ſome imitation; eſpecially becauſe it ſeem'd unreaſonable, as he goes on, that they ſhould receive Wages, who did no Work; and that the Hire of the Labourers in the Vineyard, ſhould be given to lazy Lookers on (i). This Statute, tho' made in favour of Lay Impropriators, was ſerviceable to the Clergy: For tho' the Benefit of the Church was not principally in View, the Concurrence of Intereſt, and the Parity of the Caſe made it applicable.

At the end of this Seſſions, there was an Act of Grace, in which ſeveral Perſons of Quality, Monks, and Prieſts of both Parties, are excepted. Thoſe likewiſe who held the following erroneous Principles are excepted viz.

(d) 32 H. 8. c. 24.

(e) The Ld. Herbert, p. 461.

(f) 32 H. 8. c. 38.

(g) 32 H. 8. c. 45.

(h) 32 H. 8. c. 7.

(i) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 5. p. 236.

Perſons holding ſeveral Errors excepted from the general Pardon.

That Infants ought not to be Baptiz'd, and if Baptiz'd, to be Re-baptiz'd when they come to Years of Diſcretion: That it is not lawful for a Chriſtian to exerciſe any Office or Poſt in the Commonwealth: That Human Laws ought not to be obey'd: That it is not lawful for any Chriſtian to take an Oath before a Judge: That Chriſt aſſum'd none of the Fleſh of the Bleſſed Virgin: That thoſe who ſin after Baptiſm, cannot be recover'd by Repentance. That the manner and time of every Man's Death is ſo irrevocably determin'd by God Almighty, that it is not in the Power of any Mortal to alter it (k). Theſe Heterodoxies, mention'd in the Act, were moſt of them held by the then Anabaptiſts.

Ld. Cromwell executed, July 28.

His Character.

Some few days after the Diſſolution of this Parliament, the Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, was brought to the Scaffold, and executed on Tower-hill. This Miniſter was without queſtion of great natural Parts, and of a more than ordinary Talent for Buſineſs: For he came into the World with no advantage of Circumſtances. His Father was a Blackſmith at Putney near London: Notwithſtanding this Diſcouragement of Birth, his Induſtry and Force of Genius made way for his Advancement. He found Opportunities in his Youth to travel, and learn ſome Languages: He ſerv'd ſometime in the Field under Charles Duke of Bourbon; and was a Centinel at the ſacking of Rome. Soon after he quitted the Military Profeſſion, return'd into England, and was entertain'd in Cardinal Woolſey's Family. Here he behav'd himſelf to Commendation enough, was at laſt the Cardinal's Secretary; and when that Prelate fell, the King preferr'd him to his Service. During his Miniſtry, he gain'd a great Share in the King's Favour, by ſuggeſting the Diſſolution of the Abbeys, and bearing hard upon the Juriſdiction of the Clergy. He ſaid, the driving the Monks out of the Cloyſter, was only returning them to Labour and a Lay-Character, which was no more than their firſt Buſineſs and Pretention. As for the Rules of their Inſtitution, and their particular Auſterities injoin'd them, he pretended they might practiſe all this Diſcipline and Self-Denial, without the Forms of monaſtick Confinement. But this way of talking, look'd like ſuperficial and mercenary Reaſoning, in the Opinion of other Perſons of Learning and Thought. In ſhort, his governing himſelf upon theſe Notions, and ſoliciting the King to manage by this Scheme, brought him under a general Odium, and occaſioned his Ruine (l). He is ſaid to have carried his Greatneſs with wonderful Temper and Moderation (m). But the learned Hiſtorian, by what he has already reported of Cromwell, ſeems to have diſabled himſelf for this Commendation. For the Purpoſe: Cromwell's Letter to Shaxton Biſhop of Sarum, is ſtiff, preſcribing, and full of his Vicegerency. By the Loftineſs of his Stile, one would think he had forgotten the Biſhop's Character, and his own ſlender Qualifications: For as this Gentleman obſerves, all the Learning he had, was, that he had got the New Teſtament in Latin by Heart (n). The ſame learned Hiſtorian delivers himſelf thus: I ſhall here add a Reflection upon Cromwell's Misfortune, which may juſtly abate the Loftineſs of haughty Men. Now if he did not believe Cromwell a Man of this Temper, his Remark is altogether foreign. The Day after, ſays this Hiſtorian, that Cromwell was attainted, being required to ſend the King a full Account under his Hand of his Marriage, which Account he ſent (o). He concludes it with theſe abject Words,: “I a moſt woful Priſoner, ready to take the Death when it ſhall pleaſe God and your Majeſty, and yet the frail Fleſh incites me to call to your Grace for Mercy, and Grace for mine Offences. And thus Chriſt, ſave, preſerve and keep you. Written at the Tower this Wedneſday the laſt of June, with the heavy Heart and trembling Hand of your Highneſs's moſt heavy and moſt miſerable Priſoner, and poor Slave, Thomas Cromwell. And a little below that, Moſt gracious Prince, I cry for Mercy, Mercy, Mercy (p).

Farther, Cromwell is likewiſe charg'd by this Hiſtorian, with promoting the Bills of Attainder. Cromwell's Ruine, ſays he, was now decreed: And he who had ſo ſervilely comply'd with the King's Pleaſure in procuring ſome to be attainted the Year before, without being brought to make their Anſwer, fell now under the ſame Severity. However, that he was againſt the Proſecution of thoſe call'd Hereticks, muſt be granted; that he was of no ſanguinary exterminating Spirit, is plain by the Act of Attainder. But when the King's Command preſſed him cloſe, he was not firm enough to hazard his Intereſt or his Perſon. A Proſpect of Danger made him give way, ſign a Commiſſion for the Trial of Heterodoxy, and read the Sentence for delivering the Convict to the ſecular Magiſtrate. Joſcelin and Fox beſtow a great deal of Panegyrick upon him. The firſt reports, that no Perſon was more faithful to the King, more grateful to his Benefactors, and more generally friendly and benevolent, than this Miniſter (q). It is likewiſe ſaid, no Bribery could be faſtened on him (r). Now whether all theſe good Qualities belong to him in ſo ſovereign a Degree, may bear a Queſtion. For in his Speech upon the Scaffold, he acknowledges he had offended the King, and asks him Forgiveneſs (s). As to Gratitude, he ſeems to have fail'd in one Inſtance, if our Hiſtorian is not miſtaken: For out of a Complement to Cranmer, he draws a Parallel between the Archbiſhop and Wolſey, to the Reproach of the Cardinal his Maſter (t). And laſtly, that Cromwell was not ſo clear from taking Bribes, as Biſhop Burnet ſuppoſes, appears from the Penſions and Preſents he receiv'd from the Abbeys, tho' he adviſ'd the ſuppreſſing them, and as Joſcelin confeſſes, exerted his Intereſt for that purpoſe (u).

The Charge againſt him for being concern'd in Bills of Attainder, is of the hardeſt kind. To endeavour the taking off ſome of the weight of this Article, I ſhall cite a Paſſage from Sir Edward Coke. This learned Gentleman puts a Queſtion, What the Reaſon ſhould be, that our Hiſtorians do all agree in this, that Cromwell ſuffered Death by a Law which he himſelf had made? For Anſwer hereof, I had it of Sir Thomas Gawdy, Knight, a grave and reverend Judge of the King's Bench, who lived at that Time, That King Henry the Eighth commanded him to attend the Chief Juſtices, and to know, whether a Man that was forthcoming, might be attainted of High-Treaſon by Parliament, and never called to his Anſwer. The Judges anſwered, that it was a dangerous Queſtion, and that the High Court of Parliament ought to give Examples to inferior Courts for proceeding according to Juſtice, and no inferior Court could do the like; and they thought that the High Court of Parliament would never do it. But being by the expreſs Commandment of the King, and preſs'd by the ſaid Earl of Eſſex, to give a direct Anſwer, they ſaid, that if he be attainted in Parliament, it could not come in queſtion afterwards, whether he were called or not called to anſwer. And albeit their Opinion were according to Law, yet might they have made a better Anſwer; for by the Statute

(k) 32 H. 8. cap. 49.

(l) Id. Herbert, p. 462.

(m) Bp. Burnet, p. 284.

Ibid.

(n) Id. Records, Book 3. p. 163.

(o) Bp. Burnet. Records, Book 3. p. 193.

(p) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 281, 282.

Id. p. 277.

(q) Antiq. Britan. p. 334.

(r) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 285.

(s) Fuller's Church Hiſt. p. 233.

(t) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 265.

(u) Antiq. Britan. p. 332.

tute of Magna Charta, cap. 29. 5 E. 3. cap. 9. & 28 E. 3. cap. 5. No Man ought to be condemned without Anſwer, &c. which they might have certified: But Facta tenent multa quæ fieri prohibentur; The Act of Attainder paſt by Parliament, did bind, as they reſolved. The Party againſt whom this was intended, was never called in queſtion; but the firſt Man after the ſaid Reſolution that was ſo attainted, and never called to anſwer, was the ſaid Earl of Eſſex; whereupon that erroneous and vulgar Opinion amongſt our Hiſtorians grew, That he died by the ſame Law which he himſelf had made (w). Thus far Sir Edward Coke. And if Sir Thomas Gawdy's Story would hold, it might poſſibly be ſomewhat ſerviceable: But the Attainders of the Counteſs of Salisbury, and others mention'd in the Journal of the Houſe of Lords, ſhake the Credit of this Relation (x).

By the way, Sir Edward Coke doth not ſay, Cromwell was the firſt that was attainted in Parliament without being brought to an Anſwer, but that he was the firſt after this Reſolution of the Judges. That he was not abſolutely the firſt, beſides the Inſtances above mentioned, appears from Sir Edward Coke himſelf, who acquaints us, that Elizabeth Barton, Edward Bocking, and others, were ſeveral Years before, attainted in Parliament, their Crimes being out of the Reach of the Common Law *.

By what Cromwell ſpoke at his Death, he left it much doubted of what Religion he died; but, as the learned Author goes on, it is certain he was a Lutheran: For his praying in Engliſh, and that only to God, through Chriſt, without any of thoſe Tricks, that were uſed when thoſe of the Church of Rome died, ſhew'd he was none of theirs. Thus Fuller has likewiſe two Arguments, to prove Cromwell no Papiſt. Firſt, He us'd no ſuperſtitious Croſſing of himſelf (y). But if making the Sign of the Croſs be a ſuperſtitious Uſage, as this Hiſtorian inſinuates, then all the Chriſtians in Tertullian's time were tinctur'd with Superſtition (z). But Cromwell deſir'd no Prayers for him after his Death, therefore he was no Papiſt. But if Prayers for the Dead imply Popery, then not only the Primitive Church, but our Reformation was Popiſh too: For, during the greateſt part of the Reign of Edward the VIth, Prayer for the Dead was part of our Liturgy, as will be farther obſerv'd afterwards. I readily grant, Cromwell was no Papiſt at his Death: But then, it is pretty plain, he was no Proteſtant neither. This, I think, may fairly be collected from part of his dying Speech, which runs thus; And now, I pray you that be here to bear me Record, I die in the Catholick Faith, not doubting in any Article of my Faith, no, nor doubting in any Sacrament of the Church. Many have ſlander'd me, and reported, that I have been a Bearer of ſuch as have maintain'd evil Opinions, which is untrue. But I confeſs, that like as God, by his holy Spirit, does inſtruct us in the Truth; ſo the Devil is ready to ſeduce us, and I have been ſeduc'd, but bear me Witneſs, that I die in the Catholick Faith of the Holy Church. Now is it not evident by theſe Expreſſions, that Cromwell died in the Communion of the then Church of England; that is, in the Religion profeſs'd by King Henry the VIIIth? He diſowns his having encourag'd thoſe who maintain'd evil Opinions. Now evil Opinions, he knew the Audience would interpret no otherwiſe, than Opinions contrary to the Doctrines eſtabliſh'd: He explains himſelf farther, confeſſes his having been ſeduced, but that now he had recover'd himſelf, and died in the Catholick Faith of the Holy Church. Thus, in a Letter to the King, he utterly denied the Charge of Hereſie, and that he was no Sacramentary, &c (a). The Meaning of this Letter was, without doubt, to preſerve his Life: But how could ſuch a Proteſtation be ſerviceable to this Purpoſe, unleſs by removing the Suſpicion of Heterodoxy, and perſwading the King, he was of the ſame Belief with his Highneſs? His praying on the Scaffold only to God (b), is no Proof of his being a Lutheran. For by this reaſon, Biſhop Fiſher, who wrote againſt Luther, may be a Lutheran too. For, at the Execution of this Prelate, we do not find he made any Application to Angel or Saint. To take leave of Cromwell: Stow reports, from his own Knowledge, that this Lord us'd his Father very ill, and took away part of his Freehold in a very arbitrary manner (c). But then, he does not forget to commend him for his large Charity: For he tells us, he had often ſeen above two hundred Perſons, plentifully reliev'd twice a Day, at the Lord Cromwell's Gate.

During the Seſſions of Parliament, there were ſeveral others attainted: To mention ſome of them, Richard Fetherſtone, Thomas Abel, and Edward Powel, Prieſts, and William Horne Yeoman, were attainted for denying the King's Supremacy, and adhering to the Biſhop of Rome (d). By another Bill, Gregory Butolph, Adam Damplip, Edward Brindeholme, Clerks, and Clement Fillpot, Gentleman, were attainted for adhering to the Biſhop of Rome, correſponding with Cardinal Pool, and endeavouring to ſurprize Calais. By the ſame Act, Barnes Dr. of Divinity, Gerrard and Jerome Prieſts, were attainted of Hereſie. The Act ſets forth, “they had conſpired to ſet forth many Hereſies, and preſuming themſelves Men of Learning, had expounded the Scriptures, and wreſted them to an heretical Conſtruction: That having formerly abjured, they were now incorrigible Hereticks. Thus they were condemned to be burnt, or to ſuffer any other Death at the King's Pleaſure (e).

The Act taking notice of a Recantation, 'twill be proper to lay it before the Reader: It runs thus.

“I confeſs with Heart, that Almighty God is no wiſe Author, Cauſer of Sin or any Evil, and therefore, whereas Scripture ſaith, Induravit Dominus cor Pharaonis, and ſuch other Texts of like Senſe, they ought to be underſtood, quod Dominus permiſit eum indurari, and not otherwiſe; which agrees with many of the ancient Interpreters.

Secondly, “That whenſoever I ſhall offend my Neighbour, I muſt be reconcil'd to him before I can obtain Remiſſion of Sin. And in caſe he has offended me, I muſt forgive him as I expect Forgiveneſs from God.

Thirdly, “That good Works mentioned in Scripture, and done by a penitent and true reconcil'd Chriſtian, are profitable to Salvation.

Fourthly, “That Laws and Ordinances made by Chriſtian Governours, ought to be obey'd, not only for Wrath, but for Conſcience ſake.

Theſe Propoſitions were ſubſcrib'd by Robert Barnes, William Jerom, and Thomas Gerrard (f).

This Barnes had formerly been brought into Trouble upon the ſcore of his Preaching and Opinion. During Wolſey's Miniſtry, he had reflected in a Sermon at Cambridge upon the Cardinal's Port and Equipage. The Cardinal told him, this State and Magnificence could not well be diſpens'd with by a Perſon in his Station; that it was neceſſary to ſupport his Character, and the Reputation of the Government. Barnes not reaching this Reaſon, was unwilling to retract his Invective: But Gardner, the Cardinal's Secretary, and Fox, afterwards Biſhop of Wincheſter, being his Friends, prevail'd with him to give Satisfaction, and abjure ſome Opinions charged upon him (g). He was afterward delated upon other Articles, and in Danger of being burnt; but counterfeiting himſelf lunatick, got off into Germany. Here he made an Acquaintance with Luther, Melancthon, and other Divines: He was likewiſe known to the Duke of Saxony, and the King of Denmark. Fox Biſhop of Hereford, Ambaſſador at Smalcald, ſent him into England, where he was kindly entertained by Cromwell (h). By his Intereſt, the Correſpondence with the Germans was in ſome meaſure kept up. He was firſt employ'd in the Buſineſs of the King's Marriage with the Lady Anne of Cleve. But this Lady's Perſon proving unacceptable, was, it may be, one Occaſion of Barnes's Diſgrace (i).

(w) Coke's Inſtit. pt. 4 fol. 37.

(x) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 359, 360.

* Coke's Inſtit. pt. 3. fol. 14. Marg.

Id. p. 245.

(y) Fuller's Church Hiſt. p. 233.

(z) Tertul. de Coron. Milit.

Fuller, ibid.

Cromwell no Lutheran.

Ibid.

July 28.

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 462.

(b) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 285.

(c) Stow's Survey of London, p. 187.

Several Attainders.

Id. p. 74.

Fuller's Ch. Hiſt. p. 232.

(d) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 361.

(e) Id. p. 297.

(f) Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 37.

A farther Account of Dr. Barnes.

Ann. 1536.

But other Accidents concurr'd to Barnes's Miſfortune. This Year in Lent, Biſhop Bonner appointed him, Gerrard, and Jerom, to preach at St. Paul's-Croſs; this it ſeems, was done as a Mark of Reſpect, and to oblige Cromwell; but Gardner ſent Bonner Word, he intended himſelf to preach at St. Paul's-Croſs on Sunday. In his Sermon, he ſpent ſome Strokes of Satyr againſt the new Teaching: Complain'd that the Devil had taught ſome People to throw off Confeſſion, Faſting, and other Inſtances of Diſcipline and Penance. About three Weeks after, Barnes took the ſame Text, but ſpent his Diſcourſe in maintaining the oppoſite Doctrine. Beſides this, he gave himſelf the Liberty of making ſome bold indiſcreet Reflections upon Gardner's Perſon. He play'd upon his Name, and brought a jingling Compariſon or two, which were ſhort, both in Senſe and Breeding. Gerrard and Jerom preached much the ſame Doctrine, but without falling foul upon any Perſon. Jerom had been charg'd with Preaching againſt the Magiſtracy, but he explain'd himſelf to a very defenſible and honeſt Meaning. He affirm'd, "That if the Laws of Princes are conſiſtent with thoſe of God Almighty, we are bound to obey them; but in caſe the Prince is wicked, and commands a Contradiction to revealed Religion: When this happens, we are to ſubmit and ſuffer, and not apply to the Expedient of Reſiſtance (k).

Jerom maintains Paſſive Obedience.

To return to Barnes: Tho' Gardner ſeem'd to bear the Affront with great Temper and Neglect, his Friends thought it neceſſary to ſolicite for Reparation. To this purpoſe they complain'd to the King of Barnes's intemperate Language: How ill he had uſed Gardner, who was both a great Prelate and a Privy-Counſellor (l). Fox reports one Circumſtance otherwiſe, and ſaith Gardner complain'd to the King himſelf. But let this be as it will, Barnes was reprimanded for his Miſbehaviour, and ordered to ask the Biſhop of Wincheſter's Pardon. They were likewiſe to argue the Point of Juſtification. Upon this Article, Barnes had maintain'd, That tho' God requires us to forgive our Neighbour, as a Condition of Forgiveneſs from him, yet God muſt forgive us firſt, before we forgive our Neighbour; for elſe it would be ſinful to forgive our Neighbour: For St. Paul tells us, Whatſoever is not of Faith, is Sin. By this foreign and uncatholick Conſtruction of the Text, it appears, Dr. Barnes was none of the greateſt Divines (m). The next Day, Gardner and Barnes had another Conference: At the Concluſion, the latter made his Submiſſion, ask'd the Biſhop's Pardon, and deſired to be under his Inſtructions. The Biſhop very frankly paſs'd over the former Affront, entertain'd Barnes as his Companion, and offer'd him a Penſion of forty Pounds a Year: Barnes accordingly went to the Biſhop's Houſe: But hearing the People talk to his Diſadvantage, and diſcourſing with ſome Men of Learning, he grew weary of this cloſe Correſpondence, and diſengaged with the Biſhop.

Barnes his Conference with the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

Rom. 14.

The King was diſpleas'd with Barnes his Management, and order'd him, Gerrard, and Jerom, to renounce their Opinions. They promis'd Satisfaction, and made their Recantation abovementioned. But this, it ſeems, was but a Force upon their Judgment, for they retracted their Recantation in the Pulpit: Upon this they were ſent to the Tower, and attainted of Hereſie in Parliament. On the thirtieth of July they were brought to Smithfield, with three others of a different Perſwaſion, Abel, Fetherſtone, and Powel. Theſe were attainted, for owning the Pope's Supremacy, and denying the King's. One of each was put upon a Hurdle; the Papiſts were hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd, and the other three burnt. This was an odd Spectacle, and look'd like fanciful Severity. Inſomuch, that a Frenchman who was there, being ſurpriz'd at the Conduct of the Government, told his Friend in Latin, They had a ſtrange way of managing in England; for thoſe, who were for the Pope are hang'd, and thoſe againſt him burnt.

Barnes, Gerrard, and Jerom ſuffer in Smithfield. Three others executed with them, for denying the King's Supremacy.

Ibid. p. 529.

When Barnes came to the Stake, he declar'd his Belief to the Company, and having been charg'd, it ſeems, with ſome Anabaptiſtical Opinions, and particularly, with our Saviour's not taking Fleſh of the Bleſſed Virgin, he diſclaim'd that Hereſie. As to Good Works, he affirm'd, they could be no Foundation for Merit, becauſe of the Blemiſhes and Imperfections with which they were mix'd, and therefore he reſted only on the Paſſion of our Saviour. However, to prevent Miſconſtruction, he declares, that thoſe who don't practiſe Virtue, and do Good Works, ſhall never come to Heaven; we muſt do Good Works, ſays he, becauſe God has commanded us, and to recommend our Religion, but not for any Plea of Deſert.

The Declaration of Barnes, Gerrard, and Jerom.

From hence he proceeds to vindicate his Preaching concerning the Catholick Church: That he had always treated that Article, and honour'd that Society, in as high Terms of Regard as the Scripture would give him leave. And here he ſpoke very reverendly of the Bleſſed Virgin. Being ask'd his Opinion, touching Invocation of Saints, he told them, he believ'd they were in Heaven, and that their Memories ought to be honour'd, as far as the Permiſſions of Revelation: But ſince the Scriptures don't command us to addreſs them, he could not warrant any ſuch Application. And whether the Saints pray'd for us, or not, was more than he knew, but if they did, he told the Sheriff, he hop'd to be praying for him, and all the Church Militant within half an Hour. After this, he ask'd the Sheriff, if he knew upon what Articles he was to ſuffer: Then put the ſame Queſtion to the Company; and whether any Perſon had been led into Error by his Preaching? But receiving no Anſwer; I underſtand, ſays he, I am condemn'd for Hereſie by an Act of Parliament; I pray God to forgive all thoſe who have been inſtrumental in this Matter, and particularly the Biſhop of Wincheſter, if any way concern'd. Then he went on to pray for the King's Proſperity, that his Reign might be long, that his Son,

Prince

(g) Fox. Vol. 2. p. 518. & deinceps.

(h) Bp. Burnet. p. 295.

(i) Fox, Ibid.

(k) Fox, Vol. 2. p. 524.

(l) Bp. Burnet. pt. 1. p. 296.

(m) Fox, Vol. 2. p. 525.

Prince Edward, might ſucceed him, and finiſh thoſe things begun by his Father. And whereas he had been reproach'd for preaching Sedition and Diſloyalty, he told them, they were all bound to obey their Prince, not only for Wrath, but for Conſcience ſake: And more than that, if the King ſhould command a Repugnancy to the Law of God, they ought not to reſiſt him, tho' it might be in their Power (n).

Ibid. p. 527.
(n) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 298.
Barnes his Requeſt to the King.

Then he requeſted the Sheriff, to acquaint the King, that he deſir'd the Grant of five things; Firſt, That his Highneſs would pleaſe to beſtow the Abbey Lands, or part of them at leaſt, for the Relief of his poor Subjects, who had very great need of ſuch a Maintenance. Secondly, That the King would pleaſe to take care, that Marriage might be more honourably treated, and thoſe Engagements better perform'd. That Men might not be permitted to part with their Wives upon ſlight Pretence, and then keep a ſcandalous Correſpondence with other Women: And that thoſe unmarried, might not be ſuffer'd in licentious Practice. Thirdly, That common Swearers might be puniſh'd. Fourthly, That the King would make farther Advances in the Reformation, and take his Directions from the Holy Scripture: And that his Highneſs would be particularly careful not to be impos'd on by unorthodox Preachers, and ill Counſel.

Jerom made a reſembling Declaration, repeated the Creed, profeſs'd his Belief of every thing contain'd in the Old and New Teſtament, pray'd for the King, and recommended Charity, and general Kindneſs, in a very Chriſtian pathetical manner; and gave the Company a Caution, not to rely upon their Performances, but on the Satisfaction of our Saviour's Paſſion.

Gerrard, after a Recital of the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith, and ſpeaking much to the ſame Purpoſe with the other, declar'd his Abhorrence of all Errors and Hereſies, in caſe, either by Negligence or Miſtake, he had maintain'd any ſuch: And if any Raſhneſs of Conduct, or Vehemence of Temper, had diſoblig'd, or miſled any Perſon, he intreated their Forgiveneſs. Notwithſtanding, he ſaid, he had us'd his beſt Endeavours to inform himſelf rightly, and do his Duty to God and the King. But if he had undertaken any thing too big for him, and miſcarried in the Execution, he deſir'd God would pardon his Preſumption.

He and the other two ſuffer with great Reſignation and Conſtancy.
(o)Fox.*p.*529.

Theſe three Perſons, having ſaluted each other with all the Tenderneſſes of Friendſhip, were faſtned to the Stake, and ſuffer'd with the Patience and Fortitude of the old Martyrs (o).

By the Act of Attainder, upon which they were burnt, it appears, the Parliament had, for once, taken the Cognizance of religious Belief from the Biſhops Courts, and made themſelves Judges of Hereſie.

This Year, upon a Complaint made, that ſome Servants of the Biſhop of Ely had publiſh'd a Tranſlation of Melanctons's Book againſt the Six Articles, an Order was ſent down from the Council to ſeize their Papers: And in caſe the Biſhop is ſuſpected to be concern'd in this Matter, the Meſſengers are order'd to ſearch his Study *.

* Council Book.
Conventiones, Acta publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 705.
Six new Biſhopricks erected.

About this time, the King founded an Hebrew Lecture at Cambridge, with a Salary of forty Pounds per Ann. to be paid out of the Rents of the Abbey of Weſtminſter. And ſoon after, this Monaſtery was turn'd into a Biſhop's See, &c. with a Deanry, twelve Prebends, with Officers for a Cathedral and Choir. There were five more afterwards erected, viz. Cheſter, Glouceſter, Peterborough, Oxford, and Briſtol; And tho' there is more than a Year's difference between ſome of the Foundations, yet for the Affinity of the Matter, I mention them together (p). The Charter of their Foundation ſets forth, That the King deſires nothing more, than that true Religion, and the right Worſhip of God Almighty, may be reſtor'd to its Primitive Vigour and Perfection, which had ſuffer'd very much by the Degeneracy of the Monaſtick Profeſſion: His Majeſty's Intention being to retrieve the Practice of Religion, to provide for good Inſtruction from the Pulpit, and the right Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, that Diſcipline and Regularity might be encourag'd, young People bred to Learning, and thoſe diſabled by Age and publick Service, furniſh'd with Neceſſaries, the Poor maintain'd, Ways and Bridges kept in Repair, and all other Offices ſerviceable to Religion and the Commonwealth, better perform'd, had erected the Abbey of Weſtminſter into an Epiſcopal See, and nominated Thomas Thirleby, Dean of the Chapel Royal, for the Biſhop (q). The Inſtruments for the Foundation of the five other Sees ran in the ſame Form.

The Charter for erecting Cheſter into a Biſhoprick, bears Date Aug. 4. 1541. That for Glouceſter, September 3. the ſame Year. Peterborough Charter is of the ſame Date with Glouceſter. The Biſhoprick of Briſtol was erected June 4. 1542. And that of Oxford Sept. 1. the ſame Year. Aug. 5.
(p) Godwin. de preſul. Ang.
Conventiones Acta publica, &c. Tom. 14. p. 717, to 754.
(q) Bp. Burnet. pt. 1. Records Book 3. p. 246.
(r) Bp. Burnet. pt. 1. p. 263.

And here it may not be improper to take notice of a Miſtake concerning the Year when the Biſhoprick of Cheſter was founded, which was not done, till two Years after the Time ſuppoſed by our learned Hiſtorian (r). This See was not erected, as himſelf afterwards relates, till the Year One Thouſand Five Hundred and Forty One. And therefore the Commiſſion granted to the Biſhop of Cheſter, for taking the Surrender of the Monaſtery of Hammond in Shropſhire: This Commiſſion, I ſay, was granted to the Biſhop of Lichfield, that Place being within his Dioceſe, and he commonly call'd, both in Writing and Diſcourſe, Biſhop of Cheſter. The reaſon of this way of ſpeaking was, becauſe Cheſter had formerly been a Biſhop's See, from whence 'twas tranſlated to Lichfield (s). About this Time the Cathedrals founded for Priories were turn'd into Deanries and Prebends. Theſe were Canterbury, Wincheſter, Ely, Norwich, Worceſter, Rocheſter, Durham, and Carliſle.

(s) Bp. Burnet, p. 263. compared with p. 300. and Records, Book 3. p. 149.

But theſe Endowments fell much ſhort of the King's former Scheme, and Cranmer's Project. This Archbiſhop, it ſeems, aim'd at a Proviſion for the ſetting up Greek, Hebrew, and Divinity Lectures: And that a great Number ſhould be bred to Learning and Devotion in the Cathedrals: and that thus the Biſhop might have a ſort of Seminary to furniſh his Dioceſe. But now the King had diſabled himſelf by the Exceſs of his Bounties, and parted with too much of the Abbey Lands for ſuch an Eſtabliſhment.

Bible printed in a large Vol.

This Year, the Bible printed in One Thouſand Five Hundred Thirty Seven, was reprinted into a larger Volume; 'twas tranſlated moſtly by Tindall, with the Aſſiſtance of Coverdale, afterward Biſhop of Exeter. Tindall ſuffering for his Religion in Flanders, before he had gone thro' the whole Work, the Apocrypha was tranſlated by John Rogers, with the Addition of ſome Marginal Notes. This was called Matthew's Bible, to make it paſs the better, becauſe Tindall lay under the Imputation of unſound Opinions. This Impreſſion for the large Volume was reviſ'd by Coverdale, who compar'd the Tranſlation with the Original, and corrected ſeveral Places. And now, to make it leſs offenſive, the Notes were omitted, and a Preface of Cranmer's added, which I ſuppoſe is the reaſon of calling it his Bible (t).

(t)Bale Cent.

Soon after the publiſhing this Impreſſion, Biſhop Bonner ſet up ſix Bibles in his Cathedral of St. Paul's. He faſtned an Admonition to the Pillars to which the Books were chain'd. "In this Paper, he puts them in Mind they ought to prepare themſelves with Devotion and Humility for their better Edification, not to make any Expoſitions upon the Text, not to read aloud, nor in time of Divine Service or Sermon; that they were not to appear in great Numbers for this purpoſe, nor fall into Diſputes and Claſhing with each other. That in caſe they continued their former Miſbehaviour, and refus'd to comply with theſe Directions, he ſhould be forc'd againſt his Will, to remove the Occaſion, and take the Bible out of the Church *."

* Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 25.

Theſe Bibles ſet up in St. Paul's by Bonner, were publiſh'd this Year by Tonſtal and Heath, Biſhops of Durham and Rocheſter; who by the King's Order review'd Coverdale's Tranſlation, and made what Correction they thought fit. Thus Dr. Durell reports the Matter, and refers to the firſt Page of the Bible for Proof †.

† Durell vindic. Eccleſ. Anglic. c. 27.

This Year the Cathedral of Canterbury was chang'd from Prior and Monks into Dean and Chapter.

To go back a little: In the Beginning of this Year, a Commiſſion was iſſued to the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York; the Biſhops of London, Durham, Wincheſter, St. David's, Carliſle, Hereford, and Rocheſter, to try one Alexander Seaton a Scotch Prieſt, complain'd of to the Privy-Council, for maintaining and preaching ſeveral heretical and damnable Opinions. By this Commiſſion the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was to be one of the Quorum. It is dated the 20th of April, Anno Dom. 1540, and counterſign'd Thomas Cromwell. Some of his Opinions, as they ſtand in Fox, are, That he deny'd the Freedom of the Will, pronouncing People under a perfect Impotency, to make any Advances towards Virtue. He affirm'd likewiſe, that good Works had nothing of Merit in them, nor had the leaſt Concurrence towards our Juſtification. But then to the Queſtion, whether good Works ſhall be rewarded or not, he anſwers affirmatively, and explains himſelf towards an orthodox Conſtruction: "Good Works, ſays he, ſhall be rewarded with eternal Glory, but not upon the ſcore of Merit, for they deſerve nothing: But becauſe God has ingaged to conſider them thus far, and he will not fail in his Promiſe. Beſides this, which was the main of his Charge, he was delated likewiſe for affirming, private Maſſes and Prayers for the Dead, did the Souls departed no Service. For theſe Aſſertions he was order'd to bear a Faggot and recant at St. Paul's-Croſs, which he did accordingly (u).

Cranmer, Regiſt. fol. 69.

(u) Fox, vol. 2. p. 535, 536.

This Year Sampſon, Biſhop of Chicheſter, was ſent to the Tower: He was committed, as our learned Church Hiſtorian reports, upon Suſpicion of Correſpondence with the Pope. But here ſome Evidence for this Relation ſeems to have been neceſſary; for Fabian, Hall, and Stow, acquaint us, this Biſhop was impriſoned for relieving ſome poor Priſoners who had been put up for denying the King's Supremacy. By this Account, this Prelate's Crime was no more, at the hardeſt, than an uncautious Charity (w).

Bp. Burnet, p. 361.

(w) Harmer, p. 61.

To proceed, the Act concerning the Six Articles, was cloſely proſecuted in ſeveral Places, and particularly in the Dioceſs of London, where not a few Perſons were ruggedly handled in the Biſhop's Courts (x). Upon the ſame Charge, three were burnt at Saliſbury, one of which was a Prieſt, who had quitted his Profeſſion, and turned Player: Notwithſtanding this Miſbehaviour, he had, it ſeems, a ſerious Senſe of Religion, choſe rather to run the laſt Hazard, than own Tranſubſtantiation, and therefore Fox ſets him down for a Martyr.

(x) Fox, vol. 2. p. 531.

This Year another Inſurrection broke out in Yorkſhire, but this was cruſh'd before it made any formidable Advances. Sir John Nevil, Lee a Gentleman, and one Tatterſal a Clothier, with about eleven others, were executed for heading this Commotion. Soon after, Margaret Counteſs of Saliſbury was executed in the Tower. She refuſed to lay her Head down on the Block, and ſuffer'd with great Courage. She was the laſt Plantagenet of the legitimate Line (y).

A. D. 1541. April.

(y) Ld. Herbert, p. 468.

The late Diſturbance in Yorkſhire, occaſioned the King's Progreſs thither: His Majeſty had two Things in his View. He hoped, by appearing in the Country, and examining the Temper of the People, to extinguiſh the Remains of the Rebellion.

The King's Progreſs into Yorkſhire.

He had likewiſe a Deſign to expoſe counterfeit Miracles, and diſcourage Pilgrimages. To which we may add an Expectation of meeting his Nephew the King of Scotland. This Prince promis'd his Uncle an Interview; but for ſome Reaſons already mentioned, declined the Performance, notwithſtanding the great Preparations made for his Reception. This Diſappointment was deeply reſented by the King of England, who projected a Revenge. King James underſtanding upon what ill Terms he ſtood with his Uncle, ſent an Ambaſſador with his Excuſe. He likewiſe deſir'd their former Correſpondence might be reviv'd, which Motion being refus'd by King Henry, his Nephew levy'd Men, and prepar'd for his Defence (z).

(z) Ld. Herbert, p. 649.

The King who thought himſelf very happy in his laſt Marriage, was much ſurpriz'd at the News of the Queen's Miſbehaviour; ſhe was charg'd with being falſe to his Highneſs's Bed, attainted for High-Treaſon, and beheaded. When ſhe was brought to the Scaffold, ſhe confeſs'd ſhe had liv'd diſorderly when ſingle, but utterly deny'd her being guilty of any Diſloyalty, or ſcandalous Commerce, after Marriage (a). The Lady Jane Rochford, Culpeper, Deeram, &c. were attainted by the ſame Act, and ſuffer'd with her.

Queen Catharine Howard beheaded.

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 470. Bp. Burnet, p. 311. & deinc.

This Parliament an Act paſs'd for the diſſevering the Biſhoprick of Cheſter, and Iſle of Man, from the Juriſdiction of Canterbury, and annexing them to the Province of York (b). There was likewiſe an Act againſt Conjuration, Witchcraft, and Enchantment; and here it is enacted, "That if any Perſon ſhould dig up, or pull down any Croſſes for correſponding with Spirits, to diſcover ſtollen Goods, or to hurt any one in their Perſon or Eſtate, or work them to any unlawful Paſſion of Love, that then the Principals and Abbettors ſhould be deem'd Felons, and be barr'd the Privilege both of Clergy and Sanctuary (c).

The Biſhoprick of Cheſter diſſevered from the Province of Canterbury.

(b) 33 H. 8. cap. 31.

(c) 33 H. 8. c. 8. Statutes at large.

This Year the Parliament was held at Dublin in Ireland: The firſt Statute raiſes King Henry's Title from Lord, to King of Ireland, and makes it High-Treaſon to refuſe that Style to the Crown of England. Notwithſtanding the enacting this Title, the Preamble acknowledges, that the King and his Progenitors had all manner of Regal Juriſdiction and Authority, and were in Right and Reality Kings of that Iſland *.

33 H. 8. c. 1. Iriſh Statutes.

There was likewiſe an Act paſs'd for recovering of Tithes †. 'Tis both for Form and Subſtance

† 33 H. 8. c. 12.

ſtance much the ſame with that paſs'd the laſt Year at a Parliament in England.

Farther, Another Bill paſs'd in the Iriſh Parliament, for erecting Vicaridges. The Preamble begins thus,

Whereas, as well the Church of Kilmaynam, is a Pariſh-Church, and has been appropriated and united to the late Hoſpital of St. John's Jeruſalem, within this Land of Ireland; and alſo divers other Pariſh-Churches within the ſaid Land, likewiſe appropriated to the ſaid late Hoſpital and to other Monaſteries, Religious Houſes, and Hoſpitals now diſſolv'd; having no Vicar endow'd within the ſame Pariſh-Churches, within which Pariſh-Churches Divine Service was done, maintain'd, and kept, and the Cure ſerv'd by the late Religious Perſons of the ſame Hoſpital, Monaſteries, and Religious Houſes. And for as much as the ſaid Hoſpital, Monaſtery, or Religious Houſes, be now lawfully diſſolv'd, and come into his Majeſty's Hands, whereby there is no Perſon certain appointed to doe, maintain, or keep the ſame Cure, Miniſter, Sacraments and Sacramentals, to the Pariſhioners. &c. In Remedy of this Inconvenience, it is enacted, That Sir Anthony Saintleger Knight, Deputy to the King's Highneſs, John Allen, his Grace's Chancellor, William Brabazon his Majeſtty's Vice-Treaſurer of this Land, Sir Jarald Aylmer Knight, his Grace's Chief-juſtice of the Plees before himſelf to be holden. Sir Thomas Lutterell Chief-juſtice of the Common-Place, with two more judges, the Maſter of the Rolls, the King's Serjeant, and the Attorney General, or any nine, eight, ſeven, or ſix of them; whereof the Lord Deputy, the Lord Chancellor, the Vice-Treaſurer, and Chief-juſtice, were to be four, are impower'd to erect and incorporate a Vicaridge in every Pariſh-Church belonging to the Religious Houſes lately diſſolv'd. And here the Portion of Tithes, Oblations, and other Profits, are left to the diſcretion of theſe Commiſſioners, with this Proviſo, that the whole Endowment muſt not exceed the Value of thirteen Pound, ſix Shillings and eight Pence Iriſh. The King was likewiſe to have the Preſentation to all the Vicaridges ‖. And here in this Statute, as it happen'd, there is not one Biſhop or Clergyman nominated with the reſt of the Commiſſioners for ſettling this Affair, in which Religion and the Church were not a little concern'd.

‖ 33 H. 8. c. 14. Iriſh Statutes.

A Review of the Tranſlation of the Bible propos'd in Convocation, but miſcarries.

To go from the Iriſh Parliament, to the Engliſh Convocation; where the Review of the Tranſlation of the Bible was propoſed. Here Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter, to check the Deſign, as 'tis ſuppos'd, read a Catalogue of Latin Words collected out of the New Teſtament; ſuggeſting, that for the Significancy of the Terms, and the Weight of the Matter, they ought either to remain untranſlated, or elſe rendred into Engliſh with the leaſt Alteration. The words are theſe. Eccleſia, Penitentia, Pontiſex, Ancilla, Contritus, Olocauſta, Juſtitia, Juſtificate, Idiota, Elementa, Baptizare, Martyr, Adorare, Dignus, Sandalium, Simplex, Tetrarcha, Sacramentum, Simulacrum, Gloria, Conflictationes, Ceremonia, Myſterium, Religio, Spiritus Sanctus, Spiritus, Merces, Confiteor tibi Pater, Panis Propoſitionis, Communio, Perſeverare, Dilectus, Sapientia, Pietas; Presbyter, Lites, Servus, Opera, Sacrificium, Benedictio, Humilis, Humilitas, Scientia, Gentilis Synagoga, Ejicere, Miſericordia, Complacui, Increpare, Diſtribueretur Orbis, Inculpatus, Senior, Apocalypſis, Satisfactio, Contentio, Conſcientia, Peccatum, Peccator, Idolum, Prudentia, Prudenter, Parabola, Magnifico, Oriens, Subditus, Didragma, Hoſpitalitas, Epiſcopus, Gratia, Charitas, Tyrannus, Concupiſcentia, Ciſera, Apoſtolus, Apoſtolatus, Egenus, Stater, Societas, Zizania, Myſterium, Chriſtus, Converſari, Profiteor, Impoſitio Manuum, Idololatria, Dominus, Sanctus, Confeſſio, Imitator, Paſcha, Innumerabilis, Inenarrabilis, Infidelis, Paganus, Commilito, Virtutes, Dominationes, Throni, Poteſtates, Hoſtia.

Some of theſe Terms, it may be, were ſomewhat ſhocking in a Tranſlation; and therefore Gardner would have cover'd them in the Original, and kept them conceal'd from vulgar Enquiry. In the carrying on this Review, the Books of the New Teſtament, were divided amongſt the Biſhops: For Inſtance, Archbiſhop Cranmer had St. Matthew, Longland Biſhop of Lincoln, St. Mark, Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter, St. Luke, Goodrick Biſhop of Ely, St. John, and ſo the reſt. By this Method the Biſhops were in a manner Maſters of the Undertaking, and might defer the Performance to what time they pleas'd.

To expedite the Review therefore, Archbiſhop Cranmer acquainted the Houſe, 'twas the King's Pleaſure the Tranſlation of the Old and New Teſtament ſhould be examin'd by both Univerſities. This Motion was much diſlik'd by the Houſe; all the Biſhops, excepting Ely, and St. David's, proteſting againſt it. They alledg'd the Univerſities were much ſunk from their former Conſiderableneſs. " That Matters were carried by a " Majority of young Men; that without Matu- " rity of Judgment, there was no relying upon the " Reſult: And in ſhort, that the Learning of " the Nation lay moſtly in the Convocation. Cran- " mer reply'd, he was reſolv'd to refer the Review to the Univerſities, and be govern'd by the Orders of the King his Maſter. However, by this Diſagreement, the Buſineſs dropp'd (d).

Feb. 17. A.D. $154\frac{1}{2}$

This Convocation, the Archbiſhop mov'd, That Candles, Silk-Habits, and other Ornaments, might be taken away from Images; that Miſſals, and other Liturgick Books, might be reform'd; and that the Names of the Popes, and that of Archbiſhop Becket, might be expung'd. That this Reformation was not made this Year, appears by the Archbiſhop's acquainting the Houſe next Year, that 'twas the King's Pleaſure, that all Maſs Books, Antiphoners, and Portuaſſes, ſhould be examin'd over again, and reform'd from all mention of the Biſhop of Rome's Name; from all Apocrypha's, feign'd Legends, Collects, Verſicles, and and Reſponſes: And that the Names and Memories of all Saints, which are neither mention'd in the Scriptures, nor by authentical Doctors, ſhould be deleted in the ſame Books and Calendars. And that the Service ſhould be compil'd out of the Scriptures, and other authentick Doctors. And here the Clergy are blam'd for their Negligence in not expunging and omitting ſuch things and Names, as by his Majeſty's Injunctions and Proclamations, were commanded to be ſtruck out, and cancell'd *.

Feb. 21. A.D. $154\frac{2}{3}$.

The King directs to the Reforming the Miſſals, &c.

Upon this 'twas order'd, that the Examination and Correction of the ſaid Service-Books, ſhould be committed to the Biſhops of Sarum and Ely, each of them taking three of the Lower-Houſe to their Aſſiſtance. But the Lower-Houſe wav'd their Privilege of furniſhing a Committee, and reſted the matter with the Biſhops.

To return to the former Year. A Bill deſign'd for an Act of Parliament, was ſent from

---

(d) Fuller, from the Records of the Convocation.

* Extracts from the Convocation Book, fol. 65. and 67.

March 10. A. D. 154$\frac{1}{2}$.

A Motion to impower Lay-Chancellours to execute Church Cenſures, rejected.

the Lord-Chancellor, to the Upper-Houſe of Convocation, and read there. The Purport of it was, that Biſhops Chancellors might be married, and impower'd to ſuſpend and excommunicate, and to publiſh all Church Cenſures, as Prieſts do: And that they, and their Regiſtraries, ſhould have their Offices for Term of Life, with ſufficient Fees and Salaries from the Ordinaries to ſupport their Families: And that an Officer deputed, having the King's Seal, or Patent, ſhould continue during Life.

This Bill being wholly diſlik'd by the Biſhops, they moved the Lord Chancellor that it might not be read in Parliament. And thus the Chancellor, 'tis likely, thinking the Requeſt not unreaſonable, the Matter was laid aſide.

Feb. 21. A. D. 154$\frac{1}{2}$.

'Twas ordered in the Upper-Houſe, that every Sunday and Holy-day throughout the Year, the Curate of the Pariſh, after the Te Deum and Magnificat, ſhould read to the People one Chapter of the New Teſtament in Engliſh, without Expoſition; and when the New Teſtament was read over, then to begin the Old *. This Convocation Buſineſs was manag'd at ſome diſtance of Time; but I thought it moſt proper to mention it together.

* Id. fol. 67.

1542. Decem. Scots defeated at Solway.

The Death of James the 5*th*, King of Scotland.

The King of England being provok'd with his Nephew's breaking the Interview at York, levied an Army, which under the Command of the Duke of Norfolk, entred Scotland; and after having ravag'd the Country, counter-march'd to Berwick. The Scotch, to make Reprizals, advanc'd with a Body of Fifteen Thouſand into England, by the Weſt-Marches; but theſe Troops were defeated at Solway by a handful of Men, under the Command of Muſgrave, Dacres, and Sir Thomas Wharton. This Diſgrace ſat heavy upon the King of Scots's Spirits, and threw him into a mortal Diſtemper. He died at Falkland, in the Two and Thirtieth Year of his Age. Some few Days before his Death, he received the News of his Queen's being deliver'd of a Daughter at Linlithgow. The Cardinal hearing the King was dead, is ſaid to practice with one Balfour a Prieſt, to forge a Will. By this pretended Inſtrument, the King had put the Adminiſtration into the Hands of the Cardinal, the Earls of Huntley, Argile, and Murray, during the young Queen's Minority. This Will was immediately publiſh'd in Edinborough. But the Body of the Nobility believing it a Counterfit, made Choice of the Earl of Arran for Regent (e).

Bonner's Injunctions.

To go back to England. This Year Bonner Biſhop of London, publiſh'd his Injunctions (f). I ſhall abſtract them for the Reader.

Firſt, His Clergy are enjoin'd to obſerve all Orders ſet forth by the King's Authority, and to provide themſelves either a written or printed Copy of every thing of this kind.

Item, That every Parſon, Vicar, or Curate, was every Day to read a Chapter in the Bible, with ſome approv'd Comment upon it; beginning with the Goſpel of St. Matthew, to the end of the New Teſtament; that they ſhould take Care to Charge their Memory with what they had read, and be prepar'd to give the Biſhop, or any of his Officers, an Account of their Proficiency.

Item, That they procure themſelves the Book call'd the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man, or the Biſhops Book, and that they ſtudy it, purſuant to Directions given them by their Ordinary.

Item, That being abſent from their Benefices, according to the Permiſſions of Law, they ſuffer'd no Prieſt to undertake the Cure, unleſs firſt preſented to the Biſhop, or his Officers, and allow'd by them.

Item, That every Parſon, &c. ſhall exhort his Pariſhioners in the Pulpit, once a Quarter, not to make clandeſtine Marriages, and that the Parents, or ſome relation or Friend, may be preſent at the Contract, and record the Form.

Item, That no Parſons, Vicars, &c. preſume to marry any Perſons married before, without being ſufficiently inform'd of the Deceaſe of the Wife or Husband of the Parties.

Item, That Parſons, Vicars, Chantry-Prieſts, &c. ſhall teach their Pariſhioners Children to read; taking but moderate Rates of thoſe that are able to pay.

Item, That they endeavour to take up Differences, promote good Correſpondence, and exhort the Pariſhioners to paſs over Injuries, and forgive each other.

Item, That thoſe who to diſguiſe their malitious Temper, diſregard the Authority of their Curates, and make their Confeſſion to foreign Prieſts, ſhould not be admitted upon the Teſtimonials of ſuch Confeſſors, nor allow'd to receive the Communion in their own Pariſh, 'till they had chang'd their Conduct, and ſubmitted to Confeſſion to their own Curates.

Item, All Parſons, &c. are injoin'd to warn Ale-houſe-Keepers and Vintners, within their Pariſhes, not to ſuffer any Gaming or Drinking in the time of Divine Service, under Pain of Excommunication, and being farther puniſh'd by the Laws of the Realm.

Item, That all Curates ſhall in the Pulpit, twice every Quarter, declare the Seven deadly Sins, and the Ten Commandments, that the People may be fully inſtructed in their Duty to God and their Neighbour.

Item, That all Prieſts appear in the Habit of their Function.

Item, That all Parſons, &c. Exhort their Pariſhioners, both in the Pulpit and elſewhere, to avoid Swearing and Curſing, Railing and Detraction, Adultery and Fornication, Gluttony and Drunkenneſs. And to preſent thoſe notoriouſly guilty of thoſe Crimes at every Viſitation.

Item, That no Prieſt ſhall give himſelf the liberty of any unlawful Diverſion, or go to Ale-houſes or Taverns, excepting in Caſes of Neceſſity.

Item, That no Parſons, Vicars, &c. ſhall ſuffer any Plays, Games, or Interludes, in their Churches or Chapels.

Item, That no Sermon compos'd by other Men, within this two or three Hundred Years, ſhould be made uſe of; but that the Preacher ſhould raiſe his Diſcourſe upon the Goſpel or Epiſtle of the Day: That in this Expoſition, they are not to ſtrike out into Singularities, or Notions of their own Invention; but to explain the Text agreeably to the Senſe of ſome Catholick Doctor allow'd in the Church of England. They were likewiſe injoin'd to explain the Ceremonies of the Church, not to run out into Intemperate Heat and Paſſion, and rail againſt thoſe of a Different Opinion; but to recommend Virtue, and declaim againſt Vice, without perſonal Reflections. They are farther injoin'd, to inſtruct the Audience in the Prayers us'd by the Church, either commonly, or upon particular Occaſions: To let the People into the Meaning of the Sacraments, to open the Force and Significancy of them, and with what Solemnity and Devotion they ought to be receiv'd. They were to avoid entertaining the People with fabulous Relations, or Hiſtories of ſuſpected Credit: And when the Preacher had enlarg'd (e) Spotſwood, p. 71.

---

(f) Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 39.

upon the Text, to what length he thought fit, he was then to abſtract the Subſtance, and repeat the moſt material Paſſages in few Words, and reinforce his Reaſoning with what ſupplemental Arguments he thought fit.

Item, That no Parſon, Vicar, &c. ſhall permit any Perſon under the Degree of a Biſhop, to preach in their Churches or Chapels, without a ſpecial Licence from the King or the Ordinary, which the Perſon was to produce before he had the Liberty of the Pulpit.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian, in his Remarks upon theſe Injunctions, tells us, “That in the “Time of Popery there had been but few Sermons, but in Lent: That the Pulpit Diſcourſes on the Holy Days were ſpent in Panegyricks on the Saints, and magnifying of Relicks. “'Tis true, in Lent, he obſerves, there was a “more ſolemn and ſerious way of Preaching; “but there was not that Pains taken to inform “the People of the Hatefulneſs of Vice, and Excellency of Holineſs, or the wonderful Love “of Chriſt, by which Men might be ingag'd to “acknowledge and obey him: And, in ſhort, “that the People had been little acquainted with “the Fundamentals of Chriſtianity (f).

(f) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 316.

Now this Gentleman, with due Regard to him, goes too deep in his Cenſure: There was a better Proviſion for the Inſtruction of the People than he ſeems aware of: Neither were the Biſhops ſo negligent in diſcharging their Function, as this Repreſentation ſuppoſes. That our Hiſtorian has overloaded the Inditement, appears from the Canons of Otho and Othobon, and the Conſtitutions of Archbiſhop Peckam. By theſe Proviſions, the Biſhops were oblig'd to reſide upon their Cathedrals, and inſtruct their Flock. The Pariſh Prieſts are likewiſe enjoin'd to preach frequently, to inſtruct the Audience in the Fundamentals of Religion, to explain all the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith, and the Ten Commandments: To diſcourſe upon the Seven Works of Mercy, the Seven deadly Sins, the Seven principal Virtues, and the Seven Sacraments. Upon theſe main Heads of Faith and Practice, they were bound to preach once a Quarter, and oftner, if occaſion ſhould require: And that they might not run off from the Point, and miſtake in their Compoſures, the Council, under Peckam, has ſtruck out the Lines, and form'd a ſhort Diſcourſe upon each Head, and laid down ſuch Directions, that they could not eaſily ramble or miſs their way (g). Now the lateſt of theſe Proviſions was made in the Reign of King Edward the Iſt. Farther, by the Conſtitutions of John de Thoresby, Archbiſhop of York, the Parochial Clergy are injoin'd to preach frequently to their Pariſhioners, and explain the Articles of Faith in the Engliſh Tongue. At the Cloſe of which Injunctions, there is a remarkable Exhortation directed to the People, “To here “Goddys Service every Soneday with Reverence “and Devocioun; and ſeye devowtly thy Pater “Noſter, &c. and here Goddys Lawe taught in “thy Modyr Tonge. For that is better, than “to here many Maſſys. If we come nearer the Reformation, we ſhall find Preaching more frequent than this Hiſtorian ſuppoſeth. For Dr. Litchfield, Rector of All Saints Thames Street, London, left three thouſand eighty three Sermons in his own Hand, and preach'd by him *. And can we imagine all theſe Diſcourſes could be deliver'd in Lent? Bradly, * the Suffragan Biſhop of Norwich, ſpent many Years in travelling that Dioceſe, for the Buſineſs of Preaching: Dr. Colet, Dean of St. Pauls, conſtantly preach'd or expounded the Scripture, and Dr. Colinwood, Dean of Lichfield, preach'd in that Cathedral every Sunday, for many Years together (h).

(g) See my Church Hiſt. pt. 1. p. 428, 438, 481.
A. D. 1360.
* Dr. Litchfield died in the Year 1447.
*Bradly died in the Year 1492.

(h) Harm. p. 56.

Our learned Hiſtorian takes notice, “That “none were to preach, without a particular Licenſe from the King or his Dioceſan, and that “the ſmall Number of good Preachers was the “occaſion of this Reſtraint (i). But this is plainly miſtaking the Matter: For the Parochial Clergy were under no Neceſſity of procuring ſuch Licenſes for their own Cures. The Injunction, as far as they are concern'd, was not to ſuffer any Stranger to preach in the Pariſh, without producing the Licenſes above-mentioned. The Hiſtorian goes on in his Remark, and tells us, “That “to ſupply the ſlender Qualifications of Pariſh “Prieſts, a Book of Homilies was printed, in “which the Goſpels and Epiſtles of all the Sundays and Holidays in the Year, were ſet down, “with a Homily to every one of theſe, which is “a plain and practical Paraphraſe on theſe Parcels of Scripture. And that theſe were to “be read to the People by ſuch as were not licens'd to preach.

(i) Bp. Burnet. p. 317.
Ibid.

That the Pariſh Prieſts are not barr'd preaching, hath been obſerv'd already. I grant, a Book of Homilies of the ſame Contents mention'd by this Hiſtorian, was publiſh'd, with a monopoly Patent to Richard Bankes: But then this was printed in 1540; two Years before the ſetting forth Bonner's Injunctions. Our Hiſtorian infers from the manner of theſe Homilies, that the Compiler of them was a Man both of good Judgment and Learning.

A. D. 1542.
Ibid.

This Gentleman, I perceive, took the Book for the Work of a ſingle Hand: But the Title Page tells us, 'twas drawn forth by diverſe learned Men, for the ſingular Edification and Commodity of all good Chriſtian Perſons, and in eſpecial of Prieſts and Curates.

As to the licens'd Preachers, their Buſineſs was to travel the Country, to diſcourſe upon controverſial Points, and ſettle the Belief of the Audience. Theſe Men, it ſeems, ſometimes indulg'd their Paſſions, and plaid their Invective too ſtrong againſt the oppoſite Party. Theſe Sallies occaſion'd frequent Complaints to the King. To guard therefore againſt Malice, or bad Memory in the Informers, the Preachers wrote their Diſcourſes, and read them. And from hence the reading of Sermons grew cuſtomary in England. And thus the Matter makes amends for the Coldneſs of the Delivery, and what is loſt in the Sound, is gain'd in the Senſe.

The Heats of ſome of the Preachers.

To proceed: The Injunctions take notice of the acting of Plays in Churches, than which, nothing could be a greater Profanation and Abuſe. Theſe Repreſentations were made by ſome of the Goſpellers. The Subject of the Entertainment, was the Immoralities and Diſorders of the Monks and Clergy: They took the Liberty likewiſe to ridicule their religious Worſhip. The Mob were pleas'd with theſe Theatrical Shews, in hopes, it may be, of being ſet free from Diſcipline and Reſtraint. The Clergy complain'd, as they had reaſon, againſt ſuch licentious Sport: This, they ſaid, was the way to let in Atheiſm, and make all Religion a Jeſt. For if People were allow'd to burleſque Devotion, and make themſelves merry with the Ceremonies of the Church, they would proceed to farther Extremities, and laugh the Nation out of their Creed at laſt. The judicious, and better ſort of Reformers, diſliked theſe Plays forbidden to be acted in Churches.

Ibid. p. 318.
Extracts of Conv. fol. 65.

Courſes, but the Politicians of that Party countenanc'd this Licence, and made great uſe of it: And upon what Motives they went is not difficult to diſcover.

An Act reſtraining the Uſe of the Bible to certain Degrees.

This Year, at a Parliament begun the 22d of January, an Act paſs'd, relating to the Deciſion of Controverſies in Religion. The Preamble ſets forth, “ That many ſeditious and ignorant People had abus'd the Liberty granted them for reading the Bible, that great Diverſity of Opinions, Animoſities, Tumults, and Schiſms, have been occaſion'd by perverting the Senſe of the Scripture. To retrieve the Miſchiefs ariſing from hence, it is enacted, That a certain Form of orthodox Doctrine, conſonant to the inſpired Writings, and the Doctrine of the Catholick and Apoſtolick Church, ſhall be ſet forth as a Standard of Belief, that Tindal's falſe Tranſlation of the Old and New Teſtament, and all other Books touching Religion in the Engliſh Tongue, contrary to the Articles of Faith, or that Summary of Doctrine publiſh'd by the King in One Thouſand Five Hundred and Forty, or any Time after during his Majeſty's Reign, ſhall be ſuppreſs'd, and forbidden to be read in any of the King's Dominions.

“ All Printers and Bookſellers are prohibited printing or vending any of the ſaid Books. The expoſing the Doctrine of the Religion eſtabliſh'd, in Plays or Ballads, is likewiſe prohibited under deep Forfeitures and Impriſonment. All Books likewiſe impugning the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, or maintaining the damnable Opinions of the Anabaptiſts, are prohibited under Forfeitures and Fines. The reading the Bible is likewiſe prohibited, to all under the Degrees of Gentlemen and Gentlewomen. After this follows a Proviſo of ſome Liberty. “ That it ſhall be lawful for all Perſons whatſoever, to read or teach all ſuch Doctrine, as is or ſhall be ſet forth by his Majeſty ſince the Year of our Lord 1540. And alſo the Pſalter, Primer, Pater Noſter, Ave, and Creed in Engliſh. And if any ſpiritual Perſon ſhall preach or maintain any thing contrary to the Doctrines above-mentioned, he ſhall recant for his firſt Offence, abjure for his ſecond, and bear a Faggot; and upon a farther Relapſe ſhall be adjudg'd an Heretick, ſuffer the Pains of Burning, and forfeit all his Goods and Chattels (k).

(k) 34 H. 8. Cap. 1. Statutes at large.

“ There are two favourable Proviſos upon this Act, Firſt, The Chancellour of England, Generals and Officers in the Field, the King's Juſtices, the Recorders of any City, or Town, the Speaker of the Parliament, and all other Officers, Juſtices and Miniſters, which have been accuſtomed to declare any good or virtuous Exhortations in any Aſſemblies, may uſe any part of the Bible as they have done formerly, with this Limitation, that they did not raiſe any Diſcourſe contrary to the Doctrine ſet forth, or to be ſet forth, by his Highneſs.

To underſtand the Meaning of this Proviſo we are to obſerve, that it was uſual for the Lord Chancellours, Judges, Recorders, &c. to take a Text for their Speeches upon publick Occaſions.

By another Proviſo it is enacted, That the King might alter or ſet aſide the Act or any part of it.

“ Our learned Church Hiſtorian takes notice of another Act paſs'd this Parliament, which made way for the Diſſolution of Colleges, Hoſpitals, and other Foundations of that Nature. The Courtiers, as he continues, had been practiſing with the Preſidents and Governours of ſome of theſe Houſes, to reſign them to the King. The Reſignations were penn'd in the ſame Style with the Surrenders of Monaſteries. Eight of theſe Inſtruments were procur'd and inroll'd. But the Progreſs of this Deſign was check'd by the local Statutes of moſt of theſe Foundations. For by theſe Proviſions no Preſident, or any other Fellows, could make any ſuch Deed of Alienation without the Conſent of the whole Society: But ſuch an unanimous Concurrence was not eaſily gain'd. All ſuch Statutes were now null'd, and none for the future to be ſworn to them *. Thus this Gentleman has diſcover'd the Court-Compaſs, and what ſort of Motives had the aſcendant upon the Practice of many of the great Men of this Reign.

* Bp. Burnet. pt. 1. p. 314.

A. D. 1543.

The next Year, a Book called, A neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any chriſtned Man, was publiſh'd by the King's Order. This Book was deſign'd for a Rule of religious Belief, of which we have a general Intimation in the Act juſt mentioned. By Bonner's late Injunctions, 'tis plain this neceſſary Erudition was unſet forth ſome part of the Year 1542. For by one of the Articles, Bonner injoins the Curates to provide the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man. Now the Erudition being a Review and Alteration of the Inſtitution, in ſeveral Points, we may conclude, that if the Erudition had been publiſh'd, the Clergy would never have been oblig'd to have procur'd the Inſtitution for the Inſtruction of their Pariſh. From hence we may reaſonably infer, the neceſſary Erudition was not drawn up by a Committee of the Clergy in the Year 1540, as our learned Hiſtorian ſuppoſes (l). For how can we imagine ſo finiſh'd and inſtructive a Performance, a Book deſign'd for publick Uſe, and ſettling Controverſies, ſhould lie by thus long? I grant that Branch relating to the Doctrine of the Sacraments, was examin'd in the Year mention'd by this learned Hiſtorian: This may be prov'd from Thirleby Elect of Weſtminſter's having a Share in this Buſineſs: For the Patent for founding this See is dated on the ſeventeenth of September, in the thirty ſecond of Henry the VIIIth, which was the Year of our Lord 1540 (m). His Conſecration follow'd two Days after. From hence we may conclude, the Queſtions touching the Sacrament were debated ſome little time before Thirleby's Conſecration (n). To finiſh the Account of this Matter. The Queries relating to the Seven Sacraments were given out to the two Archbiſhops, the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, and Carliſle, of Durham, Hereford, and St. David's. The other Divines were Thirleby, Dr. Robertſon, Day, Redmayn, Cox, Leighton, Symmons, Treſham, Coren, Edgworth, Oglethorp, Crayford, Willſon and Robins. When their Anſwers were return'd, two were appointed to compare them, and draw an Extract of the Particulars, as to their Agreement or Diſagreement. One of theſe thus appointed wrote in Latin, and the other in Engliſh. The original Anſwers of the two Archbiſhops, the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, and Carliſle, and the Drs. Day, Robertſon, Redmayn, Cox, Symmons, Leighton, Treſham, Coren, Edgworth, and Oglethorp, are upon Record; but the Papers given in by the Biſhops of Durham, Hereford, and St. David's, and the Elect of Weſtminſter, by the Drs. Crayford, Willſon, and Robins, tho' mentioned in the Extracts, are not to be met with (o).

(l) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 286.

(m) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. Records Book 3. N. 23.

Queſtions concerning the Sacraments, when debated.

(n) Godwin. de preſul. Angl.

(o) See Records. N. 49. Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 285.

Having

An Account of the neceſſary Erudition.

Having premiſed this, I ſhall proceed to a farther Account of the neceſſary Erudition. To begin with the King's Preface. Here his Majeſty ſets forth, “ That in order to the bringing off his Subjects from ſuperſtitious Practices, he had publiſh'd the Scriptures in the Engliſh Tongue: That tho' this Expedient was not without its Effect, yet ſome People, out of a Spirit of Pride and Contention, had wreſted the Holy Text, and given Riſe to Diſputes, and Diverſity of Opinions: That to recover the People to Orthodoxy and Union, he had ſet forth this Summary of Religion, with the Advice of his Clergy: That it had been view'd and approv'd by both Houſes of Parliament. After this, the King proceeds to the Subject of the neceſſary Erudition, mentions the Articles, and ſhews the Reaſon of the Order in which they ſtand. He takes notice, that the Church conſiſts of two ſorts of Men, ſome to inſtruct, and the reſt to be inſtructed: That it is neceſſary for the firſt Diviſion to read and ſtudy the Scripture: But as to the Laity, the reading the Old and New Teſtament is not ſo neceſſary for all of that Claſſe: That Liberty or Reſtraint in this Matter, is to be referr'd to the Laws and Government: And that the Legiſlature now lately had barr'd ſeveral Ranks reading the Bible.

From this Paſſage, 'tis evident, the Book was not publiſh'd till after the Act made in the 34th of this Reign.

The Article of Faith.

The neceſſary Erudition begins with a Declaration of Faith. “ This Theological Vertue, they tell us, is to be underſtood in two Senſes. Firſt, For a Belief of the Being of God, and the Truth of his Revelations. In this Senſe, Faith is the Gift of God. Faith in the ſecond Acception is conſider'd in Conjunction with Hope and Charity. This Faith is profeſs'd by every Chriſtian at his Baptiſm. And here to prevent an Over-reliance on bare Belief, it is added, that all God's Promiſes are ſuſpended upon Conditions, and ſuppoſe our Endeavours to Obedience. That where we are ſaid to be juſtified by Faith, we are to take Faith in this latter Senſe. And becauſe a certain Aſſurance of being of the Number of the Predeſtinate, is maintained by ſome Perſons, therefore to keep People from avoiding the Extremes of Preſumption and Deſpair, or reſting too much upon their own Thoughts and Perſuaſion, the Book tells us this Queſtion is undetermin'd in Scripture: That tho' we have no Reaſon to doubt God's Promiſe, yet ſince the Will is mutable, and the Frailty of human Nature apt to be ſurpriz'd, we ought not to live under too ſtrong a Confidence, but to manage with Caution and Vigilance, conſidering the Force of the Enemies we have to deal with, always remembring the Words of the Apoſtle, That a Man cannot be crown'd, unleſs he ſtrives lawfully.

The neceſſary Erudition ſupplemental to the Inſtitution, in ſeveral Articles.

Of Faith.

Before I go farther, I ſhall obſerve to the Reader, that the neceſſary Erudition is ſupplemental to the Inſtitution in ſome Articles. For notwithſtanding the Inſtitution mentions Faith, Free-Will, and Good-Works, in ſome ſhort incidental Paſſages, yet there are no diſtinct Diſcourſes upon any of theſe three Heads.

Of Free-Will.

Upon the Article of Free-Will, the neceſſary Erudition maintains this Faculty is not extinguiſh'd by Adam's Fall. This Aſſertion is ſupported by theſe plain Texts of Scripture. Be not overcome of Evil. Neglect not the Gift which is in thee. Love not the World, &c. If thou wilt enter into Life, keep the Commandments (p). Now theſe Exhortations, if a Man had no Power to make uſe of them, would be to no purpoſe. But tho' we are not under an abſolute Impotency, yet this Faculty is diſabl'd by the Sin of our firſt Parents. The Force of the Mind in Paradiſe was much greater than afterwards. When Adam and Eve were in the State of Innocency, they were poſſeſs'd of an Independence of Thought: The Superiority of their Reaſon was ſuch, that they could check the animal Impreſſions without Trouble, call off their Thoughts from unſerviceable Objects, and govern their Inclinations at Pleaſure. Under this Condition, the Practice of Virtue was natural and eaſie, and it was no more troubleſome to obey, than to miſcarry. But ſince the Fall of Adam, it is impoſſible to pleaſe God without ſupernatural Aſſiſtance. The Propenſions to Duty are grown faint, and the Bent of the Will lies moſtly towards ſenſual Advantage. Thus, without the Succours of Grace, it is impoſſible either to begin well, or to make any Progreſs in a Courſe of Obedience. This Inability of mere Nature, and the Neceſſity of a divine Interpoſition, is prov'd from Scripture. Without me ye can do nothing (q). No Man can come to me, except the Father which ſent me, draw him. We are not ſufficient of our ſelves to think any thing as of our ſelves. However, notwithſtanding this Diſadvantage of our Condition, we ought to make the moſt of our remaining Powers, we ought to co-operate with the Aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, and exert our ſelves; we are likewiſe not to throw our Miſbehaviour upon any thing but our own Neglect; for God is not wanting in ſufficient Proviſion, nor any wiſe the Author of Sin. And here the Clergy are particularly admoniſhed to guard in their publick Diſcourſes: To avoid running into Extremes on either ſide; and neither to deny the Freedom of the Will on one Hand, nor the Neceſſity of Grace on the other.

(p) Rom. 12. 1 Tim. 4. 1 Ep. John 2. Mat. 19.

(q) John 15. John 6. 2 Cor. 3.

Of good Works.

Upon the Article of good Works, the Book begins with the Explication of the Terms: That under this Notion, not only outward Practice, but inward Diſpoſition, Regularity of Deſire, and religious Temper is comprehended: And that indeed the State and Furniture of the Mind is chiefly to be regarded in this Caſe. And here the ſuperſtitious Obſervances of the Monks, and reſting too much upon Will-Worſhip, uncommanded Service, and outward Performance, are mentioned with Cenſure. To this is added, that living tolerably by the Directions of the Law of Nature, tho' it may have ſome Claim to temporal Rewards, yet is not available to eternal Happineſs, without Faith in Chriſt. As to thoſe good Works which commence upon preventing Grace, and are done in Faith and Charity, tho' they are not without Mixture and Alloy, and fall ſhort of Perfection; yet their Defects are ſupply'd by the Merits of Chriſt's Paſſion, and God of his Goodneſs is pleas'd to accept them for a full Obedience; and under this Notion they are in ſome meaſure meritorious and inſtrumental in making us happy.

Works of Penance are likewiſe ſaid to be ſomewhat ſerviceable towards Juſtification. For the purpoſe: When a Sinner, upon recollecting the Law of God, is ſtruck with Remorſe of Conſcience, and aſham'd of his Miſbehaviour; when he laments his Ingratitude, applies to Prayer, and endeavours to recover himſelf, and procure his Pardon; when he goes thro' a Courſe of Diſcipline and Mortification, he cannot but be ſaid to make ſome Advances towards Juſtification. If therefore he goes on in this godly Method, continues his Devotion, and begs farther Aſſiſtances of Grace, he may be aſſur'd of the Remiſſion of his Sins, obtain the Bleſſing of Juſtification, be enabled for farther Improvement in the Service of God, and come up to an acceptable Pitch of Virtue, which, before he is juſtified, is plainly impracticable. And tho' ſuch Works of Penance are requir'd as preparatory Conditions of Forgiveneſs, yet Juſtification and Pardon of Sins is the free Gift of God, and beſtowed on us without any valuable Compenſation.

Farther, the maintaining the Neceſſity and Value of good Works, is no leſſening of the Grace of God. For all ſuch commendable Actions are the Effects of Divine Grace. Our Merits, as St. Auſtin ſpeaks, are but the Gifts of God; therefore we have no Reaſon to boaſt of our Performances, or value our ſelves upon the Regularity of our Conduct. However, we are bound to improve upon the Divine Bounty, and make the moſt of our Talent. For to this End, as the Apoſtle aſſures us, our Saviour came into the World; That denying Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſt, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this World. Who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purifie unto himſelf a peculiar People zealous of good Works (r). And elſewhere the ſame Apoſtle declares, That every one muſt receive the Things done in his Body, according to that he has done, whether it be good or bad.

The Article of Purgatory is much the ſame with the Inſtitution: The Erudition ſays, we are not to make uſe of the Name of Purgatory, nor diſpute or reaſon about it, which is much the ſame Language with the Inſtitution.

The Difference between the Erudition and the Inſtitution.

The Erudition differs in ſome places from the Inſtitution. For the purpoſe: Chriſt's Deſcent into Hell, which is the fifth Article in the Inſtitution, is the fourth in the Erudition. And here tho' Hell is taken in the worſe Senſe, yet the Deſign of our Saviour's coming thither, is more briefly and generally handled. In the Article of our Saviour's ſitting at the Right-hand of God, both Books mention his Interceſſion; but the Erudition adds an explanatory Caution concerning the Mediation of the Saints: That notwithſtanding the Interceſſion of the Church militant and triumphant is ſerviceable for the reſt of their Brethren, yet all this Benefit is only in virtue of the Mediation of Chriſt our Head.

In the Article of the Catholick Church, the Erudition endeavours to refine upon the Inſtitution, makes Kings Heads of the particular Churches in their Dominions, and gives them the Superintendency in reference to the appointing of Biſhops. In the Communion of Saints, touching the Communication of good Works from one Member, to the Benefit of the whole Body, the Inſtitution dilates more againſt the Pope's Privilege of diſpenſing the Treaſure of the Church, than the Erudition. In the laſt Article, the Inſtitution declares good Men are made happy, not upon the ſcore of their own Performances, but thro' the Mercy of God, and the Paſſion of Chriſt, of which in this place, the Erudition mentions nothing.

To go on to the Doctrine of the Sacraments: Firſt, In the Article of Penance, the Erudition adds, upon the Inſtitution touching the Uſefulneſs of Confeſſion to a Prieſt: That ſuch Application is ſerviceable for awakening the Penitent's Conſcience; to make him ſenſible of the Degree and Danger of his Guilt; what a glorious Condition he is fallen from, by breaking his baptiſmal Engagements; and how heartily he ought to abhor himſelf for failing in his Duty to ſo great a Benefactor. The Erudition lays the ſame Streſs upon ſacerdotal Abſolution with the Inſtitution, and maintains, that as there is no Admiſſion into the Church but by the Sacrament of Baptiſm, ſo after the Commiſſion of Sin, Penance is the only way for Recovery. Where Prieſtly Abſolution cannot be had, ſays the Erudition, the Penitent may be ſafe without it. This is not deny'd, but rather ſuppoſed by the Inſtitution.

Under the Sacrament of the Altar, the Erudition ſpeaks plainly for Tranſubſtantiation, which the Inſtitution doth not. But now we are to obſerve, the Six Articles were enacted; and farther, that Cranmer and his Party, who oppos'd the paſſing the Six Articles, were over-ruled in the compoſing this neceſſary Erudition. The Erudition inſiſts on the Sufficiency of receiving under one Kind, of which there is not a Word in the Inſtitution. The Erudition likewiſe takes notice, that Prieſts uſed to receive only under one Kind, except when they conſecrate.

Under the Head of Orders, the Erudition makes Orders one of the Seven Sacraments, and defines it a Gift of Grace for Adminiſtration in the Church; that it is convey'd by Conſecration and Impoſition of the Biſhop's Hands; that in the Beginning of Chriſtianity, this Character was given by the Apoſtles. The Proof is drawn from the Epiſtles of St. Paul to Timothy and Titus. The Words are theſe: Stir up the Gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my Hands: Neglect not the Gift that is in thee, which was given thee by Prophecy, with the laying on of the Hands of the Presbytery, or the Authority of Prieſthood, as this Book tranſlates it (s). For this Cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhould'ſt ordain Elders in every City, as I have appointed thee. Lay Hands ſuddenly on no Man.

From the Original and Conveyance of Eccleſiaſtical Power, the Erudition proceeds to the ſettling other Circumſtances. And here it is declar'd, that the Nomination, Election, or Appointment of Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters, is not preſcrib'd and determin'd by the Word of God. That this Matter is left wholly to the Conſtitution and Laws of particular Countries, made with the Conſent of the Chief Magiſtrate. That the Functions of the Clergy conſiſt in preaching and adminiſtring the Sacraments, in the Power of binding and looſing; that is, in giving Abſolution, and admitting the Penitent to Church Communion, and excommunicating thoſe who refuſe to be reclaimed. It is likewiſe part of the Buſineſs of the Clergy to pray for the univerſal Church, and particularly for thoſe committed to their Charge; to which is added, that notwithſtanding the Office of Prieſts and Biſhops takes in this Extent of Direction and Government, yet it is not defenſible for any of them to execute any Part of this Function, excepting in ſuch Manner, and under ſuch Limitations as the Ordinances and Laws of every Chriſtian Realm ſhall permit them ſo to do.

From hence the Erudition proceeds to deſcribe the Qualifications of Prieſts and Biſhops, from the Epiſtles of Timothy and Titus (t). The Hereſie of the Donatiſts who made the Sacraments of no force, when adminiſter'd by immoral Perſons, is likewiſe cenſur'd: And here the Virtue of theſe Conveyances of Grace is ſaid to depend upon the Divine Inſtitution, and not on the Qualifications of the Biſhop or Prieſt. After this, there is Mention made of the Appointment of Deacons, to which is ſubjoin'd, that the Scri- pture ſpeaks expreſly of no more than the two Orders of Prieſts and Deacons; but that other inferior Degrees, ſuch as Sub-deacons, Exorciſts, &c. were added to the former by the primitive Church. That St. Auſtin takes notice of all the lower Orders, and with what Ceremonies and Solemnity they were conferr'd in his Time. Under thoſe call'd Prieſts or Presbyters in the New Teſtament, this Book ſuppoſes the Epiſcopal Character was meant: For that theſe two Orders were diſtinct and ſubordinate, is plain from this Erudition, which tells us in expreſs Terms, that the Office and Miniſtration of Biſhops is inſtituted and deſcrib'd in the New Teſtament. The Diſproof of the Pope's Supremacy, is much the ſame with that in the Inſtitution.

(r) Tit. 2. 2 Cor. 5.

(s) 2 Tim. 1. 1 Tim. 4. Tit. 1. 1 Tim. 5.

(t) 1 Tim. 3. Tit. 1.

In the Doctrine of Confirmation, the Books are both agreed. And under extreme Unction, the Erudition adds, that we ſhould not rely too much upon this Remedy.

Upon the Sacrament of Matrimony, the Inſtitution and Erudition diſcourſe after the ſame manner, only concerning the Indiſſolubleneſs of lawful Marriages, they differ ſomething in the Expreſſion. The Inſtitution affirms, that where there was any original Impediment to begin this Relation by the Laws of God and holy Church, there they may proceed to a Divorce. But the Erudition ſpeaking to this Point, inſtead of the Laws of holy Church, changes the Expreſſion to the Laws of every Realm.

Upon the Second Commandment, both Books declare againſt expenſive ornamenting of Images, and that the Money would be better beſtowed upon relieving the Poor.

Under the Fifth Commandment, the Inſtitution mentions the Spiritual Parents before the Civil: But the Erudition ranges the Civil firſt, that is, next after the Natural.

Paſſive Obedience without Limitation or Exception of Caſes, is injoined by the Erudition no leſs than by the Inſtitution. In touching the Authority of the Hierarchy, the Erudition treads tenderly, and leaves out the Word Govern, mentioned in the Inſtitution. However, the ſacerdotal Juriſdiction, as we have ſeen, is prov'd from the ſame Texts of Scripture in both.

The Erudition, in the preliminary Notes on the Lord's-Prayer, ſets forth, that it is very requiſite unlearned People ſhould pray in their Mother Tongue; that by putting up their Petitions in a Language they beſt underſtand, their Devotion would be aſſiſted, and they would be more fervent and intent upon the Matter they were about. This Paſſage is wanting in the Inſtitution. As to the Sacraments, the Erudition makes Baptiſm, the Holy Euchariſt, and Penance, neceſſary, no leſs than the Inſtitution; but does not inſiſt ſo much on their Preference to the other four. To return, the Expoſition on the Lord's Prayer, in both Books, is unexceptionable and inſtructive, but having nothing controverſial or uncommon, I ſhall paſs it over.

A Compariſon between the two Books.

The Expoſition of the Apoſtles Creed abounds with excellent Matter. There is a large Paraphraſe on every Article, with practical Inferences at the Cloſe. The Style of both Books is ſtrong, affecting, and ſuited to a common Capacity. To add a Word or two by way of Compariſon: The Erudition manages with leſs Latitude, bends to the Six Articles, and in ſome Points of Controverſy, drives farther into the Doctrines of the Roman Communion. This Book doth not maintain the Hierarchal Authority ſo unexceptionably, but gives in to an Overbalance for the Regale. In a Word, where the Erudition differs from the Inſtitution, it ſeems moſtly to loſe Ground, to go off from the primitive Plan, and Reform backwards. Beſides, this laſt Book does not ſtand upon ſo ſtrong an Authority as the former. The Inſtitution, as we have ſeen, was the Act of the whole Clergy, and ſubſcribed by both Houſes of Convocation. But the neceſſary Erudition, as our learned Hiſtorian obſerves, was drawn up only by a Committee of the King's Nomination (u). 'Tis true, the Preface tells us, 'twas approved by the Lords Spiritual in Parliament; but this may poſſibly amount to no more than a Majority in the Upper Houſe.

The Ceremonies of the Church examined.

About this time, as may be reaſonably collected, the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church were brought under a Review, and a Rationale drawn up to explain the Meaning, and juſtifie the Uſage. “The Alteration in the Miſſals and Breviaries, were ſo inconſiderable, ſays our Church Hiſtorian, that there was no Occaſion for a new Impreſſion. For by the Razures of Becket's Office, and ſome other Saints, ſtruck out by the King's Injunctions: By theſe, and ſome other Deletions, the old Liturgick Books were allow'd to ſerve. 'Tis poſſible, 'twas thought the Change of the Maſs-Books and others of that kind, might have been too great a Charge upon the Pariſhes: And it may be the People might have fancied their Religion chang'd, and a new Worſhip put upon them, if the Service-Books had been taken away. But whatever was the Reaſon, the People had their old Rituals continued, and the Churches were furniſhed with no new Books for Divine Service during this Reign (w).

To this Senſe our learned Hiſtorian delivers himſelf. But notwithſtanding this Remark, there was a new Impreſſion of the Liturgy, ſecundùm uſum Sarum, which was an Office for Divine Service beſt known, and farther uſed than any of the reſt. It is printed with Corrections and Deletions, with the King's Patent of Privilege: The Title-Page ſtands thus.

Portiforium ſecundum uſum Sarum, noviter impreſſum, & à plurimis purgatum mendis. In quo nomen Romano Pontifici falſò aſcriptum omittitur, unà cum aliis quæ Chriſtianiſſimo noſtri Regis Statuto repugnant. Excuſſum Londini per Edvardum Whytchurch, 1541. Cum Privilegio ad imprimendum ſolum.

And having mention'd the Rationale, I ſhall give the Reader a Tranſcript of it from the Cotton Library (x). The Title is this:

Ceremonies to be us'd in the Church of England, together with an Explanation of the Meaning and Significancy of them.

An Original.

“Tho' it be very Truth, that there is a great Difference betwixt the Commandments and Works expreſs'd by Scripture, neceſſary for a Chriſtian Man's Life and Salvation, and Rites and Ceremonies devis'd by Men; becauſe the Works contain'd in Scripture, are the expreſs Commandments of God, which may not be infring'd, taken away, or exchang'd by any Man: And the other ſaid Rites and Ceremonies are appointed and ordain'd by Man, which, upon Cauſes reaſonable, may from time to time, by Governours and Men of Authority, be alter'd and chang'd: yet ſuch Ordinances, Rites, and Ceremonies, devis'd by ſuch as are in Authority, for a decent Order, Quietneſs, and Tranquillity, ought (all Abuſes and Superſtition clearly taken away) to be with

---

(u) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 286.

(w) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 294.

(x) Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. fol. 259.

“with all reverent Obedience obſerv'd by the People, not as Works, or Workers for their Salvation, but as godly Policies and Ordinances, made and deviſ'd by Chriſtian Governours, to the Intent (as St. Paul ſaith, Cor. 1. 14.) that Things ſhould be done in a Chriſtian Congregation, with an honeſt Reverence and decent Order. And therefore, to the End that this Church of England may be comely and quietly order'd, and well inſtructed, it is thought meet and convenient, that the Orders, Ceremonies, and Rites following, ſhould be in the ſame Church, honeſtly, obediently, and reverently kept and obſerv'd.

The Church.

“And firſt of all: To have a common Houſe for Chriſtian People, which we call the Church, is very neceſſary, that there they may come together where the Word of God is preached, the Sacraments are miniſtred, and Prayers, as well of the People as the Miniſter's, to Almighty God, are made, both for them that be alive, and alſo for them that be departed in the Faith of Chriſt: Wherefore 'tis convenient, that Place, and the Altars there, be Sanctify'd, Waſh'd, and Prepar'd with Prayers.

“Sanctify'd: That is to ſay, ſeparated from all prophane Uſes, and dedicated to the End before rehears'd. And therefore, no Chriſtian Perſon ſhould abuſe the ſame, either by Eating, Drinking, Buying, Selling, Playing, Dancing, Dicing, or with any other prophane or worldly Matter. For all Soberneſs, Quietneſs, and Godlineſs ought there to be uſed.

“Waſh'd: To admoniſh all Chriſtian People to waſh inwardly their own Hearts and Conſciences, which be the living Temples of God, before they ſhall approach to the Uſe of any holy Myſtery there.

“Prepar'd with Prayers, that the Sacraments there miniſter'd, may be acceptable to Almighty God; and that it may pleaſe him to hear the humble and devout Prayers of his People there, and that all Things there done and heard by them, may be to the Commodity and Wealth of their Souls.

The Church-Yard.

“And albeit that a glorious Sepulture is not profitable to the wicked Man, and an evil Sepulture hurts not the good Man; yet to put us in Remembrance of Death, that we may leave Sin and Wickedneſs, and to teſtifie our Faith and Hope of the Reſurrection of our Bodies; therefore it is convenient that the Church-Yard for a Place of common Burial for Chriſtian People, ſhould be ſanctify'd and hallow'd: And if it chances the ſame to be polluted, we think it convenient to be reconciled again. And the Sepultures of Chriſtian Men, with good and godly Prayers now uſed, and other Ceremonies belonging to the ſame, are very laudable and convenient.

The Rites and Ceremonies obſerv'd about the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

“Firſt, The Catechiſm which goes before the Baptiſm, and it is as much as to ſay, a Teaching, or an Inſtruction. For in the primitive Church, when that many came to the Chriſtian Faith, at the Years of Age and Diſcretion, it was uſed, that ſuch, before they were admitted to Baptiſm, ſhould be taught the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith, and the Sum of the Chriſtian Religion, and ſhould promptly and readily render the ſame to their Paſtor or Curate; which were yet to be uſed, if that any ſuch would deſire to receive Baptiſm. But in Baptiſm of Infants, which for lack of Age cannot be inſtructed, the Prieſt ſhortly expreſſes there ſuch Inſtructions, and then charges the Godfathers and Godmothers farther, to teach the Child or Children, when they come to lawful Age; and then beginneth to make a Croſs upon the Forehead of the Child that is offer'd to be baptized, in token that he is come to be profeſs'd, and totally to be dedicated to Chriſt crucified, whom he will never be aſhamed before Men openly to confeſs and knowledge.

“Then he makes another Croſs upon the Breaſt; from whence cometh the Belief ſignifying, that it is not enough to confeſs Chriſt with Mouth openly, unleſs he does ſtedfaſtly believe in Heart inwardly.

“And therefore the Miniſter prays Almighty God to take away the Blindneſs of his Heart, and to make him apt to receive Grace given him in Baptiſm. And then he puts hallow'd Salt into his Mouth, to ſignify the ſpiritual Salt, which is the Word of God wherewith he ſhould be ſeaſon'd; that thereby the filthy Savour of Sin ſhould be taken away, preſerving him from Corruption, and making him a meet apt Veſſel to continue in the Moiſture of wholſom and godly Wiſdom: And therefore, the Miniſter prays that he may be repleniſh'd with heavenly Food, and that he receiving this Grace of Baptiſm, may obtain everlaſting Reward.

“Then the Miniſter makes the Sign of the Croſs in the Child's Forehead, adjuring the Devil to depart, and no more to approach him, but to knowledge his Sentence of Damnation, and to give Glory unto God, and to Jeſus Chriſt, which triumph'd upon the Croſs over him in his own Perſon, praying that this Child now purged from the wicked Spirit, may be the ſanctified Temple of the Holy Ghoſt.

“After this is read the Goſpel taken out of St. Mat. 19. beginning, Oblati ſunt Jeſu pueri. Wherein is ſhew'd, that the Oblation of young Children is acceptable unto Chriſt, of whoſe Church, without Baptiſm, they cannot be made Members: Wherefore the People, according to this Example, offer their Children to the Miniſter to be baptized.

“Then the Miniſter wets with Spittle the Noiſe Thurles and Ears of him that ſhall be baptiz'd, putting us in Remembrance of the Miracle of the Deaf and Dumb wrought by Chriſt, who looking up into Heaven, puts his Spittle with his Fingers to his Ears, and touching his Tongue, ſaith, Ephphatha, that is to ſay, be opened, and ſo he healed him; ſignifying thereby the Grace and godly Influence deſcending from Heaven, which by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt, opens our Noſe to take the ſweet Odour and Savour of the Knowledge of Chriſt, and our Ears to hear his Word and Commandments.

“Then the Miniſter exhorts the Godfathers and Godmothers, with all others that are preſent, to pray to God that the Child may worthily receive the bleſſed Sacrament of Baptiſm, to the Honour of God, to the Salvation of the Soul, and Confuſion of our ghoſtly Enemy, the Devil: And ſo the Miniſter, and all they together, ſay the Pater Noſter.

“Then immediately the Miniſter makes the Sign of the Croſs in the Right-hand of the Infant, which Croſs ſhould in all our Life-time, admoniſh us valiantly to defend, reſiſt, and withſtand the crafty Aſſaults of our Enemy the Devil, and all our corrupt and perverſe Affections and Deſires. And ſo bleſſing the Child in the Name of the Father, the Son, and Holy Ghoſt, takes it by the Right-hand, and bids it enter into the Church, there to be admitted as one of Chriſt's Flock and Congregation; and ſo proceeds to the Font. And there entring towards the Baptiſm: Firſt, Inquiſition is made of the Name of him that is to be baptized, to the intent, that by giving him his Name, he may now profeſs himſelf to a new Maſter, Chriſt: For of old Cuſtom, ſuch Profeſſions were made by ſuch Inſcriptions, and giving in of their Names.

“Then there follows a Stipulation made under preſcript Words, the Miniſter demanding certain Queſtions, and he that is baptiz'd, or his Sureties, making Anſwer to every Queſtion or Demand, particularly. Which Demands, Queſtions, and Anſwers (to the intent the Godfather, with others then preſent, may know what is a Chriſtian Man's Profeſſion at his Baptiſm) we think it very convenient and meet to be utter'd hereafter in the Engliſh Tongue.

“And firſt, to the Interrogation of the Miniſter: Forſakeſt thou the Devil? He, or his Sureties for him, anſwers; I forſake him. The Miniſter ſaith, And all his Works? It is anſwered, I forſake them. The Miniſter ſaith, And all his Pomps and Vanities? The Anſwer is, I forſake them.

“After this, the Miniſter anoints the Child with holy Oil, upon the Breaſt, and betwixt the Shoulders behind: Which Unction upon the Breaſt, ſignifies that our Heart and Affections ſhould be wholly dedicated to Chriſt, and eſtabliſh'd in a perfect Faith in his Mercy, which the Oyl doth commonly ſignify in Scripture: And the anointing between the Shoulders, with the Sign of the Croſs, ſignifies, that we ſhould be bold and ſtrong to bear the Croſs of our Lord; and patiently to ſuſtain ſuch Croſs of Perſecution, Trouble and Affliction, as our moſt merciful Lord ſhall lay upon us.

“Then farther, the Miniſter makes Inquiſition of the Belief of him that is to be Chriſten'd; ſaying, Believeſt thou in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth? It is anſwer'd, I Believe. The Miniſter ſayeth, Believeſt thou in Jeſus Chriſt his only Son our Lord, &c. The Anſwer is, I Believe. The Miniſter ſayeth, Believeſt thou in the Holy Ghoſt, the Holy Catholick Church, the Communion of Saints, the Remiſſion of Sins, the Reſurrection of the Body, and after Death to have everlaſting Life? The Anſwer is, I Believe. All which Promiſe and Profeſſion of renouncing the old Errors, and believing, and embracing the Truth made in Baptiſm, every Chriſtian Man ought to have in his often Remembrance.

“And after this, the Miniſter ſayeth unto him that is to be baptiz'd, theſe Words, What askeſt thou? It is anſwer'd, Baptiſm: The Miniſter demands farther, ſaying, Wilt thou be baptiz'd? It's anſwer'd, I will? For there is no Man ſav'd againſt his Will, but willingly. For as Man by his own free Will, obeying the Serpent did periſh; ſo when God calls by Grace, by the Converſion of his own Mind, every Man truely believing and intending to work is ſaved. Then the Miniſter calls the Child by the Name, and baptizes it in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt; (putting it into the Water of the Font, and taking it out again; or elſe pouring Water upon the Infant) whereby the Perſon chriſten'd, has not only Remiſſion of all his Sins, by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt, but alſo by the ſame is ſignified the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt, the only cauſe of our Health and Salvation: And moreover, that we ſhould daily mortifie our evil Deſires, and corrupt Affections; and ſo waſh'd from Sin, walk in a new, pure and godly Life and Converſation.

“Then after this Baptiſm, he is anointed with holy Chriſme on the Head, as the ſupream and principal part of Man; ſignifying thereby, that he is made a Chriſtian Man by the head of his Congregation. And that he is anointed with the ſpiritual Unction of the Holy Ghoſt; that by his Aſſiſtance and Grace, he may obtain everlaſting Life.

“Then he that is baptiz'd, is cloath'd in a white Veſture, in token of his Manumiſſion and Freedom from the former Captivity of the Devil: And it ſignifies alſo a Chriſtian Purity and Innocency, which after the waſhing away of the Spots of his old Sin, he ought ſtudiouſly to conſerve and keep, and ſo to come to the Preſence of Chriſt at the day of Judgment, and reign with him in Glory everlaſting.

“Finally, The Miniſter puts a Candle light in the Right-hand of him that is baptiz'd, in token that he ſhould thro' all his Life-time, ſhew before all Men a Light of good Example, and godly Works; that he may be always in readineſs with the Saints to meet our Lord, and receive the Fruition of everlaſting Joy.

Miniſters.

“The Ceremonies, Obſervances, and Prayers, ſaid and done in the Conſecrations of Biſhops, and giving Orders to Prieſts, Deacons, Subdeacons, and other inferior Miniſters, as heretofore has been accuſtom'd; and as it is devis'd in the Books call'd Pontificals, (all manner of things concerning the pretenſed and uſurp'd Power of the Biſhop of Rome) aboliſh'd and utterly put aſide; and the King's moſt right and true Supremacy, with all things to the ſame (in any wiſe appertaining and belonging, always preſerv'd and obey'd) be very laudable and expedient to be uſed; for by theſe Ceremonies and Obſervances, every Man in his Order, State and Degree, is admoniſh'd what appertains to their Offices. And the Prayers be made to God, that they truely, ſincerely, and devoutly, may uſe the Miniſtration to them committed, to God's Honour, ſpiritual Comfort of themſelves, and all other Chriſtian People.

Service of the Church.

“The Service uſed in the Church, dayly in ſome Places, or upon the Sundays and other Feaſts in all Places; that is to ſay, Mattins, “Prime, Hours, Evenſong and Compline, whereof the moſt part is of Scripture, as the Pſalms, and many times the Legends, (certain things added by Man well reform'd) are very expedient and godly; both for that the Miniſters pray, and give thanks to God for themſelves, and for the People: And alſo, that by the example of their Prayers, they move and excite the People to pray with them. And therefore, for the adorning of the ſame Service, Surplices, Copes, and other Veſtures in the doing thereof, are very laudable and comely.

“The ſober, diſcreet, and devout ſinging Muſick, and playing with Organs uſed in the Church, in the Service of God, are ordain'd to ſtir up, and move the People to the Sweetneſs of God's Word; the which is their Song. And by that ſweet Harmony, both to excite them to Prayers and Devotion; and alſo to put them in Remembrance of the heavenly triumphant Church, where is everlaſting Joy, with continual Laud and Praiſes to God.

Ceremonies uſed in the Maſs.

“Foraſmuch, as divers go about to reprehend the Maſs, and as much as in them is to withdraw Chriſt's Flock from hearing thereof, taking it as a thing of little or ſmall Value; and the Ceremonies of the ſame for a Mocking and a Mumming, calling them alſo dumb Ceremonies. Therefore, to the intent that the Maſs may be the more regarded, and the Mouths of ſuch as calumniate and reprehend the ſame, ſtopp'd; it is to be underſtood, that the Maſs is a Remembrance of the Paſſion of Chriſt, whoſe moſt bleſſed Body and Blood is there conſecrated, and the Ceremonies thereof are not dumb; but they be Expreſſives and Declaratives of the ſame Paſſion, to the intent, that by ſuch Signs and Ceremonies, they that be preſent thereat, may the better be admoniſh'd and reduced into the Memory of the ſame. And “Firſt, It is to be underſtood, that the Prieſt is a common Miniſter in the name and ſtead of the whole Congregation; and as the Mouth of the ſame, not only renders thanks to God for Chriſt's Death and Paſſion, but alſo makes the common Prayers, and commends the People and their Neceſſities in the ſame to Almighty God.

“The Prieſt therefore, when he ſhall ſay Maſs, ſays it not in his common Apparel, which he daily uſes; but puts upon him clean and hallow'd Veſtments, partly repreſenting the Myſteries which were done at the Paſſion; partly repreſenting the Virtues which he himſelf ought to have that celebrates the Maſs. And, “Firſt, He putteth on the Amyſſe, which as touching the Myſtery, ſignifies the Veil, with the which the Jews cover'd the Face of Chriſt, when they buffeted him in time of his Paſſion: And, as touching the Miniſter, it ſignifies Faith, which is the Head, Ground, and Foundation of all Virtues; and therefore he puts that upon his Head firſt.

“Secondly, He puts upon him the Albe, which as touching the Myſtery, ſignifyeth the white Garment, wherewith Herod cloath'd Chriſt, in Mockery, when he ſent him to Pilate.

“And as touching the Miniſter, it ſignifies the Pureneſs of Conſcience, and Innocency he ought to have, eſpecially when he ſings the Maſs.

“The Girdle, as touching the Myſtery, ſignifies the Scourge with which Chriſt was ſcourg'd. And as touching the Miniſter, it ſignifies the continent and chaſt Living, or elſe the cloſe Mind which he ought to have at Prayers, when he celebrates.

“The Stole, as touching the Myſtery, ſignifieth the Ropes or Bands that Chriſt was bound with to the Pillar, when he was ſcourged.

“And as touching the Miniſter, it ſignifieth the Yoke of Patience; which he muſt bear as the Servant of God; in token whereof he puts alſo the Phanon on his Arm, which admoniſheth him of ghoſtly Strength, and godly Patience, that he ought to have, to vanquiſh and overcome all carnal Infirmity.

“The Overveſture, or Cheſible, as touching the Myſtery, ſignifies the Purple-Mantle that Pilate's Soldiers put upon Chriſt, after that they had ſcourg'd him.

“And as touching the Miniſter, it ſignifies Charity, a Virtue excellent above all other.

“The Miniſter, the which ſhall celebrate in the beginning, comes forth, as from ſome ſecret Place to the midſt of the Altar, ſignifying thereby that Chriſt, who is the High-Prieſt, came from the ſecret Boſom of his Father into this World, to offer Sacrifice for Man's Redemption.

“And albeit, that that Sacrifice be a ſufficient Price and Redemption for all the World; yet it is not efficient or effectual, but only to them which knowledgeth themſelves with Penance to be Sinners, whom he came to juſtifie; as he ſayeth himſelf, non veni vocare juſtos, ſed peccatores.

“Therefore the Miniſter in the beginning, teacheth all Men by his Confeſſion, to humiliate and knowledge themſelves Sinners, and aſk Remiſſion, to the intent they may be the more apt to participate of this high Myſtery. Nam Juſtus in principio accuſator eſt ſui.

“Then after this followeth, Kyrie Eleiſon, & Chriſte Eleiſon, which be words of Deſire, and to pray God for Mercy; which Mercy we cannot have of our Deſerts, but of God's Goodneſs, and Chriſt's Merits only. And therefore the Miniſter proceeding to the midſt of the Altar, renders the Glory unto God; ſinging the Angels Hymn and Song, Gloria in Excelſis Deo, i. e. Glory be unto God in Heaven: Whereby we be learn'd, not only to know that we receive all our Benefits of God, being bound to give him thanks for them; but alſo the means whereby we receive them, which is by the Mediation of Chriſt, that is both God and Man; by whom the Father is pleas'd and reconcil'd, Angels and Man agreed.

“Then this Song done, the Miniſter and People with Salutations, exhort each other to Prayers, in which he prays as well for the Multitude, as for himſelf; and therefore it is call'd Collecta, and it is directed to the Father, and commonly concluded in theſe words, per Dominum noſtrum Jeſum Chriſtum, &c. which ſheweth and declareth unto us, that we be only heard by Chriſt, and that our Prayer is by him valuable, and by our ſelf without him of no Value. And when the Prayer is ended, the People expreſs their Deſires and Minds to be heard, and anſwer Amen; which ſignifies, ſo be it.

“After that Prayer made, then the Prieſt, as a meet Miniſter to teach the People, reads the Epiſtle, which is a Leſſon taken out of the Old and New Teſtament, and it precedes the Goſpel, and prepares the Mind thereunto; like as St. John prepared unto Chriſt, and the old Law unto Grace. And Chriſt ſent the Diſciples into divers Places to preach before his coming; whereby the People ſhall be more apt to receive the heavenly Doctrine of the Goſpel, and with a true Faith believe the Rewards and Benefits promiſed in the ſame.

“Next to the Epiſtle, enſues the Graill; the which teacheth alſo ſuch wholeſome Doctrine, as was taught before in the Epiſtle; that they proceeding in Virtue by Degrees, may proceed from Virtue to Virtue, until ſuch time as they may ſee Almighty God in his Glory: And therefore follows the Song of Gladneſs, call'd the Allelujah, i. e. Laud ye God. Both to admoniſh us to remember God with a glad Mind; and alſo with ſuch Mind to prepare our ſelves to the hearing of the Goſpel, and the joyful Promiſes of the ſame.

“Then follows the Goſpel, which is a glad Meſſage, or Tidings; for in it is contain'd the glad News of our Salvation; the which the Angels ſhew'd to the Shepherds at Chriſt's coming: Saying, Ecce Evangelizo vobis gaudium magnum; and therefore the Church with Light, and other Ceremonies of Gladneſs and Peace, reads it to the People, ſtanding up diligently to hear the ſame; declaring thereby their prone and ready Minds that they have to the Doctrine of the Goſpel.

“And foraſmuch as Faith ſpringeth of the word of God, therefore divers Days, the Church (after the Goſpel read) pronounces with a loud Voice the Creed, expreſſing the Faith with her Mouth, which before ſhe conceiv'd in her Heart, according to St. Paul's ſaying, Corde creditur ad juſtitiam, ore autem Confeſſio fit ad Salutem.

“Then follows the Offertory, whereby we learn to prepare our ſelves by God's Grace, to be an acceptable Oblation to him, to the intent we may be Partakers of the Bleſſed Sacrifices which Chriſt offer'd for us upon the Croſs.

“At which time the Miniſter laying the Bread upon the Altar, makes the Chalyce, mixing the Water with the Wine; ſignifying thereby, how that Blood and Water ran out of Chriſt's Side in his Paſſion; and admoniſhes us of the inſeparable coupling and joining of Chriſt and his Church.

“Then after the Offertory done, the Prieſt waſhes his Hands, knowledging himſelf not to be ſo clean, but that he has ever need more to be waſh'd, according to the Saying of David, Waſh me Lord, more and more from my Wickedneſs, and cleanſe me from my Sin.

“Then after follows a Prayer, ſecretly ſaid, which is call'd the Secret of the Maſs; and that ſignifies Chriſt's ſecret and privy Converſation, which he kept with his Diſciples, a little before his Paſſion. For after the determinate Sentence of Death, conſpir'd by Caiphas and the Jews againſt him, he walk'd no more amongſt them openly, but amongſt his Diſciples ſecretly.

“Next after the Secret follows the Preface, which is a Prolocution or Prayer, which goes before the moſt reverend Conſecration of Chriſt's Boody and Blood, preparing the Minds of the faithful People to the Reverence of the ſame; and moving them to erect their Hearts to Almighty God; giving him Thanks for his ineſtimable Benefits, with deſiring that their Voice joined with the Company of Angels, in one Conſent of Laud and Praiſe, proceeding as well from the Church Triumphant as Militant, unite and knit together, may without End, ſing this Seraphical Hymn. Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, to the Laud of the Bleſſed Trinity, whoſe Glory repleniſhes Heaven and Earth.

“Then after this Preface follows the Canon, which is ſaid ſecretly of the Prieſt, not becauſe 'tis unlawful to be heard, read or known of the People (as ſome fancy) but that it is expedient to keep Silence and Secrecy at the time of ſuch a high Myſtery; and that both the Prieſt and People may have the more devout Meditations, and better attend about the ſame.

“Then the Prieſt begins to repreſent in this Sacrifice of the Maſs, the moſt painful and bloody Sacrifice once offer'd for our Salvation upon the Croſs, and prays the Father to accept theſe Gifts prepared for the Conſecration; and inclining his Body, makes a Croſs upon the Altar, and kiſſes it, ſignifying thereby, the humble Inclining and Obedience of Chriſt to his Father's Will, to ſuffer his Paſſion upon the Altar of his Croſs for our Salvation.

“And then following the Example of Chriſt, the high Biſhop, which, approaching the Time of his Paſſion, gave himſelf to Prayer; and alſo according to the Apoſtle's Doctrine to Timothy, the Miniſter gives himſelf to Prayer: Firſt, in general for the Univerſal Church, of the which he deſires Peace and Preſervation. Secondly, For Princes and Rulers that govern the ſame. Thirdly, For all Chriſtian and faithful People, remembring ſpecially in his Memento, ſuch as Charity moſt binds, and Time ſuffices him ſo to do, making an honourable Mention alſo of Saints which be departed. And firſt, of our Lady, the twelve Apoſtles, and as many Martyrs, which either by their bodily Preſence, Preaching, or their Bloodſhedding in their Life-time, did bear Witneſs and Teſtimony to Chriſt's Paſſion, joining them as it were, both in one Communion and Participation of Chriſt's Death and Merits, which hath deſerved as well Grace to the one, as Glory to the other, deſire God by their Prayers to protect and defend the whole Congregation of all Chriſtians.

And after certain Prayers and Petitions made for the People, and alſo, that the Oblation may be acceptable unto God, he proceeds with all Reverence to the Conſecration.

Firſt, Of the Bread, taking it in his Hands, and giving Thanks, following the Example of Chriſt; by Virtue and Power of whoſe Words, the Subſtance of Bread is turn'd into the Subſtance of the Body Chriſt.

“And likewiſe the Subſtance of Wine into his precious Blood, which he lifteth up, both that the People with all Reverence and Honour, may worſhip the ſame, and alſo to ſignifie thereby, partly Chriſt's Exaltation upon the Croſs for our Redemption, which was figured by the Serpent ſet up by Moſes in the Deſert, and partly ſignifying that triumphant Advancement and Exaltation whereto God the Father, becauſe of his Paſſion, has exalted him above all Creatures, bidding the People to have it in Remembrance as oft as they ſhall do the ſame. After the which, the Prieſt extends and ſtretches forth his Arms, in Form of a Croſs,

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

“declaring thereby, that according to Chriſt's Commandment, both he and the People, not only have freſh Remembrance of the Paſſion, but alſo of his Reſurrection and glorious Aſcenſion.

And ſo proceeds to the ſecond Memento, in which he prays for them that be dead in the Faith of Chriſt, and ſleep in Peace, that it might pleaſe God to grant them a Place of Refreſhing, Light, and Peace. Then he joins himſelf with the People, knocking himſelf upon his Breaſt, thereby teaching them, that he and they both be Sinners, and have need of Mercy and Grace purchas'd by Chriſt's Paſſion, and deſireth Almighty God to give them a Society with the holy Apoſtles and Martyrs, not as an Eſteemer of their Merits, but as a merciful Granter of Remiſſion, and that by Chriſt by whom he works and grants all theſe Benefits; wherefore all Honour and Glory is to be render'd to him by Chriſt, and with Chriſt, the Holy Ghoſt being knit in Unity to them.

“And then expreſſing with a loud Voice, how long this Honour and Glory is due to God, he ſaith, per omnia ſæcula ſæculorum (i. e.) perpetually; the Church anſwering Amen.

“The Prieſt then, to the Intent he may the more worthily receive the bleſſed Body and Blood of Chriſt, both to the Comfort and Strength as well of him as of them that be preſent, ſaith the Pater Noſter, asking of God this heavenly and celeſtial Bread, with Deliverance from all Evils, and Increaſe of Quietneſs and Peace; and ſo diſcovering the Chalyce, in token that Chriſt would the Fruit of his Paſſion to be opened and manifeſt to all the World, takes the Hoſt and breaks it, and divides it, in token of the Diſtribution of it amongſt his Diſciples at his laſt Supper, and the breaking of his Body at the time of his Paſſion: At which Supper, above all things, he commends to them Peace and Charity, ſaying, Pacem meam do vobis, pacem relinquo vobis. And therefore the Miniſter takes the Kiſs of Peace from the bleſſed Sacrament, and ſends it to the People, ſaluting each other in oſculo ſancto, as biddeth St. Paul, admoniſhing them thereby of the fraternal and mutual Peace and Concord which they ought to have, without which Peace and Concord, this Communion or Sacrament of common Union, is to them nothing profitable, but much to their Hurt.

“Then ſaith the Prieſt, thrice Agnus Dei, &c. advertizing us of the Effects of Chriſt's Paſſion; whereof the firſt is, Deliverance from the Miſery of Sin. The Second is, from Pain of everlaſting Damnation; wherefore he ſaith twice Miſerere nobis: (i. e.) have Mercy on us. And the third Effect is, giving everlaſting Peace, conſiſting in the glorious Fruition of God; wherefore he ſaith, Dona nobis pacem: (i. e.) give us Peace.

“Then follows the Commixtion of the Body and Blood of Chriſt together, ſignifying the joining together of his Body and Soul at the Reſurrection, which before was ſever'd at the Time of his Paſſion.

“And albeit there be two Conſecrations, yet there is but one Sacrament, containing under the Form, the holy Body and Blood of Chriſt inſeparably.

“Then follows the Communion, which is an exciting or a moving to the People to laud and praiſe God. And becauſe in the Primitive Church, when Devotion was fervent, divers uſed many times to receive it together with the Prieſt. Therefore, in the Prayer call'd the Poſt-Communion, the Prieſt in the Name of them all prays and renders Thanks unto God for their Spiritual Refection per Dominum noſtrum, by whoſe Paſſion exhibit, the Maſs has its Strength and Efficacy.

Hen. VIII. I.

“Then the Prieſt eftſoons turning his Face to the People after the Salutation, ſays theſe Words, Ite, miſſa eſt, i. e. Go ye, the Maſs is ended. And in that he bids them go, is ſignify'd, that we ought to follow Chriſt in his holy Life, and always be going from Virtue to Virtue, and not to ſtand and tarry in the worldly Pleaſures, but diligently to haſte us to Life Everlaſting. And that we may be of the Number of them to whom it ſhall be ſaid Venite benedicti, (i. e.) Come ye Bleſſed of my Father and receive the Kingdom &c. The Prieſt gives us at our Departure ſometimes the Benediction in the Name of the whole Trinity; ſignifying, that laſt Benediction which Chriſt gave to his Diſciples in the Mount of Olivet, when he aſcended to his Father, where he ſits on his Right Hand a continual Interceſſor for us, to whom be all Laud and Praiſe for ever. Amen.

“The Sundays are to be continued and employ'd in the Service of God, to hear his Word preach'd, to give Thanks unto him for the Benefits we receive daily. And that Day is much to be regarded, both for the Antiquity, and alſo for that it is a Memorial of Chriſt's Reſurrection, whereby we ought to be ſtirr'd to erect our Minds from earthly things, to heavenly Contemplations of Chriſt's glorify'd Nature; by that conceiving alſo a certain Hope of our Reſurrection and eternal Glory.

“The Feaſts of our Lord, divers times in the Year, receiv'd and approv'd as Holy and Solemn Days, are to be kept in their accuſtom'd Veneration and Solemnity, as well for the ſundry Cauſes before rehears'd, as alſo for that they repreſent unto us the manifold and ineſtimable Benefits of our Redemption. As the Incarnation of Chriſt, his Apparition, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, the ſending down of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſuch other.

“The Feaſts of Saints, as divers of our Bleſſed Lady, of the Apoſtles, Martyrs, Confeſſors and Virgins, ſuch as are not abrogated, or otherwiſe order'd by the high Governour, are to be uſed in godly Exerciſe and due Veneration, according to the approv'd Cuſtom. Becauſe, that in thoſe Days we remember the high Gifts of God in them; and for thoſe not only to glorifie him, but alſo to pray him that we may have the like Grace here to follow their Example of godly Living, and at the laſt attain with them the Everlaſting Life, and the State that they be in.

“Bells are ordain'd to call the Miniſters and People to the Church in Times convenient; admoniſhing them to come to the Preaching of the Word of God, the Miniſtration of the Sacraments, the Divine Service and Prayer in the Church for the Time uſed; to give Knowledge of our Chriſtian Brother or Siſter departed this World, that both we may call to Remembrance our own Mortality, and alſo be mov'd with Charity to pray for them ſo departed.

“It is convenient the Biſhops, and all other ſuch as have Orders, and continue in their Miniſtrations, for an honeſt Difference, to be “known from other Perſons, ſhould not only wear certain manner of Veſtures, and outward Raiment; but alſo, for a like Difference, to have according to their Order and Degree, a convenient Crown, with other honeſt Tonſure in their Head.

“It is laudable and convenient, that (except Sickneſs, or any other reaſonable Impediment or Let) every Biſhop, Prieſt, and others having Orders, and continuing in their Adminiſtration, ſhall daily ſay Divine Service (i. e.) Mattins, Prime, Hours, Evenſong and Compline; and ſuch as are Biſhops and Prieſts, divers times to ſay Maſs; and that they may ſay it oftner, they ought to pray for Grace, and diſpoſe themſelves accordingly.

“Bearing Candles on Candlemaſs-Days, is a very good Uſage in Memory of Chriſt, the Spiritual Light, of whom Simeon did propheſie, as is read in the Church that Day.

“Faſting certain Times and Days in the Year, as Abſtinence in Lent, and other times receiv'd and appointed to be kept, and not chang'd and abrogated, are very laudable, and without a juſt and reaſonable Cauſe to the contrary, ought to be obſerv'd according to the Cuſtom of this Realm. For tho' the manner of Faſting, and certain Days of Faſting are not expreſs'd in Scripture; yet we ought to faſt by the teaching of the Scripture, as it appears in many Places of the ſame, both of the Old and New Teſtament. For it is a godly Exerciſe, both to ſubdue and mortifie the Fleſhly Appetites, and alſo to make the Perſon more apt to pray. And therefore our Maſter Chriſt, for our Example, not only faſted, but alſo does teach us, that when we faſt we ſhould beware of Hypocriſy.

“The giving of Aſhes upon Aſh-Wedneſday, with theſe Words, Remember Man that thou art Aſhes, and to Aſhes thou ſhalt return, is to put us in Remembrance in the beginning of Lent, of our frail Nature, and Uncertainty of this Life. Wherefore, it were very good and convenient to expreſs the ſame in Engliſh, to the Underſtanding of unlearned Perſons.

“The covering of the Croſs and the Images in Lent, with the uncovering of the ſame at the Reſurrection, ſignifies not only the Darkneſs of Infidelity, which cover'd the Face of the Jews in the Old Teſtament, but alſo the dark Knowledge they had of Chriſt, who was the Perfection and End of the Law; and not yet open'd until the time of his Death and Reſurrection.

“And the ſame partly is ſignified by the Veil which hid the ſecret Place of the Sanctum Sanctorum from the People. And in the time of Chriſt's Paſſion was open'd that all Men might ſee it, and have a ready Entrance thereunto. The Holy Ghoſt ſignifying thereby, as ſaith St. Paul, that the Day of Holineſs was not yet open'd, ſo long as the firſt Tabernacle was ſtanding; nor the Way of Life, as the Prophet ſaith, was known before.

“Bearing of Palms on Palm-Sunday, done in Memory of the receiving of Chriſt into Jeruſalem a little before his Death, that we may have the ſame Deſire to receive him into our Hearts.

“The Service upon Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Good-Friday, differs from other Service in the Year. And the Church uſeth then lamentable and mourning Ceremonies, reading the Leſſons of the Lamentation of Jeremy, ſignifying an Heavineſs, for ſo much as the Jews at that time travell'd, and ſought by all means to apprehend Chriſt and bring him to his Death. And the ſame Service is call'd Tenebræ, becauſe that Chriſt walk'd then not openly as he was wont to do, but kept himſelf ſecretly with his Diſciples in a City call'd Ephraim, till it pleas'd him willingly to come and ſuffer his Paſſion for our Salvation.

“The Candles, in thoſe Nights, firſt light, and then put out at every Pſalm and Leſſon, ſignifies the manifold Lights given by the Holy Prophets before the coming of Chriſt, which at this time were darken'd; for the World was then in an Infidelity, and the cruel Jews did not only put the former Prophets to Death, but alſo then they practis'd the Death of Chriſt, the End of all Prophets, which ſhortly after they accompliſh'd to their Confuſion and our Salvation.

“Upon Shier-Thurſday, as we call it, moſt principally it is to be conſider'd, that our Saviour did inſtitute the moſt Bleſſed Sacrament of Thanks; for then he gave to his Diſciples his moſt Bleſſed Body to eat, and his moſt precious Blood to drink, the very ſame that after was betray'd for us, and put to Death, roſe and aſcended: He waſh'd alſo the ſame Day the Feet of his Diſciples, teaching Humbleneſs, and very Love and Charity, by his Example.

“Oyl and Chriſm are this Day conſecrated, which ſignifies principally the Imperial and Prieſtly Dignity of Chriſt, and his being anointed with the Spiritual Unction of the Holy Ghoſt above all Creatures, admoniſhing us of our State and Condition: For as of Chriſma Chriſt is named, ſo of Chriſt we are called Chriſtians.

“And 2*dly*, It ſignifies defacing and aboliſhing of the Rites and Conſecrations of the Old Law, which were done in Oyl. And therefore at this time the old Oyl is burnt and deſtroy'd, and new conſecrated, ſignifying thereby our new Regeneration in Chriſt, and holy Inunction which we have by his Holy Spirit.

“It is a laudable Cuſtom the ſame Day to waſh the Altars, and to prepare with all Cleanneſs the Places where the moſt Bleſſed Sacrament ſhall be miniſtred. And alſo to be for us a Remembrance, that as thoſe things inanimate are waſh'd and cleans'd for that purpoſe; ſo we ought much more to prepare and waſh our Minds and Conſciences at all times, and eſpecially at this time, for the more worthy receiving of the ſame moſt high Sacrament.

“Upon Good-Friday is renewed yearly the Remembrance of the Bleſſed Paſſion; wherefore, that Day, amongſt other godly Ceremonies to be continued, is the creeping to the Croſs, where we humble our ſelves to Chriſt before the ſame; offering unto him, and kiſſing of the Croſs, in Memory of our Redemption by Chriſt upon the Croſs.

“And that Day is prepared and well adorn'd the Sepulture, in Remembrance of his Sepulture, which was propheſied by the Prophet Eſaias to be glorious. Wherein is laid the Image of the Croſs, and the moſt Bleſſed Sacrament; to ſignify, that there was bury'd no Corps or Body that cou'd be putrefied, or corrupted, but the pure and undefiled Body of Chriſt, without Spot of Sin, which was never ſeparated from the Godhead. And therefore, "as David expreſs'd in the 15th Pſalm, it cou'd not ſee Corruption, nor Death cou'd not detain or hold him, but he ſhould riſe again to our great Hope and Comfort. And therefore the Church adorns it with Lights, to expreſs the great Joy they have of that glorious Triumph over Death, the Devil and Hell.

"Upon Saturday, Eaſter Even, is hallow'd the Font, which is as it were Veſtigium, or a Remembrance of Baptiſm, that was uſed in the Primitive Church. At which Time, and Pentecoſt, there was uſed in the Church two ſolemn Baptizings, and much Concourſe of People came unto the ſame.

"The firſt was at Eaſter, becauſe the Myſtery of Baptiſm agrees well to the Time. For like as Chriſt dy'd and was bury'd, and roſe again the Third Day, ſo by putting into the Water is ſignify'd our Death to Sin: And the Immerſions betoken our burying and mortifying to the ſame. And the Riſing again out of the Water declares us to be riſen unto a New Life, according to the Doctrine of St. Paul (Rom. 6.)

"And the ſecond ſolemn Baptizing (i. e.) at Pentecoſt, was becauſe that then is celebrated the Feaſt of the Holy Ghoſt, which is the Worker of that Spiritual Regeneration we have in Baptiſm. And therefore the Church uſes yet to hallow the Font alſo at that time.

"Upon Eaſter-Day, in the Morning, the Ceremonies of the Reſurrection are very laudable, to put us in Remembrance of Chriſt's Reſurrection, which is the Cauſe of our Juſtification. And that as Chriſt being our Head, was the firſt among the Dead which roſe never to die again; ſo all Chriſtian Men being his Members, do conceive thereby to riſe from Death of Sin to godly Converſation in this Life; and finally, at the Day of Judgment, when the Bodies and Fleſh of all Mankind ſhall by the Operation of God be rais'd again, to riſe with him to everlaſting Glory.

"General Proceſſions, and other particular Proceſſions, with the Litanies and other Prayers, are very laudable; wherein we pray to Almighty God for the Health, proſperous Eſtate, and Victory of our Prince; for the Wealth of the Realm, and for the Temperance and Pureneſs of the Air to Man's Health: And alſo for the Increaſe of Grain, Graſs, and other Fruits growing upon the Earth for the Suſtenance of Man. In which Proceſſion, we uſe to follow the Croſs and Image of our Saviour, not only praying unto God for our Neceſſities, whoſe Image we do follow, but alſo profeſſing our ſelves as true Chriſtian People, ready to bear our Croſs with Chriſt, willingly to ſuffer all Troubles and Afflictions laid upon us for the Love and Cauſe of our Saviour, like as he ſuffer'd for us. And ſo as his Servants, Soldiers, and Men of War, we follow his Banner for the Remembrance of him, declaring our Proneneſs and Readineſs in all things to follow and ſerve him; provided always, that in all Proceſſions the manner of Praying appointed by the King's Injunctions be obſerv'd.

"The accuſtom'd Benedictions of Biſhops or Prieſts, of old time uſed in the Church, are very laudable: For as Miniſters and Paſtors of the Flock of Chriſt for that whole People, where they have their Adminiſtrations, they pray to Almighty God, that it may pleaſe him to bleſs the People (i. e.) to give them his Goodneſs and Grace in all their Neceſſities, both for the Body and Soul: Making a Croſs, to ſignifie in whoſe Name they bleſs, and by whom they aſk the ſame Gift of God.

"Holy Water and Holy Bread be two godly Ceremonies, and to be continued in the Church. The one to put us in Remembrance of our Baptiſm, and of the Blood of Chriſt, for our Redemption ſprinkled upon the Croſs. And the other to put us in Remembrance, that all Chriſtian Men are one Myſtical Body of Chriſt, as the Bread is made of many Grains, and yet but one Loaf. And to put us in Remembrance alſo of receiving of the Holy Sacrament and Body of Chriſt in right Charity, which in the beginning of Chriſt's Church, Men did oftner receive than they do now.

Archbiſhop Cranmer's Opinion over-ruled in the Erudition of a Chriſtian Man.

By Archbiſhop Cranmer's Anſwer to the Seventeen Queſtions, it appears his Opinion of Church Power was extreamly wrong and unprimitive: He makes the Government of the Church, and the Functions of the Hierarchy, altogether precarious, and intirely depending on the Pleaſure of the Civil Magiſtrate. Theſe Eraſtian Tenents, as they are now called, were quite different from a Paper ſign'd by him ſome few Years ſince: 'Tis called, A Declaration of the Functions and Divine Inſtitutions of Biſhops and Prieſts. Here the Independency of the Church in Matters purely Spiritual, is maintain'd without Ambiguity or Reſerve; and the Doctrine touching the Sacrament of Orders, is penn'd to the ſame Senſe, and in a manner, to the ſame Words with the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man. This Declaration was ſign'd by Cromwell, the two Archbiſhops, eleven Biſhops, and four and twenty Divines of Character. 'Tis ſubſcrib'd by Edward Hereford, and John Rocheſter; from whence 'tis plain, it muſt be drawn up between the Years 1536, and the Beginning of the Year 1538. For John Hilſley, Biſhop of Rocheſter, was not conſecrated till 1536, and Edward Fox, Biſhop of Hereford, died May the 8th, 1538 (x).

Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. E. 5. Fol. 45.

But notwithſtanding Cranmer was ſo unhappy as to change his Opinion, as appears by his Anſwer to the Queſtions abovemention'd; yet he was over-ruled by a Majority of the Biſhops, who ſet forth the Erudition of a Chriſtian Man. And more than that, he ſeems to have recover'd his former Sentiment; for he ſubſcrib'd the Erudition, countenanc'd it in his Dioceſe, and check'd one Joſeph a Clergyman, who took the Liberty to preach againſt it (y).

A Match propos'd between Prince Edward and the Queen of Scots.

At the Defeat of the Scots at Solway, ſeveral of the Nobility were taken Priſoners, and brought up to London, and put into the Hands of ſome Engliſh Lords, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, where they were entertain'd with great Freedom and Honour. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury had the Earl of Caſſils, the Duke of Norfolk the Earl of Glencarn, not to mention the reſt. Theſe Scotch Noblemen being treated to Satisfaction, and hearing of their King's Death, ſuggeſted a Match between Prince Edward and their young Queen, with a Promiſe of their Intereſt to bring it about. The King being pleas'd with the Propoſal, diſmiſs'd them upon the Security of Hoſtages, and preſented them richly at their going off. Not long after, the King ſent Sir Ralph Sadler to Scotland, to ſolicit the Marriage, and conclude a Peace. There were likewiſe Scotch Ambaſſadors diſpatch'd to the Engliſh Court. In ſhort, after ſome Difficulties adjuſted, the Marriage-Treaty was ſign'd by the Scotch Ambaſſadors.

(x) Godwin de Præſul.

(y) Burnet p. 289. Memorials of Cranmer, p. 100.

A. D. $154\frac{2}{3}$.

dours. But upon their Return the Queen Mother, the Cardinal, and all the Scotch Clergy, were diſpleas'd with what was done. Particularly the Cardinal diſcover'd his Averſion to the Alliance in ſo remarkable a manner, that it was thought fit to confine him, till the Ratification of the Marriage was ſettled, and Hoſtages promis'd for Performance of Articles. But the Cardinal brib'd his Keeper, made his Eſcape, and embroil'd the whole Matter. And now acting under the Countenance of the Queen Mother, he gain'd the Aſſiſtance of the Clergy, by repreſenting they were in Danger of Ruin from the other Party. He prevail'd the Hoſtages ſhould not be ſent into England, and occaſion'd ill Uſage being put upon our Ambaſſadour. The King of England, who had reaſon to be diſpleas'd with this Breach of Articles, laid an Embargo upon the Scotch Merchant-men, and reſolv'd to declare War againſt that Nation.

A Treaty of be Marriage roken by Car-inal Beaton.

The Queen Mother and the Cardinal applied to the French Court to fortifie their Intereſt, and deſired that King to convey over Matthew Steward Earl of Lenox; acquainting him this Lord was very conſiderable in his Country, and averſe to Hamilton's Party. The Viceroy being inform'd of the Earl of Lenox his Voyage, endeavours to get the young Princeſs, but was prevented by the Cardinal.

The Earl of Lenox, upon his Arrival in Scotland, levies Four Thouſand Men, and gains his Point upon the Earl of Arran. By a Treaty between 'em the young Queen was put into the Cuſtody of Four of Lenox his Creatures, and ſoon after crown'd. The Viceroy being thus diſappointed, and over and above not very popular, was contented to be gain'd by the Cardinal, and wholly govern'd by him.

King Henry being inform'd of the Change in the Scotch Adminiſtration, demanded the Perſon of the young Queen, alledging his Apprehenſion of her being convey'd to France. The Scots refuſing to part with her, War was declar'd by our King, and Preparations made for that Purpoſe. But of this no more at preſent.

uly, 1543.

This Year our King broke with France, and ſign'd a Treaty with the Emperor (z). And about the ſame time he was married to the Lady Katherine Parr, the Relict of the Lord Latimer.

The King being acquainted that ſeveral Perſons were burnt for Religion at Windſor, ſeem'd diſpleas'd with the rigorous Execution of the Law. Whether he thought ſuch Methods of Severity unſuitable to the Chriſtian Religion, or whether he was apprehenſive his Government would lie under hard Imputations by holding on this Courſe, is not eaſie to determine. But whatever the Motive was, 'twas plain his Mind was alter'd; for he gave his Pardon to Sir Thomas Cardine, Sir Philip Hobby, and ſome others, who had fall'n under the Forfeiture of the Six Articles. And for a farther Proof of a gentler Perſwaſion, he withdrew his Favour from the Biſhop of Wincheſter; this Prelate being repreſented of a proſecuting Temper.

d. p. 503.

A. D. $154\frac{3}{4}$.

On the Fourteenth of January the Parliament ſat at Weſtminſter, and continued till the Nine and Twentieth of March following. The firſt Act relates to the Succeſſion, in which there is a remarkable Clauſe. "The Act mentions two "Statutes made in the 28th Year of this Reign, "to exclude the uſurp'd Authority and Juriſdi-"ction of the Biſhops of Rome; that to give the "King an Aſſurance of the Fidelity of his Sub-"jects, they were oblig'd to ſwear a Renuncia-"tion of the Papal Supremacy, and that each of "the Statutes abovementioned, injoin'd a ſeve-"ral Oath. But theſe Proviſions, it ſeems, falling ſhort of Satisfaction, there is a ſupplemental Clauſe added in the Statute before us. The Words are theſe: Foraſmuch as in both the ſaid Oaths, mentioned in the ſaid ſeveral Acts, there lacketh full and ſufficient Words, whereby ſome Doubts might riſe: Therefore be it enacted by Authority of this preſent Parliament, that from and after the laſt Day of this Seſſion, all and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons, which be order'd and limited by the ſaid ſeveral Acts, to take the ſaid Oaths mentioned in the ſame Acts, ſhall from thenceforth, in Lieu and Place of thoſe two Oaths, take and ſwear this corporal Oath, according to the Tenor enſuing. And that they, which have already ſworn the other foreſaid Oaths, or any of them, ſhall take and eſteem it of the ſame Effect and Force, as tho' they had ſworn this (a).

A remarkable Clauſe in an Act relating to Oaths.

In the former Oaths, this Statute ſets forth, there lack'd full and ſufficient Words. This Oath therefore ſeems to ſupply the Defects, by extending the Matter. Now if a Parliament can charge the Conſcience deeper, and throw a ſupplemental Clauſe upon an Oath taken Seven Years before, the Queſtion will be, Whether a Man can tell what he ſwears to? And whether this might not prove a Diſcouragement againſt taking Parliamentary Oaths? Becauſe, tho' a Man may know the Extent of ſuch a ſolemn Engagement at preſent, yet he can't foreſee with what Addition it may be loaded by the Legiſlature for the Time to come. And then the Queſtion will be, Whether this does not look like taking Religion upon Content, and reſigning to a Parliament with implicit Belief, in Things of the moſt ſolemn Nature. The Refuſal of this Oath, is made High-Treaſon, but this Statute being ſince repealed (b), the Subject cannot be affected with the extraordinary Clauſe abovementioned.

During this Seſſion, one Sir John Goſtick, Knight of the County for Bedfordſhire, made a Speech in the Houſe againſt Archbiſhop Cranmer, charged him with encouraging novel Opinions, and that his Family was a Nurſery of Hereſie and Sedition. Biſhop Gardner is ſuppos'd to be at the Bottom of this Buſineſs. This Speech of Goſtick's, being of the Nature of an Impeachment, ſeveral Lords of the Privy Council, mov'd the King, that ſince Cranmer lay under an Imputation of ſo a high Nature, he might be diſmiſs'd the Board, and committed to the Tower, till Enquiry was made into the Truth of what was commonly reported. The admitting the Archbiſhop to the Privy Council, they ſaid, would diſcourage Information (c).

Archbiſhop Cranmer charg'd with Hereſy.

In the mean time a Report was ſpread, that the King had determin'd Cranmer's Ruin, That he would quickly be brought to the Scaffold, and ſhare Cromwell's Fate. It ſeems his Enemies had ſo much the Aſcendant at Court, that moſt People thought it would be next to impoſſible to diſentangle himſelf. But the King happening to penetrate the Matter, found there was more Art than Truth in the Clamours againſt Cranmer. His Majeſty one Evening after Supper, upon Pretence of diverting himſelf upon the Water, order'd his Barge to be row'd to Lambeth Side. Some of the Archbiſhop's Servants acquainting their Lord with the King's being there, he came to the Shoar to pay his Regards, and invite the King to his Palace. The King bid him come into the Boat, and ſit cloſe by him, and entertain'd him with a long Diſcourſe in private.

Amongſt

(z) Lord Herbert, p. 486, 495.

(a) 35. H. 8. c. 1.

(b) 1. M. 1.

(c) Antiquit. Britann. p. 334. & deinc.

Amongſt other things, the King, to ſound Cranmer the better, complain'd, that ſince Cromwell's Death the Kingdom had been very much embroil'd with Hereſie and Faction; that 'twas to be fear'd, theſe different Perſuaſions and Animoſities might be attended with dangerous Conſequences, and break out at laſt into a Civil War. That therefore ſuch Diſputes about Conſcience and Religious Belief, ought to be ſilenc'd. For this Purpoſe he was reſolv'd to ſearch after the Grand Incendiary, and take him off by ſome exemplary Puniſhment. That this, in the Opinion of ſeveral of the Prelates and other Lords, was the proper Method to put a ſtop to the Miſchief. Upon this he ask'd Cranmer, What his Opinion was of this Reſolve? The Archbiſhop, tho' he gueſs'd the Meaning of the Queſtion, anſwer'd frankly, and without any Appearance of Concern, That his Highneſs had pitch'd upon a ſerviceable Expedient, and that the reſt of the Hereticks ought to undergo the ſame Puniſhment with their Leader; only he deſir'd the King would not charge thoſe with Hereſy who grounded their Belief upon the Inſpired Writings. Upon this Anſwer the King came cloſer, and ſaid, I am inform'd by a great many Hands, that you are the grand Hereſiarch; that 'tis you who encourage Heterodoxy; and that were it not for your Counterpaces, the Six Articles had not been ſo much diſlik'd, and conteſted in your Province. I deſire therefore you would deal clearly, and diſcover your ſelf upon this Matter. The Archbiſhop told his Highneſs he was ſtill of the ſame Opinion he had declar'd himſelf, when the Bill was paſſing; however he had done nothing againſt the Act. Then the King putting on an Air of Pleaſantry, asked him whether his Bedchamber could ſtand the Teſt of the Articles? The Archbiſhop, notwithſtanding he was ſenſible Marriage was Death in a Prieſt, told the King he was married before his Promotion to the See of Canterbury, that he entred into this Relation during his Embaſſy at the Emperor's Court: However, to prevent falling under the Penalty of the Statute, he had parted with his Wife, and ſent her to her Family in Germany. This Anſwer, without Evaſion or Reſerve, pleaſ'd the King. And now being fully perſuaded of Cranmer's Probity, he pull'd off the Maſk, and began to aſſure him of his Favour: He told him the Severity of the Act was not levell'd againſt him, and then mention'd the Information preferr'd againſt him, and thoſe who pretended to make it good.

He is preſerv'd by the King.

The Archbiſhop deſir'd the Charge might be carried on thro' the Forms of Law; for he was not afraid of ſtanding the utmoſt Enquiry. The King, who was ſtill more confirm'd of the Archbiſhop's Sincerity, told him he ſhould put the Cauſe into his Hand, and truſt him with the Management. Cranmer replied, ſuch a Favour would be cenſur'd by his Adverſaries, and interpreted to a Partiality in his Highneſs. He deſir'd therefore his Majeſty would be pleaſ'd to nominate ſome other Judge. However, the King had ſo ſtrong an Opinion of Cranmer's Honeſty, that he did not queſtion the Fairneſs of his Conduct, tho' in a Caſe in which himſelf was ſo nearly concern'd. Being diſmiſs'd by the King with this unexpected Confidence, he order'd Dr. Cox his Vicar General, and Huſſey his Principal Regiſtrary, to go down to Canterbury, and make a thorough Enquiry into the Practice of thoſe who had inform'd againſt him, to find out the Men, and trace the Progreſs of the Plot: But this Vicar General, and the Regiſtrary moving ſlowly, and trifling, as it were, over their Commiſſion, were ſuſpected of unfriendly Intentions.

On the other hand, the oppoſite Party preſs'd for Cranmer's Confinement, and that he might be brought to anſwer the Charge of Hereſy. The King reſign'd, at laſt, ſo far to their Importunity, as to conſent that in caſe they could make Proof of any one Crime of the Archbiſhop's againſt Church or State, he ſhould be ſent to Priſon. Next Day they were in Expectation of gaining their End. The King, who reſolv'd to preſerve Cranmer, and was willing to diſcover the foul Play, ſeem'd to countenance the Proſecution, and let his Enemies go the whole Length of their Deſign againſt him.

But now the Matter being come to a Criſis, 'twas time to interpoſe. The King therefore, ſent one Mr. Denny a Gentleman of his Privy Chamber, and one of Cranmer's Friends, about Midnight, to Lambeth: His Buſineſs was, to order the Archbiſhop to come immediately to the King. His Majeſty told him, that the Province of Canterbury, and almoſt the whole Kingdom, being over-run with Heretical Opinions, he was ſolicited by almoſt all the Privy Council to commit him during the Proceſs; for without ſuch a Confinement the Evidence would be ſtifled, and 'twas impoſſible to go to the Bottom of the Matter: For as the Privy Council ſuggeſted, all this Heterodoxy was owing to ſeveral Foreigners of Learning, entertain'd in his Family. This Motion, ſays the King, of the Privy Council, I have agreed to; to Morrow it is to be put in Execution, and I deſire to know your Senſe of the Reaſonableneſs of it.

Cranmer return'd the King Thanks for preacquainting him with this Reſolve, declar'd himſelf not unwilling to go to Priſon and abide a Tryal: That not being conſcious of any pretended Miſbehaviour, he had rather ſtand the Event of a judicial Enquiry, than lie under the Load of unreaſonable Suſpicion. He only deſir'd, that ſince his Orthodoxy was called in Queſtion, he might have learned and indifferent Judges aſſign'd him.

The King, inſtead of commending him for his Courage and Integrity, told him his Willingneſs to go to Priſon, and reſting ſo much upon his Innocence, argu'd his Simplicity; for, ſays he, if you are once eclips'd, and hurried into a Goal, there will be Knaves enough to inform againſt you; which as long as you have your Liberty, and your Character ſtands intire, will not have the Confidence to ſay a Word: And therefore ſince you have not the Diſcretion to conſult your own Honour and Security, I will undertake that Part, and preſerve you my ſelf. To Morrow you will be ſent for by the Privy Council, charg'd with Hereſy, and order'd to Priſon. Your Way is, to plead that ſince you have the Honour to be one of the Board, you may receive the ſame Treatment which they would deſire in the ſame Caſe; that is, that thoſe who inform againſt you may be brought before the Council; and then, provided you can't diſprove their Evidence, you are willing to go to Priſon: And in caſe you are refuſ'd this reaſonable Requeſt, make your Appeal to me, and give them a Sign you have an Authority for ſuch an Application: Upon this the King took a Ring of great Value off his Finger, gave it Cranmer, and diſcharg'd him.

He is ill treated by the Privy Council.

The next Morning there were Meſſengers ſent to Lambeth to ſummon the Archbiſhop to the Privy Council; when he came there he was refuſ'd Admittance into the Council Chamber. At which, the Courtiers attending thereabouts, were much ſurpriz'd; when Dr. Butts, one of the King's Phyſicians heard of this Uſage, he came to the Archbiſhop to ſhew his Regard; and keep him from being inſulted. This Doctor being ſoon after ſent for by the King, told him he had ſeen a very unuſual ſight. What is the matter? ſays the King. Sir, ſays he, there is a ſtrange Revolution in Archbiſhop Cranmer's Quality: He is ſunk from a Metropolitan, to a Footman; for I have ſeen him wait amongſt the Liveries about an Hour in the Lobby, before the Council-Chamber. What, ſays the King, does the Privy-Council treat the Primate of all England in ſuch a contumelious Manner? And upon this a Gentleman was immediately ſent to order the Board, to let the Archbiſhop into the Council-Chamber. At his coming in, he was ſaluted with an heavy Accuſation: That the King and the Council had receiv'd Information of the Kingdoms being infected with Hereſy: That this dangerous Miſperſuaſion was propagated by himſelf and his Family; and that 'till the Riſe and Progreſs, and the whole Detail of this Misfortune was thoroughly examin'd, 'twas thought neceſſary to confine him in the Tower. Cranmer deſir'd the Informers, the Evidence and all the Furniture of Legal Proof might be produced; that he might have the liberty of defending himſelf before the Board. For he could not help thinking it hard Meaſure that a Primate of England, and Privy-Counſellour, whoſe Integrity had never been called in Queſtion, ſhould be haled to Priſon upon bare Suſpicion. That by ſuch an ignominious Treatment, People would be apt to preſume him guilty, and by this means he might ſuffer when the Cauſe came farther on: He alledg'd ſeveral other Reaſons for gentler Uſage, but perceiving Arguments and Intreaties ſignified nothing; he told them he was ſorry to find himſelf diſappointed in his Expectations of Equity, and that now he was oblig'd to appeal to the King from thoſe he had ſo long ſat with at the Board, and liv'd with in a friendly Correſpondence. Having ſaid this, he deliver'd them the King's Ring, acquainting them that by this Sign, their Order for his Commitment was ſuperſeded. When they came with Cranmer before the King, they were ſmartly reprimanded by his Highneſs: He told them he was ſorry to find his Privy-Council ſo much wanting in Prudence and Decency. What could put them upon ſo foreign a Fancy, as to ſhut the Archbiſhop out of the Council-Chamber, and let him wait in the Paſſage like a Valet? He would gladly know whether any of them would be contented to be handled with ſuch Diſreſpect himſelf? And then clapping his Hand upon his Breaſt, he ſwore he was more oblig'd to Cranmer than any Man living, and that no Prince could have better Proofs of his Integrity; and therefore he expected that all thoſe who pretended an Affection to him and his Service, ſhould treat the Archbiſhop with all imaginable Regard.

The reſt of the Board finding they had miſtaken their Meaſures, and being aw'd to Silence, the Duke of Norfolk replied, that the Board had no deſign of doing any harm to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: Their meaning in moving for his Commitment, was only to give his Innocence the fairer Tryal: That the Proceſs might proceed with a more unexceptionable Appearance; and that after the Falſhood of the Articles had been fully diſprov'd, he might be diſcharg'd with a greater advantage to his Reputation. To this the King return'd, I won't ſuffer Cranmer nor any Perſon I have a Value for, to be thus harraſs'd, and run this riſque for clearing their Reputation. But I perceive there are ſome Miſunderſtandings and Animoſities amongſt you, which unleſs they are quickly laid down, I ſhall be forc'd to interpoſe, and quiet them my ſelf. Upon this the King went off with an Air ſomewhat diſturb'd, and the Privy-Council ſaluted Cranmer with the cuſtomary Marks of Friendſhip and Ceremony. Cranmer having eſcaped the Snare, paſs'd over the Injury without the leaſt Reſentment, and from this time forwards had ſo great a ſhare in the King's Favour, that nothing farther was attempted againſt him.

Cox and Huzzey being dilatory in executing their Commiſſion, as hath been obſerv'd; the King ſent Dr. Lee privately to Canterbury, to examine the Matter, and make his Report of what he could diſcover, either in favour of the Archbiſhop or againſt him. Lee conſulting with thoſe who wiſh'd well to the Reformation, was directed to ſearch the Houſes of ſome Prieſts of a contrary Perſuaſion. And here Letters written by one Gardner, the Biſhop of Wincheſter's Secretary, made a diſcovery. The Import of them was to raiſe the Intereſt of their Party upon Cranmer; and bring on a Proſecution: The King perceiving the Impeachment of Cranmer to be nothing elſe but plain Concert and Diſaffection; began to cool in his Eſteem, and withdraw his Fancy from the Men of that Complexion. And laying the whole Scheme before Cranmer, adviſ'd him to take care how he converſ'd with ſuch People. He would likewiſe have had Gardner's Letters read in the Parliament Houſe: But Cranmer not willing to come to an open Rupture with the Duke of Norfolk and his Party, prevail'd with the King to conceal them.

A Concert diſcover'd againſt him.

Cranmer's Intereſt being thus eſtabliſh'd, the Proſecution upon the Six Articles began to ſlacken, and thoſe inclin'd to the Reformation had better Uſage. For now the Archbiſhop finding the Juncture ſomewhat favourable argued againſt the Severity of that ſanguinary Act in the Parliament Houſe, preſs'd for a Mitigation of the Penalty; and that no honeſt and well-deſerving Subject might be obnoxious to ſuch Extremities, and deſtroy'd merely for acting with a good Conſcience.

A Mitigation of the Rigor of the Act of the Six Articles.

And notwithſtanding Cranmer was deſerted by the Biſhops of Worceſter, Chicheſter and Rocheſter, who had promiſ'd to ſtand by him, and ſecond his Motion; yet his Reaſoning and Reſolution made ſuch an Impreſſion upon the Temporal Lords and the King; that they agreed to moderate the Rigor of the Statute. “Thus, it was enacted that no Perſons ſhould be committed or moleſted for any Preſentment or Indictment upon the Six Articles; but upon ſuch Preſentments and Indictments as were made by the Oaths of Twelve Men before ſuch Commiſſioners as are mention'd in this Act, and refer'd to in another. The Proſecution was likewiſe to be made in a Year after the Offence was ſuppoſ'd to be done. It was likewiſe enacted, that no Perſon ſhould be arreſted or committed before Indictment, unleſs in ſome few Caſes; and that if any Preacher ſhould ſpeak any thing in his Sermon or Lecture againſt the Statute of the Six Articles, he was to be inform'd againſt, or indicted within Forty Days, or elſe diſcharg'd from being liable to any Proſecution (c).

(c) 35 H. 8. cap. 5. Statutes at large.

35 H. 8. c. 5.

Cranmer Th. Abp of Cant.

By another Statute paſs'd this Seſſion, the Regal Style for Ireland, which the King had lately aſſum'd, was confirm'd to the Crown.

The Regal Style for Ireland enacted.

A Loan lent to the King, was likewiſe diſcharg'd by Act of Parliament; “ In the Preamble of the Statute, 'tis ſaid amongſt other things, that the reforming and extinguiſhing many damnable and dangerous Schiſms, Opinions and Arguments, ſprung and riſen in the Church of England, and alſo of Ireland, had been expenſive to the Crown.

By an Act made in the 27th of this Reign, 'twas provided that in all Grants of Abbey-Lands, a Tenure by Knights Service in Capite, and a Rent of the tenth part of the yearly Value ſhould be reſerv'd to the Crown. But by this Parliament, the King is impower'd to change the Tenures of Knights Services in Capite, into Sockage or free Burghage at Pleaſure; provided the yearly Rent of the tenth part was reſerv'd, and the Eſtate granted or ſold to the Subject; did not exceed the value of Forty Shillings per Annum (d).

Some Abbey Lands may be held in Sockage.

(d) 35 H. 8. c. 14.

The Crown was plainly a loſer by this Act; for Knight Service draws Marriage, Relief, and Ward. Beſides, by ſinking the Knight Service into Sockage, the Cavalry was weakned, and the King leſs able to defend himſelf againſt any Revolt or Invaſion.

“ The laſt Act I ſhall mention, gave the King an Authority to name Two and Thirty Perſons, Sixteen Clergy, and Sixteen Lay, to review the Canons: And here it is expreſly provided, that 'till ſuch time as the King's Majeſty, and the Thirty Two Perſons have accompliſh'd and executed the Effects and Contents afore rehears'd and mention'd; that ſuch Canons, Conſtitutions, and Ordinances, Synodal, or Provincial, or other Eccleſiaſtical Laws or Juriſdictions Spiritual, as be yet accuſtom'd and uſed here in the Church of England; which neceſſarily and conveniently are requiſite to be put in ure and execution for the time, not being repugnant, contrariant or derogatory to the Laws or Statutes of the Realm; nor to the Prerogatives of the Regal Crown of the ſame, or any of them; ſhall be occupied, exercis'd, and put in ure for the time, within this, or any other the King's Majeſty's Dominions. And that the Miniſters, and due Executors of them, ſhall not incur any damage or danger, for the due exerciſing the foreſaid Laws; ſo that by no colour or pretence of them, or any of them, the Miniſter put in ure any thing prejudicial or in contrary of the Regal Power, or Laws of the Realm, any thing whatſoever to the contrary of this preſent Act notwithſtanding.

An Act for Reviewing the Canons.

May 4. A.D. 1544.

Scotland harraſs'd by the Engliſh.

The beginning of this Summer, the War with which the Scots were threatned broke out; the King eqipp'd a Fleet of two hundred Sail with Land Men on Board, commanded by the Lord Liſle. This Admiral debarked Ten Thouſand Men at Leith: The Town was taken without Oppoſition, and the Soldiers found much more Plunder than was expected. From hence after three Days, they march'd to Edinborough, where the Governour, the Cardinal, and many of the Nobility were poſted with Six Thouſand Horſe, and a conſiderable Body of Foot: However upon the ſight of the Engliſh Troops they thought fit to retire. The Burghers offer'd to ſurrender upon Articles for carrying off their Effects; and that the Engliſh would not burn the Town. Theſe Conditions were refuſed by the Lord Liſle, and the Town taken by Storm, ſack'd and burnt; however they found the Caſtle too difficult an Undertaking. When they had ravag'd the Country thereabouts, they countermarch'd to Leith, where after having deſtroy'd the Town, and ſpoil'd the Haven, they re-imbarked. This rough Treatment paſs'd upon the Scots, for breaking the Articles of Marriage, and inſulting the King's Ambaſſadour (e).

Hen. VIII. K.

Bouloign taken by King Henry.

(e) Godwin. Annal.

The Earl of Lenox being diſappointed in his Expectation of marrying the Queen Mother, and meeting with ſome other Mortifications in Scotland, retir'd to King Henry with the Earl of Glencarn's eldeſt Son, and ſome other Perſons of Quality. The King by a formal Treaty, engag'd to ſupport the Earl of Lenox againſt the Earl of Arran, and Cardinal Beaton; and gave him the Lady Margaret Dowglas his Niece; by whom he had Iſſue Henry Lord Darnly, the Father of King James the Firſt *.

* Godwin. Annal.

July 14.

The King, who was now preparing for an Expedition againſt France, rais'd the value of Money, and embas'd the Coin. Soon after his Landing at Calais, he beſig'd Bouloign, which was ſurrendred after leſs than Two Months Siege. Before his entring upon this Campaign he order'd a Litany; or Proceſſion to be ſet forth in Engliſh. The occaſion of this Order, is ſaid to proceed from the Wars and divided condition of Chriſtendom. Amongſt other things, the King in his Letter to the Archbiſhop takes notice, that the Prayers being formerly in an unknown Tongue, made the People negligent in coming to Church: The Archbiſhop's Mandate is dated on the 8th of June (f). The King at his going off, had put the Adminiſtration in the Queen's Hands. This as the Lord Herbert thinks was done for a check upon the Roman Catholicks; this Princeſs being ſuppoſed of a different Perſuaſion. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Earl of Hertford, afterwards Duke of Somerſet; the Lord Chancellour Wriotheſley, Thirleby Biſhop of Weſtminſter, Secretary Petre, and the Lord Parre of Horton, were commiſſionated to aſſiſt the Queen, and direct her Councils (g). About the middle of September, the Emperor and the French King concluded a Peace at Creſpie. And the King of England after a ſucceſsful Campaign return'd home.

A Litany in Engliſh.

(f) Regiſter Tonſal, fol. 40.

(g) Ld. Herbert, p. 511.

October 1.

September 13.

The Death of Lee, Archbiſhop of York.

(h) Godwin, de Preſul. Angl.

This Year Edward Lee, Archbiſhop of York, departed this Life. He ſate Thirteen Years, and ſerv'd the King in ſeveral Embaſſies: His Epitaph ſpeaks very much to his Advantage, with reſpect to Learning, Conduct, and Regularity; he is likewiſe ſaid to have been acceptable to all ſorts of Perſons, and remarkably kind to the Poor (h). He was ſucceeded by Robert Holdgate, a Monk of the Order of Sempringham, and tranſlated thither from Landaff: At his Conſecration, he took the following Oath, for renouncing the Pope. “ I Robert, Archbiſhop of York Elect; having now the Veil of Darkneſs of the uſurp'd Power, Authority, and Juriſdiction of the See and Biſhop of Rome, clearly taken away from mine Eyes; do utterly teſtify and declare in my Conſcience, that neither the See, nor the Biſhop of Rome, nor any foreign Potentate, hath or ought to have any Juriſdiction, Power or Authority within this Realm; neither by God's Law, or by any juſt Law or Means. And tho' by Sufferance and Abuſions in times paſt, they aforeſaid have

The Oaths for renouncing the Pope.

“ uſurp'd, and vindicated a feign'd and unlawful Power and Juriſdiction within this Realm; which hath been ſupported 'till within theſe few Years paſt.

“ Therefore becauſe it might be deem'd and thought thereby, that I took or take it for juſt and good; I therefore do now clearly and frankly renounce, forſake, refute and relinquiſh that pretended Authority, Power and Juriſdiction, both of the See and Biſhop of Rome, and all other foreign Powers------and that I ſhall bear Faith, Truth, and true Allegiance, to the King's Majeſty, and to his Heirs and Succeſſors, declared, or hereafter to be declar'd, by Authority of the Act made in the Seſſion of the Parliament, holden at Weſtminſter on the 14th Day of January, in the Thirty Fifth Year, and in the Act made in the twenty eight Year of the King's Majeſty's Reign -------- So help me God, all-Saints, and the Holy Evangeliſts (i).

(i) Regiſt. Cranmer fol. 309.
Id. fol. 315. 328.

Kitchen, Biſhop of Landaff ſwore the ſame Oath at his Conſecration, and ſo did Farras of St. David's in the next Reign.

Nicholas Heath, and Bonner upon their Promotion to their reſpective Sees of Rocheſter and London, took an Oath to the ſame purpoſe, but with ſome remarkable diſtinction. It runs thus.

An Oath ſomewhat implicit.

“ Ye ſhall Swear, that ye ſhall never conſent nor agree that the Biſhop of Rome, ſhall Practice, Exerciſe, or have any manner of Authority, Juriſdiction, or Power within this Realm of England, or any other the King's Dominions: But that ye ſhall reſiſt the ſame at all times, to the utmoſt of your Powers. And that from henceforth ye ſhall accept, repute, and take the King's Majeſty to be the only ſupream Head in Earth of the Church of England. And that to the Cunning, Wit, and uttermoſt of your Powers, without Guile, Fraud, or other undue Means; ye ſhall obſerve, keep, maintain and defend, the whole Effects, and Contents, of all and ſingular Acts and Statutes, made and to be made within this Realm; in Derogation, Extirpation, and Extinguiſhment of the Biſhop of Rome, and his Authority, and all other Acts and Statutes, made and to be made in Reformation; and Corroboration of the King's Power, as ſupream Head in Earth of the Church of England, &c. (k)

(k) Regiſt. Cranmer, fol. 259.

To proceed; The King ſtanding upon ill Terms with France and Scotland, and having exhauſted himſelf with the late Expeditions, was ſolicitous about furniſhing the Exchequer for the Publick Service. For this purpoſe the demand of a Benevolence was thought moſt expedient. The Londoners were tryed firſt, and here two of the Aldermen, Richard Read, and William Roach, were ſomewhat heavy with complying with the King's occaſions. To take off the ill Impreſſion of this Precedent, Read an Old Man, and unpractic'd in the Military Profeſſion, was forc'd to ſerve in the Field againſt the Scots; where he was taken Priſoner, and put to a high Ranſom. As for Roach, he was inform'd againſt for miſbehaving himſelf before the Privy-Council, committed to Priſon, where he lay ſeveral Months, and was at laſt diſcharg'd with great Difficulty; and as ſome ſay, oblig'd to part with a Sum of Money for his Liberty (l).

(l) Godwin, Annal.

The French Miſcarry in their Attempt upon the Engliſh Coaſt.

This Summer the French to revenge the Diſgrace of the laſt Campaign, and recover Bouloign, Block'd up that Town, prepar'd a great Fleet, and threatned England with a Deſcent: But theſe Preparations were diſappointed, and ſignified little. And as the Engliſh ſtood upon the Defenſive in the South, ſo they made an Offenſive War in the North of the Iſland. The Forces commanded by Ralph Lord Evers, and Sir Brion Laiton, burnt Jedborough and Kelſow, and harraſs'd the Neighboring Country: And finding the Governour retired with his Forces, they march'd farther into the Country, and continued their Depredations, 'till they fell into an Ambuſcade, and were defeated at Ancram.

Id.
Ld. Herbert.

This Year the King made ſome farther advances in the Reformation, as appears by his Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; it relates to ſeveral ſuperſtitious and unwarrantable Cuſtoms, touching Vigils, and creeping to the Croſs: I ſhall give it the Reader in the King's Words (m).

(m) Paper Office.

The King's Letter to Archbiſhop Cranmer, to forbid creeping to the Croſs, &c.

“ Foraſmuch as you, as well in your own Name, and in the Name of the Biſhops of Worceſter, and Chicheſter, and other our Chaplains and learned Men, whom we appointed with you to peruſe certain Books of Service, which we deliver'd unto you; mov'd us that the Vigil, and Ringing of Bells all the Night long upon All-hallow Day at Night, and the covering of Images in the Churches in the time of Lent; with the lifting up of the Veil that covereth the Croſs upon Palm-Sunday, with the kneeling to the Croſs the ſame time, might be aboliſh'd and put away for the Superſtition, and other Enormities and Abuſes of the ſame. Firſt, Foraſmuch as all the Vigils of our Lady, and the Apoſtles, and all other Vigils, which in the beginning of the Church were godly uſed; yet for the manifold Superſtition and Abuſes which afterwards did grow by Means of the ſame, they be many Years paſt taken away, throughout all Chriſtendom; and there remaineth nothing but the name of Vigil in the Calendar; the thing clearly aboliſh'd and put away, ſaving only upon All-hollow Day at Night, upon which Night is kept Vigil; Watching and Ringing of Bells all Night long. Foraſmuch as that Vigil is abuſed, as other Vigils were; our Pleaſure is as you require, that the ſaid Vigil ſhall be aboliſh'd as the other be, and that there ſhall be no watching or ringing but as be commonly uſed upon other Holy-Days at Night. We be contented and pleaſed alſo, that the Images in the Churches ſhall not be cover'd as hath been accuſtomed in times paſt, nor no Veil upon the Croſs, nor kneeling thereto upon Palm-Sunday, nor any other time. And foraſmuch as you make no mention of creeping to the Croſs, which is a greater abuſe than any other (for there you ſay, Crucem tuam adoramus Domine, and the Ordinal ſaith, procedant Clerici ad Crucem adorandam nudis Pedibus, and after followeth in the ſame Ordinal, ponatur Crux ante aliquod Altare, ubi a populo adoretur: Which by your own Book, called a Neceſſary Doctrine, is againſt the Second Commandment. Therefore our Pleaſure is, that the ſaid creeping to the Croſs ſhall likewiſe ceaſe from henceforth and be aboliſh'd, with other the abuſes before rehears'd: And this we will and ſtraitly command you to ſignify to all the Prelates and Biſhops of your Province of Canterbury; charging them in our Name to ſee the

A. D. 1545.

“ the ſame executed, every one in his Dioceſs accordingly.

To make this Order practicable, and rightly underſtood by the People, the Archbiſhop ſuggeſted what he thought neceſſary upon this Occaſion. I ſhall give the Reader part of his Letter to the King (n).

The Archbiſhop's Anſwer. Jan. 24. 1545.

“ Never the leſſe in myn Opinion, when ſuch Things be alter'd or taken away, there would be ſet forth ſome Doctrine there with which ſhould declare the Cauſe of the Aboliſhings or Alterations, for to ſatisfy the Conſciences of your People: For if the honouring of the Croſſe, as Creeping and Kneeling thereto, be taken away, it ſhall ſeem to many that be ignorant, that the Honour of Chriſt is taken away, unleſs ſome good Teaching be ſet forth withal to inſtruct 'em ſufficiently therein; which if your Majeſty command the Biſhops of Worceſter and Chicheſter, with other your Grace's other Chaplains to make, the People ſhall obey your Majeſty's Commandment willingly, giving Thanks to your Majeſty if they know the Truth, which elſe they would obey with Murmurations and Grudgings. And it ſhall be a Satiſfaction to all other Nations, when they ſhall ſee your Majeſty do nothing but by the Authority of God's Word, and to the ſetting forth of God's Honour, and not the diminiſhing thereof. And thus, &c.

The Archbiſhop added a Poſtſcript to his Letter, in which he acquaints the King, “ how the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, were forc'd, upon the Alienation of their Lands. That all this Ravage was made under Colour of his Highneſs's Commands; but that he was ſure other Men, and not his Majeſty, had gotten their beſt Lands. He begs therefore, that when his Majeſty ſhall pleaſe to take ſome of their Eſtates, they may have a Letter from his Highneſs to be aſſur'd the Motion comes from their Sovereign: That without ſuch Notice, the Dean and Chapter may be ſworn not to make any Alienation. For as the Caſe ſtands now, every Body that hath a Mind to their Lands, moves firſt, they may be convey'd to your Majeſty, not that thoſe Eſtates ſhould be lodg'd in the Crown, but granted away from your Grace's Cathedral to themſelves.

This Letter, amongſt other Proofs, ſhews the Diſpoſition of too many People, what Scrambling there was for the Church Eſtates, and how much the Loaves of the Reformation were valued above the Doctrine *.

He draws an Extract out of the Canon-Law.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter being ſent on an Embaſſy to the Emperor, Archbiſhop Cranmer ſeizes the Opportunity, and endeavours to go forward with the Reformation. He was ſenſible the Canon-Law, which governed the Spiritual-Courts, wanted a Review. The Supremacy of the Roman See, the Pope's Power to abſolve Subjects from their Allegiance, the Infallibility of his Decrees, his Superiority over General Councils, and ſeveral other indefenſible Pretenſions were maintain'd, and extravagantly overflouriſh'd in Gratian's Decretum, and other Collections of that kind. And of this Cranmer had taken ſome Pains to inform himſelf, and extracted ſeveral Paſſages out of the Canon-Law (o).

A Draught of the Book, entitled, Reformatio Legum Eccleſiaſticarum.

To ripen the Matter, and bring the Deſign to Execution, the Archbiſhop prevailed with the King to paſs the Act, by which his Majeſty was impower'd to name two and thirty Perſons to examine the Canons, and give them what new Form they thought fit. The Act paſs'd, as hath already been obſerv'd, the Perſons were nominated, the Scheme drawn out, and the Buſineſs brought to a Concluſion. Cranmer waited on the King at Hampton-Court, acquainted him, the Draught was finiſh'd, and wanted only his Highneſs his Authority to make it Law. By the way, the Conduct of this Affair, and the Nomination of the Perſons, were moſtly referr'd to Cranmer. In ſhort, an Inſtrument in the Form of Letters Patent, was drawn up for the King to ſign. But it ſeems, his Highneſs receiv'd Advice from the Biſhop of Wincheſter, that in caſe the King proceeded to any Innovation of this kind, the League now concerting with the Emperor would miſcarry. And thus 'tis probable, for Reaſons of State, the King refuſed the Signing the Inſtrument: However, that the Reader may be acquainted with the Contents, I ſhall inſert it in the Records (p).

The King's Letters-Patent to paſs it into Law.

And to mention a Word or two of it here, the Inſtrument ſets forth, “ That the Supremacy due to him and his Anceſtors, and uſurp'd for ſeveral Ages by the Biſhop of Rome, had been recognized by all the States of the Realm: That it was one Branch of the Office of a Prince, to ſuperintend Religion, to maintain the Catholick Faith, and promote the Honour of God Almighty: That he had been very ſollicitous to diſcharge this part of his Duty, and to remove thoſe Cuſtoms which were unſerviceable to the Chriſtian Church: That ſince the Biſhop of Rome, had adulterated the ancient Belief, embroil'd the Publick, and made an Invaſion upon the Royal Prerogative, he thought it neceſſary to annul his Regulations, and diſcharge all his Laws and Conſtitutions; and that he thought this a ſerviceable Expedient to prevent the Revival of his Authority. And that the Engliſh Church might not ſuffer for want of Rules and ſtated Meaſures for Diſcipline and Government, he had furniſhed them with this Book in the room of the Canon-Law, and requires all his Subjects both in Schools, Colleges, and Spiritual Courts, to act purſuant to the Orders preſcrib'd in it.

This Inſtrument not ſigned.

The mentioning of Abbots in the Letters Patent, is no Mark of Forgery, for notwithſtanding the Monaſteries were diſſolv'd, the Biſhop of Norwich, not to mention any others, had the Stile of Abbot. This Matter was drop'd till the next Reign, when 'twas reviv'd at the Archbiſhop's Suggeſtion, and till that Time, I ſhall mention it no farther.

About this Time, ſeveral Perſons were proſecuted in Scotland, for reading the New Teſtament in Engliſh. Cardinal Beaton, who was then at the Head both of Church and State, ſeems to have been a Perſon of a rugged Diſpoſition, and would make no Allowance for Latitude of Perſuaſion. This Prelate being informed that Mr. George Wiſhart had preach'd againſt the received Doctrines, endeavoured to apprehend him. This Wiſhart was a Gentleman of the Houſe of Pittarrow in Mernis. Archbiſhop Spotſwood gives him the Character of a Perſon of Learning, Elocution, and exemplary Life. He had ſtudied ſome time in the Univerſity of Cambridge, and returned home with a Deſign to propagate his Improvement: He preach'd publickly againſt ſome Popiſh Doctrines at Dundee and Montroſs, made Proſelytes and (n) Paper-Office.

---

* Bp. Burnet, pt. 2. Records, p. 237.

(o) Bp. Burnet, p Records, 257.

(p) See Records, Numb. 50. Ld. Herbet, p. 529.

and drew a great Audience after him. Being diſcouraged at Dundee by one of the principal Burghers, he quitted the Place, and preſag'd the Misfortune of the Inhabitants: From hence he went to Glaſcow, where he was in danger of being ſeiz'd by the Archbiſhop, but was protected by Alexander Earl of Glencarn, who offer'd him the Cathedral Pulpit, but Wiſhart declin'd putting ſuch a Hardſhip upon the Archbiſhop, and choſe rather to preach at the Market-Croſs. Hearing the Town of Dundee was afflicted with a great Mortality, he returned thither, preach'd to the Occaſion, and endeavour'd to ſupport them under the Calamity.

Wiſhart's Preaching and Trial.

When the Plague went off, he prepar'd for his Journey to Edinborough. Here he had promis'd to meet ſome Gentlemen of the Weſt, and offer'd the Clergy a Conference. He preach'd in his Way at Leith and Haddington, and from thence went to Ormeſton, where he was apprehended at the Laird's Houſe: The Governour ſent a Party of Horſe to ſeize him. The Laird at firſt refus'd to deliver him, hoping by gaining Time, he might make his Eſcape. But upon Earl Bothwell's giving his Promiſe, his Life ſhould be ſafe, and that it ſhould not be in the Cardinal's Power to do him any Injury; Wiſhart deſir'd the Laird to open the Gate, upon which the Earl renew'd his Parole of Honour for his Security. But at the Queen-Mother's and the Cardinal's Inſtance, this Lord parted with him: He was firſt convey'd to the Caſtle of Edinborough, and afterwards to St. Andrew's (q).

He was now in the Cardinal's Hands, who preſs'd for his Trial, and ſummon'd the Biſhops to meet him at St. Andrews. The Archbiſhop of Glaſcow adviſ'd an Application to the Governour, to commiſſionate ſome Laymen of Quality, to ſit with them upon the Bench, and countenance the Proceſs. The Governour refus'd the Motion, and adviſ'd the delaying the Trial till he came thither, telling the Cardinal withal, that in caſe he precipitated Matters, and proceeded to Extremity, Wiſhart's Blood ſhould be laid to his Charge. The Cardinal foreſeeing dilatory Methods were likely to work the Priſoner's Eſcape, reply'd with ſome Warmth, that the Reaſon of his writing to the Governour, was not for want of his Authority, but only that he was willing to have the States Concurrence with the Diſcipline of the Church: But ſince that was refus'd, he ſhould act as he thought convenient.

Upon this, Wiſhart was ſerv'd with a Citation to appear the next Day, and Anſwer to the Charge of Sedition and Hereſie. Wiſhart being their Priſoner, took this Form for a Jeſt, ſince it was in their Power to bring him before them when they pleaſ'd.

The next Day the Cardinal and Prelates met in the Abbey-Church, where the Priſoner was brought by the Captain of the Caſtle. John Windram, the Sub-prior, a Man of Learning, and inclin'd to the Reformation, was order'd to preach. He preach'd upon the Thirteenth of St. Matthew, concerning the Sower. He interpreted the ill Seed to Hereſie, which he defin'd an erroneous Opinion directly repugnant to the Word of God, and pertinaciouſly defended. From hence proceeding to mention ſome things which gave Riſe to Hereſie, he ſaid, the Ignorance and Negligence of thoſe who had the Cure of Souls, was the principal Cauſe. And after laying down ſome Rules for the Diſcovery of Hereſie, he ſaid, that as the Touchſtone was made uſe of, for diſtinguiſhing Gold from counterfeit Metal, ſo the Word of God, was the proper Teſt for the Trial of Hereſie. He concluded his Diſcourſe, with ſaying, that Hereticks, might lawfully be put to Death by the Magiſtrate.

After Sermon, the Articles againſt Wiſhart were read. Before he return'd any Anſwer, he deſired he might be permitted the repeating the Doctrine he had taught ſince he came into Scotland. And here he told them he advanc'd nothing but what was comprehended within the Compaſs of the Decalogue, the Apoſtles Creed, and the Lord's-Prayer. From hence he went on to repreſent the manner of his Preaching; but this being thought foreign to the Buſineſs, he was treated with ill Language, and order'd to anſwer directly to the Charge. The Articles are Eighteen, and too long to tranſcribe (r). In the ninth Article, he is charg'd with affirming, that every Layman is a Prieſt. This Opinion he is ſo unhappy as to defend, and miſconſtrues the Text in the Revelations, and St. Peter's firſt Epiſtle, where Chriſtians are called a royal Prieſthood, and our Saviour is ſaid to have made us Kings and Prieſts (s).

The tenth Article objects his denying the Liberty of the Will. To this his Anſwer, tho' not altogether erroneous, is crude, to ſpeak ſoftly, and not well expreſs'd.

He is not orthodox throughout.

In the eleventh Article, he is accuſed with maintaining, that it is as lawful to eat Fleſh on Friday as on Sunday. Here he confeſſes the Charge, and miſ-interprets St. Paul (t), to ſupport his Opinion. As to the other Articles, he either denied them, or made good his Tenents. But foreſeeing the Iſſue, he offer'd to appeal from the Court to more indifferent Judges. He deſir'd to be try'd by the holy Scriptures, and that ſome of the Temporalty might ſit upon the Bench, becauſe, ſays he, I am my Lord Governour's Priſoner. This Appeal being look'd on as altogether irregular and unprecedented, he was pronounc'd a Heretick, and had Judgment to be burnt the next Day (u).

Next Morning the Biſhops ſent two Friers to acquaint him he muſt die, and to aſk him, if he was diſpos'd for Confeſſion. He told them, he had no Buſineſs with Friers: But if they were inclin'd to gratify him, he deſir'd he might ſpeak with the learned Perſon that preached the Day before. This being granted, the Sub-prior came, and diſcours'd with him a good while. And at laſt, he aſk'd Wiſhart, if he would receive the holy Euchariſt; he anſwer'd, moſt willingly, provided he might have it adminiſter'd under both kinds, purſuant to our Saviour's Inſtitution. Upon this the Subprior went to the Biſhops, ſpoke favourably of the Priſoner, and deſir'd to know if his Requeſt might be granted. The Cardinal demurr'd to the Queſtion: And after having debated the Matter with the reſt of the Biſhops, anſwer'd in all their Names, that 'twas not reaſonable an obſtinate Heretick, judicially condemn'd, ſhould partake of any ſpiritual Benefit. It is not ſaid what Wiſhart reply'd, when the Meſſage was brought of his being deny'd the Sacrament: But the Captain of the Caſtle going then to Breakfaſt, aſk'd the Priſoner to eat with him. He accepted the Civility, and deſir'd the Captain, with great Solemnity of Expreſſion, to be ſilent a little till he had made a ſhort Exhortation, and bleſs'd the Bread: He diſcours'd about half an Hour upon our Saviour's Paſſion, and the Inſtitution of the Lord's-Supper, exhorting the Company

He conſecrates the Holy Euchariſt.

(q) Spotſwood.

(r) Fox, vol. 2. p. 617.

(s) Revelations. 1 Pet. 2.

(t) 1 Tim. 4. 3, 4.

(u) Spotſwood, p. 80.

pany to live anſwerably to the Chriſtian Religion. Then giving Thanks, he broke the Bread and gave every one a Piece: And having taſted the Wine, he put the Cup into their Hands, exhorting them to a thankful Remembrance of our Saviour's Death, in this his Communion with them. Then deſiring the Prayers of the Company, he concluded with another Thankſgiving, and retir'd to his Chamber.

And ſuffers with Reſolution.

He was carry'd to the Place of Execution with a Guard, and had Bags of Gunpowder hung about him. When he came to the Stake, he deſir'd the People not to be diſcourag'd from hearing God's Word, by his Sufferings. It ſeems he had been charg'd with the Arabian Hereſie; and that the Soul ſlept till the Day of Judgment. This Heterodoxy, he ſaid, was a Calumny upon him, and that he was aſſured his Soul ſhould be immediately with his Saviour. In ſhort, he ſuffer'd with great Reſignation and Fortitude. And when the Captain of the Caſtle ſpoke friendly to him, and bid him recommend himſelf to God, he replied in theſe Words: This Flame has ſcorched my Body, yet hath it not daunted my Spirit: But he (meaning the Cardinal) who from yonder high place, beholds us with ſuch Pride, ſhall within few Days, lie in the ſame as ignominiouſly, as now he is ſeen proudly to reſt himſelf.

Id. p. 82.

Remarks on ſome part of his Behaviour.

To ſay ſomething of this Gentleman by way of Character: He appears to have been a Perſon of an exemplary Life: And that nothing but Impulſe of Conſcience, Regard for Truth, and Charity to his Country-men, put him upon Preaching, and made him claſh with ſome of the eſtabliſh'd Opinions. His Oppoſition to the Clergy, does not ſeem to have been govern'd by ſecular Views. His Deſign, as far as may be gueſs'd by his Practice, was to recover the People from Error, and put them in a ſafer way to eternal Happineſs. Notwithſtanding this, he was not without a Mixture of Miſtake and Diſadvantage: For not to mention his Preaching without a canonical Authority, his conſecrating the Euchariſt, and exerciſing the moſt ſolemn part of the ſacerdotal Function, looks wholly indefenſible. He is charg'd with uſurping the Prieſts Office without Authority: He does not deny the Fact, but excuſeth himſelf by an erroneous Opinion, by maintaining, that all Chriſtians are Prieſts, and that by conſequence there is no diſtinction between Laity and Clergy. This Principle is both repugnant to holy Scripture, and deſtructive of all ſpiritual Society. For as the State can't ſubſiſt, if every Man ſhould meddle with the Government, and pretend a right to make himſelf a Magiſtrate; ſo neither can the Church go on where the Privileges of the Hierarchy are invaded and made common: The Biſhops and Prieſts are ſpiritual Magiſtrates, and unleſs their Privileges are guarded, and their Powers unencroach'd on, the Body will be diſſolv'd of courſe, and every thing fall into Confuſion: For without Diſtinction between the Governours and Governed, the Being of any Society is impracticable. Farther, Wiſhart pretended to the Gift of Prophecy, but work'd no Miracles to prove his Claim, either to that Diſtinction, or the Office of the Prieſthood. Beſides, his predicting the Cardinal's Death at his Execution, and giving hard Language, is not altogether intelligible: And whether this Prediction did not occaſion the Cardinal's Murder, may bear a Queſtion. Now how far Purity of Intention, the Spirit of Martyrdom, and reſigning to Death and Torture for Conſcience ſake, which ſeems to have been Wiſhart's Caſe: How far this may attone for humane Frailties, and breaking thro' the Diſcipline of the Church, I ſhall not take upon me to determine; but from the Mercies of God, we have Reaſon to hope the beſt. But then no Fervency of Devotion, no Advantage of Character, ought to juſtifie an Error, or ſet up Miſcarriage for a Precedent. On the other ſide, the proſecuting this Perſon to the Stake, was an Inſtance of an exceſſive and unwarrantable Rigour, and was look'd on as a Barbarity, even in a heathen Magiſtracy: And how theſe ſanguinary Methods were diſliked by the ancient Church, I have ſhewn in the firſt part of this Work (w).

Heb. 5. 4.

To come back to England: The laſt Year, as hath been obſerv'd, the King order'd the Tranſlating the Litany into Engliſh: He had ſince, it ſeems, given ſome farther Inſtructions to Cranmer about that Matter, as appears by the Archbiſhop's Letter, which runs thus:

Cranmer's Tranſlation of part of the Liturgy for a Proceſſion.

> “ It may pleaſe your Majeſty to be advertiz'd, that according unto your Highneſs's Commandment ſent unto me by your Grace's Secretary Mr. Paget, I have tranſlated into the Engliſh Tongue, ſo well as I could, in ſo ſhort a time, certain Proceſſions to be uſed upon Feſtival Days; if after due Correction and Amendment of the ſame, your Highneſs ſhall think it ſo convenient. In which Tranſlation, foraſmuch as many of the Proceſſions in the Latin, were but barren, (as me ſeem'd) and little fruitful, I was conſtrain'd to uſe more than the Liberty of a Tranſlator: For in ſome Proceſſions, I have alter'd divers Words, in ſome I have added part, in ſome taken part away: Some I have left out whole, either for becauſe the Matter appear'd to me to be little to purpoſe, or becauſe the Days be not with us Feſtival Days. And ſome Proceſſions I have added whole, becauſe I thought I had better Matter for this Purpoſe, than was the Proceſſion in Latin. The Judgment whereof I refer wholly to your Majeſty, and after your Highneſs has corrected it, if your Grace commands ſome devout and ſolemn Note to be made thereunto (as is to the Proceſſion which your Majeſty has already ſet forth in Engliſh) I truſt it will much excitate and ſtir the Hearts of all Men to Devotion and Godlineſs. But in my Opinion, the Song that ſhall be made thereunto, would not be full of Notes, but as near as may be, for every Syllable a Note, ſo that it may be ſung diſtinctly and devoutly, as be in the Mattins, and Even-Song, Venite. The Hymns Te Deum, Benedictus, Magnificat, Nunc Dimittis, and all the Pſalms and Verſicles: And in the Maſs, Gloria in Eccelſis, Gloria Patri, the Credo, the Perfice, the Pater Noſter, and ſome of the Sanctus and Agnus. As concerning the Salve Feſta Dies, the Latin Note, as I think, is ſober and diſtinct enough. Wherefore I have travel'd to make the Verſes in Engliſh, and have put the Latin Note unto the ſame. Nevertheleſs, thoſe that be cunning in Singing, can make a much more ſolemn Note thereto. I made them only for a Proof, to ſee how Engliſh would do in a Song. But becauſe my Engliſh Verſes want the Grace and Faculty which I could wiſh they had, your Majeſty may cauſe ſome other to do them again, that can do the ſame in more pleaſant Engliſh and Phraſe. As for the Sentence, I ſuppoſe that will

The Sentence is the Meaning in the Archbiſhop's Language.

(w) *Church Hiſt. p.*617, 356.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

" ſerve well enough. Thus Almighty God preſerve your Majeſty in long and proſperous " Health and Felicity (x).

(x) Paper-Office.

Your Grace's

Moſt bounden Chaplain and Beadeſman,

From Bechesburn,
October 7, 1545.

Tho. Cant.

Chantries, Colleges, &c. granted to the King.

In November, this Year the King's laſt Parliament ſate: The Buſineſs of calling the Lords and Commons together, was, the raiſing of Money. The Lord Herbert thinks, the King's Neceſſities were very preſſing, otherwiſe they would not have been ſupplied by ſo extraordinary an Expedient: For now Colleges, Free Chapels, Chantries, Hoſpitals, Fraternities, Guilds, and the Maintenance for ſtipendiary Prieſts, with all their Mannors and other Eſtates, were ſacrific'd to the Crown, and diſſolv'd. Thus theſe Foundations, which were made for the Benefit of Learning, for the Relief of the Poor, and the Service of thoſe who were deceas'd, which were ſtrengthened with the Privilege of Corporations, and intended for Perpetuity, loſt the Laſtingneſs of their Settlement, and lay all at the King's Mercy. The great Expence of the Wars with France and Scotland, were alledg'd as Motives to this Bill. The Miſmanagement of the Governours of the Colleges, &c. was likewiſe inſiſted on: The Act ſets forth, that the Revenues of the Colleges, Hoſpitals, Chantries, &c. were miſemploy'd, and that the giving them to the Crown, was the way to make them ſerviceable to the Uſes for which they were intended. Theſe Endowments being thus put into the King's Hands, were to be in the Order and Survey of the Court of Augmentation (y).

(y) 37 H. 8. c. 4.

Now without great Submiſſion to the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature, ſome People would almoſt be at a Loſs upon this Occaſion: For when Purgatory, tho' ſomewhat refin'd, was the national Belief, as it was all the Time of King Henry the Eighth: When Prayer for the Dead was reckoned a ſignificant Service: When this Prince left Money in his Will to pray for his Soul: When this was the general Perſuaſion, 'tis ſomewhat ſurprizing, that Chantry-Lands ſhould be taken away. The Chantry-Lands, I ſay, which were given for the Benefit of the Dead, and ſettled, as it were, upon the other World. But ſome People were reſolv'd to venture the Condition of their Anceſtours, and leave them to ſhift as well as they could: And as Popes have often taken Money to let Souls out of Purgatory, ſo the King took Land, one would almoſt think, to keep them in.

That this Prince believ'd Purgatory; that is, that departed Souls were capable of receiving Benefit from the Prayers and Charities of the Living, appears farther from his Anſwer to Biſhop Latimer upon this Argument.

Eccleſ. 11. 3.

The Biſhop, amongſt other Things, urg'd this Text, In the Place where the Tree falls, there ſhall it be. To this the King reply'd in theſe Words.

" This Text in it ſelf, ſpeaking but of a Stick, " doth not deny Purgatory, nor the Example " of a dead Stick can well, without great forcing, be attributed to a Soul repentant, not " yet having his full Judgment. And if you " will turn it to a lively Stick, then it ſeemeth " me, that it will make much againſt your purpoſe: For a lively Stick, may chance with falling, to grow, tho' not ſuddenly, and ſo come " to Perfection of its Fruit. So may the Soul " of Man (by this Example) departing hence " to Purgatory in right Faith, grow there towards his Perfection, abiding the Day of Judgment.

Hen. VIII. K.

Upon the Biſhop's urging the Text, Beati quorum, Bleſſed is he whoſe Unrighteouſneſs is forgiven, and whoſe Sin is cover'd *. To this the King anſwers with ſomewhat of Emotion and Surprize. " Jeſus! How do you deſcant on this Pſalm, " and alſo on St. Auſtin! You would make Folke " believe, that this was meant againſt Purgatory, when the very Text declares nothing but " the Beatitude and Happineſs of them that have " their Sins hid and forgiven. Herein do you " ſhew your carnal Wit, which in Preaching " you diſpraiſe ſo much †.

* Pſal. 32.

† Biblioth. Cotton. Cleop. 5. fol. 132.

37 H. 8. c. 12.

This Parliament, there was an Act for puniſhing thoſe who took above Ten in the Hundred Intereſt for Money lent. There was likewiſe an Act for ſettling the Tithes in London, in proportion to the Rent of the Houſes.

Seventy Mannors alienated from the Archbiſhop of York.

By another Act, Threeſcore and Ten Mannors are aſſur'd to the Crown belonging to the Archbiſhoprick of York. The Act mentions Archbiſhop Holgate had ſold and convey'd all theſe Mannors to the King the Year before. It is ſaid Holgate had ſeveral Lands, Tenements, and other Hereditaments, in exchange but not ſo much as one Mannor is mentioned. 'Tis obſerv'd, the Church in this Reign, the next, and Queen Elizabeth's, made generally ill Bargains with the Crown, and barter'd at Glaucus his Diſadvantage. But then as theſe Princes bought very cheap of the Prelates, they ſold with the ſame Frankneſs to their Favourites.

37 H. 8. c. 16. And ſeveral from the Sees of Canterbury and London.

By this Statute it appears, Cranmer had convey'd about a dozen Mannors and Parks to the Crown, which Sales are now confirm'd. " Bonner " Biſhop of London, had likewiſe ſold, given, and " granted to the King, the Mannors of Chelmsford and Graundon, with the Park of Graundon, " with all their Appurtenances. This Mannor " and Park of Graundon, the King had granted " to Sir William Peters. The King's Title and " Sir William's, are ſecur'd by this Statute. Farther; Doctors of Civil Law, whether married or " unmarried, are enabled to exerciſe all manner " of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and all Cenſures " and Coercion appertaining, or any way belonging to the ſame. This Statute ſets forth, that Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Archdeacons, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, have no manner of Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical, but by, under, and from his Royal Majeſty. And that his Majeſty is the only undoubted Supreme Head of the Church of England and of Ireland, to whom by holy Scripture, all Authority and Power is wholly given, to hear and determine all manner of Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, and to correct Vice and Sin whatſoever, and to all ſuch Perſons as his Majeſty ſhall appoint thereunto.

The King's Eccleſiaſtical Authority mentioned in comprehenſive Terms.

37 H. 8. c. 17.

" Laſtly, A Bill paſſed for the Union of two " Churches not above a Mile diſtant, provided the " yearly Value did not exceed Six Pounds in the " King's Books. But here there is a Proviſo, that no Union or Conſolidation ſhould be made in any City or Town Corporate, without the Conſent of the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Commonalty (z).

(z) 37 H. 8. c. 21.

2 At

Dec. 24. A. D. 1545.

At the Prorogation of the Parliament, the Speaker, of the Houſe of Commons made a Speech to the King, to which the King return'd an Anſwer: Now this being his laſt Speech and his laſt Parliament, and over and above remarkable for the Matter, I ſhall give the Reader Part of the Subſtance of it.

The King's laſt Speech to his Parliament.

“ The King commends the Speaker for his Elocution, and for the Panegyrick he had run upon his Highneſs; letting him know, that he did not apply thoſe good Qualities to himſelf, but look'd on them only as Suggeſtions to Endeavour and Improvement. From hence his Highneſs proceeds to acquaint the Parliament how kindly he took the Confidence they treated him with, and the Truſt they repos'd in him, by granting him the Chauntries, &c. and referring all thoſe Edowments to his Diſpoſal. Here he promiſes to ſpend the Revenues according to the Deſign of the Settlement, and that neither Learning, the Church, nor the Poor, ſhould receive any Damage. And that unleſs he manag'd in this manner, ſhe ſhould no ways anſwer the Expectations of the Publick, nor the Character of a Chriſtian Prince (a).

Here was a ſolemn Engagement, ſays Biſhop Godwin, Cæterum promiſſorum fidem nondum exolutam videmus. The Event did not come up to the Promiſe (b).

To return to the King's Speech: “ He lets them know the Treaſure they had ſupplied him with, ſhould always be ready for the Defence of the Kingdom, and his Perſon ventured, when Occaſion requir'd. And after having return'd them Thanks for giving ſuch Proofs of their Affection to his Service, he recommends Friendſhip and good Correſpondence with each other. He puts them in Mind how ſenſible he is of the Miſunderſtandings and Animoſities amongſt them. And that there is ſcarcely any ſuch thing as good Humour and general Kindneſs to be met with. St. Paul tells us, Charity is kind; Charity envies not; Charity vaunts not it ſelf, is not puffed up; and ſo on. “ But what Signs of Charity, ſays the King, are theſe, when one calls another Heretick and Anabaptiſt, and the other returns the Language of Papiſt and Hypocrite? This want of a benevolent Diſpoſition will hinder us from acting with that Union and Heartineſs which is requir'd. The Occaſion of theſe Animoſities is partly to be charg'd upon you who are the Spiritual Guides, and Fathers of the Church: For if I know a Man who lives in Adultery, I muſt conclude him a Libertine and a Debauchee. If I ſee a Man brag of any Advantage, I cannot help thinking him tinctur'd with Pride. I am every Day inform'd, that you of the Clergy are declaiming againſt each other in the Pulpit: And here your Charity and Diſcretion is quite loſt in Vehemence and Satyr: Some are too ſtiff in their old Mumpſimus, and others too buſie and curious in their new Sumpſimus. Thus the Pulpits are, as it were, Batteries againſt each other, the Noiſe is hoſtile and ruinous, and few Preachers are qualified with that benign Temper expected from their Character. Can I ſuppoſe you govern'd by Principles of Charity, while you manage thus? That's impoſſible; Alas! How can we expect the poor People ſhould live friendly with their Neighbours, when they have ſuch unhappy Precedents of Diſcord and Diſſention in thoſe that teach them? They expect Light from your Inſtruction, and you throw nothing out but Smoke and Darkneſs. I deſire this Miſconduct may be rectified, and that both in Precept and Example you may anſwer to your Office, otherwiſe I ſhall be oblig'd to correct this Misbehaviour, and put an End to theſe Diviſions in a more unacceptable way. Which if I ſhould neglect to do, I ſhould fail in the Diſcharge of my Commiſſion, and prove falſe to that Truſt which God has pleas'd to put in my Hands.

1 Cor. 13.

“ And tho' the Spiritualty are in ſome Fault for breaking into Parties, and living upon ill Terms with thoſe of their own Buſineſs, yet you of the Temporalty don't ſtand clear of Envy and ill Nature: For you rail on the Biſhops, defame and miſreport the Prieſts, and treat the Preacher with Contumely and ill Language. Now is not all this a Breach of good Behaviour, a Contradiction to Decency, and a Treſpaſs upon Order and Government? If you find a Biſhop, or any other Preacher, miſlead his Audience, inform againſt him to us or any of our Council: To us to whom God has delegated the Authority to reform ſuch Diſorders, and don't ſet up your ſelves for Judges of Controverſy: Nor lay ſo much Streſs upon your vain Expoſitions and fantaſtical Opinions. In ſuch ſublime Matters you may eaſily miſtake. 'Tis true, you are allow'd to read the holy Scriptures, and to have the Word of God in your Mother Tongue: But then this Permiſſion is only deſign'd for private Information, and the Inſtruction of your Children and Family: 'Twas never intended for Mooting and Diſpute, nor to furniſh you with reprimanding Phraſes, and Expreſſions of Reproach againſt Prieſts and Preachers: And yet this is the Uſe a great many diſorderly People make of the Privilege of having the Scriptures. I am extreamly ſorry to find how much the Word of God is abus'd; with how little Reverence 'tis mention'd, both with reſpect to Place and Occaſion: How People ſquabble about the Senſe: How 'tis turn'd into wretched Rhyme; ſung and jangled in every Alehouſe and Tavern: And all this in a falſe Conſtruction and Countermeaning to the Inſpir'd Writers. I am ſorry to perceive the Readers of the Bible diſcover ſo little of it in their Practice: For I am ſure Charity was never in a more languiſhing Condition, Virtue never at a lower Ebb, nor God never leſs honour'd, and worſe ſerv'd, in Chriſtendom. I muſt therefore recommend to you the ſame Duty I mention'd firſt: As Chriſtianity makes you Brothers, anſwer that Relation to each other: Let the Majeſty and Goodneſs of God make a ſuitable Impreſſion upon your Minds: And then I don't queſtion but that Affection and good Correſpondence, of which I reminded you before, will always continue between you and your Sovereign (b).

And thus after having preſs'd the Execution of the Laws, the King ſign'd the Bills, and the Seſſion ended.

The Univerſities were much alarm'd, as they had reaſon, to find their Foundations in ſuch a precarious Condition, and lie wholly at the Diſpoſal

---

(a) Ld. Herbert, p. 534.

(b) Godwin Annal, ad Ann. 1545.

(b) Ld. Herbert, p. 534. & deinc.

The Univerſities addreſs the King to preſerve their Eſtates, and ſucceed in their Application.

ſpoſal of the Crown. Cambridge was the firſt which addreſs'd the King for his Favour. They begg'd his Protection of their Eſtates: And that they might not be made a Prey to Ignorance and Avarice. Oxford was likewiſe not long behind in their Application. Dr. Cox, the Prince's Præceptor, wrote to Secretary Paget to the ſame purpoſe. He acquainted this Miniſter how much the Kingdom was unfurniſh'd with Schools and Preachers, with Houſes, and Maintenance for Orphans. And ſince the Chauntries, &c. were granted to the King, he requeſted a competent Proviſion might be made for the Clergy, for fear Poverty ſhould drive them upon Flattery, and the old Superſtition. I don't mention this, ſays he, as if I queſtion'd the King's Goodneſs, but becauſe there are ſo many hungry, rapacious Wolves that are ready to ſwallow Chauntries, Cathedral Churches, Univerſities, and a thouſand times as much, if it lay in their way. Adding in the Cloſe, that Poſterity will be amaz'd at us. From hence it appears, the young Prince was in the Hands of no ill Inſtructor.

The Univerſities ſucceeded in their Addreſs, and were quickly put out of their Pain, as appears by their Letter of Thanks to the King, for preſerving them in their former Condition. However, two of the Profeſſions were in Danger of being remov'd, the King once having Thoughts of placing all the Civilians in one College, and the Phyſicians and Surgeons in another. But this Reſolve was dropp'd: And as to the King's Inclination, he was ſo far from leſſening thoſe famous Seminaries of Piety and Learning, that he rather promoted their Intereſt. However, People beyond Sea were not a little ſurpriz'd at the Parliament's putting theſe celebrated Societies in ſuch Circumſtances of Hazard. For beſide the great Uſefulneſs of theſe Bodies, their Revenues could not be alienated, or turn'd to a foreign Uſe without great Diſregard, to ſay nothing more, to their Founders: To their Founders, who ſettled their Eſtates for the Service of God, for publick Ornament, and Education. And, to prevent Invaſion, laid heavy Curſes upon thoſe who ſhould defeat the Settlement, and diſappoint the Deſign of the Donation (c).

Cardinal Beaton aſſaſſinated, May the 29th, A. D. 1546.

The Beginning of the next Year there was an Attempt concerted by five or ſix Scotch Gentlemen againſt the Life of Cardinal Beaton. The Haughtineſs and rigorous Temper of this Prelate made him generally unbelov'd: Beſides, the Conſpirators thought themſelves particularly injur'd by him. In ſhort, they entred the Caſtle by Surprize, knock'd early in the Morning at the Cardinal's Chamber, and demanded Entrance. The Cardinal perceiving there was no Appearance of Friendſhip or Reſpect, refuſed to admit them: But upon their calling for Fire, and threatning to burn him in his Lodgings, he began to treat: And after they had given him a Promiſe to do his Perſon no Harm, he opened the Door. And now the Opportunity preſenting, they broke through Honour and Articles, ruſh'd in with their Swords drawn, and barbarouſly murther'd him (d).

A horrible Aſſertion in Fox.

Fox ſays, theſe Gentlemen were ſtirr'd up by the Lord to murther this Archbiſhop in his Bed (e). Does the Lord then ſtir up Men to wreſt the Sword out of the Magiſtrate's Hand, and execute their private Revenge in Blood and Slaughter? Is Breach of Faith and Stabbing a Nobleman in his Bed an Argument of Heavenly Impulſe? Did theſe Men work any Miracles in Proof of their Commiſſion to take away the Cardinal's Life, and diſpenſe with the Sixth Commandment? Nothing of this Kind is pretended: Fox calls it Murder, and yet ſays they were ſtirr'd up by the Lord. This is ſtrange to Aſtoniſhment! To what Extremes of Diſtraction are People ſometimes hurried by by Prejudice and Paſſion! Archbiſhop Spotſwood, tho' he diſlik'd the Cardinal's Practice: Tho' he repreſents him of unbounded Ambition, and barbarouſly cruel in his Proſecution of what was called Hereſy; yet he condemns the Fact, and reports that few of the Aſſaſſins eſcap'd an extraordinary Judgment. However, ſome People diſaffected to the Cardinal, were ſo unaccountable as to commend the Action, and offer'd to join the Conſpirators, but the Bigotry of theſe Men is juſtly cenſur'd by the Hiſtorian (f).

On the other ſide, the Religious and Clergy declaim'd againſt the Murder with all the Circumſtances of Aggravation, and painted it in the blackeſt Colour imaginable. The Biſhops applied to the Governour for Juſtice without Delay. Upon this the Aſſaſſins were ſummon'd to appear in Court, and abide their Tryal; they taking no notice of the Order, were declar'd Rebels. The Eccleſiaſtical Judges, who were not backward in doing their Part, ſolemnly excommunicated the Murderers, and all that ſhould entertain or ſupport them.

The Governour, in the mean time, nominated John Hamilton his Natural Brother to the Archbiſhoprick of St. Andrews: The Election was paſſed by the Canons, and confirm'd by Pope Paul the Third. This was no Juncture to object the Illegitimacy of the Gentleman's Birth. The Court of Rome were willing to oblige the Governour for fear of a Defection from their See. Thus the Bulls were expedited: And both the Governour and the Archbiſhop preſs'd to exert their Zeal in proſecuting the Murther, and revenging the Contempt of Religion.

The Conſpirators fortifie the Caſtle, and ſtand on their Defence.

And now the Caſtle was beſieged from Auguſt to January, but with little Succeſs: For the Paſſage by Sea being open, and the Gariſon declaring for King Henry, they were conſtantly ſupplied with Proviſions from England. Before I proceed farther, it will be neceſſary to obſerve, that upon the News of the Cardinal's Death, the Aſſaſſins were reinforc'd with about Sevenſcore Gentlemen and others, who entred the Caſtle the Day after the Murther: One John Rough, who had been the Governour's Chaplain, came to them, and preach'd to the Gariſon.

The Governour being apprehenſive their Correſpondence with England might draw ill Conſequences, was prevail'd with to offer them Terms. The beſieg'd cloſed with the Overture, and capitulated upon the following Articles.

Firſt, That the Governour ſhould procure their Abſolution from the Pope: And that 'till the Inſtrument was return'd, Hoſtilities ſhould ceaſe, and the Gariſon continue in the Caſtle.

Secondly, That themſelves and their Abettors ſhould be pardon'd in Form by the Governour: And enjoy all their Rights and Privileges, of which they were poſſeſs'd before the Murder was committed.

Thirdly, That the Beſieg'd ſhould give Hoſtages for evacuating the Caſtle as ſoon as they receiv'd their Abſolution from Rome.

Thus the Governour ſtoop'd to the Rebels, and agreed to Conditions of Diſadvantage. But it ſeems neither Side were very ſincere: The

---

(c) Id. p. 537.

(d) Spotſwood, p. 83.

(e) Fox, Vol. 2. p 621.

(f) Spotſwood.

Governour and the Queen Dowager ſent to France for a Squadron of Men of War to batter the Caſtle, and block up the Haven. On the other ſide the Beſieg'd kept on their Engagements with King Henry.

Id.

Knox his going to them not defenſible.

After the Conditions were ſign'd, and the Siege rais'd, John Knox came into the Caſtle, and preach'd among them: This look'd like countenancing the Murder, and abetting their Defiance of the Government. Spotſwood ſtrains to fetch off John Knox, and vindicate his Memory: But after all, he confeſſeth his Practice was ſcarce allowable, and that he had been wiſer in keeping away. However, his not going in with them at the Murther, nor coming 'till the Government had given them Articles, were Circumſtances of Extenuation: Thus, tho' he can't blanch the Liberty, nor make the Blemiſh diſappear, he gives it ſomewhat of a better Complexion. Now beſides the aſſaſſinating the Cardinal, theſe Men, by correſponding with King Henry, were no better than Rebels in Form. Knox therefore would have done well to have laid open their Crime, preſs'd them to Repentance, and to break off their Criminal Engagements. But notwithſtanding he preach'd ſtoutly againſt Popery, I cannot find but he was ſilent upon the other Argument.

The Capitulation being ſign'd, and the Governour retir'd, John Rough preach'd boldly at St. Andrews againſt the receiv'd Doctrines, and was much frequented. John Anand the Dean, undertaking this Preacher, Knox interpoſed, and offer'd to maintain his Diſcourſe: Particularly, that the preſent Church of Rome was farther degenerated from Apoſtolick Purity, than the Jewiſh Synagogue was from the Moſaick Inſtitution, when they conſented to the Death of our Saviour.

Knox goes too far in his Sermon againſt the Church of Rome.

Knox being called on to make good his Aſſertion, preach'd in the Pariſh Church the next Sunday: He took his Text out of the 7th of Daniel (g). From theſe Words, and the reſt of the Chapter, he took occaſion to diſcourſe of the Beaſt which was to riſe upon the Deſtruction of the Roman Empire. This Beaſt, he ſaid, was the Church of Rome: That all the Marks aſſign'd by Daniel belong'd to that See, and to no other Society whatever. From hence he went on to diſcourſe concerning Antichriſt: That under this Denomination we were not to underſtand a ſingle Perſon, but a collective Body with a wicked Head. He was very poſitive in applying the Deſcription of Antichriſt to the Church of Rome, and charg'd them with Oppoſition both in Life and Doctrine to our Bleſſed Saviour. He fancy'd the firſt Branch was prov'd by the Immorality of the Popes and Clergy. The ſecond conſiſting in Contrariety of Doctrine, he endeavour'd to make good by comparing their claſhing with the Scriptures in the Article of Juſtification, and laying too much Streſs upon the Condition of Works. Farther, he maintain'd a Contrariety in the Laws and Conſtitution of the Roman Communion, to thoſe of our Saviour. He makes his Inſtances in the Obſervation of Holydays, forbearing Fleſh in Lent, and forbidding Marriage to the Clergy. At laſt he came to the Marks of the Beaſt, one of which was, He ſhall ſpeak great Words againſt the Moſt High: This Note of Antichriſt he thought was verified upon the Church of Rome, in the pompous and ſuperlative Titles given to the Pope: Such as Vicar of Chriſt, Succeſſor of Peter, Head of the Univerſal Church, Moſt Holy, Moſt Bleſſed, Infallible, &c. (h). He made likewiſe the Buſineſs of Pardons and Indulgencies, and ſaying Maſſes for the Relief of Souls in Purgatory, another Mark of Antichriſt.

(g) Verſe 24, 25.

(h) Spotſwood, p. 85.

John Major the Subprior, the Canons, Friars, and the whole Univerſity, were at this Sermon. But Knox was ſo far from being overſet with the Audience, that he challeng'd them to a Diſproof of any Part of his Diſcourſe. The Archbiſhop being inform'd of this Liberty, reprimanded the Subprior: And wonder'd the others could be ſo Paſſive under Hereſy and Schiſm. Upon this the Subprior recollected his Spirits, and cited Rough and Knox to anſwer ſeveral Articles drawn out of their Sermons: They are theſe.

The Articles preferr'd againſt him and John Rough.

“ Firſt, That no Mortal can be Head of the Church.

“ Secondly, That the Pope is Antichriſt, and by Conſequence no Member of Chriſt's Myſtical Body.

“ Thirdly, That no Man is allow'd to form a Religion from his own Invention, but bound to adhere cloſe to the Direction of Revelation, without any thing of Supplement or Alteration.

“ Fourthly, That the Sacraments of the New Teſtament ought to be adminiſtred purſuant to the Inſtitution of our Saviour, and the Practice of the Apoſtles, and that no Circumſtance ought to be added to, or taken from them.

“ Fifthly, That the Maſs is downright Idolatry, and a Profanation of the Lord's Supper.

“ Sixthly, That there is no ſuch State as Purgatory, either for puniſhing or refining departed Spirits.

“ Seventhly, That Prayers for the dead are to no purpoſe, and to pray to them Idolatry.

“ Eighthly, That Biſhops, unleſs they preach themſelves, forfeit their Character and Juriſdiction.

“ Ninthly, That Tythes are no appropriate Revenue to the Clergy Jure Divino.

Archbiſhop Spotſwood endeavours to clear Knox from this laſt Aſſertion. He does not know but John Rough might advance ſomething of this kind: But as for Knox, he vouches his Sermons, and other Tracts, in his Vindication. Here Knox ſpeaks plainly for the other ſide of the Queſtion, and calls it, Rank Sacrilege to rob the Church of its Tythes. It is true, continues the Archbiſhop, a great many of theſe Times were diſpleas'd with the Raking and Avarice of ſome Churchmen. To diſappoint this Temper, they ſet up an Opinion, that Tythes did not belong to the Church by Divine Right; but then the Archbiſhop believes they were govern'd more by Paſſion than Judgment in this Matter: And that theſe Doctrines were advanc'd to careſs the People, to make themſelves Popular, and leſſen the Intereſt of the Clergy.

Id.

To proceed; Knox appearing before the Conſiſtory gave the Subprior a ſort of Complement for his Orthodoxy, and deſir'd him either to confute their Tenents, or otherwiſe to recommend them with his Authority to the People. The Subprior anſwer'd he came there to argue, and not to determine; and therefore he was ready to reaſon a little upon the Power of the Church: This Society, ſays he, hath in my Opinion a clear Authority to appoint Rites and Ceremonies for the more ſolemn Adminiſtration of the Sacraments: And for heightning the Devotion of the People, with reſpect to other Parts of Divine Service. To this Knox replied, That no Man in the Worſhip of God might appoint any Ceremony, giving it a Signification to his Pleaſure. This Aſſertion, which is altogether wrong, diſturbed one Arburnet, a Grey Friar, to that degree, that the Heat of his Temper and Averſion tranſported him to a worſe Extream on the other hand; for it ſeems, in the Vehemence of the Conteſt, he denied the Apoſtles had receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt, when they writ their Epiſtles. The Subprior reprimanded this Religious, and after a little Diſpute diſmiſs'd Rough and Knox; adviſing them in a friendly manner to be cautious what Doctrine they deliver'd in publick.

They have a friendly Diſmiſſion from the Subprior.

Before the Meeting broke up, the Clergy conſulted how to keep the People from deſerting their Communion. 'Twas at laſt reſolv'd that thoſe of the Univerſity and Abbey, who were beſt qualified, ſhould preach in the Pariſh Churches on Sundays: They were to avoid Controverſy in their Sermons, and inſiſt only upon Points of Practice. Thus John Knox was barr'd preaching on Sundays: However, being under the Protection of the Cannon of the Caſtle, he ventur'd to mount the Pulpit on other Days, and had no Diſturbance: But John Rough diſliking the Libertiniſm of the Gariſon took his Leave, retir'd into England, and was preferr'd to a Benefice near Hull by the Archbiſhop of York.

John Rough leaves the Gariſon for their Licentiouſneſs.

To conclude this Story: About the beginning of June the next Year, the Pope's Abſolution was deliver'd, and the Gariſon requir'd to deliver up the Caſtle purſuant to the Articles. The Soldiers complain'd of a Defect in the Bull, and carp'd at the Expreſſion, Remittimus Crimen Irremiſſibile. 'Twas anſwer'd, that Clauſe was inſerted only to heighten the Crime, and that the Abſolution was good notwithſtanding. This did not ſatisfie the Gariſon, they ſtill objected that Condition was broken, and reſolv'd to ſtand on their Defence.

Soon after this, the French Fleet arriv'd, the Siege was renew'd, and the Caſtle batter'd by Sea and Land. There was likewiſe a Mortality amongſt them: And thus being in no Condition to wait their Relief from England, they were forc'd to ſurrender almoſt at Diſcretion. The French carried off the Gariſon, together with the Cardinal's rich Furniture and Treaſure. When the French were gone, the Caſtle was demoliſh'd by the Government: For by the Canon Law, they ſaid, thoſe Places are to be razed where a Cardinal is ſlain. However, this was but a Colour: The true Reaſon was, for fear the Engliſh ſhould enter the Fort and keep it. This, tho' it happen'd a Year after the firſt Siege, I have mention'd together, for the Unity of the Relation.

The Caſtle ſurrender'd.

Id. p. 88.

June the 7th, A. D. 1546.

To come back to England: The King finding a Decay in his Conſtitution, and that he was not likely to laſt long, inclin'd to put an End to his Diſputes with the Neighbouring Princes, and provide for the Security of his Succeſſor: He was ſenſible the deep Minority of the Prince his Son would call for Circumſtances of Repoſe. This Conſideration, 'tis thought, diſpos'd him to a Peace with the French King; which was concluded at Campe near Calais. The Scotch were comprehended in this Treaty. Amongſt other Articles, Bouloign was to remain in the Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh, till the French King had paid two Millions of Crowns de ſoleil. Upon the whole, this Town of Bouloign was exceedingly expenſive: For as the Lord Herbert proves from Records, the taking and keeping it coſt the King Thirteen Hundred Forty two Thouſand Pounds, and upwards. The Benefit was by no means anſwerable; for, as the Noble Hiſtorian continues, it ſerv'd for nothing but a Landing Place, which might be had at Calais (i).

Peace between England and France.

(i) Ld. Herbert, p. 540. & deinc.

June the 14th.

When the Peace was proclaim'd in London, there was a pompous Proceſſion: And the beſt Silver Croſſes, and richeſt Copes were made uſe of for the greater Solemnity. This is obſerv'd to have been the laſt time theſe Religious Ornaments were publickly us'd. For ſoon after the King took them out of the Churches, and lodg'd them in the Treaſury and Wardrobe. The Reaſon of this unuſual Alienation appear'd to be only the then Apprehenſion of a new War with France.

Id.

Monſieur d'Annebault the French Ambaſſadour, and King Henry had ſome Diſcourſe about concerting a Reformation in both Kingdoms. It is ſaid both Princes had agreed to change the Maſs into a Communion in their reſpective Dominions: That they deſign'd to move the Emperour to the ſame Meaſures, and in caſe he refus'd, to make War upon him; to this 'tis added, that Archbiſhop Cranmer was order'd to make a Draught of the Alterations intended. The Credit of this Story relies on the Teſtimony of one Morris, Cranmer's Secretary (k). To this Fox ſubjoyns, that the King in the Preſence of the Earl of Hertford the Lord Admiral Liſle, the Earl of Bedford, and the Lord Paget, gave the Duke of Saxony's Ambaſſadour an Aſſurance of ſtanding by his Maſter, in caſe Difference of Religion was the only Quarrel between that Duke and the Emperour.

(k) Fox Vol. 2. p 586. & 647.

About this time the King iſſued out a Proclamation, to forbid the Uſe of Tindal, and Coverdales Tranſlation of the New Teſtament. The Books of Frith, Wickliffe, Joy, Baile, Barnes, &c. are likewiſe prohibited, and to be deliver'd to the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Officers, in order to be burnt. The Penalty of offending againſt this Proclamation, is Impriſonment, and Corporal Puniſhment at the King's Pleaſure. The Criminals were likewiſe to make ſuch Fine and Ranſom as his Majeſty, or Four of his Privy Council, ſhould ſet upon them.

Id. p. 587. Regiſt. Bonner. Fol. 86.

Farther, all Printers of Engliſh Books, Ballads, or Plays, are commanded to put their Names, and the Names of the Authors to the ſaid Books or Pamphlets; and to preſent the firſt Copy to the Mayor of the Town, and not ſuffer any of the Copies to be diſpers'd till two Days after. Laſtly, All Perſons are prohibited to ſell or publiſh any Engliſh Books printed beyond Sea, upon the Subject of Religion, without a ſpecial Licenſe from the King.

Books prohibited by Proclamation. July the 8th.

Soon after this Proclamation the Books of the Authors abovemention'd were burnt at Paul's Croſs by the Order of the Biſhop of London.

The Reaſon of ſuppreſſing theſe Books was, 'tis thought, to diſcourage that Exceſs of Satyr and intemperate Language, which was too common in the Writings of theſe Men. The King was likewiſe of Opinion they had gone indefenſible Lengths in Oppoſition to the Church of Rome: He deſign'd therefore to proceed with more Temper in his Reformation, and keep cloſer to the Pattern of Antiquity (l).

(l) Ld. Herbert, p. 560.

About this time Nicholas Shaxton, who had ſome Years ſince reſign'd the Biſhoprick of Sarum, to avoid Compliance with the Statute of the Biſhop Shaxton's Submiſſion.

the Six Articles, alter'd his Sentiment, and made his Submiſſion in form: The Articles are theſe.

Bp. Shaxton's Submiſſion.

" Firſt, Almighty God, by the Power of his word pronounc'd by the Prieſt at Maſs in the conſecration, turns the Bread and Wine into the very natural Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that after the Conſecration, there remains no ſubſtance of Bread and Wine, but only the ſubſtance of Chriſt, God and Man.

" Secondly, The ſaid bleſſed Sacrament being once Conſecrated, is and remaineth ſtill the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, altho' it be reſerv'd, and not preſently diſtributed.

" Thirdly, The ſame bleſſed Sacrament being conſecrate, is and ought to be worſhip'd and ador'd with godly Honour, whereſoever it is; foraſmuch as it is the Body of Chriſt inſeparably united to the Deity.

" Fourthly, The Church by the Miniſtration of the Prieſt, offers daily at the Maſs for a Sacrifice to Almighty God, the ſelf-ſame Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, under the form of Bread and Wine, in the Remembrance and Repreſentation of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion.

" Fifthly, The ſame Body and Blood which is offer'd in the Maſs, is the very Propitiation and Satisfaction for the Sins of the World; foraſmuch as it is the ſelf-ſame in ſubſtance, which was offer'd on the Croſs for our Redemption; and the Oblation and Action of the Prieſt is alſo a Sacrifice of Praiſe and Thankſgiving unto God for his Benefits, and not the Satisfaction for the Sins of the World, for that is only to be attributed to Chriſt's Paſſion.

" Sixthly, The ſaid Oblation or Sacrifice ſo by the Prieſt offer'd in the Maſs, is available and Profitable both for the Quick and Dead, altho' it lies not in the Pow'r of Man to limit how much, or in what meaſure the ſame doth avail.

" Seventhly, 'Tis not a thing of neceſſity, that the Sacrament of the Altar ſhould be miniſter'd unto the People under both kinds of Bread and Wine. And it is none Abuſe that the ſame be miniſtred to the People under the one kind; foraſmuch as in every of both the kinds whole Chriſt's both Body and Blood is contain'd.

" Eightly, It is no derogation to the Virtue of the Maſs, altho' the Prieſt do receive the Sacrament alone, and none other receive it with him.

Ninthly, The Maſs uſed in this Realm of England is agreeable to the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and we have in this Church of England the very true Sacrament, which is the very Body and Blood of our Saviour Chriſt, under the form of Bread and Wine.

" Tenthly, The Church of Chriſt, hath, doth, and may lawfully order ſome Prieſts to be Miniſters of the Sacraments, although the ſame do not preach, nor be admitted thereunto.

" Eleventhly, Prieſts being once dedicated unto God by the Order of Prieſthood, and all ſuch Men and Women as have adviſedly made Vows unto God of Chaſtity or Widowhood, may not lawfully marry after their ſaid Order received, or Vows made.

" Twelfthly, Secret auricular Confeſſion, is expedient and neceſſary to be retained, continued, and frequented in the Church of Chriſt.

" Thirteenthly, The Preſcience and Predeſtination of Almighty God, although in it ſelf it be infallible, induceth no Neceſſity to the Action of Man, but that he may freely uſe the Power of his own Will or Choice, the ſaid Preſcience, or Predeſtination, notwithſtanding.

" I Nicholas Shaxton, with my Heart do believe, and with my Mouth do confeſs, all theſe Articles to be true in every part (m).

Mrs. Askew and three others executed for Religion in Smithfield.

Soon after this Biſhop's Submiſſion, Anne Askew, a young Gentlewoman of Condition, was proſecuted for denying the Corporal Preſence, and burned in Smithfieid with Nicholas Otterden, a Prieſt, John Laſells a Gentleman belonging to the Court, and John Adlam a Taylor (n).

'Tis no Wonder theſe Perſons loſt their Lives for their Diſagreement to the eſtabliſhed Belief: The King was now in a rigorous Diſpoſition touching theſe Matters. The Queen her ſelf, run no ſmall Hazard upon this Score. She began now to countenance thoſe who declaimed againſt the Abuſes of the Church of Rome: She thought her ſelf ſo thoroughly informed in Points of Religion, that ſhe ventur'd to undertake the Controverſy, and engage the King. This was no acceptable Diſcourſe: The King was never pleaſ'd with Contradiction: This Humour encreas'd with his Age: Beſides, Religion was a tender Point: He had given great Proof of his Sufficiency, and had been much complemented by learned Men for his Attainments this Way. He had likewiſe an Ulcer in his Leg, which ſower'd his Humour, and made him more difficult to deal with.

The Queen in Danger, for arguing againſt the King's Opinion.

This Freedom of the Queen's, was repreſented to Diſadvantage by Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter. He put the King in Mind, that by declaring her ſelf thus openly againſt the received Doctrines, and diſputing againſt the Six Articles, ſhe had diſcovered the ſlender Regard ſhe had, either to the Act, or the late Proclamation. Upon this the King gave this Biſhop and Wriotheſley the Lord Chancellor, Leave to draw up Articles againſt her. They work'd immediately upon this Permiſſion, brought the Draught to the King, who made no Scruple to ſign it. And now her Ruine was almoſt finiſhed, and her Enemies wanted only a Warrant for carrying her to the Tower: But an Accident diſappointed their Expectations. The Lord Chancellor put the Articles ſigned by the King in his Boſom: This Paper happened to be drop'd, was taken up by one of the Queen's Servants, and brought to her. This being a ſurprizing Misfortune, the Queen was perfectly overſet with the News, and lamented her Condition in a very ſenſible and diſconſolate Manner. The King hearing how much ſhe was perplexed, firſt ſent his Phyſicians, and after came himſelf to her Apartment: And finding the Diſtemper lie in her Mind, he applied the proper Remedy, and gave her an Expectation of gentle Uſage. And thus being reſtor'd to a tolerable Degree of Eaſe and Health, ſhe went the next Night, with her Siſter the Lady Herbert, to the King's Bed-Chamber, where ſhe was well received.

(m) Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 100.

(n) Fox and Fuller.

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

She ſubmits, and recovers the King's Favour.

And here, after ſome little Time, the King entred upon the Subject of Religion, and endeavoured to draw the Queen towards a Diſpute: But being apprehenſive of the Tendency of this Argument, ſhe excus'd herſelf upon the Diſadvantages of her Sex and Judgment, and anſwer'd, that in this, and all other Matters, ſhe was ready to reſign her ſelf to his Majeſty's Wiſdom: Not at all (by St. Mary) ſays the King, you are grown a Doctor, Kate, and better qualified to give, than receive Directions. To this the Queen replied, that what ſhe had offer'd upon this Head, was done rather to divert his Majeſty, to relieve him under his Pain, and make him forget his Indiſpoſition, than to pretend to any Opinion of her own. Beſides, by propoſing Objections, ſhe hop'd to be better inform'd by his Majeſty's learned Reſolution of the Caſe. And is it ſo, Sweet-Heart, ſays the King, then we are perfect Friends again. Her Enemies who knew nothing of this Turn of Favour, prepar'd the next Day to convey her to the Tower, purſuant to the King's Warrant. The Hour being come, the Lord Wriotheſley appears with Forty of the Guards. The King and the Queen happen'd to be then talking pleaſantly in the Garden: The King giving the Lord Chancellor a ſevere Look, called him to him at ſome diſtance from the Queen. His Majeſty's Diſcourſe was altogether angry and expoſtulating: And at laſt he gave this Lord ſome Names of Reproach, and commanded him out of his Preſence. The Queen perceiving the King's Humour ruffled, and Lord Wriotheſley diſmiſs'd with Diſgrace, intreated for his Pardon. The King only anſwer'd, that ſhe, Poor Soul, did not know how little that Lord deſerv'd that good Office from her. And thus by the Providence of the Papers being drop'd, and her ſeaſonable Submiſſion, ſhe eſcap'd the Snare. Though after all, ſome People fancied 'twas not the King's Intention to make uſe of the Rigour of the Law; but only to fright her from reading prohibited Books. On the other Hand, if there was nothing of earneſt at the bottom, 'twas thought a ſevere Jeſt to be put upon a Queen; eſpecially on ſuch an agreeable and obſequious Conſort (o). The Biſhop of Wincheſter, who was looked on as one of her greateſt Enemies, fell under the King's Diſfavour ſoon after; as appears by his Submiſſion on Record. Tho' it muſt be ſaid that Paper does not mention the Ground of the King's Diſpleaſure. Notwithſtanding this Submiſſion, the Biſhop never recover'd his former Situation in the King's Fancy, as may be collected by his being left out in the King's laſt Will; whereas formerly he had been nominated one of his Executors and Conſellors to his Son King Edward the Sixth.

(o) Ld. Herbert, p. 560. Id.

The Duke of Norfolk attainted, and the Earl of Surrey beheaded.

Godwin, Annal. Jan. 13. A. D. 154$\frac{6}{7}$.

Towards the latter end of this Year, the Duke of Norfolk and his Son the Earl of Surrey were committed to the Tower for High-Treaſon. The Earl of Surrey, no Lord of Parliament, was try'd by an Inqueſt of Commoners at Guild-Hall, and found guilty. This Earl by being diſcharg'd the Command of the Army in France, and having the Earl of Hertford put over him, drop'd ſome paſſionate Expreſſions, importing a Diſlike of the Privy-Council; not without ſlanting Inſinuations of Miſconduct in the King. But theſe Sallies of Diſcontent could not reach his Life: That which undid him, was the quartering the Arms of Edward the Confeſſor with his own. This was ſwell'd to a Charge of High-Treaſon, and interpreted a Deſign of graſping at the Crown. He vouch'd the Heralds in his Juſtification; but the Bench it ſeems, would not allow of their Deciſion, though within their own Buſineſs. And thus a Verdict was brought in againſt him, and he was beheaded about a Week after upon Tower-Hill: He was a Perſon of a lively Genius, great Courage, and unuſual Improvements in Learning.

The Duke his Father was attainted by Act of Parliament: Had he been try'd in the cuſtomary Method by his Peers, 'twas thought he would have diſengag'd himſelf. The Creation of the Prince of Wales was given out for the meeting of this Parliament: But the attainting the Duke of Norfolk was conjectur'd the true Reaſon (p). His grand Crime was the quartering the Arms of Edward the Confeſſor. Archbiſhop Cranmer, between whom and the Duke there had been no friendly Correſpondence for ſome time, abſented himſelf from the Houſe upon this occaſion. In ſhort, the Bill of Attainder paſs'd, tho' the Duke had done his utmoſt to diſpoſe the King towards Clemency, and prevent this Rigour, by his late Submiſſion. It may be no Subject had more Merit to plead than this Noble Man: He had gain'd a Victory over the Scots, been ſucceſsful againſt the French; and ſuppreſs'd the Rebellion in Yorkſhire. However, the King who as our learned Hiſtorian obſerves, never hated or ruin'd any one by halves, ſign'd a Warrant for his Execution the next Morning. But his Majeſty dying in the Night, the Lieutenant could not act upon the Warrant: And thus the Duke of Norfolk very narrowly eſcap'd.

(p) Bp. Burnet, pt. 1. p. 347.

Jan. 27.
Jan. 12.

Id. p. 346.

The King dies.

Having already mention'd the King's Will, I ſhall tranſcribe that Part of it which relates to Religion: From hence the Reader may diſcover his Opinion concerning Invocation of Saints, Prayers and Alms, in behalf of the Dead (q).

(q) See Records, N. 51.

Somewhat of his Character.

As to other Matters in the Will, I ſhall only take notice that the Crown was deviſ'd to the Princeſs Mary, in Caſe Prince Edward died without lawful Iſſue: From hence Saunders collects the King had no ill Opinion of his Marriage with Katherine of Spain. But this reaſoning will not hold; for by this Argument, we may infer the King believ'd his Marriage with Anne Bulloigne lawful, becauſe the Princeſs Elizabeth ſtands next to Mary in the Will for the Succeſſion. But the King being married to Mrs. Bulloigne, living Queen Katherine, either the firſt or the ſecond Marriage muſt of neceſſity be unlawful. And that the Reader may not be ſurpriz'd at the diſpoſal of an Hereditary Crown by Will, we are to conſider, that the King was expreſly enabled for this purpoſe by an Act of Parliament (r). In which Act the Crown is ſettled upon the Lady Mary, provided Prince Edward left no lawful Iſſue. Archbiſhop Cranmer, and Tonſtal Biſhop of Durham, (r) 35 H. 8. c. 1.

Durham, were two of the Sixteen Executors and Counſellours of State, nominated in the Will.

Saunders reports, the King ſome little time before his Death, was inclin'd to reconcile himſelf to the See of Rome. That he diſcover'd his Mind to ſome of the Biſhops, and ask'd their Advice concerning the manner; who theſe Biſhops were he doth not tell us, only in general, that they were afraid of declaring their Sentiments, and durſt not truſt the King: They ſuſpected the Queſtion might be put to inſnare them.

Saunders de Schiſm. Anglic.

But Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter, as this Hiſtorian goes on, is ſaid to have adviſ'd the King to call a Parliament, and lay the Matter before them; and provided he had not time for ſuch an Expedient, he ſhould then publiſh his Intention in Writing: That when the Performance was impracticable, the bare Deſire would be acceptable to God Almighty: That when Wincheſter went out of the Preſence, the other Courtiers, who were afraid of refunding the Church Eſtates, ſcatter'd the King's Scruples, and brought him off his former Reſolve. But this muſt reſt upon Saunders's Credit: It is ſaid by others, that when the King underſtood the Phyſicians gave him over, he turn'd his Thoughts to the other World, and ſent for Cranmer, who was then at Croyden. But when the Archbiſhop came to Weſtminiſter, he found the King ſpeechleſs: Upon Cranmer's exhorting him to truſt in God's Mercy through Chriſt, and deſiring ſome Sign of ſuch a Reliance; the King is ſaid to preſs the Archbiſhop's Hand, and ſoon after expir'd. He liv'd Fifty Five Years and Seven Months, and reign'd Thirty Seven Years, Nine Months and Six Days (s).

Jan. 28.
A. D. 154$\frac{6}{7}$.
(s) Ld. Herbert. p. 510.

As to the Character of this Prince, it may be collected in a great Meaſure from the foregoing Hiſtory; therefore I ſhall ſay the leſs of it here.

Amongſt other Blemiſhes, he is tax'd with Cruelty: For Proof of this imputation ſome Hiſtorians give a Liſt of thoſe put to Death in his Reign. In this bloody Catalogue, they mention Two Queens, one Cardinal, beſides Pool, who was attainted: Dukes, Marqueſs, Earls, and Earls Sons, Twelve; Barons and Knights, Eighteen; Abbots, Prieſts, Priors and Monks, Seventy Seven: Beſides great Numbers of more private Condition both Papiſts and Goſpellers, who ſuffer'd for their Religion. Covetouſneſs is another dark Quality with which he is charg'd: And here perhaps it is no eaſy Task to diſengage him. The ſeizing the Abbey and Chauntry Lands, and venturing through all the Imprecations of the Founders, is a ſtrong Preſumption of loving Money too well. Beſides, what Motive excepting this can be aſſign'd for his wreſting ſo many Mannors from the Sees of Canterbury, York and London; particularly for obliging the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury to part with what Lands either himſelf, or his Courtiers had a mind to? Cranmer as hath been obſerv'd, remonſtrated againſt this Uſage, and unleſs he had been heartily menac'd, would never have given up the wealthy Lordſhip of Otford in Kent.

Id. p. 572.

I ſhall mention another Inſtance, which looks remarkably this way. 'Tis the King's Injunction to Bonner Biſhop of London, not to enter upon any of the Lands, nor to receive any of the Profits of the Biſhoprick, until a Suit depending in Chancery between Bonner and the Earl of Hertford was ended *.

* Regiſt. Bonner, fol. 70. 36 H. 8. Jan. 21.

In this Injunction 'tis ſuggeſted, that the Biſhop of London had demiſ'd his whole Biſhoprick to the ſaid Earl, under the Penalty of Ten Thouſand Marks, to be levied upon his Goods and Chattels to the King's Uſe.

King's Injunction to Bonner.

The Biſhop is injoin'd not to preſent or collate to any Benefice or Preferment belonging to his See. The ſame Injunction is directed to the Dean and Chapter.

The next Year, the eighth of July there is a Revocation of this Injunction; Quibuſdam certis de cauſis jam nos moventibus, &c. as the Words run. The Meaning of which is (as may be reaſonably conjectur'd) that the Biſhop and Dean and Chapter had either paid a Fine, or parted with ſome of their Lands to compound the Controverſie. In ſhort, if the King had treated his Temporal Lords, as he did the Spiritual, and ſeiz'd the Eſtates of the Laity upon no ſtronger Colours, 'tis probable they would have complain'd ſomewhat louder under the Injuſtice.

His Benefactions.

But then it muſt be ſaid, he did ſomething by way of Reparation. For beſides his endowing the Six new Sees already mentioned, he founded a great many Grammar Schools with good Salaries to the Maſters. He likewiſe founded Lectures in both Univerſities. Where thoſe who read in the Faculties of Divinity, Law, and Phyſick, were encouraged with a conſiderable Settlement. The ſame Countenance was likewiſe given to the Profeſſors of Greek and Hebrew. Farther, he confirm'd Cardinal Wolſey's College of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, and built and endow'd the famous Trinity-College in Cambridge. He convey'd Gray-Friers, now call'd Chriſt-Church, and the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew in London, to that City, for charitable Uſes: To which we may add, his finiſhing King's-College-Chapel in Cambridge. Laſtly, he maintain'd a great many young Scholars in foreign Countries. 'Twas his Cuſtom to chuſe one or more every Year of the moſt promiſing Parts out of both Univerſities, and breed them beyond Sea. Sir Thomas Smith, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, was one of the laſt thus educated (t). Theſe Men, tho' they had no Character, furniſh'd the King with Intelligence, and acquainted him with the publick Motions of Chriſtendom. And it muſt be ſaid to his Commendation, that he encouraged Learning in the Diſpoſal of his Church Preferments; moſt of the Biſhops of his Time being Men of Diſtinction this way.

Fuller. Heylin.

(t) Cambd. Eliz.

Another Circumſtance of Advantage to his Memory, was the ſuppreſſing of the Stews. They were Houſes inhabited by ſcandalous Women, and allowed by the State. There were Sixteen of them diſtinguiſh'd by Signs. They were call'd Stews, becauſe the Place at firſt was furniſhed with Ponds for preſerving Fiſh, and making them more clean and palatable (w).

The Stews ſuppreſſed by King Henry.

(w) Camden. Brit. Middleſex.

In the Reign of King Henry the Second, there were ſeveral Regulations made to correct

Cranmer Th. Abp. of Cant.

rect the Malignity of theſe infamous Entertainments. I ſhall mention ſome of them.

Firſt, No Stewholder was permitted to open his Doors, or receive any Perſons on Holy-days.

Secondly, No Single-woman was to be kept againſt her Will, but diſmiſs'd whenever ſhe diſcovered any Deſire of reforming her Practice.

Thirdly, None of theſe Pandars were allow'd to entertain any Nun or married Woman.

Fourthly, They were not allowed to ſell Bread, Ale, Fiſh, Meat, Coals, or any Proviſions (x).

And farther, thoſe Women who died in theſe Houſes, were barr'd Chriſtian Burial, and interr'd in a diſtant Place from the Pariſh Church, call'd, The Single-woman's Churchyard. Thus, notwithſtanding their Toleration, they were under Reſtraints, and had Marks of Diſcountenance ſet upon them.

Hen. VIII. K.

In the One and Twentieth Year of King Henry the Seventh, the Stews were ſhut up for ſome Time (y). They were afterwards open'd, but reduc'd from Sixteen to Twelve. But King Henry the Eighth, in the Thirty Seventh Year of his Reign, put an End to theſe infamous Liberties. The Pandars with all their Equipage, were turn'd out by Sound of Trumpet, and their Houſes aſſign'd to People of regular Converſation. Thus we ſee, notwithſtanding ſome exceptionable Sallies, and the Rigour of his Government, he was not without a Mixture of good Qualities.

(x) Stow's Surveyof London, p. 449. & Annal.

(y) Fabian.

AN

JL Hen 8th

AN Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory
OF GREAT BRITAIN,
CHIEFLY OF ENGLAND.

PART II. BOOK IV.

EDWARD the Sixth only Son to King Henry the Eighth by Jane Seymour, Daughter to Sir John Seymour, ſucceeded his Father. He was born at Hampton Court October the Twelfth 1537, the Queen his Mother dying the Day after. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk were his Godfathers. He was under the Ladies Care for the firſt Six Years, afterwards Dr. Cox, and Mr. Cheek were his Preceptors for Languages and other Parts of Learning. (a) There were Preparations made for creating him Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, and Count Palatine of Cheſter, but this Solemnity was prevented by his Fathers Death. This young Prince diſcover'd an extraordinary Genius, and his Attainments in Learning were far beyond the Expectations from his Age: But of this no more at preſent.

(a) King Edward the ſixths Journal Cotton Library Nero. c. 10.

His Uncle the Earl of Hertford, and Sir Anthony Brown, were diſpatch'd by the Council to acquaint him with the late King's Death, and conduct him to Town, where on the 31ſt of January he was proclaim'd King. He was receiv'd at the Tower with the Cuſtomary Marks of Regard.

The Executors to the late King's Will.

Upon the opening the late King's Will, there were Sixteen nominated for Executors: The Government of the Princes Perſon, and the Adminiſtration was likewiſe put into their hands, till the King was Eighteen Years Old. I have already obſerv'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhop of Durham had the Honour of this Truſt. The other Fourteen were the Lord Wriotheſly Lord Chancellor, Lord Saint John great Maſter, the Lord Ruſſel Lord Privy Seal, the Earl of Hertford Lord great Chamberlain, the Vicount Liſle Lord Admiral, Sir Anthony Brown Maſter of the Horſe, Sir William Paget, Secretary of State, Sir Edward North Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation, Sir Edward Montague Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, Juſtice Bromley, Sir Anthony Denny, and Sir William Herbert chief Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, Sir Edward Wotton Treaſurer of Calais, and Dr. Wotton Dean of Canterbury and York. In executing the Will, and governing the publick Affairs, the Majority of theſe were Equivalent to the whole Number. They had one very remarkable Branch of Power: For the Purpoſe, if the Lady Mary, the Lady Elizabeth, or any other Perſon named for the Succeſſion, happen'd to marry without the Conſent of the Majority of the Privy Council, they were to forfeit their Title to the Crown. (b)

(b) Fuller p. 246.

For the Honour of the Government, and better Management of Affairs, 'twas propoſed that one of theſe Sixteen might have a Title diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt. But then the Luſtre of this Dignity was not to be convey'd with any Addition of Power. This Motion was oppos'd by the Lord Chancellor, who expected the Weight of Buſineſs would fall upon his Office. For the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who by his Place had the faireſt Pretenſion, was neither good Courtier nor Stateſman; nor had any Inclination for ſecular Imployment; and therefore the Chancellor could have no Apprehenſion of Competition from that Quarter.

Biſhop Burnet page 302.

The Earl of Hertford choſen Protector.

He inſiſted therefore that the Will might be punctually executed without Latitude or Alteration: That the late King deſign'd the Executors ſhould have an equal ſhare in Truſt and Power, and that the making any Preference in Title or Degree would be a Breach in the Appointment. But the Chancellor finding his Intereſt overweigh'd by the Earl of Hertford, drop'd his Opinion, and conſented with the reſt. Thus the Board agreed, that one of the Sixteen ſhould have a rais'd Title, and be called Protector of the King's Realm, and Governour of his Perſon. The next Point was quickly ſettled, and the Choice by an unanimous Concurrence fell upon the Earl of Hertford. Thus he was ſolemnly proclaim'd Protector, and Governor to the King's Perſon. This Dignity and Truſt was not convey'd, without an expreſs'd Condition, that he ſhould not do any Act but by the Advice and Conſent of the other Executors purſuant to the late King's Will. (c) One Reaſon for pitching on this Nobleman, was the Nearneſs of his Relation to the King. He was his Uncle by the Mothers ſide near in Blood, but without any Proſpect upon the Crown; ſo that there was no dangerous matter for Ambition to work on. (d) This Promotion of the Earl of Hertford was cenſur'd as a Departure from the late King's Will. From hence 'tis plain the Privy Council was form'd, and the Adminiſtration carried on by the Directions of this Will: 'Twas likewiſe inroll'd, and Queen Mary founded her Title partly upon this Authority, as will be ſeen afterwards. However, Lethington Secretary of Scotland in his Letter to Sir William Cecil Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, pretends 'twas not ſign'd by King Henry the Eighth, and by conſequence not legally executed, purſuant to the Statute of 35. H. 8. cap. 1. The Reaſon of Lethingtons excepting to the Authority of this Will is, becauſe the younger Branch of the Royal Family is prefer'd to the Elder, and the Crown ſettled upon the Houſe of Suffolk, in Excluſion of that of Scotland.

(c) Biſhop Burnet Hiſt. Reform. pt. 2*d. p.* 5.

(d) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. King Edward VI.

Biſhop Burnet pt. 1. Records Book III. num. 30.

This Will to make it firm in Law, ought to have been ſign'd with the King's own Hand. That it wanted this neceſſary Circumſtance, Lethington endeavours to prove firſt, by affirming that the King ſome conſiderable Time before his Death, never us'd to ſign any thing with his own Hand: For the Truth of this, the Scotch Secretary appeals to Cecil's Knowledge. He adds ſecondly, that when the King in his Sickneſs was preſs'd to put his Hand to the Will he refus'd to do it. He affirms farther that when the King was almoſt at the Point of Death, one William Clark put a Stamp to the Will by the Order of ſome Perſons well known both to Lethington and Cecil's. To prove this Forgery, for ſo Lethington calls it, he deſires the Depoſitions of the Marqueſs of Wincheſter and Northampton, the Earl of Pembroke, Secretary Petre, Sir Henry Neville, Sir Maurice Berkly, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, belonging to King Henry's Court, may be taken and inroll'd in Chancery. He likewiſe urges my Lord Pagets Evidence in the Houſe of Lords in Queen Mary's Reign. But by the way the Lord Paget's Teſtimony as Dyer reports it (e) is ſhort of the Point, becauſe the Stamp there mention'd, referrs only to the Bill for attaining the Duke of Norfolk. Laſtly, Lethington preſſes the Original may be inſpected: And tho' ſome to diſſerve the Queen of Scots Title, pretend the original Will was made away in Queen Mary's Time, in Favour of the Houſe of Scotland, yet he hopes Providence hath preſerv'd this Inſtrument to ſilence that Calumny, and bring Truth to Light. To fortify Lethingtons Allegations, Sir Thomas Craig affirms, that Clark above mention'd declar'd openly before Queen Mary, before her Privy Council, and the Parliament, that he put the Seal or Stamp to the Will, after King Henry had loſt the Uſe of his Underſtanding.

(e) Dyer Rep. fol. 93.

On the other ſide, if the Will was thus defective and lay ſo much expos'd to Diſproof, 'tis ſomewhat ſurprizing the Lords of King Edwards Council ſhould risk their Reputation ſo far, and venture their being call'd to an account, for acting upon an illegal Warrant. I ſhall not pretend to interpoſe my Opinion, but leave the matter to the Readers Judgment. I have heard ſay the original Will is now in the Cuſtody of Mr. Le'Neve at Weſtminſter. If this be ſo, the inſpecting the Inſtrument will decide the Queſtion. To proceed, there was now an apparent Diviſion of the Kingdom into Two Parties. One of them were willing Religion ſhould continue upon the preſent Foot; the other preſs'd for a farther Reformation. The Lord Chancellor headed the firſt, and the Protector the latter.

See Craigs Book of the Succeſſion in anſwer to Doleman p. 334. 345.

On the ſecond of February the Protector was declar'd Lord Treaſurer and Earl Marſhal, the late King's Will was order'd to be inroll'd, and a Copy of it under the great Seal, given to every one of the Executors. The Biſhops were likewiſe requir'd to take out new Commiſſions of the ſame Tenour with thoſe of the late Reign. (f) Cranmer ſet the firſt Preſident; he is ſaid to have petition'd for a Revival of his Juriſdiction: And that as he had exercis'd the Functions of an Archbiſhop during the former Reign; ſo that Authority determining with the late King's Life, his preſent Majeſty would pleaſe to intruſt him with the ſame Juriſdiction. (g) That Cranmer addreſs'd the Crown for this purpoſe and in this form, we may reaſonably conclude both from the Singularity of his Opinion, and eſpecially from Bonners Practice, from whom ſuch a Complyance might be leſs expected. This Biſhop 'tis certain took out ſuch an Inſtrument in the beginning of this Reign. The Commiſſion ſets forth that Bonner had made Application to King Edward for an Authority to exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction. As to other things the Inſtrument runs in the ſame Form with thoſe Commiſſions taken out by the Biſhops in the late Reign. (h)

(f) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d. p.* 6. Feb. 7. Anno Dom. 154^{6}_{7}.

(g) Memorials of Archbiſhop Cranmer.

The Biſhops take out new Commiſſions.

(h) Regiſt. Bonner. fol. 102.

Theſe Commiſſions were granted only durante benè placito, ſo that the King might recal their Juriſdiction, and ſtrike their Character dead when he pleas'd. The Hiſtorian remarks that this precarious Grant was only to ſerve the Neceſſity of the Juncture, and keep the Biſhops from relapſing to their old Superſtition That afterwards this Heavy Yoak was made lighter, the bene placitum Clauſe omitted, and the Biſhops enabled to hold their Sees during Life. (i)

Biſhop Burnet pt 2*d. p.* 6.

But that Matters were not thus mended appears from this Learned Author, both in his Records, and in the Body of his Hiſtory: (k) Where 'tis plain that the Biſhops thro' the whole courſe of King Edwards Reign were upon their good Behaviour for their Office, and had the expreſs Clauſe of, quamdiù ſe benè geſſerint, put in their Patent.

(k) Id. pt. 2*d. p.* 218. and Records p. 257.

The Learned Hiſtorian laſt mention'd will have it, that by the Letters Patent it is clear that the Epiſcopal Function was acknowledg'd to be of Divine Appointment, and that the Perſon was no other way nam'd by the King, then as Lay Patrons preſent to Livings. (l)

'Tis granted the Clauſe in the Commiſſion per & ultra ea quæ tibi & ſacris Literis divinitùs commiſſa eſſe dignoſcuntur, does import a Divine Authority: But then this Acknowledgment is ſo weaken'd and confin'd as to the Exerciſe, by other Clauſes in the Letters Patent, that without the Kings Licenſe the Powers in the Epiſcopal Character would ſignify little. To ſpeak clearly, the Commiſſion ſeems embaraſs'd and inconſiſtent.

For firſt, 'tis plainly affirm'd in this Inſtrument, (m) "that all manner of Authority and "Juriſdiction, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Civil, "is originally deriv'd from the Crown. If this Aſſertion holds, the Power of the Keys muſt be lodg'd with the ſecular Magiſtrate: And if ſo, what Independent Right can the Biſhops have for the Exerciſe of their Function? How can they make any Claim to a Charter of Government from our Saviour? Or what pretence can they have to admit or exclude from Church Communion upon this foot? And if their Pretenſions to govern muſt fail thus far, the Powers ſuppos'd by the Letters Patent to be given them in Holy Scripture, muſt be of ſlender Conſideration. Farther the Learned Hiſtorians ſaying, the Perſon appointed by the Kings Letters Patents, was no otherwiſe nam'd than as Lay Patrons preſent to Livings, is ſomewhat ſurprizing: For did ever Lay Patrons pretend to give a Commiſſion in their Preſentations for the Exerciſe of the Prieſts Function? Does the Clerk govern his Cure, and execute his Office in the Patrons Name, and by Virtue of his Authority? If this cannot be made good, the Caſe is no ways parallel; for the Biſhops by the Letters Patents were to give Orders, and exerciſe all other Branches of ſpiritual Juriſdiction as the Kings Delegates, and upon the ſtrength of his Authority.

A Creation of Noblemen deſign'd by the late King.

To proceed, 'twas order'd in the late Kings Will, that all Grants, Gifts, or Promiſes made by him, and not perfected, ſhould be executed and perform'd. (n) To ſatiſfy this Clauſe, Secretary Paget, Sir Anthony Denny, and Sir Wm. Herbert were requir'd to declare knowledge of their King's Intention upon this Head. The Reaſon of theſe three Gentlemen, being called on, was becauſe the King had uſed them with the greateſt Confidence. Paget inform'd the Council, that upon the Attainders of the Duke of Norfolk, and the Earl of Surrey, the King told him he intended to diſpoſe of their Eſtates to deſerving Perſons, and create ſeveral Peers, to ſupply the Rooms of Noble Families extinct. That upon the Duke of Norfolks Deſire that the King would ſettle all his forfeited Lands upon the Prince, the King clos'd with the Complement, and reſolv'd to reward his Servants ſome other way. Secretary Paget by the King's Order drew up a Liſt of this intended Creation, where the Perſons, Honours, and Aſſignments were particularly mentioned. The Earl of Hertford was to be Earl Marſhal, Lord Treaſurer and Duke of Somerſet, and his Son to be Earl of Wiltſhire with Eight Hundred Pounds a year of Land, and Three Hundred a year out of the next Biſhops Lands that fell void: The Earl of Eſſex to be Marqueſs of Eſſex: The Vicount Liſle to be Earl of Coventry: The Lord Wriotheſly to be Earl of Wincheſter, Sir Thomas Seymour the Protectors Brother a Baron, and Lord Admiral. Sir Richard Rich, Sir John St. Leiger, Sir William Willoughby, Sir Edward Sheffeild, and Sir Chriſtopher Danby were to be Barons: Theſe Gentlemen were likewiſe to have Eſtates ſetled on them to ſupport their Titles. The Book where theſe Favours were entred was deliver'd to the King, but his Death happening ſoon after, there was nothing done, excepting the above mention'd Proviſion in the Will, which had a Reference to this Buſineſs. The Book being vouch'd by Paget, Denny, and Herbert, the Executors reſolv'd to perform what the King intended. But being apprehenſive of a War with the Emperor and the French King, they did not think it adviſable to part with any of the King's Treaſure, or leſſen his Revenues. However, ſince Title without a proportionable Eſtate had more of Burthen than real Advancement, they caſt about for a practicable Expedient, and reſolv'd upon the Sale of the Chauntry Lands.

The Council having ſo great a ſhare themſelves in this Aſſignment of Wealth and Honour, their Forwardneſs was much diſreliſh'd: 'Twas thought they were too intent upon their own Intereſt, and that their Pretenſions this way ought to have been poſtpon'd till the King came of Age. (o)

Spiritual Preferments given to ſecular Men.

In the late Kings Book where the ſetling of Eſtates upon this new Creation was ſpecified, the Earl of Hertford had a Promiſe of Six of the beſt Prebends that ſhould fall in any Cathedral, Two of which were afterwards at his Requeſt, chang'd for a Dean'ry and Treaſurerſhip. The diſpoſing of Eccleſiaſtical Preferment to ſecular Men may poſſibly ſeem ſomewhat odd, but 'twas not uncommon at that time. The Lord Cromwell as hath been obſerv'd, was Dean of Wells, and many others of the Laity had ſpiritual Promotions without Cure beſtow'd on them. To make them Deans and Prebendaries was a farther ſtep, and leſs capable of excuſe, for theſe Dignitaries were deſign'd for a ſtanding Council to the Biſhop; and oblig'd to ſeveral Duties in the Cathedral peculiar to the Prieſtly Function. Prebends and Deaneries were always reckoned the Revenues of the Church, deſign'd as Incouragements for Induſtry and Learning, and Rewards for thoſe who had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in publick Service. To ſay the Clergy miſmanag'd in theſe Promotions, is wide of the Purpoſe, ſuppoſing the Charge was true. For ſince the Law had appropriated theſe Preferments to the Spiritualty, they could not be otherwiſe diſpos'd without ſtraining the Conſtitution. The Remark of our Learned Hiſtorian upon this Practice is very ſignificant; his Words are theſe, they, (meaning the Courtiers) minded nothing more than the enriching themſelves, took a certain courſe to make the Miſchief perpetual by robbing the Church of thoſe Endowments and Helps it had receiv'd from the Munificence of the Founders of its Cathedrals, who were generally the firſt Chriſtian Kings of this Nation; which had it been done by Law would have been a thing of very ill conſequence; but as it was done, was directly contrary to Magna Charta, and to the Kings Coronation Oath. Id. p. 9

The Funeral of the late King ſolemniz'd at Paris.

On the Fourteenth of February the late King's Body was remov'd to Shene with the uſual Solemnity, and the next Day to Windſor, and there inter'd in a Vault by his Conſort Queen Jane, purſuant to the Inſtructions in his Will. His Funeral was likewiſe ſolemniz'd in Noſtra-

(l) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d. p.* 218.

(m) Regiſt. Cranmer fol. 28.

(n) Fuller.

(o) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d. p.* 8.

dame Church in Paris, by the French King's Order. This was an Inſtance of a generous regard, conſidering King Henry dy'd excommunicated by the Pope. This reſpect was return'd to King Francis his Memory, by the Engliſh Court ſoon after, though not at the ſame hazard; for they were under no fear of Cenſure from the See of Rome. (p)

(p) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 28.

The late King in his Will had ſettled Six Hundred Pounds per Annum, upon the Dean and Canons, to find Two Prieſts to ſay Maſſes for his Soul in St. Georges Chappel, where he was buried. He had likewiſe left an Eſtabliſhment for four Solemn Obits, every Year, a maintenance for poor Knights, &c. which the Reader may ſee in the Records. The alterations in Religion which immediately followed, made part of the King's Will inſignificant. The Court did not believe any Applications of the Living could be ſerviceable to the Dead; and thus the Maſſes, Obits, and Charities, deſign'd to relieve him in the other World, were drop'd, notwithſtanding his ſolemn Charge to the contrary. Saunders will have this a judicial miſfortune upon King Henry, for defeating the Wills of ſo many Founders of Chauntry's and Religious Houſes. (q)

His Will overlook'd, with relation to himſelf.

(q) Saunders de Schiſm. Angl.

When the Funeral was over, the Peers above mention'd were created. The Protector was Duke of Somerſet, Parr Earl of Eſſex and Marqueſs of Northampton, Dudley Vicount Liſle was Earl of Warwick, the Lord Wriotheſly Earl of Southampton: Sir Thomas Seymour the King's Uncle, was created Lord Sudley, and High Admiral, Sir Richard Rich was made Lord Rich, Sir William Willoughby Lord Willoughby of Parram, Sir Edmund Sheffeild Lord Sheffeild of Butterwike. (r) The reſt in the Liſt above mention'd, declin'd the Honour of a Title.

February 17.

(r) Stow Annal.

Three Days after the King was ſolemnly Crown'd at Weſtminſter, by Archbiſhop Cranmer, and a general Pardon granted, with an exception of theſe Six Perſons, the Duke of Norfolk, Edward Lord Courtney eldeſt Son to the Marqueſs of Exeter, Cardinal Pool, Dr. Pate, Mr. Foskew, and Mr. Throgmorton.

There was a new Form order'd by the Privy Council for regulating the Coronation Ceremonies, which being ſomewhat different both from the preceding and following Reigns, I ſhall inſert it in the Records. (s) One material Circumſtance, as our learned Church Hiſtorian, obſerves, was the manner of the Archbiſhops demanding the Peoples conſent for owning the King, which yet, as he expreſſeth it, was done in ſuch Terms as ſhould demonſtrate he was no elective Prince.

(s) See Records Numb. LII.

The Coronation.

Inſtead of a Sermon at the Coronation, Archbiſhop Cranmer made a Speech to the King to the following effect. "In the first place he declares the King's Right to govern did not depend upon any Engagement at his Coronation: That his Crown being given him by God Almighty, could not by a failure in the Adminiſtration be forfeited either to Church or State. That notwithſtanding the Archbiſhops of Canterbury had commonly Crown'd his Predeceſſors, yet 'twas never at their liberty to admit or refuſe them for their Soveraigns; neither did the privilege to perform this Ceremony, give them any right to put Terms upon their Kings, or diſpoſe of their Crowns at Pleaſure.

The Archbiſhops Speech at this Solemnity.

This was ſaid by way of Cenſure of the extravagant pretenſions of the Court of Rome.

To go on with the Archbiſhops Speech; he takes notice.

"That the ſolemn Ceremonies at a Coronation are ſignificant, but not abſolutely neceſſary: They ſerve to put Princes in mind of their Duty to God, but are no addition to their Character; for 'tis not ſo much the Oil which makes them God's Anointed, as the Power and Juriſdiction given them from Above. 'Tis becauſe they are placed in their Station by God's Appointment, and aſſiſted with his Grace for the better diſcharge of their Office. Neither the Biſhop of Rome, or any other See, have any Authority to bring Kings upon Articles; however 'tis the part of the Biſhop who officiates in this Solemnity, to remind Princes of what God expects from them, and here the Archbiſhop ſuggeſts, the King, being God's Vicegerent, and Chriſt's Vicar in his own Dominions, was oblig'd to follow the Preſident of Joſias, to take care the Worſhip of God was under due Regulations, to ſuppreſs Idolatry, remove Images, and diſcharge the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome: To reward Virtue, and puniſh vice, to protect the Innocent, and relieve the Poor: To execute Juſtice, and diſcountenance violence. Theſe things, ſays the Archbiſhop, I am bound by my Function to lay before your Royal Highneſs, yet I muſt openly declare before God and this noble Aſſembly, that in caſe your Majeſty ſhould fail in any or all theſe particulars, I have no Commiſſion to pronounce you depriv'd. (t)

(t) Foxes and Firebrands, Part 2d from Archbiſhop Uſhers Collections.

Not long after the Coronation the Broad Seal was taken from the Earl of Southampton, and given to the Lord St. John. This Lord, as hath been obſerv'd diſagreed in matter of Religion from the Protector and his Party. They were willing therefore on the firſt opportunity to remove him from his Poſt; and 'twas not long before they had a handle for their purpoſe. The Chancellor deſigning to reſerve himſelf wholly for State Affairs, had lately put the Great Seal to a Commiſſion directed to Sir Richard Southwell Maſter of the Rolls, John Tregonnell Eſq; Maſter of Chancery, John Oliver, and Anthony Bellaſis Clarks, Maſters of Chancery: By Virtue of this Deputation Three or Two of theſe Maſters were Impower'd to repreſent the Lord Chancellor, and execute his Office in as full a manner as if himſelf were in Court; only their Decrees were to be ſign'd by him before their Inrollment. This Authority being granted without any Warrant from the Protector and Council, was Cenſur'd as a High Preſumption; beſides the Perſons nominated being Two of them Canoniſts, the common Lawyers look'd upon it a diſcouragement to their Profeſſion. Upon this they remonſtrated againſt the Lord Chancellor at the Council Board. The Council order'd the Judges to examine the Commiſſion with the complaint againſt it. The Judges deliver'd their Opinions that the Chancellor had forfeited his Place, after which Reſolution the Broad Seal was taken from him. (u) Theſe Proceedings are ſaid to be ſummary and ſevere, beyond the uſage of the Privy Council, and without the common form of Legal Proceſſes. But the Councils Authority had been raiſed ſo high by 31 H. 8. Cap. 8. that they were Impower'd ſufficiently for matters of that Nature. Thus our Learned Church Hiſtorian. But, with Submiſſion, if the Privy Council had no other Warrant to ſupport their Proceedings then this Act, 'tis

The Lord Chancellor turn'd out, and why? March 6. Anno Dom. 154$\frac{6}{7}$.

(u) Bp. Burnet Part 2d p. 16. and Records p. 96.

Id.

'tis pretty plain they exceeded their Authority: For this Statute, in the firſt Place, relates only to Proclamations. Secondly; 'Tis expreſly provided, that none of the Kings Liege People ſhould have any of their Inheritances, Lawful Poſſeſſions, Offices, &c. taken from them. Which Word Office brings the Lord Chancellors Caſe fully within the ſaving of the Statute. (x)

(x) 31 H. 8. Cap. 8. Statutes at large.

The Lord Protector who ſtood hitherto upon the Choice of the reſt, procured a Patent for his Office. By this means he ſeem'd to Act upon a higher Authority, and was leſs encumbred with reſtraint. (y) This Commiſſion, amongſt other things, ſets forth, " that the " Protector might be furniſhed with a Council " for his Aid and Aſſiſtance, his Majeſty did " by the Advice of his Uncles and others, Nobles, Prelates, and wiſe Men, accept of " theſe Perſons for his Counſellors. The " Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord St. John " Preſident, John Lord Ruſſel, Lord Privy Seal, " William Marqueſs of Northampton, John Earl " of Warwick Great Chamberlain of England, " Henry Earl of Arundel Lord Chamberlain, " Thomas Lord Seymour of Sudley Admiral, Cuthbert Biſhop of Durham, Richard Lord Rich, " Sir Thomas Cheyney Treaſurer of the Houſhold, " Sir John Gage Comptroller of the Houſhold, " Sir Anthony Brown Maſter of the Horſe, " Sir William Paget, and Sir William Petres Secretaries of State, Sir Ralph Sadler Maſter of " the Wardrobe, Sir John Baker Knight, Dr. " Wotton Dean of Canterbury and York, Sir Anthony Denny, and Sir William Herbert Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, Sir Edward " North Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation and Revenues of the Crown, Sir Edward Montague Chief Juſtice of the Common " Pleas, Sir Edward Wotton, Sir Edmund Peckum " Cofferer, Sir Thomas Bromley one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, and Sir Richard " Southwell.

(y) Bp. Burnet Part 2*d.* p. 17. and Records p. 96.

The Lord Protector holds his Office by Patent. March 13.

By this Patent the Protector had an Authority to take as many into the Council as he thought fit. " The Protector and the Council " were likewiſe Impower'd to act, as it were, " at diſcretion, and do whatever they thought " ſerviceable to the Government, without incurring any Penalty or Forfeiture from any " Law, Statute, Proclamation, or Ordinance " whatſoever. I have given a Liſt of the Names of thoſe that ſate at the Board with all this Power and Privilege, becauſe of the great ſhare they had in the direction of Church Affairs. And here the Protector had a Negative Vote upon the reſt. His Conſent was neceſſary to all Reſolutions of the Board: On the other ſide he was not oblig'd to call the whole Number upon any debate, but only to adviſe with ſo many as he thought convenient: And all this Authority was veſted in him 'till the King was Eighteen Years of Age. Thus a main Branch of King Henry's Will is evidently over-rul'd; for firſt, Wriotheſley late Lord Chancellor is ſtruck out of the Liſt by this Patent; Secondly, by the late King's Will theſe Sixteen Counſellors therein ſpecified, or the Major Part of them were inſtruſted with the Government of the King and Kingdom; and in caſe any of them died during the King's Minority, the whole Power was to continue in the Survivors. The Young King is likewiſe charg'd on Pain of his Fathers Curſe, to be directed and govern'd both in his publick and private Affairs, by the Advice of this Privy Council, till he had compleated the Eighteenth Year of his Age. (z) Now this Will ſtood upon the Foot of an Act of Parliament; (a) by Virtue of which the King was enabled to ſettle the Crown either by Letters Patent, or his laſt Will, under ſuch Conditions as he thought fit. The late King's Will being thus ſet aſide, and the Government put into other Hands by the Protectors Patent; the Legality of the Proceedings looks ſomewhat myſterious. To affirm this change, being made by the Major Part of the Executors, was ſtill warrantable by the Will, which devolv'd the Government on the whole Number, or the Major Part: (b) The affirming this, doth not come up to a ſufficient defence; for 'tis of the nature of Truſts not to be transferr'd: By ſuch a liberty the diſpoſition of the Perſon entruſting is diſappointed, and the Truſtees don't anſwer to their Promiſe. He that makes a Will puts Perſons in Truſt out of a particular confidence he has in them; if therefore after their conſent to Act, they reſign their Power, they diſappoint the intention of the Will; and fail in their Engagements to the deceas'd. Farther, it doth not appear that the Major Part of the King's Executors agreed to this alteration. Had this been done, the Patent would moſt probably have mention'd it; for ſuch a conſent, conſidering the King's Minority, would have given a more plauſible colour; but the Commiſſion ſays no ſuch thing either expreſly, or in Terms of Equivalence. It is only ſaid in the Patent, that the King by the Conſent of his Uncle and others, the Nobles, Prelates, and Wiſemen of England, had form'd the Privy Council in the manner abovemention'd. By this Commiſſion the Lord Wriotheſley or Southampton is not only left out, but the Number is increas'd from Sixteen to Twenty Six: Now it can hardly be ſuppos'd the Majority of the Executors ſhould conſent to the Abridgment of their own Power, to raiſe the Protector ſo much above themſelves; and choſe in Eleven new Members in his Intereſt, to weigh down their Privilege. Beſides, it does not appear they had any liberty for ſuch a compliance. There's no Clauſe in the Will for this Latitude: No Authority to encreaſe their Number, and take in others to the Partnerſhip of their Truſt. But no more of this.

The great Power granted the Privy Council.

(z) Fuller p. 249.

(a) 35 H. 8. Cap. 1.

The late Kings Will ſeems ſet aſide by this Patent.

(b) Bp. Burnet Part 2*d.* p. 19.

However, by this alteration the rigor of the Government was abated, the Perſecution upon the Six Articles was ſtop'd, and People were more at liberty to profeſs their Belief. Thus the Priſons were open'd, and thoſe who had been forc'd to quit the Kingdom recall'd. Amongſt theſe the moſt Eminent were Miles Coverſdale afterwards Biſhop of Exeter, John Hooper afterwards Biſhop of Glouceſter, John Filpot, and John Rogers: The firſt of which was preferr'd to the Archdeaconry of Wincheſter, and the other made Prebendary of St. Paul's. (c)

The Rigor of the Six Articles abated.

(c) Heylin p. 34.

The Privy Council projecting a farther Reformation, reſolv'd upon ſending Commiſſioners into all parts of the Kingdom, by way of Viſitation. Theſe Viſitors conſiſted of a mixture of Laity and Clergy, and had ſix Circuits aſſign'd them. Every diviſion had a Preacher, whoſe Buſineſs it was to bring off the People from the remains of Superſtition, and diſpoſe them for the intended alterations. And to make the impreſſion of their Doctrine more laſting, they were to lodge ſome Homilies, lately compoſ'd, with the Pariſh Prieſt. The Argument of theſe Diſcourſes was firſt concerning the uſe of the Scriptures. Secondly, of the miſery of A regal Viſitation.

Homilies compos'd. Hollingſhead p. 979.

of Mankind by Sin. Third, of their Salvation by Chriſt. Fourth, of true and lively Faith. Fifth, of good Works. Sixth, of Chriſtian Love and Charity. Seventh, againſt Swearing, where Perjury is particularly loaded. Eighth, againſt Apoſtacy. Ninth, againſt the fear of Death. Tenth, an Exhortation to Obedience. Eleventh, againſt Whoredom and Adultery. Twelfth, againſt Strife and Contention about matters of Religion. Theſe Homilies are drawn up moſtly by Archbiſhop Cranmer. The deſign of them was to furniſh the leſs learned part of the Clergy, and to ſuggeſt matter and direction to thoſe better qualified. (d)

Some Homilies drawn up.

(d) Heylin Bp. Burnet.

The Goſpellers, as they were then called, preſuming on the countenance of the Court, over-run the Motions of the State, and ventur'd to reform without publick Authority. This Year Dr. John Harley of Magdalen College in Oxford, preaching in Lent, declaim'd with a great deal of vehemence againſt the Pope and the old Tenents: The Majority of the Univerſity being diſpleas'd with this Freedom, brought him before the Vicechancellor, where his Sermon not paſſing the Teſt, he was ſent up to London, to be try'd for Hereſy, but the Proteſtant Intereſt prevailing at Court, thoſe who were to inform againſt him thought it beſt not to appear, and ſo he was privately diſcharg'd. When this News was brought to Oxford, the Proteſtant Party diſcover'd their Opinion, and under the pretence of taking away the remains of Superſtition, took a great deal of unjuſtifiable liberty in Churches and Chappels. *

* Wood Hiſt. & Antiq. Univerſ. Ox. l. 1. p. 265. Images pull'd down without Authority.

Of this we have another inſtance in Biſhop Gardner's Letter, to one Captain Vaughan. In the beginning, he takes notice that by an Order of Council to the Juſtices of Peace, “no change was to be made upon the Laws and Regulations of the late Reign: (e) This Order of the Council was dated February the Twelfth laſt paſt. From hence the Biſhop proceeds to complain to this Gentleman, that he was inform'd the Images of our Saviour and the Saints, “had been pull'd down at Portſmouth with great Outrage and Contempt, the Figure of our Saviour run through, and an Eye bored out. That theſe heats went farther then the exceſſes of the Lutherans in Germany: That Luther wrote a Book in vindication of the lawfulneſs of Images: And that himſelf, when Ambaſſador in Germany, had ſeen Images ſtanding in Churches, where Luther was moſt admir'd. After this he proceeds to urge the common Arguments in defence of ſuch Repreſentations: “That they ſuggeſted the Hiſtory of the Goſpel to the unlearned, and aſſiſted them inſtead of Books: That ſince the far greateſt part of the Kingdom could not read, the taking Images away would deprive them of one means of Inſtruction, and encreaſe their Ignorance. (f)

(e) Cotton Library Titus B. 2. May 3d 1547.

Fox 719. Gardner's complaint upon this Score.

(f) Vol. 2. p. 712. The Protectors Anſwer.

This Letter was ſent by Vaughan to the Protector, who in his Anſwer to the Biſhop, commends him for his learning, and zeal againſt Innovation; “but then gives a caution againſt being too warm in his Applications this way; that unſeaſonable remedies and over-driving matters, might encreaſe the diſorder: That where Images ſerv'd only for Memory they might be let alone; however, as to the main he look'd upon ſuch a Proviſion as a dangerous liberty. The reſt of his Letter being moſtly ſpent againſt Gardners Arguments, I ſhall wave the recital, and refer the Reader to the former Part of this work. *

Ibid.

* Page 139. & deinc.

This Year in Lent, Ridley, afterwards Biſhop of Rocheſter, Preach'd a Controverſial Sermon at Court: The Biſhop of Wincheſter being one of the Audience, and not altogether pleas'd, wrote him a Letter upon ſome part of the Diſcourſe.

In the firſt place he commends Ridley for his Approbation of the Doctrine eſtabliſh'd in the late Reign, “and particularly for diſproving the Popes pretended Authority; but then Ridley having declar'd his diſlike of Images and Holy Water, Gardner endeavors to juſtify the receiv'd uſage. His Arguments for Images I ſhall paſs over for the reaſons above mention'd. But what he advances in defence of Holy Water being ſomewhat new; I ſhall give the Reader part of it. “Ridley had denied this Ceremony could have any force for driving away Devils. “In Anſwer to this, Gardner cites a Paſſage out of rhe Hiſtoria Tripartita, where the Biſhop Marcellus is ſaid to order his Deacon Equitius to throw conſecrated Water upon an ill Apparition in Jupiters Temple. That the Devil could not ſtand againſt this Application, but immediately Vaniſh'd. That our Saviour had promis'd the Church that in his Name they ſhould caſt out Devils. That the force of this Effect, is to be attributed to the Name of God. Notwithſtanding this, the Queſtion is, whether the Element of Water may not be inſtrumental in conveying this ſupernatural Virtue. In proof of the Affirmative he urges the Hem of our Saviours Garment, the Spittle and Clay laid upon the Eyes of the Blind, and St. Peter's Shadow curing thoſe that come under it. From hence he proceeds to a modern Inſtance, of our Kings curing the Falling Sickneſs and other Diſtempers, by Cramp Rings. Now as the Metal of Gold and Silver can have no natural Cauſality to produce ſuch an Effect, yet by the Prayer of Conſecration 'tis rais'd to the force of a Means, and made a conveyance of the Bleſſing. By Parity of Reaſon Water, when the Preparatory Ceremonies of the Church has paſs'd upon it, may be as it were a Vehicle for a miraculous Remedy. The Biſhop takes notice farther, that Ridley had inſinuated the true Church, was known only to God, however he explain'd himſelf afterwards inoffenſively, and corrected the Crudeneſs of the Expreſſion, by ſaying, this Society was to be look'd for in the viſible Church, to which Appeals in caſes of Controverſy ought to be made. *

Bp. Gardner's Letter to Ridley in defence of Holy Water.

* Fox Vol. 2. p. 722.

“About this time the Biſhop of Wincheſter wrote to the Protector, to diſwade alterations in Religion. He complains Barlow Biſhop of St. David's had Preach'd againſt the Doctrines ſettled in the late Reign, diſturb'd Peoples Minds with novelties, and rais'd unſeaſonable Diſputes. To make good this allegation he incloſ'd a Copy of the Sermon. He ſuggeſts to the Protector, the King's Minority was a very improper juncture for awak'ning controverſy: That if the Biſhop of St. David's was ſo fully perſwaded of the ſerviceableneſs of his Notions, and ſo much for erecting a new Fabrick; he would adviſe him to pitch upon his Ground, and draw his Model, and prepare his Materials, but not to fall upon building till the King was a

His Letter to the Protector to diſſwade alteration in Religion.

“Major, and the times better ſettled. That he humbly conceiv'd 'twas his Graces Intereſt to check the forwardneſs of projecting Men. And ſince he was intruſted with the protection of the King and Kingdom, it would be much for his Honour to maintain Religion and the Laws in the preſent Circumſtances; that when the King came of Age he might put the Church and State into his Majeſty's Hands, in the ſame good condition he found them. That Innovation in Worſhip or Belief, would neceſſarily embroil the Publick, and draw diſturbance along with it: That his Grace being at the Helm would be particularly embarraſs'd and uneaſy; that the miſcarriages would be imputed either to his concurrence, or want of precaution: that if the Biſhop of St. David's is countenanc'd in his controverſial Humour, allow'd to ſet up for a Champion, and enter the Liſts in a martial Equipage, there will be more indiſcreet Seconds, and more preſſing to the Combat than his Grace would approve. This Letter is dated the laſt of February, and by the Biſhops diſſwading the Scotch Expedition till the King was of Age, 'tis evident 'twas written in the firſt Year of this Reign.

Anno Dom. $154\frac{6}{7}$.

February 28.

In May following this Biſhop ſent the Protector another Letter: Here he takes notice of a ſeditious Book, as he calls it, written by Bale, Intitled, an Elucidation of Anne Askews Martyrdom. “He endeavours to drive this Bale to an Abſurdity, and run him upon contradiction. This Author had lately Publiſh'd Luther's Death in Engliſh, in which he recommends this German Divine for a Saint, and beſtows a great deal of Panegyrick on his Memory. Now, ſays Gardner, Luther always maintain'd the real preſence of Chriſt's natural Body in the Sacrament of the Altar, which Article was poſitively denied by Anne Aſkew: Thus, continues Wincheſter with an Air of Raillery, Bale's Saints muſt differ and diſpute in Heaven, if they don't happen to meet by the way, and compound the Article. Upon the courſe of the Letter he complains of the inſufferable liberties of the Preſs, of the Stage, and the Pulpits: And particularly that a ſcandalous Ballad call'd Jack of Lent was lately Publiſh'd. That the Duties of Self-denial, the Diſcipline of the holy Seaſon, and the Solemn preparations for Eaſter, were turn'd to a Jeſt, and expos'd in Doggrel. That notwithſtanding theſe Men pretend to Combat Superſtition, and refine us to a more ſpiritual Worſhip, yet 'tis plain their drift muſt be all for liberty and the animal Life. They would fain have the Privilege of talking and doing what they pleaſe, and unleſs their Pens and Tongues are kept under reſtraint, the Authority of the Church will be loſt; The diſtinctions in the State confounded; and we ſhall all be Reform'd in a little time, to Licenſe, Luxury, and Levelling. The Biſhop argues for the keeping Lent from the practice of the Church, from our Saviours Faſting Forty Days, and from the publick Benefit conſequent upon Lenten Proviſion, and encouraging the Fiſhery. He takes notice farther, that the Protector had order'd a Lent Diet for the King. *

He complains of the ridiculing Lent.

May 21. Anno Dom. 1547.

* Fox p. 715.

“The Protector in his Anſwer to the Biſhops Letter commends his concern for the Publick, and for guarding againſt Innovation. But as to his Remonſtrance he tells him, that Printers, Players, and Preachers too, will ſometimes exceed their Bounds, and talk more than their ſhare. He gives the Biſhop a gentle rebuke for inſinuating, as if all theſe Diſorders were occaſion'd by his Connivance, and to be put to his Account. He charges Gardner with Omiſſions and Partiality in his Complaint; that he had been paſſive and ſilent in other Caſes of equal Importance. Particularly, that he had ſpent none of his Satyr againſt Dr. Smith's Book, in which the King's Supremacy was oppos'd, and the Popes Uſurpations countenanc'd.

The Protectors Anſwer.

By the way, this Dr. Smith Maſter of Whittington College in London, and Divinity Reader at Chriſt Church in Oxford, had Publiſh'd Two Books; in one of which he undertakes the Defence of the Maſs, and in the other endeavours to prove that unwritten Verities ought to be believ'd under pain of Damnation. Theſe Books he lately retracted in a Sermon at St. Paul's Croſs, and mortify'd himſelf ſo far, as to own that he had taught not only Error, but Hereſy, both from the Preſs and Pulpit. †

Dr. Smith's Recantation.

May 15.

† Hollingſhead, Heylin.

To return to the Protector's Letter; who in the Cloſe vindicates himſelf from the Charge of Remiſsneſs, lets the Biſhop know the publick Tranquillity might ſuffer by exceſſes of Fear and Jealouſy, as well as too much Patience; and that he hop'd when his Majeſty came of Age he ſhould deliver the Government to him with Improvement rather than diſadvantage. *

* Fox p. 717.

On the Sixth of June the Biſhop of Wincheſter wrote again to the Protector: “Here he mentions the Biſhops being forbidden Preaching, excepting in their Cathedrals: This reſtraint he covertly cenſures, and ſays he never knew it done in his time. From hence he goes on to touch upon Images, and pleads for no more regard to ſuch Repreſentations then is preſcrib'd by the late King's neceſſary Erudition, &c. He conceives the King's Honour is ſomewhat concern'd, to acquieſce in the preſent State of Religion. To do otherwiſe would be a reflection on his Fathers Memory; and implies that Prince was defective in Knowlege or Integrity. He ſuggeſts it would be dangerous for the Biſhops to innovate or unſettle any thing in the Church. That the King when he came of Age might call them to an Account: and that 'tis likely they might find the Laws very unfriendly to them for venturing ſo far. That the Pope would make his Advantage on ſuch Conduct. The Court of Rome would ſay every new Government would bring us a new Religion. If we give Faith and Worſhip another Face, and alter that which was ſettled in the late Reign by an unanimous Concurrence, the Papiſts will charge us with fluctuating and uncertainty; and that we are never ſure of underſtanding the Scripture in a true ſenſe. That any novelties of this kind would be remarkably diſſerviceable to the Reputation of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Biſhop of Durham. That People would wonder theſe Eminent Prelates who were made ſtanding Members of the Privy Council, and put in ſo high a place of Truſt by the late King, ſhould ſo ſoon forget their old Knowlege in Scripture, ſet forth in the neceſſary Erudition, and adviſe a Change.

Wincheſters Arguments againſt alterations in Religion.

Notwithſtanding Gardner recommends the abiding by the neceſſary Erudition ſo earneſtly; yet in his Letter to Ridley abovemention'd, he declares he had no ſhare in compoſing that Book, nor was privy to it till 'twas finiſh'd.

Id.

As to Dr. Smith he acquaints the Protector, that he neither lik'd his Books, or his Recantation. To proceed,

Before the Viſitors ſet forward, the Archbiſhop ſent his Mandate by Virtue of the King's Letter to the Biſhop of London: 'Twas to give notice to the Provincial Biſhops not to viſit their reſpective Dioceſes, nor exerciſe any ſpiritual Juriſdiction, nor preach any where but in their Cathedrals: Nor that any of the Clergy ſhould preach in any Place without the King's Licenſe, excepting in their own Collegiate and Parochial Churches. (g) The King's Letter of this Tenour was directed to the Archbiſhops of York. This Inhibition was taken off June the third, becauſe the Viſitation was defer'd for ſome Months, as appears by a Citation dated Auguſt the 20th in which Inſtrument the Biſhop of London is cited to appear before the Viſitors on September the Fifth. Beſides the Reſtraint of this Mandate, there was a particular Inhibition, directed to the Biſhop of London by the King's Commiſſaries for a general and regal Viſitation. By this Inhibition the Biſhops whole Juriſdiction is laid aſleep, and himſelf ſerv'd with a Citation to appear before the Viſitors. And which makes the Caſe ſomewhat more extraordinary, the Viſitors are moſt of them Lay-men. They have a large Compaſs of Juriſdiction in their Inſtrument, and are impower'd to viſit the Clergy and Laity, to have all ſorts of Faculties, Licenſes, and Endowments laid before them, to examine the Clergy's Titles, and to enquire into the Practice of the Spiritual Courts, and inſpect as it were every Part of the Biſhops Function. The Reader may ſee the Inſtrument in the Records. (h)

May the 14. Ann. Dom. 1547.

(g) Regiſt. Bonner Fol. 105. Cotton Library Titus B. 11.

The Biſhops Juriſdiction inhibited.

The Latitude of the Viſitors Commiſſion.

(h) Records Num. 53.

It hath been already obſerv'd, that none of the Clergy were to preach excepting on their own Cures, without the King's Licenſe. The Reaſon of this Reſtraint was to hinder thoſe who oppoſed the intended Reformation from ſpreading their Opinions, and haranguing where they pleaſed. Whereas thoſe of the Proteſtant Sentiment might move at large, have the Countenance of a Royal Authority, and make Proſelytes as they were able; but that which chiefly diſcourag'd this Deſign was the lamentable Poverty of the Clergy. The Tythes of impropriated Livings being now in Lay Hands, reduc'd the Church to a very unfurniſh'd Condition. Beſides, ſeveral cowardly Incumbents had alienated the beſt Part of their Benefices. Thus there was very little Encouragement left for thoſe who ſhould labour in the Work of the Goſpel. "And tho' many Projects were thought "on for remedying this great Abuſe, yet thoſe "were all ſo powerfully oppoſ'd, that there was "no Hopes of a Remedy till the King ſhould "come of Age, and be able by his Authority "to procure the Church-men a more propor"tion'd Maintenance (i) At preſent the Benefices were generally very ſmall, ſo that in many Places three or four Livings would ſcarcely afford a competent Proviſion for one Incumbent.

(i) Biſhop Burnet pt.2d.p.26. The Church lamentably impoveriſh'd.

"'Tis ſaid, while the Abbyes ſtood the Ab"bots allow'd thoſe whom they appointed to "ſerve the Cure in the Churches belonging to "them, a ſmall Stipend, or ſome little part of "the Vicaridge Tythes.

Id. p. 24.

Notwithſtanding this Remark, the Vicars Maintenance was not ſo ſlender before the Reformation as ſince. In former Reigns, the Fees of Sacraments, Sacramentals, Diriges, &c. were very conſiderable. Before the Reformation the Biſhops could encreaſe the Allowance of the Vicars, out of the Tythes of the Benefice, to what Proportion they pleaſ'd. And thus if the firſt Endowment was too ſtrait, they had an Authority from the Conſtitution to give the Vicar a Relief. By a Statute made in the Reign of King Richard the Second, (k) 'tis enacted that becauſe Divers Damages and Hinderances oftentimes have happened, and daily do happen to the Pariſhioners of divers Places by the Appropriation of Benefices, of the ſame Places: It is agreed and aſſented, that in every Licenſe from henceforth to be made in the Chancery of the Appropriation of any Pariſh Church, it ſhall be expreſly contained and compriſed, that the Dioceſan of the Place upon the Appropriation of ſuch Churches ſhall ordain, according to the value of ſuch Churches, a convenient Summ of Mony to be paid and diſtributed yearly of the Fruits and Profits of the ſame Churches by thoſe that will have the ſaid Churches in proper Uſe, and by their Succeſſors to the poor Pariſhioners of the ſaid Churches, in Aid of their Living and Suſtenance for ever, and alſo that the Vicar be well and ſufficiently endowed.

The Condition of Vicaridges worſe than formerly.

(k) 15. R. 2. Cap. 6.

By another Act in the Reign of King Henry the Fourth, this Statute is confirm'd. (†) 'Tis likewiſe enacted, That if any Church be appropriated by Licenſe of the ſaid King Richard or of our Lord the King that now is, ſithence the ſaid xv years againſt the Form of the ſaid Statute, the ſame ſhall be duly reformed according to the effect of the ſame Statute, betwixt this and the Feaſt of Eaſter next coming. And if ſuch Reformation be not made within the time aforeſaid, that the Appropriation and Licenſe thereof made be void and utterly repeal'd and annull'd for ever. ——— And that from henceforth in every Church ſo appropried or to be appropried a ſecular Perſon be ordain'd Vicar perpetual, canonically inſtitute and induct in the ſame, and covenably endow'd by the Diſcretion of the Ordinary to do Divine Service, and to inform the People and keep Hoſpitality there. And that no Religious be made in any way Vicar in any Church ſo appropried or to be appropried by any means in time to come.

(†) 4. H. 4. cap. 12.

Theſe Statutes being not repeal'd, the Biſhops have ſtill the ſame Right, as Dr. Ryves has prov'd to Satisfaction. (l) But whether the Exerciſe of ſuch an Authority now, would not be over-rul'd by the Temporal Courts, is another Queſtion. To proceed, by the Statutes abovemention'd, 'tis plain the Vicar was not left to the Courteſie of the Abbot or Religious Houſes, to whom the Church was appropriated. No, The Proviſion for the Vicars was referr'd to the Biſhops Diſcretion. Thus in many Places half the Tythes of all Kinds, the Profits of all Sacraments and Sacramentals was ſetled upon the Vicaridges: And in ſome Places they were endow'd with an annual Penſion in Mony. That Vicaridges ſtood in this Condition of Advantage, appears ſufficiently from the Biſhops Regiſters and other Antient Records. As for thoſe impropriated Livings which have now no ſetled Endowment; which are not called Vicaridges, but either perpetual or arbitrary Curacies: Theſe Churches belong'd formerly to thoſe Religious Orders, who ſerv'd the Cure in their own Perſons: After the Diſſolution

(l) Ryves his Vicars Plea.

ſolution of the Abbeys they came into Lay Mens Hands, who hired Curates at the cheapeſt Rate they could bargain: And at preſent 'tis to be fear'd, the matter is little mended. (l)

(l) Harmer p. 66.

The Biſhops diſpos'd for a farther Reformation.

To go on; Cranmer being now deliver'd from that too awful Subjection he had been held under by King Henry, reſolv'd to go on more vigorouſly in purging out abuſes, as our learned Hiſtorian expreſſes it; (m) he had the Countenance of the Protectors Authority, who appear'd wholly in his Deſign; he had alſo ſeveral Biſhops in his Intereſt: In which number we may reckon Holgate of York, Holbeach of Lincoln, Gooderick of Ely; and particularly Ridley, who was conſecrated to the See of Rocheſter in September this Year; Latimer likewiſe, late Biſhop of Worceſter, tho' he declin'd the Exerciſe of his Character, and ſeem'd to affect a private Life, yet declar'd for Cranmers Party, and aſſiſted with his Talent in Preaching.

(m) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. p. 25.

This Deſign oppos'd by the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

On the other ſide, Gardner Biſhop of Wincheſter, was for making a ſtand upon the old Ground. He thought the Reformation was ſufficiently carried on in the late Reign; and was by no means for refining any farther. This Prelate was ſupported with a conſiderable Intereſt both in the Clergy and others; he was much ſhocked at the forwardneſs of Archbiſhop Cranmer, and complain'd of the impoſition of new Homilies. He wrote to the Protector to acquaint him, that the Archbiſhops Reaſons for ſetting forth the Homilies were not ſatisfactory. Cranmer urg'd a Reſolution of the Convocation held in the Year, 1542. That the Biſhops and Clergy then Aſſembl'd, agreed to draw up ſome Diſcourſes for publick Inſtruction, and prevent the ſpreading of Error occaſion'd by ignorant and indiſcreet Preachers. To this Gardner replies; the late King by publiſhing a Form of Belief, had ſuperſeded the uſe of this Expedient. For Proof of this he refers the Protector to his Anſwer to Cranmers Letter. (n)

June the 10. 1547.

Wincheſters Letter to the Protector.

(n) Fox Vol. 2. p. 1.

And to Cranmer.

In this Anſwer, he ſeems much ſurpriz'd at Cranmer's affirming the late King was ſeduc'd, and that he knew who manag'd his Highneſs, in ſetting forth that which Wincheſter calls the King's Majeſty's Book. By this Cranmer meant the neceſſary erudition for a Chriſtian Man. This was that Proviſion which Gardner hinted to the Protector, had made the Homilies unneceſſary.

But to return to Gardner's Anſwer to Cranmer; he tells the Archbiſhop this Book was own'd as the King's Book, and authoriz'd by the whole Parliament: "That his Grace of Canterbury complied with the uſe of this Book all the late Reign, order'd it to be read in his Dioceſe as the King's Book, and commanded one Joſeph not to Preach againſt it. This length of compliance, continues Wincheſter, I conceive your Grace would not have gone, if you had not believ'd the Doctrine of this neceſſary Erudition to have been ſound and ſerviceable: And if the Book contains Truth, a Man can't be ſaid to be ſeduc'd to it, but from it. If your Grace had found any dangerous Heterodoxies in it, I conceive you would have declar'd your Diſſent at firſt, and not have had a Share in paſſing it thro' the Kingdom; for you know we ought to obey God rather than Man. Since therefore your Grace has liv'd four years in the Profeſſion of the Doctrine of that Book, and rais'd no ſcruples during the late Reign, I can't but wonder to find you affirm in your Letters, juſt after our late Soveraigns Death, that his Highneſs was ſeduc'd. (o)

(o) Foxii Mſs. Appen. to Cranmers Memoir p. 73.

Here ſome of the Letter is wanting. In the remaining Part he tells the Archbiſhop that the Kings Minority is a very improper Seaſon for Attempts of this Nature. "That the Government ought to be ſmoothly managed, and not diſturb'd with Novelties in Religion. That notwithſtanding ſome pretend the late King had but imperfect Views in matters of Doctrine, yet our better way is, to go to Heaven after him with one Eye, than by ſtriving for another, to run the Hazard of loſing both. 'Tis a dangerous thing to uſe too much Freedom in Reſearches of this kind. If you cut the old Channel, the Water is apt to run farther than you have a Mind too. If you indulge the Humour of Novelty, you can't put a Stop to People's Demands, nor govern their Indiſcretions at Pleaſure. There is no End in humouring the Deſire of Novelty. Some are for one new thing, and ſome are for another, till they have nothing old, but their Folly left them. We have ſeen how lamentably the Boars embroil'd Germany upon this Principle. To prevent ſuch Confuſion, ſuch Errors in Belief, ſuch civil Diſtractions amongſt our ſelves, the late King put a Reſtraint upon private Fancy, and order'd a Form of Belief and Practiſe for publick Uſe: Thus his Highneſs hop'd he had left us in Poſſeſſion of Truth and Repoſe.

The reſt of the Letter relates to the Controverſy upon the Article of Juſtification. But what was Gardiners Opinion in this matter I ſhall wave at preſent.

This Biſhops Oppoſition to the publick meaſures was reſented at Court, and drew a Storm upon him, as the Reader will ſee by and by. In the mean time I ſhall proceed to the Buſineſs of the Viſitors. The Injunctions deliver'd by theſe Commiſſioners are printed either at length, or abſtracted in Fox, Fuller, Heylin and Sparrow. However, ſince every Reader may not be furniſh'd with theſe Books, ſince the Hiſtory is concern'd in the Recital, I ſhall give a ſummary View of the Articles. In doing this, I ſhall change the Order a little, and throw the reſembling matter together.

"I. All Eccleſiaſtical Perſons are to obſerve the Laws for aboliſhing the pretended Power of the Biſhop of Rome, and maintaining the King's Supremacy. Upon theſe Subjects they were to preach four times a year, that the People might be rightly inform'd, and govern themſelves accordingly.

The King's Injunctions.

II. "Once a quarter they are to diſſwade the People from their ſuperſtitious Fancies touching Pilgrimages, praying to Images, &c. And inſtead of theſe unſerviceable and dangerous Applications, they are to exhort their Audience to the Exerciſes of Faith, Mercy, and Charity. III. And Images that have been abus'd with Pilgrimages and Offerings are order'd to be taken down and deſtroy'd. That no more Wax Candles ſhould be burnt before any Image. However, two Tapers upon the High Altar before the Sacrament were to remain ſtill to ſignify that Chriſt is the very Light of the World. And here they are to put their Pariſhioners in mind that Images ſerve only for Inſtruction, and to refreſh the Memory with the Virtues of the Perſon repreſented.

"IV. That every Holiday, when there is no Sermon the Pater Noſter, the Creed, and Ten Commandments, “mandments, ſhall be read in the Pulpit. V. And Parents and Maſters are injoin'd to breed their Children and Servants either to Learning, or ſome uſeful and honeſt Employment. VII. Within three Months after this Viſitation the Bible of the larger Volume in Engliſh; and within twelve Months Eraſmus his Paraphraſe on the Goſpel was to be provided, and conveniently plac'd in the Church for the Uſe of the People.

“XX. And that every Eccleſiaſtical Perſon under the Degree of a Batchelor of Divinity, ſhall provide for himſelf the New Teſtament in Latin and Engliſh with Eraſmus his Paraphraſe. And that the Biſhops and their Officers ſhall examine the Parochial Clergy upon their Proficiency in the Study of the Holy Scriptures.

“VI. And thoſe who are diſpenc'd with by Statute for Non Reſidence, ſhall get Learned Curates to ſupply their Places. XIV. That all Eccleſiaſtical Perſons who are Non Reſident, and able to ſpend Twenty Pounds per Annum or more, ſhall diſtribute the Fortieth Part of their Revenue amongſt the Poor of the Pariſh. XV. That every Eccleſiaſtical Perſon ſhall allow a competent Exhibition to as many Scholars in one of the Univerſity's as they have Hundred Pounds per Annum in Church Preferments.

“XVI. A Fifth Part of their Benefices was to be laid out on their Manſion Houſes, or Chancels, 'till they were well repair'd. VIII. That no Eccleſiaſtical Perſons go to Ale Houſes or Taverns without Buſineſs and Neceſſity And here likewiſe they are forbidden ſpending their Time at Cards, Dice, or any unlawful Diverſion.

“IX. They are to examine ſuch as come to Confeſſion in Lent, whether they can repeat the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and Ten Commandments in Engliſh. And that unleſs they are thus far acquainted with the Fundamentals of Religion, they ought not to be admitted to the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar.

“X. None is admitted to preach unleſs ſufficiently licens'd. XI. If they have heretofore magnified Pilgrimages, Relicks, Worſhipping of Images, or any ſuch ſuperſtitious Practice, they are now oblig'd to a publick Recantation of ſuch Opinions.

By the way the ill Uſe of Images, and the Superſtition of Pilgrimages is fully remedied by the Inſtitution, and neceſſary Erudition publiſh'd in the late Reign.

“XII. They are to preſent ſuch as they perceive are Hinderers of the Word of God in Engliſh, aud the Abettors of the Biſhop of Romes pretens'd Power.

“XIX. That no Perſon ſhall alter any Faſt Day, or change the Form and Order of Common Prayer or Divine Service, any otherwiſe than is ſpecified in theſe Injunctions XXI And that in time of High Maſs he that ſays or ſings the ſame, ſhall read the Epiſtle and Goſpel in Engliſh, and one Chapter at Mattins immediately after the Leſſons: And at Even Song after Magnificat, one Chapter of the Old Teſtament. And that when nine Leſſons are to be read in the Church, three of them ſhall be omitted with the Reſponds. And at Even Song the Reſponds with all the Memories ſhall be likewiſe omitted

By the Memories we are to underſtand the Anniverſary Commemoration of deceaſed Perſons. This was done at the Return of the Day of their Death, and commonly mention'd under the Name of Obits.

“XXVI. Every Dean, Archdeacon, Prebendary, &c. being a Prieſt is to preach twice a year at leaſt in ſome Church belonging to his Preferment.

“XXVII. The Clergy are to caution their People againſt Incomplyance with the Ceremonies of the Church, and on the other ſide to avoid the Exceſſes of Superſtition. XXV. That thoſe who are maliciouſly affected, and diſcover themſelves in a State of Enmity with their Neighbours, ſhould not be admitted to the Holy Communion, till the Controverſy is taken up, and they are openly reconcil'd.

“XXIII. That to avoid Diſputes formerly occaſion'd by Peoples claiming Precedency in Proceſſions; no Proceſſion for the time to come ſhall be us'd about the Church, or Church-yard : But immediately before High Maſs the Litany ſhall be diſtinctly ſaid or ſung in Engliſh: And here none were to go out of the Church without juſt occaſion, and no Bells were to be rung, excepting one before Sermon.

“XXVIII. All Shrines, Coverings of Shrines, Tables, Candleſticks, Trindels, or Rolls of Wax, Paintings, and other Monuments of feign'd Miracles were to be taken away and deſtroy'd. The Curates were likewiſe to exhort their Pariſhioners to follow this Example in their reſpective Houſes.

“XXIV. That the Holy Day ſhould be wholly ſpent in Religious Service, in hearing the Word of God, in private and publick Prayer, in Confeſſion of Sin to God, in receiving the Communion, viſiting the Sick, putting an End to Animoſities and Quarrels. This Article is not without one Reſerve of Liberty. For the Curates are oblig'd to inſtruct their Pariſhioners, that in Harveſt time 'tis lawful for them to work on Holy Days, and preſerve the Bleſſings of the year ſent them by Providence. And that to forbear working out of Scrupuloſity upon ſuch occaſions, would be highly diſpleaſing to God Almighty. Under the Holy Day mention'd in this Article, Heylin will have the Sunday comprehended. He argues pretty cloſely from a Statute towards the latter End of this Reign, (p) in which the Sunday is mention'd amongſt the reſt of the Feſtivals with a Clauſe of Allowance for working in Harveſt, or at other Times when Neceſſity ſhall require. He urges farther that not only the Country but the Court were allow'd to do Buſineſs upon this Day: He recites an Order of the King to this purpoſe. viz. That the Lords of the Council ſhould upon Sunday attend the publick Affairs of this Realm, diſpatch Anſwers to Letters for good Order of State, and make full Diſpatches of all Things concluded the Week before. Provided always that they be preſent at Common Prayer, and that on every Sunday Night the King's Secretary ſhould deliver him a Memorial of ſuch Things as are to be debated by the Privy Council in the Week enſuing. And thus by the Words of the Statute, and the Practice of the Court, this Hiſtorian believes the Meaning of the Article in the Injunctions may be eaſily collected. (q) But whether theſe Permiſſions of the State don't indulge too far: Whether they are to be reconcil'd with the Cuſtoms and Conſtitutions of the Church, or not, is another Queſtion, of which no more at preſent.

To go on with the Injunctions, viz. 'Tis order'd that a Regiſter Book be kept in every Pariſh for Weddings, Chriſtnings, and Burials.

(p) 5. 6. E. 6 cap. 3.

(q) Heylin p. 38.

" XXIX. That a ſtrong Cheſt be provided to receive the Charity of the People, and the Mony diſtributed, at proper Times, to the Poor before the Congregation, and that a decent Pulpit be provided.

" XXXII. That in Regard a ſufficient Number of Preachers are wanting, the Curates ſhall read Homilies ſet forth already, or which ſhall be ſet forth by the King's Authority.

" XXXVI. And that when any Homily or Sermon ſhall be deliver'd, the Prime and Hours ſhall be omitted.

" XVIII. That none bound to pay Tythes ſhall detain them under Pretence, the Curates have been negligent in their Office. XXXIII. And whereas many indiſcreet Perſons are obſerv'd to contemn and abuſe Prieſts upon the Score, that ſome of them are but ſlenderly qualified; yet inaſmuch as their Function is appointed by God Almighty, his Majeſty charges all his Subjects to treat them with Regard for their Characters ſake.

" XXXI. And becauſe the buying and ſelling of Benefices is execrable before God, the Incumbent guilty of any Simoniacal Contract ſhall be depriv'd of his Living, and made uncapable of any other Spiritual Promotion. The Patron likewiſe who ſells a Preſentation, or makes his Profit out of it by any indirect Agreement, ſhall forfeit his Title for that Turn, and the Living ſhall lapſe to the King.

The Penalty in this Article, tho' reaſonable enough, is a Strain upon the Conſtitution; for here the King diſpoſeth arbitrarily of Property, and ouſts the Subject of their Patronage, to which they had a Right by Common Law. The Statute made in the late Reign by which the King's Proclamations are of the ſame force with an Act of Parliament (r) will do no Service in this Caſe: For here the Inheritances, Rights, and Poſſeſſions of the Subject are expreſly ſav'd.

(r) 31. H. 8. cap. 8.

" To return, XXII. To prevent Sick Perſons falling into Deſpair, the Curates are admoniſh'd to furniſh their Memories with ſuch comfortable Texts of Scripture as ſet forth the Mercies and Goodneſs of God Almighty toward all Perſons, that apply for Pardon with Faith and Repentance. XXX. That Prieſts ſhall not be oblig'd to viſit Women in Child-bed, unleſs they are dangerouſly Sick: Nor to fetch any Coarſes except they be brought to the Church-yard. XXXIV. That no Perſons whether they underſtand Latin or not, ſhall make uſe of any other Primer to pray with, but that which was ſet forth by King Henry the Eighth. That all Graces before and after Meat be ſaid in Engliſh; and no Grammar taught in Schools, but that recommended by Authority. XXXIX. That Chantry Prieſts teach young People to read and write. Theſe Injunctions were to be read once a quarter.

Beſides this general Proviſion there were other Injunctions drawn up for the Biſhops. Theſe Directions of the King and Council were deliver'd by the Commiſſioners in their Viſitation. The Purport of them was that, Particular Injunctions deliver'd by the Viſitors to the Biſhops.

" They (the Biſhops) ſhould to the utmoſt of their Power and Underſtanding, ſee the King's Injunctions above-mention'd, exactly obſerv'd in all Places of their Dioceſe.

" That they ſhould Preach Four times a Year at leaſt: Once in the Cathedral, and Three other times within their Juriſdiction, as they ſhould think moſt convenient: This was not to be omitted without a fair and juſtifiable Excuſe.

" Farther; They were forbidden to Ordain any Perſons, excepting thoſe who had ſtudied the Holy Scripture to ſome Apparent Proficiency: And where neither this Qualification, nor that of regular Behaviour was wanting, Orders were not to be refus'd.

" Laſtly; The Biſhops were Injoin'd not to Preach any thing contrary to the Doctrine, lately ſet forth in the King's Homilies; nor to Licenſe any Perſons whom they had reaſon to ſuſpect for Incompliance: And when they were inform'd of any Preacher offending againſt the Premiſes, they were to bar him the Pulpit, and revoke his Licenſe. (p)

(p) Fox Vol. 2. p. 657.

Bidding of Prayer.

There was alſo a Form of bidding Prayer preſcrib'd by the Viſitors; 'twas to be us'd by all Preachers, either before or in their Sermons, as they thought fit. The laſt Part of it differing from what is us'd at preſent runs thus,

You ſhall Pray for all them that be departed out of this World in the Faith of Chriſt, that they with us, and we with them, at the Day of Judgment, may reſt both Body and Soul with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven. (q)

(q) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 37.

And here becauſe the Beads, or Form of bidding Prayer prior to the Reformation, may not be unacceptable to the Reader, I ſhall Inſert it amongſt the Records. (r)

(r) See Num. Records 54.

To make way for the Injunctions, and give a Preſident to the reſt of the Kingdom, the Compline being the cloſe of the Evening Service, was Sung in the King's Chappel in Engliſh on Eaſter Monday. The Tendency of the Times, and the inclinations of the Court being underſtood, ſeveral learned Men retracted their Opinions, whether out of Conſcience or Temporizing, is beſt known to themſelves. For Inſtance, beſides Dr. Smith, Dr. Pern, afterwards Maſter of Peterhouſe in Cambridge Preaching in London at St. Andrew's Underſhaft, on St. George's Day, affirm'd the Figures of our Saviour and the Saints were to be Worſhip'd, but on the Seventeenth of June following he Preach'd Counter Doctrine in the ſame Church, declar'd himſelf miſtaken, and that he was ſorry for what he had deliver'd. One Dr. Glaſier was ſomewhat forwarder, and more remarkable; for immediately after Lent, he not only maintain'd in a Sermon at St. Paul's Croſs, that Lent was no Divine Inſtitution, but went farther, and affirm'd that Abſtinence from Fleſh was no Obligatory Obſervance. That Lent was only a Politick Proviſion of the State, and therefore People might break it at Pleaſure. This being palatable Doctrine, and too much encourag'd by the Juncture, the Preacher came into no Trouble about his Sermon. People being thus encourag'd by Precept and Connivance, went much too far in Liberty and Indulgence, and therefore to prevent Exceſſes of this kind, the King ſet forth a Proclamation, and commanded Abſtinence from Fleſh, for the following Lent. (s)

Several Preachers recant ſome of their former Opinions.

(s) Heylin p. 39.

Biſhop Gardner being a Prelate of Figure, there was pains taken to perſwade him to ſubmit to the Injunctions. To this purpoſe Sir John Godſalve, one of the Viſitors, had argued with the Biſhop, Preſs'd him upon the point of Intereſt, and ſuggeſted the danger of Non-compliance. Gardner after ſome recollection ſends Godſalve a Letter upon this Subject. 'Tis Written in a ſtrain becoming a Chriſtian Biſhop, and therefore it may not be improper to abſtract part of it.

Biſhop Gardners Letter to one of the Viſitors againſt Complyance.

“He tells this Gentleman that notwithſtanding his Perſonal Failings, he had not broke God's Laws, or the King's, either in getting, or keeping his Biſhoprick. Now if he could quit his See, as Inoffenſively as he had manag'd the other Two Parts, he ſhould hope his Life not ill paſs'd over. How to manage this Third Act, as he calls it, and go handſomely off the Stage, muſt be his main Buſineſs. Provided this Point is ſecur'd, he ſhould not be ſolicitous about the reſt, nor be more concern'd to ſee the Biſhoprick taken from him, then himſelf from the Biſhoprick. I am, ſays he already, by Nature, Condemn'd to Death: No Man can pardon this Sentence, nor ſo much as procure me a Reprieve; thus there is a neceſſity of leaving my Biſhoprick to the diſpoſal of the Crown. I have been oblig'd already to leave a pleaſant Seat at London: And as I have quitted ſome Conveniencies already, ſo I am prepar'd to reſign all. There is no diſadvantage in changing for the better; now Truth and Honeſty are more valuable to me, than all the Wealth of the Kingdom. To ſpeak my Mind, and Act as my Conſcience directs, are Two Branches of Liberty I can never part with. Integrity in Speech and Action are entertaining Qualities: Beſides, they will ſtick by a Man when every thing takes its leave, and therefore, I muſt not reſign them upon any Conſideration; and the beſt on it is, if I do not throw them away my ſelf, no Man can force them from me; but if I give them up, then I am ruin'd by my ſelf, and deſerve to loſe my Biſhoprick. This would be ſport to ſome People that would gladly be in my Place, but I don't intend to give them that malitious Pleaſure. What Homilies and Injunctions will be brought to me I can't tell, ſuch as the Printers have Sold, I have Read and Conſider'd, and therefore am the better prepar'd how to behave my ſelf when the Viſitors come hither: And here I intend to ſpeak clearly to the Caſe, and ſupport the Character of a Chriſtian without Cowardice or Reſerve. The Benefit of the King's Laws are every Engliſh Mans Right, and therefore Biſhops ought not to loſe their ſhare in the common Advantage. I intend to behave my ſelf like a good Subject, and pay a juſt deference to the Conſtitution. Now all this is very Conſiſtent with an humble Petition, not to be forc'd upon any thing contrary to my Duty to God, and the Tenour of an Act of Parliament. With this Reſolution I have acquainted the Council, with a requeſt not to be forc'd upon any unacceptable Proteſtation: Which Proteſtation, if matters come to extremity, I can't decline without Scandal and Prevarication. My Lord Protector in one of his Letters bid me not be too Apprehenſive of Hardſhip: Indeed I know him and ſeveral Lords of the Council ſo well, as not to fear they will do me any harm for inſiſting upon the Conſtitution, and keeping cloſe to the Laws of God and the Realm: I ſhall never reproach theſe Lords ſo far, as to ſuppoſe they will make me ſuffer upon this Score. You know, continues the Biſhop, the force of an Act of Parliament; what danger hangs over a Man's Head that will venture through it; for this you may recollect ſeveral Inſtances, and that the breach of an Act of Parliament, won't ſhelter a Man from the forfeiture of Treaſon, tho' the ſtretch was made by the King's expreſs Order. (t)

(t) Ex. MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

His Reaſons for inſiſting on the Conſtitution.

The reaſon of Gardner's inſiſting ſo much upon the Conſtitution both in this Letter, and ſome others to the Protector, was becauſe the Religion profeſs'd in the late Reign, was eſtabliſh'd by Law. 'Tis True, the King's Proclamation was in ſome Caſes made of the ſame force with an Act of Parliament. (u) But then ſuch Proclamations were to be Proclaim'd, and paſted up by the Sheriff, or ſome other Officer, in Market Towns. Beſides, by an expreſs Clauſe the King's Proclamation was not to over-rule any Act in being. Now we don't find the Injunctions of Edward the Sixth, were either Proclaim'd in the manner above-mention'd, or ſupported by any Proclamation. Beſides, the Statute of the Six Articles was afterwards made in the ſame Parliament, (w) in which the Bill paſs'd for giving the King's Proclamation an unuſual ſway. From whence we may probably conclude the King's Proclamation could not have any force to diſable this latter Statute. Farther; Two or Three Years after this in the late Reign, (x) there was another Act paſs'd againſt Innovation in Religion. By this Act no Books are to be Publiſh'd contrary to the Doctrine determin'd, or to be determin'd by the King, under conſiderable Forfeitures. And if any Spiritual Perſon ſhould Teach contrary to the Premiſes he was to abjure, or ſuffer as a Heretick. Now the late King, with the Conſent of the Clergy, had ſet forth the neceſſary Erudition as a Rule of Faith and Practice. This Book we ſee ſtood upon the bottom of an Act of Parliament: But the Homilies and Injunctions now ſet forth by the King and Council, claſh'd with the neceſſary Erudition, oppos'd ſome part of the Doctrine, and alter'd the uſages recommended by that Book. Thus Gardner, conceiving himſelf under the Protection of the Conſtitution, made a bold ſtand againſt the Council, and refus'd to comply with the Homilies and Injunctions.

Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. Book 1. Record Num. 13.

(u) 31. H. 8. Cap. 8.

(w) 31. H. 8. Cap. 14.

(x) 34, 35. H. 8. Cap. 1.

The Court, who 'tis thought might have ſomething farther than Religion (y) in view, did not think it adviſeable to venture the cauſe upon diſputation, and rely wholly upon Arguments. They might be Apprehenſive that unleſs the diſagreement between Rome and England was carried to a wider diſtance, the Breach might poſſibly be clos'd: And that ſuch a Union might prove unfriendly to their Church Eſtates. (z) On the other Hand they were not aſſur'd, whether any farther alterations in Doctrine and Worſhip would be well receiv'd. The Minority of the Prince was a Circumſtance of Diſadvantage; And how far the People would be Paſſive under a new Face of things, was not eaſy to Conjecture. To guard againſt the worſt, 'twas thought fit to be furniſh'd with Forces to awe the oppoſite Party, and prevent them from giving diſturbance. And as an Army was a ſeaſonable Proviſion, there wanted not a Colour to raiſe it. A Marriage, as hath been obſerv'd, was agreed in the late Reign between the Young Queen of Scotland, and the Preſent King. But the Scots fail'd in their Articles: The Protector and the Council therefore reſolv'd to bring them to reaſon. For this purpoſe Men are levied, a Fleet equipp'd, and the

(y) Godwin Annal.

(z) Id. ad An. 1547.

The Protector levies Forces, and prepares for an Expedition againſt Scotland.

the Veteran Troops at Boulogne and Calais Imbarqued for England. The Protector likewiſe had ſeveral Regiments of Walloons, and Germans in his Pay: Not that he had a better Opinion of their Courage, but becauſe he might believe them more ready to execute any harſh Service at Home, if Occaſion required. (a)

(a) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 40.

A fair Correſpondence with the Emperor and France endeavour'd.

For a farther ſecurity He took Care to keep a fair Correſpondence with the Neighbouring Princes. Dr. Wotton Dean of Canterbury was diſpatch'd to the Court of Vienna: The chief Buſineſs of his Embaſſy, was to prevail with the Emperor to keep firm to the Alliance, made with England in the late Reign, and not to come to any cloſer Union with France. But more eſpecially he was to Solicit his Imperial Majeſty, to declare himſelf an Enemy to the Scottiſh Nation, excepting thoſe in the Engliſh Intereſt.

To bring the French to a friendly Diſpoſition, a Proclamation was iſſued to reſtore all ſuch Ships and Goods, which had been taken from them, ſince the Death of King Henry. To oblige that Court farther, the Engliſh Council paid a particular regard to the Memory of King Francis the Firſt. This Prince died on the 22d of March laſt, and on the 19th of June a Dirige was Sung for him in all the Churches in London. The Choir of St. Paul's was hung with Mourning, and no other Circumſtance of State or Solemnity omitted. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with Eight other Biſhops, in their richeſt Pontifical Habits, Sung a Maſs of Requiem, and a Sermon was Preach'd by Dr. Ridley Elect of Rocheſter.

The French Kings Obſequies ſolemniz'd in London.

Id.

To go on. The Forces for the Scotch Expedition being drawn together, the Protector, who was their General, March'd to the Borders. The Fleet which Cruiz'd along the Coaſt, and attended the Army, was commanded by the Lord Clinton. The Protector entred Scotland on the 3d of September, and being willing to take up the Quarrel, wrote a Letter to the Earl of Arran, Governor of that Kingdom.

The Protectors Letter to offer the Scotch a Ceſſation of Arms.

"He deſir'd the Scots would conſider, the War was begun between Two Chriſtian Nations, that the Engliſh projected nothing farther than a juſt and honourable Peace, which all good People ſhould endeavour to promote: That now there was a happy opportunity of bringing both Nations to a laſting Friendſhip, by the Marriage of their Princeſs. That this Alliance has been courted by the Engliſh, and ſolemnly promiſ'd by the Scotch Nobility: That the Protector was ſurpriz'd to find them deſert ſo publick an Engagement, and apply to Force, the Iſſue of which is not only doubtful, but commonly Calamitous, even to thoſe that Conquer. That 'twas not to be ſuppos'd their Queen would always Live ſingle: If not, where could ſhe engage better than with a Powerful Prince, who Govern'd upon the ſame Iſland, and ſpoke the ſame Language with her ſelf? They were not inſenſible that Intermarrying with Forreigners was attended with Inconveniencies, which was much better to Read in Hiſtory, then prove by Experiment. Thus it appears the Demands of the Engliſh Court were very reaſonable: However, he was ſo far from thirſting after Chriſtian Blood, that provided he perceived the Scots inclin'd to an Accommodation, he would relax in ſome Points, and ſoften the Articles; The Scots ſhould have the liberty of Educating the Queen in their own Country, till ſhe came to a Marriageable Age, and could chuſe her Husband her ſelf by the Advice of her Nobility. That in the mean Time there ſhould be a Ceſſation of Arms, the Queen not convey'd beyond Sea, nor any Matrimonial Alliance made, either with the French or any Forreign Prince. Now provided the Performance of all this was Solemnly promis'd, he was ready to retire peaceably, and Counter-march into England: To make Reſtitution for dammages done, and refer the matters to indifferent Judges. (b)

(b) Godwin Annal.

The Battle at Pinky, near Muſſleborough.

The Scots were Thirty Thouſand Effective Men, and near double the Number of the Engliſh: The Generals relying on the Superiority of their Forces, and imagining the Protectors Offer had more of Fear than Friendſhip, refuſ'd to hearken to any Terms, and would not ſo much as ſuffer the Protectors Letters to be read in a Council of War. They were Apprehenſive, it ſeems, the reaſonableneſs of the Propoſal might work upon the Officers, and diſencline them to a Battel. Thus, being confident of Victory, they ſpread a report, that nothing leſs would content the Engliſh, then having the Queen put into their Hands, and that they would never give over the War, till they had Conquer'd the Country. The Scots being inrag'd with this Story to the laſt Degree, were impatient to Charge the Enemy. But thoſe of their Commanders who had more thought than Paſſion, were of Opinion it was by no means Prudent; all to hazard a Battle: That the Engliſh were already ſomewhat diſtreſs'd for want of Forrage, that they could neither Retreat thro' ſo many Defiles, nor break thro' the Scotch Intrenchments without great Diſadvantage. However, the main of the Scotch Army was ſo elated with the fancy of Victory, that good Advice was loſt upon them. Thus they March'd out of a well Fortified Camp, and gave the Engliſh their Wiſh. In ſhort, the Armies charg'd near Muſſleborough: The Scots having maintain'd the Fight for ſometime, were quite broken, quitted their Artillery, and retir'd in the utmoſt Diſorder. The Scots loſt Fourteen Thouſand Men, with their Cannon and Baggage, and had Fifteen Hundred taken Priſoners; amongſt which were ſeveral of the Nobility, and a great many Gentlemen of Quality.

September the 10th Anno Dom. 1547.

Id. Stow Annal.

The remainder of the Scotch Army retir'd to Striveling, and left the Country to be overrun by the Engliſh. The Protector March'd to Leith the next Day, put Garriſons in ſeveral Places, Plunder'd Edinburgh, uncover'd the Abbey of Holy-rood-houſe, and carried off the Lead, and the Bells. But he neither took the Caſtle of Edinborough, nor mov'd forward to Striveling where the Queen lay, with the Debris of the Army. 'Twas thought the Conſternation was ſuch, that no Place would have held out againſt him. But ſome private Reaſons it ſeems preſs'd his return, and made him ſlip the Opportunity of finiſhing the War, which had he follow'd his Blow, might have been effected without much Difficulty. (c) However, it muſt be ſaid he had done enough to raiſe his Reputation, and gain a great deal of Honour: His Succeſs was not only very Conſiderable, but very Cheap to the Engliſh, there not having been above Sixty Men loſt in the Expedition. At his coming

(c) Bp. Burnet pt. 2d. p. 34.

Septem. 29.

coming away he receiv'd a Meſſage from the Queen and Governor of Scotland: The Buſineſs was to propoſe a Treaty: The Protector accepted the Overture, appointed Berwick for the Place, and left the Earl of Warwick to Treat with the Scotch Commiſſioners: The Earl expected their coming, but no Body appear'd, for the Offer was no more than an Amuſement to gain time, and concert Meaſures with France.

Id.
Bonner demurs to the Injunctions.

While the Protector was Abſent in Scotland, the Viſitors went their Circuit, and met with a ſmoother Buſineſs than they expected. Moſt of the Biſhops reſign'd to the Council, and acquieſc'd in the Injunctions. On the Fifth of September, the Commiſſioners Sate in St. Paul's Cathedral, to Examine the Dean and Chapter, and Reform the Ceremonies at Diſcretion. (d) Biſhop Bonner was cited, and the Injunctions and Homilies tender'd: He offer'd to comply, but not without a Reſerve in theſe Words. I do receive theſe Injunctions and Homilies with this Proteſtation, that I will obſerve them if they be not contrary and repugnant to God's Law, and the Statutes and Ordinances of this Church. (e)

He makes an abſolute Submiſſion but is ſent to the Fleet.

But after ſome Recollection, he addreſs'd the King for Leave to make a more implicit and unconditional Submiſſion, which was done before his Majeſty and the Privy Council, in the Form following.

“ Whereas I Edmund Biſhop of London, have at ſuch Time as I receiv'd the King's Majeſty's, my moſt Dread Severaign Lords, Injunctions and Homilies at the Hands of his Highneſſes Viſitors, did unadviſedly make ſuch Proteſtation, as now, upon better Conſideration of my Duty of Obedience, and of the ill Example that may enſue to others thereof, appeareth to me neither reaſonable, nor ſuch as might well ſtand with the Duty of an humble Subject; Foraſmuch as the ſame Proteſtation, at my Requeſt, was then by the R*egiſter* of that Viſitation enacted and put in R*ecord*; I have thought it my Bounden Duty, not only to declare before your Lordſhips, That I do now, upon better Conſideration of my Duty, renounce and revoke my ſaid Proteſtation. but alſo moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhips, that this my Revocation of the ſame may likewiſe be put in the ſame Records for a perpetual Memory of the Truth: Moſt Humbly beſeeching your good Lordſhips, both to take Order that it may take Effect, and alſo that my former unadviſed Doings may by your good Mediations, be pardon'd of the King's Majeſty (f)

Edmund London.

This Submiſſion, tho' as full as required, yet not being made without Heſitancy and demurring, was not accepted for full Satisfaction. The Biſhop, tho' pardon'd in the main, was puniſh'd by Impriſonment for his firſt Incompliance. He was committed to the Fleet, and kept there till the 17th of November following. During his Reſtraint the Litany was ſung in his Cathedral in the Engliſh Tongue, and the Epiſtle and Goſpel read at High Maſs in the ſame Language. At his being inlarg'd the Figures of our Saviour, of the Bleſſed Virgin, and St. John, and all other Images in St. Pauls, and the other Churches in London were taken down, as Heylin relates. If ſo, Bonner ſeems reſolv'd to make amends for his former Stiffneſs, and go beyond the Order of the Council. For the Injunctions did not oblige him thus far, they only injoyn the removing Images which have been abus'd with Pilgrimages, and unwarrantable Worſhip, but provided they ſerv'd only for Memory and Inſtruction, they recommend their Uſe, and allow them to ſtand. Bellaſſeer Archdeacon of Colcheſter, and Gilbert Bourn Archdeacon of London and Eſſex, were no leſs forward in complying with the Viſitors, and executing their Orders.

Images remov'd in London.

Biſhop of Winchester committed to the Fleet.

But Biſhop Gardner was not of ſo ductile a Temper: He ſeems to have thought himſelf in the Right, and had ſomething of Courage to maintain his Sentiment. He had expreſs'd his Diſlike of the Viſitation: 'Tis probable he might except againſt the Character of the Commiſſioners, being moſt of them Lay-men: But the Men and the Manner was not all his Objection, it ſeems he was ſhock'd with the Matter too. For being examin'd at the Council Board, he declar'd himſelf not altogether ſatisfied with the Homilies and Injunctions, and therefore could not promiſe Complyance thro' the whole Books. Upon this the Council ſent him to the Fleet.

Septemb. 25.

His Letter to the Protector.

Soon after his Commitment the Protector being return'd to London, Biſhop Gardner wrote to him, and ſent him his Reaſons why he could not give the Council Satisfaction. “ He acquaints him that the Injunctions deliver'd by the Viſitors order'd the Uſe of two Books, the Homilies and Eraſmus his Paraphraſe. Now theſe Books, ſays he, have no Harmony of Doctrine in them, they differ in material Articles? The Homilies, make Juſtification depend wholly on Faith excluſive of Charity: But Eraſmus his Paraphraſe affirms that Juſtificatton requires both theſe Qualities, and that Faith muſt have Love or Charity join'd with it.

He charges Eraſmus his Paraphraſe with Contradiction to the Homilies and Injunctions.

“ The Homily of Salvation maintains that Remiſſion of Sins is accepted of God for perfect Juſtification. The Doctrine of the Parliament (meaning the neceſſary Erudition) teaches us that Juſtification, as to the Compaſs of the Notion, includes more Parts than Remiſſion of Sins, and that tho' Remiſſion of Sins is in ſome Senſe a Juſtification, yet the Intireneſs of that Idea is not comprehended in it.

“ The Book of Homilies reckons Palmes, Candles, and the Panis Benedictus, or Holy Bread amongſt Popiſh Superſtitions and Abuſes. But the neceſſary Erudition, authoriz'd by the Parliament, recommends the Uſe of theſe Ceremonies; which is likewiſe done by the Injunctions now ſet forth. The Homily of Salvation cites St. Chryſoſtome unfairly, and tranſlates that Faith which is Hope in the Original. Now Truth, ſays Gardner, is able to maintain it ſelf, and has no need of falſe Suggeſtion. Such myſterious Management does but diſſerve a Cauſe, and give the Enemy Advantage.

From hence the Biſhop proceeds to acquaint the Protector with Eraſmus his Opinion.

“ If we are ſays he, to govern our Belief by Eraſmus his Authority, he will tell us that the Doctrine of ſola Fides juſtificat, or that we are juſtified by ſingle and ſolitary Faith, is no better than rank Poyſon. The denying the Invocation of Saints of the Pains in Purgatory, and the Neceſſity of good Work's, are likewiſe rang'd by this Author “ under

(d) Stow Annal.

(e) Council Book Fol. 110.

(f) Heylin p. 41.

(g) Heylin p. 42.

under the ſame Claſs of deſtructive Errors. And elſewhere Eraſmus, after having drawn a Parallel between the State of the Primitive and preſent Church, concludes with this Remark, that if St. Paul were now living, he would indeed cenſure the Misbehaviour of Men, but not condemn the Doctrine and Conſtitution of the modern Church. This, ſays he, was Eraſmus his Judgment in the latter Part of his Life.

Unſound Opinions in Eraſmus his Paraphraſe.

“As to his Paraphraſe upon the New Teſtament, the ſtudying of which is injoyn'd the Pariſh Prieſts by the Injunctions, this Book was written 26 years ſince, before the Author was come to a full Maturity of Judgment. Indeed this Paraphraſe is ſo crudely and uncautiouſly manag'd, that the allowing it a free Paſſage may probably give ill Men an Handle not only to diſturb the Church, but embarraſs the State.

“For inſtance, thoſe Texts of Scripture, which are commonly urg'd for Obedience to Princes, Eraſmus expounds in a manner out of all Force and Significancy; ſo that if his Authority may paſs, they will take but little hold of Peoples Conſciences. His Paraphraſe is not like other Expoſitions of Scripture, where the Author ſpeaks as from himſelf; no, Eraſmus takes the Liberty to diſcourſe in our Saviours Perſon, and that of the inſpired Writers, and ſometimes throws in a ſupplemental Clauſe of his own. For the purpoſe, where our Saviour commands us to render unto Cæſar the Things which are Cæſars, from whence we truly infer the Emperor had a right to command ſeveral Things from the Subject: Here Eraſmus puts in an If; if there be any thing due to them: Thus he gloſſes away the Meaning of the Text, by throwing in a Condition wholly unmention'd by our Saviour. I have the Engliſh Tranſlation, continues the Biſhop by me, and ſhall tranſcribe the Paſſage for your Grace: The Words are theſe, render therefore unto Cæſar, if any Things appertain unto Cæſar. But firſt of all render unto God the Things that appertain unto God. Meaning that it is no Hurt unto Godlineſs, if a Man being dedicate unto God, do give Tribute unto a prophane Prince, altho' he owed it not.

“I ſhall not trouble your Grace with any more Citations upon this Head, tho' in general I may affirm, the Paraphraſe takes a very unwarrantable Freedom with Princes, omits nothing that may weaken their Character, and give an unſerviceable Idea of Civil Government. As for Biſhops, he treats them with great Reſpect, calls them no leſs than Evangelical Princes, whereas the Supreme Magiſtrate is mention'd in no better Style than that of prophane Prince. He likewiſe commends Archbiſhop Becket for proceeding to cenſures againſt the King for detaining the Mannour of Oxford. (*)

(*) Here the Paraphraſe miſtakes matter of Fact.

“'Tis likely the Tranſlator might have omitted this Paſſage: But Eraſmus his Pen was very untoward in thoſe Days.

“Farther, the Paraphraſe maintains that Chriſtians can challenge nothing but Charity or Love from their Neighbours, and can make no Claims of Debt or Right upon each other. This is an extraordinary Aſſertion, and hath an immediate Tendency to deſtroy the Obligation of Laws, and make the Duties of Relations, and Civil Life ſignifie little. Here Eraſmus contradicts the Tenour of Scripture, and aſſerts a plain Untruth. Thus your Grace may ſee what dangerous Poſitions he advances with Reſpect to the State.

“The Subject of Religion is not at all better handled. Here Things of the laſt Importance are expreſs'd without Truth or Diſcretion. I ſhall give your Grace ſome few Inſtances.

“The Sacrament of the Altar is mention'd by him in unprimitive and unguarded Language. He calls it Holy Bread, and a Symbol; and in ſhort makes Uſe of ſuch Terms which might, if it were poſſible, as our Saviour ſpeaks in another Caſe, deceive the very Elect. But to do Eraſmus Juſtice, when he was farther advanc'd in years, he writes with more Caution, mentions the Sacrament of the Altar with all imaginable Reverence, comes up to the Doctrine of the Church, and complains of thoſe who would interpret him to another Meaning.

“Farther, the Paraphraſe allows a Man who had parted with his Wife for Adultery, the Liberty of marrying with another. The Paraphraſe gives Biſhops and Prieſts leave to marry. And here Eraſmus pretends the Apoſtle intended to deſcribe the Qualities requir'd in the Wifes of Prieſts and Biſhops. But here the Paraphraſer miſtook himſelf. For St. Paul knew that if a Biſhop or Prieſt was once married, he muſt take his Wife with all her Faults, for then it would be too late to tell what ſhe ſhould be; for when the Bargain is once made, neither St. Paul, nor St. Peter can mend her. And if Biſhops have the Privilege of changing their Wifes, 'till they anſwer the Deſcription Eraſmus puts upon the Apoſtle, they would be wonderfully envied by other People. But I affirm St. Paul did not diſcourſe of Biſhops Wifes in the Text (b) I write therefore with an Air of Raillery to give your Grace a ſtronger Image of the Abſurdity of the Gloſs.

(h) 1 Tim. 3. cap. v. 11.

But here the Biſhop uſes too much Levity upon a Scripture Argument: Beſides he wreſts the Text, and Reaſons extravagantly. For the Apoſtles deſcribing a Wifes Duty does not give the Husband a Liberty of a Divorce in Caſe ſhe fell ſhort in any Circumſtance: At this rate no Relation could have any Firmneſs; but Children might change their Parents, and Subjects their Governors, whenever they fail'd in the Offices and Returns juſtly expected from them.

“The Paraphraſe as the Biſhop goes on, calls the keeping a Concubine a ſmall Fault. I I leave your Grace to conſider the Conſequence of this Doctrine.

“The Paraphraſe ſeems to make no Degrees in Virtue and Vice, but maintains that unleſs a Man riſes to the Top of Goodneſs, he muſt be ſtark naught: And in this he both contradicts Truth and the Homilies.

“The Paraphraſe wreſts the Scripture upon the Subject of Tythes, and Claſhes with the Injunctions where they are order'd to be juſtly paid.

“Thus I have recounted to your Grace ſome of a great many Faults in the Original, and which Eraſmus himſelf muſt anſwer for. As to the Engliſh Tranſlator he has likewiſe his particular Miſcarriages. His Faults are ſometimes to be charg'd upon Ignorance, and “ ſometimes on Deſign: He chops and changes, leaves out, and puts in, at Pleaſure. And here for every Falſhood I have written to your Grace, I am willing a Hundred Pounds Fine ſhould be ſet on my Head that I may lie here like a Beggar, till my Rents have anſwer'd it. What I offer is under my Hand, and in Caſe I deſerve it, may be alledg'd as a Record againſt me. (i)

The Biſhop's Plea before the Privy Council.

The Biſhop proceeds to urge the danger of the Laws, in caſe he ſhould comply with the Homilies and Injunctions. “ And here he Acquaints the Protector how the Judges have been often fin'd, for Acting againſt the Laws, tho' at the King's Command: That the Lord Tiptofft loſt his Head, and Cardinal Woolſey was ruin'd upon this Score. From hence he goes on to relate what paſs'd between him and the Council at his Commitment. That at firſt he promis'd to receive the Injunctions as far as he was bound by the Laws of God and the Realm: That being preſs'd to a more direct Anſwer, and menac'd with harſh Conſequences, he endeavor'd to Diſengage himſelf as far as his Conſcience would give him leave. To this purpoſe he told the Council it would be Three Weeks before the Viſitors could reach his Dioceſe. That in the mean Time he was willing to go to Oxford, and debate the Queſtion. This Motion being refus'd, he deſir'd a Conference with ſome learned Men at his Houſe in London. This Requeſt being likewiſe denied, he deſir'd the Council to Conſider, that as yet he had not been put to the Proof, nor actually refus'd Compliance, The Viſitors as yet having not been with him: That he thought it a hardſhip to be ſent to Priſon, for a bare Declaration of his diſlike of the Homilies and Injunctions: That the Interval of Three Weeks might poſſibly Inform his Conſcience farther, and make him change his Reſolution: And then his Caſe would be the ſame with the Son in the Goſpel, who told his Father he would not go into the Vineyard, but afterwards repented and went. This not giving Satisfaction to the Council, he went quietly to Priſon without Expoſtulations. Being reſolv'd with St. Paul to forget what's paſt, not to tax the Government with Rigor, or prefer a complaint againſt any Body. That being ſent for by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to the Dean of St. Paul's Houſe, and brought thither by the Biſhop of Lincoln, they entred into diſpute, but Cranmer's Arguments fell ſhort of Conviction. And here the Homily of Salvation Penn'd by Cranmer was the Subject of the Conference. He deſir'd the Archbiſhop, the Biſhops of Lincoln, and Rocheſter, Dr. Cox, and Mr. Aire then preſent, to produce any Antient Father, affirming, that Faith excluded Charity in the Office of Juſtification. That this Doctrine is point blank againſt the expreſs Words of Scripture. (k) That to go againſt ſuch Evidence in the Inſpir'd Writings, without ſo much as one Father, to ſupport the Singularity, was a dangerous Liberty. He goes on in his Apology, and alledges that he never adviſ'd any Perſon, not ſo much as his Chaplains, to diſpute againſt the Homilies and Injunctions. However, the publiſhing theſe Books in the King's Name, by his Grace the Protectors Direction, was ſomewhat particular, and that his Grace was not well us'd. For the King, he was too Young to underſtand them. And as for his Grace, 'twas well known the late Expedition afforded him no leaſure to Read them. After this he urges an Objection of no ſmall Weight. If an Order of Council, ſays he, is an Authority of the higheſt kind, and muſt be obey'd without pleading or Reſerve; then I deſire to know in what Condition the Legiſlature ſtands? And whether the Act which diſcharges us from our Obedience to the Biſhop of Rome, may not be over-rul'd by the Board? That the King when a Major, will expect the ſame extent of Prerogative, which was us'd by his Council in his Minority. And therefore that Preſidents of this kind may be pleaded for Oppreſſion, and prov'd Subverſive of the liberty of the Subject. That in the late Reign when he had the Honour to ſit at the Board, he found the Council much ſurpriz'd, when the King propos'd any thing to be done againſt an Act of Parliament. And here he tells the Protector a Story, how the Lord Cromwell put him upon anſwering an inſnaring Queſtion: 'Twas at Hampton Court. My Lord of Wincheſter, ſays Cromwell, anſwer his Majeſty whether the King's Pleaſure is not a Law? I think we have a Maxim for it in the Civil Law, quod Principi placuit, &c. The King perceiving me at a ſtand, continues the Biſhop, preſs'd me to declare my Opinion. I told his Highneſs I had read indeed of ſuch Abſolute Governments; but that in England, I humbly conceiv'd, the Conſtitution, and Temper of the People to be ſuch, that it would be more ſerviceable for his Majeſty to make the Law his Will, then his Will the Law. Afterwards, when Cromwell fell out with Gardner, he played him foul Play, Charg'd him with his own Suggeſtion, and turn'd the Queſtion upon him.

His Anſwer to the King upon the Subject of Abſolute Government.

“ In the Cloſe of the Letter, the Biſhop complains of uneaſy Confinement, and in another Letter, that he was neither allow'd to ſpeak with any Body, nor the Benefit of a Phyſician. This Letter is dated from the Fleet the 14th of October. (l)

“ In another Letter to the Protector, he renews his Complaint of harſh Uſage in Priſon: That he was not allow'd the Converſation of Friends, the convenience of Servants; nor ſo much as a Chaplain to Pray with him: He Remonſtrates againſt the Rigor of Archbiſhop Cranmer's Proceedings: That he did not do well to apply to force, to borrow the Protectors Authority to carry on the Controverſy, and ſupport his Opinions, by committing thoſe to Priſon who argued againſt him: That he thought it an unpreſidented Hardſhip to be thus Confin'd, without breaking any Law: He mentions one of Cranmer's Arguments to prove that only Faith Juſtifies; it ſtands in this Form; We are juſtified by Faith, without all Works of the Law, Charity is a Work of the Law: Therefore we are juſtified without Charity. “ This Argument Gardiner undertakes to Anſwer at his Peril, provided Cranmer would ſend it under his Hand. Farther, he takes notice, that whether Faith juſtifies excluſive of Charity or not, ſignifies nothing as to Practice; becauſe all Men are juſtified in the Sacrament of Baptiſm. And ſince we have all receiv'd the Advantage of juſtification in our “ Infancy,

(i) Biblioth. Cotton Veſpas. D. 18. Life of Archbiſhop Cranm.

(k) Gal. 5. v. 6. Jam. 2. v. 17.

(l) Fox Vol. 2. p. 1.

“ Infancy, when we were in no Condition “ to diſpute about the means, to what purpoſe “ is it to ſtart the Queſtion, and lay ſo much “ ſtreſs upon the Point of Belief afterwards. (m) Upon this Occaſion Fox calls Wincheſter an Inſenſible Aſs, and that he had no feeling of God's Spirit in the matter of Juſtification. But here the Hiſtorian ſeems to fail extremely in Decency and Temper: And to have forgotten the Apoſtles Command, for putting away all bitterneſs and evil ſpeaking: (n) And that unleſs a Man bridles his Tongue, his Religion is vain. I mention this, becauſe a Vein of Satyr, and coarſe Language runs thro' his Martyrology.

(m) Fox v. 2. p. 5. and 6.

(n) Eph. 4. 31. 1 Pet. 2. 1. Jam. 1. v. 26.

To proceed; in another Letter to the Protector, which is the laſt I ſhall mention. “ Biſhop Gardiner complains of his being denied “ the Privilege of aſſiſting in Parliament; and “ that by his Confinement thoſe whom he us'd “ to Nominate for the Houſe of Commons, “ were likewiſe forc'd to be abſent; and laſtly, “ he deſires the liberty of appearing in the “ Houſe of Lords, where he intends to open “ the Controverſy, and argue with the Arch- “ biſhop of Canterbury. (o)

(o) Fox. p. 8.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter Confin'd till the Prorogation of the Parliament.

But all this Reaſoning and Expoſtulation, was not prevalent enough to procure his Liberty: 'Twas thought proper to keep him Confin'd till the Seſſion of Parliament was over. Had this Biſhop appear'd in the Houſe, 'tis probable he might have given the Court Party ſome Trouble, perplex'd their Meaſures, and, it may be, over-ſet Cranmer in the Diſpute about Juſtification. The Archbiſhop, and thoſe of his Perſwaſion, founded themſelves upon the Fourth Chapter to the Romans, and the Third to the Galatians. But 'tis plain by the Tenor of theſe Epiſtles, that by Faith we are to underſtand the New Covenant, or the Terms requir'd in the Goſpel; in contradiſtinction to the Obſervances of the Moſaic Law, which in the Language of the Scripture are call'd Works. However, Cranmer and the Lutherans had a Pious meaning at the bottom of their Notion. They conceiv'd the Mercy of God, and the Merits of our Saviour, were more advanc'd by reſting the Point wholy upon Belief, as to the Act of Juſtification: Neither did they exclude the neceſſity of regular Practice. So that upon the whole, the Controverſy ſeems to lie more in Terms and Language, than in meaning and ſubſtance.

Bp. Tunſtal diſmiſs'd the Council Board.

On the Fourth of November the Parliament met, and ſat to the Twenty Fourth of December: 'Twas continued by Prorogation, from Seſſion to Seſſion, thro' this whole Reign. The Broad Seal was lately given to the Lord Rich, and Sir John Baker Chancellor of the Court of firſt Fruits and Tenths, was Speaker in the Houſe of Commons. To ſmooth the way to the Buſineſs concerted, Gardiner, as hath been obſerv'd, was kept in Priſon, and Tunſtal Biſhop of Durham, a Prelate of great Learning and Moderation, diſmiſs'd the Council Board. The reaſon of his Removal, 'tis probable, was to weaken his Character, and make his Oppoſition leſs ſignificant in the Houſe of Lords. The Members of Parliament, as Heylin relates, tho' of different Sentiments with regard to Religion, yet agreed in a common Principle, to ſtrike in with the Juncture, and take care of themſelves. For tho', as this Hiſtorian goes on, a great Number of the Lords and Commons were inclin'd to the Doctrines of the late Reign; yet they were willing to give way to ſuch Acts, as widen'd the Breach between the Engliſh and Roman Communion. The preſent nearneſs in Doctrine, they were afraid might end in a Reconciliation with the Pope: And that ſuch Meaſures would prove dangerous to their Eſtates gain'd from the Church. As for the reſt, whoſe buſineſs was either to make or improve their Fortunes, they came prepared without Queſtion, to cloſe with ſuch a Reformation as ſerv'd beſt for their purpoſe. This ſeems pretty evident by the Tendency of ſome of the Acts, which in Heylins Opinion ſeem to overlook the concern of Religion, and aim at private Intereſt in a very remarkable manner. (p)

Heylin's Remark on the Diſpoſition of the Members of Parliament.

(p) Heylin's Hiſt. Ref. p. 48.

Nov. 5th. Anno Dom. 1547.

A Convocation held.

The next Day after the ſitting of the Parliament a Convocation was held at St. Paul's, in which John Taylor Dean of Lincoln was Prolocutor.

In the Third Seſſion 'twas agreed, the Prolocutor ſhould carry ſome Petitions to the upper Houſe: Before I mention theſe, I am to obſerve that Archbiſhop Cranmer in his Speech, at the opening of the Convocation, put the Clergy in mind of keeping cloſe to the Rule of the Scriptures, of advancing farther in the Reformation, and throwing of ſome Unprimitive Remains. But the Terror of the Six Articles making an Impreſſion upon the Majority, and being a check upon the Freedom of their Debates, Cranmer prevail'd with the King to diſpence with the Penalties of that Statute. (q)

(q) Antiq. Britan. p. 339.

In this Convocation, 'twas unanimouſly agreed by the lower Houſe, that the Communion ſhould be adminiſtred in both kinds. *

* Convocation Journals, Fol. 71.

To return; The Petitions above-mention'd of the lower Houſe to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, were theſe.

Novem. 22d.

“ Firſt, That the Eccleſiaſtical Laws might “ be Review'd and Publiſh'd, purſuant to a “ Statute, made in the 35th Year of the late “ Reign.

“ Secondly, That the Clergy of the lower “ Houſe of Convocation, may be admitted to “ ſit in Parliament with the Houſe of Com- “ mons, according to Antient Uſage.

“ Thirdly, That the Performance of the “ Biſhops and others, who by Order of the “ Convocation, have ſpent ſome Time in re- “ viewing and correcting the Offices for Di- “ vine Service, may be laid before the Houſe.

“ Fourthly, That the Rigor of the Statute, “ for the Payment of firſt Fruits, may be mo- “ derated, and that the Clergy may have “ ſome Allowance made them for Maintenance, “ and defraying Expences in the firſt Years “ of their Preferment. (r)

(r) C. C. C. C. Library Synodalia. Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. Records p. 120. Journal Convocation Fol. 71.

In their Petition to the upper Houſe, for Admittance into the Parliament, “ they inſiſt “ upon the Clauſe of Præmunientes in the King's “ Writ, and the Antient Laws and Cuſtoms “ of the Kingdom.

“ If this Requeſt was denied, they deſired “ that no Bills in which the Chriſtian Reli- “ gion, the Perſons, Eſtates, or Juriſdiction “ of the Clergy are concern'd, may paſs with- “ out the Aſſent of the Clergy.

The lower Houſe of Convocation mov'd to ſit in Parliament.

That the lower Houſe of Convocation in their Requeſt, for ſitting with the Commons in Parliament, inſiſted upon nothing more than being reſtor'd to Antient Privilege, appears by the King's Writ, directed to every Biſhop: In which Summons the Biſhop is firſt requir'd to appear in Perſon, at the Time and Place prefix'd for the Parliament. This part of the Writ is the ſame in Subſtance with thoſe ſent to the Temporal Peers. After this follows the Premunitory Clauſe, in which the Biſhop is commanded to give notice to the (Prior, or) Dean and Chapter of his Cathedral Church, and to the Archdeacons, and all the Clergy of his Dioceſe, that the Prior, Dean, and Archdeacons in their own Perſons, the Chapter by one, and the Clergy by Two proper Proxy's ſufficiently impower'd by the ſaid Chapter and Clergy; ſhould by all means be preſent at the Parliament with him; to do and conſent to thoſe things which by the Bleſſing of God by their common Advice, happen to be ordain'd in the matters aforeſaid: And that the giving this notice ſhould by no means be omitted by him. (s)

The Clergy Antiently part of the Houſe of Commons.

(s) Pryn's Regiſter p. 7. 8. pt. 1.

If the Biſhop happen to be beyond Sea, and in no condition to Execute the King's Writ, the Summons was ſent to his Vicar General, and by him the Clergy of the Dioceſe had the ſame notice to come to Parliament, as if the Biſhop had been at Home.

Id. p. 9.

In the Vacancy of a See, the Writ was directed to the Dean and Chapter, as Guardians of the Spiritualty's. And thus the Clergy were always aſſur'd of being Summon'd to Parliament.

Id. p. 11.

The Biſhop having receiv'd the King's Writ, communicated it to his Dioceſe, by tranſmitting Copy's to the Prior, or Dean, and Archdeacons: To this there was a Mandate annex'd, importing that by Virtue of his Majeſty's Writ he premoniſh'd them, and by them the Chapter and Clergy, that themſelves in Perſon; and their Chapter and Clergy by their Proctors, ſhould take care to be preſent at the Day and Place mention'd in the King's Writ, for the Ends and Purpoſes requir'd of them.

The Biſhops us'd ſometimes to command their Clergy, to make a Return of what they had done upon, the Writ and Mandate. This Certificate was to be ſent to the Biſhop, ſometime before the Seſſion of Parliament. The Clergy having promis'd Obedience, in their Return, to their Dioceſan; the Biſhop certified the King what he had done purſuant to his Command: (t) And of this we have an Inſtance, as low as the Reign of King Henry the Eighth.

(t) Biſhop Wake's State of the Church, &c. p. 5. Id. in Appen. ad Ann. 1539.

The Clergy thus Summon'd to Parliament by the King and Dioceſan, met for the Choice of their Proxy's. For this purpoſe the Dean or Prior held his Chapter, and the Archdeacon his Synod: The Repreſentatives being Choſen in theſe Aſſemblies, were ſent up to the Parliament, with Procuratorial Letters from the Chapter and Clergy, to give them an Authority to Act in their Names, and on the behalf of their Electors.

Theſe Letters were for the moſt part Addreſs'd to the King, tho' ſometimes they began with a General Application to all Perſons whom it might concern: But ſtill the Subſtance of them was to Make, Ordain, and Appoint the Perſons, who were ſent by them, Their Proctors to appear on their Behalf in Parliament; There to Treat with the Prelates, and great Men of the Realm, of the things to be debated there for the Intereſt of the King and Kingdom, and to conſent to what ſhould be agreed to on their Behalf; and to engage themſelves to ſtand by what their Proctors ſhould do, under the Caution or Forfeiture (many times) of all their Goods. (u)

Id.

There were uſually Two Copies of theſe Procuratorial Letters deliver'd to every Proxy: One of theſe was to be kept by this Repreſentative, and the other put into the Hands of the Clerk of Parliament in Order to be Inrolled. (w)

(u) See Records, Num. LV.

A Reſolution of the Lord Chancellor and Judges.

(w) Regiſt. Arundel pt. 1. Fol. ult.

That the lower Clergy formerly ſent their Repreſentatives to Parliament, may be prov'd by a famous Reſolution in Bird and Smith's Caſe, in the Reign of King James the firſt. (x) Here the Lord Chancellor Edgerton, Popham Chief Juſtice of England, Coke Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, and Flemming Chief Baron; beſides other things, reſolv'd that the Canons of the Church made by the Convocation and the King, without a Parliament, ſhall bind in all Eccleſiaſtical Matters no leſs than an Act of Parliament. As a Medium to prove this, they Affirm the Convocation was once part of the Parliament. And ſince the lower Clergy were parted from the Houſe of Commons, they carried their Share of Legiſlature along with them into the Convocation. They found their Reſolution farther, upon a celebrated Preſident of both Houſes of Parliament. 21 H. 8. Where after a full debate in a Conference, it was Reſolv'd, that when the Convocation makes Canons concerning Matters, within their Juriſdiction, they are binding to the whole Realm.

(x) Trin. 4. Jac. 1. Moores Reports, Fol. 781. & de hinc.

To proceed; Records of the Procuratorial Letters above-mention'd, run up as high as King Edward the Firſt. Thro' how many Reigns afterwards the Repreſentatives of the lower Clergy, Acted with the Temporal Commons in Parliament, is not eaſy to determine. 'Tis probably conjectur'd, that about the Time of King Henry the Sixth, This uſage began to be diſcontinued, and quite drop'd by degrees. The Clergy themſelves are thought to have contributed towards the parting with this Privilege. It ſeems they look'd on their Parliamentary Attendance, as a kind of Burthen, and therefore were not unwilling to be diſengag'd. (y)

But whether they were in the Right, or not, is another Queſtion.

(y) Heylin's Tracts, Fol. 103—4. Bp. Wake's State of the Church p. 6.

Tho' the lower Clergy ſeem not to have come to Parliament for more than Two Hundred Years laſt paſt, the Kings notwithſtanding, have ſtill continued to keep on their Right in the Writ of Summons, which has been executed by the Biſhops. The Premunitory Clauſe is ſtill the ſame 'twas Three Hundred Years ſince, excepting the alteration of Priors into Deans. There are ſeveral Records to prove, that the Biſhops Mandates were ſent to the Deans and Archdeacons; that Proctors were Choſen, and Impower'd to Act for their Electors to the end of the Reign of King Henry the Seventh. (z) There are likewiſe Inſtances to prove that the ſame practice was kept on from the Period laſt mention'd, to the Year 1640. (a) This Præmonitory Clauſe being ſtill Inſerted in the Biſhops Writ of Summons, 'tis concluded they may legally Execute it, purſuant to Antient Cuſtom, if they think fit. (b)

(z) Dr. Atterbury's Rights, Power, &c. of an Engliſh Convocation. Appen. Num. XI.

(a) Biſhop Wake's State of the Church, p. 6.

(b) Ibid.

To proceed to another Branch of the Petition of the lower Houſe of Convocation. That is, that matters of Religion may be debated in their Houſe; That by this means the Caſe may be fully diſcuſs'd, the Controverſy clear'd, and the Conſciences of People well ſettled. They likewiſe deſire, as hath been obſerv'd, that no Statutes in which Religion, the Intereſt and Juriſdiction of the Clergy are nearly concern'd, may be enacted 'till the lower Houſe of Convocation have at leaſt Examin'd the Bill, and reported their Reaſons upon it. c To prove the lower Clergy not ill Founded in this Requeſt, I ſhall Inſert a Paper in the Records, drawn up by a very learned Hand, and lodg'd in the Paper

(c) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. Records, p. 118.

The Clergy Claims a Right of examining Bills relating to Religion, &c.

Paper Office, from whence I tranſcrib'd it. The deſign of it is to prove, that matters relating to the Doctrine and Government of the Church, ought to be determin'd by Eccleſiaſticks: And here the Reader will find the Imperial Conſtitutions, the Parliament Rolls, and other valuable Authorities cited to this Purpoſe. 'Tis Penn'd by way of Anſwer to certain Objections. (d)

(d) See Records Num. LVI.

Seſs. 5. Nov. ult.

Farther; A Form deliver'd by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for the receiving the Holy Euchariſt under both kinds, of Bread and Wine, was Read in the lower Houſe of Convocation, and Subſcrib'd by the Prolocutor and ſome others. And in the next Seſſion, this Order was unanimouſly agreed by all then Preſent, being Sixty Four. At the ſame time Eight of the Members were appointed to draw up a Parliament Bill for the Payment of Tythes, in Cities, in the ſame manner as was done in London.

Seſs. 6. Dec. 2.

In the laſt Seſſion, a Motion was made, that all Canons, Laws, Uſages, &c. which forbid any Perſon to Marry upon the Score, of Prieſthood, or Vow of Religion, might be declar'd Void and Unobligatory. This Propoſition was Subſcrib'd by Fifty Three in the Affirmative, and Twenty Two in the Negative. *

* C. C. C. C. Library Synodalia.

I ſhall now go on to the Buſineſs of the Parliament, and mention thoſe Statutes which relate to Religion. I ſhall begin with the Act for repealing ſeveral Statutes concerning Treaſon. By this Statute all Acts of Parliament concerning Religion and Opinions, that is to ſay as well the Statute made in the Fifth Year of the Reign of the Kings Noble Progenitor King Richard the Second: And the Statute made in the Second Year of the Reign of King Henry the Fifth: And the Statute alſo made in the Twenty Fifth Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, concerning Puniſhment and Reformation of Hereticks and Lollards: And the Statute made for the aboliſhing of Diverſity of Opinions, in certain Articles concerning Chriſtian Religion commonly call'd the Six Articles made in the Thirty Firſt Year of King Henry the Eighth: And alſo the Act of Parliament made in the Thirty Fourth Year of the ſaid King Henry the Eighth, touching or in any way concerning Books of the Old and New Teſtament in Engliſh, and the Printing, ſelling and retaining of Engliſh Books or Writings, and Reading, teaching Preaching or expounding of Scripture. And alſo another Statute made in the Parliament holden at Weſtminiſter in the Thirty Fifth Year of the Reign of the late King Henry the Eighth, concerning the Qualification of the Statute of Six Articles: And all and every other Act or Acts of Parliament concerning Doctrine or Matters of Religion, and all and every Branch, Article, Sentence, and Matter, Pains, and Forfeiture, contain'd in any of the ſame Acts of Parliament, ſhall from henceforth be repeal'd and utterly void, and of none Effect. (e)

The Penal Statute, touching Religion, repeal'd.

(e) Firſt E. 6. Cap. 12.

By this Repeal, Heylin obſerves, that all People had the Liberty of reading the Scriptures, of being in a manner their own Expoſitors, of forming their Religion, and openly declaring their Opinions as they thought fit. (f) But here this Learned Hiſtorian is ſomething miſtaken. For notwithſtanding the Statutes againſt Lollardy and unſound Opinions were null'd, the Rigours of the Common Law were ſtill in Force. Now by the Common Law, as the Learned Fitzherbert affirms, the Puniſhment for Hereſie was Burning. (g) And of Executions of this Kind we ſhall have ſeveral Inſtances in this Reign.

(f) Heylin's Hiſtory Ref. p. 48.

(g) De [illegible]. Brev.

Farther, by this Statute laſt mention'd, an Act made in the Thirty Firſt Year of King Henry the Eighth, by Virtue of which the King's Proclamations ſet forth by the Advice of his Privy Council, were to be obey'd as tho' they had been made by Authority of Parliament. And another Act made in the Thirty Fourth Year of the late Reign, to fortifie the Statute of the Thirty Firſt, were both repeal'd. (h) From whence it appears our Learned Church Hiſtorians Obſervation will not hold; where he ſays the great Changes of Religion in the Nonage of King Edward the Sixth were grounded on the Authority of this Thirty Firſt of King Henry the Eighth: For this Act we ſee was repeal'd before the great Alterations in Doctrine and Worſhip were eſtabliſh'd. (i)

A Repeat of 31. H. 8. Cap. 8. and 34. H. 8. Cap. 23.

(h) 1 Edward VI. Cap. 12.

(i) Bp. Burnet pt. 1. p. 264. pt. 2. p. 40.

The next remarkable Act relating to the Church is a Penal Statute againſt irreverent ſpeaking of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt. The Preamble in all Likely hood drawn up by ſome of the Biſhops, after having mention'd the Solemnity of the Inſtitution of this Sacrament, ſets forth that ſome arrogant and contentious People, have either out of Wickedneſs, or Want of Learning, becauſe of certain Abuſes heretofore committed of ſome in miſuſing thereof, condemn'd in their Hearts and Speech the whole Thing, and contemptuoſly deprav'd, deſpis'd, or revil'd the ſame moſt Holy and Bleſſed Sacrament, and not only diſputed and reaſon'd unreverently of that moſt High Myſtery, but alſo in their Sermons, Preachings, Readings, Lectures, Communications, Arguments, Rhymes, Songs, Plays or Jeſts, name and call it by ſuch vile and unſeemly Words, as Chriſtian Ears do abhor to hear Rehears'd. For Reformation whereof 'tis Enacted by the King's Highneſs, with the Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and of the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, that whatſoever Perſon or Perſons, from, and after the firſt Day of May next coming, ſhall deprave, deſpiſe, or contemn, the ſaid moſt Bleſſed Sacrament by any contemptuous Words, or by any Words of depraving, deſpiſing, or reviling; Or whatſoever Perſon or Perſons ſhall adviſedly in any other way contemn, deſpiſe, or revile the ſaid moſt Bleſſed Sacrament, contrary to the Effects and Declaration aboveſaid, that then he and they ſhall ſuffer Impriſonment of their Bodies, and ſhall make Fine and Ranſom at the King's Will and Pleaſure. (k)

A Statute againſt Irreverent ſpeaking of the Holy Sacrament.

(k) 1 Ed. VI. Cap. 1.

Thus we ſee an intemperate Zeal againſt Popery, carried ſome People to an Exceſs of Profaneneſs: They run from one Extreme of Adoration, to another of Contempt and Frenzy, and abus'd the Holy Sacrament in Language not fit to repeat. (l) Biſhop Ridley frequently reprov'd theſe ungodly Sallies; but it ſeems the People were ungovernable, and the Diſeaſe grown too ſtrong for a Church Remedy; And therefore 'twas thought fit to apply to the Aſſiſtance of the Civil Legiſlature.

(l) See Heylin's Hiſt. Ref. p. 49.

Now conſidering the Inſolence of theſe People was ſo rampant and intolerable, 'tis ſomewhat ſtrange, the Penalty of the Act ſhould be ſo long defer'd. The Bill paſs'd both Houſes on the Twentieth of December. (m) But the Statute was not to inure till the Firſt of May following; ſo that they had Four Months before the Act could reach them. 'Tis true the King iſſued out a Proclamation to check the Licentiouſneſs of theſe New Bigots, but the Force of Proclamations we ſee, were in a great Meaſure diſabled by the Statute of Repeal.

(m) Journal of the Houſe of Lords. December 27. An. Dom. 1547.

The Biſhop or Chancellor, &c. to aſſiſt at the Tryal of ſuch Offenders.

The Offenders againſt this Statute touching the Holy Sacrament were to be try'd before the Juſtices of Peace at the Quarter Seſſions. And here the Juſtices are order'd to direct a Writ in the King's Name, to the Biſhop of the Dioceſe, in which the Offence was committed, that either himſelf, his Chancellor, or ſome other Learned Perſon deputed by him, might be preſent at the Tryal, ſit upon the Bench, and make Part of the Court.

The Holy Eucharist to be given in both kinds, excepting in Caſes of neceſſity.

By the laſt Branch of the Statute 'tis declar'd that the miniſtring the Bleſſed Sacrament unto all Chriſtian People under both Kinds of Bread and Wine, is more agreeable both to the firſt Inſtitution of the ſaid Sacrament of the moſt precious Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and alſo more conformable to the common Uſe and Practice both of the Apoſtles and the Primitive Church, by the ſpace of Five Hundred Years and more after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, than the receiving under the Form of Bread only: And alſo that 'tis more agreeable to the Firſt Inſtitution of Chriſt, and to the Uſage of the Apoſtles, and the Primitive Church, that the People being preſent ſhould receive the ſame with the Prieſt, than that the Prieſt ſhould receive it alone: It is therefore enacted, that the ſaid moſt Bleſſed Sacrament ſhall be commonly deliver'd and miniſtred unto the People within the Churches of England and Ireland, and other the King's Dominions under both Kinds of Bread and Wine, except Neceſſity otherwiſe requires.

By the Caſe of Neceſſity we are to underſtand, ſudden and dangerous Sickneſs, when Wine can't be provided, nor the Sick Perſon paſs comfortably into the other World without receiving the Sacrament. Laſtly,

'Tis enacted that Day before the Celebration of the Sacrament, the Prieſt ſhould exhort the Congregation to prepare themſelves; and at Divine Service before the Adminiſtration declare the great Benefits promis'd to worthy Receivers, and the Danger of preſuming to come unqualified.

The Statute concludes that this reſtoring the antient Practice with Reference to the Holy Sacrament ſhould not be interpreted to the condemning the Uſage of any Church out of his Majeſty's Dominions.

1 E. 6. cap. 2. The Biſhops to be nominated by the King's Letters Patent, without Congé déeſlire.

The next Statute makes a Change in the manner of chuſing Biſhops, and transfers the Election wholly from the Deans and Chapters to the Crown. The Preamble, in the firſt Place, alledges the Inconveniences of the former Elections, from the Circumſtances of Delay and Expence. After this 'tis ſaid in the Preamble, that the ſaid Elections are in very deed no Elections, but only by a Writ of congè d'eſlire have Colours, Shadows, and Pretences of Election: That they ſerve to no Purpoſe, and ſeem derogatory and prejudicial to the King's Prerogative Royal, to whom only appertains, the Collation and Gift of all Archbiſhopricks, and Biſhopricks, and Suffragan Biſhops within his Highneſs his Dominions. 'Tis therefore enacted, that for the Future, no Congé d'eſlire ſhall be granted, nor any Election be made by the Dean and Chapter, but that the Archbiſhoprick or Biſhoprick ſhall be confer'd by the King's Nomination in his Letters Patents.

I have had occaſion to obſerve already that thoſe who draw the Parliament Bills are ſometimes miſtaken in matter of Fact. And of this we have an Inſtance in the Parliament before us: For in the Statute of Repeal (n) King Richard the Second is ſtil'd the Progenitor of the preſent King, whereas 'tis certain King Richard left no Iſſue. 'Tis ſaid likewiſe that the Cuſtomary Choice of Biſhops by the Chapters were in Reality no Elections. The Preamble we muſt ſuppoſe means they were in a manner thus inſignificant ſince the Twenty Fifth of Henry the Eighth, Cap. 20. For by this Statute in Caſe the Dean and Chapter refus'd to Elect, the King was impower'd to nominate a Perſon for the See by his Letters Patent. But before this Act the Election of Biſhops in the Engliſh Church was lodg'd in great Meaſure in the Hands of the Chapters. For proof of this I ſhall refer the Reader to the firſt Volume of this Work. (o) And to what has been there deliver'd, I ſhall now ſubjoyn a more particular Account of the Antient Method of electing Biſhops in the Engliſh Church.

The Antient Method of electing Biſhops.

Upon the Vacancy of the See the Canons or Chapter fix'd a Day for the Election. To this purpoſe an Inſtrument was drawn up, ſetting forth the Day when the Biſhoprick became void, together with the manner of its being ſo, whether by Death or otherwiſe. If by Death, then after the late Biſhop was buried, thoſe of the Chapter upon the Spot, appointed the time, and gave notice to their abſent Members to appear at the Election. When the Day was come the Chapter put it to the Queſtion, whether they ſhould elect by Majority of Votes, or refer the Choice to a Committee? When this Point was ſettled, they proceeded to the Election, purſuant to the Antient Canons and Conſtitutions of the Church.

When the Election was made, 'twas publickly declar'd to the People, and the Hymn Te Deum was ſung, and the Perſon Elected carried in a Chair to the High Altar. And ſometime after this the Queſtion was put to him whether he conſented to the Choice. Upon his anſwering in the Affirmative, he was preſented to the Metropolitan with the Inſtrument of his Election. There was likewiſe Letters of Proxy, ſigned by the Chapter or Convent to be deliver'd to the Archbiſhop to ſatisfy him the Perſons who came to requeſt the Conſecration of the Elect were duly authoriz'd. (p)

No mention of the Congé de eſlire.

In this Record there is no mention of any Conge d'eſlire, which in the modern Applications of the Chapter for Confirmation and Conſecration, is never omitted.

Beſides, by the Inſtruments ſuggeſting that according to the Holy Canons the See ought not to be vacant above Three Months, and that the Time of the Election was govern'd by this Appointment. From hence 'tis pretty evident the Chapters in thoſe Days did not think themſelves under a Neceſſity of electing by a Conge d'eſlire; and of this I have given an Inſtance in the former Part of my Hiſtory.

To return to the Statute, in which there is a Proviſo, for ſecuring the Fees cuſtomarily paid by the Biſhops to the King, the Archbiſhops and their Officers and Servants; what theſe Fees and Expences were formerly, I ſhall not examine. But how they ſtand at preſent the Reader may ſee in the following Account. (q)

Fees to be paid by a Biſhop.

Fees to be paid by a Biſhop without a Commendam.

	l.	s.	d.
Imprimis, for the Signet, Privy Seal, Great Seal, for the Conge d'eſlire.	11	0	0
Item, for the Royal Aſſent.	11	0	0
Item, the Confirmation Dinner, &c.	5	0	0

Item,

(n) 1 E. 6. cap. 12.

(o) Church Hiſt. p. 213, 306. 328. and Records Num. 37.

(p) Biblioth. Cotton E. VI. Fol. 142. ſee Records Num. 57.

(q) Paper Office.

Item, Fees at Bow Church at the Confirmation.	0	10	0
Item, For the Conſecration Dinner at Lambeth, and Fees to the Archbiſhops Servants.	110	0	0
Item, Gloves for the Conſecration.	48	0	0
Item, Fees to be paid to the Regiſter of the Vicar General belonging to ſundry Perſons.	42	10	0
Item, Fees to be paid at Court at the doing of Homage.	51	0	0
Item, To the Gentlemen of the Chappel.	02	0	0
Item, Fees of Reſtitution to the Temporalties of the Biſhoprick.	27	0	0
Item, To be given to him that ſolliciteth theſe Suits to his Majeſty.	20	0	0
Item, Fees for a Teſtimonial of the Election and Conſecration, and a Proxy to be inſtalled.	02	0	0
Item, To the King's Trumpeters.	01	0	0
	331	0	0

Powers and Privileges of a Biſhop.

What Functions, what Extent of Privilege and Juriſdiction were comprehended in the Epiſcopal Character before the Reſtraints from the Regale begun in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, may be collected by an Extract out of Sprozzius, which I tranſcrib'd from the Paper Office (r)

(r) See Records Num. 58.

To go on with the Statute. 'Tis enacted that all Summons, Citations, and other Proceſſes of Archbiſhops and Biſhops, which uſed to be ſent out in their own Names, ſhall be made in the Name, and with the Style of the King, as it is in Writs Original, or Judicial at the Common Law: And that the Teſte thereof be in the Name of the Archbiſhop or Biſhop. And that every Biſhop or Perſon exerciſing Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, ſhall have the King's Arms engraven on their Seals of Office. The Penalty for contravening the Statute is Impriſonment at the King's Will and Pleaſure. (s)

Proceſs in Spiritual Courts to be made in the King's Name.

(s) 1 E. 6. c. 2.

This Act was repeal'd in the Firſt of Mary Seſſ. 2. cap. 2. After which time the Biſhops form'd their Proceſs in their own Name, and under their own Seals, according to Antient Uſage. But by the 1. Jac. 1. cap. 25. the aforeſaid Statute of Mary 1. cap. 2. is expreſly repeal'd: Whereupon 'twas infer'd and objected in Parliament, 4. Jac. 1. that immediately from and ever ſince the making the Acts of 1 Jac. cap. 25. the Act of 1 Mar. cap. 2. was repeal'd. Thus the Repeal being repeal'd, the Act firſt repeal'd was in force. And therefore that all the Biſhops which after the Act of the 1 Jac. had uſed their own Names and Seals and not the King's Arms and the King's Name, were within the Danger of the Firſt Edward 6. cap. 2.

The Biſhops not under the Penalty of 1. Edw. 6. cap. 2.

To this Objection the following Anſwer, which gave Satiſfaction, was return'd, viz. By 25. H. 8. cap. 20. Intitled, an Act for reſtraining Annates and Firſt Fruits, &c. and Election of Biſhops, &c. 'Twas enacted in the laſt Clauſe but one, that Biſhops ſhould be obey'd according to their Names, Titles, Degree and Dignity, and do and execute in every thing as they might heretofore at any time have done. Now this Clauſe is directly contrary to the ſaid Act of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 2. and therefore by making the Act of the 1 Ed. 6. cap. 2. this Clauſe of 25. H. 8. was repeal'd. But afterwards by the 1. Eliz. cap. 1. the ſaid Act of 25. H. 8. cap. 20. is reviv'd with all Clauſes and Sentences thereof; ſo as before the making the 1 Jac. cap. 25. the Statute of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 2. had two Bars and Repeals. The firſt was the Act of 1 Mar. cap. 2. The Second was the reviving of 25. H. 8. cap. 20. which was done by the 1 Eliz. cap. 1. The firſt Bar and Repeal which was the Act of Queen Mary was taken away by 1 Jac. cap. 25. But the Second Bar and Repeal which was the Act of 1 Eliz. cap. 1. which revived the Act of 25. H. 8. cap. 20. ſtands ſtill in force. And the Act of 25. H. 8. cap. 20. being in force, the Act of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 2. which in the forementiond Clauſe is directly contrary to 25. H. 8. cap. 20. cannot be in force. To which may be added that this Statute of 1 Ed. 6. cap. 2. for ſo much as concerns a Præmunire is repeal'd by 1 Mar. Seſſ. 1. (t)

(t) Biblioth. Cotton Cleop. VI. F. Fol 96. November the 5. Anno Dom 1547.

This Bill concerning the making Biſhops by the King's Letters Patent abovemention'd was committed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Upon the Second Reading 'twas committed to ſome of the Judges. Before it had gone thro' both Houſes, another Bill concerning the Style and Terms to be us'd in Eccleſiaſtical Courts was brought into the Houſe of Lords, paſs'd and ſent down to the Houſe of Commons on the Thirteenth of December. (u) At laſt both theſe Bills were drawn into one, and ſent up by the Commons on the Twentieth of the ſame Month, and ſign'd by the King. The Act, beſides what has been already obſerv'd, ſets forth that all Authority of Juriſdiction Spiritual and Temporal is deriv'd from the King's Majeſty as ſupreme Head of theſe Churches, and that all Courts Eccleſiaſtical within the Two Realms are kept by no other Power and Authority either foreign or within the Realm, but by the Authority of his Excellent Majeſty. (w)

(u) Journal of the Houſe of Lords.

Proviſo in Favour of the Biſhops.

(w) 1 Edw. 6. Cap. 2.

Upon this Ground, 'tis enacted that all Proceſſes in Eccleſiaſtical Courts are to be formed in the King's Name, as hath been already related. However there is a Proviſo in the Statute for Faculties and Diſpenſations granted by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and for all Collations, Inſtitutions, Inductions, Letters of Order, or Dimiſſories, which were to paſs under the Archbiſhop and Biſhops own Names and Seals, as they had formerly done.

By this Act great Advantages were taken to diſparage the Reformation as ſubjecting the Biſhops wholly to the Pleaſure of the Court. (x) " And as our Learned Church Hiſtorian farther " obſerves, the Extreme of raiſing the Eccleſia- " ſtical Power too high in the Times of Popery, " had now produced another of depreſſing " it too much. For ſeldom is the Counterpoiſe " ſo juſtly balanc'd, that Extremes are reduc'd " to a well temper'd Mediocrity. (y)

(x) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. p. 43.

(y) Id. p. 49.

This Parliament made a Statute againſt Vagabonds, by which 'tis enacted, that any Man, or Woman, " not being diſabled by Age, Ac- " cident, or Sickneſs, and not having Lands or " other means ſufficient to maintain them, who " wander'd up and down idly for Three Days " together without offering themſelves to La- " bour and Employment, ſuch Perſons being " brought before Two Juſtices of Peace, were " to be Slaves Two Years to the Perſon that " brought them, and be mark'd with the Let- " ter V. Now by the ſeveral Proviſo's againſt Clerk's Convict of this Offence, 'tis plain the Act was levell'd againſt Monks and Friers who went about the Country to get Entertainment, and furniſh themſelves with Conveniencies.

The Statutes againſt Vagabonds levell'd againſt the Monks.

1. Ed. 6. cap. 3. Statutes at large.

(z) Fuller Church Hiſt. p. 387. September the 10. Anno Dom. 1547.

Many of theſe Religions had but narrow Penſions, and thoſe of late not well paid, as appears by a Proclamation iſſued out for ſatisfying their Demands this way. (z) Now 'twas thought a Hardſhip, by ſome People, that the Monks who had a creditable Education, were bred to Learning, and many of them Perſons of Condition, ſhould be tied to the Labour, and come under the Penalties of common Servants, and be treated no better than the loweſt of the People. And this Uſage ſeem'd the more particular, becauſe they had been lately thrown out of plentiful Eſtates, and made a conſiderable Figure in the Kingdom. Beſides, ſome of them came to London to ſollicit for their Penſions. It is ſaid that ſuch Journeys were only a Colour: And that their Buſineſs was to give the People ill Impreſſions, and Practice againſt the State. (a) To this it may be anſwer'd, that there were Acts already in Being for the puniſhing ſuch Misbehaviour.

(a) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. p. 45.

An Act for uniting Pariſhes and pulling down Churches in the City of York.

Another Act made this Seſſion takes notice in the Preamble, that the City of York formerly well inhabited, and furniſhed with good Livings for Learned Incumbents, was now much decay'd: Inſomuch that many of the Cures could not afford a competent Maintenance. To remedy this Inconvenience the Mayor and Recorder, the Ordinary and Six Juſtices of Peace are impower'd to unite as many Pariſhes, and pull down as many Churches, as they ſhall think convenient: And here the Materials of theſe ſuperfluous Churches, as they are call'd, are to be employ'd for the repairing other Churches and Bridges, and for the Relief of the Poor. (b)

(b) 1 Ed. 6. Cap. 9.

If 'tis enquir'd by what means the City of York ſunk thus low from its former Condition; the moſt probable way of accounting for this Declenſion is the late Diſſolution of the Monaſteries. For theſe Eſtates being parcell'd amongſt a great many People who liv'd elſewhere, the Trade of the Town muſt fail of Courſe; the Inhabitants grow leſs numerous, and by Conſequence the Livings which conſiſted, as the Statute takes notice, in Perſonal Tythes and Offerings, be proportionably leſſen'd.

December 6. Ann. Dom. 1547.

An Act for the Diſſolution of Chauntrys,&c.

Biſhop Burnet pt. 2d. p. 45.

The laſt Act I ſhall mention is that which gave the Chauntry's, Colleges, &c. to the Crown. This Bill began in the Houſe of Lords, where the paſſing it was conteſted, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of London, Durham, Ely, Norwich, Hereford, Worceſter, and Chicheſter, voting againſt it. Archbiſhop Cranmer inſiſted ſtrongly that the diſſolving theſe Chauntry's, Colleges, &c. might be poſtpon'd till the King came of Age: That by this Delay the Reaſons of the Diſſolution would be better anſwer'd, and the Lands preſerv'd, for the Improvement of the Royal Revenues: That during his Majeſty's Minority, there would be danger of alienating the Eſtates, and waſting the Treaſure ariſing from theſe Endowments. The Archbiſhop had likewiſe a farther View for the Befit of the Church. The Clergy were much impoveriſh'd by impropriated Tythes falling amongſt the Laity, which ſhould in all Reaſon have been return'd to the Church; (c) Things ſtanding thus, Cranmer had no Proſpect of retrieving the Misfortune, but by reſpiting the Diſſolution of the Chauntry's 'till the King was a Major. Provided he could make the matter reſt till that time, he did not queſtion the pious Diſpoſition of this Prince might be prevail'd on to beſtow theſe Foundations upon the Parochial Clergy, who were now lamentably reduc'd: And thus far without Queſtion the reſt of the above-mention'd Biſhops concurr'd with him. But the Courtiers who puſh'd the Bill were acted by different Motives; they wanted Eſtates to their new Titles, and had no other way of ſatisfying their Pretenſions than by ſeizing the Opportunity, and ſharing the Chauntry Lands amongſt them, while the Government was in their Hands. (d) When the Bill was ſent down to the lower Houſe, 'twas ſtrongly oppos'd by ſome of the Members. 'Twas urg'd that the Burroughs could not maintain their Churches, nor defray the other Expences of the Guilds and Fraternity's, if the Eſtates belonging to them were granted to the Crown. The Arguments upon this Head ſway'd the Houſe, and brought them towards a Vote againſt paſſing that Part of the Bill in which the Guilds were concern'd. The Burgeſſes for Linn and Coventry diſtinguiſh'd themſelves moſt upon this Occaſion. But theſe active Members were taken off by the Court Party, upon an Aſſurance given that their Guild Lands ſhould be reſtor'd. Thus dropping their Oppoſition, the Bill paſs'd, and the Promiſe is ſaid to have been made good by the Protector.

This Bill oppos'd by Cranmer and other Biſhops.

(d) Heylin Biſhop Burnet.

It hath been already obſerv'd theſe Chauntry Lands, Colleges, &c. had been granted to the late King, his Heirs and Succeſſors. (e) By the Act* in the late Reign Commiſſioners are named for giving the King Poſſeſſion: Who when they had entred upon any Part of the Lands within their Commiſſion, the Statute from that Inſtant veſts the King and his Heirs in thoſe Eſtates. But as it happen'd, the Commiſſioners did not enter into a great Part of the Chauntry Lands in the late King's time, which was the Reaſon of making a new Act for this Purpoſe in the Reign before us.

(e) 37. H. 8. Cap. 4.

The Intention of the Founders of theſe Houſes.

The Reaſons for diſſolving them.

And here it may not be improper to acquaint the Reader, that the Endowment of theſe Chauntry Lands was for the Maintenance of one or more Prieſts, to Pray for the Souls of their Founders. Of theſe Chauntry's and free Chappels, there were Two Thouſand Three Hundred and Seventy Four. They were commonly united to ſome Parochial, Collegiate, or Cathedral Church. The free Chappels, tho' deſign'd for the ſame purpoſe, were independent in their Conſtitution, ſtood without being annex'd, and were better Endow'd. The Colledges exceeded theſe laſt Foundations, both in the Beauty of their Building, the Number of Prieſts, and the largeneſs of their Revenues. But now their Fate was determin'd, and to make the ſeizing their Eſtates better underſtood, the Statute ſets forth in the Preamble, that a great part of Superſtition and Errors in Chriſtian Religion, has been brought in the Minds and Eſtimation of Men, by reaſon of the Ignorance of their very true and perfect Salvation, through the Death of Jeſus Chriſt, and by deviſing and Phantaſyng vain Opinions of Purgatory, and Maſſes ſatiſfactory to be done for them which be departed: The which Doctrine and vain Opinion, by nothing more is maintain'd and upholden, then by the abuſe of Trentalls, Chauntry's, and other Proviſion made for the Continuance of the ſaid Blindneſs and Ignorance. (f)

(f) 1. Ed. VI. Cap. 14.

By the Way, the Miſperſwaſion, with reſpect to the Aſſiſtances deſign'd for thoſe Deceas'd, ſeems in a great Meaſure rectified, by the Inſtitution and neceſſary Erudition, ſet forth in the late Reign. In both thoſe Books, Diſputes about the Pains ſuffer'd by thoſe who dyed under imperfect Qualifications, is forbidden, neither, is the Name of Purgatory to be ſo much as mention'd. And as for praying for the Dead, 'twas not only part of the Divine Service at the making of this Statute, but continued ſo in the firſt Reform'd Liturgy for ſometime after.

By the ſettlement of Collegiate Churches and Chauntry's, there was a Proviſion made for a certain Number of poor People; the Alms was diſtributed on the Anniverſary Day of the Founders: This Charity was ſecur'd by a Clauſe in the Act: And the Commiſſioners were order'd to Aſſign Lands, parcel of the Premiſes, for the Maintenance of the Diſtribution.

To proceed; the Act promiſes the Eſtates of theſe Foundations, ſhould be converted to Good and Godly Uſes, in Erecting Grammar Schools, in farther Augmenting the Univerſities, and better Proviſion for the Poor and Needy. But theſe Lands being moſtly ſhar'd amongſt the Courtiers, and others of the rich Laity, the Promiſe in the Preamble was in a great meaſure Impracticable. To proceed to the Body of the Statute, in which 'tis Enacted, that all and ſingular Colleges, free Chappels, Chauntry's, Hoſpitals, Fraternity's, Brotherhoods, Guilds, and other Promotions, mention'd in the 37th H. 8. cap. 4. with all their Manſion Houſes, Mannors, Rents, Tythes, Churches, Patronages, &c. which were not in actual Poſſeſſion of the late King, are granted to his preſent Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, for ever. All Lands, Rents, &c. Settled for the Maintenance of any Anniverſary and Obit are likewiſe given the Crown by this Statute. The Colleges in both the Univerſities, the Chappel of St. George at Windſor, the Colleges of Wincheſter and Eaton, together with the Cathedral Churches are expreſly excepted, and ſecur'd in this Statute. However, the Chauntries, Obits, and Settlements, for Lights and Lamps in any of the Cathedrals, were to fall within the compaſs of the Act. By this Statute, the Commiſſioners are Impower'd to allow what Penſion they thought convenient, to thoſe who were turn'd out of theſe Foundations. By another Clauſe, all Alienations of the Lands, of Biſhopricks, Deaneries, Colleges, Archdeaconries, Prebends, &c. made to the Crown in the late and preſent Reign, are confirm'd.

And laſtly, All Goods, Chattels, Jewels, Plate, Ornaments, and other Moveables, being the common Goods of ſuch Colleges, free Chappels, Chauntry's, or ſtipendiary Prieſts, are convey'd to the King.

Orders of the Privy Council for this Year.

Having now given an Acconnt of the Parliament and Convocation, I ſhall proceed to the Privy Council, who were not altogether unactive in Church Affairs. I ſhall ſet down the Orders of the Board for this Year, as they ſtand in the Council Book.

Anno Dom. 1547. July 16.

“ An Order to the Dean and Prebendaries of Canterbury, to deliver a Silver Table, that ſtood upon the high Altar, by Indenture, containing the Weight of the ſame, to Sir Anthony Aucher. (g)

July 29. Council Book.

“ An Order to Mr. Aucher, to receive of the Chapter of Chriſt Church in Canterbury, all ſuch Jewels and Plate of Gold and Silver, as they have by our Sovereign Lords Permiſſion, in their Poſſeſſion, to their Churches uſe; And forthwith to deliver the ſame by a Bill, indented to the Officers of the Mint, there expreſſing the ſeveral Pois and value of the ſame therein.

It would be difficult, to find a Law to Warrant this extraordinary Demand, but the Church and the Exchequer were Low, and the Court had occaſion for Mony. To go on, Septemb. 26 Council Book.

“ A Letter was ſent by the Council to the Lord Admiral, acquainting him, that whereas 'twas Reſolv'd, the Lord great Maſter at his next repair to London, ſhould take Order for the puniſhing thoſe that had taken down Images, having no Authority ſo to do, and cauſe thoſe ſo taken down, having not been Abus'd, to be Erected again, that foraſmuch it is now conſider'd, that if thoſe ſhould be Erected again, it might engender Contention amongſt the People upon the Point, whether they were Abus'd or no; that the ſaid Lord Admiral now repairing to London, ſhould declare to the ſaid Lord great Maſter, it were beſt not to meddle in the Erection of thoſe taken down, until the return of the Lord Protector. And yet that it ſhould be proceeded to the Puniſhment of the takers down without Authority, as it was Order'd.

This Year, the London Apprentices, and the Lollard-mob, over-run their Bounds, Reform'd to diſorder, and inſulted the Clergy in the Streets. To check this Licenſe, an Order was ſet forth by the King and Council, in the Form following.

Novemb. 12. 1547. Council Book.

“ Foraſmuch as the Miſorders by the ſerving Men, and other young and light Perſons, and Apprentices of London, towards Prieſts, and thoſe that go in Scholars Gowns like Prieſts, hath of late, both in Weſtminſter-hall, and other Places of the City of London been ſo great, that not only it hath offended many Men, but alſo hath given great Occaſion (if on the Parties of the ſaid Prieſts, more Wiſdom and Diſcretion had not been ſhew'd, than of the other,) of Sedition and Murder, or at the leaſt, of ſuch Inconveniencies as are not to be ſuffer'd in a Common-wealth.---- For Reformation whereof, the King's Highneſs, by the Advice of his Dear Uncle, and other his Majeſty's Council, Willeth, and ſtraightly Commandeth, that no ſerving Man or Apprentice, or any other Perſon whatſoever, he or they be, ſhall uſe hereafter ſuch Inſolency and evil Demeanor towards Prieſts, as Revelling, toſſing of 'em, taking violently their Caps and Tippets from them, without juſt Title or Cauſe, nor otherways to uſe them, then as becomes the King's moſt loving Subjects one to do towards another.----Upon Pain to ſuffer Impriſonment, or other Corporal Pain, to the Example of all others, as to the Diſcretion of the Lord Protector, King's Majeſty's Council, or of the Judges, before whom the ſame is prov'd, ſeem Convenient.

God Save the King.

May 14. 1547. Council Book.

“ The Lords of the Council receiv'd Advice by the Ambaſſador in the Regents Court in Flanders, in how Honourable, Expenſive, and Friendly a manner, the Lady Regent there, had cauſed the Obſequies of the late King Henry, (God Pardon him) to be perform'd at Ghent. And likewiſe how very much diſpleas'd her Grace was at the ſcandalous Sermon of a Friar, who had treated King

“ Henry's

(g) Council Book Ex Biblioth. Rob. Harley Armig.

“ Henry's Memory with a great deal of Satyr, and black Imputation.

A Letter of the Privy Council to Bonner Biſhop of London, takes notice that ſome People, had either upon a Preſumption of leave, or the Suggeſtions of their own Fancy‘ ventur'd to Sell the Bells, Plate, and Jewels, of ſeveral Churches. This Liberty is blam'd by the Privy Council, and ſaid to be of ill Example. And the Biſhop is commanded to enquire what Ornaments and things of value have been thus Seiz'd and Sold, and by whom, and to what Uſe the Mony has been employ'd. *

* Regiſt. Bonner Fol. 111.

Dec. 17. Council Book.

“ The Pariſhioners of Penwith in Cornwall, roſe in Tumults againſt the Commiſſioners, appointed to take an Inventory of the Church Jewels. To pacify this Mutiny, the Council Wrote a Letter, to acquaint them, that the intent of this Commiſſion, was rather to preſerve the Jewels to the uſe of the Church, and to prevent their being Imbezled, then otherwiſe.

“ By Letters from the Privy Council to the Lord Wharton, and the Commiſſioners appointed for the ſurrender of Kirke's Wall, it appears the Maſter and Fellows of that Society had been before the Council. 'Tis likewiſe intimated this College had formerly refus'd to ſurrender their Houſe. And that the Council had once reſolv'd to have puniſh'd their Diſobedience to the King's Commiſſioners, and made them an Example, for Terror to others. But now they were grown more manageable, bent to a Compliance, and ſeem'd ſorry for their former ſtubborneſs. Upon theſe Conſiderations, the Council thought fit to continue them upon the Premiſes, till farther Orders ſhould be taken for their Penſions, and diſpoſal of their College. However, in the mean time, an Inventory was taken of their Goods.

Theſe Orders of the Privy Council were ſome of them diſpatch'd before the ſitting of the Parliament: However, I thought it better to lay them altogether before the Reader, then break the Thread of the Hiſtory, by keeping too cloſe to the exactneſs of Time.

In January this Year, there was an Order of Council, relating to the Marriage of the Marqueſs of Northampton. This Nobleman, who was Brother to the Queen Dowager, had Married Anne Bourchier, Daughter and Sole Heir to the Earl of Eſſex. This Lady being convicted of Adultery, a Divorce follow'd. And to ſettle the matter more ſolemnly, and make the Marqueſs a farther Reparation, a Commiſſion was granted in the beginning of laſt Summer, to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of Durham and Rocheſter, (which was then Holbeke) to Dr. Ridley and others, to the Number of Ten, of whom Six were to be a Quorum: Their Buſineſs was to Examine, whether the Matrimonial Relation between the Marqueſs and the Lady Anne, was not perfectly extinguiſh'd: And if ſo, whether he might not lawfully Marry another Wife. This liberty was not allow'd by the Canon Laws. And therefore the Eccleſiaſtical Courts gave no farther relief than Separation from Bed and Board.

May 7. Anno Dom. 1547.

A Committe of Biſhops, &c. for examining the Divorce of the Marqueſs of Northampton, and whether 'twas lawful to Marry again?

The Caſe being New, and of great Conſequence, Cranmer reſolv'd to examine it with the utmoſt Care, and go to the bottom of the Queſtion: to this purpoſe he drew a large Collection out of the Fathers and other Divines. (h) The reading a great many Books, forming Arguments, and coming to a Reſolution, requir'd longer Time than the Marqueſs of Northampton was willing to wait. He preſum'd his Intereſt would carry him thro', and therefore without ſtaying for Judgment, he publickly Married Elizabeth, Daughter to the Lord Cobham. This was look'd on as an irregular Step, by the Privy Council, in regard his firſt Marriage ſtood firm in Law. Upon his appearing before the Board, he alledg'd that he thought himſelf diſcharg'd by the Law of God: That the Indiſſolubleneſs of Marriages depended on the ſuppoſition of it's being a Sacrament: That this reſtraint was only a Branch of the Papal Conſtitutions. That the Court of Rome being Apprehenſive ſuch Impoſitions would not eaſily be born, had given way to the diſtinctions of the Canoniſts: And that by theſe Allowances 'twas no difficult matter to void the Matrimonial Ingagement. That the confinements of the Engliſh Church were great hardſhips, if upon the proof of ſcandalous Commerce, the Innocent Perſon muſt either live with the Guilty, or be expos'd to Hazard and Temptation: And that one of theſe Circumſtances muſt neceſſarily follow, if the Tie of the Marriage continued, and Separation was the fartheſt Remedy.

(h) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. Ex Mſs. Dr. Stillingfleet.

However, ſince the Marqueſs had precipitated Matters, and made his own Choice before Judgment given, 'twas order'd that he and his New Wife ſhould be parted. Thus the Lady was put into the Queen Dowagers Hands, till the Delegates ſhould pronounce upon the Caſe.

The Arguments on which they founded their Sentence, were drawn from Scripture, the Fathers, and the Civil Law. They argue that our Saviour condemn'd all Marriage upon Divorce excepting in the Caſe of Adultery. (i) That this Exception is a plain Allowance of the Caſe reſerv'd: That our Saviour pronouncing married Perſons to be no more two, but one Fleſh, from hence it follows, that when either of the Parties have broken that Union by becoming one with another Perſon, the Marriage muſt by Conſequence be diſſolv'd. Beſides, Separation without voiding the Engagement is not to be reconcil'd, to what the Apoſtle writes to the Corinthians. (k) Farther, St. Paul putting the Caſe of an Unbeliever going off, and relinquiſhing the Marriage, determines that a Brother or Siſter is not under Bondage in ſuch Caſes. Now if ſingle Deſertion amounts to a Diſcharge, which ſeems to be the Apoſtles Meaning, the Reaſoning from Adultery will be ſtill more Concluſive.

(i) St. Mat. 19. v. 9.

(k) Cor. 7. 3. and 4. Ibid. v. 15.

To this 'twas replied on the other ſide, that our Saviour allowing Divorce in the Caſe of Adultery, was a Privilege particular to the Jews. That this Indulgence was allow'd to ſoften the Rigour of the Moſaick Law, by which this Crime was capitally puniſh'd in the Woman. To prove this Liberty peculiar to the Jews, 'twas obſerv'd that the Apoſtle writing to the Gentile Chriſtians at Rome and Corinth, declares the Wife bound by the Law to her Husband, as long as he lives, (l) without any Exception of Caſes: And that other General Rule pronounc'd by our Saviour, whom God has join'd together, let no Man put aſunder, was alledg'd to prove the Matrimonial Tie indiſſoluble. To this 'twas anſwer'd, that theſe Texts thus interpreted, prov'd too much, and condemn'd Separation from Bed and Board, no leſs than diſſolving the (l) Rom. 7. v. 2. St. Matthew 19. v. 6.

the Relation. That our Saviour left the Wife at Liberty to part with her Husband for Adultery, tho' by the Law of Moſes, only the adulterous Wife and the Perſon who debauch'd her were to ſuffer Death; but the Husband guilty of ſuch an Offence, was not capitally puniſh'd: By this Proviſion of our Saviour therefore with Reſpect to the Woman, they inferr'd the Marriage was evidently diſſolv'd by Adultery.

From hence they proceed to the Teſtimony of the Fathers, which becauſe there is no Reference to examine the Citations, I ſhall forbear to mention.

By the Civil Law, if the Man could prove his Wife a Strumpet, a Poiſoner, or Procureſs, he might have Judgment for a Divorce. And if a Woman could convict her Husband of Murder, Poiſoning, of breaking up, or robbing of Graves, ſhe had the ſame Remedy: And after the Divorce was once pronounc'd, either of the injur'd Perſons were at Liberty to marry. (m) And thus by the Conſtitutions drawn up for the Eccleſiaſtical Courts in this Reign, when Adultery was prov'd upon either of the Parties, the Innocent Perſon was not barr'd from Marrying at Diſcretion. (n)

(m) III. Cod. Theod. Tit. 16. Lex. 1.

(n) Ref. Eccleſ. Leg. p. 25.

Judgment given for the Marqueſs.

To return, the Queſtion was divided into Eight Branches, and put to ſome Learned Men, who return'd their Anſwer in Favour of the Marqueſs of Northampton's Second Marriage. (o) Purſuant to this Reſolution Sentence was given for this Lord, and his Second Lady permitted to cohabit with him. However, Four Years after, he was adviſ'd to bring in a Bill into the Parliament Houſe for confirming this Judgment, of which more afterwards.

(o) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. p. 58. and Records Book 1. p. 125.

In the latter End of January, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury wrote to Bonner Biſhop of London, to forbid the Uſe of ſome Ceremonies formerly practic'd. The Letter is in theſe Words.

An Order of Council againſt bearing of Candles Palmes &c.

" This is to advertiſe your Lordſhip, that " my Lord Protectors Grace, with Advice of " others the King's Majeſties Council, for " certain Conſiderations then thereunto mo" ving, hath fully reſolv'd that no Candles
" ſhould be born upon Candlemas Day, nor
" alſo from henceforth Aſhes or Palmes uſed
" any longer. Wherefore I beſeech your Lord-
" ſhip to cauſe Admonition thereof to be given
" in all Pariſh Churches throughout your Dio-
" ceſe with all Celerity: And likewiſe unto
" all other Biſhops that be here abouts, that " they may do the ſemblable in their Dioceſes
" before Candlemas Day. And as for other
" Biſhops that cannot have Knowledge ſo ſoon,
" you may give them Knowledge hereof at
" more Leiſure, ſo that it be done before Aſh-
" wedneſday. Thus fare your Lordſhip well,
" your Loving Friend T. Cantuar. (p)

Lambeth Jan. 27. 1547.

(p) Regiſt. Bonner Fol. 110.

Cranmers Mandate to Bonner.

The Reaſon of the Archbiſhops requiring Bonner to acquaint the Provincial Biſhops is, becauſe the Biſhops of London being Deans of the Epiſcopal College are oblig'd to execute the Mandates of their Metropolitan, and tranſmit his Orders to the Suffragans of the Province. And therefore tho' Bonner had no Inclination for Services of this kind, he could not decline them without entangling himſelf, and falling under Cenſure.

However, he ventur'd to demur a little to the Execution; Upon which the Archbiſhop writes another Letter to remind him that 'twas not ſo much his Order, as that of the Privy Council. Neither was there any Inconſiſtency, (as it ſeems Bonner had objected) between this Injunction, and the King's Proclamation lately ſet forth. (q)

(q) Regiſt. Bonner Fol. 111.

The Purport of the Proclamation was to forbid all Perſons making any Alterations in the Rites and Practice of the Church, either by putting down the Old, or bringing in any new Ceremonies without publick Warrant. That all ſuch Singularities, all ſuch private and unauthoriz'd Fancies, were Arguments of Pride, diſpleaſing to God Almighty, and tended to the Diſturbance of Church and State. All Clergy Men are likewiſe forbidden to preach in any Place excepting their own Cures, unleſs licens'd by the King, his Highneſſes Viſitors, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of the Dioceſe. But notwithſtanding all innovating is forbidden, there is a Clauſe in the Proclamation to ſcreen thoſe from Puniſhment, who ſhould omit or refuſe the bearing of Candles on Candlemas Day, taking Aſhes on Aſhwedneſday, creeping to the Croſs, bearing Palmes, or taking Holy Bread or Holy Water, or omitting ſuch other Rites and Ceremonies concerning Religion, which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury by his Majeſties Command, with the Advice of the Privy Council has declar'd, or ſhall hereafter declare to the other Biſhops by his Writing under Seal, to be omitted or chang'd.

An Order of Council for removing all Images out of Churches.

Feb. 6. Anno Dom. 1547.

Before this Order could reach the remote Parts of the Kingdom, 'twas follow'd with another concerning Images. Theſe it ſeems had either not been remov'd ſo far as the Injunctions requir'd, or which is more likely, the Council, advanc'd to a Reſolve of throwing them all out, (whether abus'd or not,) without Diſtinction. Their Letter to the Archbiſhop is to this Effect. They take notice that by one Article of the King's Injunctions all Images which at any Time had been abus'd, with Pilgrimages, Offerings or Cenſings, ſhould be taken away. " That " the Execution was conteſted in ſeveral Parts " of the Kingdom. That ſome People were
" ſo poſitive in their Superſtition, that the evi" dent Abuſe of Images was not thought a ſuf-
" ficient Motive to part with them: That the " matter of Fact was likewiſe queſtion'd, and " a great deal of ſquabbling in many Places,
" whether Images had been abus'd, or not.
" That Diſputes of this kind, unleſs obviated
" in time, would probably proceed to farther
" Inconveniencies: And that the Kingdom is " ſcarcely any where quiet, excepting where
" theſe Occaſions of Diſturbance are wholly " taken away. That the Catholick Church
" made uſe of no Repreſentations of this kind
" for many years: And that by no means 'tis
" convenient the living Images of Chriſt ſhould
" fall into Miſunderſtandings, about thoſe
" which are inanimate; eſpecially ſince they " can't be ſaid to be any neceſſary Circumſtan-
" ces in Divine Service. For theſe Reaſons
" the Archbiſhop is requir'd to iſſue out his " Mandate for the taking them down every " where with all Expedition. The Letter is ſubſcrib'd by,

Edward Somerſet. Anthony Wingfield.
Henry Arundel. John Ruſſel.
Thomas Seymour. William Paget.

The Viſitors Injunctions to the Dean'ry of Doncaſter.

The King's Commiſſioners in their late Viſitation were ſomewhat particular in their Directions to the Clergy and Laity within the Dean'ry of Doncaſter. By their exceeding the Injunctions it ſeems they had ſomewhat of a Diſcretionary Commiſſion. I ſhall mention ſome of their Orders to the Clergy. They injoin them to teach their Pariſhioners that Faſting in Lent, and at other Times of Abſtinence is no more than a mere poſitive, or human Law: That the Civil Magiſtrate may change the Times, or diſpence with the Auſterities: And therefore that all Perſons who have either Sickneſs, other Neceſſity, or Licenſe, may within the Bounds of Temperance, eat what they pleaſe without ſcruple of Conſcience.

Item. Before High Maſs is ſaid or ſung at the High Altar, the Engliſh Suffrages for the Proſperity of the King's Affairs, and the recommending his Subjects to the Divine Protection, was audibly to be read. (q)

(q) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2d. Record p. 126.

Item. Every Sunday at the Time of the Prieſts going about the Church with Holy Water, he was to ſpeak the following Sentence in Three or Four Places where he might be beſt heard by the Congregation.

> Remember Chriſt's Blood ſhedding, by the which moſt Holy ſprinkling, of all your Sins you have free Pardon.

In like manner before the Diſtribution of the Holy Bread * he was to pronounce theſe Words.

* This Holy Bread was not conſecrated.

> Of Chriſt's Body this is a Token; which on the Croſs for our Sins was broken; wherefore of his Death if ye will be Partakers, of Vice and Sins you muſt be Forſakers.

The Clerk in like manner is order'd to bring down the Pax, and ſtanding without the Church Door, ſay theſe Words aloud to the People.

> This is a Token of joyful Peace which is betwixt God and Mens Conſcience: Chriſt is alone the Peace Maker which ſtraitly commands Peace between Brother and Brother.

By the way, the Pax was a Piece of Wood, or Metal, with the Figure of our Saviour upon it: When the Holy Kiſs mention'd by St. Paul (r) was left off upon prudential Motives; the Uſe of the Pax was brought in, carried about the Church, and offer'd all the People to Kiſs.

(r) 1 Cor. 16. 20.

Anno Dom. 154$\frac{7}{8}$.

This Firſt Year of the King's Reign Biſhop Latimer appear'd publickly, and exercis'd Part of his Function. He preach'd in January at Pauls Croſs, and the Lent after, before the King in the Privy Garden. (s) “In ſome of his Printed Sermons he complains the Holy Revenues were ſeiz'd by the Rich Laity; that the Incumbent was only a Proprietor in Title: That Chauntry Prieſts were preſented to ſeveral Cures, to excuſe the Patrons from paying their Penſions: That many Benefices were let out in Fee Farms by ſecular Men, or elſe given to their Servants as a Conſideration for keeping their Hounds, Hawks, and Horſes: And laſtly, that the Poor Clergy were reduced to ſuch ſhort Allowance, that they were forc'd to go to Service: To turn Clerks of the Kitchen, Surveyors, Receivers, &c. (t) Thus God was diſhonour'd in his Miniſters, the Church diſſerv'd, and Religion diſgrac'd. However, there was no Redreſs to be had: All this Outrage and Injuſtice was generally conniv'd at by the great Men: For as the Learned Heylin obſerves, which way could they go about to rectifie theſe Diſorders without condemning themſelves? (u)

(s) Stow Annal.

Biſhop Latimers Complaint of the Invaſion of the Patrimony of the Church.

(t) Latimers Sermons p. 38. 71. 91. 114. 241.

(u) Heylin. Hiſt.Ref.p.61.

The Declenſion of the Univerſities.

Neither were the Univerſities in any better Condition: They lay under the laſt Degree of Diſcouragement, as appears by Aſchams Letter to the Marqueſs of Northampton. He complains there was ſcarce any Sort of Motive left for Study: That Learning had neither Wealth nor Reſpect to draw the Fancy: That for theſe Reaſons, Improvement in Science was impracticable to Poor People: And as for the Wealthy,they had no Stomach to drudge for Attainments ſo little regarded: That unleſs Men's Hopes were reviv'd by Conſiderations of Intereſt and Figure, the moſt promiſing Genius's would miſcarry, and the Country ſink to the laſt Degree of Ignorance. (w)

(w) Aſchams Epiſt. lib. 1. p. 406.

One Leaver a Learned Man of Cambridge makes a reſembling Remonſtrance at St. Pauls Croſs. He applies himſelf boldly to the Courtiers; tells them the Univerſity was not much the better for the Five Lectures founded by the late King: That they had been falſe to their Truſt, and inrich'd themſelves with Revenues ſettled upon that Learned Society: That before they had the Diſpoſal of the King's Bounty, there was in Cambridge Two Hundred that ſtudied Divinity to conſiderable Improvement; but that now the Univerſity was lamentably thin, and diſpirited. (x)

(x) Wood Hiſt. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. p. 266.

The Chauntry Lands miſemploy'd.

The Univerſity of Oxford had no better Fortune: The Chauntry Lands deſign'd by the Act for Proviſion for Poor Scholars, were divided amongſt the Courtiers, and the Salaries ſettled upon the Lectures unpaid. In ſhort, moſt of the Religious Foundations which at the Diſſolution of their Houſes ſhould have been employ'd for the Augmentation of the King's Revenues, the Maintenance of the Poor, and the Encouragement of Learning, was ſwallow'd by Men of a very uncommendable Character. Who as the Hiſtorian ſpeaks, ſeem to have been born for the Deſtruction of Senſe and Conſcience; who in regard they were Lay-men could have no Pretences to the Endowments of the Church: For ſince they were incapable of performing the Sacerdotal Office, with what Juſtice could they lay Hands on the Eſtates ſettled on that Function? However, all the Reaſon and Remonſtrance of good Men could not prevail with them to baulk their Avarice, nor hinder them from ſettling their Sacrilege upon their Poſterity.

Ibid.

And having mention'd Aſchams Report of the Condition of the Univerſity of Cambridge, I ſhall add ſomething in general concerning the Courſe of their Studies, as 'tis repreſented by the ſame Hand. In one of his Letters to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury he takes notice that the Study of the Canon Law, and School Men, began to be diſus'd: That they form'd their Syſtem of Divinity upon the Holy Scriptures and the Writings of St. Auſtin: That Languages and the Belles Lettres, began to be in vogue: That Plato, Ariſtotle, and Tully, Herodotus, Thucidides, and Xenophon, together with the Greek Poets of the firſt Claſſe, were much their Inclination. Afterwards, he complains in general of the Diſcouragements the Univerſity lay under. That the Men of Long ſtanding were moſtly gone off; and that Parts and Learning were generally overweigh'd by Favour, and Recommendations from great Men. (y)

(y) Aſcham Epiſt. lib. 2.

The latter End of this Winter a Committee of Divines were commanded by the King to draw

A Committee of Biſhops, &c. draw up an Order for adminiſtring the Holy Euchariſt under both kinds.

draw up an Order for adminiſtring the Holy Euchariſt in Engliſh under both Kinds, purſuant to the late Act of Parliament. The Commiſſion was directed to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhops of Ely, Lincoln, Chicheſter, Hereford, Weſtminſter, Rocheſter, Dr. Cox Almoner to the King, and Dean of Chriſt Church; Dr. May Dean of St. Pauls, Dr. Taylour or Tyler Dean of Lincoln; Dr. Heynes Dean of Exeter, Dr. Robertſon afterwards Dean of Durham, and Dr. Redmayne Maſter of Trinity College in Cambridge. Theſe were the Perſons who afterwards made the firſt Liturgy: And therefore Heylin is of Opinion they were now employ'd for the Buſineſs above mention'd. (z) The Learned Biſhop Burnet from a Manuſcript of Dr. Stillingfleet gives a different Liſt, on which we ought rather to rely, for Heylin ſpeaks only upon Conjecture: The Names are theſe, the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, the Biſhops of London, Durham, and Worceſter, Norwich, St. Aſaph, Salisbury, Coventry and Litchfield, Carliſle, Briſtol, St. Davids, Ely, Lincoln, Chicheſter, Hereford, Weſtminſter, Rocheſter, together with all the Doctors abovementioned.

These Prelates and Divines before they came to a Reſolution concerning the Form for the Adminiſtration in both Kinds, conſider'd the preſent Practice of the Church, and broke the Queſtion into ſeveral Diviſions. And here 'twas ſettled, that every one in the Commiſſion ſhould give his Anſwer in Writing. (a)

Their Anſwer to ſeveral Queſtions relating to the Holy Euchariſt.

Queſtion I.

Whether the Sacrament of the Altar was inſtituted to be receiv'd of one Man for another, or to be receiv'd of every Man for himſelf?

Upon this Queſtion, they are all agreed that this Holy Sacrament was inſtituted to be receiv'd of every Man for himſelf, and not of one Man for another: But here it muſt be ſaid the Biſhop of Durham is not quite ſo clear as the reſt for the latter Part of the Queſtion.

Queſtion II.

Whether the receiving the ſaid Sacrament of one Man does avail and profit any other?

Here Canterbury and St. Davids, and the Two Drs. Cox, and Taylour, hold the Negative Part of the Queſtion. The reſt, excepting Carliſle and Briſtol, agree in a middle Senſe: They affirm the receiving this Holy Sacrament ſignifies nothing as to another Perſon, any farther than that all good Works done by any Member of the Catholick Church are in ſome Meaſure ſerviceable to the whole Body, by Virtue of the Union and Communication which runs thro' this Spiritual Society. I obſerv'd Carliſle and Briſtol were more expreſs: The firſt (whoſe Name was Aldrich) diſtinguiſhes between the Act of the Receiver, and the Oblation of the Sacrifice made by the Prieſt: If the Receiver comes unqualified, he hurts himſelf, and it may be, does no Service to any other Perſon. But the Offering and Diſtribution of the Holy Sacrament by the common Miniſter is Beneficial to preſent and abſent, Living and Dead.

Ann. Dom. 1547.-8.

Buſh Biſhop of Briſtol endeavours to prove the Celebration of the Holy Sacrament ſerviceable not only to the Receivers, but the whole Church. To this Purpoſe he quotes theſe Words of St. Cyprian. (b) Quanquam fideliſſimus & devotiſſimus Frater noſter, inter cætera ſolicitudinem & curam ſuam cum Fratribus in omni Obſequio Operationis impertitur, qui nec illic curam corporum —— ſcripſerit ac ſcribit ac ſignificat mihi dies quibus in carcere beati Fratres noſtri ad Immortalitatem glorioſæ mortis exitu tranſeant & celebrentur, hic à nobis Oblationes & Sacrificia ob commemorationes eorum, quæ cito vobiſcum, Domino proſperante, celebrabimus. Ita enim docuit Apoſtolus Chriſti unus Panis & unum corpus multi ſumus omnes, qui de uno pane, & de uno calice participamus. Nec loquitur de his Solis, qui eo tempore Corinthi conveniebant, & Sacramentum ab unius Sacerdotis manu recipiebant, verum potius de ſeipſo tunc procul à Corintho agente, & Corinthiis ipſis omnibuſque in Chriſtum credentibus, ubi tandem conſtituti eſſent, quos omnes ſignificat unum eſſe corpus qui toto Orbe de uno Pane communicantes participarent.

Queſtion III.

What is the Oblation aud Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs,

The Reader ſhall have Canterbury's Anſwer in his own Words, viz.

“ The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs is not ſo called becauſe Chriſt indeed is there offer'd and ſacrific'd by the Prieſt and the People; (for that was done but once by himſelf upon the Croſs) but it is ſo called, becauſe it is a Memory and Repreſentation of that very true Sacrifice and Immolation which before was made upon the Croſs.

Holbeck and Ridley and Ferrars, Biſhops of Lincoln, Rocheſter, and St. Davids, declar'd themſelves much to the ſame Effect: The Drs. Cox and Tyler ſeem'd to go ſomewhat lower, and make the Oblation in the Holy Euchariſt mean nothing more than Prayer, Thankſgiving, and the Remembrance of our Saviours Paſſion. The reſt, that is Holgate Archbiſhop of York, Heath Biſhop of Worceſter, Reps of Norwich, Parfew of St. Aſaph, Tunſtal of Durham, Salcot alias Capon of Salisbury, Gooderick of Ely, Sampſon of Coventry and Lichfield, Day of Chicheſter, and Skip of Hereford, together with Lincoln and Carliſle, agree in a Counter Senſe. “ They affirm the Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is the preſenting the very Body and Blood of Chriſt to God the Father, under the Form of Bread and Wine. That theſe Euchariſtick Elements are Conſecrated with Prayer and Thankſgiving for the univerſal Church, and in Remembrance of our Saviour's Paſſion. And here the Biſhop of Carliſle is ſomewhat more ſtrong and ſingular; his Words are theſe.

“ The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is even the ſame which was offer'd by Chriſt on the Croſs, ever and every where abiding and enduring of like Strength, Virtue, and Power. The Difference is, that on the Croſs, Chriſt being there both Prieſt and Sacrifice, offer'd himſelf viſibly; and in the Maſs being likewiſe both Prieſt and Sacrifice, offers himſelf inviſibly by the Common Miniſter of the Church, who in the Name and Stead of the whole faithful Congregation, offers and preſents as he is commanded by Chriſt.

Queſtion IV.

Wherein conſiſts the Maſs by Chriſt's Inſtitution?

Here Canterbury, Salisbury, Lincoln, Ely, Rocheſter,

---

(z) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 57.

(a) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d.* p. 61. Biſhop Burnet ex Mſs. Dr. Stillingfleet.

(b) Epiſt. 6. lib. 3.

cheſter, Briſtol and St. David's are of the ſame Opinion: They affirm the Maſs by Chriſt's Inſtitution conſiſts in thoſe Things which are mention'd in the Evangeliſt, Mat. 26. Mark, 14. Luke, 22. 1 Cor. 10, and 11. Acts 2. York adds John the Sixth to the former Texts, but ſeems to come towards the Senſe of Tranſubſtantiation, Cox and Tyler are ſomewhat more explicite, and make the Maſs conſiſt in the Diſtribution of the Body and Blood of Chriſt in Memory of his Paſſion.

Queſtion V.

What Time the accuſtom'd Order began firſt in the Church, that the Prieſt alone ſhould receive the Sacrament?

To this Canterbury anſwers thus, "I think the Uſe that the Prieſt alone did receive the Sacrament without the People, began not within Six or Seven Hundred Years after Chriſt. Lincolns Anſwer is much the ſame, only he gives Reaſons and Dilates a little. Rocheſter differs from theſe two only as to the Time, and ſeems to grant ſomewhat more of Antiquity to the Cuſtom.

York is ſomewhat ſingular in his Anſwer, and relies upon a forg'd decretal Epiſtle.

He affirms, "the Cuſtomary Order that Prieſts ſhould receive the Sacrament alone began about the Time of Zepherinus, who when the Common People had left their daily and frequent Communion, ordain'd that they ſhould communicate at the leaſt once a year, which was at Eaſter; which Ordinance was confirm'd by Innocent the Third. Rocheſter alledges ſome of theſe ſpurious Authorities for a contrary Purpoſe. London, Worceſter, Hereford, Norwich, Chicheſter, St. Aſaph and Durham are uniform in their Sentiment, they don't pretend to found the Practice upon any Conſtitution, but refer it to the Decay of the Primitive Fervour, and the Abatement of Devotion in the People, who when they abſented themſelves from the Sacrament, the Prieſts were forced to receive it alone. The Biſhop of Durham explains himſelf farther, and obſerves that at firſt the People receiv'd the Holy Euchariſt every Day; afterwards thrice a week, then on Sundays only: And Devotion growing more languid upon the Courſe of Time, the Intervals of the Solemnity were ſtill more diſtant, and the People receiv'd no oftner than thrice a year, that is at the Feſtivals of Chriſtmaſs, Eaſter, and Whitſuntide.

Queſtion VI.

Whether it be convenient that the ſame Cuſtom continue ſtill within this Realm?

Here Canterbury and Rocheſter are for reviving the Primitive Uſage, as founded upon Scripture, and declare againſt ſolitary Communion. The reſt of the Biſhops determine the other Way: They wiſh the Prieſt might have ſome of the Congregation to receive with him at every Maſs; however if the Coldneſs of their Devotion makes them decline communicating, they think it both lawful and convenient, that the Prieſt ſhould ſay Maſs and receive the Sacrament alone. Dr. Cox ſeems to be of the ſame Opinion in Caſe the People cannot be prevail'd with to communicate with the Prieſt.

Queſtion VII.

Whether it is convenient that Maſſes ſatisfactory ſhould continue, that is, Prieſts hir'd to Sing Maſs for Souls departed?

Canterbury anſwers, he thinks it not convenient that ſatisfactory Maſſes ſhould continue. Rocheſter and Dr. Cox, agree with the Archbiſhop. London, Hereford, Worceſter, Norwich, Chicheſter, and St. Aſaph, joyn in the ſame Anſwer. They Affirm the Queſtion before them is not couch'd in the Language of the Schoolmen; however, they believe the Prieſt praying in the Maſs for the Quick and Dead, and officiating in other Circumſtances of the Sacrament, may lawfully receive a maintenance upon this Score.

Durham affirms, all Prieſts when they ſay Maſs, are bound to Pray for the whole Catholick Church, both in this World and in the other, tho' they are not under Promiſe or Agreement, of receiving Mony for this purpoſe. Nevertheleſs, as St. Paul ſpeaks, ſince the People are made Partakers of their ſpiritual things, their Duty is alſo to Miniſter unto them in carnal Things. (b)

Lincoln goes a middle way, and argues for his Opinion; He cites the Epiſtle to the Hebrews to maintain the full ſatisfaction of the Sacrifice upon the Croſs: That Chriſt by his own Blood entred in once into the holy Place, having obtain'd eternal Redemption for us: And that by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified. (c) That the keeping up ſatisfactory Maſſes in the Notion receiv'd, ſeems to Import a Deficiency in the Redemption upon the Croſs; and that the Apoſtles wanted either Learning, or Benevolence in their Inſtructions. 'Tis true, ſays he, Nauclerus Informs us, Gregory the Third order'd the Prieſts to Pray and Offer for the Dead: But tho' Antient Writers mention this as part of the Prieſts Office, yet they never allow of Contracts, and Mony Conſiderations for this purpoſe.

The Biſhop of Ely delivers himſelf to this Senſe: He owns Praying for the Dead is a Commendable, Primitive, and uninterrupted Cuſtom, and ſeems to have ſome Ground in Scripture; and for this he Appeals to the Teſtimonies of St. Ambroſe, St. Chryſoſtome, St. Auſtin, and others. But to ſay Maſs for Mony, by way of Commerce and Exchange, as if there was a juſt Proportion between the Prayer and the Mony, between the Performance and the Reward: Managing thus, as it were, by way of Articles, looks, he thinks, like Simoniacal Covetouſneſs. And yet all this muſt be underſtood within a due Reſerve for thoſe Texts of Scripture, where the Labourer is ſaid, to be worthy of his Hire, (d) and the Lord has Ordain'd, that they that Preach the Goſpel ſhould Live of the Goſpel.

The Biſhop of Carliſle Affirms, that if any Thing, or Action of the Prieſt, is interpreted to a full ſatisfaction of Sins Venial or Mortal, he knows no Authority in Proof of ſuch an Aſſertion: Neither is he willing to grant that Prieſts are hired by way of Bargain to ſay Maſs for Souls departed. He would rather have it that the Praying for the Living and Dead, is part of the Church Service; that 'tis perform'd by the Prieſt as a Branch of his Function, without any regard to the Advantage of his Pocket: However, he thinks the Clergy ought to be conſidered for theſe Miniſtrations. Then as to

---

(b) Rom. 15. v. 27.

(c) Heb. 9. 12. & 10. 14.

(d) Luke 10. 7. 1 Cor. 9. 14.

to the perfect and plenary ſatisfaction for all Sins, that is only to be attributed to our Saviours Paſſion: However, thoſe who go into the other World, charg'd only with ſome leſſer Faults unrepented, he hopes may be reliev'd by the Euchariſtick Sacrifice, and the Prayers of the Church, and for this he cites St. Auſtin. St. Jerome, &c. Pro non valdè malis Propitiationes fiant, & de levioribus Peccatis, cum quibus Obligati Defuncti ſunt, poſſunt poſt mortem Abſolvi, &c.

Queſtion VIII.

Whether the Goſpel ought to be taught at the Time of the Maſs, to the underſtanding of the People being preſent,

Here London and Durham are of one Opinion. They don't think it neceſſary a Sermon ſhould be Preach'd at every Maſs, tho' they grant the frequent Uſe of ſuch Inſtruction is very commendable. The reſt ſpeak ſomewhat higher for this Practice, and ſeem to make it in a manner neceſſary.

Queſtion IX.

Whether in the Maſs it were convenient to uſe ſuch Speech as the People may underſtand?

To this Canterbury Anſwers, he thinks it convenient to uſe the vulgar Tongue in the Maſs, excepting in certain ſecret Myſteries, concerning which he is unreſolv'd at preſent. York agrees with him, but without any Heſitation concerning the Myſteries.

London, Hereford, Chicheſter, Worceſter, Norwich, and St. Aſaph, pronounce they think it not convenient the whole Maſs ſhould be in Engliſh.

Durham's Anſwer looks the ſame Way; He Affirms that Latin being the common Language of the Weſtern Liturgies, he thinks the continuance of it ought to be kept on, eſpecially as to the more Myſterious Part of the Service: He conceives the Majeſty of Religion would ſuffer and grow Cheap, if the moſt Solemn Part of it ſhould be underſtood by the Audience. Notwithſtanding this ſingularity, he believes the tranſlating ſeveral Prayers, for informing the Underſtanding, and exciting the Devotion of the People, might be a ſerviceable Expedient.

Lincoln's Anſwer diſagrees with Durham. This Biſhop inſiſts upon the Apoſtles Authority and Reaſoning. (e) To prove the publick Service ought to be in a Tongue the People Underſtand, without which they are not in a condition to ſay Amen: He adds that long after the Apoſtles Times, the Liturgies continued in the Language of the Country.

(e) 1 Cor. 14.

Ely reinforces Lincoln, by producing Inſtances. This was the Cuſtom, ſays he, in Dalmatia, in St. Jerome's Time. And afterwards when Cyril applied to the Court of Rome, for the ſame Uſage in Sclavonia, the Caſe being debated in the Conſiſtory, and the Motion oppoſed by a ſtrong Party, a Voice was heard as it were from Heaven. Omnis Spiritus laudet Dominum, & omnis Lingua confiteatur ei: And thus the Deciſion was made in favor of Cyril, however Ely concludes with a Proviſo for altering his Mind upon better Information.

Carliſle Obſerves, that the Publiſhing the holy Scriptures in Engliſh, in the late Reign, were firſt thought Inconvenient, and afterwards allow'd by the Advice of the Clergy: And that for his Part he was ready to follow Authority, and ſubmit his Underſtanding to his Superiors.

Rocheſter declares for the Maſs in the vulgar Language, and that the People have a Right to underſtand the Church Service: Which way elſe can they Anſwer the Prieſt, as they did in St. Cyprian's Time, Habemus ad Dominum; that is, we lift them up unto the Lord. However, upon the Authority of St. Baſil and the Counterfeit St. Dennis, he thinks 'twould not be Inconvenient if the Words of Conſecration were ſecreted or ſpoken low.

Briſtol is of Opinion, that ſaying the whole Maſs in Engliſh, would bring a Singularity upon the Engliſh Church, and make her differ from the reſt of Chriſtendom.

Queſtion X.

When the Reſervation of the Sacrament, and the hanging up of the ſame firſt began,

To this Queſtion we have only the Anſwers of Canterbury and Lincoln. The firſt believes the Reſervation of the Sacrament began Six or Seven Hundred Years after Chriſt, and that the Hanging it up hath ſtill leſs Antiquity. The latter Cites Polydore Virgil, for a Decree of Pope Innocent the Third, in which the reſerving the Sacrament was Order'd, that it might be always ready for the Benefit of Sick Perſons. This Decree was confirm'd by Honorius the Third, who added a Clauſe for keeping it in loco ſingulari, Mundo, & ſignato: He likewiſe commanded the Prieſt to inſtruct the People, to make a low Reverence at the Elevation, and when 'twas carried to the Sick. As for the Hanging the Sacrament over the Altar, this Biſhop of Lincoln Affirms it a Cuſtom of a later time, and not yet univerſally received (f)

(f) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2d. Records p. 133. & deinc ex Mſs. Dr. Stillingfleet.

Whether theſe Queſtions were debated before the late Statute, for communicating under both kinds, is ſomewhat uncertain, for by that Act the Prieſts are not reſtrain'd from Conſecrating, tho' none of the Congregation Communicated with them.

A Form drawn up by the Biſhops for communicating in both Kinds.

This Committee of Biſhops and Divines, mov'd gently in the Reformation. They were willing to ſatisfy the Court and the Act of Parliament; and at the ſame Time find out ſuch a Temper, as might not be ſhocking to thoſe of the Old Perſwaſion. Thus by the Form they drew up, the Office of the Maſs continued as formerly in the Latin Tongue, to the End of the Canon: After this an Exhortation in Engliſh was made to thoſe who intended to receive the holy Euchariſt. It began with theſe Words: Dearly Beloved in the Lord, the coming to this holy Communion, &c. then followed the Invitation: You that do truly and earneſtly Repent you of your Sins, &c. From hence the Office proceeds to a general Confeſſion, to the Abſolution, and the comfortable Sentences out of holy Scripture: And from thence to the Prayer, we do not preſume to come to this Table. Theſe Prayers were the ſame which are ſtill us'd by the Church of England. After this the Holy Euchariſt was given in both kinds, firſt to the Clergy, then to the People, with theſe Words, the Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was given for thee, preſerve thy Body into everlaſting Life: The Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was ſhed for thee, preſerve thy Soul into everlaſting Life. The Congregation receiv'd kneeling, and were diſmiſs'd with a Bleſſing. (g)

The Day before the receiving the Communion, the Prieſt made an Exhortation to prepare the People for the Solemnity: 'Tis much the ſame with that now in our Liturgy. Only after the Direction concerning Confeſſion, 'tis added that ſuch as made choice of the cuſtomary Confeſſion to the Prieſt, ſhould not Cenſure thoſe who thought a general Confeſſion to God ſufficient: And that thoſe who Confeſs'd only to God, ſhould not be ſhock'd with thoſe who applied to Auricular Confeſſion: That in things not preſcrib'd in holy Scripture or ſettled by Authority, every Man ought to follow his own Conſcience, without condemning a different Practice in others. The Bread was ſuch as had been formerly uſed, and broken into Two or more Pieces, and the People were taught the Quantity, whether more or leſs, made no difference as to the Benefit: And laſtly, there was no Elevation after Conſecration.

A Proclamation for Conformity to the Office.

This Form being approv'd by the Privy Council, was Publiſh'd with the King's Proclamation on the Eighth of March. "The Proclamation ſets forth that the Office was drawn up to preſerve a due regard for the holy Sacrament: That ſuch high Myſteries might not be approach'd with undue Qualifications, diſhonour'd by diverſity of Uſage, or profan'd by undecent Addreſs. The Subjects are commanded to conform to this Order, that the King may be encourag'd to proceed in the Progreſs of the Reformation: And here they are Injoin'd to wait the publick Direction, and not to over-run Authority. That ſuch unwarrantable Forwardneſs was the way to retard their Wiſhes, and diſappoint them in what they expected.

The next Clauſe is ſomewhat extraordinary, and therefore I ſhall give it in the Words of the Proclamation. We would not, ſays the King, have our Subjects ſo much to miſtake our Judgment, ſo much to miſtruſt our Zeal; as tho' we either could not diſcern what was to be done, or would not do all things in due Time: God be prais'd, we know both what by his Word is meet to be redreſs'd, and have an earneſt Mind with all diligence and convenient ſpeed, to ſet forth the ſame, &c.

The King was but Ten Years Old in October laſt, and therefore to ſuppoſe him a Judge in Controverſy thus early, and make him ſay he knew what was fit to be done was ſomewhat extraordinary. People would not eaſily believe, that a Prince ſo much within his Childhood, ſhould be furniſh'd with Learning, and grown up to that Maturity of Judgment, as to be in a condition to pronounce upon Articles of Faith, and to ſettle the Diſcipline and Worſhip of the Church: This is a Performance which requires a very penetrating and enlightn'd Underſtanding. To determine theſe Points, all the Advantages of Age and Improvement, are no more than neceſſary. Farther; by the Proclamation it appears, the People in many Places were very ungovernable and tumultuary; and thought themſelves Wiſe enough to ſtrike out a Scheme of Religion: And thus preſuming on their Abilities, they practis'd upon their private Fancies, and had not Patience to ſtay the leiſure either of Church or State. To prevent this Diſorder, to make the Devotions of the People Uniform, and recommend theſe beginnings of the Reformation, a ſufficient Number of Copies, of the Office above-mention'd, was tranſmitted to the Biſhops, with a Letter of direction for the diſpoſal. The Councils Letter, (h) drawn up by Archbiſhop Cranmer runs thus.

A Letter of the Privy Council to all the Biſhops for the ſame purpoſe.

March 15. Anno Dom. 154$\frac{7}{8}$.

" After our moſt hearty Commendations unto your Lordſhips, where in the Parliament late holden at Weſtminſter, it was amongſt other things moſt Godly Eſtabliſh'd, that according to the firſt Inſtitution and uſe of the Primitive Church, the moſt holy Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, ſhould be diſtributed to the People, under the kinds of Bread and Wine, according to the Effect whereof, the King's Majeſty minding, with the Advice and Conſent of the Lord Protectors Grace, and the reſt of the Council, to have the ſaid Statute well executed in ſuch ſort, as like as it is agreeable with the Word of God, ſo the ſame may alſo be faithfully and reverently receiv'd of his moſt loving Subjects, to their Comforts and Wealths, hath caus'd ſundry of his Majeſty's moſt Grave and well learned Prelates, and others. learned Men in the Scriptures, to Aſſemble themſelves for this matter, who after long Conference together, have with deliberate Advice, finally agreed upon ſuch an Order, to be us'd in all Places of the King's Majeſty's Dominions, in the diſtribution of the ſaid moſt Bleſſed Sacrament, as may appear unto you by the Book thereof, which we ſend herewith unto you; albeit knowing your Lordſhips Knowledge in the Scriptures, and earneſt good Will and Zeal to the ſetting forth of all things, according to the Truth thereof, we be well aſſured, you will of your own good Will, and upon reſpect to your Duty, diligently ſet forth this moſt godly Order here agreed upon, and commanded to be uſed by the Authority of the King's Majeſty, yet remembring with all, the Crafty Practices of the Devil, who ceaſeth not by his Members, to work by all ways and means the hindrance of all Godlineſs, and conſidering farther, that a great number of the Curates of the Realm, either for lack of Knowlege cannot, or for want of good Mind, will not be ſo ready to ſet forth the ſame as we could wiſh, and as the Importance of the matter, and their own bounden Duty requireth; we have thought good to Pray and Require your Lordſhips, and nevertheleſs in the King's Majeſty, our moſt dread Sovereign Lord's Name, to command you, to have an earneſt, careful, and diligent reſpect, both in your own Perſon, and by all your Officers, and Miniſters alſo, to cauſe theſe Books to be deliver'd to every Parſon, Vicar, and other Curate within your Dioceſe, with ſuch diligence as they may have ſufficient time well to Adviſe, and inſtruct themſelves for the diſtribution of the moſt holy Communion, according to the Order of this Book, before this and Eaſter Time, and alſo that they may be by your good means well directed to uſe ſuch good, Gentle, and Charitable Inſtruction, of their weak, ſimple, and unlearned Pariſhioners, as may be to all their good Satisfaction, as much as may be; praying you to conſider that this Order is ſet forth, to the intent there ſhould be in all Parts of the Realm, and amongſt all Men, one uniform manner quietly uſed: The well executing whereof, like as it ſhall ſtand very

---

(g) Heylin's Hiſt. Ref. p. 58. L'Eſtrange's Allyance of Divine Offices, p. 339. & dinc.

(h) Paper Office.

“ very much in the diligence of your and others “ of your Vocation, ſo we Eſtſounds require “ you, to have an earneſt reſpect thereunto, “ as you tender the King's Majeſty's Pleaſure, “ and will anſwer for the contrary.

T. Cant. R. Ryche Cancell. Wm. St. John, J. Ruſſell, H. Arundell, Wm. Petre, Ed. North, Edward Wotton.

Thoſe who adher'd to the Doctrines and Practices receiv'd, were diſguſted at this Order: They were diſturb'd to find Confeſſion left indifferent; and Apprehenſive the People would go too far in this Liberty, and avoid the Mortification of diſcovering their Conſcience. They obſerv'd our Saviour had given the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors, the Power of binding and looſing; and that St. James Exhorts Chriſtians, to confeſs their Faults one to another. However, our learned Church Hiſtorian (i) Affirms, 'tis certain that Confeſſion to a Prieſt, is no where injoin'd in the Scripture. But the famous Dr. Hammond ſeems of a different Sentiment: And to prove that by confeſſing one to another, (k) is meant Confeſſion to a Prieſt, he Obſerves that the King's MSſ. has the Particle οὖν therefore. That this plainly refers the Exhortation to the Fourteenth Verſe, where the Sick Perſon is directed to call for the Elders of the Church, that they may Pray over him, and Anoint him with Oyl, in order to his Recovery. This the moſt learned Dr. Hammond proves farther from the Context, and nature of the Matter. To warrant this Conſtruction, we have a Parallel Place in St. Peter, (l) where the Apoſtle commands us to be all ſubject one to another. Now to ſtrain this up to the Letter, muſt deſtroy all Government and diſtinction in the Church: And which is more; 'tis big with Inconſiſtency and Contradiction, for it makes every Body both a Subject and Superior, with reſpect to the ſame Perſon, and at the ſame Time: But God, as St. Paul ſpeaks, is not the Author of ſuch Confuſion. (m) To be ſubject therefore one to another, can mean nothing elſe, then that Perſons who are plac'd in a private and inferior Station, ought not to affect a levelling Humour, but ſubmit to Order and Authority. And thus by Parity of Reaſon, the Text in St. James of confeſſing one to another, muſt be underſtood. And to fortify this Expoſition, and bring it up to the Caſe in Hand, he obſerves, that by the Elders of the Church, to whom this Confeſſion is to be made, the Antients underſtand Biſhops or Prieſts. (n) However, it does not follow 'tis always neceſſary: In ſome Caſes, it may only be Councel and not reach to Precept.

That Auricular Confeſſion is attended with Advantage ſeems not ill prov'd by Eraſmus: (o) I ſhall mention a little of his reaſoning upon this Subject. In the firſt Place he takes notice, that Pride is the main Principle of Revolt and Diſobedience. By this unhappy Quality a Man is apt to reſt his Conduct wholly on his own Strength, and depend upon himſelf for his Happineſs: Humility therefore which makes him diſtruſt his Abilities, and reſign to the divine Appointments, is the firſt ſtep towards a Recovery: Now the making a diſcovery of our Lives, opening our Minds, and laying even our Thoughts before a Prieſt, muſt be a mortifying Exerciſe, and can't be done without ſome Conqueſt upon Pride. Now the ſhame of repeating this Diſcipline makes a Man more Guarding in his Practice, and is a ſort of Preſervative againſt a Relapſe. Beſides, the Penitent by laying the State of his Conſcience before a Prieſt, is better acquainted with the degrees of his Guilt, and the danger of his Miſcarriage. To this he adds, when the Diſeaſe is known, the Cure is more Practicable, and the Remedies may be better directed.

To proceed; 'tis ſaid, that in the Primitive Church there was no Obligation to confeſs ſecret Sins, (p) ſince all the Canons were about publick Scandal. But this Reaſon doth not ſeem ſtrong enough to ſupport the Aſſertion; for 'tis certain publick Pennance was ſometime Aſſign'd to private Confeſſion. That thoſe who confeſs'd privately, were order'd to do open Pennance, without being oblig'd to Publiſh their particular Miſcarriage, appears from St. Baſil. (q) Adulterio Pollutas Mulieres & Confitentes ob Pietatem —— publicare quidem Patres noſtri Prohibuerunt, eas autem Stare ſine Communione juſſerunt donec Impleretur Tempus Pœnitentiæ. And from the Fifty Eighth Canon of this Father, 'tis plain that theſe Women were diſpens'd with in the Three firſt Stages of Pennance: They were excus'd the diſcipline of the Flentes, Audientes, & Subſtrati; and immediately rang'd amongſt the Conſiſtentes, to prevent the diſcovery of their Crime. (r) Farther; 'Tis well known that before the Time of Nectarius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, publick Pennance was uſed in the Eaſtern as well as the Weſtern Churches. For the better regulation of this Diſcipline, a Perſon was Choſen to inſpect the State of the Penitents, and receive their Confeſſions. (s) To this Office Sozomen tells us, 'twas Cuſtomary to appoint ſome Prieſt Eminent for his Prudence and regular Behavior; but eſpecially one who was remarkable for his Secrecy. (t) Now to what purpoſe ſhould this latter Qualification be thought ſo neceſſary in a Pœnitentiary, if Confeſſions were not deliver'd as Secrets? And accordingly we find that Perſon of Quality, who occaſion'd the Change of Diſcipline in the Church of Conſtantinople, Confeſs'd to none but the Prieſt, tho' ſhe was at the ſame time openly Penitent. Now ſince private Confeſſion was thus Cuſtomary in the Antient Church, ſince there was a Perſon particularly appointed for this purpoſe, we muſt conclude 'twas then thought a very ſerviceable Expedient. As to the manner of Pennance for great Crimes, the Perſons injoin'd it, applied themſelves to the Archprieſt and Penitentiary, (u) who took their Names in Writing: After this, on the firſt Day of Lent, they appear'd at the Church Door, in a poor torn Habit, for this was then their Mourning Dreſs. Being entred the Church the Biſhops ſtrew'd Aſhes on their Head, and gave them Sackcloath to wear, then putting themſelves in a poſture of Proſtration, the Biſhop, with the Clergy and People, kneel'd down and Pray'd for them: (w) Then the Biſhop making an Exhortation, to affect them with a due ſenſe of their Crime, and preſerve them from Deſpair, drove them out of the Church, and ſhut the Door. In ſhort, they were not in many Caſes admitted to Communion, without running thro' a long Courſe of extraordinary Abſtinence, and a great many other Inſtances of Diſcipline and Mortification. They were abridg'd in almoſt all the Entertainments and Conveniencies of Life, and paſs'd their time worſe then common Poverty could have

Private Confeſſion Examin'd.

Dr. Hammonds Senſe upon this ſubject.

Eraſmus recommends auricular Confeſſion.

Publick Pennance done in the Antient Church for Crimes confeſs'd only to the Prieſt.

The Manner of Pennance.

(i) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. p. 6.

(k) James 5. 16.

(l) 1 Peter 5. 5.

(m) 1 Cor. 14. 33.

(n) Hammond in loc.

(o) Eraſm. Exomologeſis ſeu Modus confitendi.

(p) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d.* p. 65.

(q) 34. Can. ad Amphiloc.

(r) Morinus de Penitent. lib. 2. cap. 19.

(s) Socrat. lib. 5. cap. 19.

(t) Sozom. lib. 7. cap. 16.

(u) Hieron. Epitaph. Fabiolæ.

(w) Sozom. lib. 7. cap. 16. Tertull. de Pænitent. Cyprian. paſſim.

have uſed them. Their Habits and Devotions, their Retirement and publick Appearances, were all of them Apparent Signs of unuſual Severity, of Sorrow and Submiſſion. And theſe Exerciſes of Humiliation were ſometimes continued for ſeveral Years. For Inſtance, St. Baſil aſſigns Two Years Pennance for Theft, Seven for Fornication, Eleven for Perjury, Fifteen for Adultery, Twenty for Murther, and the whole Life for Apoſtacy. (x) Theſe Humiliations had an admirable Effect upon the Chriſtians of thoſe Times. And as the Apoſtle ſpeaks in a like Caſe, what carefulneſs did it work in them? What clearing of themſelves? What Indignation? What Fear, &c. (z)

(x) Baſil Ep. 3. Can. ad Amphiloch. c. 56. 58. 59. 61. 64. 73.

(z) 2 Cor. 7. 11.

In after Ages, when the Primitive Fervor went off, when People were more ready to Run Riot, and grew leſs Governable under Miſcarriage, the Diſcipline of the Church was relax'd, and too much Indulgence allow'd to Pilgrimages and Cruiſades. However, misbehaviour was remarkably call'd to an Account in the Engliſh Church, as appears by the Penitentials of the Archbiſhops Theodore, and Egbert, (a) and by that other drawn up in the Tenth Century. (b)

(a) Spelman de Concil. vol. 1. Hittorpius de Offic. Divin. Morin. de Pœniten.

Our learned Church Hiſtorian obſerves, the not reſtoring publick Pennance, when private Confeſſion was left in a manner indifferent, was Cenſur'd as a great defect. That this was to diſcharge the World of all outward Reſtraints. That endeavors were uſed to revive the Antient Diſcipline, tho' without Succeſs: (c) That which made this matter Impracticable, without the Concurrence of the Civil Authority, was the total diſuſe, as he continues, of all publick Cenſure. But this, under Favor, is ſomewhat miſtaking matter of Fact. For we have ſeveral remarkable Inſtances to perſwade us, that publick Diſcipline was all along kept on Foot in the Engliſh Church: For the purpoſe; St. Dunſtan excommunicated a licentious Count, and refus'd to admit him to Communion, tho' Abſolv'd by the Pope, till he had made his Submiſſion, and gone thro' the Pennance preſcrib'd. For the detail of this Caſe, I ſhall refer the Reader to the former part of this Work. (d) Farther, Archbiſhop Chichley in the Reign of King Henry the Sixth, oblig'd the Lord Strange and his Lady to publick Pennance, for countenancing a Quarrel in the Church. To this I may add the Inſtance of Jane Shoar, in Richard the Thirds Time: (e) And Cambden in his Remains, mentions a Prieſt, who carrying a Taper in his Hand upon the ſame Occaſion, had the Text; Let your Light ſo ſhine before Men, profanely apply'd to him. Now if Quality and Prieſts, were thus expos'd for their Crimes, and put upon theſe unacceptable Exerciſes, we can't conclude that publick Cenſure was ſo much diſus'd, as to make it a practice perfectly New to the Nation, as our learned Hiſtorian ſuppoſes it. As for the Power of binding and loſing, he ſays, 'twas thought by many to be only declarative. (f) If by declarative he means the Prieſts have no force in their Commiſſion to Abſolve a Penitent, and that the Abſolution pronounc'd by a Lay-man, is of the ſame Significancy; if this is the meaning, what Conſtruction can we make of our Saviours Words to the Apoſtles; As my Father hath ſent me, ſo ſend I you, whoſoever Sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them, and whoſeſoever Sins ye retain they are retain'd. (g) And can we imagine that Words ſo plain in the Expreſſion, and ſo ſolemn in the Occaſion, are void of Weight and Signification? Not to mention the Right they imply of admitting into the Church, and excluding from it; not to mention this, they muſt amount to this meaning at the loweſt, that thoſe who neglect this Ordinance of God, and refuſe to apply for Abſolution to Perſons thus Authoriz'd, ſhall not have their Sins forgiven them, tho' otherwiſe not unqualified. And thus to put a reſembling Caſe, a Malefactor can't have the Benefit of the Princes Pardon, unleſs it paſſes the Seals, and runs thro' the Forms of Law. 'Tis granted the Form was Antiently Deprecatory, both in the Latin and the Greek Churches, as appears by the Ordo Romanus, the Penitential of Egbert, and the Euchologion, (h) But all theſe Forms, ſuppoſe the Power of the Keys, and that Biſhops and Prieſts are particularly commiſſion'd for this purpoſe.

(b) My Eccleſ. Hiſt. p. 188.

Not reſtoring publick Pennance a miſfortune upon the Church.

(c) Bp. Burnet, pt. 2. p. 67.

This Diſcipline not altogether diſus'd before the Reformation.

(d) Eccleſ. Hiſt. p. 197.

Id. p. 646.

(e) Stow Annal. p. 449.

(f) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. p. 67.

The power of the Keys more than Declarative.

(g) St. Joh. v. 21. 23.

(h) Hittorpius. Morenus de Pænitent.

" Our learned Church Hiſtorian takes notice " that the formal Abſolution, given by the " Prieſt in his own Name, I Abſolve thee, was " a late Invention to raiſe their Authority " higher: But this Remark ſeems ſomewhat too ſevere, for the Forms of Abſolution, tho' never ſo Indicative and Abſolute, are always to be conſtrued in a deprecatory Senſe: Indeed the thing is pretty plain in it ſelf, for no Prieſt ever pretended to Abſolve in his own Name, and by virtue of an Independent Authority. No; the Power is ſuppos'd to be borrow'd, and the Office Exerciz'd by a delegated Juriſdiction. Had the Church of England been of this Gentleman's Opinion, that the Form, I Abſolve thee, had any thing of Intereſt and unwarrantable Deſign in it, ſhe would not have Preſcrib'd it in her Viſitation of the Sick.

Id lib. 8. cap. 22.

To proceed; Notwithſtanding the difference of Opinions, the New Communion Book was receiv'd over England, without any Oppoſition. " Thus Biſhop Burnet. (i) But Heylin Reports the matter ſomewhat differently: He acquaints us the Biſhops were not equally diſpos'd to a Compliance: That Gardiner of Wincheſter, Bonner of London, Voyeſie of Exeter, and Sampſon of Coventry and Lichfield, were more backward than the reſt: That many of the Parochial Clergy were no leſs diſenclin'd to the Order; that they endeavor'd to draw an Odium upon the Government, miſreported the King, and Alarm'd the People with the Apprehenſion of unpreſidented Impoſitions: And that no leſs than half a Crown would be exacted for every Marriage, Chriſtning, and Burial. To prevent ill Impreſſions of this kind, a Proclamation was Publiſh'd, that none ſhould be allow'd to Preach, but thoſe who were Licens'd under the Seals of the Lord Protector, or the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. (k)

(i) Part 2. p. 68.

Id.

April 24. An. Dom. 1548.

(k) Heylin's Hiſt. Ref. p. 59.

In the beginning of March laſt, the King's Commiſſioners were diſpatch'd into all the Counties, to take a Survey of all Colleges, free Chappels, Chauntry's, &c. within the compaſs of the late Statute. And now the free Chappel Royal of St. Stephen's Weſtminſter was diſincorporated. 'Twas founded for Thirty Eight Perſons, a Dean, Twelve Canons, Thirteen Vicars, &c. The Rents were then valued at a Thouſand Eighty Five Pounds, Ten Shillings and Five Pence per Annum. The Chappel was afterwards turn'd to a Houſe for the Commons in Parliament.

The Commiſſioners diſpatch'd to ſeize the Chauntry's for the King.

The College of St. Martin's Le Grand, near Alderſgate in London, fell at the ſame Time. 'Twas

(l) Stow's Survey of London.

'Twas founded in the Conquerors Reign for a Dean, and Secular Canons, (l) and had the Privilege of a Sanctuary. The preſent King granted the Liberties and Precincts of this Foundation to the Church of Weſtminſter. The Dean and Chapter, it ſeems, miſbehav'd themſelves under the King's Bounty: They pull'd down the Church, Sold the Materials, and Leaſ'd out the Ground for Five Mark's a Year to one Keble of London. The ſite is exempted from the Juriſdiction of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, and Govern'd by Officers Aſſign'd by the Chapter of Weſtminſter. (m)

(m) Id.

The Diſſolution of St. Stephen's Chappel, and St. Martin's Le-Grand.

(n) Hiſt. Ref. p. 60.

For this Sacrilege the Church of Weſtminſter, as Heylin reports, was quickly call'd to a ſevere Reck'ning. (n) The Lord Protector, thought there was no neceſſity of having Two Cathedrals ſo near one another as thoſe of London and Weſtminſter. He fancied the diſſolution of the latter, as being lately Founded, would be leaſt regretted. Now the Revenues and Buildings of Weſtminſter were vaſt and magnificent. The diſſolution gave a tempting Proſpect to the Protector. This Nobleman, it ſeems had a Project of Building a Palace with the Materials of the Abbey. Benſon the firſt Dean of the Church, being appriz'd of the Protectors Fancy, was glad to compound, to preſerve the Society. To this purpoſe, a Leaſe of Seventeen Mannors in the County of Glouceſter for Ninety Nine Years, was made to Thomas Lord Seymour, the Protectors Brother. And to ſecure their Intereſt farther, and Purchaſe Protection and good Humour, another Preſent of almoſt as many Mannors and Farms, was paſs'd in a Leaſe of the ſame Length, to Sir John Maſon, for the Protectors Uſe. Thus Benſon preſerv'd the Dean'ry, with ſome remains of Revenue. However, he was by no means pleas'd with his Conduct in the Expedient. He had in the laſt Reign been Inſtrumental in the ſurrender of the Abbey, and had now Impoveriſh'd the Foundation to a very remarkable Degree: Theſe Conſiderations ſate heavy upon his Spirits, and occaſion'd his Death ſoon after: He was ſucceeded by Dr. Cox, the King's Almoner, Dean of Chriſt Church in Oxford, and Chancellor of that Univerſity. Theſe Foundations of St. Martin, and St. Stephen, being richer, and ſomething more remarkable in their Story than the reſt, I thought it not improper to Inſiſt a little upon them.

The Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter alienate more than half of their Lands.

Id.

About this Time Complaints were brought to Court, of Biſhop Gardiners diſaffection to the King's Proceedings. That ſince his being diſcharg'd from the Fleet in January laſt, he had fail'd in his Promiſe of Compliance, and had ſhewn himſelf particularly troubleſome in the Caſe of Images. The Council were inform'd that he had Order'd all his Servants to be privately Arm'd: That he had ſpoken diſreſpectfully of the Preachers ſent down by the Protector and the reſt of the Board: That he had caution'd the People to avoid theſe New Divines, and adhere to the Doctrines formerly receiv'd. That being again ſent for by the Council, and charg'd with ſeveral Articles, he was diſmiſs'd a Second Time upon promiſe of Inoffenſive Behaviour. However, this was no full Diſcharge, for he was confin'd to his Houſe in London. And here he fell into another Relapſe, exceeded his Bounds, and tamper'd in publick Buſineſs without Authority. (o) And now receiving another Reprimand from the Protector and Council, he promiſ'd Compliance once more, and becauſe he underſtood he had been repreſented to diſadvantage, he offer'd to declare his Sentiment in the Pulpit, and purge himſelf upon the Points Objected. In ſhort, St. Peter's Day was Aſſign'd him to Preach before the King. The Protector ſuſpecting he might go too far in Controverſy, occaſion new Scruples, and unſettle the Audience, ſent his Secretary Cecil to him on the Twenty Seventh of June, and the Day after wrote to him himſelf. "In this Letter he acquaints him he had Order'd Cecil to let him know he was to forbear inſiſting on the controverted Points, relating to the Sacrament of the Altar and the Maſs. To this Wincheſter's Anſwer to Cecil, was, that he could by no means wave the mention of theſe Articles: That the Holy Euchariſt and the Maſs, were the principal Parts of the Chriſtian Religion: That theſe things have been already ſo publickly diſcours'd, the Biſhops Silence would be interpreted to Cowardice, and Indifferency: That he was reſolv'd to ſpeak the Truth, and Queſtion'd not giving the Protector Satisfaction. And that he could have wiſh'd his Grace would not have Interpos'd in matters of Religion: That the Conduct of this Affair was intruſted with the Biſhop's, and that in Caſe of Miſcarriage, the Blame ought to lie upon them.

Biſhop Gardiner's Affairs farther embroil'd.

(o) Fox vol. 2. p. 711.

The Protector preſcribes him the Heads of his Sermon.

The Protector being diſguſted with this Anſwer, Charges Wincheſter in the King's Name, not to Preach upon the Controverſy abovemention'd; but to ſpend his Diſcourſe upon the Articles Preſcrib'd; to preſs Obedience to the Government, and dilate upon the Motives, to Virtue and good Living. As for the Points of Controverſy, they were to be reſerv'd for a publick Conſultation. The Protector goes on, that his directing the Biſhop, pointing out his Subject, and limiting his Diſcourſe, is no more than he can Anſwer from his Character: That his intermedling with Buſineſs of Religion, and endeavoring to retrieve the People from Superſtition, is no ſmall part of his Office: That ſince he had the Concurrence of the Majority of Biſhops, and other learned Men, he ſhould not ſuffer Gardiner, and ſome few of his Sentiment, to diſturb the publick Harmony: And tho' he did not preſume to pronounce upon Points of Faith, yet when Truth was once diſcover'd and ſettled, he was reſolv'd to appear againſt thoſe who ſhould oppoſe it. (p)

He refuſes to comply, and is ſent to the Tower.

The Biſhop it ſeems, did not take the Protector for his Ordinary in theſe matters. He ventur'd to ſpeak of the Sacrament of the Altar before the King: This gave great diſguſt: He gave no better Satisfaction, in diſcourſing upon the Heads of Obedience and Government: Here, he is ſaid to have Miſbehav'd himſelf remarkably, and diſcover'd a very ſeditious Temper. (q) The Council therefore deſpairing of working upon his humour, and breaking his Reſolution, committed him to the Tower, and order'd the Doors of ſuch Rooms in his Houſe as they thought fit, ſhould be Seal'd up.

(p) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. Records p. 154. Ex MSS. Coll. C. C. Cant.

(q) Fox. p. 712.

His Apology.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter Endeavors to juſtify himſelf in the following Account. He reports that being diſcharg'd upon the Act of Pardon, he was requir'd to declare his Opinion on the Article of Juſtification in the Homilies: That having taken a Week's Time to conſider the Point, he told the Council his Conſcience would not give him leave to Subſcribe; upon which he was Confin'd to his Houſe. Afterwards

Cranmer T. Abp. of Cant.

Id. p. 726.
* To repreſent our Saviour's Burial.

wards he was ſent for to the Council, Charg'd with bearing Palms, creeping to the Croſs, having a Solemn Sepulchre * in the Church at Eaſter, and practiſing ſome other Ceremonies lately Aboliſh'd. To this he anſwer'd, their Lordſhips were Miſinform'd: That he had complied with the publick Direction, and made uſe of no other Ceremonies than what were allow'd by the King's Proclamation.

The manner of his Preaching upon the Holy Euchariſt was farther objected: And here he was blam'd for affirming the Body of Chriſt was really preſent; The word Really, being an Unſcriptural Term. To this he anſwer'd, that he did not think there was any Occaſion for that Term, and therefore forebore the Uſe of it: That he aſſerted the Preſence no farther than the Archbiſhop of Canterbury had done at Lambert's Tryal in the late Reign.

That he declar'd his Mind fully before the Council, upon the Duty of Obedience. Told the Board, he had Preach'd in his Dioceſe, that the Life of a Chriſtian obliges to a State of Suffering: That we are to reſign to God Almighty; and as to Civil Governors, we muſt either Execute their Will, or ſubmit to their Power. Upon this the Protector told him he muſt ſtay in Town. He was willing to ſatisfy the Pleaſure of the Council in this particular; but deſir'd the manner might be Free and Honourable, and that he might not be treated like a Malefactor: He complains that one Philpot of Weſtminſter had miſreported him, and that he had been ridicul'd and rail'd on, in Plays, Ballads, and Lampoons.

He relates, that Mr. Cecil came to him, from the Duke of Somerſet, and deſir'd him to write the Sermon he intended to Preach before the King. This he refuſ'd, becauſe 'twas out of Cuſtom, and look'd like an Offender.

And whereas he was Charg'd with giving an ill Example, he declares he had never done any thing againſt any Statute or Proclamation, nor denied any due Obedience to the King's Pleaſure, in any Inſtance whatſoever.

Upon his refuſing to Pen his Sermon, and deliver it upon Demand in Writing, Cecil put Two Papers into his Hand, containing the Heads he was to Diſcourſe on. 'Twas at his Choice either to dilate upon them in his own Words, or Preach them as they were Pen'd, for his own Compoſition. This the Biſhop thought a very harſh Appointment, and Inconſiſtent both with Conſcience and Honour. He was then brought privately to the Duke of Somerſet's Appartment, where he found no Body but his Grace and the Lord Wiltſhire. Here the Protector produc'd a Paper, in which ſeveral Lawyers had given their Opinion under their Hands, concerning the Extent of the Regal and Epiſcopal Authority, together with the Penalties of Diſobedience. The Biſhop anſwer'd, the Opinions of theſe Lawyers could not juſtify the Commanding him to deliver another Man's Diſcourſe for his own. That if he might ſpeak with thoſe Lawyers, he did not Queſtion their agreeing with him upon this Point. The Protector told him, he ſhould ſpeak with no Body, diſmiſs'd him with Threatning, to the Lord Great Maſter's Lodging, and gave him Time to conſider only 'till Dinner was over. In the Afternoon Secretary Smith was ſent to him: He told him he was not tied up preciſely to the Words of the Papers: And that treating upon the matter in general might give Satiſfaction. This way of managing his Sermon was likewiſe agreed to by the Duke of Somerſet. To this the Biſhop conſented as to the main.

Edw. VI. K.

Matth. 16. 16.

In ſhort, he took his Text out of the Goſpel for the Day, Thou art Chriſt, &c. And here he expreſs'd himſelf very fully upon the Abolition of the Pope's Supremacy: He commended the diſſolution of Monaſteries and Chauntry's, he approv'd the King's Proceedings: He thought Images might have been Inoffenſively uſed, and yet that the removing them was juſtifiable enough. He approv'd the receiving the Sacrament in both kinds by the Laity, and the taking away that great number of Maſſes Satisfactory: And was well pleas'd with the new Order for the Communion. But then he maintains the real Preſence in ſtrong Language, and that the very ſame Body and Blood was preſent in the Sacrament to feed us, that was given to redeem us. (q) But of the King's Authority when under Age, and of the Power of the Council during that Interval, he is ſaid to deliver nothing.

(q) Parker's Mſs. Ex. C. Ch. Coll. Cant. Fox. Vol. 2. p. 730.

To this the Biſhop Anſwers, and he Anſwers all along upon Oath, that Cecil ſeem'd much pleas'd with one ſaying of his; that is, the Biſhop had ſaid, the King was as much a King at one Year Old, as at an Hundred. If you touch upon this in your Sermon, ſays Cecil, it will be well taken. The Biſhop told him every Body knew that, but made him no Promiſe. Cecil put him farther in Mind, that when he ſpoke of a King, he muſt join the Concurrence of the Council. To this Wincheſter return'd no Anſwer, but ſtruck off to other Diſcourſe. His Reaſon for declining Compliance in this Point, was becauſe he did not find the Scripture had bound up the King to the Advice of his Council. Beſides, he had heard a report of ſome ſecret Matter, which gave him farther Diſcouragement: But as to Obedience due to the King in his Minority, he was always of the Affirmative ſide of the Queſtion: He pointed to the King in his Sermon, and ſaid, He was only to be Obey'd, with other Words to that Purpoſe. As to the Omiſſions objected againſt him, he Replies, that if there were any ſuch, they muſt either proceed from defect of Memory, or Deſign. That where the Caſe is doubtful, Charity ought to make the moſt favorable Conſtruction. And here he Appeals to God, that he intended to deliver himſelf with all the Perſpicuity Imaginable: That in ſuch Caſes, Ambiguities and Reſerve are not to be endur'd: That he had declar'd in his Sermon, that he agreed with every thing that was legally done, and had nothing to object againſt the Proceedings of Authority: And that 'twas only private and unauthoriz'd Innovation, which he did not underſtand. And laſtly, when he was charg'd with diſcourſing upon the Maſs and the Communion, he anſwers that when Mr. Cecil adviſ'd him from the Duke of Somerſet, not to enter upon that Controverſy, he told him he ſhould forbear diſcourſing upon the Modus of the Myſtery, or mentioning the Term Tranſubſtantiation; But of the very Preſence of Chriſt's moſt precious Body and Blood in the Sacrament, which was no diſputable Matter, he was reſolv'd to Preach; he thought himſelf likewiſe oblig'd to treat of the Maſs: That theſe were Articles of ſuch Importance, and ſo neceſſary for the King to know, that he would not forbear

Cranmer T. Abp. of Cant.

(r) Id. p. 729. 730.

bear diſcourſing upon them, tho' he was ſure to be Executed when he came down from the Pulpit. (r)

However all this was look'd on as a lame Defence, and Wincheſter was ſent to the Tower, as hath been already obſerv'd. His refuſing to ſet forth the Authority of the Council during the King's Minority, was that which diſguſted the Board moſt, and occaſion'd his Confinement. It ſeems 'twas the Opinion of ſome People that the Council could only Execute the Laws in Being: But that the making New Orders was not within their Privilege: And that the Supremacy was to Sleep 'till the King, in whoſe Perſon 'twas Lodg'd, was grown a Major, and capable of exerciſing the Function. The Council would have had Gardiner Combated this miſtake in the Pulpit, but he refuſ'd to be Explicite in the matter, and was therefore committed. However, he ſeems by Implication to have come up to the Demands of the Council: For by maintaining the King had all his Royalty in the Cradle, and that Obedience to him was the preſent Duty of the Subject; This by direct Conſequence was to Aſſert the Authority of the Council, becauſe all their Orders were Publiſh'd in his Majeſty's Name. Theſe things conſider'd, made Wincheſter's Committment look ſomewhat Severe, and be Cenſur'd as a ſtretch of Law.

Diſputes and Diverſity of Practice in the Ceremonies of the Church.

The rugged Uſage of this great Prelate, had not altogether the projected Effect: The Terror of the Example did not work every where: On the contrary, ſome were rather Animated by the Biſhops Reſolution to adhere to the former Uſages: Tho' it can't be ſaid they had Gardiner's Preſident for this Nonconformity. However, there was a great deal of Claſhing about the Ceremonies of the Church, and diſagreement of Practice in Adminiſtring the Sacrament. Some were full and exact in their Obedience to Authority, others Comply'd by halves: And ſome were ſo Obſtinate as to continue in their old Cuſtoms. In ſome Places they ran from the extreme of Superſtition to that of Profaneneſs: The Holy Euchariſt was mention'd with diſregard: The conſecrated Elements thrown out of the Church, together with many other Inſtances of Irreligious Outrage. (s)

(s) Regiſter Petworth. Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 63. A Catechiſm ſet forth by Cranmer. (t) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. p. 71. Memoir Cranmer, p. 159.

I ſhall now mention Archbiſhop Cranmer's Catechiſm, Intitled a ſhort Inſtruction to Chriſtian Religion, for the ſingular Profit of Children and Young People. Whether 'twas made this Year or the laſt, is not very Material. (t) There is another Queſtion about the Author: Biſhop Burnet Affirms it to be wholy Cranmer's Work. Mr. Stripe relates it a German Compoſition; that 'twas originally writ in high Dutch, turn'd into Latin by Juſtus Jonas Junior, and that 'twas only tranſlated into Engliſh by the Archbiſhop. But by ſome things which occur, 'tis very likely the Archbiſhop took the Liberty of throwing in ſome Supplemental Paſſages. For in the Title to the Preface, it is ſaid to be Overſeen and Corrected by the Archbiſhop. To give the Reader part of it. The Catechiſm declaims ſtrongly againſt Images, and argues againſt the Uſe from the Abuſe. Beſides the Two Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, that of reconciling Sinners to God, or Penance, is added as a Third. The Book is full in Acknowledging the Divine Inſtitution of Biſhops and Prieſts, and wiſhes the Canons for publick Diſcipline were reſtor'd. People are ſtrongly exhorted to private Confeſſion; the Reaſon is, becauſe their Spiritual Guides being Inform'd of the Penitents Condition, may be better directed in the Exerciſe of the Keys. To be ſomewhat particular: He Inſiſts upon the Authority of the Church: His Words are; We muſt ſeek Remiſſion of Sins in the Church of Chriſt, and deſire Abſolution. That when the true Church by their Miniſters, doth promiſe us Remiſſion of our Sins, and here in Earth doth Abſolve us, we may ſurely truſt that in Heaven alſo before God we be Abſolv'd and Pardon'd. * And elſewhere he ſpeaks thus: Wherefore when your Sins do make you afraid and Sad, then ſeek and deſire Abſolution and forgiveneſs of your Sins of the Miniſters, which have receiv'd a Commiſſion and Commandment from Chriſt himſelf, to forgive Men their Sins, and your Conſciences ſhall have Peace, Tranquillity, and Quietneſs.

Edw. VI. K.

* Fol. 141.

† And having prov'd the Prieſts Commiſſion, from the Twentieth of St. John's Goſpel, he makes no Scruple to infer, that whatſoever God's Miniſters do to us, by God's Commandment, are as much available as if God himſelf ſhould do the ſame. * And elſewhere upon the ſame Subject, he delivers himſelf thus: God has given the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and the Authority of forgiving Sin to the Miniſters of the Church. Wherefore let him that is a Sinner go to one of them, let him knowledge and confeſs his Sin, and pray him, that according to God's Commandment, he will give him Abſolution.——And when the Miniſter doth ſo, then I ought ſtedfaſtly to believe, that my Sins are truly forgiven me in Heaven. † And here the Archbiſhop deſerves Commendation, for preſſing the Revival of the Pœnitentiary Canons, and ſetting the Authority of the Hierarchy upon the right Foot; from whence it ſeems plain, he had recover'd himſelf from his Eraſtian Notions, as they are now call'd. But after all; might he not hold theſe Offices Divine in the Inſtitution; but Secular in the Conveyance? that the power of the Keys is from our Saviour, but the Exerciſe from the Civil Magiſtrate? 'Tis granted this is poſſible, but ſince the Archbiſhop does not dilute his Aſſertion in this manner, we ought to Interpret him to the faireſt Senſe; to let down his Words to ſo low a meaning as the Objection ſuppoſes, is to make him give up the Authority he appears to maintain. For upon this Principle what does the Divine Inſtitution of the Sacerdotal Function ſignify, if it lies wholly under the Control of the State? What ſignifies a Commiſſion, if a Man can't Act upon it without Leave from a Third Hand? What is a Man the better for having a Key, if he has no liberty to turn it; to Lock or Unlock, without a Foreign Permiſſion? Power without a Right to uſe it, looks like a Contradiction, and is at beſt but a Notional Advantage. 'Tis a precarious Privilege; And as to Practice, lies perfectly at the Pleaſure of another. For the purpoſe. If the Hierarchy can't execute their Divine Commiſſion without a Licence from the Civil Magiſtrate: Then the Magiſtrate may lay an Imbargo upon their Function; and ſtop the Exerciſe of their Character, as long as he thinks fit. Thus the Deſign of their Miſſion, and their Authority from our Saviour, may be wholly defeated, and turn to no Account. To proceed; Cranmer in his Dedication to the King complains of the neglect of Catechiſing: That Confirmation had formerly been Adminiſtred too ſoon: And that People ought to underſtand the Principles of Chriſtianity, before they are brought to the Biſhop to renew their Baptiſmal Vow. (u)

† Page 228.

* Fol. 229.

† Id. Fol. 228.

(u) Biſhop Burnet Ibid.

Cranmer T. Abp. of Cant.

Notwithſtanding theſe Proviſions, there was great Contrariety in Belief and Practice. Even ſome of the Licenſ'd Preachers did not Anſwer Expectation, but declaim'd againſt the King's Proceedings no leſs than the reſt. To remedy this Inconvenience the King and Council reſolv'd upon the drawing up a publick Liturgy. This Service Book when Confirm'd in Parliament, 'twas ſuppos'd would Effect a more general Compliance. For then the Pretences of defective Authority in a Privy Council, would be all out of Doors. To this purpoſe the Committee of Biſhops and Divines above-mention'd, were Order'd to attend the King on the firſt of September. When they appear'd, the King acquainted them with the general Scheme and Extent of their Buſineſs: And that he expected the Book ſhould comprehend an Order for Morning and Evening Prayer, together with a Form of Miniſtring the Sacraments and Sacramentals, and for the celebrating all other publick Offices. (w) The Biſhops, &c. who were well inclin'd to the undertaking, inſpected the Liturgick Books then uſed in England. The Statute Book mentions Four different Forms; That is the uſe of Sarum, of York, of Bangor, and of Lincoln, (x) beſides other diverſities in ſome Parts of the Service. All theſe Varieties were now to be laid aſide, and an uniform Office provided for the whole Kingdom.

Ann. Dom. 1548.

(w) Heylin. p. 64.

Orders for drawing up a Book for Divine Service.

(x) 2. & 3. Ed. 6. cap. 1.

The Uſe of ſtated Forms for Divine Service has been all along the Practice of the Univerſal Church. There are Liturgies which go under the Name of St. Peter, St. Matthew, and St. Mark: But as for that of St. Peter 'twas never heard off for the Firſt Fifteen Hundred Years. Beſides 'tis plainly patch'd up out of the Roman Miſſal, and the Liturgies of St. James, St. Baſil, and St. Chryſoſtom. (y) The Liturgy of St. Mathew ſaid to be uſed by the Ethiopians, is of a very obſcure and unprov'd Original. And that of St. Mark, ſaid to be compos'd for the Church of Alexandria, is rejected as a ſpurious Piece by Theodorus Balſamon, who liv'd in the Twelfth Century.

(y) Cardinal Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. cap. 8.

Remarks upon the Antient Liturgies.

The Liturgy of St. James Biſhop of Jeruſalem is much better atteſted. For the Greek Church has all along receiv'd it for Genuine: And beſides there are very Antient Copies of it. The General Council in Trullo cites it as an Authority to confute thoſe Hereticks who Conſecrated the Euchariſt only in Water. Manuel Malaxus in his Nomo canon (z) affirms 'twas uſed till St. Baſils Time. 'Tis mention'd by Proclus Biſhop of Conſtantinople, and by St. Cyril of Jeruſalem, who has tranſcrib'd a great deal of it in his Fifth Katecheſis Myſtagogica. However, there lie ſeveral Objections againſt it. Firſt, the Terms Homoouſion, and Theotokos are found in it: The Firſt of theſe Terms is ſaid to be unknown till the Nicene Council, and the Second not us'd till the Council of Epheſus. (a) But theſe are unſupported Aſſertions. For Athanaſius produces ſeveral Authors to prove that Homoouſios or Conſubſtantial, was us'd before the Council of Nice. The Famous Euſebius Cæſarienſis is of the ſame Opinion, as appears from the Teſtimony of Socrates, and Theodoret. (b) And that the Bleſſed Virgin was call'd Theotokos, or the Mother of God, before the Epheſine Council, is plain from the Authority of Evagrius, (c) who condemns Neſtorius for his Singularity, and affirms the Word Theotokos had been us'd by many of the Antients of the beſt Character. To this I ſhall add the Liturgy reckon'd to St. Clement, and extant in the Conſtitutiones Apoſtolicæ. Proclus, St. Chryſoſtom's Succeſſor in the See of Conſtantinople, will have it that Clemens Romanus had this Office dictated to him by the Apoſtles. Bellarmine Baronius and others, (d) think it genuine as to the firſt Form, but not without Addition by after Ages. That as the Apoſtles Creed was inlarg'd by the Fathers, to guard the Articles of Faith with a fuller Explanation, ſo, as the Circumſtance of Time requir'd, the Liturgies had ſupplemental Prayers and Ceremonies put to them. Other Learned Writers with more Probability will not allow the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions ſo great an Original. (e) Epiphanius gives this Book a high Character, tho' with ſome Abatement as to the Author. (f) He affirms tho' the Book is a ſuſpected Authority by ſome People, yet 'tis by no means to be cenſur'd or rejected: For it gives us a full view of the Antient Diſcipline; neither does it contain any thing that is Heterodox or Singular, or which carries a Repugnancy to the Belief or Practice of the Church. But then Petavius in his Notes obſerves, that the Conſtitutions cited by Epiphanius are different from thoſe Eight Books now extant. That the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions handed down to us, want ſome of the Paſſages cited by Epiphanius. Notwithſtanding this Objection of Petavius, the Learned Cardinal Bona is of Opinion they are the ſame with thoſe mention'd by that Father. The Cardinal grants notwithſtanding they may probably have been interpolated, either by the Negligence of Tranſcribers, or the foul Play of Hereticks. But as he continues who ever was the Author of theſe Conſtitutions, 'tis certain they are of greater Antiquity than the Council of Nice, and that they comprehend the Uſages and Diſcipline of the Eaſtern Church, prior to the Reign of Conſtantine the firſt Chriſtian Emperor. (g) And Peter de Marca gives the Author of theſe Conſtitutions the Age of the Third Century at the loweſt. (h)

(z) Cap. 220. St. James's Liturgy.

(a) Bona Ibid.

(b) Socrat. Lib. 1. Cap. 5. Theod. Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 1. Cap. 13.

(c) Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 1. Cap. 2.

Edw. VI. K.

The Liturgy ſuppos'd written by Clemens Romanus.

(d) Bellar. Lib. de Scrip. Eccleſ. Bar. Annal. 102.

(e) Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. Cap. 8.

(f) Epiphan. Hæreſ. 70. no. 10.

(g) Morinus de ſacris ordinat. pt. 2d. p. 20.

(h) Lib. 3. de Concord. Sacerd. & Imper. Cap. 2.

The next Miſſal I ſhall ſpeak to, is that of St. Baſil. 'Tis mention'd with Commendation by Proclus Biſhop of Conſtantinople, (i) by the General Council in Trullo, (k) and by a great many of the Greek Fathers. The Occaſion of compoſing it was this: That upon the Abatement of Devotion the People grew tir'd with the Length of St. James his Liturgy then uſed in that Church. To remedy this Inconvenience, and comply a little with the Infirmity of the Age, St. Baſil abſtracted St James his Liturgy, and threw it into a leſs Compaſs. The Learned Goar is of Opinion St. Baſil drew up Two Liturgies, and that the ſhorter of theſe Two was made for publick Uſe, receiv'd in the Church, and carried down to Poſterity. (l) This Miſſal of St. Baſil is ſtill read in the Greek Church in all the Sundays of Lent, excepting Palm Sunday. 'Tis likewiſe read there on Maundy Thurſday, on Eaſter Eve, and on the Eves of Chriſtmaſs and Epiphany, and on St. Baſils Anniverſary: The reſt of the Year the Greek Church makes Uſe of St. Chryſoſtom's Liturgy.

St. Baſils Liturgy.

(i) De Traditione Divinæ miſſæ.

(k) Can. 32.

(l) Euchelog. p. 185.

This Father, as Proclus obſerves, drew up another: His Reaſons were much the ſame with St. Baſils. To make ſome Allowance for the Declenſions of Chriſtianity; to relieve the Wearineſs of the People, and recommend the Church Service, He drew in the Office, and threw it into a new Form; and tranſcrib'd ſeveral Paſſages from St. Baſils Liturgy. And here the Reader may pleaſe to take notice, that theſe Liturgies of St. Baſil and St. Chryſoſtom are not convey'd

St. Chryſoſtome's Liturgy.

convey'd down without Interpolations. (m)

(m) Bona Ibid. Lib. 9.

The Roman Miſſal.

A Word or Two of the Roman Miſſal, may not be amiſs. Now by Miſſals and Liturgies is properly underſtood nothing more than the Communion Service. As to the Author of the Roman Miſſal Pope Innocent the Firſt attributes the Uſages of the Roman Church to Apoſtolical Tradition. (n) Walafridus Strabo affirms the Liturgies in the Apoſtles Times were much ſhorter than afterwards. (o)

(n) Id. Lib. 1. Cap. 6.

(o) Lib. de Reb. Eccleſ.

And here he gives ſome Inſtances that the Angelick Hymn was added by Teleſphorus, and the Introitus by Pope Celeſtin.

The Church of Milan has a Liturgy compos'd by St. Ambroſe. 'Tis different from the Roman in ſeveral Particulars, too long to remark. Neither is it now in the ſame Form in which St. Ambroſe left it. (p)

(p) Bona Ibid. Lib. 7. p. 46. & Lib. 10. p. 65.

The Mozarabick and Gallican Liturgies.

There is another Liturgy call'd the Mozarabick, formerly us'd in Spain: 'Tis call'd the Mozarabick by a wrong Pronunciation of mixt Arabick, becauſe when the Moors had conquer'd the greateſt Part of Spain, the Native Spaniards were mix'd and incorporated with them. This Liturgy is of conſiderable Antiquity. Who drew it up firſt is not certainly known: Cardinal Bona produces a Paſſage out of it, which runs it up to the Age of St. Martin Biſhop of Tours, who died in the Beginning of the Fifth Century. (q) Others believe it compos'd by Leander Biſhop of Sevil, or his Brother and Succeſſor Iſidore who liv'd in the Seventh Century. Cardinal Bona ſeems to believe, 'twas only drawn out to a farther Length by Leander and Iſidore, and that upon the Progreſs of Time it receiv'd more Additions from others. This Mozarabick Liturgy was generally us'd in Spain, and in Gallia Narbonenſis, till Gregory the Seventh's Time: This Pope wrote to Alphonſus and Sancho, Kings of Caſtille and Arragon, and to the Biſhops in their Dominions, to recommend the Roman Service. To this Purpoſe he tells them the Roman and Spaniſh Miſſals were the ſame at firſt: That the Priſcillian and Arian Hereſies, together with the Irruption of the Goths and Saracens, had occaſion'd the preſent Diverſity; in ſhort, he prevail'd for the introducing of the Roman Miſſal: However, the Famous Cardinal Ximenes has taken effectual Care to preſerve the Mozarabick Rites. He order'd the Miſſal to be fairly tranſcrib'd, and founded a College of Prieſts, who are bound by their Conſtitution to ſay the Mozarabick Service every Day in a Chappel belonging to the Cathedral at Toledo. The ſame Practice is continued in ſeveral Pariſhes in that City, and in a Chappel at Salamanca. (r)

(q) Id cap. 11.

(r) Id. p. 71.

The Gallican Liturgy is probably more Antient, than the Mozarabick: There is a Copy of it belonging to Chriſtina Queen of Sweden more than Nine Hundred Years Old, as appears by the Character: And another in the Vatican almoſt of the ſame Age. (s) The Learned Mabillon produce[illegible]ood Authority to prove that Muſæus a Prieſt [illegible] Marſeilles at the Inſtance of his Biſhop Veneri[illegible] drew up Leſſons and Antiphonæ, and that S[illegible]nius Biſhop of Auvergne, and the Famous St. [illegible]ary of Poictiers, had a Share in compoſing t[illegible] Liturgy. That the Gallican Service was dif[illegible]nt from the Roman, and much the ſame [illegible]th the Mozarabick, I have obſerv'd alread[illegible]) And this, were it farther neceſſary, [illegible] mig[illegible] prov'd more at large. (u)

(s) Id. Cap. 12. p. 85.

(t) Eccleſ. Hiſt. pt. 1.

(u) Mabillon de Liturg. Gallic. Lib. 1. Cap. 3. & cap. 6.

Thoſe who drew up the Engliſh Liturgy, had regard to Primitive Practice, and declin'd unneceſſary Innovation.

I hope this [illegible] Diſcourſe concerning Liturgies, is no [illegible]ſonable Digreſſion. Thus we ſee ſtated [illegible]poſitions for Divine Service has always been the Cuſtom of the Univerſal Church. The Apoſtles themſelves had a Prayer preſcrib'd them by our Saviour. Miraculous Effuſions did not wholly ſuperſede the Uſe of a Form: But when theſe extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt were recall'd, there was much more occaſion for ſettling the Parts of Divine Service, and bringing the publick Performance under a Rule. For this we have the concurrent Practice of the Church for the Firſt Fifteen Hundred Years.

We don't find the Committee of Engliſh Biſhops demurr'd upon this Subject: Or that the Queſtion was ever put, whether there ſhould be a Form or not? They never thought praying by a Book was flat and unaffecting, and no better than ſtinting the Spirit.

To leave all to the Liberty of the Prieſt, would have been not only a ſingular, but dangerous Expedient. To truſt to an extemporary Faculty in our ſolemn Addreſſes to God, looks like Negligence and Preſumption. What Uniformity can there be in the Church upon this Liberty? What Security is there againſt Irreverence and Indiſcretion? Againſt failing in Orthodoxy or Senſe? And how can the People joyn in the publick Devotion, when they have no Opportunity of knowing before-hand what it is? To reſolve to ſay Amen to ſudden Impulſe, and unpremeditated Expreſſion, is too implicite a Reſignation.

This Committee of Biſhops and Divines ſet down this, (as is very well obſerv'd) (w) for a General Rule, not to change any thing for the Sake of Novelty. In this Performance they reſolv'd to govern themſelves by the Word of God, and the Preſident of the Primitive Church. They conſider'd our Saviour himſelf form'd his Inſtitutions of Baptiſm and the Holy Euchariſt, upon a Reſemblance to the Jewiſh Rites. That this Conformity of Practice was ſo much the more remarkable, conſidering our Saviour was then founding a new Church, and introducing a Religion very different from the Moſaick Law. That the Engliſh Biſhops who had no Pretence to the Extent of our Saviours Authority, nor any Deſign to erect a new Church, were ſtill more oblig'd to work by the Plan of the Firſt Ages of Chriſtianity. Their Buſineſs was only to brighten what had been ruſted by Time, to diſcharge the Innovations of latter Ages, and bring Things up to the Primitive Standard. To this Purpoſe, 'twas very prudently agreed to make Uſe of none but Engliſh Help. When Calvin heard of the farther Advances of Reformation, he offer'd Cranmer his Aſſiſtance, but was happily refuſ'd by the Archbiſhop. 'Tis true he gave Martin Bucer, and Peter Martyr, Two Eminent Divines an Invitation to our Univerſities, but the Liturgy, as Heylin proves, was finiſh'd before their Arrival. (x)

(w) Biſhop Burnet. pt. 2*d. p.* 73.

(x) Heylin. Hiſt. Ref. p. 65.

The Old Service, as has been obſerv'd, was all in Latin, excepting the late Office for the Communion. This was juſtly look'd on as an indefenſible Practice, and therefore all the Offices were drawn up in Engliſh. That Divine Service was antiently perform'd in the Language of each Country is confeſs'd by the Famous Father Simon, in his critical Hiſtory of the New Teſtament. (y) And the Learned Dr. Lightfoot obſerves from the Rabbies that one or two of the publick ſynagogal Prayers were pen'd in the Mother Tongue, particularly that after Sermon, becauſe the Common People were then preſent: For this Reaſon this Prayer

(y) Pt. 2*d. p.* 3.

Divine Service in the Language of the Country, the Cuſtom of the antient Church

Prayer was compos'd in Chalde that all might underſtand it. (z) To this Father Simon agrees, and acknowledges thoſe Prayers which were made in Hebrew, were always interpreted to the People in the vulgar Language.

(z) Lightfoot Exerc. on 1 Cor. 14 p. 784.

Father Simon grants farther, that upon the Converſion of the Italians and other Roman Colonies to the Chriſtian Religion, (which was effected in the Apoſtles Time) was neceſſary to tranſlate the Bible into Latin, that the People might underſtand it: And that it was read in the vulgar Tongue at their Religious Aſſemblies. That the Aſſyrians, Ægyptians, Æthiopians, Perſians, Armenians; and in ſhort all other Nations that receiv'd the Goſpel, took the ſame Care for the Common Inſtruction. (a) And if they had the Scriptures in the vulgar Language at their Religious Aſſemblies, we may reaſonably conclude they were allow'd to underſtand the other Parts of the Service. That when the firſt Liturgies were compos'd, for the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches, 'tis well known that Greek was generally ſpoken in the one, and Latin in the other. And thus we find the Antient Liturgies pen'd in Greek in the Eaſtern, and in Latin in the Weſtern Churches. This very reaſonable Cuſtom continued amongſt other Nations afterwards converted. Thus as Cardinal Bona obſerves, the Muſcovites and Moravians have their Liturgick Books in the Sclavonian, that is the Language commonly ſpoken. To this Purpoſe he cites Johannes Faber Biſhop of Vienne, who affirms the Chriſtians in ſome Parts of Tartary, the Circaſſians, and in ſeveral Places of Pontus; the Chriſtians in Servia, Myſſia, Boſnia, Bulgaria, Volhinia, Podolia, &c. where the Sclavonian Tongue is ſpoken, have the Divine Service in that Language. The Cardinal goes on and relates that the Mengrelians, and Georgians, who live between the Caſpian and the Euxine, and adhere to the Greek Communion, officiate in the Language of the Country: And that the Europæan Albanians of the Greek Church who confine upon Dalmatia, have Divine Service in their Mother Tongue. The Copti and Armenians, to mention no more, officiate in the Language of their reſpective Country's. (b)

(a) F. Simon Ibid. p. 2.

(b) Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. cap. 9.

Notwithſtanding all this Authority, and the 14 Chapter of the firſt of the Corinthians, Father Simon endeavours to defend the Practice of his own Communion. And foreſeeing the Apoſtles Reaſoning in this Chapter, would preſs very cloſe, he attempts to prove St. Paul does not forbid the uſe of foreign Languages in the Church, but only preſcribes a Rule, for the due Management of them. (c)

Father Simon conſider'd upon this Argument.

Father Simon Ibid. p. 11. & 14.

In Anſwer to this I ſhall briefly endeavour as I go along, to prove Three Things.

Firſt, That St. Paul ſhews a General Diſlike of a ſtrange Language in the Church.

Secondly, That there were particular Reaſons for the Permiſſion of foreign Languages in the Apoſtles Times, which do not reach the latter Ages of Chriſtianity. Thirdly, that Father Simons Explication of the Apoſtles Senſe, tho allow'd, is not ſufficient to juſtifie his own Communion.

Firſt, St. Paul ſhews a General Diſlike of a ſtrange Language in the Church, and appeals as it were to common Senſe againſt it. To cite all the Places to this purpoſe, would be to tranſcribe the greateſt Part of this Fourteenth Chapter. I ſhall only mention ſome of them. In the Second and Fifth Verſes, the Apoſtle tells us, that he that ſpeaks in an unkown Tongue, ſpeaks not to Men but to God, that he edifies (only) himſelf, i. e. the Church receives no Advantage by ſuch Practice. And v. 9. He adds, except ye utter by the Tongue Things eaſie to be underſtood, ye ſhall ſpeak into the Air; and v. 11. If I know not the Meaning of the Voice, I ſhall be unto him that ſpeaks a Barbarian, and he that ſpeaks will be a Barbarian unto me; ſo that in the Apoſtles Senſe we do but throw away our Words, talk to no Purpoſe, and loſe the Benefit of Speech, when we don't expreſs our Thoughts in intelligible Language. And if this be abſurd and improper in common Converſation, it muſt be much more ſo in Religious Aſſemblies, where if any where, the Uſe of Speech ought to be rational and inſtructive.

Farther, v. 18, 19. He continues that he ſpoke with Tongues more than all of them, and yet profeſſeth, that he had rather ſpeak Five Words which were generally underſtood, than Ten Thouſand in an unknown Tongue: And tho' the Church of Rome ſeems to think otherwiſe, yet the Reaſon of the Apoſtles Judgment is very obvious: For how can the Underſtanding be inform'd, the Affections warm'd and excited, and Attention kept up, when a Man is unacquainted with his Devotions, and for ought he knows the Prieſt may be ſaying ſome odd Thing inſtead of a Prayer?

Secondly, there were particular Reaſons for the Permiſſion of foreign Languages in the Apoſtles Times, which don't reach the latter Ages of Chriſtianity. That the Gift of Tongues was one of the miraculous Effuſions of the Holy Ghoſt is beyond Diſpute: And being an Argument of a Divine Preſence, it was proper to make Uſe of them ſometimes in the Church to conciliate a greater Regard to what they deliver'd in their Interpretations: And eſpecially to convince the Jews and Gentiles, that their Miſſion and Doctrine was from Heaven. Accordingly we may obſerve, that the Apoſtles ſpeaking in Variety of unſtudied Languages, had a mighty Influence upon thoſe who heard them; and without doubt made St. Peters Sermon more operative upon their Minds: And therefore St. Paul affirms, That Tongues are a Sign not to them that believe, but to them that believe not. But thoſe who neither converſe with Infidels, nor pretend to Inſpiration, have none of theſe Apoſtolical Reaſons to juſtifie their Uſe of an unknown Language. For to hear a Man ſay his Prayers in Latin, when all the Congregation knows his Skill is the Effect of Study and Education, will raiſe the Character of his Sanctity very little, and is a Sign of nothing more than that for ſome Reaſons he has no Mind to be underſtood.

Acts 2.

Verſe 22.

Thirdly, Admitting Pere Simons Explication to be orthodox and full, this is not ſufficient to juſtifie his own Communion. He tells us, St. Paul did not blame the Corinthians for ſpeaking or praying in a ſtrange Language; but becauſe they did not tranſlate their Senſe ſo as to make themſelves intelligible to the Congregation. And by way of Paraphraſe upon v. 17. (Thou giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edified) He affirms that the Apoſtle urges the Obſervation of the Cuſtom among the Jews, i. e. not to read the Scripture or the Liturgy without the Aſſiſtance of an Interpreter. For otherwiſe he grants the Apoſtles Expoſtulation takes Place: How ſhall he that occupyeth the Room of the unlearned, ſay Amen, at thy giving of Thanks? Now theſe Conceſſions, as as has been already obſerv'd, condemn the Practice of his own Church. For tho' conſtruing of Prayers, when nothing miraculous is pretended, is but an odd ſort of an Imployment, yet this is more than is done in the Church of Rome. Indeed he is pleas'd to ſay, that according to the Deſign of this Fourteenth Chapter every thing which relates to the Inſtruction of the Congregation, is by the Roman Catholicks ſpoken in a Language underſtood by all. Now one would think by this Aſſertion, the whole Service was tranſlated Line by Line: But upon Examination we ſhall find, that nothing but their Sermons are deliver'd in the vulgar Tongue. So that it ſeems it is not material in our Authors Opinion, whether the People underſtand their Prayers or not: Tho' afterwards he grants they cannot ſay Amen, without being better inform'd. Cardinal Perron found himſelf very much embaraſſed with this difficulty, and endeavours to diſengage his Church by ſaying, that their Proſnes and Sermons, and Printed Diſcourſes were ſufficient to acquaint the People with the Meaning of their Devotions. But afterwards finding this Defence too weak, he does as good as give it up. And advances ſeveral Reaſons to prove the Expediency of promoting Ignorance and keeping the Scriptures and publick Prayers in a Language not vulgarly underſtood.

Page 13.

Page 12.

Replique ala Reſponſe du Roy &c. p. 953.

Id. page 956.

I ſhall now proceed to a more particular Account of the Liturgy, and point out ſome of the Differences between this Firſt, and the preſent Form.

A brief Account of the firſt Reform'd Liturgy.

To begin, the Morning Service has no Confeſſion, nor Abſolution: The Lord's Prayer ſtands firſt. After the Reſponſes which are the ſame with ours, Hallelujah was ſaid or ſung from Eaſter to Whitſuntide. Then follows the Invitatory, O come let us ſing unto the Lord, &c. The Pſalms are next which are appointed to be read thro' every Month, in the ſame Order as now. The Leſſons are generally the ſame, tho' ſome of them do not come up exactly on the ſame Day. After the Second Leſſon at Morning Prayer, only Zachary's Hymn Benedictus, is appointed. The Collects for Peace and Grace follows that for the Day: But thoſe for the King, the Royal Family, the Clergy and People, were ſince added. The Third Collect in Advent is different from ours, it ſtands thus.

Lord we beſeech thee give Ear to our Prayers, and by thy gracious Viſitation lighten the Darkneſs of our Hearts, by our Lord, &c.

On Chriſtmaſs Day there are Two Collects, Two Epiſtles, and Two Goſpels. The firſt Goſpel is taken out of the Firſt of St. John, beginning at the Nineteenth, and ending at the Twenty Ninth Verſe. The Collects upon Innocents Day, for the Fourth Sunday after Epiphany, and ſome others are different in Expreſſion, but to the ſame Senſe. When there is a Sixth Sunday after Epiphany, the ſame Pſalms, Collect, Epiſtle and Goſpel are to be us'd as on the Fifth. In the Morning at Eaſter before Matins our Firſt Anthem, Chriſt our Paſſover is ſacrific'd for us, &c. is wanting. But then after the Third Anthem, the Prieſt ſays, ſhew forth to all the Nations the Glory of God, to which the Reſponſe is, and among all People his wonderful Works. There are double Collects, Epiſtles, and Goſpels, for Eaſter Day. The Collect for St. Andrews Day runs thus.

Almighty God which has given ſuch Grace to thy Apoſtle St. Andrew, that he accounted the ſharp and painful Death of the Croſs to be an high Honour and a great Glory: Grant us to take and eſteem all Troubles and Adverſities which ſhall come unto us for thy Sake, as Things profitable for us, towards the obtaining of Everlaſting Life, thro' Jeſus, &c.

There is an Holy Day in this Book for St. Mary Magdalen. 'Twas kept on the Twenty Firſt of July. The Introite is the Hundred and Forty Sixth Pſalm: The Collect in theſe Words.

Merciful Father give us Grace that we never preſume to ſin thro' the Example of any Creature, but if it ſhall chance us at any Time to offend thy Divine Majeſty; that then we may truly repent, and lament the ſame after the Example of Mary Magdalen, and by lively Faith obtain Remiſſion of all our Sins, thro' the only Merits of thy Son our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. The Epiſtle is taken out of the Thirty Firſt of Proverbs, beginning at the Tenth Verſe, and taking in the reſt of the Chapter. The Goſpel is taken out of the Seventh of St. Luke, it begins at the Thirty Sixth Verſe and ends with the Chapter.

The Goſpel for the Firſt Sunday after Chriſtmaſs begins St. Matthew the Firſt, v. 1. and holds on to the length of ours. The Goſpel for the Sunday before Eaſter, is St. Matthew 26. v. 1. Whereas ours begins Matthew 27. v. 1. The Goſpel for Tueſday before Eaſter, begins with Mark 15. and goes thro', but ours ends at verſe 40. The Goſpel for Thurſday before Eaſter begins with Luke 23. v. 1. and takes in the whole Chapter, whereas ours breaks off at v. 50. The Goſpel for Good Friday is the 18 and 19 Chapters of St. John. The Goſpel for Whitſunday begins at St. John 14. verſe 15. and breaks off at verſe 22. Ours is longer, and goes to the End. On the Purification of the Bleſſed Virgin, the Epiſtle is the ſame with that of the foregoing Sunday: Ours has one proper for the Day. The Goſpel begins with ours, Luke 2. v. 22. and ends in the middle of v. 27. But ours continues to verſe 41.

The Introites

In this Reform'd Liturgy, the Communion Service for every Sunday and Holy Day begins with an Introite, that is a Pſalm which is ſaid or ſung by the Choir, whilſt the Prieſt goes up to the Altar. 'Tis a whole Pſalm, and every Sunday and Holy Day hath a different one ſuited to Time and Occaſion: It concludes with the Doxology. The Collect for the Day follows the Introite. On Chriſtmaſs and Eaſter Sundays there are two Introites, the Second comes after the firſt Goſpel.

The Office for the Communion follows next: And becauſe the Book is very ſcarce, and the Service well worth the Readers Peruſal, I ſhall tranſcribe it at length in the Records. (d) I grant it may be met with by Parts in an Author not altogether ſo hard to come at. (e) But this Gentleman's Deſign was to compare it with the Second Liturgy and other Alterations, and make Annotations all along upon the Progreſs of the Parallel: Thus by the Scheme of his Undertaking he thought himſelf oblig'd to take it in Pieces, and throw Parcels of the Rubrick, of the latter Alterations, and his own Annotations between. For this Reaſon the View is broken, the Liturgy ſtands as it were diſſected, and by Conſequence muſt give the Reader much more Trouble to examine it. To this I may add, that beſides the Significancy of the matter, the Order in which the Prayers ſtand, is no unremarkable Circumſtance.

(d) See Records no. 59.

(e) Leſtranges Alliance of Divine Offices.

The Form of the Bread to be conſecrated.

By the Rubrick at the End of the Office 'tis order'd that the Bread prepar'd for the Communion ſhould be made after one Sort and Faſhion in all Churches of the Kingdom:

That is to ſay 'twas to be unleaven'd, and round as before, but without any Impreſſion, and ſomewhat larger and thicker than formerly, that it might be conveniently broken into ſeveral Pieces: And every Bread was to be divided into Two Pieces or more, according to the Diſcretion of the Miniſter, and ſo diſtributed.

Wafers conſecrated for the Holy Euchariſt not Antient.

The Learned Cardinal Bona obſerves from Ernulphus Biſhop of Rocheſter, who lived in the Eleventh Century, that the Apoſtles uſed to conſecrate the Bread commonly eaten, both as to Form and other Qualities. And afterwards for many Ages the leaſt Proportion for this purpoſe was as much as could be made of a handful of Meal. 'Twas made of the fineſt Flow'r, ſomewhat in the Form of a Crown. This was the Practice in the Time of Gregory the Great. So that even after unleaven'd Bread became the Uſage of the Latin Church, 'twas not made ſo ſmall as to be uncapable of being broken in Pieces in proportion to the Number of Communicants. But afterwards in the Eleventh Century the Cuſtom chang'd, and indiviſible Wafers were made, the Figure of them was that of a ſmall Coin or Penny, and like Princes Mony they had our Saviours Effigies with ſome Letters of his Name round the Circumference. This Figure of the Conſecrated Bread was declar'd againſt as an Innovation, as both Caſſander and Cardinal Bona relate.

* Caſſander Liturgica &c. page 66. Cardinal Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. cap. 23.

“ The Rubrick continues, that foraſmuch as the Paſtors and Curates within this Realm ſhall continually find at their Coſt and Charges in their Cures ſufficient Bread and Wine for the Holy Communion, it is therefore order'd that in Recompence of ſuch Coſt and Charges the Pariſhioners of every Pariſh ſhall offer every Sunday at the Time of the Offertory, the juſt Valour and Price of the Holy Loaf (with all ſuch Mony and Things which were wont to be offer'd with the ſame) to the Uſe of their Paſtors and Curates, and that in ſuch Order and Courſe as they were wont to pay the ſaid Holy Loaf. By the next Paragraph the Rubrick appoints that both in all Collegiate and Cathedral Churches, and likewiſe in all Pariſhes in the Country, that ſome of the People ſhould always communicate with the Prieſt, and therefore one at leaſt of every Family in the Pariſh. Who according to Cuſtom, as their Turn came up, were oblig'd to offer for defraying the Expence of the Communion, were bound to communicate, or if they provided ſome other Perſon to offer for them, the Perſon ſo deputed was to receive the Holy Euchariſt, and by this means, as the Rubrick continues, the Miniſter having always ſome one to communicate with him, may accordingly ſolemnize ſo High and Holy Myſteries with all the Suffrages and due Order appointed for the ſame, and the Prieſt on the Week Day ſhall forbear to celebrate the Communion, except he have ſome that will communicate with him.

The laſt Paragraph in the Rubrick ſtand thus. “ Altho' it be read in Antient Writers that the People many years paſt receiv'd at the Prieſts Hands the Sacrament of the Body of Chriſt in their own Hands, and no Commandment of Chriſt to the contrary: Yet foraſmuch as they many times convey'd the ſame ſecretly away, kept it with them, and diverſly abus'd it to Superſtition and Wickedneſs; leaſt any ſuch Thing hereafter ſhould be attempted, and that an Uniformity might be us'd throughout the whole Realm; it is thought convenient, the People commonly receive the Sacrament of Chriſt's Body in their Mouths at the Prieſts Hands. *

* Vid Sozom. Lib. 8. c. 5.

The Litany ſtands next to the Communion Office. 'Tis order'd to be ſung or ſaid upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, in the manner mention'd in the late Injunctions. 'Tis the ſame with our Litany, excepting one Clauſe, in which they pray to be deliver'd from the Tyranny of the Biſhop of Rome, and all his deteſtable Enormities.

To proceed to the Remainder of this Common Prayer Book. And here the Reader may pleaſe to remember, that I ſhall take notice of nothing, but what is either omitted or alter'd in our later Liturgies.

Publick Baptiſm.

In publick Baptiſm a Croſs was made on the Childs Forehead and Breaſt: The Devil was exorciz'd to go out, and enter no more into him. The Child (if not weak) was thrice dip'd, then anointed, and a Chriſome or white Coat put upon it. This Cuſtom of exorcizing Children, how ſingular ſoever it may look to ſome People now, was the Practice of the Antient Church. For this, the Teſtimony of St. Auſtin, to cite no more Authority is ſufficient Proof. Si Diabolus, ſays this Father, non dominatur Infantibus, quid reſpondebunt Pelagiani quod illi exorcizantur? (f)

That anointing the Perſon baptiz'd was likewiſe an Antient Cuſtom appears from Tertullian, (g) St. Cyprian, and the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions.

Private Baptiſm.

By the Rubrick before private Baptiſm, the Prieſt is injoin'd to warn the People that without great Cauſe and Neceſſity they baptiz'd not Children at Home in their Houſes.

This was no more than a neceſſary Caution. And here I can't forbear to mention Biſhop Burnets very ſeaſonable Reflection: He juſtly complains of the great Abuſe with Reſpect to this matter, that many think it a Piece of State to have Children baptiz'd in their Houſes, and ſo bring their Pride with them even into the moſt Sacred Performances. To which I ſhall add, that were it not for the Mercenarineſs, or Want of Reſolution in ſome of the Clergy, this ill Cuſtom might eaſily be broken. (h)

The Catechiſm.

The Catechiſm is the ſame with ours, as far as it reaches: I ſay as far as it reaches, for it ends with the Anſwer to the Queſtion, what deſireſt thou of God in this Prayer?

Anointing at Baptiſm and Confirmation.

In Confirmation, immediately before the Biſhop makes a Croſs upon the Forehead of the Perſon Confirm'd, he uſes this Prayer.

Sign them O Lord, and mark them to be thine for ever by the Virtue of thy Holy Croſs, and Paſſion: confirm and ſtrengthen them with the inward Unction of thy Holy Ghoſt mercifully to Everlaſting Life, Amen.

After the Croſs made on the Forehead theſe Words are ſpoken by the Biſhop. I ſign thee with the Sign of the Croſs, and lay my Hand upon thee in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, Amen.

This Unction was another Primitive Cuſtom, and in the firſt Ages of the Church us'd to follow Baptiſm, at a much nearer Diſtance than afterwards. (i)

In the Office of Matrimony the Ring and other Tokens of Spouſage, as Gold or Silver are deliver'd, and at the Prieſt's Bleſſing the Perſons married, the Sign of the Croſs is made. The Sign of the Croſs is likewiſe a very antient Uſage. Tertullian obſerves, that in his time it was a General Cuſtom for Chriſtians to make a Croſs on their Foreheads upon every the leaſt remarkable Occaſion. Ad omnem Aditum & Promotum &c. (k) Thus the Heathen Cæcilius in Minutius

(f) Auguſt. Epiſt. 105.

(g) Tertull. de Baptiſm. Cypr. Epiſt. ad Januar. Conſtitut. Apoſtol. lib. 3. cap. 15, 16, 17. & lib. 7. cap. 23.

(h) Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d. p.* 78.

(i) Tertull. de Baptiſm. Ambroſe de iis qui initiantur.

(k) Tertull. de Coron. Milit.

nutius Fœlix rallies the Chriſtians for worſhipping the Croſs. This ſuppoſes the Uſe of it. But then as to the Charge Octavius denies the Fact, nec crucem colimus, nec optamus.

The Viſitation of the Sick.

To go on in the Viſitation of the Sick, when the Prieſt came into the Sick Perſons Room he was to ſay the Hundred and Forty Third Pſalm. The Form of Abſolution in this Office was to be uſed in all private Confeſſions. At the Communion of the Sick there is no neceſſity by the Rubrick of any Communicants to receive with the Prieſt and Patient. However, the Sick Perſon was exhorted to deſire ſome of his Family or Neighbours to Communicate with him.

If the Sick Perſon deſired to be Anointed, the Prieſt did it upon the Forehead or Breaſt only, making the Sign of the Croſs with this Prayer.

Anointing the Sick Perſon.

“ As with this viſible Oyl thy Body outwardly is anointed: So our Heavenly Father, Almighty God, grant of his Infinite Goodneſs, that thy Soul inwardly may be anointed with the Holy Ghoſt, who is the Spirit of all Strength, Comfort, Relief, and Gladneſs. And vouchſafe for his great Mercy (if it be his Bleſſed Will) to reſtore unto thee thy Bodily Health, and Strength to ſerve him, and ſend thee Releaſe of all thy Pains, Troubles, and Diſeaſes, both in Body and Mind. And howſoever his Goodneſs (by his Divine and unſearcheable Providence) ſhall diſpoſe of thee, we his unworthy Miniſters and Servants, humbly beſeech the Eternal Majeſty, to do with thee, according to the multitude of his innumerable Mercies, and to pardon thee all thy Sins, and Offences, committed by all thy Bodily Senſes, Paſſions, and Carnal Affections, who alſo vouchſafe mercifully to grant unto thee Ghoſtly Strength, by his Holy Spirit, to withſtand and overcome all Temptations and Aſſaults of thine Adverſary, that in no wiſe he prevail againſt thee, but that thou mayſt have perfect Victory and Triumph againſt the Devil, Sin, and Death thro' Chriſt our Lord; who by his Death hath overcomed the Prince of Death, and with the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, evermore liveth and reigneth God, World without End, Amen.

Anointing the Sick with Oyl in Order to his Recovery was another Antient Cuſtom, and for this, to mention nothing farther, we have the Authority of St. Chryſoſtom, who cites the Fifth of St. James, v. 14. for this purpoſe.*

The Burial of the Dead.

In the Office for Burial of the Dead, when the Prieſt throws Earth upon the Corps, he ſays, I commend thy Soul to God the Father Almighty, and thy Body to the Ground, &c.

And the next Pray'r begins thus. We commend into thy Hands of Mercy (moſt Merciful Father) the Soul of this our Brother departed —— that when the Judgment ſhall come which thou haſt committed to thy well beloved Son, both this our Brother, and we may be found acceptable in thy ſight, and we may receive that Bleſſing, &c.

“ The next Prayer ſtands thus.

“ Almighty God, we give thee Hearty Thanks for this thy Servant, whom thou haſt deliver'd from the Miſeries of this wretched World, from the Body of Death, and all Temptation. And as we truſt, haſt brought his Soul, which he committed into thy Holy Hands, into ſure Conſolation and Reſt. Grant we beſeech thee, that at the Day of Judgment, his Soul and all the Souls of thy Elect, departed out of this Life, may with us and we with them fully receive thy Promiſes, and be made perfect altogether, through the Glorious Reſurrection of thy Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

After the Second Leſſon, Lord have Mercy upon us, &c. and the Lord's Prayer, the Prieſt ſays.

Enter not (O Lord) into Judgment with thy Servant.

Anſwer.

For in thy Sight no Living Creature ſhall be juſtified.

Prieſt.

From the Gates of Hell.

Anſwer.

Deliver their Souls, O Lord.

Prieſt.

I believe to ſee the Goodneſs of the Lord.

Anſwer.

In the Land of the Living.

Prieſt.

O Lord graciouſly hear my Prayer.

Anſwer.

And let my Cry come unto thee.

Then follows this Prayer.

“ O Lord, with whom do live the Spirits of them that be Dead, and in whom the Souls of them that be elected after they be delivered from the Burthen of the Fleſh, be in Joy and Felicity: Grant unto this thy Servant, that the Sins which he committed in this World, be not imputed unto him, but that he, eſcaping the Gates of Hell, and Pains of Eternal Darkneſs, may ever dwell in the Region of Light, with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the Place where is no Weeping, Sorrow, nor Heavineſs, and when that Dreadful Day of the Reſurrection ſhall come, make him to riſe alſo with the Juſt and Righteous, and receive this Body again to Glory, then made pure and incorruptible: Set him on the Right Hand of thy Son Jeſus Chriſt, among thy Holy and Elect, that then he may hear with them theſe moſt ſweet and comfortable Words: Come to me ye Bleſſed of my Father, poſſeſs the Kingdom which has been prepared for you, from the beginning of the World: Grant this, we beſeech thee, O Merciful Father, through Jeſus Chriſt our Mediatour and Redeemer, Amen.

Prayer for the Dead a General Cuſtom of the Primitive Church.

This recommending the Dead to the Mercy of God, is no Innovation of the Court of Rome, but a conſtant Uſage of the Primitive Church. To juſtifie this Reform'd Liturgy in this Point, I ſhall produce unexceptionable Authority. To begin with Tertullian. Oblationes pro defunctis, pro Natalitiis, annuo Die facimus, that is, they mention'd the Names of the Deceas'd on the Anniverſary of their Death in the Prayers of the Euchariſtick Sacrifice. And here this Father recounting the Uſe of the Croſs, the Ceremonies in Baptiſm, &c. He adds, Harum & aliarum hujuſmodi Diſciplinarum, ſi legem expoſtules Scripturarum, nullam invenies: Traditio tibi prætendetur Auctrix, Conſuetudo Confirmatrix, & Fides Obſervatrix. That is, If you demand a Text of Scripture for theſe Uſages, you will find none: The Practiſe ſtands upon a Bottom of Tradition, 'tis confirm'd,

---

* De Sacerdot. lib. 3.

confirm'd by Cuſtom, and one Generation follows it upon the Credit of that which went before. (l)

Authorities for this Point.

The Famous Biſhop and Martyr St. Cyprian acquaints us, that one Victor had made Geminius Fauſtinus a Prieſt, a Guardian in his Will. For this Reaſon St. Cyprian gives Order there ſhould be no Prayer made for him at the Solemnity of the Euchariſt.

(m) And here he lays down this for a Rule, that if any of the Faithful ſhould nominate a Clergyman in their laſt Will and Teſtament for any Guardianſhip or Civil Truſt, his Name ſhould not be mention'd at the Euchariſtick Sacrifice, nor any Recommendatory Prayer for his Repoſe, put up for him at God's Altar. His Words are theſe, non offeretur pro eo, nec Sacrificium pro Dormitione ejus celebraretur, neque enim apud Altare Dei meretur nominari in Sacerdotum Prece, qui ab Altari, Sacerdotes & Miniſtros voluit avocari.

The Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, an Authority of the Third Century, as hath been obſerv'd, ſhall appear next. Amongſt theſe Conſtitutions this Prayer occurrs.

Let us pray for our Brethren departed in the Faith of Chriſt. That the moſt Merciful God who has receiv'd the Spirits of the Deceas'd, would forgive all their voluntary and involuntary Failings, and that being reſtor'd to the Divine Favour they may have a Place aſſign'd them in the Region of the Bleſſed, in the Boſom of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the Company of thoſe where Pain and Sorrow and Diſſatisfaction have no Place, &c.

(n) In the next Chapter, there is an Order for ſolemnizing the Funeral of the Dead with Divine Service; Pſalms, Prayers, and Leſſons, being appointed for this purpoſe. The Anniverſary of the Deceas'd is likewiſe order'd to be kept, but then all theſe Friendly Offices of the Church are only ſerviceable to thoſe who lived well, for as to wicked People if charitable Diſtributions were never ſo great on their Account, they would receive no Benefit by them. (o)

To proceed, St. Ambroſe in his Funeral Oration for the Emperor Valentinian ſpeaking of this Prince and his Brother Gratian * has theſe Words. Beati ambo, ſi quid meæ Orationes valebunt: Nulla Dies vos ſilentio præteribit: Nulla Inhonoratos vos mea tranſibit Oratio: Nulla Nox non donatos aliquâ Precum mearum Contextione tranſcurret: Omnibus Oblationibus vos frequentabo. That is, If my Prayers can prevail, neither of you ſhall be unhappy: No Day ſhall drop you out of my Memory: I ſhall be ſure to give you a Regard in every Addreſs to God Almighty: The Revolution of the Night ſhall not be more conſtant than my Devovotion upon your Account: And your Memory ſhall never be omitted in the Euchariſtick Oblation. (p)

And in another Funeral Oration upon the Death of his Brother Satyrus, he commends his Brothers Soul to God Almighty in theſe Words. Tibi nunc Omnipotens Deus, Innoxiam commendo Animam; tibi Hoſtiam meam offero, cape propitius ac ſerenus Fraternum munus, ſacrificium Sacerdotis.

St. Chryſoſtom deſcribing the Qualifications of a Prieſt, and to what degrees of Innocence and Virtue he ought to be furniſh'd, tells us amongſt other things, that by his Office he is a Mediator for the Univerſe: That he intercedes with the Almighty in behalf of all Mankind, and begs the Divine Favour not only for the Living, but the Dead. (q)

St. Auſtin in his Epiſtle de curâ pro mortuis gerendâ affirms, 'twas the Cuſtom of the univerſal Church to pray for the Dead, upon this Aſſertion he proceeds to reaſon in Defence of the Uſage. In the Maccabees, ſays he, we read of a Sacrifice offer'd for the dead. But if we had nothing of this kind to plead, the Cuſtom of all Chriſtendom is a conſiderable Authority; and thus to inſiſt on matter of Fact, we find the recommending the dead every where makes Part of the Prieſts Devotions at the Holy Altar. (r)

By the way, tho' we have good reaſon to reject the Maccabees from being any Part of the inſpired Writings, yet the Teſtimony of the Author as to matter of Fact, is unexceptionable enough.

To proceed, in the Liturgies of St. Chryſoſtom and St. Baſil, in the Old Gallican, and Mozarabick Miſſals, in the Ordo Romanus, and in almoſt all the reſt cited by Caſſander, we meet with Prayer for the Dead: The Form tho' ſomewhat ſhorter is much the ſame, with thoſe in the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions. (s) Theſe Authorities, tho' not ſo unqueſtionably antient as the preceding, are notwithſtanding ſeveral of them printed from Manuſcripts more than Nine Hundred Years Old.

The Inoffenſiveneſs of the Practice.

This Cuſtom neither ſuppoſes the Modern Purgatory, nor gives any Encouragement to Libertiniſm and Vice: Not to the latter, for St. Auſtin with the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions affirms, that unleſs a Man dies qualified, that is, unleſs he has liv'd tolerably well, he can't receive any Aſſiſtance from the Prayers of the Living. (t) That the Antient Church believ'd the recommending the Dead a ſerviceable Office we need not queſtion; otherwiſe, to what purpoſe was it ſo generally practis'd? The Cuſtom ſeems to have gone upon this Principle, that ſupreme Happineſs is not to be expected till the Reſurrection: And that the Interval between Death and the End of the World, is a State of imperfect Bliſs. The Church might therefore believe her Prayers for good People departed, might improve their Condition, and raiſe the Satisfactions of this Period.

'Tis probable likewiſe the Antients believ'd, that where a Man was Regular and Pious in the main, ſome leſſer Failings might not be accounted for; upon this Score, and that ſome of the Rigors of the laſt Judgment might be abated: And ſome Faults, for which they might otherwiſe ſuffer in the Conflagration, be paſs'd over: Upon theſe Grounds, I ſay, this Uſage ſeems to be founded.

Bucers Objections conſider'd.

Bucer's Objections againſt this Practice ſeems ſhort of Satisfaction. He urges this Text of St. John, he that hears my Word, and believes on him that ſent me, has everlaſting Life, and ſhall not come into Condemnation. (u) He likewiſe cites a Paſſage from the Romans, where 'tis ſaid whatſoever is not of Faith is Sin. (w) But neither of theſe Texts Affect the Primitive Practice. For firſt, the Antients ſuppoſe thoſe, whom they remembred in their Devotions, in a ſafe Condition, and that they were paſs'd from Death to Life, and were in no danger of coming into Condemnation. His other Text, That whatſoever is not of Faith is Sin, is no more ſerviceable than the former. However he argues from it thus, that nothing can be done in Faith, without an Expreſs Warrant from Scripture, or what ſtands upon a Concluſion evidently Inferr'd from ſome Inſpir'd Text; but Prayer for the Dead, ſtands upon neither of theſe Grounds, and therefore ought to be waved. (x)

But the Argument ſeems to proceed ſtronger the other way: For ſince Prayer for the Dead is no where Condemn'd in Scripture, the Authority

---

(l) Tertull. de Coron. Milit.

Non eſt quod pro dormitione ejus apud vos fiat Oblatio aut Deprecatio aliqua nomine ejus in Eccleſia frequentetur.

(m) Cyprian. Epiſt. 66. Edit. Pamel.

(n) Conſtit. Apoſtol. lib. 8. cap. 41.

(o) Ibid. cap. 42. 43.

* Gratian was then dead.

(p) Orat. Funeb. de Obit. Valentin. Imp. Edit. Eraſm.

(q) De Sacerdot. lib. 6.

(r) Univerſa pro Defunctis Eccleſia ſupplicare conſuevit, &c. Auguſt. de curâ pro mortuis gerend. Edit. Baſil.

(s) Goar Euchologion Hittorpius. Caſſander Liturgica. &c. Bona. Rer. Liturg. Mabillon de Liturg. Gallican. Thomaſius Codic. Sacrament.

(t) De Cura pro mort. gerend.

(u) John 5. v. 24.

(w) Rom. 14. v. 23.

(x) Bucer Scripta. Anglican. p. 467, 8.

thority of the Church appears a very good reaſon to remove Scruples, and ſettle the Perſwaſion of the Lawfulneſs of the thing; which is the meaning of that Place in St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Romans. To this purpoſe St. Auſtin tells us, quod univerſa tenet Eccleſia nec Conſiliis Inſtitutum, ſed ſemper retentum eſt, non niſi Authoritate Apoſtolicâ traditum, rectiſſimè creditur. (x) That is, whatever is held by the univerſal Church, and always obſerv'd without being ſettled by any Conciliary Decree, is rightly believ'd an Apoſtolical Tradition. And when we have Bucer, Luther, and Calvin of one ſide of the Queſtion, and St. Auſtin and the Univerſal Church on the other, 'tis no great difficulty to diſcover the caſting of the Ballance.

(x) De Baptiſm. contra Donatiſt. lib. 4. cap. 15.

There is another Text urg'd in Favour of Bucer's Opinion, Bleſſed are the Dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, ſaith the Spirit, that they may reſt from their Labours, and their Works do follow them. (y) But this Place amounts to no Cenſure, either of the Primitive Practice, or the Reform'd Common-Prayer-Book before us, for 'tis ſuppos'd both by the Antients, and the Office laſt mention'd, that the Dead are diſcharg'd from the Fatigues of this Life, that their Works follow them, and that they are happy as to the main; however it doth not follow from hence, but that their Condition may be Improv'd, and that they may be ſerv'd in ſome meaſure by the Aſſiſtance of the Living. And thus far I have Endeavor'd to Vindicate our firſt Reformers, in retaining the uſage of Praying for the Dead.

(y) Revel. 14. v. 13.

I have already obſerv'd, Prayer for the Dead, does not imply Purgatory, from whence it follows, that tho' the Church of England Condemns the Romiſh Doctrine of Purgatory, * we can't from thence infer her diſlike of Prayer for the Dead. Whether or no the Petition in the preſent Litany, Remember not Lord our Offences, nor the Offences of our Fore-Fathers, &c. does not reach the Deceas'd, is a Queſtion: There is likewiſe a Prayer in the Burial Office, which ſeems to ſound to this Senſe. Now where the Church of England has left her meaning doubtful, I humbly conceive the greateſt Honour we can do Her, is to interpret her to a Conformity to the Primitive Practice.

* Article 22.

If 'tis ſaid the Second Book of Homilies declares againſt Praying for the Dead: † That theſe Homilies are mention'd with Commendation, in the Thirty Fifth Article: The Church therefore by Implication, ſeems to Condemn Prayer for the Dead. To this it may be anſwer'd, † Homilies concerning Prayer pt. 3d.

Firſt, That this Homily is principally levell'd againſt the Doctrine of Purgatory, maintain'd in the Church of Rome. And to make the moſt of this Diſcourſe, the Arguments pretend to go no farther than the Inſignificancy of ſuch Applications; the Homily does no where aſſert them dangerous, or unlawful.

Secondly, The Church of England's Affirming the Homilies contain a Godly and Wholeſome Doctrine; * falls ſhort of vouching every Paſſage in this Collection. The Homilies may be a good Body of Inſtruction as to the main; without being every where exact in the Argument, and demonſtrative throughout the whole Book. And how happy this Homily concerning Prayer has been in repreſenting St. Cyprian, St. Chryſoſtom, and St. Auguſtine, upon this Subject, I ſhall leave the learned Reader to conſider.

* Article 35.

If 'tis objected on the other ſide; that ſince the Church of England has not thought fit to ſpeak out, but left her meaning queſtionable upon this Head; therefore 'tis moſt prudential to go over to the Church of Rome, where this Part of Primitive Practice is plainly continued. To this I Anſwer, Firſt, That ſince the Church of England has left Her meaning doubtful, does it not follow from hence, that Her Members may conſtrue Her to which ſide of the Queſtion they Pleaſe? Have they not the liberty upon this Ground, to remember their Deceas'd Friends in their Devotions, or not, as their Conſcience ſhall give them leave? Where the Point is undecided, what ſhould hinder them, from extending the Communion of Saints, to the State of Separation? And enlarging their Charity to the Church in the other World? There's no need therefore of deſerting upon this Score.

Secondly, We ſhould conſider the difficulty of the Terms, which will be required. That for Inſtance we muſt own a Supremacy, Jure Divino, and founded on Succeſſion from St. Peter, we muſt ſubmit to Communion only in one kind for the Laity; to Tranſubſtantiation and Adoration of the Hoſt; to Worſhip of Images, extending the Canon of Scripture, and taking in part of the Apocrypha; now theſe, to mention nothing farther, are ſhocking Conditions: Suppoſing the Church of England was chargeable with the Omiſſion of a Primitive Uſage, which is more than I affirm; granting this the Caſe, 'tis much more eligible to adhere to Her, than part with Her Communion upon ſo remarkable an Exchange.

To go on with the Common-Prayer-Book; At the Burial of the Dead, there is an Order for the Communion, I ſhall only mention what is particular to the Occaſion. Firſt, the Forty Second Pſalm is ſaid by way of Introite. The Collect is now uſed at Burials: It begins thus; O merciful God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Reſurrection and the Life, &c. The Epiſtle is taken out of the firſt of the Theſſalonians, Verſe the Thirteenth, and the Goſpel is the Sixth of St. John, beginning at the Thirty Seventh Verſe, and ending at the Fortieth.

Communion at Burials.

Receiving the Holy Euchariſt is not without Preſidents in the Primitive Church, as appears by the Forty Fourth Canon of the Council of Carthage. By the Canon 'tis Decreed, that the Sacrifice ſhould be Offer'd, that is the Holy Euchariſt receiv'd Faſting, excepting on Maundy Thurſday; that at all other Times of the Year, when Biſhops or any other Perſons were buried in the Afternoon, if the Perſons Officiating, had Eaten any thing that Day, the Deceas'd ſhould be recommended to the Mercy of God only by Prayer, that is, there ſhould be no Communion. (z)

(z) Bevereg. Pandec. Canon. Vol. 1. p. 567.

Upon this Canon the learned Biſhop Beverege, cites a Paſſage of St. Auſtin, to prove the Cuſtom of recommending the Dead to God Almighty upon ſuch Occaſions. (a) Part of it is to the ſame Senſe with the Teſtimony already alledg'd from this Father, only here St. Auſtin adds, that the Sacrifice of the Holy Euchariſt was Offer'd in their behalf, for a more effectual Interceſſion. (b)

(a) Auguſt. de Verb. Apoſt. Serm. 32.

(b) Pandec. Canon. Vol. 2. page 207.

This Office kept up in the Latin Tranſlation of Queen Elizabeths Common Prayer Book.

When Queen Elizabeth's Common-Prayer-Book was Tranſlated into Latin, in the Second Year of her Reign, this Order for a Communion, is put into that Burial Office; and that it was not done by Miſtake or Clandeſtine Practice, appears by her Majeſty's Proclamation: Peculiaria quædam in Chriſtianorum Funeribus & Exequiis

Decantanda adjungi præcipimus, Statuto de Ritu Publicarum Precum Anno primo Regni noſtri promulgato, in Contrarium non Obſtante; That is, ſome particular Obſervances at Funerals we have commanded to be uſed, the Act for Uniformity, ſet forth in the firſt Year of our Reign, notwithſtanding. Thus by the way, the Queen even in matters of Religion, makes no difficulty to over-rule the Legiſlature, and diſpence with an Act of Parliament. (c) And by this Proclamation we ſee the Two Univerſities, for whom this Tranſlation was chiefly intended, had the liberty of a Communion at Burials, if they thought fit.

(c) Leſtrange Alliance of divine Offices p. 303.

Diſtributions of Charity at Funerals. Id. page 304.

Farther, It may not be improper to obſerve, that diſtributions of Charity at Burials, was Cuſtomary thro' all Queen Elizabeth's Reign. The relief of the Poor, was antiently thought no unſerviceable Office to the Perſon Deceas'd; as the Reader may obſerve from the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions above cited. To this purpoſe we have another Teſtimony from St. Auſtin, quoted by the learned Beverege. Cum verò eorum Commendandorum cauſâ Opera Miſericordiæ celebrentur, quis eos dubitet ſuffragari, pro quibus Orationes deo non Inaniter allegantur. (d)

(d) Auguſt. de Verb. Apoſt. Serm. 32. Pandec. Canon. Vol. 2. page 207.

The Purification of Women ſtands next to the Burial Office. The Woman Church'd is to Offer her Chriſom, and other Cuſtomary Offerings.

Before I proceed farther, I ſhall briefly Obſerve that in the Communion Office of this firſt Reform'd Liturgy, the Conſecration Prayer invokes the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, the Words are theſe, And with thy Holy Spirit and Word, Vouchſafe to Bleſs and Sanctify theſe thy Gifts and Creatures of Bread and Wine, that they may be unto us the Body and Blood, &c.

The Invocation of the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt.

This Prayer for the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, upon the Conſecrated Elements, is another Antient Uſage: For the purpoſe, 'tis part of the Liturgies of St. Chryſoſtome, and St. Baſil: 'Tis in the Gallican Liturgy and the Ordo Romanus, and in moſt of the reſt mention'd by Caſſander. And to go higher in Antiquity, we find it in the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions. The Order in which the Words ſtand is very remarkable: For in the Conſecration Prayer, after the Prieſt has pronounc'd theſe Words, This is my Body which is broken for many, for the Remiſſion of Sins. —— This is my Blood which is ſhed for many, for the Remiſſion of Sins: After theſe Words, which the Church of Rome ſuppoſes, make ſuch a Myſterious Change in the Elements; After theſe Words at ſome diſtance, this Prayer follows. We beſeech thee that thou would'ſt favorably look upon theſe Gifts, and ſend thy Holy Spirit upon this Sacrifice, that this Bread may be made the Body of thy Chriſt, and this Cup the Blood of thy Chriſt, that thoſe who partake of it may be ſtrengthn'd for good Life, &c. Now this Invocation of the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, to make the Elements the Body and Blood of Chriſt, being ſpoken at ſome diſtance after the Words, Pronounc'd by our Saviour at the Inſtitution of this Holy Sacrament, 'tis plain the Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions did not believe the pronouncing the Words, This is my Body, and this is my Blood either Trans, or Conſubſtantiated the Bread and Wine: For if our Saviour had been Corporally preſent, either by changing the Elements into his Body and Blood, or united to them by Conſubſtantiation; If this Effect, I ſay, had follow'd, upon pronouncing theſe Words, this is my Body, &c. to what purpoſe ſhould the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, been afterwards Invok'd to make the Elements the Body and Blood of Chriſt? When according to the Modern Doctrine they were ſo already in the moſt full, and wonderful Senſe imaginable.

Conſtitut. Apoſtol. lib. 8. cap. 12.

This Prayer for invoking the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, for the purpoſe above-mention'd, ſtands much in the ſame Order in St. Chryſoſtome's, and St. Baſil's Liturgy, (e) that is, it follows the Words of Conſecration, This is my Body, &c.

(e) Goar. Euch†olog.

To make one Remark farther, the Prayer of Conſecration in this firſt Reform'd Liturgy, ſuppoſes the Holy Euchariſt a Sacrificial Oblation, as hath been ſufficiently proved in a late learned Tract. (f) The calling the Conſecrated Elements a Sacrifice, is altogether agreeable to the Language of the Primitive Church. To cite ſome few Authorities. Clemens Romanus in his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians ſpeaks thus; All thoſe Duties which our Lord has commanded us, ought to be perform'd in proper Time, Order and Manner, and thus our Oblations and Solemn Devotions ought to be Circumſtantiated: τὰς τε προσφορὰς ϗ λειτουργίας ἐπιτελεῖσθαι —— And a little after 'tis ſaid, thoſe who make their Oblations at the Time preſcrib'd by our Lord, are acceptable and happy: And at ſome diſtance he continues, We ſhould be Guilty of no ſmall Crime, if we ſhould throw thoſe out of their Epiſcopal Function, who offer the Gifts in a holy unexceptionable Manner. (g)

The Holy Euchariſt a Sacrifice.

(f) The Propitiatory Oblation in the Holy Euchariſt p. 93, 4.

(g) Concil. Vol. 1. page 148, 9. 152.

Irenæus, who Liv'd in the Second Century, is full to this purpoſe. (h) Our Lord, ſays he, reminding his Diſciples to Offer to God firſt Fruits, took Bread, and gave thanks, ſaying this is my Body: He alſo called the Cup his Blood, and ſo taught the New Oblation of the New Teſtament. This Inſtitution, the Church receiving from the Apoſtles, continues the ſame Offering every where; Then citing the Text of Malachi Chap. 1. v. 7. and 12. he infers, the Prophet has plainly ſignified, that the former People the Jews ſhall ceaſe to Offer, but notwithſtanding this, a Sacrifice ſhall be Offer'd to God in every Place. And a little forward (i) he ſpeaks thus; The Oblation of the Church, which the Lord hath commanded to be Offer'd in all Places of the World, is accepted by God as a pure Sacrifice. And afterwards in the ſame Chapter, that not all Sacrifices in general are rejected, for there were Oblations in the Old Teſtament, and there are now Oblations under the New, there were Sacrifices amongſt the Jews; and the Church has Sacrifices as part of the Service perform'd to God Almighty.

(h) Iren. lib. 4. cap. 32.

(i) Gap. 34.

To proceed; The Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, calls the Holy Euchariſt a Sacrifice in the Place above-mention'd, and to the ſame Senſe 'tis called an Oblation by the Nicene, Ancyrane, and Neocæſarean Councils: (k) To which we may add thoſe of Gangra and Laodicea. St. Chryſoſtome likewiſe calls it a Tremendous Sacrifice, (l) and St. Cyprian frequently ſpeaks the ſame Language, and in the Liturgies of St. Baſil, and St. Chryſoſtome in Conformity, to the manner of Expreſſion us'd by the Fathers, the Holy Euchariſt is call'd an Unbloody Sacrifice, which looks like ſtrong Evidence againſt the Doctrines of Trans, or Conſubſtantiation. (m) (k) Concil. Nicen. Can. 14. Concil. Ancyran. Can. 8. Concil. Neocæſar. Can. 13. Concil. Gang. Can. 4. Concil. Laodicen. Can. 19. Pandec. Canon.

(l) De Sacerdot. lib. 6.

(m) Goar Euch’olog.

To return; Thoſe Biſhops, &c. who drew up the firſt Reform'd Liturgy, thought fit to give an Account, why ſome Ceremonies were laid aſide, and ſome continued. And here they make a Diſtinction between the Ceremonies; ſome they Affirm were well form'd in the Inſtitution, tho' upon the Progreſs of Time miſapply'd to Superſtition. Others were no better than

Some Ceremonies ſet aſide, and ſome retain'd, and why?

Anno 1548.

than the Product of Indiſcreet Devotion, and Zeal without Knowledge: Theſe latter in regard they ſerv'd rather to make the Worſhip of God more unintelligible, and as it were overlaid Religion, were thought fit to be Diſcharg'd: Whereas the Ceremonies of the firſt ſort were retain'd, as a Guard and Ornament to Divine Service. The Compilers Charg'd the Contemptuous neglect of the Church Ceremonies, and breaking in upon the Order of Authority as a great Crime. That the Appointment of things of this kind, belong'd to the Governors of the Church: And that private Men ought not to preſume to draw Models, and make Appointments for this purpoſe. They take notice that ſome People are ſo much Govern'd by Whimſey and Self Conceit, that they are for recoyning every thing, and nothing will Pleaſe them but what is New: But, as they go on, to Condemn any thing, meerly on the Score of its being Old, is a great ſign of Folly. On the other Hand, the Circumſtantials of Religion ought rather to be valued for their Antiquity; And to prevent Miſapprehenſion, they give the People to underſtand, that the Ceremonies Unaboliſh'd were kept on only for Decency and better Edification, and not upon any Opinion of their being equal to God's Law: They had likewiſe ſelected ſuch, that were neither Dark nor unintelligible, but had Light and Perſpicuity enough to diſcover their meaning, to a common Capacity: For this reaſon they were not ſo liable to Abuſe, as others of a more myſterious Appearance: And laſtly, they pretend to preſcribe only to their own People, without any Imputation upon the different Practice of other Country's. And thus this Common-Prayer-Book was Finiſh'd, and ſtood prepar'd for the Civil Sanction at the next Seſſion of Parliament. (n)

Haddington beſieg'd.

And now a Word or Two concerning Occurrences in the State. And here I ſhall be very Brief, in regard theſe Reigns afford Matter enough in the Church to entertain the Reader. This Summer the Engliſh Garriſon of Haddington made frequent Excurſions, drove, and burnt the Neighboring Country, and grew very Troubleſome to the Scots. The Governor upon his receiving a Reinforcement of Six Thouſand Men from France, Levied Eight Thouſand Scots, and joining the Foreign Forces, Compos'd of French and Germans Form'd the Siege of Haddington. And here the Scotch Nobility debated the Point of tranſporting the Queen into France, and Marrying her to the Dauphin. They were divided upon the Queſtion. One Party ſuggeſted, that the taking ſuch Meaſures, was the way to bring them under the French Power, and entail a perpetual War with England upon the Scotch Nation. They thought therefore the Terms offer'd by the Engliſh were not to be rejected: That by this Propoſal, they ſhould have the Benefit of a Ten Years Truce, without being Embarraſs'd with any uneaſy Article during that Period: That in caſe either the King of England, or their Queen died within this Interval, they were perfectly at Liberty, and might manage as they thought fit: And whatever the Event might be as to this matter, they look'd on Time and Leiſure, as a Circumſtance of Advantage, and that precipitating Matters was moſt likely to make them miſcarry.

Anno Dom. 1548.

The Scottiſh Queen convey'd to France.

The other Party, to which the Earl of Arran, who was the Governor, Inclin'd, Oppos'd this Motion, and inſiſted ſtrongly upon conveying the Queen to France. This Sentiment prevail'd; to Execute the Reſolution, the French Fleet weighing Anchor at Leith, Sail'd round the Iſles of Orkny, as if they intended to return Home that way: And thus ſucceeding in their Enterpriſe, and ſtanding clear of the Engliſh Fleet, they put into the Port of Dunbritton, took the Queen on Board, and landed Her in Bretagne; from whence ſhe was Honorably convey'd to the French Court.

Aug. 20.

The Garriſon of Haddington being now hard preſs'd, a Reinforcement of Three Hundred Horſe, and a Thouſand Foot were ſent under the Command of Sir Robert Bows, and Sir Thomas Palmer: Godwin Mounts theſe Recruits to Two Thouſand. But whatever their Number was they miſcarried in the Attempt, fell into an Ambuſh, and were almoſt cut off to a Man. Notwithſtanding this Misfortune, the Beſieg'd did their Duty with great Reſolution, and defended the Town 'till the Earl of Shrewsbury appear'd with a Body of Sixteen Thouſand Men: And now the French quitted the Siege, and drew off in good Order; on the other Hand the Engliſh General, after he had ſupplied the Town with Ammunition and Proviſions, Countermarch'd to Berwick. (o)

The Engliſh not ſucceſsful in the War with Scotland.

The Enemy perceiving Haddington was not to be recover'd by Force, applied to Stratagem. To this purpoſe Deſſie the French General, imagining the Garriſon might think themſelves ſecure, upon the Score of the Siege being lately rais'd, made a Night March with ſome detach'd Regiments, and appearing before the Place at break of Day, ſurpriz'd an Outwork, Kill'd the Watch, and had entred the Town, had it not been for the diſcharge of a Cannon; which being Fir'd thro' the Gate, cut off ſeveral of his Men, diſheartn'd the reſt, and made 'em retire. This Cannon is ſaid to have been diſcharg'd by a French Deſſerter, who had reaſon to expect rough Treatment, if his Countrymen had ſucceeded. The Engliſh Garriſons of Hume, and Fas Caſtle, were not ſo Fortunate as that of Haddington.

At Hume the Enemy, who underſtood the Ground, Clim'd the Rock on the ſide oppoſite to the Caſtle: And thus Killing the Centinels, (who truſting to the ſtrength of the Place, were negligent in their Duty,) made themſelves Maſter of the Fort. As for Fas Caſtle it was loſt in this manner. The Governor Summon'd the Neighboring Peaſants to furniſh him with Corn by ſuch a Day. Upon this Occaſion the Enemy ſurpriz'd the Fort; the Scotch on pretence of ſupplying the Garriſon, ſent their Souldiers in the diſguiſe of Countrymen. Theſe Men throwing down their Burthens at the Gate, Kill'd the Centinels, and giving the Signal to a Reſerve near at Hand, carried the Place.

The Engliſh were likewiſe ſomewhat unfortunate in what was attempted by their Fleet.

The Lord Admiral Seymour commanded in the Expedition; he landed firſt at Fife at St. Minins, and afterwards in the Mernis at Montroſs, but at both Places he was forc'd to retire, and Re-embark his Men with conſiderable loſs.

In the beginning of Autumn, the Earl of Rutland March'd to Haddington, with Three Thouſand Germans, together with ſome Engliſh Forces levy'd in the North: This General found the keeping the Town Impracticable, without a conſiderable Army upon the ſpot:

For

(n) Common Prayer Book Fol. 156.

(o) Godwin Annal. Stow Annal.

For the Neighboring Country being waſted, there was a neceſſity of Forraging at a great diſtance, and by conſequence there muſt be a ſtrong Convoy to Guard what was gotten.

Octob. 1.

For this reaſon he raz'd the Fortifications, Burnt the Town, and brought off the Garriſon and Artillery to Berwick. This is reckn'd to the next Year by Buchanan, but Godwin Places it to October this Year.

An Act to make the Marriage of Prieſts lawful.

To return to England, the Parliament met on the 24th of November. This Seſſion had begun on the 15th in October, but the Plague being then in London, occaſion'd this farther Prorogation. The firſt Bill relating to the Church, was to make the Marrying of Prieſts Lawful: When 'twas brought into the Houſe of Lords, the Biſhops of London, Durham, Norwich, Carliſle, Hereford, Worceſter, Briſtol, Chicheſter, Landaff; and the Lords Morley, Dacres, Windſor, and Wharton, diſſented.

The Preamble ſets forth, that 'tis to be wiſh'd the Clergy would Live ſingle, that they might be more at leiſure to attend the Buſineſs of their Function; but ſince 'tis found by Experiment, that there are greater Inconveniences another way, and that they are left at liberty by God's Law; For theſe Reaſons 'tis Enacted that all Canons, Conſtitutions, &c. which prohibite the Marriage of the Clergy, ſhall be utterly void. And that no Spiritual Perſons ſhall be liable to any Puniſhment or Forfeiture, upon the Account of their Marriage. (p) In this Statute there is a Clauſe, that no Perſon ſhould have the liberty of Marrying without conforming to the Ceremonies and Orders, ſet forth in the Book of Common-Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, &c. From whence it appears the Bill concerning the Common-Prayer was paſs'd into a Statute, before that relating to the Marriage of Prieſts. (q)

This Act concerning the Marriage of the Clergy, went no farther than a Permiſſion.

To make the Proviſion entire, we ſhall meet with another Act in this Reign for legitimating their Children, but of that afterwards. That the Clergy had the liberty of Marriage, no leſs than the Laity; and that neither the Scriptures, nor the Primitive Church, put them under any particular Reſtraint, I have prov'd at large in the firſt part of this Work. (r)

Many of the Clergy privately Married before the Reformation.

However, for ſeveral Centuries before the Reformation, the Clergy were oblig'd to Cælibacy, and particularly thoſe in England, were under a Solemn Engagement. 'Tis therefore a miſtake to affirm, they were not by any Vow precluded from Marriage, (s) for by a Canon of the Council of Wincheſter held under Lanfrank, thoſe who were Ordain'd Prieſts, or Deacons, had a Form preſcrib'd them for renouncing Matrimony. (t)

As to the Charge of the Licentiouſneſs of the Prieſts, 'tis to be hop'd the Hiſtorian has ſet it too high. (t) The greateſt Blemiſh of this kind drawn upon the Clergy before the Reformation, was their entertaining Women under the Character of Concubines: For this Practice, they had a Licenſe from their Biſhop. This liberty had an unreputable Appearance, to Strangers eſpecially, and had the Engagement been no better than the Name, would have deſerv'd the hardeſt Cenſure. But theſe Women notwithſtanding they were ſomewhat caurſly diſtinguiſh'd, were for the moſt part their Wives, tho' the Canons which forbad the Clergy to Marry, would not allow them the Credit of being ſo call'd: The Biſhops who were well acquainted with their Conduct gave them Licenſes for this purpoſe, and by conſequence diſpens'd with their Vow. This, 'tis probable, they thought no great ſtretch of Authority, conſidering the Prohibition was only a Point of Eccleſiaſtick Diſcipline, and an Abridgment of latter Ages. That this was the Caſe of the Weſtern Church, we are inform'd by the learned Caſſander and others. (u) What reaſon then have we to think the Engliſh Clergy ſhould manage with leſs Senſe or Conſcience, than thoſe of their Order in other Country's? We ſhall have no reaſon to faſten this Imputation upon them, if we conſider that ſeveral Conſtitutions of our later Provincial Councils, are levell'd againſt the Clandeſtine Marriages of the Clergy. Theſe Conſtitutions were made out of Ceremony to the preſent Diſcipline, and to keep the Canons in Countenance, but were ſeldom or never put in Execution. To put this matter beyond doubt, Archbiſhop Parker, who has treated this Subject at large, (w) relates, that thoſe call'd Concubines to the Engliſh Clergy, were many of them lawfully Married. Thus, to uſe his own Words, There be no ſmall Arguments that ſome Biſhops, and the beſt of the Clergy living within the Memory of Man did continue; and elſewhere, divers of the Clergy Liv'd ſecretly with Wives, and provided for their Children under the Names of Nephews, and other Mens Children; in which manner Liv'd Bonifacius Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and other Biſhops of old Days, and ſome alſo of late Days, tho' all the World did not bark at the Matter.

All Perſons Prohibited Preaching.

To proceed; To Silence the Cavils, and make way for the better reception of the Common-Prayer, a Proclamation was iſſued out a little before the ſitting of the Parliament, to bar the uſe of the Pulpit throughout the Kingdom: And thus thoſe Preachers who were Licens'd before, had an Imbargo laid upon them. Part of the Proclamation runs thus.

> “His Majeſty does Inhibit as well the ſaid Preachers ſo before Licens'd, as all manner of Perſons whoſoever they be, to Preach in open Audience in the Pulpit, or otherwiſe, by any Sought Colour or Fraud, to the diſobeying of this Commandment, to the intent that the whole Clergy in this mean ſpace, might apply themſelves to Prayer to Almighty God, for the better atchieving of the ſame moſt godly Intent and Purpoſe, not doubting but that alſo his loving Subjects in the mean time, will Occupy themſelves to God's Honour, with due Prayer in the Church, and patient hearing of the godly Homilies, heretofore ſet forth by his Highneſs Injunctions unto them, and ſo endeavor themſelves, that they may be the more ready, with thankful Obedience to receive a moſt quiet, godly, and uniform Order, to be had throughout all his ſaid Realms and Dominions, &c. (x)

The Act for the Uniformity of Divine Service, &c. takes notice in the Preamble, “that beſides the diſtinct Offices of Sarum, York, Bangor, and Lincoln, there had lately been other different Forms of Common-Prayer uſed in Cathedral and Pariſh Churches, and that the Holy Communion, and other Sacraments of the Church, had likewiſe been adminiſtred with diverſity of Ceremonies. That the King and his Council had endeavor'd to put a ſtop to this ununiform manner, but without Succeſs. That therefore to provide a

---

(p) Statutes at large c. 21.

(q) Vid. Biſhop Burnet pt. 2. page 88.

(r) Eccleſ. Hiſt. p. 191.

(s) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. p. 92.

(t) Spelman's Concil. vol. 2. p. 11. See my Church Hiſt. p. 248.

(t) Bp. Burnet pt. 2. p. 89.

(u) Conſultat. 23.

(w) Defence of Prieſts Marriages Written by an anonymous Author, and Publiſh'd by Archbiſhop Parker, with ſome Inſertions of his own. p. 329. p. 334. Harmar p. 78.

(x) Fuller's Church Hiſt. Book 7. p. 388.

Cranmer T. Abp. of Cant.

An Act for an Uniformity of Pray'r and Adminiſtration of theSacraments.

“ more effectual Remedy, his Majeſty has appointed the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with ſeveral others of the moſt learned Biſhops and Divines, to draw up an Office for all the Parts of Divine Service : That in doing this, they were to have a regard to the direction of Holy Scripture, and the Uſages of the Primitive Church : That the Performance injoin'd the ſaid Biſhops and Divines, was now finiſh'd by the Aid of the Holy Ghoſt, and deliver'd to his Highneſs. It is therefore Enacted, &c. that no other Book of Divine Service ſhall be us'd in any Cathedral or Pariſh Church, or other Place within his Majeſty's Dominions. And if any Parſon, Vicar, or other Spiritual Perſon, ſhall refuſe to uſe this Common-Prayer-Book, or Officiate with any other Form or Ceremonies, or ſhall Preach or Speak any thing in Derogation of the ſaid Book, he was to Forfeit a Years Profit of one of his Preferments, and ſuffer Six Months Impriſonment for his firſt Offence. To ſuffer Impriſonment for a whole Year, and be depriv'd ipſo facto, of all his Spiritual Promotions for the Second ; And for the Third Offence, to be Impriſon'd during Life.

“ The Statute ſets forth farther ; That if after the Feaſt of Pentecoſt next coming, when the Act was to Inure ; If after this Period, the Common-Prayer-Book ſhould be Ridicul'd or Burleſqu'd in any Plays, Ballads, or Lampoons, or any Parſon, Vicar, or other Miniſter Menac'd, or otherwiſe prevail'd with, to Officiate in any manner different from the Rubrick or Form Preſcrib'd by the ſaid Book, that then every ſuch Offender ſhall Forfeit Ten Pounds for the firſt Time, Twenty for the Second, and all his Goods and Chattels for the Third, and ſuffer Impriſonment during Life. And here 'tis provided, that every Archbiſhop and Biſhop, may at their Pleaſure ſit upon the Bench, and joyn with the Judges in the Trial of ſuch Offences.

“ For the Incouragement of Learning, 'tis farther provided, that the Univerſities may uſe a Latin, Greek, or Hebrew Tranſlation of the ſaid Common-Prayer-Book, at Diſcretion, the Communion-Office only excepted.

A Proviſo for the Univerſities.

'Tis likewiſe provided, that all and ſingular Lords of the Parliament for the Third Offence abovemention'd, ſhall be Try'd by their Peers. Since therefore Biſhops, as Sir Edward Coke makes no Scruple to grant, are Lords of Parliament, (y) they are evidently by this Statute to be Try'd by their Peers.

(y) Coke Inſtit. pt. 1. Fol. 97.

The laſt Proviſo I ſhall mention, makes it Lawful for all Men, as well in Churches, Chappels, Oratories or other Places, to uſe openly any Pſalms, or Prayer taken out of the Bible at any due Time, not letting or omitting thereby the Service or any part thereof mention'd in the ſaid Book. (z)

(z) 2 and 3 Edw. 6. c. 1.

Another for the uſe of the Pſalms in Metre.

This Proviſo was thrown in as 'tis thought, to Countenance the Pſalms projected, to be turn'd into Verſe, and to allow the Uſe of them in Churches, for we are to obſerve, theſe Singing Pſalms, as they are call'd, were very much the Inclination of the Reform'd.

Singing of Pſalms and Hymns, we find recommended by the Apoſtles St. Paul, and St James, (a) and was Practis'd both privately, and at Church, in the earlieſt Ages of Chriſtianity. Thus Pliny in his Account he gives of the Chriſtians to the Emperor, Trajan relates, they us'd to meet early at the Day appointed, and Sing a Hymn to Chriſt. This Hymn he obſerves they Sung Secum Invicèm: The meaning of which Phraſe may be underſtood by the way of Pſalmody in St. Baſil's Time. This Father tells us, that 'twas every Week the common Cuſtom for the People to go to Church before Day ; where after having begun the Service with Confeſſion, they proceeded to Singing of Pſalms. And here the Congregation dividing into Two Parts, Sung by turns. (b) Sometimes one of them whoſe Office it was, ſet the Pſalm, as we call it, and the reſt Sung after him.

(a) Epheſ. 5. James 5.

Pſalmody a Primitive and General Cuſtom.

(b) Baſil. Epiſt. 63. ad Cler. Eccleſ. Neocæs.

Socrates will have it, that the famous St. Ignatius brought in the Alternate way of Singing. This Father, as the Hiſtorian reports, (c) had ſeen a Viſion of Angels Sing a Hymn to the Bleſſed Trinity, which was the reaſon of his recommending this Manner to his Church of Antioch.

(c) Socrat. lib. 6. c. 8.

And thus the Preſident of this celebrated Martyr, grew up to a general Uſage. Socrates obſerves farther, that St. Chryſoſtome introduc'd this way of Singing Pſalms by turns, into Conſtantinople: that he did it to Counterwork the Arrians, who endeavor'd to recommend their Hereſy by Compoſitions Sung in this manner.

The learned Valeſius in his Notes upon Socrates, ſeems to be at a loſs where this Hiſtorian had his Authority, with reſpect to Ignatius. For 'tis certain, ſays he, that Flavianus and Diodorus, who Liv'd in the Reign of Conſtantius, were the firſt who broke the Choir into Two Diviſions, for Singing the Pſalms by way of Antiphony, and that the Cuſtom beginning here, ſpread to all other Parts of Chriſtendom. (d)

(d) Theodoret. Hiſt. Lib. 2. c. 24.

Thus the Pſalms were Sung by turns, by all the People in the Church of Milan, when St. Ambroſe was Biſhop, as we may learn from this Fathers Expoſition upon the firſt Pſalm. (e)

(e) Mabillon diſquiſit. de curſu Gallican. p. 388.

Walafridus Strabo obſerves, that the famous Hilarie Biſhop of Poictiers, Compos'd ſeveral Hymns: That Pope Gelaſius did the ſame in Imitation of St. Ambroſe: And that Damaſus order'd the Pſalms ſhould be Sung in all Churches, and Monaſteries. (f)

(f) Hittorp. p. 687.

As to the Church of Milan, St. Auſtin relates, (g) that when the Empreſs Juſtina drew a Perſecution upon St. Ambroſe, becauſe ſhe could not make him bend to the Arrian Hereſy ; when this Storm happen'd, the People watch'd all Night in the Church, with a Reſolution to ſuffer Martyrdom with their Biſhop. Now to relieve their Spirits under this Fatigue, and take off the Impreſſion of the Calamity, St. Ambroſe order'd the Pſalms ſhould be Sung, according to the Cuſtom of the Eaſtern Churches, and that this Method continued, and prevail'd in moſt other Places.

(g) Confeſſion. l. 9. c. 7.

By a Canon made at a Synod under Gregory the Great, it appears the Singing of Pſalms in the Church of Rome was very Muſical and Affecting. And here 'tis hinted the Choir did not alway Live ſo well as they Sung. (h) St. Auſtin tho' he declares his Affections very much raiz'd by the fineſs of Church Muſick, and that they gave him a very rapturous and refin'd Pleaſure : (i) Yet in another Place he ſeems almoſt afraid to truſt his Paſſions with ſo moving a Satisfaction, and therefore ſeems to prefer the plainer Method of Singing pra-

(h) Mabillon Ibid. p. 387.

(i) Confeſſion. Lib. 9. c. 4. Confeſſion. Lib. 10. c. 33.

ctis'd by Athanaſius in the Church of Alexandria. This Biſhop order'd the Pſalms ſhould be Sung with a moderate bending of the Voice, and ſound ſomewhat near common ſpeaking. However, St. Auſtin ſeems to ſay this rather out of exceſs of Scruple then ſetled Judgment; for in the ſame Chapter he tells us, Church Muſick is deſign'd for an aſſiſtance to Human Infirmities: That it recommends the Exerciſe of Religion: That the ſweetneſs of the Notes takes hold of the Mind, and makes its way, where the bare repeating of the Words would ſcarcely enter: That Sounds have a great aſcendant over our Paſſions. And that when they are well temper'd, and ſuited to the occaſion, they have a ſerviceable Effect.

In Africk, and in all other Churches, excepting Spain, the Pſalms were Sung at the ſtated Hours, both for Day and Night: But in the Mozarabick Offices, eſpecially of later Times, there is no Pſalm in the Rubrick either for Vigil's or Veſper's. (k)

To return Home. At the beginning of the Reformation, David's Pſalms were turn'd into Verſe, but extremely to the diſadvantage of the Original. Hopkins and Sternhold were much better Men than Poets. Their Zeal made them over graſp their Buſineſs, and venture without Skill or Genius. However; the Taſt of that Age was not very nice, which made them paſs the better. But notwithſtanding this Allowance, the Management was thought defective in another Circumſtance; That is, ſince many of the Pſalms have a particular relation to David's Succeſſes, and allude to Cuſtoms and Parts of Hiſtory not commonly underſtood, ſince this is the Caſe: Some Criticks would have had theſe omitted; becauſe where the meaning was either dark, or the matter did not reach down to Chriſtianity, they could not be ſo ſerviceable to Devotion.

To conclude with this Statute; ſome Cenſur'd this Proviſion of a Common-Prayer, becauſe 'tis ſaid to have been Compos'd with one Uniform Agreement, and yet Four of the Biſhops who were in the Committee for drawing it, proteſted againſt the Bill. Theſe were the Biſhops of Norwich, Hereford, Chicheſter, and Weſtminſter. 'Tis true theſe Prelates were not ſatisfied with every particular of the Draught, but as to the main they agreed with the reſt; However, the few Exceptions they could not get over, made them diſſent from the whole.

An Act for the true Payment of Tythes.

The next Statute relating to the Church, is an Act for the true Payment of Tythes. The Preamble takes notice, that the Two Statutes made in the late Reign (l) for this purpoſe, were ſhort and defective. To ſupply theſe Omiſſions, 'tis Enacted, “that all manner of Predial Tythes ſhall be juſtly ſet out, as of right they have, and ought to have been Pay'd. And that no Perſon ſhall from henceforth carry away any ſuch or like Tythes, which have been Pay'd within the ſaid Term of Forty Years, before he has juſtly divided and ſet forth the Tythe, or otherwiſe agreed for the ſame Tythes with the Parſon, Vicar, or other Owner, Proprietor, or Farmer of the ſame Tythes, under the Pain of Forfeiture of treble value of the Tythes ſo taken and carried away.

'Tis alſo Enacted, that any Perſon to whom Predial Tythes are due, may lawfully, either by himſelf, or his Servant, view and ſee the ſaid Tythes truly ſet forth, and carry them off without Moleſtation.

'Tis farther Enacted, that all Perſons that have Beaſts, or any Cattle Tythable, Feeding in any Waſt or Common, where the Pariſh is not certainly known, ſhall pay their Tythes for the Increaſe of the ſaid Cattle, to the Parſon, Vicar, Proprietor, or Farmers of the Pariſh, where the Owners of the ſaid Cattle dwell.

And that all Barren Heaths, or Waſt Ground, (unleſs diſcharg'd for the Payment of Tythes by Act of Parliament) which ſhall be hereafter improved and turn'd into Arable Ground or Meadow, ſhall after the end of Seven Years, pay Tythe for the Corn and Hay, growing upon the ſame.

There is likewiſe a Clauſe for the Payment of Perſonal Tythes. And here 'tis Enacted that every Perſon exerciſing Merchandize, bargaining, and ſelling, cloathing, handicraft, or other Art and Faculty, being ſuch kind of Perſons, and in ſuch Places as heretofore, within theſe Forty Years, have accuſtomably uſed to pay ſuch Perſonal Tythes, or of right ought to pay, (other than ſuch as been common Day-Laborers) ſhall Yearly at, or before the Feaſt of Eaſter, pay for his Perſonal Tythes the Tenth part of his Gains, his Charges and Expences according to his Eſtate, Condition or Degree, to be therein abated, allow'd, or deducted.

Then follows a Proviſo, That Tythe Fiſh ſhall be pay'd as formerly; And likewiſe that the Act ſhall not Extend to London and Canterbury, or any other Town, that uſed to pay their Tythes by their Houſes.

As for the Remedy, The Perſons withdrawing their Tythes, were to be Sued in the King's Eccleſiaſtical Court, and the Proceſs Govern'd by the King's Eccleſiaſtical Laws, and in caſe the Party Condemn'd, does not Obey the Sentence, the Eccleſiaſtical Judge is impower'd to Excommunicate him, and after Forty Days, to Certify the Excommunication to the King, in his Court of Chancery.

And if any Party, after his being caſt in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, ſhall ſue for a Prohibition, and the Suggeſtion proves falſe by Two Witneſſes, that then the Party againſt whom the Prohibition is brought, ſhall within Six Months, after the granting the Prohibition, have a Conſultation awarded by the King's Judges, and recover double Coſts and Damages to be aſſeſs'd by the Court, where the Conſultation was granted, for recovery of which Coſts and Damages, the Party to whom they ſhall be awarded, may have an Action of Debt, by Bill, Plaint, or Information, in any of the King's Courts of Record. (m)

A Dark and Ambiguous Clauſe.

As to Predial Tythes, the Bill ſeems drawn in Terms ſufficiently Plain and Deciſive: But the Clauſe for thoſe which are Perſonal, looks dark and embarras'd. The deducting the Expences according to the Eſtate, Condition, and Degree, of the Party, lies open to cavil and exception.

Thus by the Ambiguity of the Terms, and the declenſion of the Spiritual Courts, this laſt Clauſe prov'd little Beneficial. Thus, the Clergy in Market Towns, where there are no Predial Tythes, have oftentimes but a precarious Subſiſtence. And thus they lie under an unhappy Temptation of ſpeaking ſmooth things, and complying too far with the humour of the People.

There is another Act paſs'd this Parliament for the abſtinence from eating Fleſh, upon any Friday or Saturday, or the Embering Days, or in any Day in the Time commonly called Lent, or on any other Day as is, or ſhall be at any Time hereafter commonly reputed a Faſt Day. (n)

The Preamble, in all probability drawn by ſome of the Biſhops, “ſets forth that Days and Meats are, in themſelves, all of the ſame Nature and Quality as to moral Conſideration, and that one has no Inherent Holineſs

---

(k) Mabill. Id. p. 391.

(l) 27. H. 8. Cap. 20. 32 H. 8. Cap. 7.

(m) 2 and 3 Edw. 6. c. 13.

(n) 2 and 3 Edw. 6. c. 19.

An Act for Abſtinence from eating Fleſh upon Vigil's and other Faſting Days.

“above another. That the diſtinction of clean and unclean Meats determin'd with the Moſaick Law. And that all ſorts of Diet may be lawfully us'd by Chriſtians, provided this liberty is taken without running into Exceſs and Contempt of Authority. However, ſince divers of the King's Subjects, have abuſed their Improvement in Knowledge, turn'd Epicures under better Inſtruction, and broken the Faſting Days of the Church, with an uncuſtomary Licenſe, conſidering likewiſe that Abſtinence, is ſerviceable to Virtue, and helps to ſubdue the Body to the Mind, 'tis therefore Enacted, &c. Beſides theſe Motives drawn from Religion, there is a politick conſideration thrown in: That is by ſuch Abſtinence from Fleſh, the Breed of Cattle would be Increas'd, and Fiſhery and Navigation Encourag'd. For

“The firſt Offence againſt this Act, the Forfeiture is Ten Shillings, and Ten Day's Impriſonment, during which Impriſonment, the Criminals are not allow'd the eating any Fleſh. The Penalty for the Second Offence, is the Forfeiture of Twenty Shillings; and Twenty Days Impriſonment, and ſo totiès quotiès, with Abſtinence from Fleſh all the time of their Confinement.

This Act is not to extend to any Perſons who either had or ſhould have a Licenſe from the Crown. Thoſe Perſons likewiſe of infirm Conſtitutions, either upon the Score of Age or Sickneſs, Women with Child, or lying in, and all Soldiers are likewiſe excepted. Thoſe who eat Fleſh on St. Lawrence or St. Marks Eve, and ſuch as have heretofore been licens'd by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, are exempted from the Penalty of the Statute.

Since the Abſtinence injoin'd by this Act goes chiefly upon Religious Motives, it may not be improper juſt to obſerve that Faſting has a natural Tendency to reduce the Senſes, and maintain the Government of Reaſon. The Experiment of Hunger is a good Expedient, to refreſh our Compaſſion, and make us more friendly to the Indigent.

Abſtinence is likewiſe a good Sign of Humiliation, and a ſuitable Penance for Exceſs and Misbehaviour. 'Tis an Aſſiſtant of Devotion, and proper for Times of Solemnity and Diſtreſs. Thus the Jews and Ninevites faſted to avert publick Calamities, and make their Applications more acceptable to God Almighty. Thus in the New Teſtament our Saviour foretold his Diſciples ſhould faſt when he was taken from them; And elſewhere he lays down Rules for this Duty, and promiſes a Reward when 'tis rightly perform'd. (o) Thus the Apoſtle premis'd Faſting to their Impoſition of Hands upon St. Paul and Barnabas. (p)

The Antiquity of the Lenten Faſt.

As to the Lent Faſt mention'd in the Statute 'tis in all Likelyhood an Apoſtolical Uſage. 'Tis mention'd as a General Cuſtom by Irenæus, (q) Tho' as to the length of the time, whether this Father meant Forty Days or Forty Hours is a Queſtion amongſt the Learned. However, in his Letter to Victor Biſhop of Rome, he acquaints this Prelate all the Churches were not agreed about the length of the time. That ſome believ'd themſelves bound to faſt only one Day, ſome two Days, and ſome more. And thus far he is plainly intelligible. Tertullian is full for the Point, and tells us that Good Friday was a publick and general Faſt, for which Reaſon the Holy Kiſs was omitted at the Religious Aſſemblies. (r)

In another Tract he obſerves, (s) that the Pſychici or Catholicks held the Interval between our Saviours Crucifixion and Reſurrection as a time of neceſſary Abſtinence. Theſe they interpreted the Days in which the Bridegroom was taken from them, and thought themſelves oblig'd to faſt upon their Annual Revolution. (t) Thus the Primitive Chriſtians, as Tertullian repreſents them, thought themſelves indiſpenſably bound to faſt on Friday and Saturday in the Holy Week. But their Piety made them go beyond this Neceſſity of Precept: For as the ſame Author obſerves, they extended their Lent by voluntary Diſcipline, and faſted ſome Days before the Bridegroom was taken from them. (u) Thus Origen mentioning the Self-Denial and Abſtinence of the Chriſtians, affirms the Chriſtians ſpent Forty Days in their Lenten Faſts. (w)

By the Fiſtieth Canon of the Laodicean Council held in the Fourth Century 'tis decreed, that People ſhould be confin'd to dry Diet during the whole time of Lent. And this Xerophagy or dry Diet, which was no better than Bread, Salt, and Water, as Epiphanius relates, (x) was not to be taken till the Evening. However, the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions relax a little, and allow the Eating of Sallad. (y).

But all Churches did not think themſelves oblig'd to the ſame Rule, and therefore we find a conſiderable Diverſity both as to Time and Degrees of Abſtinence. Socrates who liv'd in the Fifth Century, tells us that at Rome they faſted three Weeks before Eaſter, excepting Saturdays and Sundays. That the Chriſtians in Illyricum, Greece, and Alexandria, began their Lent Six Weeks before Eaſter, and call'd it a Quadrageſimal Faſt. That others had a Cuſtom different from both the former: They began their Abſtinence Seven Weeks before Eaſter, but then during this Period they had Abſtinence and Liberty by Intervals, and upon the whole faſted only Five Days in three of the Weeks. And here the Hiſtorian wonders, that ſince there was ſuch Variety in the length of their Abſtinence, they ſhould all of them agree in calling it a Quadrageſimal Faſt. (z)

He continues to take notice that they did not only vary in the Number of the Days, but in other Circumſtances of the Diſcipline. Thus ſome forbore eating any thing that had Life; others fed upon no Animals excepting Fiſh; ſome indulg'd themſelves farther, and furniſh'd their Table with Fowl as well as Fiſh: They juſtified their Practice by pleading, both theſe kinds of Animals were extracted from the ſame Element, and created out of the Water. (a) Other Chriſtians manag'd with greater Reſtraints, and would not ſo much as allow themſelves any Fruit or Eggs. Some went ſtill farther, and fed upon nothing but dry Bread, and ſome even thought this too much. And laſtly, ſome having faſted till three of the Clock, eat any thing that comes in the way without Scruple and Diſtinction. From this Diverſity of Uſage the Hiſtorian infers there is no Divine Precept to ſtate and determine the Circumſtances: But that as to theſe particulars, the Apoſtles left every Church to its Liberty, that the Merit of the Diſcipline might be rais'd by having more of Choice and Inclination.

Socrat. Ibid.

(o) Matth. 6.

(p) Acts 13.

(q) Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 5. c. 24.

(r) Tertull. de orat. c. 14.

(s) Adverſ. Pſych. c. 14.

(t) Id. c. 2.

(u) Id. c. 13.

(w) Orig. in Levit. Hom. 10.

(x) Epiph. expoſ. Fid. n°. 22.

(y) Conſtit. Apoſtol. Lib. 5. c. 17.

(z) Socrat. Lib. 5. c. 22.

(a) Gen. 1.

A Bill for reviving Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdictions thrown out.

This Seſſion a Bill was put in for reinforcing the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction. The ſetting up the Regale to an unuſual Pitch, in the late and preſent Reign, had very much weaken'd the Authority of the Ordinary's. People took Advantage of this Declenſion in Diſcipline, and broke out into Libertiniſm and Diſorder. Great Complaints were made of the general Diſſolution of manners; but the Clergy were diſabled from giving a check to this miſchief: They had nothing left them in a manner, but their Rhetorick in the Pulpit: And here they are ſaid to have declaim'd againſt Vice with great Courage and Impartiality. They told the People that unleſs they reform'd, ſome terrible Vengeance would quickly overtake them. But theſe Diſcourſes had little Effect: For the Nation was grown almoſt incorrigible. The Temporal Lords were jealous of reviving the Juriſdiction of the Church: They were unwilling to put the Biſhops in a Condition to ſuppreſs Immorality, for fear it may be, they might be brought under Diſcipline, and abridg'd in their Exceſſes. (b) The Colour for laying the Bill aſide was, that the Majority of the Biſhops and Clergy were ſtill popiſhly affected: That if Power were put into ſuch Mens Hands, they might probably turn it upon thoſe who abetted the Reformation: And to make their Severity paſs the better, diſguiſe it under other Pretences.

To go back a little; this year one John Champneys of Stratford on the Bow, was convented before the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Sir Thomas Smith, Richard Cox, Hugh Latimer, Doctors of Divinity, and ſeveral other Perſons Commiſſion'd by the King, to examin and try the ſaid Champney. He was prevail'd with to recant his Tenents in the Form following.

Champney's Recantation.

" I John Champney of Stratford in the County of Middleſex of my pure Heart and free Will voluntarily, and ſincerely knowledge, confeſs and openly recognize, that in times paſt I thought, believ'd, held, wrote, and taught, and preſumptuouſly in my Books ſet forth in my Name theſe Errors, Hereſies, and damnable Opinions following.

" Firſt, That after a Man is regenerate in Chriſt he cannot ſin. Item, Secondly, that I have defended the firſt ſaid Article, granting that the outward Man might ſin, and the inward Man could not ſin. Thirdly, that the Goſpel hath been ſo much perſecuted and hated ever ſince the Apoſtles times, that no Man might be ſuffer'd to follow it. Fourthly, that Godly Love never falls away from them which be regenerate in Chriſt, wherefore they cannot do contrary to the Commandment of Chriſt. Fifthly, that that was the moſt Principal of our mark'd Mens Doctrine to make the People believe, that there was no ſuch Spirit given to Man, whereby he ſhould remain Righteous always in Chriſt, which is a moſt div'liſh Error. Sixthly, That God does permit to all his Elect People their Bodily Neceſſities of all Worldly things. That is, thoſe who call themſelves Gods Elect, might quarter upon their Neighbours Fortune, and take any thing from him they thought they had need on. (c)

This Recantation was ſworn by Champneys, after which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury with the reſt of the Commiſſioners Conſent, oblig'd him to ſware to the Conditions and Penance following.

*

" Firſt, That the ſaid Champneys ſhall not by any means hereafter teach or preach, nor ſet forth in any kind, in Print, or otherwiſe, any ſuch Books that ſhould contain any manner of Doctrine without a ſpecial Licenſe thereunto of the King's Majeſty, or ſome of his Graces Privy Council, firſt had, and obtain'd. Secondly, that the ſaid Champneys with all ſpeed convenient, and with all his Diligence ſhall procure as many of his Books as have paſs'd forth in his Name, to be call'd in again and utterly deſtroy'd, as much as in him ſhall lie. Thirdly, that the ſaid Champneys on Sunday next ſhall attend upon the Preacher at St. Paul's Croſs all the time of the Sermon, and there penitently ſtand before the ſaid Preacher with a Fagot on his Shoulder.

Deinde dictus Johannes Champneys, Reginaldus Mohun de Cornubiâ Generoſus, & Laurentius Clerke de Parochiâ White Chappel Civitat. London Barber, recognoverunt ſe debere Domino noſtro Regi quingentas libras currentis Monetæ Angliæ, ſub Conditione ſequenti. viz If the ſaid Champneys ſhall perform the ſaid Penance injoyn'd as is aforeſaid, to be done on Sunday next in manner and form before declar'd, that then this Recognizance to be void &c. or elſe to remain, &c.

Ibid. Ann. Dom. 1548.

On the Eighteenth of December this year John Aſhton Prieſt being convented before Archbiſhop Cranmer abjur'd the following Hereſies. (d)

Aſhtons Recantation.

Firſt, that the Trinity of Perſons was eſtabliſh'd (he means firſt made an Article of Belief) by the Confeſſion of Athanaſius, declar'd by the Pſalm (as he calls it) quicunque vult &c. id eſt. Whoſoever will be ſav'd, &c. " And that the Holy Ghoſt is not God but only a certain Power of the Father. Item, that Jeſus Chriſt that was conceiv'd of the Virgin Mary, was a Holy Prophet, and belov'd eſpecially of God the Father. But that he was not the true and living God, foraſmuch as he was ſeen, and liv'd, hunger'd, and thirſted. Item, that this only is the Fruit of Jeſus Chriſt's Paſſion, that as we were Strangers from God, and had no knowledge of his Teſtament, it pleas'd God by Chriſt to bring us to the knowledging of his Holy Power by the Teſtament.

After this Recantation he took an Oath to ſtand to the Orders and Appointment of the Church, and to ſubmit to whatever Penance was injoin'd.

This year in September laſt Robert Farrar Doctor of Divinity, was conſecrated Biſhop of St. Davids by Archbiſhop Cranmer, aſſiſted by Henry Biſhop of Lincoln, and Nicholas Biſhop of Rocheſter. (e) The Ceremony was not altogether perform'd after the old Form. This Farrar, as the Regiſter informs us, was the firſt Biſhop that was conſecrated upon the King's Letters Patent without Congé d'eſlire or Capitular Election.

Cranmer entertains foreign Divines.

Archbiſhop Cranmer being inform'd, that ſeveral Learned Men of the Reformation were ruggedly treated in Germany, gave them an Invitation into England. Amongſt thoſe who were hoſpitably entertain'd, and encourag'd by him, were John Alaſco a Poliſh Noble Man, Martin Bucer, Peter Martyr, Paulus Fagius, Peter Alexander, and ſome others.

Soon after their coming over, Fagius was made Hebrew Profeſſor at Cambridge, Peter Martyr

(b) Bp. Burnet p. 96.

(c) Regiſt. Cranmer. Fol. 71.

(d) Regiſt. Cranmer Fol. 73.

(e) Regiſt. Cranmer Fol. 327.

tyr had the Divinity Chair at Oxford, and Bucer that at Cambridge. Bucer was a Divine of Eminence in his Country, but being embaraſs'd by the interim, he quitted Germany, and comply'd with Archbiſhop Cranmer's Offer. And here a Word or two of the interim may not be amiſs.

A brief Account of the Interim.

Upon the Tranſlation of the Council from Trent to Bolonia, the Emperor Charles the Fifth attempted the Settlement of Religion by his own Authority. To make the Motion more ſmooth, a Propoſal for this purpoſe was made at the Diet at Augsberge. The Choice of Perſons to manage this Undertaking being refer'd to the Emperor, he pitch'd upon Julius Flugius, Michael Sidonius, and Johannes Iſlebius. This Committee after long Conſultation drew up a reconciling Syſtem. This accommodating Scheme was ſeveral times revew'd, and alter'd; ſome of the chief of the Proteſtant Divines being call'd in for their Approbation. 'Twas call'd the interim, becauſe 'twas to continue in force till matters were more fully and finally determin'd by a general Council. The Heads treated of are theſe. (f)

“The Book begins with the Mention of the State of Mankind before, and after the Fall, of Redemption by Chriſt: From hence it proceeds to diſcourſe of Charity and good Works, of a Man's Aſſurance his Sins are forgiven him. The Caſe of Vows, the Power of the Pope, the other Miniſters of the Church, the Sacraments, the Sacrifice of the Maſs, the Commemoration, Invocation, and Interceſſion of the Saints, recommending the Dead to the Mercy of God, the turning the Maſs into a Communion, the Point of Ceremonies, and the Efficacy of the Sacraments, were likewiſe handled. And here amongſt other things 'tis determin'd that thoſe Performances which go beyond ſtrict Duty, and are commonly call'd Works of Supererogation are particularly valuable: That a Man can have no infallible Aſſurance of the Pardon of his Sins; and that the Conſciouſneſs of his own Imperfections ought to make him ſomewhat doubtful in this matter. That the Church has Authority to interpret the Holy Scriptures, to explain Difficulties, and draw Concluſions of Belief from thence: To exerciſe Juriſdiction, to make Conſtitutions, and determine Points of Controverſy in a Synodical way: (g) That there was one Biſhop appointed to preſide over the reſt, in Virtue of the Privilege granted to St. Peter: that the Government of the whole Church was intruſted by Chriſt with this ſingle Perſon, but with a Reſervation of Juriſdiction to the other Biſhops within their reſpective Dioceſſes: That the Divine Aſſiſtance was convey'd by Confirmation and Chriſm, to reſiſt the Temptations of the World, the Fleſh and the Devil: That this Sacrament ought to be adminiſtred by none but the Biſhop: That the Penitent ought to diſcover his Conſcience to the Prieſt, as far as his Memory could reach: That Faſting, Prayer, and Alms, are ſerviceable Applications, to diſengage People from ill Habits, and remove the Cauſes of Miſbehaviour; and that they either prevented Temporal Puniſhment, or leſſened the degrees of it: That anointing was a Ceremony practis'd all along from the Age of the Apoſtles: That the Deſign of it was either to reſtore Health, or throw new Force and Virtue into the Mind: And that therefore it was to be us'd when the Patients Life ſeem'd very much in danger: That Matrimony, without Conſent of Parents, ought to be accounted firm and valid: However, Children ſhould be publickly precaution'd to take their Parents Advice in this matter: That Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament of his Body and Blood at his laſt Supper: Firſt, that the Faithful might receive it, as a ſalutary Refreſhment to the Soul: Secondly, that it might be offer'd to God the Father as a Memorial of his Death: For our Saviour offer'd two Sacrifices, one upon the Croſs, where he ſhed his Blood, the other, when under the Species of Bread and Wine, he offer'd his Body and Blood to the Father, and afterwards commanded his Apoſtles and their Succeſſors to continue that Repreſentation in Memory of him to the Worlds End: That the great Propitiation for the Sins of Mankind was made upon the Croſs: But that by the other unbloody Oblation, the Sufferings of Chriſt were repreſented to God the Father, not with an Intent to gain another Remiſſion of Sins, but that our Faith may be rais'd and the Reconciliation already procur'd by the Death of Chriſt, better applied to us. At this repreſenting Sacrifice there ought to be joyn'd an honourable Commememoration of the Saints, that they may intercede for us, and aſſiſt us with their Merit: We ought likewiſe to mention the dead of lower Diſtinctions, and recommend them to the Mercy of God.

“'Tis farther order'd by the interim, that the old Ceremonies ſhould be retain'd in Baptiſm, ſuch as exorciſing the evil Spirit, the renouncing Form, and Chriſm: And likewiſe that no Cuſtomary Rites ſhould be alter'd in the celebrating the Maſs: That in great Towns Two Maſſes at leaſt, ſhould be ſaid every Day in all the Churches: But that in Villages no more than one upon Holy Days ſhould be requir'd: That the Canon of the Maſs ſhould remain unalter'd, and the other Offices manag'd purſuant to the old Rubricks: However, if any thing which might give a handle to Superſtition, had indiſcernably crept in, it was to be taken away. The Sacerdotal Veſtments, the Holy Plate, Croſſes, Altars, Candles and Images, and other Ornaments of the Church, were to be continued, in Reſpect to Antiquity. The Breviary Prayers, and the Cuſtomary Uſage of ſinging Pſalms, kept on, and reviv'd, where taken away: The Office for the dead was to be perform'd agreeably to Antient Uſages, and the Saints Days kept. That the Day before Eaſter and Whitſuntide, the Water for the Font ſhould be ſolemnly conſecrated: That in order to govern the Appetite, to give a check to Luxury, and diſpoſe the Mind for the Exerciſes of Piety, Abſtinence from Fleſh, and Faſting, ſhould be practic'd on certain Days. Laſtly, tho' 'twere to be wiſh'd the Clergy would live ſingle, yet ſince a great many of them are married, and can't be prevail'd with to part with their Wives, they were willing to wave Compulſion, and wait the Determination of a Council: And thus thoſe were likewiſe tolerated who receiv'd the Lord's Supper under both kinds: Only a Caution

(f) Father Paul Hiſt. Council of Trent.

(g) Sleidan. Comment. ad ann. 1548.

“ was thrown in againſt cenſuring others of a different Practice: For as 'tis added, the Body and Blood of Chriſt is wholly contain'd under each Species.

In this Form the Interim was publiſh'd, after it had been ſeveral times re-examin'd and touch'd over again: And thus Bucer had it in its moſt inoffenſive Condition. And tho' it did not go a juſt length in Conceſſions and Abatements; yet there are ſeveral material Points wav'd, granted, and explain'd. There's no mention of Tranſubſtantiation; Images are only retain'd for Ornament and Memory: The Biſhops no leſs than the Pope, are ſaid to have their Power from Chriſt for governing their Churches: The Clergy are allow'd Marriage, and the Cup not denied to the Laity. Neither the Court of Rome nor the Proteſtants were perfectly pleas'd with this reconciling Expedient. The one thought it too much, and the other too little. John Brother to Joachim Elector of Brandenbourg addreſs'd the Emperor, deſir'd he might be excus'd Complyance, recounted his Services to his Imperial Majeſty, and that he ſerv'd him in the Field upon Condition of Liberty of Conſcience. The Emperor replied, the Interim was publiſh'd by the Conſent and Authority of the Diet, and therefore there was no room for Indulgence; but this Anſwer made no Impreſſion upon that Prince. His Brother the Elector was either better ſatisfied, or more flexible, and ſo was the Elector Palatine. The Deputies of the Cities of the Auguſtan Confeſſion deſir'd they might conſult their Principals before they gave in their Anſwer, which was granted them. Woolfgangus Muſculus a Divine, finding his Conſcience in no Condition to ſubſcribe the Interim, retir'd to the Canton of Bern. Brentius another eminent Divine at Hall in Suabia declar'd an Inconſiſtency between the Interim and the Holy Scripture. He publiſh'd a Tract for this purpoſe; this was look'd on as a great Provocation: And therefore Granvell order'd him to be ſeiz'd, and brought to Augsburg. But Brentius, by the Advice of his Friends, withdrew, and made his Eſcape, Andrew Oſiander quitted Nurenburg, and retir'd into Pruſſia. Bucer was ſent for to Augsburg, and entertain'd at the Elector of Brandenbourg's Palace. This Prince gave him the Interim, and deſir'd him to ſubſcribe it. Bucer, after the Peruſal told the Elector there was too much Popery in it for his Conſcience. This Anſwer diſguſted his Electoral Highneſs: He had a good Opinion of the Scheme, and thought 'twas drawn up with Temper and Moderation, for under this Character it had been repreſented to him by Iſlebius. Granvell ſent ſome Gentlemen to Bucer to bring Luther to a Compliance, with a Promiſe of conſiderable Preferment: But when this Chancellor found his Offers rejected, he began to menace; ſo that in ſhort Bucer got home to Strasbourg not without ſome Hazard. And here the Biſhop preſſing Conformity to the Emperors Edict concerning the Interim, Bucer and Fagius thought fit to withdraw, and come into England upon the Invitations above-mentioned.

The Lord Admiral Seymour attainted of High Treaſon.

Before the Parliament was prorogued, Thomas Lord Seymour Admiral of England was attainted of High Treaſon. There had been a Miſunderſtanding for ſome time between the Protector and this Nobleman. This Turn of Humour is ſuppos'd to have riſen on a ſlight occaſion; and that a Conteſt about Precedency between their Ladies, ſet the two Brothers at ſo fatal a diſtance. And tho' our Learned Church Hiſtorian takes this Report for a Fiction, (h) yet ſome Writers of the firſt Claſs affirm it matter of Fact. This Diſaffection was heighten'd, and the Breach made wider by the Artifice of the Earl of Warwick. This Nobleman thought the Seymours ſtop'd the Progreſs of his Ambition, and therefore was willing to remove the Obſtacle.

In September laſt, the Queen Dowager married to the Admiral, died in Childbirth. 'Twas to this Queen Dowager, and not to Queen Jane Seymour, that the Lady Elizabeth wrote the Letter mention'd in the firſt Part of Biſhop Burnets Hiſtory of the Reformation. 'Twas written in July One Thouſand Five Hundred and Forty Eight, and not in One Thouſand Five Hundred Thirty Seven, as the Hiſtorian ſuppoſes. To place it to this year, and report it for the Performance of a Child not Four years old, is to ſet it beyond all Belief, and make it no better than Romance. There are ſeveral lively turns in the Letter, and yet not above the Capacity of a Princeſs ſixteen years old, which was then the Age of the Lady Elizabeth. Beſides, there is more than one Expreſſion in it, which ſhew plainly the Queen, to whom the Letter is addreſs'd, was not then married to a King. *

The Admiral being now at Liberty, addreſs'd the Lady Elizabeth for Marriage, but to no purpoſe. By the way, he was a Perſon of a mounting Imagination, ſtrain'd above the reach of his Stature, and carried his Hopes much farther than a Reaſonable Pretenſion. In ſhort, he is ſent to the Tower by the Council, for practiſing againſt the State: I ſhall mention ſome of the Principal Articles drawn up againſt him. “ He is charg'd with attempting to get the King into his Cuſtody, and procure the Government of his Perſon. And that he had ſollicited his Majeſty to agree to this dangerous Motion. That he had pretended he could govern the Kings Marriage, and diſpoſe of his Highneſs at Pleaſure. That he had engag'd ſeveral of the Nobility in his Faction, and put himſelf in a Condition to raiſe Ten Thouſand Men of his Friends and Dependents. That he had courted the Lady Elizabeth during the Queen Dowagers Life, and after her Death: That he gave Countenance to Pirates, and had a ſhare in the Prizes taken from Engliſh Merchants: That he had diſcharg'd ſeveral of the Principal Pirates put into his Hands, and made no Reſtitution to the Owners of Ships and Goods, when 'twas in his Power. (i)

“ On the Twenty Fifth of February the Bill was read for attainting him, and paſs'd without any ſtruggle. All the Judges it ſeems, delivering their Opinion that the Articles were Treaſon. (k) This way of proſecuting the Admiral by Attainder, looks as if they could not reach him by a common Tryal. Why elſe were the Cuſtomary Forms of Juſtice denied, and the Priſoner refus'd to confront the Evidence, to diſprove their Teſtimony, and make the moſt of his Defence? For this Reaſon the Bill ſtuck in the Houſe of Commons, and ſeveral of the Members mov'd, the Admiral might be brought to the Bar, and plead for himſelf. But on the 4th of March, a Meſſage was ſent them from the King, that he thought it

---

(h) Sir John Haywoods Life of Edw. VI. Cambden Eliz. Ann. 1587. Biſhop Burnet pt. 2d. p. 54.

* See Records Numb. 60.

(i) Council Book Fol. 236. Biſhop Burnets Records no. 31. Book 1.

(k) Journal Procer.

it not neceſſary to ſend for the Admiral: And that the Lords ſhould come to them, and report the Evidence they had given in the upper Houſe. Upon this the Bill paſs'd by a great Majority in the Houſe of Commons, and was ſign'd the next Day by the King. When the Council ſollicited his Majeſty that Juſtice might be done upon the Admiral; he thank'd them for their great Care, and commanded them to proceed, without giving him or the Protector any farther trouble. The Protector and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſign'd the Warrant for the Execution with the reſt of the Council. (l) He was beheaded on Tower Hill. He declar'd his Innocency upon the Scaffold, as to any thing of Treaſon either acted, or intended, againſt the King. This look'd like a ſtrong Purgation conſidering the Solemnity of the occaſion, however it ſeems Biſhop Latimer had no Opinion of this Lords Integrity, for in a Sermon preach'd before the King at Weſtminſter ſoon after; he went ſome length of Invective againſt the Admiral, and affirm'd, that during this Lords being Priſoner in the Tower, he wrote to the Lady Mary and Lady Elizabeth, to procure the bringing in a charge againſt the Protector, and to revenge his Death. (m) But whether Latimer was rightly inform'd in this matter, will bear a Queſtion. Cranmer's ſigning the Execution may look like ſomething of a Singularity, conſidering Biſhops were prohibited to ſit in Judgment upon any Perſon either to the Loſs of Life or Limb: But this being only a Reſtraint of the Canon Law, 'tis likely the Archbiſhop did not think himſelf oblig'd by it. But having had occaſion to diſcourſe of this matter in the former Part of this Work, I ſhall refer the Reader thither. (n)

(l) Council Book. See Biſhop Burnet's Collect. Records Book 1. no. 32. He denies the Charge at his Death. March 20. Ann. Dom. 1548, 9. March 29. 1549.

(m) Stow Annal.

(n) Eccleſ. Hiſt. p. 245. 548.

Heylin draws a ſhort Parallel between the Two Brothers. The Admiral was a Man of Addreſs, well made, and brave in his Perſon, but not without an Allay of Haughtineſs and Ambition. The Duke was of a more mild and condeſcenſive Temper, more ſuſceptible of Impreſſions, and open in diſcovering his mind. The Hiſtorian concludes if their good Qualities had been join'd, and their Defects diſcharg'd, they would both have made an admirable Man. (o)

(o) Heylin Hiſt. Ref. p. 72.

Soon after the Execution of the Admiral, the Protector began the building a magnificent Palace. To make Room for the Structure, he pull'd down the Houſes belonging to the Biſhops of Worceſter, Lichfield, and Landaff, together with the Pariſh Church dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. The Biſhops, it ſeem, were glad to reſign to the Dukes Pleaſure, for fear of ſuffering deeper ſome other way. The Place being thus clear'd, the Workmen inform'd him the Churches and Houſes above mention'd would not afford ſufficient Materials to build up to the Model. Upon this the Protector reſolves to furniſh himſelf farther, by pulling down St. Margarets Church in Weſtminſter. And that the Pariſh might not be unprovided with a Place for divine Service, he deſign'd the Body of the Abbey Church ſhould be given them for that purpoſe. But this pulling down Churches for Palaces was a way of reforming the Pariſhioners of St. Margarets, did not underſtand. And therefore when the Scaffolds came to be rais'd for ſo barbarous a purpoſe, they thought they might fairly defend their Church againſt ſuch illegal and ſacrilegious Attempts. And thus by appearing in a Poſture of Reſiſtance, they frighted the Work-men, and diſcourag'd the Enterprize.

Stow Survey of London.

Somerſet Houſe built.

Haywoods Life of King Edward VI.

But tho' the Protector was baulk'd at Weſtminſter, he ſucceeded at St. Pauls. Here he took down a ſtately Cloyſter, ſurrounding a Piece of Ground call'd Pardon Church-yard; within this Incloſure there were two Chappels with a a Charnel Houſe; one of theſe Chappels was famous for a curious Piece of Sculpture call'd the Dance of Death. But the Stone, Timber, Lead, and Iron, it ſeems, fell ſhort of the Plan for Somerſet Houſe. And therefore for a farther Supply, moſt Part of the Church of St. Johns of Jeruſalem near Smithfield, was blown up with Gunpowder, and all the Stone carried off to the Strand.

The new Liturgy moſtly comply'd with

Soon after paſſing the Act of Uniformity, a new Viſitation was ſet on foot. The Articles given in Charge were to this Effect.

(p) Id. p. 73. Stow Annal.

Firſt, that all Parſons, Vicars, and Curates in reading the Kings Injunctions omit ſuch Paſſages as make mention of the Popiſh Maſs, of Chauntries, and Candles upon the Altar.

Secondly, that the Communion ſhould not be celebrated with the Geſtures and Ceremonies of the Latin Service, ſuch as the Prieſt kiſſing the Lords Table, waſhing his Fingers at every time in the Communion; bleſſing his Eyes with the Patten or Sudary, croſſing his Head with the Patten; holding up his Finger, Hands, or Thumbs, join'd towards his Temples; breathing upon the Bread or Chalice; ſhewing the Sacrament openly before the Diſtribution of the Chalice; ſetting any Tapers or Lights upon the Lords Board, &c.

Thirdly, That none buy or ſell the Holy Communion as in Trentals, &c.

Fourthly, that none be ſuffer'd to pray upon Beads.

Fifthly, that after the Homily every Sunday, the Prieſt ſhould exhort the People, eſpecially the Communicants, to remember the Poor Mans Box.

Sixthly, that the Common Prayer be read in the Churches on Wedneſdays and Fridays, and the People exhorted to come thither.

Seventhly, that the Curates every Six weeks at leaſt teach and expound the Catechiſm.

Eighthly, that no Man maintain Purgatory, Invocation of Saints, the Six Articles, Bead Rolles, Images, Relicks, Lights, Holy Bells, Holy Water, Palms, Sepulchers, Paſchal Aſhes, Candles, Creeping to the Croſs, Hallowing the Font after the Popiſh manner.

Ninthly, that in no Church or Chappel there ſhould be more than one Communion, excepting upon Chriſtmaſs and Eaſter Days.

Tenthly, that the Church Wardens ſuffer no buying and ſelling, Sports, and improper Behaviours, in Churches or Church-yards, eſpecially during the time of divine Service or Sermon. That the Prieſt going to the Sick with the Holy Euchariſt ſhall not bring either Light, or Bell with him. The three other Articles are not material. *

* Biſhop Burnet pt. 2*d. Records Book* 1. Numb. 33.

Archbiſhop Cranmer had a Viſitation about the ſame time, and proceeded all along upon the King's Injunctions.

At Eaſter this Year, they began to Officiate by the New Liturgy in ſome Places. This was a free Will Offering, and diſcover'd Inclination to the Engliſh Service. For the Act did not inure till Whitſuntide; at which Time, by the order of Dean Moy, 'twas Solemnly made uſe of in St. Paul's Cathedral. This Common-Prayer-Book paſt the Kingdom without much Oppoſition. 'Twas drawn up with that Judgment and Temper, that 'twas hard to find a ſenſible Objection againſt it. And thus being form'd upon common Principles of Chriſtianity, many of the Roman Catholicks comply'd with it: For as to the main, it differ'd not much from the Latin Service. However, ſeveral Biſhops and Prieſts continued bigotted to their old Form. 'Tis true they officiated publickly with the Engliſh Book, to fence againſt the Penalty of the Law, but then they had Maſſes in Private, where their Practices were not eaſily diſcover'd: But in St. Paul's Cathedral the uſual Maſſes were kept on with more Aſſurance. Thus our Lady's Maſs, the Apoſtles Maſs, &c. were celebrated in Latin by the Biſhops Connivance, and under the Engliſh diſguiſe of the Apoſtles Communion, and our Lady's Communion.

June 24.

The Lords of the Council being inform'd of this Prevarication, directed an Order to Bonner, not to ſuffer the Maſs any longer in Latin; and that the Holy Communion ſhould be adminiſtred at the High Altar, and in no other Place of the Church: And only at ſuch Times as they us'd to Officiate at High Maſs: Unleſs ſome Number of People deſire a Communion in the Morning. In ſhort, they put him in mind he had been complain'd off not without Reaſon, and require him to Govern himſelf by the Rubrick of the Common Prayer. (q)

(q) Heylin page 74.

Bonner put this Letter of the Privy Council into the Hands of the Dean and Chapter, and referr'd the Execution of it to them. He had no Inclination for theſe Compliances, and therefore mov'd no farther than was neceſſary to preſerve himſelf. Beſides; 'tis likely he might have ſome proſpect of Relief from the preſent Juncture: For now the Commons began to grow mutinous, and fly in the Face of the Government. The Occaſion was this; ſeveral of the Nobility and Gentry being willing to make the moſt of their Abbey Lands, had Incloſ'd a great deal of waſt Ground: This tho' a real Improvement of the Country, yet being an Improvement only to the Proprietors, was loudly complain'd of. For thus the Poor loſt the Benefit of Paſtorage, and other Conveniencies. When the Court were Inform'd the Peaſantry were ready to break out into Rebellion, they diſpatch'd Commiſſioners into the Country, to Examine the Grievances of the Commons; they had Inſtructions to Command the Proprietors to throw open their Incloſures, and put things in their former Condition.

An Inſurrection of the Commons in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom.

Theſe Orders being not every where executed with that Expedition the Peaſantry expected, they reſolv'd to do themſelves Juſtice. Thus the Ditches were Levell'd, and the Fences pluck'd up every where in a tumultuous manner. Their Numbers increaſing, put them upon bolder Motions; ſo that now they began to Plunder, Remonſtrate againſt the Government, and carry their Diſorders to the laſt degree of Outrage. This Inſurrection was quickly ſuppreſs'd in Kent, Oxfordſhire, and Suſſex; but in Norfolk and Devonſhire, the Succeſs was otherwiſe. Here the Number of the Rebels was formidable, and mov'd in the Figure of a regular Army. And notwithſtanding the diſtance of the Counties, they ſeem'd to Act by Concert: The Devonſhire and Corniſh Rebels were headed by Humphrey Arundel and ſome other Gentlemen.

The Countenance of theſe Perſons of Condition, Imboldn'd the Rebels to undertake the Siege of Exeter, and make Demands upon the Government. The Articles they ſent to the King are theſe.

The Demands of the Devonſhire Rebels.

“ First, They inſiſt upon having their Children Baptiz'd, as well on Week-days, as Holy-days.

“ Secondly, That their Children may be Confirm'd by the Biſhop.

“ Thirdly, They declare ſtrongly for the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, and that after the Words of Conſecration, ſpoken by the Prieſt, there is very really the Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, God and Man, and that no Subſtance of Bread and Wine remains after, but the very ſelf ſame Body that was Born of the Virgin Mary, and was given upon the Croſs for our Redemption.

“ They will therefore, as their Language is, have Maſs celebrated as it has been formerly, without any Perſons communicating with the Prieſt, becauſe as the Office is now manag'd, the Myſteries are treated without due Regard, there is no diſtinction made, between the Lord's Body, and other Meat; ſome affirming 'tis Bread after Conſecration, and that 'tis beneficial to none but thoſe who receive, with other Terms of Error and Abuſe.

“ Fourthly, They Inſiſt upon having the Hoſt reſerv'd.

“ Fifthly, They demand the uſe of Holy Bread, and Holy Water, in Remembrance of Chriſt's precious Body and Blood.

“ Sixthly, That the Prieſt may Sing or Say Divine Service, and that God's Service in the uſual manner may not be ſet forth like a Chriſtmas Play.

“ Seventhly, That Prieſts may live in Celibacy like St. Paul, who commanded them to be Followers of him.

“ Eighthly, That the Six Articles Enacted in the late Reign may be reviv'd.

Theſe Demands were Couch'd in Terms of Reſolution and Inſolence. They will, they ſay, have all theſe things. However, they conclude with a Sentence of Reſpect and Submiſſion, pray God ſave King Edward, and declare themſelves his, both Body and Goods. (r)

(r) Godwin Annal. Stow Annal. Holingſhead. Heylin.

The King's Anſwer.

To prevent the ravage of the Country, and the Effuſion of Blood, the Council thought fit to treat with the Rebels, and try to undeceive them. To this purpoſe a Meſſage was ſent them in the King's Name, by way of Anſwer to their Articles.

As to the firſt Article, concerning Baptiſm, the King tells them they are “ impos'd on by ſome of the Incendiaries, and that in caſe of neceſſity, the Common-Prayer-Book gives them the liberty of Chriſtning their Children at any Time of the Week.

And as to what they ſuggeſt touching the Holy Euchariſt, “ his Highneſs tells them the Court and Kingdom is miſrepreſented in their complaint: That by the Laws of Church and State, that Sacrament is religiouſly guarded from Contempt, and widely diſtinguiſh'd from common Bread. As to their Exceptions againſt the New Common-Prayer-Book, 'twas drawn up by Biſhops and other learned Men, and that properly ſpeaking, 'tis no New Service, for abating a few particulars, which would not ſtand the Teſt, the ſubſtance continues the ſame; and ſince the alteration conſiſts moſtly in Language, what Ground can there be for any reaſonable Objection? If the Divine Service was unexceptionable in Latin, what ſhould hinder it from being ſo in Engliſh? Is Igno“rance a circumſtance of Advantage? Or are the Prayers the worſe becauſe the People underſtand them?

“As to the Maſs, the King aſſures them the learned Clergy have taken a great deal of Pains to ſettle that Point, to ſtrike off Innovations, and bring it back to our Saviour's Inſtitution.

“To the Article of Confirmation, the King bids them aſk their Prompters one Queſtion. Whether they think an Infant Baptiz'd is Damn'd, if he happens to die before he is Confirm'd by the Biſhop? Conſider, ſays the King, the Abſurdity of ſuch an Affirmation: Our Doctrines therefore, continues his Majeſty, is founded upon ſound Divinity, and theirs upon ſcandalous miſtake. (s)

“The King puts them farther in Mind of the rudeneſs of their Manner, the Treaſon of their Hoſtile Appearance, and that the riſing upon their Prince makes them liable to everlaſting Damnation.

The Archbiſhops Anſwer.

Theſe Articles were afterwards inlarg'd by the Rebels to Fifteen, and deliver'd to the Lord Ruſſel, who was ſent down with Forces againſt them. And here I ſhall only mention thoſe which are Supplemental to the former.

“Firſt, They demanded that all the General Councils, and the decrees of the Church in former Ages ſhould be obſerv'd. That the Holy Euchariſt ſhould only be given to the People at Eaſter in one kind. That all Preachers in their Sermons, and Prieſts in the Maſs, ſhould Pray for the Souls in Purgatory. That the Engliſh Bible ſhould be call'd in. For that unleſs this was done, the Clergy would have a difficult Task to over-bear the Hereticks. That Dr. Moorman, and Dr. Criſpin, might be ſafely conducted to them, preferr'd by the King, and ſettled amongſt them to Preach the Catholick Faith. That Cardinal Pool, a near Relation of the King's, ſhould not only be Pardon'd, but ſent for Home, and Sworn of the Privy Council. That no Gentleman ſhould have more than one Servant for every Hundred Marks per Annum of his Eſtate. That half of the Abbey and Chauntry Lands, held by what Title ſoever, ſhould be reſtor'd to Two of the chief Abbey's in every County. And that half the Alms of the Church Box, for the next Seven Years, ſhould be given to thoſe Houſes; and that a Society of Religious ſhould be ſettled there, to Pray for the King, and the Commonwealth. And laſtly, that the particular Grievances of the Country might be redreſs'd, as Humphrey Arundel, and Henry Bray Mayor of Bodmin ſhould Petition his Majeſty, for whom they deſir'd a ſafe Conduct under the Broad Seal. (t)

Theſe Articles were by the Lord Ruſſel tranſmitted to the Council, and Archbiſhop Cranmer was order'd to draw an Anſwer to them. Where Cranmer's Anſwer is the ſame in ſubſtance with the King's, I ſhall paſs it over. And for the reſt I ſhall touch them very briefly.

“As to General Councils, the Archbiſhop told them, they knew nothing of the matter: And that the Practice and Belief of the Church of England was agreeable to ſuch Deciſions. As to the Decrees they talk'd of, they were ſtretches of the Court of Rome, to enſlave the reſt of Chriſtendom: And of this he gave ſeveral Inſtances.

“For the Six Articles he told them, the Bill had not paſs'd, if the late King had not over aw'd the Members, by going in Perſon to the Parliament.

“As to their demand of Solitary Maſſes, he reply'd, the Antient Canons requir'd the People to Communicate, and that the Prayers in the Miſſal, ſuppos'd the Holy Euchariſt receiv'd by ſome of the Congregation. That the reſerving the Hoſt in a Pyxe, was but a modern Uſage. That the Laity in the Antient Church, frequently receiv'd the Holy Euchariſt in both kinds.

And whereas the Rebels had moved for the ſetting up Images in Churches, “the Archbiſhop returns, that Images were Inlets to Superſtition, and forbidden in Scripture. That they were firſt us'd for Memory, but afterwards made Objects of Worſhip.

“That Purgatory has no Foundation in Scripture. and implies a diminution of our Saviours Satisfaction upon the Croſs.

“As for confounding that which is really Hereſy, their having the Scriptures in the Mother Tongue, was the beſt expedient for that purpoſe.

“Farther, he tells them their Preachers, Moorman, and Criſpin, were Men of Deſign without much Knowledge, and very unqualified Guides in matters of Conſcience.

“That Cardinal Pool was likely to prove a very dangerous Perſon to this Kingdom: That the Archbiſhop had peruſ'd a Book Written by his Eminence, in which he miſbehaves himſelf very groſly towards the late King; and lays out all his Rhetorick, to perſwade the Princes of Chriſtendom, to draw a Cruiſade upon his Soveraign, and Invade theſe Kingdoms. That their confining the Gentry in the Number of their Servants, was an Abſurd Propoſal. That 'twould be impracticable upon the Tryal. And that by this means many poor People would ſuffer for want of Buſineſs.

“That their demand of the Reſtitution of Abbey Lands, was in Effect no better than down right quarrelling the Conſtitution, ſeizing the Patrimony of the Crown, perplexing Property, and ouſting the Subjects of thoſe Eſtates convey'd to them by Gift, Sale, Exchange, and other legal Methods. And beſides all this, they would make a Merit of their Inſurrection, keep up the Memory of their Rebellion as a Glorious Undertaking, and ſettle a Body of Religious, to Pray for them as their Benefactors.

But neither the Archbiſhops, nor the King's Anſwer, gave the Rebels Satisfaction. Tho' the King endeavor'd to diſentangle them from one great Prejudice, which ſeems to have had a weight in their Revolt. They were made to believe, that during the King's Minority, the State had no Authority to make Laws, but that the Conſtitution was to continue upon the old Foot. To this the King Anſwers, that 'twas his Birth, not his Age, which made him their Prince; that the Powers of Government muſt be always of the ſame Force and Extent: That without this Advantage the Protection of the People, and Proviſion for the publick Intereſt would be impracticable. In ſhort, the King ſpeaks in a Style of Majeſty, offers Pardon upon Submiſſion, but threatens the utmoſt Severity, in caſe they continued Obſtinate.

However, the Rebels believing themſelves Superior to the King's Forces, went on with the Siege of Exeter: The Town prov'd very Loyal,

---

(s) Hollingſhead.

(t) Mſs. C. C. C. Miſcelan. D.

The Siege of Exeter rais'd. Auguſt. 5.

Loyal, and made a brave Defence. After having held out Six Weeks, they were preſs'd very cloſe, and had they not been ſeaſonably reliev'd by the Lord Ruſſel, would have been Starv'd to a ſurrender. But this Nobleman being reinforc'd by the Lord Grey, with a Body of Cavalry, advanc'd towards the Rebels, attack'd their Camp, and oblig'd them to raiſe the Siege, and diſperſe. In this Action there was four Thouſand of the Rebels kill'd and taken. And thus the City of Exeter was preſerv'd, and the Commotion quieted in that Country. (u)

The Remonſtrance of the Norfolk Rebels.

The Norfolk Peaſants went on with their Inſurrection, doubled the Number of thoſe in the Weſt, and made a Body of Twenty Thouſand Men. They were commanded by Robert Ket, a rich Tanner of Windham. At firſt they inſiſted upon nothing more than throwing open the late Incloſures of Common: But when they found the Mutiny ſtrongly abetted, and their Numbers riſe to a conſiderable Army, they Inlarg'd their Remonſtrance, and open'd new matter of complaint. "They ſet forth that the Free-born Commonalty, were every where Oppreſs'd, and trampled on, by a ſmall Number of the Nobility and Gentry: That they were harras'd with perpetual drudging, to ſupport the Pomp and Luxury of theſe Men: That they drag'd a wretched Life, and were treated little better than Beaſts of Burthen.

"However; the Miſeries of this World would not laſt always, and therefore ought to be born with Patience, if that was the worſt of the Caſe. But when the loſs of their Souls was the Queſtion, the ruin from that Quarter ought to be prevented at the utmoſt Hazard. Now here, they had the unhappineſs to be concern'd: For the Holy Ceremonies of Antiquity were Aboliſh'd, and a new Face and Form of Religion forc'd upon them. That by compliance with theſe Innovations, they ſhould fall under the Terrors of the other World: And the hardſhips of this Life, would be ſucceeded by the inſupportable Puniſhment of the Damn'd. (w) As things ſtood therefore, they had no Remedy left them, but marching up to the Court, and reſcuing the King from evil Counſellors. From Men, who make their Advantage of his Minority. Who under the covert of the Royal Authority, plunder the Church, and ruin the Kingdom: Who have no other Aim but Wealth and Dominion, and making their Fortunes out of the publick Calamity.

The Marqueſs of Northampton goes againſt them without Succeſs.

To ſuppreſs this Rebellion, Parr, Marqueſs of Northampton, was order'd to March againſt them, with Fifteen Hundred Men. This Nobleman entred Norwich, but was not in a condition to preſerve the Place; for the Peaſants under Ket attack'd the Marqueſs, and after a diſpute for ſome Time, broke his Forces, and made themſelves Maſters of the Town: In this Action the Lord Sheffield was loſt. Thus the Marqueſs was oblig'd to retire, and return Ingloriouſly to London.

This rebuke given the Marqueſs of Northampton, gave a new Alarm to the Council, who immediately diſpatch'd Dudley Earl of Warwick, with a more conſiderable Body. In the mean Time the Rebels grew very Inſolent and Formidable. Ket Incamp'd his Army upon Mouſehold Hill near the City of Norwich. And here under a large Oak call'd the Ooak of Reformation, Ket kept his Courts of Chancery, King's-bench, &c. forc'd the Neighboring Gentry to ſubmit to his Orders, and under pretence of redreſſing Grievances, inſulted the Country at a barbarous Rate.

Dr. Parker preaches Loyalty to them.

Dr. Parker, afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury, went to the Rebels Camp, and endeavor'd to bring them ſomewhat towards Sobriety and Recollection: And finding one Conyers officiating in the Camp, he made uſe of the opportunity, mounted the Reformation-Oak, and Preach'd to the Rebels. Firſt he exhorted them to be frugal in the uſe of their Proviſions, and not harraſs the Country in forraging beyond neceſſity.

Secondly, He diſſwaded them from executing Revenge, gratifying their private Animoſities, and treating thoſe Gentlemen with Rigor, who were now in their Hands. And laſtly, he wiſh'd them to conſider their own Intereſt farther, to drop their enterprize, and cloſe with the King's Pardon. While he was inlarging upon theſe Heads, one of the Peaſants cry'd out the Doctor was retain'd by the Gentry: That he came to break their Meaſures, and betray them to Slavery. Upon this the Rabble took Fire, and began to Menace the Doctor with their Weapons: But Conyers going on with the Service, and Singing Te Deum, the Rebels were diverted for the preſent, and forgot the unacceptable Sermon. Parker ſeiz'd the Juncture, and got into the Town.

The Rebels to ſcreen their Revolt, and give a better Face to their Diſtraction, iſſued out their Orders in the King's Name. To make the diſguiſe paſs more undiſcover'd, they ſeiz'd ſeveral of the Commiſſions directed to Gentlemen of the Country, pull'd off the Seals, and clap'd them to Inſtruments of their own. (x) For this Forgery they are laſh'd ſeverely by Sir John Cheek. This Gentleman was the King's Preceptor, and Publiſh'd a ſeaſonable and well written Diſcourſe, while the Norfolk, and Devonſhire Inſurrections were on Foot. (y) This Author tells them 'twas a flaming Inſtance of Treaſon to give out Precepts in the King's Name, without his Authority. That no Perſon has any Right to Execute Laws, to redreſs Grievances, to Iſſue out Orders, but only the King, and thoſe commiſſionated by him. You having therefore, ſays he, no Authority from the King, what Plea can you have to juſtify your ſelves? Since you have no Warrant from the Conſtitution, no legal ſhare in the Adminiſtration, you can't pretend to be Miniſters, either of State or Juſtice. To deal plainly, you repreſent no better Soveraign with your ſham Commiſſions, than the Prince of Darkneſs; and are Officers to none but the Devil, for he is the Author of Sedition. (z)

They are routed by the Earl of Warwick. Auguſt. 27.

To proceed, the Earl of Warwick, who was a Perſon of great Conduct and Courage, Skirmiſh'd with the Rebels in the Town, and forc'd them to retreat to their Camp. His next ſtep was to ſtraiten their Quarters, and cut off their Communication with the Country. Thus the Rebels being diſtreſs'd for want of Forrage, were oblig'd to Decamp, and venture a Battel. They drew up in a Place call'd Duſſing-dale, where for a good while they maintained the Fight with Obſtinacy: But being Charg'd with great Bravery by the Earls Forces, they quitted the Field, after the Loſs of Two Thouſand Men. However, their whole Army was not routed: A conſiderable Body remain'd ſtill unbroken, and Barricadoed with their Waggons,

---

(u) Stow Annal.

(w) Godwin Annal.

(x) Hollingſhead p. 1031.

(y) Cheeks Hurt of Sedition, &c. Sir John Cheeks Diſcourſe to the Rebels.

(z) Hollingſhead p. 1045.

gons. But upon the Earl of Warwick's riding to them, and ordering the King's Pardon to be Read, they threw down their Arms and ſubmitted. Thus this Inſurrection was happily ſuppreſs'd, and only Ket, his Brother, and ſome few of the chief Incendiaries Executed. (a)

About this Time there was another Riſing in Yorkſhire, to the Number of about Three Thouſand: But theſe diſpers'd upon Proclaiming the King's Pardon. Ombler, Dale, and ſome few others, who refus'd theſe Terms of Mercy, were taken, and Executed.

Auguſt 8. The French attack'd the Engliſh.

The French perceiving the Government thus Embroil'd, took Advantage of the Juncture, attack'd the Iſlands of Jerſey and Guernſey, but were beaten off with the loſs of a Thouſand Men, beſides what they ſuffer'd in their Ships.

But the Enemy ſucceeded better upon the Continent, and took Blackneſſe and Newhaven by Boulogn: The Garriſons were put to the Sword, and a great Train of Artillery loſt. Upon this Captain Bark, Governor of Boulogn, convey'd all the Ammunition, Proviſions, and Effects, from the Baſſe-ville to the upper Town, and blew up the Fort of the former.

Stow Annal.

To return to the Hiſtory of the Church: Peter Martyr being made Divinity Profeſſor at Oxford, as hath been obſerv'd, his Lectures were not well receiv'd by ſome Perſons of Character in that Univerſity. He began to read upon the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, levell'd his Diſcourſes againſt Errors, and Innovations, and went on without diſturbance, 'till he came to the Eleventh Chapter.

But here expounding upon the Holy Euchariſt, one Dr. Smith, and ſome of his Party, were highly diſguſted; cried out againſt him as one that deſerted Antiquity, threw off the Cuſtoms of the Church; and prophan'd the Holy Sacrament of the Altar.

Peter Martyr diſputes publickly at Oxford.

Soon after this they poſted up Papers at ſeveral Church Doors, and Smith ſent Martyr a Challenge for a formal Diſpute: Martyr went on with his Lectures with great Reſolution, and rebuk'd, the irregular forwardneſs of his Adverſary in a Speech. He told Smith that notwithſtanding, he was willing to Engage him upon that Subject, yet a debate of this nature could not be undertaken without leave from the King. To this Smith Anſwer'd, that provided the Queſtions were given out according to Cuſtom, Moderators fix'd, and Notaries appointed, to ſet down the Arguments and Anſwers on both ſides, the Diſpute would be regular enough. Peter Martyr did not diſlike the Conditions, but objected they had not time to adjuſt theſe Circumſtances, and therefore refus'd to enter upon the Controverſy at preſent.

Having debated ſome little Time, about ſetling the method of the Diſpute, and the Terms they were to make uſe on: At laſt they agreed to refer the whole matter to the Privy Council, who gave them leave to proceed, and promis'd to ſend down Commiſſioners; But Smith, whether he was Apprehenſive the Moderators and Magiſtracy, were prepoſſeſs'd in Favor of the Reform'd, or whether his Courage flag'd for ſome other reaſon, is more than can be known. This is certain, he refus'd to enter the Liſts, and retir'd firſt to St. Andrew's in Scotland, and afterwards to Lovain. (b)

Thus the matter reſted, 'till the latter end of May this Year: When at the Inſtance of Dr. Cox, Dean of Chriſt Church, and ſome other Viſitors of the Univerſity, Peter Martyr gave a publick Challenge to the Roman Catholicks, to diſpute upon the ſubject propos'd by Smith. Dr. William Treſham Canon of Chriſt Church, undertook to oppoſe him. The diſpute was held in the Divinity Schools, Cox Chancellor of Oxford, Holbech Biſhop of Lincoln, Haynes Dean of Exeter, Nevenſon Doctor of Law, and Richard Morryſon Eſq; all Viſitors of the Univerſity, preſiding at the Solemnity.

May 28. An. Dom. 1549. His Queſtions.

The Queſtions maintain'd by Peter Martyr, were theſe Three.

“ Firſt, In the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, the Bread and Wine are not Tranſubſtantiated into the Body and Blood of Chriſt.

“ Secondly, The Body and Blood of Chriſt is not corporally or carnally in the Bread and Wine, or as ſome expreſs themſelves, under the Species of Bread and Wine.

“ Thirdly, The Body and Blood of Chriſt are Sacramentally united to the Bread and Wine.

The diſpute laſted Three Days, and was manag'd againſt Martyr by Treſham, Cheadcey, and Morgan, reſponding and oppoſing in their turns.

But on which ſide the Victory lay, is hard to determine, unleſs the Conference was Extant. The Oxford Hiſtorian obſerves, that Treſham, Smith, Cheadcey, and Morgan, were all extraordinary Men. And here he laments the Miſmanagement of ſome of the Reform'd Divines of this Univerſity: That they went the laſt lengths of Indiſcretion and Scandal: That both in their Sermons and at Diſputations, they treated the Holy Myſteries in a very unbecoming manner: And thus the common People were encourag'd to make a jeſt of the moſt ſolemn part of Religion. When the Privy Council were Inform'd of theſe diſorders, they ſent a reprimanding Letter to the Univerſity, commanded a ſtricter Diſcipline, and threatned the Penalties of the Law.

Id. p. 268. Martyr's Letter to Bucer, concerning his Diſputation at Oxford.

About a Fortnight after the diſputation was over, Peter Martyr ſent a Friend to Bucer with a Letter and Copy of the Conference. In the Letter, Martyr takes notice of his being Apprehenſive of differing ſomewhat from Bucer, tho' he hopes not much, upon this Argument; “ ſince he grants the Body of Chriſt is preſent with us thro' Faith, in the Holy Euchariſt, that we are incorporated with him by the Act of receiving, and in Illud tranſmutatos, and tranſmuted by it, (as he ſpeaks) into his Body.

“ He confeſſes that we truly or really, receive the Body and Blood of Chriſt in this Holy Sacrament: * But then this is done by mental Perception, or the force of Faith: However, he grants, the Holy Spirit operates effectually in the Sacraments, by virtue of our Saviours Inſtitution. He mentions the condition of Faith, to oppoſe the ſuperſtitious Belief of Trans, or Conſubſtantiation. He does not doubt but that this Sacrament is Inſtrumental to a real Union with Chriſt; neither has he any Intention to throw the conſecrated Elements out of Honor and Regard. One thing ſays he, 'tis poſſible may ſhock you, and that is my affirming its being Inconſiſtent with the Properties of Chriſt's Body, tho' glorified, to be in many Places: But if you pleaſe to conſider you will find the Scripture will not allow me to believe otherwiſe. The nature of human Bodies is another ſtrong reaſon; And the Fathers are

June 15. An. Dom. 1549.

(a) Stow Holingſhead Godwin Annal.

(b) Wood's Hiſtor. Univerſ. Oxon. l. 1. p. 267.

* Fateor nos verè percipere.

“ deciſive, that the Quality of Ubiquity or Omnipreſence is not to be attributed to any Being, excepting God Almighty: Neither does the contrary Opinion, if it were true, ſignify any thing as to matter of Benefit. Upon the peruſal of my Papers, you will ſee I Aſſign as much Force and Veneration to the Sacraments as the Scriptures will give me leave.

Bucer's Anſwer.

Bucer, after ſome Introductive Expreſſions of Friendſhip and Reſpect, “ acquaints Peter Martyr, that he was not altogether ſatisfied with the Terms, in which the Queſtions were propoſed: That he wiſh'd the firſt Propoſition had been couch'd in theſe Words, or to the ſame Effect. viz. That the Body of Chriſt is not locally contain'd in the Bread and Wine: Nec iis Rebus affixum aut adjunctum eſt ullâ hujus mundi ratione: That is, the Body of Chriſt is not join'd to the Sacramental Elements, by any Phyſical or Corporeal Union. To Peter Martyr's Third Propoſition, where he Affirms, the Body and Blood of Chriſt Sacramentally united to the Bread and Wine, Bucer wiſhes he had ſubjoyn'd this ſupplemental Clauſe, united to ſuch an Intimacy, that Chriſt is really here exhibited to thoſe that believe. But then this Bleſſing is convey'd by Faith: 'Tis not the object of Senſe, or tranſmitted by Corporeal Intervention. *

In maintaining his Amendment of Peter Martyr's Second Propoſition, “ tho' he denies a Corporal or Local Preſence in the Holy Euchariſt, yet he thinks we ought to keep cloſe to the Terms of Scripture, and the manner of Expreſſion uſed by the Antient Church. Now in the Language of the New Teſtament and the Fathers, the Exhibiting of Chriſt is fully expreſs'd. By which we are to underſtand the Preſence of our Lord, and not any mark of Remembrance which ſuppoſes him Abſent. 'Tis True, the Bread and Wine are properly called Signs, with relation to ſomething farther, and ſo is the whole Solemnity. But then theſe Signs or References to ſomething paſt, are not the principal Things in this Holy Sacrament: The Exhibiting and Spiritual Manducation of Chriſt, is the moſt beneficial and glorious part of the Communion: And therefore the Fathers choſe rather to expreſs the Myſtery, by the Term of repreſenting, than that of ſignifying. †

“ He obſerves farther that all the Orthodox Reform'd in Germany, are agreed that Chriſt is truly preſent to us by Faith in this Sacrament: And that this Preſence is not Nominal and Imaginary, but Subſtantial and Real; and therefore I can't, ſays he, comprehend how it can be maintain'd as a Catholick Tenent, that Chriſt is not really, and ſubſtantially given and receiv'd in the Holy Euchariſt.

“ For theſe reaſons, continues Bucer, I would not have it affirm'd that Chriſt is not really in the Holy Euchariſt: Neither would I have the Proof of the Propoſition maintain'd againſt our Adverſaries in this manner: That is I would not have us Aſſert, that ſince Chriſt is in Heaven Circumſcrib'd, within a determinate Place, therefore he is not really or Re ipſa in the Holy Euchariſt: We ought rather to conclude thus from the Premiſes, therefore he is not locally in this Holy Sacrament. And for this reaſon, that is to avoid miſconſtruction and perplexing the Argument, I had rather the Terms Really, Subſtantially, Carnally, and Corporally, had been omitted.

The reaſon why Bucer would have had Peter Martyr more full in expreſſing the Exhibiting or Preſentiating of Chriſt in the Holy Euchariſt, is “ becauſe if the Conference ſhould be made publick; he is afraid the Reader might take him in an unorthodox Senſe; and conclude Martyr's Aſſertion implied our Saviour wholy abſent from the Holy Euchariſt. That the benefit of communicating, reach'd no farther than the refreſhing our Faith, and bringing our Saviour more ſtrongly upon the Memory: And that it ſerves only to give a livelier and more affecting Idea of the Bleſſing of our Redemption: And that theſe pious thoughts are cheriſh'd and improv'd by the Holy Spirit. The Reader I am afraid, continues Bucer, will interpret you to no higher meaning than this: He will not imagine you aſſert that as Chriſt firſt communicated himſelf to his Members in Baptiſm; ſo he exhibites himſelf more and more preſent * in the Holy Euchariſt, and communicates himſelf to ſuch a degree of Intimacy and Union, that they really ſubſiſt and remain in him, and receive him reciprocally into themſelves. † In ſhort, I am afraid, ſays he, People will think you don't hold the Preſence of Chriſt, but only the preſence of the Spirit of Chriſt, and the Efficacy conſequent upon it; whereas I am ſatisfied you grant Chriſt exhibits himſelf preſent to the Faith of the Receiver.

“ And whereas Peter Martyr had ask'd Bucer's Opinion about publiſhing the Conference, he tells him, that in Caſe he reſolv'd upon Printing, he would adviſe him to ſhew the Copy to his Antagoniſt, in the firſt Place; that if there happen'd to be any Miſtakes or Omiſſions, they might add, alter, or expunge. He adviſ'd him likewiſe to explain himſelf fuller upon the Points above-mention'd, and guard againſt Miſinterpretation.

Towards the cloſe of the Letter, he “ acquaints Peter Martyr that theſe Diſputes about the Sacraments had prov'd very unfortunate in Germany: That the miſmanagement of the Conteſts of this nature had weakn'd the Veneration for the Holy Myſteries, made People break out into Animoſities and Parties, and expoſed Religion to Contempt. (c)

Bucer's Definition of the Holy Euchariſt.

“ In Bucers Definition of the Holy Euchariſt, he ſpeaks to the ſame Senſe deliver'd in his Letter. He defines the Euchariſt a Holy Ceremony, Inſtituted by our Saviour: That he honors the Receivers with his Preſence at the Celebration: That he excites their Devotion and Charity, and puts them in a diſpoſition to offer their thanks more acceptably to God the Father. And upon the pronouncing the Words of the Inſtitution by his Miniſter, he gives his Body and Blood, to nouriſh thoſe to Eternal Life who ſincerely deſire it, and that this Bleſſing is convey'd thro' the Symbols of Bread and Wine. The reſt of his Definition is not material to the preſent purpoſe.

Id. p. 551.

Thus we ſee Bucer is ſomewhat Intricate and involv'd upon this Subject: Whether he was loſt in the Myſtery; whether he had not the Faculty of writing clear, or avoided Perſpicuity on purpoſe, I ſhall not determine.

---

* Fide tamen nullo vel ſenſu, vel ratione hujus Sæculi intuendus, recipiendus, fruendus.

† Repræſentandi (quod idem eſt cum verbo exhibendi) quam ſignificandi verbo.

* Amplius & Amplius exhibeat præſentem.

† Et ipſum habeant exiſtentem & manentem in ſe.

(c) Bucer Scrip. Anglican. p. 545. & deinc.

Calvins, Farrels, and Viretus his Confeſſion of Faith upon this Article, to which Bucer, Wolfgangus Capito, and ſome others of their Perſwaſion ſubſcrib'd, is more intelligible: And ſince 'tis couch'd in Terms of Magnificence and higheſt Regard, I ſhall tranſlate it for the Reader. It begins thus.

Calvin's Confeſſion of Faith with Reference to the Holy Euchariſt ſubſcrib'd by Bucer and others.

